4. You are secure in your love, respect and attraction for each other

As a man, you have to know how to deepen your woman's love, respect and attraction for you over time. From there, you have to trust in her love, respect and attraction for you, rather than feeling insecure about it.

A lot of guys are fine at the start of a relationship, but as the months and years pass by and he notices that she seems to be losing interest, a guy will often become insecure, jealous, overly-protective or needy for her affection, attention and reassurance that she loves him and doesn't want to be with other guys.

That is not the type of relationship dynamic you should be creating. Insecurity will only cause you pain and cause the woman to lose her feelings of respect and attraction for you. If the problem grows, she will eventually fall out of love with you.

5. You are both equally committed to the relationship

If only one of you is truly committed to the relationship, it will almost never last.

For a relationship to stay strong during tough times, both the man and the woman need to be truly committed to the idea of staying together for life no matter what. You can't demand or request that a woman commit to you for life, you have to make her FEEL like she wants to by deepening her love, respect and attraction for you over time.

Just because a woman says, "I love you" or "I want us to be together forever," it doesn't mean that she can't change her mind if she no longer feels that way weeks, months or years later.

The 3 Keys to a Successful Relationship That Goes the Distance

If you want your relationship to last you need to:

1. Choose the right woman for you, rather than accepting whatever you can get and then trying to make it work.
2. Create and maintain the type of relationship dynamic that women really want to be a part of.
3. Deepen the woman's love, respect and attraction for you over time.

5 Reasons Why Women Have Affairs

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The reasons why women decide to have an affair are complex and many.

I could literally list more than 50 subtle reasons, but for the purposes of this article, I'm going to focus on the very obvious ones.

1. A Lack of Love, Respect and Attraction

It doesn't matter if a relationship felt amazing at the start, or even if a woman said "till death do us part," if the love, respect and attraction has faded away, she may begin to stray.

100 years ago, a woman had to stay with a man for life even if she was unhappy.

It was shameful to get divorced and back in 1910 for example, the divorce rate in most of the developed world was less than 10%. These days, it's usually around 50% for most developed countries.

In today's world, a man has to know how to deepen a woman's feelings of love, respect and attraction for him over time, rather than expecting that his wife will stick around because they've "tied the knot."

These days, a relationship is only as strong as the love, respect and attraction that flows through it. If you allow your marriage to turn into a sexless friendship, you can't expect your wife to want to stick around for life.

2. Arguments That Don't Lead to Change

When arguments are frequent and a day rarely passes without some degree of emotional upset in your relationship, a woman is going to start thinking of why she puts up with it.

Women of past generations had to put up with it and try to work through it, even if the husband responded badly and his behavior got worse as a result.

These days, if a woman isn't happy in her relationship or marriage, it has become somewhat socially acceptable for a woman to leave, or worse, have an affair behind his back.

Things are not always going to run smoothly in a relationship every hour and every day, but couples in successful relationships get through rough patches by facing problems and looking for ways to fix them, not running away and hiding from them.

One of the quickest ways to stop all the arguing in a relationship is to realize that neither you or your wife are perfect. No one is perfect.

Both you and her are going to make communication and behavioral mistakes around each other.

However, for the sake of the love and your commitment together, you are going to always try your best to learn from your mistakes so you can be better for each other and have a more harmonious relationship.

When you and her have that understanding, you then don't have to be so serious about any miscommunications or behavioral slip ups.

You can both be more patient with each other and allow each other to grow and improve in a more relaxed manner.

When you see that you both have each other's back, you then feel more inclined to want to change, improve and grow to make the relationship even better than it is.

However, if you're always arguing and trying to pick each other apart, there won't be much motivation to want to change for the happiness of the other person.

3. She No Longer Feels Sexy Around You

There are desperate men out there who actively prey on married women and women in long term relationships.

They live by the old saying, “Show me a beautiful woman in a long-term relationship and I'll show you a man who is bored of having sex with her.”

Their approach to women like that is to give them lots of compliments, make them feel beautiful and slowly lure them into having an affair.

Guys like that can rarely, if ever, pick up women who aren't in need of a self-esteem boost, so they spend a lot of time and energy trying to convert a married woman into a lover.

To protect your relationship against men like that, you need to ensure that your woman feels sexy around you.

You've got to look at her like she is the most sexiest woman on Earth in your eyes. Let her feel it in the way that you look at her, touch her and love her.

Important: She won't care if you look at her as being sexy if she doesn't respect you and feel attracted to you.

If your woman doesn't respect you or feel attracted to you, make sure that you focus on fixing that.

Otherwise, you will give her too much power and she will lose even more respect for you.

Most men are perfectly capable of making a woman feel sexy during the initial part of a relationship when there is plenty of romance and natural lust. Yet, after a while, they simply take the woman's love and devotion for granted.

4. She's a Woman of Bad Character

It's not always the man's fault.

Sometimes, a man ends up with a woman who is simply a bad person.

She's untrustworthy, disloyal and unloving. Maybe that is because of the scars she still wears after a horrible upbringing, or because she is the sort of person who likes to do bad things and hurt people.

The last serious relationship that I was in before meeting my wife was with a girl who actually enjoyed lying.

I didn't know that initially (because she was a good liar), but after a while, I realized that she wasn't someone who I just could trust anymore.

After she told me a very big lie about a year into our relationship, I dumped her right away.

It wasn't easy to dump her because she was a very sexy girl and we really enjoyed each other's company, but it had to be done.

Despite her pleas that went on for weeks, I was able to go through with the break up because I knew that I could find a better woman than her.

Had I not done that, I'd probably be a single dad right now, paying her child support and having to listen to more lies from her.

What I eventually realized is that if you're going to marry a woman, she can't only be beautiful with a great personality. She also has to be a woman of great character.

When I saw wife walk into the nightclub where I met her, I said to my friend, "Now THAT is what I'm talking about."

She was sexy and when I met her, she had a beautiful, adorable, confident personality.

Yet, I wasn't completely sold.

It took me two years of being with her until I finally accepted her marriage proposal.

Yes, she asked me to marry her.

Why?

Well, what I teach here at The Modern Man is how to be the sort of man that women desperately want to be with and then stay with for life, so it's just a case of me talking the talk and walking the walk.

The moral of the story?

If your wife has cheated on you by having an affair, it's not always your fault.

I was such a great boyfriend to my lying ex-girlfriend, but nothing that I could have done would have ever stopped her from being the dishonest person that she was.

There is no doubt in my mind that she would have ended up cheating on me or having an affair at some point, because she was the sort of girl who enjoyed being naughty and lying about things.

Sometimes, the woman is just not a good person and if that's the case for you, then you might want to think about whether you are willing to put up with the consequences of being with her.

If you are, then go ahead and enjoy the chaos that she creates.

If you're not, then you might want to learn how to have your choice of women instead, so you don't end up settling for a woman who is no good for you.

Watch this...

Another reason why a woman will have an affair is that...

5. You're Not Being Enough of a Man For Her

I've been helping guys to get women back for many years now and the most common reason I've seen for break ups is where the woman feels like her guy isn't enough of a man for her.

This can mean that he is:

- Emotionally insecure.
- Lacking in ambition and life purpose.
- Not masculine enough in his thinking, behavior, actions and energy.
- Unable to make her feel like a real woman.

Unfortunately, most guys don't ever get taught what it means to be a real man.

Some guys are lucky to grow up with a father or male role model who can teach them how to be the sort of man that a woman will cherish and stick by for life, but most aren't.

Most guys enter adulthood and are still left wondering what women really want.

Some guys end up getting lucky with a woman that they're not truly compatible with and then trying to make it work, rather than actually knowing how to attract women so they can have their choice of women and choose the right one for them.

What is the case for you?

Did you choose a good woman and then stuff it up, or was she always a bad woman to begin with?

Why Am I Always Arguing With My Girlfriend?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Are you getting into regular verbal fights with your girlfriend, even though you love her and would rather not be arguing?

Does it sometimes feel like you and your girlfriend are more like enemies than lovers? Does it seem like your girlfriend actually enjoys annoying you and then getting into arguments?

Don't worry, you are not alone.

Over the years, hundreds of guys have written in to me seeking help with their relationship and looking for a solution to stop the arguments and bring back the harmony.

A recent example was this, "Dan...my girlfriend and I keep fighting over the smallest things. Why do we always argue about trivial stuff that doesn't even matter? I explode at her and get angry and then she starts crying and I regret it. How can I get things back to how they used to be when we were happy and in love? How can I stop her from wanting to get into arguments with me?"

If you're always arguing with your girlfriend, it means that you're taking her too seriously.

Instead of being offended, angry, annoyed or shocked by what she says or does, just smile, laugh and relax because most of the time, she's just doing it to test you.

Most women will test you by throwing a tantrum, saying something mean or acting like they don't want you or love you.

What she is hoping to see is that nothing she says or does stops you from feeling confident, being happy loving her fearlessly.

She wants to see that you can still laugh, smile and be emotionally secure no matter what she says.

Why?

It's a woman's natural instinct.

We live in a challenging world and women instinctively seek to align themselves with a man who makes them feel safe because he remains strong and in control no matter what.

When you can see that she's just trying to test you, it makes it easier to not feel angry.

Instead, you can just smile, laugh (at her sometimes too) and deal with the situation in a more light-hearted way.

[image: Sometimes, she is just testing you]

Instead of taking her bitchiness, cold behavior, frustration or tantrums so seriously, just relax and let it play out.

Don't take it personally.

It's not about you, it's about her.

She's just acting on her female instincts.

When you can just relax and let the situation play out, it will feel better for both of you and the arguments will begin to stop.

She will see that no matter what she says or does, you remain in control of your emotions.

When she can see that you have changed the way you react to her and no longer get angry or lose control of your emotions, it actually makes her feel more respect for you as a man.

When a woman feels more respect for you, she feels more attracted to you and she will then open herself up more deeply to the love that you share together.

Arguments Are Good... Sometimes

[image: How to stop arguments with your girlfriend]

An argument between you and girlfriend (fiance or wife) can actually be used as a source of sexual tension and desire, as well as a way to deepen your love and respect for each other.

How so?

When your woman sees that no matter how much of a tantrum she throws during an argument, you still retain your masculinity (i.e. by not losing control of your emotions like a woman would and instead maintaining control of your emotions), it turns her on at a deep level.

Why?

Women are attracted to the strength in men (e.g. confidence, masculinity) and turned off by the weakness (e.g. insecurity, lack of confidence, lack of masculinity).

Most of what a woman finds attractive about a man is based on things that cannot be seen. It's not about his physical appearance, but about who he is as a guy.

[image: Why am I always arguing with my girlfriend?]

A woman will usually start an argument to test how you will respond. Will you back down out of fear of losing her? Will you respond like a woman by losing control of your emotions? If you don't respond like a man, she will lose attraction, respect and love for you...and start even more arguments!

When your girlfriend is able to feel more respect and attraction to you based on how you respond to her feminine challenges of your masculinity, it changes the way she feels about you and the way she treats you.

When you begin to maintain control of your emotions and "be the man" in the situation, you will notice that she will begin to behave in a more of a loving and caring way towards you, which in turns makes you make you love her more and feel more sexual attraction for her.

It's a win-win outcome for both of you.

Of course, I'm not suggesting that you should start arguments time just to create sexual tension by showing her that you can maintain control of your emotions, but arguments are definitely one way of recharging your sexual attraction for each other and adding to the love that you share.

From now, don't be worried, annoyed or confused about the presence of arguments in your relationship.

Instead, use them as an opportunity to deepen your love, respect and attraction for each other.

You Don't Gain Points By Winning Arguments With Her

[image: You don't win points for winning arguments with her]

It might feel like a good idea to show her how smart you are by winning every argument you have with her, but it isn't. No matter how many arguments you win, she just keeps starting new ones, right?

If you are focused on winning the arguments and proving to her that she should listen to you, then you're approaching arguments with her in the wrong way.

The truth is, no one is perfect and it's impossible for you to know everything about everything, or to do everything perfectly and correctly in life.

You are human, just like she is and all humans sometimes make mistakes in how they think, behave and act. So, instead of trying to prove to her that you know it all and that you are a better person than her, just relax.

If you have made a mistake in how you've been thinking, talking to her, behaving around her or acting, just admit it and she will soon shut up. However, if she has made a mistake, don't expect her to admit it if you're arguing with her.

Instead of telling her that she's wrong, stupid or crazy for saying or doing whatever she did, just ask her to explain why. Let her explain herself and try to understand where she is coming from, even if her way of thinking seems wrong to you.

In some cases, you will find that there was simply a miscommunication or misunderstanding between you that blew up into an argument because you both didn't understand each other properly.

So, don't focus on winning an argument every time to show her how right you are. Instead, use the argument as an opportunity to clear away any negative tension that has been getting in the way of your love for each other.

When in a relationship, you have to let the love flow freely, rather than allowing trivial disagreements or misunderstandings destroy it.

If it means that you have to admit making a mistake in how you were thinking, acting or behaving, do it right away.

[image: Admit to your mistakes rather than always trying to win arguments]

Don't hesitate to say, "Oh, okay...I was wrong. My mistake...I didn't know that you were trying to say that."

It's better to approach your girlfriend in that way than always trying to make her apologize to you and look like the one who is causing problems or making mistakes.

[image: Reacting negatively to girlfriend]

It's better to be supportive and compassionate towards your girlfriend, rather than acting like her enemy who is trying to bring her down or make her life a misery.

Why? Well, one reason why is that the love between a man and a woman is not unconditional.

The love between a boyfriend and girlfriend is not the type of love that will be there no matter what. To remain in love with each other, you've got to take care of the love and build on it over time rather than taking it for granted.

In 1900, the divorce rate was less than 10% for most of the developed world. These days, it's around 50% for most developed countries because women no longer have to stay in an unhappy relationship or marriage.

So, you can't just expect her to stick around for life if you aren't even willing to be a loving boyfriend who adds happiness to her life rather than taking it away.

To avoid ruining the love that you share with your current girl, make sure that you take care of it, develop it and deepen it over time.

When you approach your relationship in the right way, you can be like one of those couples that you've seen who are still madly in love 40 or 50 years into their relationship.

That is what's possible when you do it right.

However, if you make the mistake of thinking that she will stick around no matter what, you might be shocked one day when she says something like, "I'm leaving you. I can't take this anymore."

Don't Let Her "Have Her Way" to Avoid an Argument

[image: Letting her get her way]

A huge mistake that some guys make in a relationship is to let the woman run the show or "have her way" all the time.

You may have heard a "man" sheepishly say, "I'll have to ask the boss" in reference to getting permission from his girlfriend or wife for something. While this might seem as though the guy is merely respecting the relationship that he has with his woman, he is actually turning her off on a deep level.

A woman doesn't want to feel like she is a man's mother or big sister. She wants him to respect her, love her, want her and care about her, but not fear her. She wants him to say and do whatever he wants, as long as he still loves her, respects her, wants her and cares about her.

When it comes to arguments, some guys make the mistake of just letting the woman "win" so he can avoid an argument. Yet, that is also deeply unattractive to women. Women are not attracted to wimpy guys who don't have a backbone to stand up for themselves.

What a woman wants to see is that if you believe in something, you will stand up for it, but you won't get crazy about it with her. You will be assertive and strong, but you will also be open-minded and respectful enough to listen to her opinion.

Try to Understand Her Point of View

In almost every case, you will find that you and your girlfriend both have good intentions with each other. However, despite having good intentions, you will sometimes be misunderstood and an argument might flare up all of sudden.

During an argument, neither one of you will probably enjoy being told that you're wrong, selfish, inconsiderate, annoying or anything else that isn't positive.

From your perspective, you feel like you're doing the right thing because you have good intentions, but from the other person's perspective, you're going about it in the wrong way.

The solution is always to seek first to understand her and what she is thinking and feeling, before you try to get her to understand you. Why? In many cases, you will find that her explanation alerts you to a misunderstanding between you or an opportunity to improve your relationship.

For example: She might be angry at you for sitting down and watching TV all night, but you have no idea why she would complain about it so you become annoyed with her.

When you dig deeper, you might find that she wants to have more of a balance in life where you and her get out of the house more often. She might also be annoyed at you because you're not rising through the levels of life and reaching for your true potential as a man.

Instead, you're just doing enough to get by and live a comfortable life, but you're not striving for bigger and better things.

She may not be able to express that to you, but all women instinctively want to be a man who is reaching for his true potential, rather than hiding from it behind his relationship with her.

If you don't seek to understand where she is really coming from, nothing will ever get solved and arguments will continue to flare up between you. Once you've found out where your girlfriend is coming from, make sure that she seeks to understand your point of view also.

Discuss, Don't Attack

[image: Always arguing with girlfriend]

During an argument with a woman, it's very easy to get angry and start raising your voice because you are naturally stronger and more powerful than she is.

However, raising your voice and getting angry at her doesn't solve anything.

When a man gets emotional like that, a woman will become even more emotional and they will usually end up yelling at each other, verbally attacking each other and trying to put each other down.

No matter how much of a tantrum she throws, you have to try and be the calm sensible one. Instead of getting angry at her, laugh at her and the situation and then calmly work through it.

Instead of going on the attack and calling her names or bringing up things that you don't like about her, tell what you do like about her and what she is doing right. It will confuse her temporarily, but it will also get her to stop feeling so angry.

She will see that you are making an effort to look on the bright side of her intentions, rather than actively trying to look for faults that you can attack her about.

Instead of trying to get her to be sensible like you, just understand and accept that she is a woman and will always see the world through a different lens than you do. She is a woman and will always think, feel and act differently to you.

...and you can't stop her from doing it.

She will always want to think, act and behave like a woman and if you can let her do that without getting angry about it, you will satisfy her on a deep level.

When you understand that her attempts to argue with you are just part of her being a woman, you will stop trying to verbally attack her or get her to think like you do.

When you can do that, your girlfriend will love you, respect you and feel attraction for you on a more deeper level than she ever has before.

Your Girlfriend's Parents Don't Like You. Should You Move On?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your girlfriend's parents don't like you, don't rush to blame yourself for all the problems.

Sometimes, a woman's parents are the type who always looking for any excuse to cause problems, or they simply don't know how to deal with people who are a bit different from them.

Should You Move On or Fix the Problem?

You are in a great relationship with a woman, but there's a problem. You can tell by the way her parents behave, things they've said directly to you or comments they've made to your girlfriend about you, that they just don't seem to like you.

While it's possible that you've given them good reason not to like you, you may also be finding it difficult to click with them for reasons that just aren't your fault. For instance, some parents have certain prejudices or beliefs and, for whatever reason, they will have an almost immediate dislike of any guys who gets romantically involved with their little girl.

To them, no man will EVER be good enough for her. In situations like that, there is often little you will be able to do to change their mindset. So, is the situation hopeless to the point where you should move on and forget about her? It all depends on how you handle it.

Common Mistakes That Guys Make When Dealing With Annoying Parents

If her parents' dislike of you is putting a big strain on your relationship with your woman, you may be thinking about breaking up with her even though it's the last thing you want to do.

Before you cut off your relationship, consider the following common mistakes that some guys make which only cause these types of situations to worsen. Then, think about how you would handle the situation better.

Mistake #1 Reacting Badly to Their Hostility

When faced with initial coldness or open hostility from a girlfriend's parents, some guys react with negative, angry or rude behavior and end up making things worse. These men would do better to remember the old saying about killing them with kindness, by being cordial, respectful and by not reacting in a rude or emotional way to their taunts and tests.

When his girlfriend sees that he is continuing to be nice and respectful, despite the bad behavior of her parents, he will appear more mature and desirable, while the behavior of her parents will seem more irrational and unwarranted to her (and possibly to themselves).

Mistake # 2 ☐☐ Putting up With it For Too Long

Now, the fact is that there are some people out there who are just bad people. They are ☐☐bad eggs,☐☐ rotten and slimy to their core. When faced with people who won't change their bad behavior no matter what, a guy should not stick around to put up with it for too long.

A big mistake that guys make in their relationships with women, is putting up with bad behavior and treatment from a girlfriend or her parents for too long. No self-respecting guy will stick around if people don't show him respect.

If you can easily attract new women, you don't need to hold onto such a rotten egg of a situation with a problematic woman. If the people involved don't bend over backwards to show you respect, you can just throw the relationship in the bin and make a fresh start with a new woman.

By sticking around being the nice guy who tries to ☐☐kill them with kindness☐☐ for years on end, you are simply giving those rotten egg kind of people what they want. They want a victim to play with; someone to pick on so they feel better about themselves. You don't need that.

You deserve better than that and you will only be treated better if you show some respect to yourself by requesting they change. If they don't change, you move on. They will either buckle under the pressure of you leaving their daughter or they will happily wait for the next victim to play with.

Either way, don't sit around waiting for them to change if you're only approach is going to be Mr. Nice and Innocent. You need to make a stand.

Mistake #3 ☐☐ Whining and Complaining

Since they are feeling hurt by the poor manners of the girlfriend's parents, some guys will whine and complain to their girlfriend, like a little boy who needs help from mommy. Expecting her to ☐☐fix☐☐ the situation, he will sulk, complain and generally act like anything other than a man.

A real man faces his problems directly and fixes them with assertiveness, manners and a respectful approach, but he never looks to women to help him like his mommy did when he was a boy. He can take care of things himself. He commands respect and he gets it.

Mistake #4 ☐☐ Choosing Sides

Feeling powerless to fix the situation, a lot of guys will make the mistake of asking their girlfriend to choose between them and her parents. That is unfair, unnecessary and completely ineffective.

If her parents are absolutely in the wrong, she may eventually have to make that choice, but it shouldn't be at the insistence of her boyfriend because she may decide to choose her parents over him in the end.

As their daughter, she is naturally going to have some level of love and attachment to her parents, so asking her to choose sides just isn't fair to her as a person.

Although she might be upset by their behavior, she will usually realize that she may be unable to change their beliefs and approach to her romantic relationships. What she does about her parents should be a decision that she comes to on her own.

Mistake #5 ☐☐ Refusing Social Interaction with Her Parents

Couples who are in a committed relationship will likely be invited to various family functions and social gatherings that will often include the woman's parents. When these invitations are extended, some guys will continually refuse to attend in order to avoid facing another unpleasant encounter with his girlfriend's parents.

A stronger man knows that throughout his relationship, he and his woman may come across strains from a variety of external sources (e.g. family, friends, work, money, etc.) and the immature, unreasonable or annoying behavior of her parents is just another thing that needs to be handled responsibly.

It's not something he needs to hide from. He is not going to be pulled into the games of the parents and if they show him disrespect, he will handle the situation like a real man.

If her parents are foolish enough to cause disagreements or otherwise show unnecessary aggression towards him in front of others and he doesn't take the bait, but instead shows his maturity, intelligence and strength, he will be looked favorably upon by the other guests.

Her parents, on the other hand, will appear shallow, childish and unreasonable to those who witnessed their bad behavior.

Mistake #6 Flunking The Father's Test

As the head of his household and protector of his family, many fathers will appear subtly aggressive, hostile and distant when they meet their daughter's new boyfriend. To these fathers, they are simply testing the new man in their daughter's life to see if he is strong and mature enough to be considered as another of her protectors (in addition to him of course).

If the new boyfriend is unable to hold his ground and behave like a man under the pressure, he will have failed what I call, "The Father's Test." On the other hand, if her father sees her boyfriend's maturity and strength in the face of his aggression, he will welcome him into his family and they will become friends and allies.

Handling Difficult Situations with Maturity

Throughout your life, you will likely come across many situations where unreasonable or immature people create unnecessary problems. As a strong man, you know that you can rise above these dilemmas and easily come out as the winner by not getting drawn into pointless disagreements or battles of will.

Leading with your strength, maturity and intelligence, you will be a man that a woman can look up to and fall deeper and deeper in love with. Others will see that you are a man of strength and maturity and they will naturally show you the respect you deserve.

Is Porn Good For a Relationship?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Unless you and her are completely secure in your attractiveness to each other, porn will almost always cause insecurity that will lead to problems in your relationship.

If you've read a men's magazine lately, browsed the "dating advice" section of a newspaper, watched a morning TV show or been listening to popular radio DJs, you may have heard the suggestion that you should use porn to "spice up your sex life."

Yet, is it actually a good idea?

No.

For almost every couple, the introduction of porn to "spice up their sex life" has negatives consequences.

Think about it...

- How would you feel if you watched porn with your girlfriend/wife and every time a guy who was "well hung" came onto the screen, she said, "Wow" or gaped her mouth open in amazement?
- Would it make you feel inadequate if your girlfriend/wife said, "Ooooh" when looking at a porn video where a woman was in a threesome with two men?

Likewise, how about your girlfriend/wife:

- If she has smaller sized breasts and sees you getting really excited at the sight of women with bigger breasts, how sexy is she going to feel around you from then on?
- If your girlfriend/wife is white, but you get excited every time you see a black woman, do you think she will be suspicious, jealous and annoyed when you check out black women while out in public with her?

The Real Way to Keep the Spark Alive in Your Relationship

If you are concerned that she is getting bored of having sex with you or is losing interest in the relationship, you have to focus on deepening the love, respect and attraction that you feel for each other.

Most guys grow up never being taught how to attract women. They get lucky and begin a relationship with a woman who likes them, but after a while, the initial attraction fades away and the guy is left wondering what he can do to get it back.

If you're in a similar situation now, don't use porn to get the spark back. It won't work. Making her feel attracted is based on what you say and do when you interact with her.

For example: Does she laugh, smile and feel good when interacting with you, or does she feel irritated, bored and unhappy most of the time? Does she still feel turned on by your behavior, body language and vibe or does she hardly feel anything around you these days?

Do You Masturbate Too Much?

Let's face it...

There is a LOT of really good porn online for us men. It is very difficult to not be tempted to have a look at some of the sexy women in porn every now and then. However, if you want to spark to remain alive in your relationship, you have to be careful how often you look at porn.

Every man goes through a cycle of building up sexual desire and then releasing it and if you're in a relationship, the best place to release your sexual desire is with your woman. If you are constantly emptying out all the built up sperm into a tissue every week, you simply won't have any built up sexual desire to release into your girlfriend.

If you are currently masturbating a lot and have found that your sex life with your girlfriend, fiance or wife has been diminishing, you should really try to cut it in half right away. When you are used to that, try to cut it in half again.

Cutting down on your use of porn won't automatically make you want to have a lot of sex with your woman. What will make you want to have more sex with her is how you perceive her. Instead of looking at her and focussing on her faults, try to look at her in a way where you love her and feel attracted to the overall version of her.

If you spend too much time looking at porn and getting the exciting rush of feeling attracted to new women all the time, you may find it boring to have sex with your woman after a while. She won't give you that rush of attraction that you feel for porn.

Pornography Vs. Real Sex

Recent statistics released in the US claim that the number of internet porn viewers averages 28,000 people every second. Approximately 95% of that would be men.

Porn has always been directed towards men because men feel an intense attraction to a woman's physical appearance. Some women do watch porn these days, but they focus less on the physical appearance of guys and more on what the guys are doing.

For example: When a woman masturbates, she usually imagines sexual scenarios that turn her on. If she is fantasising about her boyfriend or husband, she will imagine them having passionate sex and really connecting in a deep, loving and erotic way.

If she is fantasising about having sex with another man or other men, she will often imagine being taken advantage of or being forced to have sex against her will. Of course, most women will never, ever admit that in public, but they do fantasize about that sort of thing, just like how some men fantasize about doing all sorts of weird, strange and even “wrong” things with women.

These days, men have access to sexually explicit images of all types of women, in all types of sexual situations. Pretty much every fantasy that a guy has about women is just a few clicks away in a porn video. However, just like some people now overuse the availability of food and become obese and unhealthy, the same applies to the availability of porn.

To remain healthy and balanced, you have to use porn (and comfort foods) in moderation. If you eat too much, you will become overweight. If you masturbate to porn too often, you will lose touch with your attraction for your woman and begin to feel more attached to the secret life of masturbation that you indulge in whenever she isn't looking.

To keep a relationship with a woman together for life, you have to let her be the receiver of the majority of your sexual energy. You have to stick your boner into her and let her feel your desire for her. If you don't do that, it's only natural that you and her will begin to drift apart over time.

Should You Watch Porn With Your Girlfriend, Fiance or Wife?

In my opinion, there is absolutely no need to introduce porn into a relationship.

You can do it if you want to, but both you and your woman need to be completely confident in your attractiveness to each other. If you see her getting excited at the sight of a huge cock, will you begin to feel insecure about the size of yours?

If you notice that she prefers scenes where a woman is getting two dicks in her at once (double penetration), are you going to feel like you alone are good enough for her?

For most couples, introducing porn into their relationship usually leads to insecurity. They no longer feel like what they are doing for each other is exciting enough, which then begins to ruin the closeness they once felt during sex.

How to Spend Quality Time With Your Wife or Girlfriend

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Spending quality time together with your wife or girlfriend is an essential part of keeping a relationship happy and connected.

You might be familiar with the term “quality time,” but what does it really mean and how do you actually spend quality time with your woman?

Quality time is any time that you and your woman spend together that makes you feel closer, more connected and more in love than you were prior to that moment. The quality time might be 20 minutes out of an entire evening together at home, or it might be hours.

The amount of the quality time doesn’t always matter, as long as you do it often enough to keep the relationship feeling good.

Staying Connected

The success of your quality time together is not about how much time you spend together, but what you do with it.

For example: Sitting in front of the TV can be quality time if it is used as an opportunity to connect with one another. Every now and then, you can talk about what you’re watching and relate it to your life together, your goals and your evolving understanding of the world.

When my wife (I recently got married) and I are watching TV, I will often turn it into quality time by making jokes about what we are watching, or have a more serious conversation about what we’ve just witnessed. Personally, I find that reality TV shows and documentary type shows offer the best opportunity to do that.

When she is watching a drama series, she usually won’t want to be interrupted. Likewise, if I’m watching a serious type of documentary that I am learning something from, I won’t want her to interrupt.

Outside of doing the typical thing of sitting on a sofa and watching TV, quality time with your wife or girlfriend can be as simple as making an effort to remain involved in one another’s lives, including talking about each other’s wants, dreams, ambitions and interests.

If you lose touch with who your wife or girlfriend really is, wants to be and loves to be, you will lose touch with the real her. The woman you got into a relationship with months or years ago, isn’t always going to have the same hopes, dreams and ambitions.

One month, she might want to restart her dream of being a dancer, while the next month she is feeling like she’d rather focus on being a mother or doing better at her job. Whatever the case, it’s important to stay connected with her and encourage her to do the things that she really wants to do.

Not showing genuine interest in what your girlfriend or wife has to say, will be taken to heart by her and seen as a demonstration of you not having much interest in her as a person. When an emotional gap begins to form, she will also begin to distance herself sexually.

However, let me be clear and say that the answer to a successful relationship is NOT about you being Mr. Attentive for her all the time. The secret to success with relationships is to focus on deepening the love, respect and attraction over time.

Staying Close

Doing everything together as a couple does not guarantee a close relationship. You and your woman will feel close, in love and happy with each other if there is mutual respect, love and attraction.

Many guys make the mistake of taking their woman's love and commitment for granted. Just because things felt great at the start and you used to be so close, it doesn't mean that she will stick around for life or for many years if that closeness no longer exists.

If she doesn't feel a lot of respect and attraction for you, she won't be excited to be in love with you. She might love you as a person and appreciate you, but if she doesn't truly respect you as a man and can no longer feel a sufficient amount of attraction for you, her desire to be close with you may begin to fade away.

It really depends on the woman. If a woman is attractive and knows that it will be easy for her to find a replacement man, she will usually break up with a guy when the love, respect and attraction fades away. However, if a woman doesn't feel like she could get a good enough replacement, she may decide to stick with the relationship even though she is unhappy.

Either way, what the man needs to do is begin saying and doing the things that will bring him and her closer together. He has to start making her feel attracted to him in new ways, building up her respect for him as a man and deepening the love that they share.

Examples of Spending Quality Time Together

Quality time can be spent anywhere while doing anything that you and her will enjoy. As long as you are able to laugh, smile, feel good around each other and connect in a positive way while doing whatever you do, it will be quality time.

Here are some things that I do to spend quality time with my wife:

- Take a relaxing walk around a night market on the weekend. Smile, relax and have a laugh as often as possible.
- Have a drink together at home and talk, laugh and smile together while we watch TV and browse the internet.
- Go for a weekend drive to a cafe or restaurant that is surrounded by nature (or that has a great view) and try to chill out and relax for an hour or more.
- Go for a ride on our bikes (bicycles) and stop at a place that has a view or area to relax. Sit down, relax and try to have a laugh as we talk about life and random things.
- Turn off all digital entertainment and disconnect from the internet. We then sit outside on the porch or go for a walk.

It's not so much about where you go or what you do, but how you make each other feel while doing it. As a man, it's your responsibility to lead the way and create a mood where you both enjoy spending time together.

One of the easiest ways to do that is to focus on trying to smile, laugh and joke around more than you usually do. When you do that, you will find that it's much easier to spend quality time together without getting bored, frustrated or ending up in an argument.

It takes some practice to get into the habit of smiling, laughing and joking around more, but it's worth it...

My Girlfriend Said She Needs Space

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Has your girlfriend recently said any of the following to you?

- “I need some space.”
- “I need time to find myself.”
- “It’s not you, it’s me.”
- “I don’t know what I want. I need time alone to think about it.”
- “I need to find out if I really want to be with you.”
- “I think we should have a break for a while.”
- “I want some space, but I don’t want to break up.”

What made her feel as though she needs space from her relationship with you?

Your girlfriend probably began the “I need some space” conversation by saying, “We need to talk...” or “I need to talk to you about something,” which most-likely made you feel sick to the pit of your stomach.

All of a sudden, you went from feeling safe and relaxed around your girlfriend to that horrible feeling of panic where you know that you are losing something that is extremely important to you.

You can see it in her eyes that she no longer looks at you in the same way.

You and her have gone from being in love to feeling disconnected like a couple of strangers.

It’s a horrible experience to go through as a guy, especially when you don’t know how to fix it.

Don’t worry though...

You can definitely turn things around and change her mind. In fact, you can make your girlfriend feel like she’s made a huge mistake by even thinking about losing a great guy like you.

When she has that realization, she will come running back to you saying that she misses you and wants to give it another chance.

5 Reasons Why Your Girlfriend Might Need Some Space

There are many reasons why a woman will ask for space from a guy, but here are 5 of the most common reasons...

1. She wants to find a replacement guy before really breaking up with you

[image: Breaking up after finding a replacement man]

Instead of coming right out and saying, “I want out.”

This relationship is over and I am never, ever going to get back with you” some women will keep you on the side until they find a replacement guy.

When she finds a guy to replace you, she will then come right out and tell you, “I’m in love with him and I want to be with him” and may even tell you that she’s been having sex with him to really hurt you emotionally.

A woman will sometimes use this approach because she doesn't want to go through the pain of seeing you hook up with a new woman before she finds a new guy.

She wants you to be the one who is hurting because she moved on before you did.

A woman like that will string you along and pretend that there's still a chance for you as a couple (e.g. "I want space, but I'm scared of losing you. I just need some more time...") and then suddenly turn around and say, "There's something that I have to tell you."

She'll say sorry for not telling you sooner, but she will explain that she is now in love with another guy and that you and her are finished for good.

It sounds cold I know, but that's what many people do to each other at the end of a relationship to avoid being the one who is in pain.

2. She's bored

[image: Boring relationship]

If your girlfriend has said to you that she needs some space or needs some time to find herself, it can often just mean that she's bored of how the relationship makes her feel.

Maybe you have:

- Gotten into a routine and haven't been doing many exciting things lately.
- Been taking her for granted and just expecting that she will stick around, even though the relationship doesn't feel as good as it once did.
- Give her the type of sexual experience that she was hoping to have with you.
- Stopped doing the things that made her feel attracted to you in the first place.

Just because things felt great between you at the start, it doesn't mean that she will be willing to put up with a relationship that has lost its spark.

To keep a relationship together, you have to deepen a woman's feelings of love, respect and attraction for you over time.

Just because things were good at the start, it doesn't mean she will stick around for life if you aren't able to make her feel attracted to you.

3. You haven't done what is required to make her want to settle down with you for life

It doesn't matter if a woman is 20, 30, 40 or 50 – she will settle down with a guy who makes her feel the way she really wants to feel.

When a guy deepens the love, respect and attraction that a woman feels for him over time in a relationship, she will not want to break up him. A relationship that gets better and better over time stays together for life.

Personally speaking, I met my wife when she was 20 and I was 35.

We got married this year (I'm now 37 and she's 22). No other guy that she'd met prior to me had ever made her feel like she wanted to settle down for real.

The reason why she settled down with me is that I've been able to deepen the love, respect and attraction over time in our relationship, rather than it fading away like it does for most couples.

Our relationship literally becomes more and more enjoyable over time.

This is something that you can do as well.

If you currently don't know how to deepen a woman's love, respect and attraction for you over time in a relationship – you have to take the time to learn it.

In today's world, you have to know how to deepen a woman's love, respect and attraction for you over time.

If you don't do it and simply expect that a woman will stay with you because things felt good at the start, a woman will eventually dump you.

In the past, a woman would stick with a man for life even if she was unhappy because it was shameful to get divorced.

However, in today's world, you have to know how to deepen a woman's love, respect and attraction for you over time. If you don't know how to do that, you can't expect a woman to want to stay with you for life or even for many years.

[image: Divorce or break up]

The relationship needs to get better and better over time. If it doesn't, she isn't obliged to stay with you. The society around her tells her that if she isn't happy with a guy, it's fine to leave him and move on.

When your girlfriend watches TV, movies or listens to pop songs, she is constantly being told that it's okay to dump a guy and move on. It sucks, but it is the kind of world that we live in today.

Your girlfriend has asked for some space from you, so you need to see this as a wake up call.

It is a huge opportunity for you to improve your ability to make her feel love, respect and attraction for you and become an even better man than you are right now.

If you don't change your approach to make her feel differently, you can't expect her to want to get back with you or to stay with you for very long if the relationship does get back together temporarily.

4. She doesn't want to accidentally become pregnant to you

If your girlfriend has lost respect and attraction for you, she will automatically begin to feel worried about falling pregnant to you.

She knows that if she gets pregnant to you, it will mean that you'll always be a part of her life.

If she is the type of woman to worry about an unwanted pregnancy, she will quickly lose interest in having sex and will then want to end the relationship as soon as possible.

She won't want to risk having sex with you and then being stuck feeling unhappy for life.

The only way to change how she feels is to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

If you keep making the same old mistakes that have caused her to lose respect and attraction for you, her sexual desire for you will be minimal or non-existent.

5. She doesn't want to teach you how to be the man she needs

[image: She doesn't want to teach you how to be the man she needs]

A woman doesn't ever want to have to take on the role of being a guy's mother or big sister in life. She doesn't want to feel like she has to teach you how to be the man that she really needs.

We men are expected to know how to be a man and if we don't know it, women simply reject us, cheat on us or dump us.

It may sound harsh, but it's just the way nature works.

Some guys are lucky enough to grow up with a father or male role model who is capable of teaching them how to be a man.

However, the majority of guys these days never get taught what it really means to be a man.

Most guys never know how to make a woman feel like a real woman in a relationship.

They might hear some asking, "Where are all the real men?" and saying, "I want a man who makes me feel like a real woman," but they never really understand what that means.

100 or 200 years ago, men didn't have to worry about this sort of stuff.

In the past, women needed men and had to get married and then stay with a man for life. If a woman was unhappy in her relationship, she couldn't do anything about it.

Not anymore.

In today's world, you've got to know how to be the man that women really want to be with.

If you don't, women will break up with you after the initial lust has worn off, or when she gets to a point where she is sick and tired of not feeling enough respect and attraction for you.

What you need to know is that it is possible to be one of those couples that you've seen who've been together for 30 or 40 years and are still madly in love. You've seen couples like that, right?

Even though they've been together for decades, they still hold hands, laugh and smile together, kiss and hug.

That is what's possible when you know how to deepen a woman's love, respect and attraction for you over time in a relationship.

Can You Give Your Girlfriend Space Without Fully Losing Her?

Yes.

However, the most important thing that you need to do is work out how you are going to make her feel respect and attraction for you the next time you interact with her.

If she contacts you after having some space from you and discovers that you still don't understand how to be the type of man that she needs you to be, she will want to remain broken up.

While giving her space, you have to focus on fixing your issues (e.g. insecurities, clingy behavior, etc) and improving yourself (e.g. becoming more of an alpha male, becoming more of a man, getting clear on your life purpose).

You have to get to the point where you don't NEED need her in your life, but you do WANT her in your life.

When your girlfriend sees that you don't need her and have been improving yourself and moving forward in life, she will naturally begin to regain some of her respect and attraction for you.

Then, she will begin to worry that she is losing a great man and will reach out and contact you in some way.

However, if she notices that you are still making the same old emotional mistakes (e.g. being insecure, lacking masculinity) and need her in your life so you feel secure, it will turn her off on a deep level.

A woman never wants to be your primary purpose in life.

She wants you to love her, want her, respect her and appreciate her, but not need her.

If you don't really know how to attract women and simply got lucky when you scored your girlfriend, it's only natural that you might get to the point where you feel like you need her for your emotional security.

If you want to get to the point where you want her, but sincerely do not need her, you have to improve your ability to attract women in general.

When you know that most of the women you meet feel attracted to you and are interested in you, the need for your girlfriend decreases.

You will still want her in your life, but you won't need her.

When your girlfriend notices that, she will naturally feel more attracted to you again. She will most-likely test you by showing interest in getting back together and then changing her mind to see how you react.

If you sincerely don't need her and only want her, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

How Much Time and Space Should You Give Her?

Over the years, a lot of guys have asked me, "Dan, my girlfriend said she needs space. How long do I give her?" and my answer is always, "You won't get her back by giving her time and space. You will get her back when you make her feel respect and attraction for you again."

I highly recommend that you don't waste too much time giving your girlfriend space, because it usually just gives the woman plenty of time to move on.

[image: Don't give her too much space or she will move on]

What you need to do is get her to meet up with you and then make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Sometimes, a woman will get lonely and contact her guy if he gives her space, but it will NOT fix the real reasons for the break up.

Your girlfriend will have broken up with you because she doesn't fully respect you as a man and doesn't feel enough attraction for you right now. That is what you need to fix and giving her space will NOT fix that.

If you don't begin making her feel respect and attraction for you in new ways, she may give you another chance if she is unable to find a new guy.

However, she will just break up with you again when she feels emotionally ready, or she'll string you along until she finds a new guy to replace you.

My Wife Doesn't Want Sex

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Has your wife lost interest in having sex with you?

Don't worry, you can change how she feels and make her want sex more often from now on.

If your wife currently doesn't want to have sex with you, here are some of the main reasons why that happens and what you need to do to fix it:

1. A lack of attraction

If your wife has lost her feelings of attraction for you, she won't have much or any desire to have sex with you.

The good news is that you CAN get those feelings back. Luckily for us men, the amount of attraction that a woman feels for us is mostly within our control.

You simply need to start displaying traits (e.g. confidence, charisma, humor, masculine vibe) from now on and your wife will automatically start feeling more sexually attracted to you.

2. Power problem

Some husbands hand over complete power and control to their wife in the hope that it will make her happy.

Other husbands take all power away from their wife and seek to control her as much as possible in the hope that it will keep the relationship together.

Either extreme isn't healthy and will lead to a break down in sexual desire.

The correct dynamic to have to ensure that your wife remains sexually attracted to you and sexually available, is to be a strong, leading man who takes charge, but who also inspires and encourages her to take charge of things that she enjoys.

You need to love her, respect her and cherish her, but also expect that she respects you in return. As long as your wife respects you, she will then naturally feel attracted to you and find it much easier to love you.

You can't demand that your wife feel attracted to you or love you, nor can you beg her to feel that way or convince her.

You have to be the sort of husband that she looks up to and respects, but who also respects her, loves her and cherishes her.

Here are some examples of how women test men and try to take away their power...

Even though a woman might SAY that she wants a more obedient husband or ACT like she doesn't like it when you take on the position of power, it's actually what she really wants.

Most women are not turned on by insecure, self doubting men who essentially hand over their power to her.

She wants a man who she feels good about submitting to, not a guy who makes the sex feel awkward because he's not in the position of power in her mind or his.

3. Unnecessarily switching roles

[image: Sucking up to her by doing housework won't last]

Sometimes it is necessary for a husband to help out around the house, or even temporarily take on his wife's role around the house. Yet, most of the time, it isn't necessary and by taking on her role unnecessarily, you actually make her lose some respect for you as a man.

There's nothing wrong with a husband doing a bit of housework to help out his busy wife, but if it gets to the point where he is doing the housework so she can have more time to relax than he does, the wife actually begins to lose a bit of respect for him.

For a woman to want to have sex with a man, she has to feel attracted to him and feel respect for him.

If your approach to the relationship or your behavior around your wife has caused her to lose more and more respect for you over time, it also means that she will have lost her feelings of attraction.

Don't worry – you can get it back.

From here on in, you've got to focus on saying and doing the sorts of things that will make your wife feel respect and attraction for you.

When you do that, she will naturally begin to have more sexual urges around you or, if she has a low sex drive, she will at least be open to having sex with you if you initiate it.

When a wife feels like she has taken on the role of mother to her husband or that she is the stronger one in the marriage, she begins to lose respect for him.

He is unable to make her feel like a real woman (i.e. make her feel feminine) because he lacks the masculinity to be the man in the relationship.

If that goes on for too long in any relationship, the woman will begin to feel restless and irritable.

Hoping to wake her man out of his confused state of being, a woman will then begin to start arguments and throw tantrums, in the hope that it makes him realize that something is wrong.

Women don't ever want to have to teach a man how to be a man. We men are expected to know it and if we don't, the woman will lose respect and then begin to create drama in the relationship as a warning sign.

4. Treating her like a friend

A great friendship is an essential part of a successful relationship, but it isn't everything.

To keep the sexual spark alive, you also have to behave like her lover.

You can't always just talk to her in a neutral way like you would with one of your male buddies. Sometimes, you have to talk to her in a way that makes her feel girly, sexy and wanted.

5. Being insecure

One of the biggest turn ons for a woman is a man who is emotionally secure and confident.

Insecurity about your attractiveness to her, your value to others in life or your place in the world are all turns offs to a woman.

When a man has the capacity to remain emotionally strong and secure no matter what life throws at him, it is deeply attractive to women.

6. Lacking purpose in life

Some husbands make the mistake of hiding from their true potential in life behind their wife and the basic responsibilities and tasks that come with modern life.

Some women will put up with a man who lacks purpose, but it will make her lose respect for him.

When a woman loses respect for a man, she then loses attraction for him.

To maintain the attraction of your wife, you have to be a man that she looks up to and respects, not a man that she secretly feels ashamed to be married to.

You've got to step up and be the man that you know you can be.

You've got to stop being afraid of your biggest dreams in life and start taking steps in that direction to eventually make those dreams come true.

All the while, you still have to love, respect and cherish your wife.

You have to see her as important and valuable, but not to the point where she stops you going after your biggest dreams in life.

The more that you stand up to be the sort of man that she wishes you would be, the more respect and attraction she will feel for you.

Then, if you also make her feel important, valuable and sexy, she will be much more open to having sex with you.

The Truly Happy Couple

Have you ever seen a man and a woman who've been married for decades, yet they are still madly in love?

They hold hands, flirt with each other and they laugh and joke around.

After all those years, they've managed to keep the sexual spark alive.

They may not be having sex every week or even more than once a month, but they are still doing it more often than most couples who've been married for a long time.

You know the type of couple I'm referring to, right?

Well, here's the thing...

That is what is possible when you create and maintain the correct relationship dynamic between you and your wife.

If you are interested in learning how I've done that in my marriage, I recommend that you watch Make Her Love You For Life.

In the early days of the relationship between my wife and I (when we were boyfriend and girlfriend), it was all about the initial lust and passion.

These days, our sexual desire builds up when we interact with each other during the day or while relaxing in the evening in the lounge room.

As a result, we have regular sex because the love, respect and attraction continues to deepen over time.

The spark is always there because I know what to say and do to make that happen with a woman. It's so damn easy.

When you know how to deepen a woman's love, respect and attraction for you over time, having sex isn't a chore for her. She wants to do it and so do you.

Does Treating Her Mean Keep Her Keen?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, but it's not about being mean in the sense that you treat her badly.

The definition of "treating a woman mean to keep her keen" essentially means that you're not a pushover. You still need to be a good, loving, respectful man to her, but you also need to have a pair of balls.

The Correct Way to Do it

The way to "treat a woman a woman mean to keep her keen" is different when you are:

1. Picking her up for the first time.
2. Dating her.
3. In a committed relationship or marriage with her.

Here's how it works...

1. Picking her up for the first time

Treating her mean to keep her keen essentially means that you need to be a bit of a challenge, rather than being 100% interested in her just because she looks good.

Watch this video to understand why...

You don't need to be a jerk, bad boy, asshole or arrogant prick to "treat a woman mean to keep her keen." You just need to be a bit more of a challenge. You have to make her feel like she needs to impress you in ways other than just looking good to get a chance with you.

2. Dating her

When you begin dating a woman, you will usually have to pursue her until you've first had sex. Some women will pursue you, but if the woman you're dating is hot and has plenty of options or wants to test you by playing hard to get, you will usually have to pursue her for a while.

So, how can you "treat her mean to keep her keen" during the dating process? Essentially, you have to be willing to risk losing her. Some women will test a guy by continually cancelling plans or not showing a lot of interest, to see if you are secretly a bit desperate and are willing to put up with anything to get a chance with her.

The way to essentially treat her mean to keep her keen is to show her that you're not a pushover. For example: If you call her up to arrange a date and she says that she's busy for the next week, you can jokingly say, "Fine...be that way...I'm never going to invite you out to anything again."

You have to say that in a joking way, but the point is that she will see that you have some balls. You're not a pushover type of guy who just says, "Oh, okay...then maybe another time then? When are you free after next week?"

3. In a committed relationship or marriage with her

Treating a woman mean in a relationship doesn't mean being a prick or an asshole to her. If you want to keep a relationship together, you've got to deepen a woman's love, respect and attraction for you over time. Being a mean prick is definitely not the answer to that.

What the old saying of, "treat her mean to keep her keen" means in terms of a relationship is that you don't turn into a pussy. A lot of guys get into a relationship with a woman and then end up becoming too clingy and needy of her love, affection and attention.

There is nothing wrong with wanting a woman's love, affection and attention or enjoying it. The problem is when a guy needs it for his emotional security.

To avoid becoming an insecure, needy guy in a relationship, you've got to have big, important ambitions outside of your relationship. Your woman has to be very important to you and you have to respect her, love her and treat her well, but you also have to be rising through the levels of your true potential as a man and reaching for your true purpose.

Your purpose has to be more important to you than anything else, while also still loving, respecting and appreciating her. If you don't have that as a man, you run the risk of placing way too much importance on your woman.

When a woman sees that her man's life is essentially about her, she will begin to feel restless. She will realize that she is with a lost man who is afraid to rise up the levels of his true potential as a man and is just hiding from it behind her and the relationship.

Do You Know How to Make Your Woman Feel Attracted to You?

Most guys don't ever get taught how to attract women.

We're not taught this sort of thing in school and only some guys are lucky enough to have a father who acts as the perfect role model on how to be successful with women.

Yet, knowing how to attract women when you meet them and then deepen the love, respect and attraction when in a relationship is one of the most important things that a guy ever needs to learn in life.

If you don't know how to attract women when you meet them, you will have to rely on getting lucky, which means that you won't ever have your choice with women. You will likely accept a woman who isn't even compatible with you and then try to "make it work."

If you don't know how to deepen a woman's feelings of love, respect and attraction for you when in a relationship, you will likely end up as another break up or divorce statistic. In the past, women had to stay with a man for life even if they were unhappy because it was shameful to get divorced.

Not anymore.

[image: No sex before marriage vs. have sex whenever you want]

Today's women can have sex with whomever they want and they can break up or divorce men whenever they feel like it. To have a successful relationship in today's world, a guy needs to choose the right woman for him and then actively deepen her feelings of love, respect and attraction for him over time.

Make Her Feel Lucky to Have You

You don't need to treat a woman badly to keep her keen, but you do need to create a dynamic in the relationship where she is more keen to be with you than you are with her.

Although women won't go around admitting it, they want to be with a guy whom they feel lucky to be with. They won't want to feel like they are doing you a favor by being with you. If a woman is attractive, she wants a guy who she feels lucky to be with.

Most women will go around saying that they want a guy who treats them like a princess, but they will then almost always dump him because he'll usually be a typical nice guy.

Many nice guys look on at other guys who don't treat women as nicely as they do and they assume that women must be crazy for hooking up with those guys. Some nice guys feel like they have to "save" a woman from a guy who doesn't treat her as nicely as he would.

Yet, the reason why the woman is with the guy is due to her feelings of attraction for him. Women do want a good guy, but the problem is that most good guys don't even know how to make women feel attracted.

The good guys who know how to make women feel attracted usually already have a girlfriend or wife, so all women are left with are bad boys (who make them feel attracted by being confident and masculine) and nice guys (who bore them).

There is NOTHING wrong with being nice to a woman, but you ALSO have to make her feel sexually attracted to you. Treating a woman badly is not the way to make a woman feel sexually attracted. Women feel sexually attracted to guys for many reasons, such as: Confidence, ability to make her laugh, ability to make her feel girly in response to his masculinity, etc.

There is also nothing wrong with treating your woman like a princess at times, as long as she looks up to you and respects you as a man. If she doesn't respect you as a man, it doesn't matter how much money you spend on her or how many expensive holidays you take her on – she still isn't going to feel the way she really wants.

Personally speaking, I sometimes treat my wife like a princess (I recently got married after living the bachelor lifestyle for more than 10 years), but she pretty much always treats me like a king.

One of the things that attracted her to me was that I am a good guy, but I also don't take bullshit from anyone..including her. After her and I began dating, she started behaving badly and trying to get me to chase her, so I immediately dumped her.

The break up only lasted a few minutes though because she started crying her eyes out, apologizing and asking for forgiveness. That happened a few times in the first couple of months of our relationship and she eventually realized that she couldn't mess with me.

Here's what happened and why I decided to let her be my wife...

Who Should Wear the Pants in a Relationship?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Just because you see a lot of guys letting their woman “wear the pants” in a relationship, it doesn’t mean that it’s the right thing to do.

For example: A study in Norway found that husbands who do the majority of the housework for their wife are 50% more likely to be asked for a divorce.

Another study in the USA found that amongst college-educated couples who married, women initiated 90% of the divorces. This shocking statistic could suggest that empowered, educated women who are making enough of their own money and can survive, thrive and prosper without the help of a man are more likely to be trigger happy when it comes to divorce.

Yet, those two statistics are only the tip of the iceberg. The reasons for break ups and divorces run a lot deeper than just up cleaning the dishes for your wife or marrying a woman with a degree.

No Matter How Successful a Woman is, She Still Wants Her Man to Be the Man

[image: The Modern Man approach to relationships]

These days, many women are heavily involved in changing the world, building their career and making a difference. However, regardless of her achievements outside of your relationship with her, when she is with you, she wants to know that you’re “the man” and that she can relax into being a woman around you.

Some women have more of a masculine spirit and don’t want a man to lead the way, but most women do.

Most women want to know that the man is steering the ship and is clear on direction they are headed and how they are going to get there. A woman wants to support her man and help him achieve whatever it is that he wants for the two of them.

Knowing that you have a plan, a direction and also have the confidence, drive and integrity to see it through, allows a woman to relax into her feminine role and be your woman, rather than your buddy or “partner” in a friendly, but sexless relationship.

There’s nothing wrong with allowing a woman to make a lot of decisions in a relationship or be in control of certain parts of your life together. Women are just as smart as men and they are more than capable of leading the way.

However, in order to keep the sexual spark alive in a relationship with a woman, she has to be able to feel as though you are the man. She has to be able to look up to you and respect you, not look down on you or have to take care of you like she is your mother.

Some women do like it when a man submits and lets her take on the leading role, even to the point where she acts like his mother. However, women like that are usually insecure deep down and simply want a weak man that they can control. In her mind, it’s the best way to ensure that the relationship stays together.

Yet, guys like that usually have their confidence beaten out of them by the woman over many years and then, when he meets a sweet, loving woman who shows a lot of interest in him and looks up to him as a man, he is more likely to want to explore a relationship with her.

Letting Her Wear the Pants Usually Kills Her Sex Drive

In almost every case I've personally dealt with (by helping phone coaching clients) and from what I've seen in the media, when a woman "wears the pants" in a relationship, the couple's sex life is basically non-existent.

If they do have sex, it is on the woman's terms and only occurs if the man has been on his best behavior. An example of that is Kate Thompson, who has been referred to as "Britain's worst wife," which is something that she is strangely proud of.

[image: Pussy whipped man]

Kate Thompson's husband does most of the cooking, cleaning and ironing. He only gets sex on birthdays that end with zero (e.g. 40, 50). A classic example of what happens when a woman wears the pants.

In Kate's own words:

"My husband is the kindest, most considerate man in the world. During the seven years we've been married, Ben has done most of the cooking, cleaning and ironing without ever being asked. And yes, he works full-time. And if you think I reward his sterling domestic efforts with treats in the bedroom, I'm afraid I fail in that department, too. Intimacy is reserved only for his birthdays – and then just the ones with a zero.

I am shamefully neglectful of my wifely duties. In fact, I am the anti-wife. The truth is that I'm just too busy and involved in my career as a writer to be a traditional, caring wife. The truth is that I'm in awe of the way he looks after me, our sons and our home. He makes my life easier.

Does that make me a selfish, slovenly, neglectful wife?" Probably – but it also makes me a happier one." Kate Thompson

In my opinion, Kate's relationship with her husband is more about convenience than true love.

It's not the amazing, invigorating, challenging, transformative, passionate love that a man and a woman experience when they embrace their natural masculine and feminine roles in a relationship. Kate and her "husband" live together and have more of a friendly love.

Her husband would have to jerk off to porn every week to clear out the build up of sperm that naturally occurs for every man. He'd have to masturbating alone to porn and then put on his apron to cook and clean for his wife, who isn't interested in having sex with him.

Is it wrong for people to have a relationship like that?

No.

They can do whatever they want, but just because a bored, sexless couple are living together like that, it doesn't mean that it's a great idea or a solution for modern relationships. Most people would rather be in a relationship with a person with whom they love, respect AND feel attracted to. If it's just love and respect, it's a friendship.

Kate seems like a busy woman and her husband seems like he a good assistant for her, so it would be unwise for her to divorce him. She needs his help to keep her life balanced so she can focus on doing what she wants to do.

By the way she describes her husband, it doesn't sound like she loves him in the same way that she would love (and do anything for) a real man who made her feel sexual attraction and deep respect for him.

My bet is that if she met a confident, masculine man who made her go "weak at the knees" and he was actually interested in her, it's possible that she would consider having an affair and then divorcing her assistant...oh, I meant husband.

Different Time, Different Divorce Rate

In 1900, it was shameful for a woman to divorce a man.

Most women couldn't get a high paying job to support themselves, so they were essentially stuck with whatever man they got. Back then, it didn't really matter who wore the pants behind closed doors because people rarely got divorced anyway.

If the couple was unhappy, they just "put up with each other" until death did them part. The average divorce rate for developed countries in 1900 was less than 10%, whereas in today's world it is around or more than 50% for most developed countries.

[image: Divorce or break up]

Nowadays, you have to be smart about the way that you approach your relationship or marriage with a woman. You've got to be able to deepen a woman's love, respect and attraction for you over time or else most women will simply break up with you or divorce you after a while.

Today's women are highly influenced by TV shows, music videos and Hollywood movies that essentially tell them it's okay, or even "cool" to dump or divorce a guy.

[image: Being a man in 1911 vs. today]

A man may "get lucky" and score himself a relationship with a woman who overlooks his shy qualities in the beginning, but if he fails to become and be the man that she is really looking for in a relationship, she will almost certainly dump him or divorce him.

The Politically Correct 50/50 Relationship

Women have done so many great things for the world since they've been allowed to have a voice in society.

I could go on all day about the amazing women in this world who I respect and admire (e.g. the late Joan Rivers (a very bold, uncensored comedian who made the world less uptight and sensitive about things), Theresa Caputo (Long Island Medium), Elizabeth Blackburn (Nobel Prize winner for discovering the "immortality enzyme"), but I also have point out that women having a voice has caused a lot of confusion as well.

We humans don't always have the correct answer for complex problems and unless a person has a high level of expertise in a particular area, they are usually just guessing when they give you their opinion.

On Oprah's original TV talk show (that ended years ago) for example, she had loads of female guests come on and say (with confidence, belief and passion) that men should do the housework, change the baby's diaper and essentially do half of a woman's traditional role.

Eventually, people started referring to this as a "50/50 Relationship" and everyone felt like they'd finally worked it all out. They thought that men and women just had to get along as good friends and everything would be fine.

Yet, it wasn't the answer.

Why?

It's not as simple as that.

There is nothing wrong with a man doing some housework or changing the baby's diaper, just like there is nothing wrong with a woman taking out the trash or hammering a nail into the wall to hang up a painting.

The problems occur when men and women start acting like FRIENDS in a 50/50 relationship, rather than being a man and a woman who are in a sexual, romantic relationship.

[image: Confused 50/50 relationship]

When the idea of a 50/50 relationship became popular thanks to confused TV talk show hosts and their guests, millions of men and women slowly transformed themselves into being neither a man or a woman, but neutral or "in between."

When men stopped being men and women started thinking, acting and behaving more like men, couples began to lose the natural spark of sexual attraction that is created when a clear masculine/feminine dynamic is present.

Just like a battery needs a positive and negative charge to create power, two humans need a clear masculine and feminine divide between them to create sexual attraction.

If you are unable to make a woman feel attraction for you when in a relationship, the spark will naturally begin to die out. You have to keep the charge alive by maintaining the masculine and feminine balance between you and her.

Watch this video to understand how attraction between men and women really works...

These days, it's not enough to just expect that a woman will stay with you because things felt good at the start. You have to know how to be attractive to your woman and to deepen her feelings over time.

The Modern Man Approach to Relationships

[image: Dan Bacon -girlfriend]

Me (Dan Bacon) with my wife

So, what approach do The Modern Man coaches (Dan, Ben and Stu) take in their relationships with women?

Personally speaking, I (Dan Bacon) am now married after a short engagement with my perfect girl. She actually asked me to marry her on several occasions, not because she wears the pants, but because, many years ago, I transformed myself into the type of guy that women refer to as a "catch."

Over the years, many women have asked (and some have even begged) me to marry them. Yet, I rejected those offers and kept on living the bachelor lifestyle, until I met my wife who is the perfect woman for me.

Here's what happened between me and my wife and how I've approached my relationship with her so far...

"What is Your Relationship Goal?"

- ☐ Marry a woman and stay with her for life
- ☐ Stay with one woman for life without getting married
- ☐ Have relationships with many women throughout life
- ☐ Still not sure

The Modern Man approach to relationships is about you being the man that she looks up to and respects. You actively deepen the love, respect and attraction that you feel for each other over time, so the relationship gets better and better.

If you've ever heard a couple talk about falling in love with each other over and over again, that's essentially what it means. You continually reach new, deeper and more meaningful levels of love, respect and attraction for each other.

Why Do Women Cheat? 10 Reasons

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

A woman will cheat on a man for many different reasons, some of which can be prevented.

Here are 10 reasons why women cheat, even if her man is a good man who loves her and truly wants to be with her.

1. A lack of attraction

The main reason why women cheat on a man is a lack of attraction for him.

When a relationship first begins, it's very easy for her to feel attracted to the guy because she's excited about all the little things she likes about him. Yet, if he is unable to deepen her feelings of love, respect and attraction over time in the relationship, she will eventually begin to lose interest.

In the past, women had to remain a virgin before marriage, get married and then stay their chosen man for life. If she was unhappy or if he wasn't able to deepen her feelings of love, respect and attraction, she was stuck with him. She had to put up with it.

Not anymore.

In today's world, women are free to have sex and relationships with whomever they want for as long as they want. Unfortunately, many TV talk show hosts, movie stars and pop singers even make divorce and break ups out to be a cool. It's just the world we live in today.

To be successful at keeping a relationship together in today's world, a man needs to know how to deepen a woman's love, respect and attraction for him over time, rather than just expecting that she will stick around because things felt good at the start.

2. She was worried that he would cheat, so she did it first

Getting cheated on really hurts.

It's a hot, stinging pain that can remain buried deep within your mind for years after being cheated on. If a woman has experienced being cheated on in the past by a man that she loved and gave her heart to, she will often go overboard in trying to protect herself from that pain again.

Sometimes, she will get into a relationship and never really open herself up to the love because she wants to protect herself. She will enjoy being with the guy and kind of love him, but she will never give him her full heart of love.

In some cases, nothing that her boyfriend or husband says to her gives her enough assurance that she won't be cheated on. A woman like her will almost always have a nagging doubt in the back of her mind that it will happen. She will imagine her man flirting with another woman, kissing her and then having sex with her and it will make her feel sick to the stomach.

If you are with a woman who is constantly worrying about you cheating on her, then she will almost always be flirting with other guys and keeping them waiting in the wings in case she needs them to make herself feel better.

My advice would be to dump her and move on. If you don't, you will end up wasting a lot of time and energy trying to convince her that you have been and will always be faithful to her only to then have her turn around one day and say that she has cheated on you.

When it comes to relationships with women, the best piece of advice to follow is that you don't put up with bullshit. You love the woman, respect her, listen to her and care about her, but if she introduces crazy bullshit into your relationship, you've got to dump her and have come crawling back to apologize.

Then, if she goes crazy again, repeat the process as often as you can be bothered. If she doesn't change after a couple of break ups, you're almost certainly wasting your time with a woman who is going to be more trouble than she is worth.

If you're the sort of guy who knows how to attract women, then you're not going to be worried about losing her. You can easily attract and hook up with new women whenever you want, so you begin to see her as being unnecessary.

3. She isn't ready to fully commit to just one guy

[image: Woman who isn't yet ready to fully commit to one guy]

Even though a relationship might start out well and the woman says things like, "I love you and want to be with you forever" or "I want us to get married one day" it doesn't mean that she is making an iron clad promise.

Feminine women change their mood, feelings and desires for things like the weather. One day she likes a certain song and the next week she hates it. One day she loves the new pair of shoes she spent a lot of money on and the next week she hates them.

We men are different.

If you are a man with very masculine energy, then you are most-likely going to be a man of your word. If you promise something, then it's an iron clad promise that you will stand by no matter what. If you tell a woman that you will stick with her for life, then you mean it.

Masculine women (i.e. women who think, behave and act more like men or "one of the boys") are more likely to stick by their promises for longer. They are less likely to change their mind like the weather because they approach things in a more logical, manly way.

So, if you've ever wondered why a woman said that she loved you so much and wanted to be with you, only to then cheat on you or dump you, this is the reason why: She was just expressing how she felt in THAT moment. She wasn't promising that she would feel that way forever, no matter what.

To keep a feminine woman in a committed relationship, you have to know how to deepen her love, respect and attraction for you over time. You can just expect that what she used to feel will be enough to see you through for the rest of your lives together. You have to actively make her feel more attracted to you, more respectful of you and more in love with you than ever before.

4. She enjoys the thrill of lying and cheating

Some women are bad, disloyal and untrustworthy people. That's just how nature works – there are good and bad people.

If you've chosen a woman who has bad character, then you can expect bad things to happen.

When selecting a woman as your girlfriend or wife, it's not enough that she is beautiful with a great personality. She also has to have great character (i.e. loyal, trustworthy, sincere, caring, loving, warm, friendly).

If you just accept whatever woman you can get and try to make it work with a woman of bad character, then you are asking for trouble. Some women have the type of character where they enjoy the thrill of lying to their man and cheating on him.

I was once in a relationship like that with a woman who was so sexy to me and had such a great personality (we laughed together all the time and got along really well). Yet, every now and then, I noticed that she told me a small lie and sometimes a big lie. I also noticed that she lied to other people and she actually enjoyed it.

After a while, I realized that no matter how physically attracted to her that I was and how much fun we would have together, I absolutely had to break it off with her. I didn't want to end up getting her pregnant and then have to deal with having a liar in my life for the rest of my life.

It was very difficult to break it off with her, but what I did was create a Pros and Cons (Positives and Negatives) list and tried to note down as many negatives as I could. Despite all the negatives, I was still drawn to her because she was so sexy and I enjoyed being with her so much, but I did it.

I broke it off with her.

It wasn't easy, but I did it. Now that I'm married to the girl of my dreams years later, I couldn't be more thankful that I had the courage and foresight to get rid of the dishonest woman.

If you are with a woman who enjoys lying to people, tricking people or getting herself into trouble with people, then I would recommend that you get rid of her before she cheats on you and then enjoys herself as she watches you cringe in emotional pain.

5. Her boyfriend or husband isn't enough of a man for her

I've been helping guys to get an ex girlfriend, fiancée or wife back for many years now and one of the main problems I keep encountering is that the guy just wasn't enough of a man for his woman.

Being enough of a man for a woman is about being the sort of man that she can look up to and respect. A woman will lose respect for a guy when he:

- Hides from his true potential in life behind her and the relationship. In other words, he lacks ambition and spends way too much time on things that don't get him anywhere.
- Becomes needy, clingy, jealous or insecure in the relationship.
- Stops making her feel loved and appreciated.
- Puts her down or belittles her too often.
- Lacks confidence around confident men or alpha males.

- Cries or becomes emotionally weak when life gets tough.
- Is overly bossy or controlling of her in the relationship.
- Lets her be overly bossy or controlling of him.
- Doesn't follow through on his promises.

Getting a woman into a relationship is the easy part, but what takes skill and wisdom is knowing how to keep the relationship together once you've got it.

We don't get taught that sort of thing in school when we're growing up and most of us (including myself) didn't have a good enough father figure who could teach us how to be men.

In the past, a man could be a complete failure in life after getting married and his woman would still have to stick with him. Not anymore. A big part of keeping a relationship together in today's world is to be the sort of man that your woman can look up to and respect. You've got to be the sort of guy that women refer to as a real man.

6. She is using it as a way to break up the relationship

If a woman is unable to break up with a clingy, needy boyfriend who won't let her go, she will often cheat on him and then use that as a way to destroy the relationship. To really push her guy away, she might say that she is in love with the new guy and is starting a relationship with him.

I see this a lot with the guys that I help to get an ex back. In cases like that, the guy needs to rebuild his confidence and quickly fix the issues about himself (e.g. insecurity, neediness, not being enough of a man for her, etc) before he is ready to get another chance with his ex. Essentially what needs to happen is that he needs to learn how to make her feel respect, attraction and love for him again.

With the right training, many of the guys I've helped succeed at getting another chance with the woman who cheated on them. Yet, by the time I've improved his confidence and taught him how to actively attract women, he often ends up dumping her after only being back with her for a short while because he has met a new woman on the side to replace her. What goes around comes around I guess!

7. Her boyfriend or husband doesn't turn her on or make her feel sexy enough

Most women are much more insecure than men realize. According to the global study on beauty conducted by Dove cosmetics, 96% of women don't consider themselves to be beautiful.

When in a relationship with a woman, a man will often make the mistake of regularly pointing out things that he doesn't like about her physically (e.g. "You've put on weight" or "Your hair doesn't look as healthy as it did when I first met you," etc).

While it's fine to encourage your woman to keep herself looking good, putting her down isn't the way to accomplish it. You've got to make your woman feel like the sexiest woman on Earth in your eyes, no matter what she is wearing or how she is looking. From that, she will feel sexy around you and will be much more keen on having sex with you.

She will feel confident in her sex appeal to you, which will get rid of a lot of the worries about you wanting another woman. It will also allow her to open her heart more to you and experience the full potential of the love that you can both share.

By taking that approach, she will then naturally want to look better for you. She will know if she's looking fat or if her hair isn't soft and shiny and she will put in effort to improve that. When she does, you've got to give her compliments about that and find her even sexier as a result.

If you aren't taking that approach and are instead making her feel less and less attractive around you, she may get to the point where she begins flirting with other guys to get them interested in her so she can feel better about herself. The more she does that, the more likely it becomes that she will cheat, especially if she finds a guy that she really connects with and who makes her feel much sexier than you do.

8. To get revenge

If her man has been flirting with other women in front of her, a woman will often begin flirting with men to get revenge. Likewise, if she suspects or knows that her man has cheated, she will often be feeling so betrayed and be in so much emotional pain that she will just sleep with another guy to feel the relief of revenge.

To her, it doesn't matter if her cheating on him will cause further problems in the relationship. What she is more concerned about is getting rid of the sickening feelings of betrayal and loss that she's been feeling ever since she saw him flirt with other women or found out that he cheated.

9. She made a stupid mistake when drunk

When in a committed relationship, a woman shouldn't be going out and having regular girl's nights out without her man, especially if she is going to be drinking a lot.

There's nothing wrong with a man having a boy's night with his friends and a woman having a girl's night with her friends, but it should be a rare thing. If a couple is serious about being in a committed relationship and really love being with each other, they will want to go out as a couple with other couples who are also serious about their relationship.

If a woman is hanging around her single girlfriends all the time who want to get drunk and meet guys, it's usually only a matter of time before she makes a mistake and lets a guy kiss her when she is drunk. Once that happens, the whole dynamic of her relationship with you changes. She has now cheated on you and she's either going to tell you about it and create huge drama between you and her, or keep it a secret and maybe even do it again the next time she goes out.

Personally speaking, I met my wife in a nightclub. At the time, both of us were into clubbing and had lots of single friends who enjoyed clubbing at least twice a week. So, when we got together, I ensured that we would both transition out of the club life together by continuing to go out twice a week until she eventually began to say, 'I'm bored of going clubbing.' I'm over it.

After that happened, we began doing more things on our own and then we began to become closer with our friends who were in relationships. Now, two and a half years later, we rarely hang out with any single friends and spend most of our time with friends who are in relationships or married and with family.

So, if you've got a girlfriend, fiancée or wife who is going out and getting drunk without you often, it's a sign that she isn't taking your relationship very seriously. If she is more interested in partying without you, then it's only a matter of time before she opens herself up to being with other guys.

The way to prevent that happening is to begin going out with her and partying with her friends. Get them to like you, have a great time with it and let your girlfriend (fiancée or wife) see that her friends like you and respect you. After a while, she will want to do more things just as a couple and you will gradually be able to transition out of the party lifestyle.

If you do continue to party, it will be together, which is much better than her going out and getting drunk without you.

10. To feel love again

Love is what we really want and need.

Now that I've experienced true love and am in a relationship where the love is always deepening more and more over time, I know that love is a very powerful and life-changing thing. When other women try to flirt with me, I essentially feel nothing for them because if I were to cheat and leave my wife (I wouldn't), I would have to start from scratch again with a woman who might not even have the capacity to be in love the way that my wife and I are.

When you reach that level of love, cheating becomes absolutely unnecessary. Both of you would lose something amazing just for a quick bit of pleasure with a person who doesn't make you feel the same way.

However, if a woman is in a relationship with a man who hasn't been able to open her up to experience the full potential of love, she may begin to open herself up to feeling love with another guy.

In many relationships that end in cheating, break up or divorce, the couple became more like friends than lovers. By "lovers" I don't mean that you have to have as much sex as you did when you first met for the rest of your life, but that you still feel sexually attracted to each other and enjoy being sexual or intimate with each other.

If you don't know how to make your woman feel sexually attracted to you and look up to you and respect you as her man, those initial feelings of love can fade. Additionally, if you focus on just being her friend and treating her like one of your male buddies, you will lose that masculine/feminine attraction that made you feel so excited in the beginning.

How to Get the Spark Back in a Relationship

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Can you get the spark back in a relationship that has become boring?

It is possible to recharge your sexual desire for each other and then build on it from there?

The answer to both questions is a definite, “Yes!”

What You Need to Do

Getting the spark back in a relationship with a woman is mostly about what you say and do around her.

It's not about how you look, although there is nothing wrong with trying to get into better shape or improve how you look.

A woman's attraction for a man is mostly based on how he conducts himself in life, at work, around friends and family and of course, around her.

As a man, it is your responsibility to get the spark back in a relationship if your woman isn't taking on the responsibility herself.

Some women will take on the responsibility, but most women will simply wait for you to take the lead and fix the relationship.

She will wait and if nothing changes, she will begin to lose respect for you, feel less attraction for you and then begin falling out of love with you.

The Start of a Relationship is the Easy Part

When you first meet a woman and begin a relationship, it's easy to feel great and get along because you're so attracted to each other and are enjoying the novelty of being with someone new.

The sex is fun and enjoyable, you have so much to talk about and there are so many things that enjoy doing together.

You make time for each other, compliment each other and you both couldn't be happier.

Yet, as time passes, other things seem to take on more significance in your life and going to the same old places often begins to feel a little boring.

Before you know it, your fantastic relationship goes from sizzling to fizzling and your exciting sex life begins to feel like a distant memory.

So, how do you get the spark back in a relationship when you reach that point?

More importantly, how do you maintain the sexual spark and make it grow over time?

[image: Lack of attraction]

Simple: You have to actively say and do the things that will reignite her feelings of love, respect and attraction for you.

If what you've been saying and doing around her hasn't been achieving that, you need to change it.

You can't keep doing the same old things and expect your relationship to feel exciting and alive. For example: If you've gotten into the habit of getting angry or annoyed with your girlfriend or wife, you have to change that and bring back a more easy-going, loving and harmonious dynamic in the relationship.

Here's an example of how to do that:

As you will learn in the video above, problems in a relationship are not all a man's fault.

In many cases, a woman will be the instigator and the person who creates a problematic dynamic and the man will then go along with it.

However, just because she does that, it doesn't mean that it's completely up to her to fix it.

Some women will fix and improve themselves on their own, but in most cases, a woman needs a man to react to her in such a way that it causes her to change.

In the example from the video, rather than getting angry at her for not wanting to go and watch a movie and saying that movies are boring, a man can simply avoid getting dragged into the drama and let her realize (in her own time) that she was acting up.

It's not the man's fault that she behaved in that way, but the problems in the relationship (i.e. a lack of a spark) will be partially his fault if he allows himself to get dragged into the drama that she is creating.

Avoiding a Break Up or Divorce

[image: Divorce or break up]

Unfortunately, break ups and divorce are no longer seen as shameful to most people.

In today's society, TV talk show hosts, movie stars and pop singers often glamorize the idea of break ups and divorce.

In effect, they make it look like a "cool" thing to do.

Yet, if you are interested in getting the spark back in your relationship, you are probably trying to avoid being dumped or divorced, right?

You don't want to end up being single and alone again, right?

If you want to keep your relationship together, be sure to avoid the following 3 mistakes from now on...

3 Common Mistakes That Kill the Spark

Keeping the spark alive in your relationship is possible and even easy, as long as you avoid making classic mistakes like these:

1. Making her feel unattractive

[image: Making her feel unattractive]

Most women feel insecure about their physical appearance even when they are at their prettiest.

According to a global study conducted by Dove Cosmetics, 96% of women don't consider themselves to be beautiful.

So, if your girlfriend, fiancé or wife doesn't feel sexy in your eyes, she will either lose interest in having sex with you, reject your attempts to have sex with her or even try to make herself feel better by flirting with other men, which may lead to her cheating.

The way to prevent this problem is to look at your woman as being attractive for who she is and how she looks overall.

Don't focus in on one or two features that have changed since you got together and that you now don't like (e.g. that she's put on a bit of weight or has some wrinkles).

Continue to look at her as the sexiest woman on Earth in your eyes.

Let her feel it by the way you look at her, touch her and treat her.

2. Hiding from your true potential as a man behind her and the relationship

When a relationship begins, a woman won't mind so much if you spend a lot of time with her.

She will enjoy all the affection and attention that you're giving her.

However, after the initial feelings of excitement wear off, she wants to see that you are going after your true potential as a man with unrelenting determination.

If she notices that you're stuck in a dead end job and are always complaining about it, but not doing anything to improve your situation, it will make her lose respect for you.

Likewise, if you have a big dream to follow a certain career path or achieve something that you've wanted to do since you were a young man, but aren't doing it because you're afraid to step up to the plate, it will also make her lose respect for you.

When a woman loses respect for a man, she then begins to lose her feelings of attraction for him.

Then, if the man notices that and begins to behave in a clingy, insecure or needy way, it makes the woman lose even more respect and attraction for him.

At that point, the spark really begins to die out and the love fades into the background.

Even though the relationship started out well, the woman now starts to feel like she has made a mistake.

She will then often begin to nag and complain to her man that he just sits around doing nothing.

If he doesn't ever change, she may eventually get to the point where she asks for a divorce, breaks up with him or says that she needs time and space to find herself.

As a man, you have to decide what you want long term and then go after that with unrelenting determination.

You've got to have the balls to think big and go after your true potential or at least follow through on your biggest dreams.

If you don't do that, you run the risk of becoming the sort of man who develops an unreasonable need for his woman.

Your life becomes about her and if she pulls back her affection or interest at any point, you become insecure, angry or clingy, which then turns her off even more.

Going after your true potential in life is a good thing for you and for her.

So, step up and be the man that you know you can be, even if you are afraid to do it.

Allow her feel respect for you, not look down on you and feel regret that she ever agreed to be in a relationship with you.

3. Not flirting

Flirting isn't something that guys are taught in school, or even by their parents.

Yet, it's something that is absolutely critical for keeping the spark alive in a relationship.

If you're not flirting with your woman, then you are denying her the kind of sexual, romantic communication that she craves.

If you can't give it to her, she will definitely get from another guy (e.g. a coworker, a male friend who has a crush on her, one of your friends, random guys she meets, etc).

How to Handle Your Girlfriend's Moodiness

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Would you describe your girlfriend as being moody?

Does she go from being in a good mood with you, to being a bitch or throwing a tantrum as though she hates you and you're the worst boyfriend on Earth?

Does she sometimes appear happy about something that you've done, only to be unhappy about it when you do it on another day?

If your girlfriend is moody and seems to love you one minute and then hate you the next, the good news is that it is NORMAL. Why?

Most Women Enjoy Being Emotional

[image: How to understand a woman emotionally]

Generally speaking, women tend to be more emotionally sensitive and moody than men.

[image: Feminine woman being emotional]

A woman can be as serious and emotionally sensible as a man in the workplace, but in her private relationship at home, she might be very moody and throw tantrums around her man.

One of the reasons why a woman will throw a tantrum and be moody around her man is to test his confidence and emotional strength.

Will he crumble and become emotionally sensitive when she teases him? Will he panic if she acts like she is losing interest in him? Will he get angry or aggressive because he can't control his emotions?

If a woman throws a tantrum and her man then loses control of his emotions, she then loses some of her feelings of respect and attraction for him.

However, if he can remain calm and not become overly-emotional about what she is saying or doing, then he is showing her that he is a strong, masculine man who isn't going to be thrown off course by a woman.

...and guess what?

That makes her feel more respect and attraction for him.

The more respect and attraction that a woman feels for you, the more deeply she falls in love with you.

A woman will love you more deeply when she can see that no matter what she says or does, you remain emotionally strong and masculine and don't lose control of your emotions or become insecure.

When she can trust in you to be the stronger one in the relationship, it allows her to relax into being a feminine, emotional woman around you.

The more feminine and girly your woman feels with you, the more sexually attracted she will be to you. However, if you are constantly trying to get her to stop being moody and be more like a man, her sexual desire will quickly die away.

You've got to let women be women, while also ensuring that you be the masculine man that she needs you to be.

Masculine men don't waste time gossiping about others on the phone like a girl and they don't get angry, annoyed or emotional when a woman tests them by throwing a tantrum.

Masculine men are focused, driven and on a mission.

They spend the majority of their time making things happen (e.g. building a career, arranging to meet up with friends in person, following through on life purpose goals, fixing things, etc), rather than going around in emotional circles like a girl.

She Doesn't Want You to "Fix" Her

When a man has a problem, he will either discuss it with others to work out a solution or he will come up with a solution on his own, fix it and then get on with life.

However, when a feminine woman has a problem and discusses it with her man, she usually doesn't want him to start offering solutions or to fix it for her. In most cases, she just wants to talk about how she feels about it.

Most women are intelligent and aware enough to come up with perfectly good solutions on their own, so they don't need men to tell them what to do. When your girlfriend brings up a problem that she is having, she usually just wants you to listen to her rant on about it.

She doesn't want you to fix it.

It might seem weird to some men that most women simply want to talk about how they feel about a problem, rather than fixing it, but that is women for you.

It's just the way that most women are – they enjoy getting all emotional about things.

As a man, you might prefer to only discuss problems in a logical, problem-solving manner and might not see the need to get all emotional about it. If that's the case, then you are a very masculine man (a good thing).

Yet, make sure that you don't ever expect the same approach to life from your girlfriend. If you try to get her to behave like a man, she will lose touch with her femininity around you and thus will lose touch with her sexual attraction to you.

How to React to Your Girlfriend's Mood Swings

[image: How to stop arguments with your girlfriend]

One of the keys to successfully maintaining the attraction of a woman and keeping the spark alive in a relationship is to mix it up.

Don't always respond or react in the same way every time she gets into a bad mood, throws a tantrum or starts an unnecessary argument. Here are 9 ways to handle or deal with her mood swings:

1. Laugh at her.
2. Tickle her.
3. Pretend to get angry at her. When you see that she is shocked, laugh and then either walk off, smack her on the ass or just stand there looking at her with a smile.
4. Walk out of the room without saying a word or showing any emotion. She'll likely follow you and demand a response, to which you can then laugh at her.
5. Wrestle her to the ground and then kiss her all over.
6. Change the subject to something completely random and off topic.
7. Pretend that she is boring you and say, "Yaaaaawn...you finished?"
8. Scream louder than her and then start singing or laughing.
9. Pretend that you're upset and act like you're seeking pity.

When a woman throws a tantrum, has a mood swing or starts an unnecessary argument, what she is almost always hoping to experience is the full variety of your personality in response.

While we men tend to like things to be sensible, rational, logical and functional, women like to mess up the flow. She wants to see if you have the masculinity to remain in control of who you are, while also allowing her to be a woman.

The more that you can remain in control of your emotions, the more she will respect you, feel attracted to you and be excited to be in love with an emotionally strong, masculine man.

Moody by Nature

Unlike us men, women are affected by hormonal cycles (i.e. their period, ovulation, etc) that can lead to natural mood swings.

That doesn't mean you should just put up with bad behavior, but instead you should understand that she's going to come in waves. That's just how women are.

Many modern women put on a front and act like they are as sensible, emotionally stable and emotionally tough as men are, but statistically, it just isn't true.

For example:

- According to a global survey conducted by Dove Cosmetics, 96% of women don't consider themselves to be beautiful.
- Women experience depression at twice the rate of men in the USA.
- In the UK, 40% of women will require treatment for depression at some point in their life compared to only 10% of men. In other words, women are a lot more depressed than men. Almost half of the women you meet will have suffered depression at some point in their life, or will be depressed when you meet them. She might put on an act of being happy, but she's just a fragile, emotionally vulnerable girl on the inside.
- Women are twice as likely to experience anxiety compared to men.
- 60% of the people who have OCD (Obsessive Compulsive Disorders) and phobias are women.

As you can see from the statistics above, women have a lot more "emotional problems" than men do. It's just how it is.

Understanding your girlfriend's mood swings means simply accepting that she won't always respond to everyday challenges the same way as you do – and that’s okay.

She is a woman and you are a man – accept that and love her for it.

She will be more temperamental than you and that is okay. She will likely be more difficult to talk to during an argument because she will become overly emotional and irrational and that’s okay too.

Let her be moody and let her be a dramatic woman if she wants to.

Love her for it.

Laugh about it.

Smack her on the ass for it.

Smile when she is moody and she will love you for it.

You can’t stop a woman from being moody and you can’t tell her to stop being up one minute and down the next, just like she can’t tell you to stop being an emotionally strong, sensible man.

Imagine if she told you that she wanted you to be moody, cry like her, care a lot more about shoes and make up and have more of a desire to talk about all the “drama” going on between your friends.

You’d likely tell her she was crazy for wanting you to be more like a woman.

Likewise, she will think the same of you if you expect her to think, talk, feel and behave like you do.

Opposites Attract, But Do They Stay Attracted?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

â€œOpposites attractâ€ is an expression that's commonly used in connection with relationships and refers not only to couples who are opposites in terms of their physical traits, but also to those who are opposites in terms of their personality traits.

For example, it's not uncommon to see a couple who appear to be at opposite ends of the height spectrum, but if you take a moment to think about it, you probably also know of couples who are at opposite ends of the personality scale too – an introverted woman with an extroverted boyfriend for example.

You might also see a really nice guy with a bitchy, manipulative woman. Clearly, opposites do attract, but does the attraction last beyond the early stages of a relationship or do differences eventually become annoyances?

Do You Have Everything In Common For it to Last?

It's a common relationship myth that you and your girlfriend must have virtually everything in common if your relationship is to stand any chance of lasting a lifetime.

It's true that in the early stages of a relationship, the focus is entirely on shared interests and commonalities and you may even discover that you and your girlfriend have so much in common that you both feel like you could almost be the same person.

However, it's not being the same that makes a relationship last, it is being two individuals who complement each other that makes a relationship endure through the good times and bad.

A relationship in which two people enrich each others lives rather than simply reflecting them is always going to be a more interesting and enjoyable one. Being able to appreciate the differences between you and enjoy that about each other also helps to makes a relationship work.

Are You the Ideal Couple?

Extensive research into the qualities of a happy marriage has concluded that the most important element of a long-lasting, loving relationship is a shared attitude to life.

For example: You both want to raise your own family and build on the families you've come from, by staying close with your parents, siblings and cousins. Or, you both want to avoid marriage and children for life and just go on outdoorsy adventures around the world.

Other than have a shared attitude to life, there really are no clearly defined prerequisites that must be met to qualify you as an "ideal couple". In terms of personality differences between couples, it seems that just about anything goes these days.

Interestingly, the couples (in all the studies we've seen) who were continuing to enjoy their relationships after decades all had shared core values in common with their boyfriend/girlfriend/husband/wife and were essentially working towards the same end goal together. This doesn't mean having to see eye-to-eye on every little thing in life, it simply means sharing the same attitude to the things that really matter to them in life. In a strong relationship, the things that really matter will be one and the same for both parties.

You and your girlfriend may not share the same taste in movies or the same taste in music, but in the grand scale of things, they're not differences that really matter. What really matters is sharing a common vision of your future together or, depending on the stage of your relationship, having shared views on roles within a marriage or on parenting.

According to research carried out by the American Psychological Association, small differences and petty annoyances such as how someone eats or how they brush their teeth can cause conflict in a relationship.

Couples who are emotionally intelligent enough to actively look for ways to work through their differences are able to focus on what they love about each other and to accept each other for who they are.

In other words, if you get irritated by the way your girlfriend brushes her teeth, don't watch her or don't worry about it – it's unimportant compared to the love and relationship you share!

Celebrity – Odd Couples

A great many celebrity couples over the years have provided classic examples of opposites attracting, but not lasting. Back in the early 90s, a young, squeaky-clean Kylie Minogue paired up with Michael Hutchence of INXS who was a notorious bad boy of rock at the time.

Kylie has since said of the relationship, "He wasn't as bad as everyone thought and I wasn't as good. We met in the middle." They were arguably opposites who attracted, but it wasn't a relationship that lasted. It's difficult to speculate why because celebrities live in a different world to us normal people!

When Michael Douglas and Catherine Zeta-Jones got together in 1999, there was a 25 year age difference between them and it wasn't a relationship that celebrity watchers considered would last. Within a year they were married and are still married today – a remarkably long marriage by celebrity standards.

Interestingly, they both share the same birthday but their successful relationship despite a significant age difference highlights that being of a similar age is not nearly as important as sharing a similar outlook on life, which they both seem to share.

Another odd couple who have stood the test of time are Heidi Klum and Seal. They were both enjoying highly-successful careers when they met; Klum as one of the world's best known fashion models and Seal as a singer, but also a singer with a face visibly scarred by skin disease.

To onlookers, they appeared as opposites but they prove that it's not a match in outward appearances that makes a relationship last, it's a match in who the inner people are and what their core values are that matters.

Long-term Attraction

Studies have concluded that opposites really do attract and they can stay attracted despite having obvious differences.

However, the bottom line is that the small differences are insignificant because there will always be more similarities on a deeper level with a successful couple than there will be differences.

Being different and having two perspectives in a relationship makes it interesting but, ultimately it is the man's ability to deepen a woman's love, respect and attraction over time in a relationship that really counts.

Moving In With Your Girlfriend – Is it the Right Time?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you and your girlfriend are thinking of moving in together, but you're not quite sure if now is the right time, try asking yourself the following questions first.

Are you friends, as well as lovers?

If you've reached the stage in your relationship where moving in together feels like a natural progression, then it's safe to assume that you do love each other, but do you really, really like each other?

If the sexual attraction wasn't there, would you still like your girlfriend for just being who she is? Does she have the same qualities that you would look for in a great friend? When lust is a big part of the equation, the little things that would make or break a platonic friendship are often completely overlooked.

When your friends have stayed over at your place in the past, you might have found yourself feeling irritated by some of their domestic habits and then realized how glad you were that it was just for one night!

When your girlfriend stays over, she may have some of the very same habits, but if you're still in the lust stage of the relationship you might overlook them because it's her and you've got other things on your mind! But, how would you feel about it when it's not just for one night?

Before moving in together, you need to consider how strong your friendship is with your girlfriend and whether you really do enjoy each others quirks. Can you talk to her about all the things you'd talk about with your friends? Are you able to just be yourself around her – all of the time?

Are your reasons the right ones?

It's quite likely that your main reason for thinking about moving in together is simply that you want to be able to spend more time together. However, another common scenario is that moving in together represents a financial saving for you both.

If that's your main motivation, you need to consider how strong your relationship really is because sleeping with each other every night may eventually lead to a pregnancy and if you don't truly love her, you'll be attached to her for life whether you like it or not.

Moving in together should be about taking the next step in your relationship and you should be at a stage where you're thinking in terms of your girlfriend being a permanent presence in your life.

If you're more concerned with saving rental costs and splitting bills and you're thinking in terms of 'she'll do for now,' you should share a house with a friend or advertise online for free to get new tenants in to share the rent with you.

Are you ready to give up your independence?

Quite often, when you reach the stage of thinking about moving in together, you already spend the majority of your time together anyway, so it feels like the next logical step.

When that's the case, it does make sense to share one place together instead of always having to travel to each others house to meet.

When two homes become one, your independence is reduced. You can no longer come and go as you please without letting her know where you're going and when you'll be back.

Sure, you can still have independent interests as a couple and still do your own thing with your friends whenever you want, but moving in together means it isn't as easy to chill out alone for hours and take your mind off things when you need to. Making the decision to move in together means that you need to become with being two people in one shared space.

Are you truly compatible?

When you live together, compatibility goes way beyond liking the same restaurants or sharing an interest in the same kind of music.

If she's going to move into your place, what's coming with her? For example, she may have an old iron bedstead that belonged to her great-grandmother, a collection of scatter cushions that could fill a soft furnishings store and three cats, but your pad is furnished in an ultra-modern, ultra-sleek minimalist style – now what?

While you might be happier with none of her stuff coming in and ruining your cool pad, people often compromise and mix each others styles together. However, if you are truly compatible, you'd like the same sort of things and wouldn't need to change.

Make sure you are just settling for a woman because you're afraid you can't find another. Meeting and attracting new women is actually very easy when you know how.

Do you both have a shared vision for your future?

To answer this question, you have to know what your vision is for your relationship as well as what your girlfriend's vision really is in her heart of hearts.

If your ultimate goals are not shared, moving in together can only lead to heartache for one or both of you further down the line. For example: If your vision is to one day live in a city penthouse apartment, but hers is to move into a leafy suburb, you're aiming for polar extremes in terms of lifestyle.

If you both share a vision of traveling the world together or buying a country home together or one day starting a family together, then moving in together is a positive step towards making your future vision a reality.

Additionally, if you and your girlfriend haven't even spoken about your future dreams together, it is definitely not the right time to move in together.

If you do, you run the risk of making her pregnant and ending up as a single dad. While that isn't so bad for a lot of guys, it certainly isn't at the top of our list of things to do, so if you can avoid it you should try to do so.

Does she feel more respect, love and attraction for you now than ever before?

In today's world, a man needs to be able to deepen a woman's love, respect and attraction for him in a relationship. In the past, a woman would put up with not feeling more (or even any) respect, love and attraction for her man because it was shameful to break up or divorce.

Not anymore.

If you want your relationship to be successful in the long run, you must at least know how to deepen her feelings of love, respect and attraction for you. Watch this video for more info...

Taking a chance

You never really know whether your relationship is destined to last, but if you do have doubts try not to move in.

If you feel that this relationship is for keeps, then living together is a positive step towards building a stronger, more loving and long-lasting relationship and you should go ahead and take a chance.

The 5 Stages of a Relationship

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

There are five stages of a relationship between a man and a woman.

1. Lust and romance.
2. Power struggle.
3. Working.
4. Commitment.
5. Blissful love.

Unfortunately, most couples only get to stage two and then break up.

Some couples get to stage three and four, but they're not really happy.

They feel more like friends, there's no sexual spark, or the woman or the man is thinking of maybe leaving and trying to find someone else.

The real prize of a relationship between a man and a woman is to get to the fifth stage, the Blissful Love stage.

When you reach the Blissful Love stage of a relationship, the love, respect, and attraction that you and your woman feel for each other deepens over time.

You feel sexually attracted to each other for life.

You're in love with each other for life.

You respect each other for life.

You have an amazing relationship and you're one of those couples that people look at and think, "How do they do it? Why are they so happy? Why don't I have what they have?"

The Stages, How Each One Works and Where Couples Go Wrong

So, let's have a look at each of the stages of a relationship.

I'll explain how it works, where couples go wrong and what you need to do to get to stage five where you experience Blissful Love and want to stay together for life.

1. Lust and Romance

[image: Lust and romance stage]

This is where you feel very sexually attracted to each other at the start and you fall in love, which is different to true committed love at the Blissful Love stage of a relationship.

In stage one, you don't really care about each other's faults.

You just want to be together, have sex and enjoy each other's company.

According to scientists, at this stage of a relationship, natural chemicals are released in the brain to make a couple want to be together, have sex and stay together long enough for offspring to be created.

[image: Love and lust chemicals released into the brain]

So, in the lust and romance stage of a relationship, which is otherwise known as the dating phase, the man and woman will experience a dump of natural chemicals in their brain.

Chemicals like dopamine, oxytocin, phenylethylamine and norepinephrine.

Unfortunately, most Hollywood movies show this stage of a relationship as being the peak of a relationship, so many people expect a relationship to just be like that for life, without having to go through any other stages of development.

The couple walks off into the sunset to live happily ever after.

So, for a lot of real life couples these days, when the first stage of a relationship starts to calm down, they begin to wonder, “Hang on, is this the right person for me? I’m not feeling the way I used to feel about her and she’s not behaving the way that she used to behave. She’s not looking at me in the same way as when we were dating. Does that mean that we’re not a match?”

As a result of the confusion, a lot of couples break up shortly after the Lust and Romance stage starts to calm down.

They simply don’t know that there are different stages to a relationship and that they can eventually get to Blissful Love if they stick together and ride the bumps all the way to victory.

The next stage of a relationship is the power struggle...

2. Power Struggle

[image: Power struggle stage of a relationship]

This is also where a lot of couples break up because their behavior changes and depending on how each person reacts, it will either bring them together or drive them apart.

For example: Sometimes a man will be shocked to realize that his woman isn’t behaving in the same way that she used to.

She was so nice and sweet to him at the start, but now she’s arguing with him, throwing tantrum and trying to get her way all the time.

When a guy is faced with that situation, he will sometimes make the mistake of gradually giving his woman too much power.

[image: Relationship falling apart at the power struggle stage]

The more power he gives her and the more he tries to suck up to her and do whatever she wants, the less respect and attraction she feels for him.

Some couples can stay together for a long time if the man hands over his power to the woman, but neither of them will ever truly be happy and reach Blissful Love.

When a man hands over his power to a woman because he doesn’t know how else to please her, she loses respect for him and gradually stops feeling attracted to him.

Eventually, she falls out of love with him.

She might stay with him (e.g. to pay off the mortgage, raise the children, avoid the embarrassment of breaking up or getting divorced), but she won’t be blissfully in love with him.

He handed over his power to her and she no longer feels like a real woman (i.e. feminine, girly, free to be emotional, totally in love with her man) anymore.

So, the relationship begins to feel strained, forced and could break up at any moment if a serious fight or argument makes one of them feel like enough is enough.

To get past the Power Struggle stage, you need to make sure that you are in the position of power as the man.

What a woman really wants is for a man to be in the position of power (even though she will rarely, if ever, admit that in public because she doesn't want men to get the wrong idea and start bossing her around because they hope it will make her want sex or a relationship).

Even though a woman does want a good man who treats her well, she doesn't want a pushover type of guy who does whatever she wants because he's either afraid of losing her, or lacks the emotional masculinity to stand up and be a man.

She wants a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy that she has to carry throughout life. Being a man in the relationship isn't about bossing her around, being rude, being aggressive or anything old school like that.

It's simply about being the more emotionally strong one in the relationship, leading the way and allowing her to feel like a real woman in the relationship.

When you do that, she will naturally and happily support you, love you and be there for you in any way she can.

In other words, she will be devoted to you and be a loving, caring, supportive woman.

However, if you hand over power to her, she will feel stressed and resent you for not having the balls to be the man.

If she gets bored of the relationship and happens to meet a man who can take on the position of power, she will naturally feel attracted to him and may open herself up to cheating, or to breaking up with you to then be with him instead.

The third stage of a relationship is the Working stage of a relationship...

3. Working

This is where the relationship is working.

So, let's assume that a man was able to get past the Power Struggle stage with his woman and he is clearly in the position of power.

They're in love with each other and the relationship is working.

A lot of couples do get to this point, but this is also where a lot of couples break up.

[image: Relationship losing its spark at the working stage]

What happens is that over time, they start to become more like friends.

They don't put in the effort anymore to make each other feel attracted and they start to take each other's love, attraction and commitment for granted.

The relationship then goes from Working, to boring and then to falling apart.

Either the man or the woman will start thinking about cheating or leaving because they just don't feel like they're in love anymore.

The man doesn't feel much attraction for her.

She doesn't feel much attraction for him.

They feel more like friends, roommates or housemates and it's quite boring.

That's not a fun type of relationship.

It's not the Blissful Love type of relationship that you experience at stage five.

By the way...

Some men will ruin the relationship when it has been working by becoming too domineering or controlling.

A man will assume that if she liked him taking on the position of power, then she will really like him taking away all of her power and essentially controlling her life, her decisions, her feelings and her actions.

Obviously that isn't what a woman wants.

A woman wants a man who has the confidence and emotional masculinity (i.e. balls) to take on the position of power, but she also wants him to be respectful, loving and kind to her.

Being the man isn't about being a domineering asshole who rules over a woman's life.

It's about being the emotionally strong man (i.e. you're always emotionally strong no matter what you and her face or encounter in life) that she can look up to, respect and love.

If you do that, a woman will be so damn good to you for life.

She will know that it would be next to impossible for her to find another man like you and as a result, she won't want to ever cheat on you or leave you.

The fourth stage of a relationship is commitment...

4. Commitment

So, let's assume that the man was able to get past the Power Struggle stage, he then got the relationship to the Working stage and they remained in love.

As a result, the love, respect and attraction between him and her started to deepen over time.

The love wasn't fading away. The spark wasn't dying out. The spark was still there.

They were still in love and it was starting to deepen.

At that point in a relationship, it makes total sense to the man and the woman to commit to each other.

Most couples then either commit to having a relationship and staying together for life, but not getting married, or they get engaged and married.

If they haven't already moved in together, they do that at stage four.

If they've already moved in together, they start thinking about planning a family and begin working towards long-term mutually rewarding goals.

Unfortunately, though, many couples also break up after the Commitment stage of a relationship.

[image: Relationship falling apart after commitment]

When they first moved in together, got engaged or married, it all felt great.

However, over time, the relationship started to fall apart.

For example: The man started to cause his woman to lose respect for him by getting into arguments with her all the time and creating stress in their relationship.

Alternatively, he may have become clingy, needy or controlling and caused her to lose respect and attraction for him as a result of that.

What happens in a lot of relationships is that once a man has gotten his woman to move in with him, or get engaged or married, he slowly changes how he treats his woman.

In the first stage of the relationship (Lust and Romance), he may have taken her on lots of sweet, romantic or loving dates and seduced her into having a relationship with him.

When the relationship was Working and he got her to commit to him, he was most likely still on his best behavior, treating her well and keeping the relationship together.

Yet, after she committed to him and moved in with him, he gradually started to take her for granted (e.g. he became irritable around her, got into pointless arguments with her, insulted her often, complained about unimportant things all the time, stopped caring about how she felt and only cared about how he felt, expected her to respect him at all times, but he didn't offer her the same in return).

Unlike in the past where a woman would stay with a man for life because it was shameful to break up or get divorced, in today's world, women are free to break up with or get divorced from a man.

So, to keep a relationship together for life, you've got to make sure that you get it to the fifth stage, Blissful love.

5. Blissful love

[image: Blissful love]

This is the ultimate prize of a relationship between a man and a woman.

It's the ultimate reward.

This is the best part of a relationship that you can ever experience, where you finally reach what people refer to as true love.

From that point onwards, you then experience lifelong happiness together as a couple where you enjoy spending time together, cuddling, kissing, having sex and achieving long-term mutually rewarding goals together.

[image: Blissful love]

Getting to the blissful love stage of a relationship also prevents both you and her from wanting to cheat.

The idea of cheating or leaving each other for someone else seems like the dumbest idea in the world because you're so in love.

You enjoy each other's company so much.

You're sexually attracted to each other, even though you've been together for years or decades.

You feel so good around each other and are achieving mutually rewarding long-term goals together, so there's no reason to leave each other.

By the way...

I know this from personal experience because I'm happily married and my wife and I have been at the Blissful Love stage of our relationship for a long, long time.

It literally gets better and better over time.

That's how it supposed to be.

When you get to Blissful Love and keep it there, you and her only want to be with each other.

There is no desire to cheat or leave because you already have exactly what you want and it feels amazing.

So, when you get your relationship to Blissful Love and keep it there, your woman will also never want to leave you.

Women know (from personal experience and from seeing what other women they know have gone through) that it's very difficult to find a man who can get a relationship to Blissful Love and keep it there.

So, when she finds a man who has that ability, there is no reason to leave him or cheat on him.

She already has her perfect man.

There's nothing that she needs from other men because she's already getting it with you.

The type of love that you experience at the Blissful Love stage of a relationship is different and arguably, it's way better than what you experience at the start (Lust and Romance).

What you experience at the start of a relationship is enjoyable.

It's fun.

You get that brain dump of chemicals and you want to be around each other all the time, but the same thing applies at the Blissful Love stage of a relationship.

Yet, it's a little bit different.

What happens is that both you and her experience what I call love attraction.

Love attraction is where both you and her feel completely attracted to each other even though you've been together for years or decades.

Even though you may have gotten some wrinkles over time, put on some weight, lost some weight, no longer have the muscles that you used to or she doesn't have the shapes that she used to, you are still both completely attracted to each other.

None of the changes to your physical appearance really matter because you are experiencing love attraction for each other, which is deeper and lasts for life.

You might have seen love attraction in action when you've observed older couples who are still madly in love even though they've been together for decades.

They still hold hands, they cuddle, they kiss and they look at each other with loving eyes.

That is what happens when you get to the Blissful Love stage of a relationship and keep it there.

Long Distance Relationship: Can You Make it Work?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

When you consider the sheer number of people who live in close proximity to each other in cities and towns all over the world, youâ€¦d think it would be possible to meet a woman who lives near you.

Yet, sometimes you meet a girl who is exactly what you want, with one exception: She lives far away from you in another country, state or city or you started out in the same place, but she has moved away.

So, when you aren't in close proximity to each other, will the relationship survive?

Chances of Survival

There are many old saying that can be applied to long-distance relationships, two of which offer completely different perspectives: "Absence makes the heart grow fonder" and "Out of sight is out of mind."

Both of those are true, yet which one will be true for you?

It all depends on how much respect, love and attraction your woman feels for you. If your woman looks up to you and respects you as a man, feels attracted to who you are and loves who she is in her relationship with you, then absence WILL make her heart grow fonder.

However, if she doesn't feel much respect, love and attraction for you, then when you are out of her sight, you will most-likely be out of her mind most of the time. She won't feel like she is losing much by not being with you, so she will probably decide to find a new guy.

How can you make a woman feel enough respect, attraction and love for you so she never wants to leave you?

When you are always making her feel respect, attraction and love for you (even though you can only chat via phone, video chat or messages), she naturally doesn't want to leave you.

She feels drawn to you and doesn't want to lose you because you are her perfect man. You are giving her the kind of relationship and attraction experience that she really wants, even though you don't get to see each other very often.

By the way...

How Long Have You Been Together?

If your relationship is in the very early stages and you're not truly in love yet, then the chances of surviving a lengthy enforced separation are slim.

If youâ€¦re already a year or two into a loving relationship that feels great for both of you, then thereâ€¦s every chance that it will survive a period of separation, provided that it is what you both really want.

Even if a woman says that she loves you, it doesn't mean that she will stick by you. I've been helping guys to get ex girlfriends, fiances or wives back for many years and I always hear similar things from guys.

The woman had said to him that she loves him, is considering marrying him, sees him in her future, wants to have a family with him, etc. Then, out of the blue, she says that she no longer feels the same way.

So, if you feel like your woman might decide to break up with you soon, watch this video to understand how to stop a break up before it happens...

Going the Distance

[image: Long distance relationship: Soldier returning home]

[image: Long distance relationship: Soldier returning home]

These days, there are millions of couples from all over the world who manage to make a long-distance relationship work.

One of the most common reasons for a relationship to become a long distance once is due to work commitments. Sometimes, a once in a lifetime career opportunity presents itself and the chance to go somewhere, do something, or achieve an ambition is just too great to pass up.

Sometimes being away from home is just a regular part of your job. Off-shore workers for example, soldiers, miners, business executives on overseas trips, school students who move away to study at different universities, and even movie stars and touring bands who spend long periods of time away from home while filming on location or on tour.

When you or your woman decide that you want to be away from one another, something that you need to question is whether that “opportunity of a lifetime” might be a signal that your relationship is not really working out.

Maybe one of you is trying to create a big physical distance between you, to then create an emotional distance that leads to a break up.

Know Before You Go

If a long-distance relationship is to stand any chance of survival, there must be an end goal in sight before it even begins. This means knowing exactly how long the separation will last in terms of months, weeks, or even days.

Itâ€™s not the actual length of time apart that determines whether your relationship will survive or not, itâ€™s the impact the separation will have on your existing relationship that matters the most.

If youâ€™re a soldier and your relationship has survived several six week long tours of duty already, an upcoming separation of six months will have less of an impact than if youâ€™ve never been apart from your girlfriend for longer than your eight hour working day.

By knowing exactly or approximately how long the separation will last, you can then both decide whether itâ€™s something that youâ€™re willing to go through together. Tough times are much easier to endure when there is an end in sight and without that end goal in place, giving up might become the easier option.

Avoid Cheating

If both of you are quite popular and live active social lives, it may only be so long before one of you cheats or at least starts thinking about cheating. While it might seem like an impossible thought now because you are so in love with each other, other options may begin to look good when neither of you have had sex for 60 days or more.

If you suspect that she might cheat on you, discuss it upfront. Be honest and talk about how natural it is to want sex, but then also talk about how even the slightest indiscretion will destroy the relationship.

For example: If she finds out that you've been texting back and forth with an ex-girlfriend who is trying to hook up with you again while you are in her town or city, the trust in your relationship will be forever ruined.

Decide how you will both react if people try to take advantage of the opportunity to hook up with you, so you are both less likely to become excited by the opportunity and then make a mistake.

Making it Work

Communication is key in any relationship and it's absolutely vital in a long-distance relationship. Talking on the phone, Skype or Facetime is great, but if the way that you talk to her isn't making her feel attracted to you, respectful of you and more in love with you, then it's not going to help.

[image: Huh? Why is he texting me this insecure crap?]

Additionally, if you're texting the crap out of her and saying that you miss her every day, that will be sweet for a little while, but it will get boring and even annoying if she doesn't feel much respect, love and attraction for you.

Assuming that you are the sort of guy who knows how to trigger feelings of sexual attraction inside of a woman, then e-mail, text messaging and video calling are great when you relocate to a different time-zone because you can maintain a connection that feels good for both of you.

Sending photos of where you're living, where you're working, or something unusual you've discovered that day can also help to make your girlfriend (fiance or wife) feel included in your everyday life. If she already feels a lot of respect, love and attraction for you, she will appreciate and cherish anything that you send her.

Scheduled Hook Ups

Arranging to talk at the same time every week is a good idea because it gives you both something to look forward to. It also ensures that you aren't over-communicating with each other or calling each other at inconvenient times (e.g. she's just about to go to sleep and you've just finished lunch and are full of energy).

By making it a priority to speak to each other at scheduled times, you're letting your woman know that she's still a priority in your life, but that doesn't mean you can't ever still be spontaneous.

If you're going to do something spontaneous, make it a good night text or send her a video or audio message on Facebook that will make her laugh (that will make her feel some attraction for you), smile and feel good before she goes to sleep.

Maintaining a Great Relationship With a Woman

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

You attracted her, you won her over and now that you're in a relationship with her, something just doesn't feel right.

You are starting to see signs that she's losing interest and you're not sure how to get back that 'loving feeling' and excitement you both felt at the beginning of your relationship.

How can you ensure that you maintain a great relationship with your girlfriend (fiance or wife) and not have to ever face being dumped or divorced?

Love is at the Heart of it

[image: Dying love]

The love between a man and a woman is something that needs to be taken care of. Without real love, a relationship between a man and a woman is doomed to fail.

I've been helping guys to get their ex back for many years now and a consistent mistake that I've seen guys make is to take the woman's love for granted. To maintain a great relationship with a woman, you have to continually build on the love that you've got, rather than expecting that what you once had will see you through until the end.

Love can get stronger, deeper and more meaningful over time, but it can also become weaker, more shallow and less meaningful over time. If you don't actively try to deepen the love, respect and attraction over time in your relationship, it will often begin to fall apart and then end in a break up.

These days, women don't have to stick with a guy who doesn't make them feel enough love, respect or attraction. If a woman is unhappy, the society around her encourages her to move on.

As a modern man, you have to know how to deepen a woman's love, respect and attraction for you over time. If you don't know how to do that, you just can't expect a relationship to last.

2 Ways to Ensure That You Maintain a Great Relationship

I can teach you many different ways to deepen the love, respect and attraction in your relationship, but here are 4 ways to get you started...

1. Laugh and Smile as Often as Possible

Life isn't always easy.

Sometimes, it can feel difficult to smile, laugh and look on the positive side of things. Yet, it's something that you must do.

If you get into the habit of thinking, behaving or acting in a negative, unhappy or frustrated way, you will push your woman away. The truth is, it's just as easy to laugh and smile about a challenging situation as it is to become angry and frustrated.

It takes some practice and effort, but if you push yourself to be the sort of man who can smile, laugh and be more light-hearted about things, it will attract your woman to you like a magnet.

Most people struggle to maintain a positive attitude and smile and laugh, but when you are the strong-minded, intelligent man who can put a smile on her face, you are the man that she will stick with.

You will also find that more and more people want to be your friend and spend time with you, because spending time with you makes them feel better about themselves.

When your woman sees that most people like you and want to be around you, it makes her feel more attracted to you and lucky to be with you.

On the other hand, if you are always complaining, getting frustrated or looking at the negative side of things, she will feel repelled by you.

She will also notice that only negative people like to be around you and when she spends time with you and them, she feels horrible about herself and about life.

After a while, a lack of happiness and laughter begins to eat away at the good feelings associated with your relationship.

She may even begin to think that the reason she is so unhappy is because of you. When that happens, she will most-likely come out with the classic line, “I think I need some space from you for a while” or “I think we should take a break for a while.”

2. Be a Man That She Can Look Up to and Respect

A woman will stick by a man for life if she feels enough love, respect and attraction for him.

Unfortunately, many guys get lazy when the woman falls in love and they begin to do things that make her lose respect. For example:

- Hiding from his true potential in life behind her and the relationship.
- Bossing her around at home, but being shy, nice or very accommodating to other people in public.
- Becoming overly suspicious or protective of her.
- Putting her down or criticizing her on a regular basis.
- Letting her boss him around and treat him badly.
- Not following through on his promises.

When a guy does that to a woman, she will then begin to pull back her interest. She will be less affectionate, she will say “I love you” less often and may even begin to talk about being unhappy in the relationship.

At that point, many guys make the mistake of becoming insecure, angry or overly jealous and protective, which makes the woman lose even more respect, attraction and love for him.

What guys need to realize is that no-one is perfect. If you make a mistake, own up to it and then change it, but don't lose confidence in yourself because you made a mistake.

See it as a GOOD thing that you've learned from your mistake by changing your behavior and becoming an even better man.

While doing that, make sure that you maintain confidence in your attractiveness to her. Don't doubt yourself.

She chose to be in a relationship with you because she liked you a lot. She then fell in love with you.

If you go through some bad times in the relationship because of your mistakes, don't worry – you can always fix it.

How to React When You Run Into Her Ex-Boyfriend

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It would be great if every new relationship started with neither of you having any baggage from previous relationships.

However, if you're over the age of 25, that's probably not going to happen no matter how strict the woman's parents have been about her dating life. Everyone, including you, has a past.

If your new girlfriend still lives in the same general area as her ex-boyfriend or ex-husband, then you are most-likely going to run into him at times.

So how should you react when you run into her ex boyfriend or husband? Your best bet is to pay attention to how she reacts to him.

If she spots her ex when you're out in public and then seems upset or aggravated by saying something like, "Damn, there's my ex," ask her if she would prefer to leave or stick around. There's no reason to ruin your evening if she's going to be focusing on what her ex is doing rather than paying attention to you.

If she doesn't want to go, then just don't worry about the ex at all. When around an ex-boyfriend or ex-husband, your new girlfriend will want to see that you don't feel insecure about attractiveness to her compared to him.

You need to have the mindset that he isn't as good of a man as you are, no matter what she says about him or what he brags about if he comes over and talks with the both of you. You are the man, she is with you and you are better than him. End of story.

When your new girlfriend sees that you are not concerned about her ex, it makes her feel attracted to your confidence and self-belief. She may try to test you by showing some interest in him, saying that he's a psycho (to get you scared) or saying some positive things about him.

No matter what happens, just remain relaxed, easy-going and don't care about the ex's potential attractiveness compared to you. When your girl can see that you aren't worried that she might have some lingering feelings for him and are completely confident and relaxed, it will make her feel a lot of respect and attraction for you.

What if She Seems Upset?

While it would be helpful if you knew exactly why she seems to be upset in his presence, don't push for details if she's not forthcoming about it, especially if this is the early part of your relationship. However, if you've been dating for more than a couple of months, it is useful to know about their history, especially about why she's so irritated at the mere sight of him.

If she doesn't volunteer to say anything to you about him, you can casually ask her why she reacted with "Damn, there's my ex," and give her a couple of minutes to get it off her chest (but not so long that she gets worked up in the wrong way). By listening to what she is saying and noticing any changes in her behavior, you'll get a good indication of how she feels about her ex.

The worst thing you can do is begin to get jealous about her ex or feel insecure about his place in her heart. If she that says she is over him and is glad they broke up, believe her and say, â€œIâ€™m glad you broke up too; otherwise we wouldnâ€™t have met.â€ A response by that will demonstrate your emotional maturity and she will begin to shut down her ex in her mind.

On the other hand, if she spots her ex and says, “Oh, hey, look, there’s my ex,” and then smiles and waves at him, then he’s most likely going to come over to say hello. After they greet each other, stand, hold out your hand and if she hasn’t already done so, introduce yourself.

Unless you detect some underlying tension (sexual or otherwise), there is no reason for you to freak out about whether or not they are still on good terms. Be relaxed and just let the situation play out. Chances are, he will leave after a short while and you can then get back to your date.

If she’s constantly scanning the room for him or staring over in his direction, there may be something else going on in her mind. She just might not be over him yet, or they may have been staying in contact all this time via Facebook, text or otherwise.

If you have reason to suspect that they are still â€œonâ€, you can either choose to have the “So what’s the story with you and your ex?” conversation or you can decide dump her after the date, cut your losses and move on to another woman until she comes crawling back to you with an apology.

If she seems interested in him, it could also be something as simple as her ex being in the company of a mutual and she wants to say hello to them, but doesn’t know how you’ll feel about it. If that’s the situation, encourage her to go over and say hi.

It doesn’t matter if she goes over by herself or with you. If you go over with her, simply be confident, relaxed and easy-going, but don’t try hard to be liked. Just be there and relax as the situation plays out. Let her/their friends see how lucky she is to have found a cool, confident guy like you who doesn’t feel insecure about running into her ex-boyfriend or husband.

Running into her ex will only become an issue if you allow it to. Remember, there is a reason that their relationship is over and none of the reasons have anything to do with you. Therefore, you shouldn’t feel threatened by him at all.

Running into a girlfriend’s ex may trigger a “fight or flight” response for some guys, but unless you have a clear reason to think she still wants to be with him, her ex may have no more romantic emotional significance to her than anyone else from her present or past that you happen to bump into.

A lot of the time running into an ex can trigger a negative emotional reaction and remind a woman of how much she doesn’t want to be with him and how happy she is to be with you. Just as there is a reason why they broke up, there is also a reason that she’s with you. She likes you and wants to be with you, so embrace it and don’t worry about guys from the past.

Be the charming, confident dude that she agreed to date in the first place. If you can do that when you run into her ex, he will remain exactly where he should be in her past and you will solidify your place in her new life.

Top 10 Ways to Make Her Parents Dislike You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

You've been dating a girl for a while and you find out that her parents have invited you over for dinner.

You really like this girl, so you want to make a good impression on her parents so they help her realize what a great guy you are.

On the other hand, if you want to ruin that first meeting so her parents forbid her from ever seeing you again, or badmouth you so much and so often that she figures you're just not worth the effort; here are the top ten ways to make her parents immediately dislike you.

10. Dress like a slob

Go over to her house looking like you've just rolled out of bed or from under a car you've been working on all day. Don't shower, shave, remove the gunk from under your nails nor wash your hair. Hey, you're just keeping it real. What do they expect? After all, it's not important how you present yourself to the world on the outside; it's all about what's on the inside, right?

9. Arrive empty-handed

Why should you bring a gift? It's not like it's someone's birthday. After all, they invited you over for some lousy meal. Who cares if her mother spent days planning the menu and hours cooking it all up in the kitchen â□□ that was her choice.

There's no reason for you bring over a bottle of wine or anything else. Your presence should be enough of a present for them all. Note: Bringing a bottle of wine usually works a treat and is more than enough of a gift.

8. Don't act like it's a big deal when meeting them

When your girlfriend opens the door and her mother runs out from the kitchen to gives you a warm welcome, keep your hands in your pocket and act all cool and unimpressed.

Just nod and say, "Hey," when she greets you. What are you supposed to do? Bow when you meet her or stand up and shake her father's hand when he enters the room. Come on, whose kidding who? They're her parents, not frickin' royalty or anything.

7. Ask for some booze

How rude can these people be? You've been standing there for about thirty seconds and they haven't offered you a drink yet. So tell them you'd like a brew or a shot. Better yet, have them bring you the whole bottle.

With hosts like these, who knows when you'll get another drink? It's much better to have them set the bottle right in front of you so you can pour a glass when you want.

6. Rush to sit at the head of the table

When it's time for dinner, rush to the head of the table and show them who's boss. When your girlfriend mentions that her father usually sits at the head of the table, point out the other empty chairs that he can sit in.

After all, you're the guest of honor and, as such, you should be shown the most respect.

5. Be a picky eater

When dinner is put on the table and it's filled with an array of gourmet selections, look at it and say, "What the hell is this? Didn't your daughter tell you I'm a meat and potatoes guy? Maybe you can go cook up a steak or something that I can actually eat. I can't eat this crap." They will appreciate your honesty and your simple tastes so they can plan future dinners.

4. Be controversial

Whatever conversation comes up, continually give your concerned or controversial views. You don't want them thinking you don't have an opinion! Better yet, give your opposing view to what they're saying just to show that you can be objective. You love it when people get all heated when you disagree with them.

There's nothing wrong with offering your own opinions – even if they are different – and having a lively, respectful debate, but playing an obnoxious devil's advocate is not cool. No-one likes being around people who disagree just to be annoying and draw a flustered response from the other people in the conversation.

3. Tell lies

When her parents ask you about your intentions with their daughter, or your future career plans – just lie. Lie until you can lie no more. Come off as more ambitious, more righteous and more honorable than you could ever dream of being on a daily basis.

After all, her parents are from a "dumber generation" so they won't see through your crafty lies. Let them think that you are much better than you are and enjoy all the credit and praise they lavish upon you.

Proactively start conversations to brag and talk yourself up. Go for it! People love being around someone who boasts and constantly tries to look better than they are.

2. Leave the table when you're finished eating

After dinner, even if no-one else is through with their meal, leave the table, head to the den, pour yourself another drink, unbutton your pants, put your feet up and turn on a game. You might as well; the women have to do the dishes anyway so you're just giving them room to do their job.

1. Arrive late or blow off the dinner completely

You're a busy man. You've got things to do and people to see. Who cares if you're an hour or two late? They won't start the meal without you. When you show up that's when you'll show up and they'll just have to deal with it. Her mother can microwave the meal when you get there to make it hot again. No big thing.

Or maybe you'll blow off the dinner altogether. Your friends called and want to go catch a game, which sounds like a lot more fun than a boring dinner with her parents. No need to call, just send her a text.

They're going to eat the food anyway, so they won't care that you didn't come.

You know, you're probably right. It would be better to skip this dinner after all.

Top 10 Ways to Lose a Woman

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

You went through all the trouble to find this woman and charmed her enough to get some bedroom action. Great! Yet, if you don't play your cards right as you travel down the road to a relationship, you may be headed for a dead end and fast.

Getting her was only part of the journey. If you mess up by showing the following behaviors or emotions too often, especially when you first start dating, your relationship is doomed to crash and burn.

Note: If you are actually trying to get rid of a woman at the moment, here are the Top 10 Ways to Lose a Woman fast!

10. Be predictable

It's very important that you're predictable, so she knows exactly what to expect from you. So, yes – go ahead and make that phone call precisely at 8pm every Tuesday to ask her out for the following Saturday. Make sure you explain to her in advance everything you'll be doing so there are no surprises.

9. Always be available

Whenever she wants you, drop whatever you're doing or miss the game you've been waiting all week to watch. If she calls, run to her.

Now, no-one is saying that you shouldn't help her in a true emergency – that's what good men do in relationships, but if you're becoming her Mr. Fix-it or her errand boy, you're going to go from sexy boyfriend to unattractive wuss in one easy step.

8. Be needy

Constantly ask for reassurance that she likes you, or that the restaurant or movie you chose is to her liking. Make sure she approves of what you're wearing, "How do I look in this? Is it okay, or should I put on that other shirt you like?"

Insist that she spells out exactly what she wants you to do with her in bed and then do exactly what she says. Of course, follow that up afterwards by asking if you did good. Be a good little boy for mommy.

7. Stay in constant contact

Call her, text her, e-mail her, Facebook her, tweet her or otherwise try to stay in touch with her at least 5 times a day. Continue this behavior and you'll find that she's going to make sure you get something in return – a visit from the police with an "Order of Protection" for stalking her.

6. Be incredibly interested in everything she does

Make sure that whenever you see her or talk to her be sure to ask lots and lots of questions. "What are you doing?" "Where are you going?" "Who are you going with?" "What time will you be home?" and so forth. It's important that you behave like her parole officer or her father. After all, you're not really interrogating her, you're only being attentive.

5. Follow her like a puppy

Be certain that wherever she's going or whatever she's doing, you're right there. Make sure she never goes shopping with just her friends. After all, she may need you to carry her bags, hold her purse or give a male opinion.

Insist that you tag along when she goes out with her friends, even if it's to go watch a chick flick or to get a manicure. She can't blame you if you really like her and love spending time with her, no matter what she's doing.

4. Tell her EVERYTHING about yourself

Be an open book. Convey your deepest, darkest secrets. Reveal all of your past triumphs, failures, hurts, wants, needs, desires and every past broken-hearted experience or childhood trauma you've ever had. Look for pity. Keep nothing secret. Maintain no mystery.

If this is to be a true bonding experience, it's essential that she knows everything there is to know about you as early in the relationship as possible.

3. Buy her love

From the beginning, shower her with spectacular presents the best you can buy. Take her on luxurious vacations. Only take her out on expensive dates. Offer to pay her bills. This is particularly effective when you're not in the financial position to do so.

Going into debt will show her that you are truly willing to make any sacrifice to buy her love.

2. Act jealous

Being jealous shows you care. If you didn't get upset when she spoke to another man who wasn't family, how would she know if your feelings for her were genuine? You should also insist that she has no conversations, other than what is absolutely necessary, with any male other than you. It's just not right. She's yours and only yours.

1. Declare your undying love and devotion as soon as possible

So what if you've only been dating a short time! You know you love her and it's important that she hears it from you the moment that you've realized you're in love. If she seems a little freaked out and backs up just a little when you tell her, or she only says, "Thank you," in response, don't take that as a sign that she doesn't feel the same way.

How could she not be in love with you? You've done so much to prove your devotion. So tell her again and again and in front of as many people as possible. Be sure to shout it out one last time as she runs out the nearest door.

Are You Dating Her or Her Mother?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Many women want to end up just like their mother.

They adore her, they love her and they want to have the same type of life that she has had.

I remember having a girlfriend who was raised by a single mom who had broken up with her husband after a few years of marriage. My girlfriend looked up to her mom, lived with her and spoke about her to me quite often.

A year into our relationship, I realized that she would be completely happy to end up as a single mother as well. So, one night when we'd had a few drinks and were beginning to feel a bit more than tipsy, I asked her...

"How long do you think we will last?"

Her reply?

"Oh...maybe 7 years?"

That was it.

That was the moment I knew I had to dump her. Why? She had been talking about starting a family with me. In the months prior to that conversation, she had begun to bring up marriage, babies and family.

Yet, she was looking at our relationship as though it had an end date.

So, I dumped her that night. She tried to get me back, but I couldn't bring myself to have sex with her again, let alone give her another chance. I said to her, "Look, it's over...you said that you wanted babies with me and then said you thought we'd last 7 years. We're finished. I'm not going to end up as a single dad. No frikken way..."

...and boy am I glad that I broke up with her. I would hate to have ended up getting her pregnant and then having to pay child support to a twisted woman for the rest of my life.

In her mind, she saw being a single mother and perfectly normal and acceptable. She wanted to be just like her mom.

Like Mother Like Daughter?

A woman's relationship with her mother is complex.

Some women seem exactly like their mother, whilst others seem like polar opposites.

For example: Your girlfriend is neat and clean, but her mother has a messy, unorganized house. Your lady can't operate the microwave, while her mother is a gourmet cook. Your girlfriend is addicted to shoes while her mother...oh, forget that, all women are addicted to shoes.

The reality is that mothers and daughters will share a number of similar traits, whether the daughter likes the comparison or not.

[image: My girlfriend's mom is hot]

Nice to Meet You

When you first meet your girlfriend's mother, if you extend your hand and she grabs you and gives you a big bear hug, it's likely that your girlfriend is a warm and affectionate person too.

So respond back to the hug. Don't be afraid to embrace the moment and show that you aren't afraid of family affection. If her mother is more formal and simply extends her hand, greet her in kind while also understanding that this can be an indicator of how your girlfriend is likely to interact with your friends and family in future.

Show Some Pre-Interest in Her Parents

If you've been invited for dinner and are going to be spending several hours with your girlfriend's parents, try to get to know a few things about them beforehand.

Ask your girlfriend what her parents are like as people, what they do for a living, their hobbies, some of their favorite things to do and some of the things they really hate. This will help you to make small talk and give you a hint of what subjects to bring up and what subjects to avoid.

Although you should always be your completely real self and never put on an act around anyone (especially your girlfriend's family), you should also try to be respectful and show that you're interested in starting the relationship off on the right note.

The more real you can be around her parents, the more real they will be around you. Then, you will be able to get a more accurate prediction of how they will behave months or years after you've known them.

What Does Her Mother Look Like?

If your girlfriend's features closely resemble her mother's, it's a good bet that as she ages, she's going to look more like her mother.

Look around for family photos. If her mother was a slim stunner when she was younger, but has put on more than a couple of pounds over the years and is really showing her age, yes, your girlfriend can easily develop those same physical traits without much effort.

This is definitely something to take into account so you don't regret your choice of woman in the future.

Lovers or Enemies?

When interacting with your girlfriend's father – is her mother warm, loving and affectionate or does she snipe at him and bark orders? This will give you a view into your potential relationship with the daughter. It's sort of a "monkey see, monkey do" situation.

If your girlfriend learned that she can treat her man poorly once she has a ring on her finger, then it's more likely that once you're engaged or married, she will eventually start treating you in a similar way.

Of course, if you start seeing any indications of that earlier in your relationship, then you should put the brakes on that behavior immediately by letting her know that you won't tolerate that type of treatment.

Alternatively, you can choose to make a speedy exit from the relationship and find a warmer, more caring woman to enjoy a loving relationship with.

Make Room for Mother?

[image: Like mother like daughter]

Does your girlfriend still live at home with her parents, or with her single mother? If so, why?

Is it because she's helping to financially support her mother? Perhaps it's because they are best friends and need each other for emotional support. Whatever the case, if you plan a future with your girlfriend, you need to determine if she has any plans to ask you to allow her mother to move in with you at some stage.

Some men, especially those who are particularly close to or who are financially supporting their own mother, might understand this relationship and not mind having her mom in the next bedroom. If you're not one of those men, you have a decision to make. Get out now or deal with the consequences later on.

3 Tips on How to Make Your Ex Regret Leaving You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

How can you get your ex to regret leaving you to the point where she's thinking, "Damn it, why did I break up with him? I want him back" and then she opens back up and you interact with her, meet up and get her back?

Well, there's a quick way to go about it and there's a slow way.

Some guys are going to be open to doing the slow way because they're not in a hurry to get their ex woman back, but most guys are going to want to do it the quick way so that they can get a chance with her and start the relationship again.

The slow way to go about it is to focus on building up your career and becoming more successful over the next 6 months to 3 years of your life.

It also includes going to the gym and building up muscle.

It takes many months to build up some muscle to the point where it's actually pretty noticeable.

Yet, here's the thing...

Even if a guy does build up his muscles and build up his career, there's no guarantee that his ex woman is actually going to care about that.

If she broke up with him because he was an insecure guy and he was too emotionally sensitive and that turned her off, then she's not really going to be caring much at all if he's put on some muscle.

He's built himself up superficially, but on the inside he's still going to be that insecure, emotionally sensitive guy that she dumped.

As a result, she's not going to regret losing him.

She's not going to regret her decision to break up with him.

She might think to herself, "Oh, he looks a lot better these days," but she's also going to be thinking, "Yeah, but he's probably still the same insecure guy on the inside."

Of course, sometimes a guy does get his ex back by approaching it in a slower way.

He spends years building up his career and building some muscle and when he eventually meets up with his ex again or she finds out about him, she does regret leaving him and he can then get her back.

So, if a guy wants to approach you in that way because he's not in a hurry to get his ex woman back, he can go ahead and do that.

He can build himself up over time, build up his career, build up his muscles (if that's important to him) and he also might focus on the more important thing, which is to build up his confidence, his self-esteem and his emotional attractiveness.

For example, preparing himself for the point where he does interact with his ex where he is much more confident, charismatic, funny, emotionally masculine and able to make her feel feminine in his presence.

He makes her feel feminine and girly because he's so masculine in the way that he approaches conversations, the way that he talks, the way that he feels, the way that he thinks, the way that he behaves and the way that he acts.

So, a guy can approach it that way if he's not in a hurry.

The Quicker Way to Get Her to Regret Leaving You and Want You Back

Now, if you're one of the guys who are in a bit of a hurry and you want to get your ex back quickly, meaning within the next few days, within the next week or so, or a little bit more, then I recommend that you approach it using a much quicker method.

To introduce you to that method, I'm going to give you 3 tips.

Those are...

1. Level up in ways that she wasn't expecting you to [image: Level up in ways she wasn't expecting you to]

For example, a well-mannered nice guy suddenly becomes a very confident, ballsy guy.

He's still a good guy, but he isn't as polite and reserved as he was before.

He has lightened up a bit and it makes her smile, laugh and feel good to be interacting with him.

She doesn't feel so tense around him anymore.

She can now relax and be herself a lot more, rather than feel like she has to put on an act of being nicer, more polite, or more reserved than she actually is or wants to be.

Now, with this first tip, the reason why it's part of the quicker method is that you quickly level up in ways that she wasn't expecting you to and then you interact with her.

You don't level up in ways that she wasn't expecting you to and then remain cutting off contact with her and hope that she somehow finds out through the grapevine or someone tells her.

It's about leveling up in ways that she wasn't expecting you to and then interacting with her.

That's a man's approach to getting a woman back.

You take control of the situation.

You don't leave it all in her hands and just wait and hope that she comes back to you one day.

If you want her back, you interact with her, you make her feel attracted to you in ways that she wasn't expecting and she enjoys the new feelings that she's having around you.

Suddenly, you don't seem like the guy that she dumped.

You're so much more interesting and attractive to her now.

As a result, she begins to regret leaving you and wants you back.

Now, look...

Some guys can improve quickly like that on their own, whereas other guys do need help.

If you're the sort of guy who can get it done yourself, then go ahead and do that.

However, if you're the sort of guy who is struggling to level up and change in ways that are going to make her feel attracted, then keep reading...

2. Let her feel like she wants you back more than you want her back

[image: Let her feel like she wants you back more than you want her back]

So, this is where you interact with her and make her feel attracted to the new and improved you, but you don't push for a relationship.

You're just interacting with her, making her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you and letting that build up.

She is enjoying the new and exciting feelings that she's experiencing around you now, but you're not pushing for a relationship.

You're fine with or without her.

You're not pushing and asking, "Can we have another chance?"

You're not trying to get her to decide whether or not she's going to give you another chance.

You are fine with or without her.

You don't say that to her because that would be rude and it would cause her guard to go up.

Instead, you give her the impression based on your body language and the way that you're behaving and your conversations style that you are fine without her, but you also do find her attractive, you enjoy spending time with her and you do love her and like her.

[image: Make her really want you back]

What happens when you do that, is that it builds up sexual tension between you and her.

Sexual tension occurs when a man and a woman feels sexually attracted to each other, but there's an obstacle in between them having sex.

For example, a man and a woman in an office environment are attracted to each other, but it's forbidden to hook up and have sex with coworkers.

So, there's this sexual tension that keeps building up between them.

They're both feeling sexually attracted to each other, but there's an obstacle in between the sex happening and that is the policies, the management rules on employees not being allowed to have sex with each other.

You can achieve the same effect with your ex girlfriend or ex wife by making her feel attracted to you again, but not pushing for a relationship.

She's feeling sexually attracted to you, she can see that you're feeling attracted to her, but you're not pushing for a relationship and you're not even pushing for sex.

It's just building up between you and her.

She wants it.

She finds herself looking at you and feeling so attracted to you and also noticing that she might actually want you more than you want her.

Now, at that point, most couples are going to have sex and that's fine.

You can go ahead and do that and you get her back.

However, if you really want to mess with her mind and push it really far, you can leave at that point.

For example: She's feeling very attracted to you, she's falling back in love with you and you then say that you've got to get out of there because you've got something to do (e.g. get to work, catch up with a friend that you promised you would help or talk to, run some errand that you have to attend to). She's going to be missing you like crazy at that point and she's going to regret leaving you. She's going to want you back.

3. Become truly, emotionally independent of her

[image: Become truly, emotionally independent of her]

Now, it's one thing to act like you're fine without her and it's another thing altogether to actually be fine without her.

Where guys go wrong when trying to get an ex woman back is that they are emotionally dependent on her.

They are emotionally dependent on her making a decision about whether or not she's going to get back with him.

Without her in his life, he feels lost, he feels depressed, he feels lonely, he feels like a bit of a loser, he's embarrassed to talk to his family and friends and coworkers because he's been dumped.

He needs to have her in his life to feel like he's good enough, to feel whole again and to feel good again.

Now, the problem with that is women don't actually want to be responsible for their man's emotional state.

Your woman doesn't want to feel responsible for your level of confidence and self-esteem.

What a woman really respects and feels attracted to in a man is when he is confident, happy and forward moving in life with or without her.

As I said earlier in the video, you don't want to actually say that to a woman though because it's a rude thing to say and it's also something that's going to make her guard go up.

If you do say it and she finds it to be rude, she might decide to seek revenge on you by saying, "Yeah? Well, you're fine without me. Okay, I'm fine without you, too. Let's not talk again."

Then she goes out with her girlfriends, hooks up with some guys and tries to make you feel hurt for saying that to her.

So, being fine with or without her isn't something that you ever have to say to a woman.

It's just something that comes across based on how you interact with her (i.e. you're not a needy guy, you're not pushing for a relationship. You're simply interacting with her, making her feel attracted to you and letting the tension build up).

So, if you want to make your ex regret leaving you, focus on leveling up in ways that she wasn't expecting you to, then interact with her, make her feel attracted, but don't push for a relationship.

When you do that, you're either going to get back with her right away or she's going to be regretting leaving you.

She's going to be thinking about you all the time, missing you and wanting you back.

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn my best techniques for making a woman want you back now.

When you follow the steps to the system, you will get another chance with her.

She will drop her guard, open up to you and give you another chance.

She Probably Isn't as Strong as She Makes Herself Out to Be

[image: She's probably not as strong as you think she is]

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is to remind you that most women aren't as strong as they make themselves out to be.

Many modern women go around acting as though they are really strong, emotionally independent women and nothing rattles them.

Yet, the fact is that most women do have a cry once a week or many times a week or maybe a few times a month for the really strong women.

That doesn't happen for men. Well, most men, anyway.

We men are so much stronger than women when it comes to our emotions.

Here are some statistics to put it into perspective for you.

- According to the National Institute of Mental Health in the U.S.A., women are reported to experience depression at twice the rate of men.
- According to the Anxiety and Depression Association of America, women are twice as likely to experience anxiety compared to men.
- 60% of the people who have OCD, Obsessive Compulsive Disorders and phobias are women.
- According to a study published in Evolutionary and Behavioral Sciences, women experience more emotional pain than men after a breakup.

So, your ex woman might be putting on a great act of being super strong without you, not caring, being totally indifferent, but in most cases, what I've found is that it's not true, especially if her ex guy interacts with her at some point and makes her feel a spark of attraction.

In most cases, all it takes is a spark of attraction and then she starts to change how she thinks, behaves and acts.

For example, she interacts with her ex guy and he's so much more confident now.

He talks to her and makes her laugh and smile and she enjoys interacting with him.

As a result, she's going to feel a spark of attraction for that.

As you may know, women find guys attractive when they are confident and can make them laugh.

So, she's going to feel a spark of attraction.

Compare that to a guy who interacts with her and he's just being neutral.

He's just saying, "Hey, how are you doing? How's things?" in a neutral way like a friend.

He's not actively creating a spark of sexual attraction inside of her by approaching conversations in that manner.

In cases like that, she's not really going to feel much or anything for him, so she's just going to move on without him.

However, when a guy quickly levels up in ways that she wasn't expecting and then interacts with her and makes her feel attracted, she automatically starts to feel drawn to him.

She automatically starts to change how she thinks and feels and as a result, her behavior changes.

She goes from not wanting to be with him at all to regretting the fact that they broke up.

She feels attracted to him in new and exciting ways now and she wants to get back together with him.

He can then hook up with her sexually and get the relationship back together.

So, it's up to you whether you use a long, slow, drawn out approach to hopefully get her back many months or years from now, or if you use a quick approach to get her back within the next few days or couple of weeks.

If you aren't in a hurry to get her back, then you can go ahead and take the slower approach.

If you are in a bit of a hurry to get her back, then I recommend using a much quicker method.

I recommend getting the job done, taking control of the situation, quickly leveling up as a man, interacting with her, making her feel attracted and getting her back.

How to Get Your Ex Girlfriend to Come Crawling Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

How can you get your ex to come crawling back to you?

She doesn't want to be with you at the moment.

She has walked away and she isn't trying to get back with you.

You want her back, but she doesn't seem like she's ever going to change your mind.

How can you get her to change her mind, change how she feels and come crawling back?

In this video, I'm going to talk about three things for you.

1. Where guys go wrong when trying to get their ex woman to come crawling back.
2. What can work.
3. The easiest and most effective way to get her to come crawling back to you.

1. Where guys go wrong

[image: Hoping that she comes back if he just cuts off contact]

The main area where guys go wrong when thinking about how they can get their ex woman to come crawling back, is to completely cut off contact with her for 30, 60 or even 90 days.

This is what a guy is hoping for...

She breaks up with him > He doesn't contact her for 30, 60 or 90 days = She comes crawling back.

Yet, in almost all ex back cases, this is what happens instead...

She breaks up with him > He doesn't contact her for 30, 60 or 90 days = She moves on without him.

Some guys can get their ex woman back simply by ignoring her for many weeks or months, but most guys don't get that result.

In most cases, the woman remembers exactly why she broke up with her ex guy.

So, she doesn't feel any motivation to want to go back to him.

She was turned off by him.

She broke up with him and if he doesn't do anything to re-attract her, she will simply move on without him.

An important thing to point out about cutting off contact is that it really does work differently for men and women.

For example, if a man broke up with a woman and she then cut off contact with him, he might eventually get to the point where he's not getting laid and he can't find a new woman.

He knows that his ex woman really wanted to be with him, she didn't want to go through with the breakup.

So, he thinks, "Oh, well, I might as well contact her and catch up with her. I'll hook up with her, enjoy myself and then I'll break up with her again."

A guy will often do that rather than going out there and having to go through the process of picking up new women.

He will just go back to a woman that he can have sex with quite easily because he knows she still wants him.

Therefore, cutting off contact works quite well for women who want to get a man back.

However, the same rule doesn't apply when a man wants to get a woman back.

When a woman breaks up with a guy, it's almost always because she is no longer attracted to him.

She doesn't want to have sex with him anymore.

She doesn't want to be in his arms, she doesn't want to be kissed by him.

The reason why she broke up with him was that there were certain things about his behavior and approach to her that turned her off and caused her to just want to get out of the relationship.

If she's not getting laid, as you would know, it's very easy for women to get out there and instantly get some action.

So, rather than going back to a guy that she's not attracted to, she simply moves on and she forgets all about her ex.

This is why most guys who cut off contact for 30, 60 or 90 days don't see their ex woman come crawling back to them.

She wasn't attracted to him, so she broke up with him.

In most cases, the woman then continues to remember exactly why she broke up with him and simply moves on without him rather than coming crawling back to a guy that she isn't even attracted to.

Of course, sometimes a woman is still interested in her ex, but isn't willing to contact him first or to push for a relationship.

Why?

She doesn't want to end up getting rejected by him and then feeling like she is the one who got dumped and left behind.

For example, she worries that if she reaches out to show interest in him and asks to catch up, he might then say no and say that he doesn't want anything to do with her.

He's happy and he has moved on without her.

She will then feel rejected, feel brokenhearted and feel like she is the one who got left behind.

She doesn't want to put herself in that position emotionally.

So, rather than having the courage to lead the ex back process and potentially face rejection, she just stays quiet.

She thinks to herself, "Well, if he wants me, he'll come and get me. He will contact me. He'll arrange a meetup. We'll connect again, we'll hook up again and we'll get back together. If he doesn't do that, then, well, I'm just going to have to move on."

Okay, so that's where a lot of guys go wrong when it comes to hopefully getting their ex woman to come crawling back.

Now, let's look at what can work...

2. What can work (not recommended for most situations)

[image: Making your ex want you back by hooking up with a new woman]

Now, before I reveal what can work, I want to point out that this is not my number 1 method to get an ex woman back.

This is what can work, but this is what most guys don't want to do.

What can work?

Hooking up with other women to make her jealous.

That's a pretty obvious one to get a woman to come crawling back.

Most guys can put two and two together and work that out themselves.

If a guy has been broken up with by a woman, he can then go out and hook up with some other women and make her feel jealous.

Yet, here's the thing...

Most guys who want to get their woman back do not want to have to go out there and hook up with other women.

There's essentially three reasons for that.

1. The guy just wants his woman back. He doesn't want any other women.
2. His confidence has taken a bit of a hit since the breakup, or;
3. He's not really good at attracting and picking up new women.

So, with the first one, most guys are in a situation where they just want their ex woman back.

For example, a guy knows how much he has been through with his woman and how much they have grown together, how great it was to be intimate with each other and he just doesn't want to go and do that with another woman now.

He wants to continue doing it with his ex woman.

So, this is why the option of going out and hooking up with new women to make an ex jealous can work, but it's not usually at the top of the list of the favorite things to do for a guy who wants to get his ex woman back.

Okay, so the second reason was that his confidence has taken a bit of a hit since the breakup.

When a guy gets dumped by his woman, it's often a little bit embarrassing for him to have to face up to friends, family, and co-workers and have to admit that it's over between him and his woman.

He looks around at everyone else, his friends, his family, his co-workers and they're enjoying their relationships.

They seem happy.

They don't seem to be having any problems and here he is, he's dumped.

He's on his own now.

He's no longer in a relationship.

He's the single guy.

Depending on what his woman said to him during the breakup, he may have also taken a bit of a hit to his confidence because of that.

She might have pointed out a number of things that really turned her off and he might then start thinking that it's going to be really difficult for him to attract and pick up new women.

The third possible reason is where a guy really isn't that good at attracting and picking up women in the first place.

So, this is where a guy got lucky when picking up his woman and fumbled his way into a relationship with her.

He knows that it's going to be very difficult for him to find another quality woman like her.

As a result, he doesn't want to get out there and start dating again and hopefully find a woman who is as great as her. He just wants her back.

So, while hooking up with new women to make your ex jealous can work to make her come crawling back, it's usually not the most favorite thing for guys to do after they've been dumped by their woman.

Some guys can get out there and do it and they have no problem with it, but most guys don't want to use that option.

Additionally, while it can work to make an ex come crawling back, sometimes it can backfire.

For example, sometimes a guy will hook up with a new woman and his ex woman will then get jealous.

She will be feeling hurt by that and will go out and hook up with a new guy.

She might then really like the new guy and get into a relationship with him and not want to be with her ex anymore.

Alternatively, she might want to act like she's really happy with her new guy to make her ex guy feel a lot of pain, to get revenge on him.

So, it can backfire, but it also can work.

It can make a woman look at her ex man as now being more attractive to women and she then starts looking at him in a more positive light and thinking, "Well, if other women are finding him that attractive, maybe he's not so bad after all."

She then starts focusing on his positive qualities and comes crawling back or comes back to him and wants to give it another chance.

3. The easiest and most effective way to get her to come crawling back to you

[image: The easiest and most effective way to get your ex to come crawling back to you]

How does it work?

What you do is you give your ex 3 to 7 days of space.

Use that time to rapidly improve your ability to attract her, then interact with her and re-attract her.

Don't push for a relationship, though.

Instead, end the interaction and leave her wanting more.

That approach = She comes crawling back to you, or she simply comes back to you.

By the way...

There are many ways to re-attract your ex.

For example, you can do it via text, on a phone call, via social media or in person.

For the purpose of this video, I'll talk about an in-person interaction.

Say, for example, a guy caught up with his ex woman and he made her feel attracted to the new and improved version of him.

He started making her feel attracted to how confident he was now, to how he could get her laughing even though she was being a bit cold to him at the start of the meetup and how he could make her feel turned on by how masculine he was being and how feminine it made her feel in comparison.

When a woman's feelings have been reactivated in that way, she then starts to look at you in a completely different light.

She starts to think about you differently.

She starts to feel differently and she starts to make different decisions.

She starts feeling drawn to you and wanting to be in your arms, wanting to kiss you, wanting to have sex with you again, but she can also see that you're not chasing her, you're not pushing for a relationship and you're not desperately trying to get her back.

If a guy then ends the catch-up and they go their separate ways, what's going to be happening inside of her?

She is going to be missing him.

She's going to be feeling drawn to him.

She's going to be feeling as though there is still something between him and her.

If she doesn't get back with him or at least give him another chance, she may end up regretting him as the one that got away.

She'll begin to worry that if she gets into a relationship with a new guy and isn't happy, she's going to be missing her ex guy.

If her ex guy has moved on with a new woman and he's happy, she's going to be feeling like she has been left behind.

She has been rejected.

She is the one who is broken hearted and missing her ex.

So, rather than going through all that pain, she decides to contact her ex, catch up with him, give him another chance and enjoy what they now have, enjoy the new feelings that they are experiencing, enjoy the relationship and hope that it continues, hope that it doesn't end.

I hope that helps you understand that contacting your ex after the breakup doesn't make you desperate!

Instead, it puts you in control.

You're in control of the process because, rather than hoping that she comes back on her own for some random reason, you make her feel attracted to you and she wants to come back because she's feeling drawn to you again.

So many guys make the mistake of just cutting off contact and hoping that their woman comes back.

Instead, she moves on with a new guy and he is left behind.

Don't put yourself in that position.

If you want your ex woman to come crawling back, it's best to be a man about it and take control of the situation.

You can take control of the situation by actively making her feel attracted to you again when you interact with her.

Don't make the mistake of just cutting off contact and hoping that she might come back to you.

If she isn't attracted to you and she was turned off by you when she broke up with you, then she's almost certainly going to move on.

The easiest and most effective way to get a woman back after a breakup is to interact with her and make her feel attracted again.

When you make a woman feel attracted again, her guard comes down, she begins to enjoy herself around you and she opens back up to wanting to be in your arms again, kiss you and have sex with you.

When that happens, you and her naturally get back together.

It's not about you desperately trying to get her back.

Instead, it's about both of you having strong feelings for each other and feeling amazing as you get back together in an even better relationship than you had before.

Alternatively, rather than getting back with her right away, you can interact with her and make her feel very attracted to you again.

You can make her want you back.

You can then end the interaction and leave her wanting more.

She will then begin to worry that she's going to lose you and you're going to be the one that got away.

As a result, she'll come crawling back to you and you can then give her another chance with you.

Learn More?

[image: Get Your Ex Back Super System by Dan Bacon]

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something from it.

If you'd like to learn more, I recommend that you watch my program Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the program, you will learn my very best techniques for making a woman come back to you after a breakup.

When you use the techniques from the program, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She will fall in love with you again and want to be in a relationship with you now.

Which Approach Do You Think is Best For You?

One final point that I want to make for you in this video, is that it's really up to you what you do from here on.

If you want to just cut off contact and wait and hope that she may come back one day, then go ahead and do that.

If you feel like it will work for you and she won't be able to handle not being contacted by you, then great – cut off contact.

Alternatively, if you want to try to make her jealous by hooking up with new women, then go ahead and do that.

However, what I recommend is that you consider using an approach that is very easy and effective.

That is where you interact with your ex and you make her feel attracted to you again.

You give her a reason to want to be with you.

Her feelings have been reawakened.

She wants to be around you now.

She wants to be in your arms.

She wants to be kissed by you.

She wants to have sex with you.

If you do that and you're also giving her the impression that you're not desperately chasing her and trying to get a relationship back together ASAP, then she will naturally start to come crawling back to you.

She will naturally want you back for her own reasons.

5 “Get Your Ex Back” Myths That Can Stop You From Getting Your Ex Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

When trying to get your ex back, you have to be careful that you don't believe in some of the myths out there about what you have to do.

There are many different opinions on what you should do to get your ex woman back and that is fine. Everyone is entitled to their opinion.

However, if you believe in any of the following myths and you follow through on it, it will most likely stop you from getting your ex back...

Myth 1: Both you and her need 30 days to heal

While it is true that some people need exactly 30 days or exactly 60 days to heal, it just doesn't apply to most situations.

For example: Some guys don't need any time to heal after the breakup. They just want to get their woman back and are ready to do so now.

Likewise, sometimes a woman breaks up with a guy and she doesn't need to heal because she doesn't feel attracted to him anymore.

She's not interested in the relationship and she just wants to move on. She's fine.

In other cases, sometimes a guy just needs a few days to calm down, gather his thoughts and prepare to re-attract his ex.

Sometimes a guy needs a week to do that.

However, what you'll find is that a lot of people will say that you have to cut off contact and heal for 30 days.

Some people will even say you have to heal for 60 days.

Here's the thing though...

I've been helping guys to get women back for years now and sometimes I find that a guy hasn't healed in YEARS.

His woman broke up with him 3, 4, 5, even 10 years ago and he's still not over it.

Why?

Time is not the answer.

Being away from her for 30 days and trying to heal is not the answer.

Even if you do heal during 30 days and you feel better about yourself, you're over her, you don't really need her back, then it doesn't guarantee that you're going to get her back.

Why?

One thing...

Attraction.

It's all about attraction.

The main reason why your ex doesn't want to be with you at the moment is that she's not feeling attracted to you.

If you give her 30 days to heal and get over you, it's not necessarily going to make her feel attracted to you again.

It will in some cases. That is true.

For example: Some women will have time apart from their guy and they'll end up thinking, "Well, he wasn't that bad after all. Maybe I should give him another chance."

Yet, what I've found is that most guys don't get that result.

Most guys who go through with the myth of "You've got to give her 30 days to heal and yourself 30 days to heal" get nothing in the end.

So, while you do need to calm down your thoughts and regain control of your emotions to be able to get her back, you also need to be able to re-attract her.

When you interact with her again after giving her some space, you've got to be able to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

If you don't do that, then giving her time to heal will be a huge waste of time and will most likely result in her moving on.

Myth 2: Cutting off contact will get any woman back

[image: Cutting off contact does not get every kind of woman back in any situation]

It's true that cutting off contact with a woman after a breakup can get her back in some cases.

For example: If a woman is inexperienced with relationships and can't handle the pain of a breakup, then she will most likely contact her ex when he doesn't contact her.

Another example is where she is still in love with her ex guy and when he doesn't contact her, it hurts her so much.

She can't get over not being with him.

In those cases, it can work, but here's the thing...

I've been helping guys to get women back for many years now and I rarely come across a case where the woman is still in love with her guy and she can't deal with not being with him anymore.

Guys who are in that situation don't really need help to get their ex back!

The majority of guys who need help to get their ex back are in a situation where their woman doesn't want to be with him anymore.

She has lost respect for him, she doesn't feel attracted to him anymore and she's no longer in love with him.

She doesn't want to be in the relationship.

So, when he cuts off communication and just waits and hopes that she will come running back to him, it doesn't happen.

Additionally, when he's been cutting off communication for 30 days, he's been going through a living nightmare, a living hell.

He's been worrying the whole time, missing her, hasn't been able to eat or sleep properly.

Food that he usually enjoys just doesn't taste so good anymore.

He's not really interested in things that he used to be interested in.

He's just thinking about her and missing her.

Yet, he's not improving his chances of getting her back because she doesn't feel respect and attraction for him.

She's not in love with him.

So, the fact that he isn't contacting her doesn't mean much to her at all. She doesn't really care.

What I've found is that in cases like that, a guy needs to be active rather than inactive.

By active, I mean that the guy needs to actively improve his ability to re-attract his ex.

He needs to get prepared to interact with her on the phone and in person so he can properly re-attract her.

He can make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

He then needs to actively get her on a phone call and actively get her to meet up with him and actively attract her. He needs to do something about it.

By inactive, I mean that a guy just cuts off communication with his ex and hopes that she comes back because he's cutting off communication.

What I want you to know is that it's a myth that you can get pretty much any woman back by simply cutting off communication with her.

It is true that some women will come back if a guy cuts off communication, but those women are the minority.

Those women are the ones who are still in love with their ex, can't move on without him, they're inexperienced with relationships and can't find a suitable replacement guy.

Here's the thing...

Even if a woman is kind of missing her ex because he hasn't been contacting her, he runs the risk that she will then find a new guy more interesting and attractive and hook up with him.

If she was kind of hurting because he wasn't contacting her, a woman will usually try to fast-track their relationship.

She will hook up with a guy very quickly and focus on all of his good qualities so she can fall in love with him.

The new guy might not be perfect for her, but she's going to try to make herself feel better about the fact that her ex hasn't been contacting her.

Of course, that's if she actually cares at all.

A lot of women don't care about their ex guy after they've broken up with him because they don't feel respect, attraction and love for him anymore.

When she broke up with him, she was over it.

She didn't want to be with him anymore.

He wasn't able to make her respect him.

He wasn't able to make her feel attracted in the way that she wanted and she wasn't in love with him anymore.

So, when he stops communicating with her, he simply makes it easier for her to move on.

He doesn't interrupt the process of her getting over him by re-attracting her and getting her back.

What I always recommend is that a guy gives his woman 3 to 7 days of space.

During that time, he doesn't just sit around doing nothing!

He improves his ability to re-attract her.

He gets ready to re-attract her on the phone, to re-attract her in person.

Then when he does actually contact her on the phone and meet up with her in person, he re-attracts her, he makes her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

What I've found is that in ex back cases where the woman doesn't want anything to do with the guy anymore, that is the only thing that works.

Sometimes it does work to cut off communication when the woman is inexperienced, she can't move on, etc., but in most cases, it just doesn't work and the guy ends up missing out on his opportunity to get her back.

He could have got her back in so many of those cases, but by simply believing in that myth that cutting off communication gets any woman back, he misses out on getting her back.

Myth 3: You should refuse a friendship with your ex and say that you only want a romantic relationship

[image: Refusing to initially accept a friendship with an ex]

The thing is, it kind of sounds tough to say that you only want a relationship or nothing.

It's like, “Hey – I don't stand for that. If you don't want to be anything other than my girlfriend or my wife, then I can't have anything to do with you. I won't accept that. A friendship isn't good enough for me. You have to give me a relationship or nothing.”

It sounds tough.

It sounds cool.

It sounds like you're standing your ground, yet it doesn't actually work to get an ex woman back in almost all cases.

Why?

She doesn't feel respect, attraction and love for the guy.

She's over it.

She wants to break up with him.

Why is she going to commit to a full-on romantic, sexual, loving relationship when she's not even feeling respect, attraction and love for him?

A comparative example of that is like going up to a woman in a bar and saying, “Hey, look. If I’m going to talk to you, I need a guarantee that you actually want to have sex with me tonight. I don’t want to stay in here talking to you for 30 minutes or an hour and then I don’t end up banging you. Look. I find you attractive. I want to have sex with you, so just make it clear for me now that if I talk to you, you’re going to let me bang you.”

Of course, that approach doesn’t work.

It might sound cool, it might sound tough, it might sound like, “Yeah! That’s how we should talk to women!” but it’s not going to work unless the woman is really drunk or really unattractive.

Most women are going to be saying things like, “Get away from me,” because the attraction isn’t mutual yet.

You see, most men can feel instantly attracted to a woman’s physical appearance and want to have sex with her regardless of what she’s interested in, what she wants to talk about, what brand of clothes she’s wearing and all that sort of stuff.

The guy finds her attractive.

He wants to have sex with her.

Yet, for a woman to want to have sex with a guy, he needs to be able to make her feel attracted when he talks to her.

That way, it’s a fair value exchange.

She's feeling attracted, he's feeling attracted.
“Okay, now it's mutual. Let's get something going on.”

The same principle of there needing to be mutual attraction applies when you're getting an ex back.

In order for a woman to want to get back with her ex, he needs to make her have feelings for him again so the feelings are mutual.

If she says that she's willing to be friends with him and keep the lines of communication open and he goes and says,
“Well, no. I only want a romantic relationship with you. If you're not interested in a serious relationship, then I can't have anything to do with you. It's too difficult for me.”

If he does that, he's jumping the gun.

He's trying to get the result before he's even put in what is required to get the result, which is create mutual feelings.

He feels attracted to her, he feels in love with her, but he's got to make her feel the same way first.

So, that's another myth that you'll come across out there where people say that it's cool and tough to not accept a friendship with your ex initially.

Some people will have the opinion that you have to stand your ground and say that you only want a romantic relationship.

Yet, that just doesn't work because the feelings aren't mutual at that point.

It's like walking up to a woman in a bar and saying, "Hey. I'm only going to talk to you if you suck me off tonight. I'm only going to talk to you if you end up going home with me and I can bang you. Otherwise, I'm not going to waste my time.”

It sounds cool, it sounds tough, but that’s not what actually works.

What works is when you make a woman feel attracted to you.

You make her feel respect.

You make her feel love.

You create a situation where there are mutual feelings.

When there are mutual feelings, a woman wants more than just a friendship.

This is why the myth that you should never ever accept a friendship situation with your ex initially, causes so many guys to lose their ex woman.

He could have gotten her back, but he said no to an opportunity to re-attract her.

What I recommend that you do instead is that you accept the friendship, but you don’t act like a friend.

Think about it when you're picking up women, when you're on a date or even when you're in a relationship.

If you want the woman to want you sexually, you don't just act like a friend.

If you're meeting a woman for the first time and you don't make them feel sexually attracted to you and you just make them see you as a friend, then they're not interested in almost all cases.

If you're on a date with a girl and you're not flirting with her and creating a spark, she's just going to say, "I think we're better off as friends. Let's just leave it at that."

If you're in a relationship or a marriage and you treat your woman like a friend and you just act like a friend, then the sexual spark is going to die out.

Likewise, when you're getting your ex back, you have to focus on actively making her feel sexually attracted to you.

[image: Using a friendship with your ex to get her back]

How can you do that?

You've got to be able to interact with her.

You've got to be able to talk to her on the phone and meet up with her in person.

What better way to do that than to be friends?

[image: Using a friendship with your ex to get her back]

Of course, you're not going to be her friend if you're making her feel sexually attracted!

The relationship is going to get back together naturally (and very quickly, if not instantly) on the basis of attraction.

She is going to feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you and as a result, she simply won't be looking at you as a "just a friend."

Where guys go wrong is that they accept a friendship with their ex and then they act like a friend.

They are nice and neutral and sweet and supportive and they listen and they're patient and they're understanding and blah, blah, blah.

That doesn't make a woman feel turned on. Women do like it when a guy is a good guy and all that sort of stuff, but what is most important is that when you're interacting with her, you make her feel a sexual spark with you.

You make her feel a romantic spark with you.

You make her look at you as not being just a friend.

Myth 4: You should ignore breadcrumbs from your ex

Breadcrumbs from an ex are essentially any type of contact or interest shown, where she doesn't directly ask to have a relationship with you again (e.g. she texts you, "Hey, how are you?" or clicks like on one of your posts on social media).

This myth is tied up into the whole No Contact madness that you'll find out there online.

People will say, “If you go No Contact, it means no contact. If your ex contacts you and she says anything other than ‘I want to get you back’ just ignore her text. Ignore anything that she sends to you.”

Yet, here’s the thing...

Women don’t always say what they want directly.

Sometimes they just give you hints and subtle cues and they show a little bit of interest.

Sometimes a woman is afraid that you're going to reject her.

She's afraid that you've gotten over her and when she sends you a message and says that she wants to get back with you, you're going to say, "No. I'm not interested," and then she is going to be the one who is feeling her after the breakup.

She broke up with you, so she got away with feeling a lot of the pain that the person who gets dumped feels.

So, what women will often do when they want to get their ex back who isn't contacting them is that they'll send little messages here and there.

She might say, "I miss you." She might say "Happy birthday." She might say, "I left something at your house that I want to pick up."

She might ask you something random about whatever.

Yet, what you'll find out there online when people are discussing how to get their ex back on forums, is that they will say, "Just ignore anything that isn't an explicit request to get back with you. If she just wants to send you bread crumbs and mess with your head, then don't reply. Just give her some of her own medicine."

That's just not going to work in most cases, because most women aren't going to be very direct about wanting you back.

They're just going to give you hints and cues.

Additionally, what I've also found by looking at forums and I've read thousands of posts, by the way, is that women will often get on the forums and say, "I sent my ex a text and I want him back. And he didn't reply. What should I do now?"

Then I read another forum post by a guy saying, “I want my ex back so bad. I miss her, but I’m doing No Contact. She sent me a text about something random and I ignored it. Am I doing the right thing?”

Pretty much everyone on the forum who hasn't ever gotten an ex back will then chime in and say, “Yeah, yeah, just ignore her. If she’s not asking to get back with you, just ignore her.”

It's just silly.

If you want to get your ex woman back, you have to be more mature about it.

You have to be the more emotionally strong one.

You have to be the man.

You have to be willing to take the risk to go through the process with her, go through the ex back process.

Get her back.

Take the risk to be the one who can potentially get rejected.

However, you're not going to get rejected if you're focused on attraction.

If you're making her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, then she is going to start to want to get back into a relationship with you.

She's going to start feeling drawn to you.

She's going to start missing you and thinking, “Why are we not together? Why am I imagining kissing him all of a sudden? Why am I imagining being in his arms again? Why do I want to be back with him?”

So it's important to understand that there is a myth out there that you should ignore breadcrumbs or little teasers or feeler texts from your ex.

I say no to that.

I say be a man about it.

Take the opportunity and use it as a way to make her feel attracted to you again.

Joke around with her via text.

Get her on a phone call.

Get her to meet up with you and re-attract her the whole way.

Make her feel that renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

By the way...

An example of re-attracting your ex is to understand exactly where you were going wrong and where you turned her off.

In a lot of cases, this is going to be different to what your woman said to you when she broke up with you.

Sometimes a woman will say something like, “I just need space. I need time by myself. I don’t want to be in a relationship anymore. I don’t know if I’m in love with you anymore. I just don't feel the same way anymore. I can't be in a relationship at the moment" and so on.

She'll give you all sorts of random, vague reasons like that.

However, one of the real reasons that a woman will break up with a guy is that he's just not man enough for her emotionally.

He's too insecure or too emotionally sensitive.

He allows her to walk all over him or he thinks that letting her have most or all of the power is going to make her happy.

He's just not man enough for her.

Now, in most cases, a woman doesn't want to tell a guy that when she's breaking up with him.

Why?

Many reasons but, to name a few...

One, she doesn't want to feel like she's his teacher in life about how to be a man.

Two, she doesn't want to feel like the changes that he will make all of a sudden are fake. He might start acting like more of a man and go too far with it where he becomes domineering and very arrogant.

Number three, she's worried about how he might react if she says something like that to him.

Sometimes a guy will react by crying. Sometimes a guy will react by getting angry and maybe even violent.

Sometimes a guy will react by begging and pleading and bombarding her with texts and phone calls.

Sometimes a guy will be showing up at her front door demanding that she speaks to him and demanding that she gives him another chance to prove that he is more of a man now.

So, those are some of the reasons why women don't always tell the real reason why they're breaking up with a guy.

If you want to properly re-attract your ex, you have to understand exactly where you were going wrong and what really turned her off.

When you interact with her, you have to be able to display that in how you talk to her, how you react to her, how you behave and so on.

Myth 5: It's needy to want your ex back

A lot of people out there will say, “An ex is an ex for a reason. Just leave her. If she doesn't want to be with you, then screw that bitch. She's going to come back and it was meant to be, but if not, who cares? There's plenty women out there.

Why are you being so needy for? Just go get another woman."

You'll get that sort of opinion out there and it's okay.

People are allowed to have different opinions.

Yet, just put that person in your situation and see what they'll say then.

If a guy ruins his marriage or ruins his relationship with his girlfriend, he loves her, he really wants to be with her and he screws it up by making some mistakes, then she breaks up with him and he wants her back.

There's nothing wrong with that. The guy made some mistakes. He's a good guy. He wants to get his woman back. That is not needy.

If a guy mans up, improves, stops making the mistakes and re-attracts her, then he's become a better man.

[image: Giving her a better attraction experience]

He's also offering her a much better attraction and relationship experience now, so she wants the relationship just as much as he does.

She can truly respect him now.

She can truly feel attracted to him, whereas in the past, she only kind of felt attracted to him or she used to really feel attracted to him and then she stopped feeling attracted to him because he changed.

Likewise, the love can be so much better now because he's such a better man.

He's more of a complete man now that he has improved as a result of the lessons he's learned from the breakup, so the love can be so much better.

Yet, you won't necessarily get that kind of understanding from people out there when they hear that you're being dumped and you want your ex back.

Some people will say to you that it's needy, it's desperate, it's weak and all other types of negative things to get your ex back. Yet, as I said, put that same person in a situation where they lose the love of their life and see how they react.

It's totally normal and natural to love your ex woman and want her back. If you become a better man, a more complete man and you can offer her a better attraction and relationship experience,

then everyone wins.

You are a better man.

She gets a better man.

You and her get a better relationship experience, the love is more real, it's more meaningful, it feels better and so on.

Of course, that said, some guys do get needy and desperate when they're trying to get their ex woman back and that isn't a good thing.

That doesn't help them and it's not nice for the woman either.

So, when a guy is being desperate and needy and he's focusing on the fact that he really needs her back and his life is horrible without her and he can't live without her, then he's not doing what he needs to do to get her back.

He has to use the 3 to 7 days of space to quickly regain control of his emotions, calm down his thoughts and prepare to properly re-attract her.

If he's not doing that and he's just panicking and worrying and begging and pleading with her, texting her nonstop, asking for another chance, trying to convince her and so on, then it's not going to work.
She is going to feel annoyed by that.
So, the thing is, it's not needy to want your ex back if you go about it in the right way.

Going about it in the right way is where you calm down your thoughts, you regain control of your emotions and you prepare to attract her.

If you do that, then you are doing a good thing for yourself and you're going to be offering something to her that she is going to enjoy.

When you meet up with her, you are going to make her feel so much respect, attraction and love for you.

She's going to look at you in a positive light.

She's going to realize that you really have changed and she really does feel differently around you now.

Things feel good.

She can feel the love.

She feels like she should give you another chance because it feels right to her.

Okay, I hope you've enjoyed this video and learned something useful from it.

If you need more help to get your ex back, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

It's a step-by-step system so you will know exactly what to do each step of the way.

You will learn exactly what to say and do to make her feel attracted to you so she wants to be back in a relationship with you.

It's not just you wanting to be with her. She feels attracted to you. She feels respect for you. She feels love for you.

Trust Your Gut Instinct

One final point that I want to make for you in this video is to trust your gut instinct.

When you are thinking about whether or not you should just cut off communication with your ex and wait for her to come back, trust your gut instinct on that.

If you feel like she is going to miss you like crazy because you cut all contact with her and she's going to text you and call you and want you back, then cut off contact with her.

However, if you feel like she doesn't really care about you anymore, doesn't care about the relationship, she doesn't feel much respect for you, she doesn't feel much attraction for you and she's not in love with you, then you need to trust your gut instinct on that.

You need to imagine how it's going to play out...

You stop contacting her and you just wait and hope that she comes back yet she moves on.

She finds a new guy.

She finds him attractive and interesting.

She gets into a new relationship and she just doesn't care about the fact that you're not contacting her anymore.

Likewise, if you feel like you need a lot of time to heal, then trust your gut instinct on that, but just understand one thing...

Many guys don't get over their ex woman for YEARS, so waiting 30 days or waiting 60 days or waiting 90 days or any other type of number doesn't guarantee that you're going to heal and get over her and never want her back.

What I recommend is that rather than waiting for months or years to finally get over her, you calm down your thoughts, regain control of your emotions and prepare to re-attract her.

If you want to do that on your own, then you can go ahead and do that.

I have lots of free videos that you can watch about how to get your ex back.

I have also written loads of articles on my website about how you can get her back.

You can read and watch

everything that I've created on the topic.

Alternatively, if you want to fast-track your success,
I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back Super System

When you watch the 10 hours of video, I will take you through the process of calming down your thoughts, regaining control of your emotions and preparing to re-attract her.

Most guys who watch my program are ready to contact their ex right after watching the program.

Some guys do need a week and some guys need a week and a half or so.

f you want to fast-track your success, I recommend that you watch my program.

Alternatively, if you can't afford it or you want to take your time with it, I recommend that you watch as many of my free videos as you can and read as many of my articles on my website as you can because I always give out free tips.

I always focus on helping you understand what you need to do, boosting your confidence, giving you examples of how you can attract her and so on.

Finally, if you want to get your ex back, just understand that it's not a needy thing to do.

In fact, it's often a noble thing to do when a guy becomes a better man and gets his woman back and then has an even better relationship with her.

He becomes a man that she can respect, a man that she can feel truly attracted to and truly in love with.

This applies to boyfriend-girlfriend relationships and it also applies to marriages.

Sometimes a guy has his first girlfriend and he screws it up.

Sometimes a man is married and they had a great marriage before but he ruined his wife's feelings of respect, attraction and love for him. He then gets her back and they have a happy family again.

Likewise, with a boyfriend and girlfriend relationship, sometimes a guy is on his second or third relationship in life and he screws it up.

Yet, he then regrets it.

He knows that she is the one for him.

He wants to get her back.

He knows that the relationship can be better this time around.

There's nothing wrong
with you doing that.

There's nothing wrong
with you becoming a better man getting her back and enjoying an even better relationship than before.

You can do it so go and get her back.

The 5 Best Ways to Get Your Ex Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you're looking for advice now on how to get your woman back, you've no doubt tried a bunch of things already and it just hasn't worked.

You might have been able to get some initial results with her when she was breaking up with you, and you might have been able to get another chance with her, but you're most likely at the point now where nothing is working anymore.

She is not changing her mind.

She is not changing how she feels.

So, you're stuck.

To help you with that, I'm going to give you the 5 best ways to get a woman back, so you can choose the quickest approach for you to get her back.

What I've found by helping hundreds of phone coaching clients now is that every relationship is unique, every break up is unique and you can't just use the same techniques and tactics that you'll find out there online to get every or any woman back.

You've got to tailor your approach to get her back and then follow that through to the end.

So, the way I'm going to explain this all for you is to first point out the low success rate techniques that guys use, and then give the five high success rate methods that I give my phone coaching clients to get their woman back.

10 Low Success Rate Ex Back Tactics and Techniques

[image: Ex back low success rate tactics]

Low success rate ex back tactics and techniques include:

1. Begging and pleading.
2. Promising to change.
3. No contact.
4. Not giving her any space at all.
5. Crying to her.
6. Asking her to help you to change.
7. Pouring your heart out to her.
8. Being her new ATM (i.e. buying her lots of things or paying her way in life).
9. Trying to convince her to give you another chance via endless texts, emails and messages.
10. Getting her friends and family involved.

So why are they low success rate tactics and techniques to use to get a woman back?

1. Begging and pleading

[image: Begging and pleading - low success rate]

Begging and pleading is a low success rate tactic because a guy can usually get another chance with a woman by begging and pleading with her when she is initially breaking up with him, if she cares about him enough.

However, if she gives him another chance and he doesn't really change and the dynamic of the relationship is really just the same, she'll eventually break up with him again within a few days, a few weeks or a month or so.

Then, when he tries to beg and plead again, she will just say no and she won't want anything to do with him unless he can get her back using other methods.

2. Promising to change

When a woman is breaking up with a guy initially, she will sometimes accept his promises to change and that's why it's a low success rate tactic in ex back situations.

Some guys are able to get a woman to give them that extra chance, but when she sees that he hasn't changed and it's still the same thing, she will most likely just break up with him again, and then when he promises to change, she won't believe him.

3. No Contact

[image: No contact - low success rate]

No contact essentially means not contacting a woman for 30 to 60 days after a breakup.

In most cases that I've seen over the years, avoiding a woman for that long just doesn't work.

Of course, it does work in some cases where a woman really loves the guy and she can't deal with the pain of their breakup and the pain of not having him in her life, so when he stops contacting her, she feels that pain, she contacts him and wants to get back together with him.

However, with the majority of ex back situations that I've dealt with over the years, a guy is at the point where his woman doesn't have feelings for him anymore and she's had enough.

[image: No contact won't work on all women]

When he stops contacting her, she just uses that time to move on.

This is why the No Contact Rule is a low success rate tactic to use to get a woman back.

It can sometimes work with women who are inexperienced with relationships and don't really know what to do if their ex suddenly stops contacting them.

Yet, the majority of women will either contact their ex just to check that he's still missing her, and if he is, then she thinks something like, "He's using that no contact rule that people talk about online," and then loses more respect and attraction for him as a result of trying to use a tactic like that on her.

4. No giving her any space at all

In some ex back cases, (e.g. when a guy has been clingy and needy and controlling and jealous), it is a good idea to give the woman 3 to 7 days of space before contacting her.

Any longer than that though and it's just a waste of time because 3 to 7 days is usually more than enough time for a woman to calm down, feel like her ex isn't stalking her and harassing her and things, and then she becomes open to interacting with him, meeting up with him, etc.

However, despite the fact that a little bit of space can help to get a woman back, it is also possible to get a woman back by not giving her any space at all.

Some guys are able to do that by jumping all over the situation, being in her face, constantly going around to see her, constantly meeting up with her, and then they get her back and they get another chance.

Yet, it's not a high success rate technique because a lot of women get annoyed by that and they end up asking the guy to give them some space, and in most cases, the guy is not able to do that and he turns her off even more by being needy and clingy and desperate, and then she breaks up with him for real.

5. Crying to her

Not every guy makes this mistake, but some guys do.

About 30-40% of my clients have told me that they made the mistake of crying to their woman or breaking down and sobbing to her.

Sometimes, crying can make a woman give a guy another chance, because she feels sorry for him and she feels bad that she is making him feel that way.

However, it's a very low success rate technique because women don't feel respect and attraction when a guy can't control his emotions in a moment like that.

She doesn't want to see her man going to desperation mode and feel like he's got no control over a situation and start crying like a boy would cry to his mother.

Over the years, some of my female friends have shared their thoughts with me while going through a breakup, and some of the things that I've heard women say about a guy who cried to them during a breakup include, "I've lost all respect for him at that point. I was disappointed to see him in that way. I just can't look at him the same way anymore. I didn't think he would be like that."

Essentially what those women are saying is that they stopped looking at him as being their man. They stopped looking up to him.

Don't stress and don't worry if you have made any of the mistakes that I'm talking about so far. You can always recover from mistakes that you make with your girlfriend, fiancée, or wife.

These types of mistakes here where begging, pleading, trying to convince her, not contacting her, potentially crying, etc, are all recoverable. You can recover from it with a conversation where you get her to forgive you and to not see that as such a serious mistake.

6. Asking her to help you to change

This is a low success rate tactic because some women will be willing to help their guy change and improve, but the majority of women don't want to be in a position where they are a man's teacher in life about how to be a man.

A woman doesn't want to feel like she's in a mother-son, or big sister-little brother or teacher-student type of relationship.

She wants to feel like she is with a man that she can look up to, she is with a man who knows how to be a man without her instructions. She wants to have a ready-made man.

7. Pouring your heart out to her

In some cases, this can work because the woman might feel as though the man is really sincere, he really loves her, and there is no point getting rid of that love if it's so strong, and she then gives him another chance.

Yet, in a lot of the cases that I've seen where a guy has poured his heart out to a woman, it's been a situation where he is already being clingy and needy, or on the opposite end of the scale, he has taken her for granted and hasn't really cared about her, and now that she has broken up with him, he is pouring his heart out, telling her how much he loves her.

The problem with that approach is that when a guy is pouring his heart out, he is often coming across in a way where he seems desperate and lost without her.

The thing is, a woman does want a man to love her and want her and appreciate her, etc., but she doesn't want a guy to be pouring his heart out and giving her the impression that his whole life is destroyed and ruined without her in it.

She doesn't want to have that sort of control over her man.

8. Being her new ATM

Some of the guys that I've helped via phone coaching have told me all sorts of things that they've bought for their woman, and ways that they've started to support her since the breakup.

For example: A guy taking his girlfriend for granted, she dumps him, and then he goes and buys her a really expensive ring. She takes the ring and doesn't get back with him, and just keeps taking advantage of him and his generosity.

Other examples include paying for her expenses in certain areas of life, and also offering to buy her things to make her happy.

In some cases, that can get a woman back temporarily where she takes advantage of her guy and gets a bit of revenge on him, but in most cases, it just doesn't work, because you can't really buy a woman's love.

A woman has to be able to respect you and look up to you and feel attracted to you in the ways that are really important in a relationship, and then the other things like buying her something every now and again is seen as a very welcome bonus and nice part of being with you.

Yet, buying her things, giving her money or paying for her expenses in life isn't the way of getting a woman back.

9. Trying to convince her to give you another chance via endless texts, e-mails and messages

Pretty much every guy that I've helped has used this tactic.

Sometimes, it does get through to a woman, something that the guy says gets through to her and she then says, â□□Alright, I'll give you another chance,â□□ or â□□Alright, I'll meet up with you,â□□ or â□□Okay, you can come around or Iâ□□ll come around,â□□ etc., and he gets another chance with her.

However, the reason why it's a low success rate tactic to use to get a woman back properly is that it doesn't last.

A guy might get an initial chance back with this woman by bombarding her with loads of messages and trying to convince her, but if the dynamic of their relationship is still the same and he's still making the same communication mistakes in person, then she is most likely just going to breakup with him again.

10. Getting her friends and family involved

Sometimes, this tactic can get a woman back if the woman's parents or friends really like the guy, and they put in a good word for him and they tell her to give him another chance.

Yet, in most cases, it's one of those backfire techniques where when a guy does it, it makes the situation even worse.

People start saying bad things about him and start saying that she needs to distance herself from him because he is out of control.

The 5 Best Ways to Get Your Ex Back

[image: Ex back - high success rate]

Now that we've got the low success rate techniques out of the way, what I'm going to do now is give you the high success rate ways to get a woman back.

1. Get her to forgive you, get her respect back, make her feel attracted to you, and then get her to agree to a two-week trial where you're back together to see how it goes.
2. Get her to forgive you, get her to feel respect for you, get her to feel attracted to you then hook up one last time when you meet up, and then ask for a two-week trial.
3. Meet up with her, make her feel respect and attraction for you, and then hook up with her.
4. Meet up with her, make her feel respect and attraction for you, get her to agree to another catch up, then at the next catch up, make her feel more respect and attraction and hook up with her.
5. Get a new attractive girlfriend, make her feel jealousy and loss, meet up with her, have a discussion that results in mutual forgiveness of each other, make her feel respect and attraction for you, and hook up with her.

By the way..

Most guys don't have to use the approach of getting a new, attractive girlfriend because the other methods work fine.

I know that most guys who want to get their woman back aren't interested in dating other women right now. Thankfully, the other 4 approaches listed above work and what works even better is the 7-step solution that I provide in my program, Get Your Ex Back: Super System.

Get Your Ex Back: Super System is the very best approach that any guy can use to get his woman back. More than 100 of my phone coaching clients have successfully used the Get Your Ex Back: Super System approach to get their woman back and you can do it too.

What Are You Going to Do About Your Woman?

At this point, you've really got 3 options.

1. Do nothing

you might decide that you don't want her back or you're not prepared to do what it takes to get her back. You might then continue to live with the pain of not having her as your woman anymore and hope that you get over it at some point.

2. Take what you've learnt from this post and try to figure out what to say and do on your own

Some men are capable of getting a woman back on their own, but a lot of men really do need help at this point.

A guy will be feeling emotional, he will be feeling insecure, he might be panicking that he's going to lose her, or that she's going to fall deeply in love with another guy, and he really can't control the way that he is acting and talking to her and interacting with her, and he needs some guidance.

So, if you feel like you can figure it out on your own, then I recommend that you go ahead and do that, but if you do need some help, I recommend that you have to think about option number three.

3. Get her back by following the simple steps in my program, Get Your Ex Back: Super System

All you have to do is watch the 10 hours of video, and by the end of it, you'll be ready to contact her and get her to respect you again, get her to feel attracted to you again, and get her to open up to giving you another chance.

My system is designed to get a woman back no matter what the situation is (e.g. if it's a new relationship, if she lives overseas, if she lives with you, if you're married, if you're only together for one year, if you have children, if you don't have children, if she hates you, if she kind of likes you, if she is seeing someone else) because the same fundamental rules apply.

What you've got to do is the same as what other guys have got to do.

You've got to get her respect you again, you got to get her to feel attracted to you and you've got to establish a new relationship dynamic. So if you want me to help you get her back, I recommend that you watch my program, Get Your Ex Back: Super System

It also comes with two bonuses.

The first bonus is all the Facebook, Phone and Text Message Examples from the Get Your Ex Back: Super System program.

So, it's a quick reference guide.

Rather than you having to sift through the 10 hours of video and trying to find examples of what to text her and say to her on the phone, you've got all that in a quick reference PDF guide that you can open up on a phone, on a tablet, or on a computer.

The next bonus is Ultimate Make Up Sex and it's 2 hours and 47 minutes of video. I explain exactly how to give her the type of sex that will completely change her mind about the breakup.

My Mission is to Help You

Something, I want to point out here for you is that all I really care about is you getting results.

I really do understand the situation that you're in, because I went through it.

A long time ago, before the internet had people online helping each other out, I met a girl at a party and I got lucky with her, because I was a bit drunk, she was a bit drunk, and we started kissing and then we got into a relationship.

I became clingy and insecure, needy and jealous and she eventually went out with her sister and a friend one night, cheated on me, and then dumped me the next day over the phone.

To say that I was devastated is an understatement.

I was destroyed.

I was absolutely destroyed.

She was the love of my life, and everywhere I turned, people were just saying, â€œOh, don't worry about her. There are plenty of fish in the sea. You'll find another girl. If it wasn't meant to be, it wasn't meant to be. Give it time. Time heals all wounds,â€ all that sort of crap.

They were telling me that kind of thing nonstop, but I didn't want to hear it.

I wanted to get her back.

Back in that time though, there was no internet with people helping each other out. So, I was stuck.

What happened for me is that I went on after that for a couple of years or so, where I was lonely, and I couldn't get an attractive woman, somewhat unattractive women were interested in me, but I wasn't interested in that.

I wanted to get my ex back, or to get a new, hot, attractive woman, but I just didn't know how to attract women.

Eventually, I got to the point where I had enough of missing out on love and sex and relationships, so I decided to go out and approach women every weekend until I worked out how to actually attract women on purpose, how to have my choice with women.

Initially, approaching and meeting new women was a horrible experience. I got rejected constantly, because I didn't know what I was doing, but eventually, I worked out the secrets.

I went on to have sex with more than 250 women. I lived the Playboy lifestyle for about 10 years and really enjoyed that and then I found the girl of my dreams.

She was 20 when I met her, and I was 35, and weâ€re now married. I'm 38, she is 23, and we are very happy married. We're at the point now where weâ€re working on starting a family.

So, it didn't turn out so bad in the end for me after all. I ended up with a very beautiful wife and weâ€re very happy.

But if I had a time machine, I would definitely want to go back and give myself the advice that I have in my "Get Your Ex Back: Super System" program and say, â€œDan, guess what, you can get her back. Don't listen to all these other people saying that you can't get a woman back. Thereâ€s plenty of fish in the sea. If she walks away, and doesn't come back, then it's not meant to be, all that sort of crap is crap. You can get her back. Here is what you got to say, here is what you got to do, go on do it.â€

I then would have gotten her back.

But, I suppose, I wouldn't have been sitting here now ready to help you.

What I am going to teach you in Get Your Ex Back: Super System is proven to work. I created the ex back process by helping more than a hundred phone coaching clients to get their woman back.

I've helped guys from all over the world who were trying to get women back at a point where she was saying, â"¢No, get away from me. I don't want anything to do with you. I don't have feelings for you anymoreâ"¢ and he then got her back.

What you're going to learn in Get Your Ex Back: Super System turns the situation around and makes her want you back.

You really can make her feel differently about you, even if she currently doesn't want anything to do with you.

As you might have noticed throughout life, you can go from disliking someone when you first meet them to liking them.

You can go from disliking a person that you've known for a while and then they change the way that they interact with you and they talk to you in a different way, and then you start liking them, and you might even really like them.

That's how the psychology of human emotions work.

Human emotions are not set in stone. They're not unchangeable.

You can make her feel respect for you again. You can make her feel attracted to you again. You can bring down her guard, and when her guard is down, you can guide her back into a relationship.

Get Your Ex Back: Super System – Frequently Asked Questions

The other thing that I want to do for you in this video is answer a bunch of frequently asked questions that I get about Get Your Ex Back: Super System.

1. How quickly will I get the program?
2. Will it work for my situation?
3. What is she says that it's too late to get her back?
4. How fast can I get her back?
5. What if she's already seeing someone else?
6. What if she has blocked me on social media and won't answer my calls or texts?
7. What if she doesn't want to give me another chance?

1. How quickly will I get the program?

That's an easy one to answer. It's an instant download. You will also have lifetime access to come back in and watch it at any time in your customer account and you can download it on as many devices as you want — your phone, your tablet, your computer, etc.

2. Will it work for my situation?

Yes.

I understand that every situation is unique.

Your situation is not the same as other guys, but the fundamentals remain the same.

You need to get her to respect you, get her to feel attracted to you and establish a new, better relationship dynamic.

When you approach it in that way, it does work.

The woman does change the way that she feels. Her guard does come down, and you can guide her back into a relationship.

3. What if she says that's it's too late to get her back?

Don't worry.

Most woman say that when they go through a breakup. They say things like, â€œGet away from me. I don't have feelings for you anymore. It's too late. I don't want to be with you. I'm over it.â€œ

Yes, that's how she is feeling at the point of the breakup, but you can change the way that she feels. Other guys gotten a woman back even though she wasn't initially interested and so can you.

4. How fast can I get her back?

It depends.

Some guys are able to get their ex back immediately, some guys need a few days, some guys need a week or two, and sometimes it takes a bit more than a month or so.

It really depends on how strong the relationship was and how bad the breakup was.

For some guys, they finish watching the 10 hours of video and they then contact their ex and get back with her.

Some guys contact their ex, they arrange a time to meet up, they meet up with her, and then she's a little bit stubborn for a while, she doesn't want to meet up, she's still a bit 50-50, and then they're able to get her back the next week.

Some guys are blocked from everything (i.e. social media, phone, in person visits), and she doesn't want to talk to them, so they need to use techniques prior to being able to get her on the phone, to be able to get her to answer a text, get on the phone, and then meet up with him.

Sometimes, that process (of getting her to unblock and be willing to meet up) can take a couple of weeks depending on how bad the break up was and how turned off the woman is.

It really depends on your situation, but what I can guarantee for you is that my approach to getting a woman back is the fastest way to get her back because it's not about ignoring her.

I'm not telling you, â€œHey, go no contact and stop talking to her for 30 or 60 days.â€œ Instead, I'm saying, â€œGet this done now.â€œ

I'm saying watch the 10 hours of video, and at the end of the 10 hours of video, start getting her back right away. Start contacting her and start doing what you need to do to get the relationship back together.

5. What if she's already seeing someone else?

A lot of guys start off at this point, but they still get her back.

In my program, I explain exactly what to text her and what to say to her on the phone to get her to agree to meet up with you regardless of how close she is with this new guy and how protective this new guy is of her.

The way that I recommend that you explain the meet up to her is a non-threatening meet up. The new guy doesn't have anything to worry about and he has to accept it. She just has to go and catch up with you.

When you get her to catch up with you and interact with you in person, that is when the real magic happens.

That's when all of my attraction techniques and persuasion techniques start to come into play, and you're able to get her to forgive you, get her to feel respect for you, get her to feel attracted to you, and get her to bring her guard down and open back up to having feelings for you again.

6. What if she has blocked me on social media and won't answer my calls or texts?

This is actually pretty common, so don't think that you're the only one who is in that situation.

A lot of guys are at a point where their woman has either blocked them or is no longer responding.

All of the texts, social media messages, examples of what to say when you actually get her on the phone are all included in my program, and if she has completely blocked you and you've only got email, you can also send a message via email to get her to unblock you, answer a text, and get on the phone call with you.

7. What if she doesn't want to give me another chance?

In my program, I provide two plans of action.

The first plan is Plan A and the second plan is Plan B.

Plan A most guys are able to get their woman back by following that strategy. However, in extreme ex back situations, where the woman is very stubborn and she is continuing to say no matter how much respect and attraction you make her feel, you then need to go to Plan B.

Plan B makes her feel a whole range of painful and positive emotions as well as making her feel more respect and attraction for you, and you can then contact her again, meet up with her, and get her to give you another chance.

Hundreds of guys have already used my programs to get woman back and I've help countless guys via my phone coaching service, and you can do it too.

You are capable of making her feel differently. You are capable of getting her to bring her guard down.

All you have to do is watch the 10 hours of video, and then begin to follow the steps, and you'll see that things begin to change.

As soon as you use the techniques, she changes the way that she responds to you. She changes the way that she looks at you. She changes the way that she talks to you, and her guard starts to come down and you can then guide her back into a relationship with you.

So, if you are serious about getting her back, I don't recommend that you waste any more time ignoring her or trying to convince her to give you another chance.

I also don't recommend that you waste weeks and maybe months trying to figure this stuff out on your own when you learn it all in 10 hours of video training.

I offer a 30-day money back guarantee, and you're welcome to try my program.

All you've got to do is go through the training, start using the techniques, and you will see that she changes the way that she feels about you, responds to you, talks to you, and behaves around you.

Her guard will start to come down, and you can then guide her back into a relationship with you.

You Getting Her Back is What Matters the Most

I hope this post has been helpful for you, and I also hope that you take the next step and watch my program, so I can help you get her back as soon as possible.

By using the Get Your Ex Back Super System method, you're going to save time.

Rather than wasting weeks or months trying to figure it out by trial and error, and potentially turning her off even more, you'll be ready to contact her in an attractive way after watching the 10 hours of video.

The techniques and methods in my program changes how she feels and she then drops her guard and opens back up to being in a relationship with you.

[image: Ex back meet up]

When you do get back with her, the relationship is going to be better than, before because it's going to be a new dynamic without the old mistakes.

You're going to be making her feel respect attraction and love for you in ways that she hasn't experienced before. It doesn't matter how good your relationship was in the past, that has to be put aside for now.

What you need to do, if you want to get her back, is create a new relationship dynamic that feels attractive and interesting and exciting and enjoyable to her, and you can do that.

I'm ready to guide you through the process of doing it. I'm ready to give you all the examples of what to say and do to make it happen. It's now up to you to take the next step and watch my program.

Okay, so to close up here, I just want to say that, I hope this post has been helpful for you and I really do look forward to helping you get your ex back.

The Biggest Mistake to Avoid When Trying to Get Your Ex Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

A major mistake to avoid when you're trying to get your ex-girlfriend, fianc  , or wife back is to turn into an emotional wussy.

The more of an emotional wuss that a guy becomes, the more it annoys the woman because women are not attracted to the emotional weakness of men.

[image: Women are not attracted to emotional weakness]

Women are always attracted to the emotional strength of men. For example: Confidence, self-belief, high self-esteem, self-assurance, determination to succeed, etc.

So, if a guy is displaying emotional, wussy behavior where he's being insecure, emotionally sensitive, appears to be lost without her and is also afraid to joke around because he's worried that it might upset her, that is going to turn her off.

[image: Fix your emotional issues first, otherwise she will continue to feel turned off]

When going through a breakup, what a woman positively responds to is when a man is confident in himself and he doesn't stop being his real self. He doesn't lose confidence in his ability to make her feel attracted.

He also doesn't feel like it's no longer his place to joke around with her, and flirt with her, and make her feel attracted. It is his place because he is a confident, loving man and he can make her feel attracted, and he can also make other women feel attracted.

He might not want other women because he wants her, but if he wanted to have other women, he could because he's a confident, loving man who knows how to attract women.

Using Humor Rather Than Being an Emotional Wuss

[image: Use humor rather than being an emotional wuss]

One of the best ways to show your ex that you're not emotionally weak, is to have the balls to joke around in moments where you would usually just be polite, nice and essentially suck up to her.

For example: A guy is talking to his woman and she says, "I don't have feelings for you anymore." He can joke around with her at that point, and get her laughing and smiling, which is going to make her feel some attraction and respect for him.

So in response to her saying, "I don't know if I have feelings for you anymore." He can then smile and say in a joking manner, "Yeah, me too. I hate you now. You're my bitchy ex-girlfriend who broke my heart. Oh, I'm going to cry now."

She's most-likely going to laugh and smile in that moment.

Important: Saying that to her isn't the magic secret to getting an ex back; it's just something in that moment that's at least going to make her smile and maybe even make her laugh. It's also going to make her feel respect for the fact that the guy isn't losing confidence regardless of what she says.

He maintain his confidence in his ability to make her feel attracted.

He knows that by getting her laughing and smiling like that, in a moment where she's not really feeling sure about her feelings, is going to make her have some feelings for him.

[image: Show her your emotional strength at all times]

She's going to feel good around him, she's going to be laughing and smiling, which is going to mean that she has some feelings for him.

He knows that he can create that.

When you know that you can create attraction inside of a woman, you've got nothing to worry about. Whatever she says to you, you can use it as an opportunity to make her feel respect and attraction for you.

If you are sincere about wanting to get your ex back, you need to use every interaction, whether that's via text, on a phone call, or in person as an opportunity to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

When you approach it in that way, she will drop her guard, begin to have feelings for you again, and become open to meeting up and experiencing the new and improved version of you in person.

When you meet up and make her feel a lot of respect and attraction, she'll most likely be open to hooking up again and giving the relationship another chance.

Getting an ex back is easier when you focus on making her feel attracted to you, rather than wasting months ignoring her or wasting loads of energy on endless phone calls where you're trying to convince her to give you another chance.

In most cases, a woman is only going to give a guy another chance if he has the ability to make her have feelings for him again.

You can make her have feelings for you in many different ways. One of those ways is getting her laughing and smiling and another way is to show her that you've moved beyond the level that you were at when she broke up with you.

For example: If a guy got broken up with because he didn't have much purpose in life, he didn't have much ambition. He was just sitting around, or working in a crappy job, or wanting to spend most of his time with her and just clinging on to her.

What's going to make her have some feelings for him again (it's not going to be the ultimate solution to getting her back, but it's going to make her have some feelings for him again), is to see that he now has big goals in life and he's starting to make some progress towards that.

That is what really counts.

It's about making her have some feelings for you again, allowing her to smile and laugh when she's interacting with you, allowing her to look at you in a new, positive light and see that you have begun to move beyond the level that you were at when she broke up with you.

You don't have to become perfect though, you don't have to fix everything and become a super, amazing man to get an ex back.

It's actually a lot simpler than that.

Another example of getting her smiling, and maybe even laughing, is where she asks, "Is it still cool to contact you? Do you want to stay friends?" and then the guy can respond to that in a way that makes her laugh.

So with the example of her asking, “Is it still cool to contact you?” A guy can then say, “No way. Don’t ever contact me again, I never want to hear from you. Why would I want to hear from you? If you call me, I’m hanging up right away. I’m just, like, end phone call, every time.”

At that moment, she’s going to be able to smile, she’s going to be able to feel some respect for him that he is confident and he’s in control in that situation.

Compare that to a guy who responds to her question of, “Is it still cool to contact you?” with “Of course, contact me any time,” or even worse where he says, “No, don’t contact me again. I won’t be able to handle that. If you don’t want to be with me, then don’t contact me. I can’t deal with that, it’s going to be too painful,” and then she loses respect for him for being an emotional wuss.

With the other example of her asking, “Do you still want to be friends?” a guy can also use that as an opportunity to get her smiling and maybe even laughing.

She asks, “Do you still want to be friends?” A guy can say, “Yeah, we’ll be best friends. We’ll go shopping on Sundays, we’ll gossip on Mondays, and we’ll text like crazy during the week about all the TV shows that we’re watching. We’ll be best friends forever.”

In that moment, she’s going to be able to smile and she might even laugh. More importantly, she is going to be able to feel some respect for him and isn’t going to be looking down on him for being an emotional wuss like or lacking the confidence and balls to joke around with her.

On the other hand, if a woman asks that question, “Do you still want to be friends?” Her boyfriend, fiancÃ©, or husband says, “No, no, no, I don’t want to be friends. If you don’t want to be with me, then I don’t want to be interacting with you. It’d be too painful, etc.”

That’s not going to make her feel respect and attraction for him in that moment.

She’s going to feel as though he’s not emotionally strong, he can’t even deal with what’s going on and it’s going to make her lose even more respect and attraction for him.

Need More Help?

If you need more help to get her back and you don’t know what to say or do for your specific situation, I have an amazing program called Get Your Ex Back: Super System.

It’s 10 hours of video training and by the end of it, you will know exactly what to say and do to get her to give you another chance.

Is There a Chance to Get Back With My Ex Girlfriend?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes, because most relationships can get back together after a break up.

It all depends on how you approach it.

You will have the highest chance of getting her back, if you:

1. Fully prepare yourself to attract her in new ways, the next time you interact with her

[image: Fully prepare yourself to attract her in new ways, the next time you interact with her]

If a guy doesn't change his approach to attraction and then interacts with his ex, then she's not going to feel motivated to give him another chance because it seems like it would be the same kind of relationship experience as before.

For example: If he was insecure in the relationship and still seems insecure to her, then she will assume that nothing would really change.

She'd still end up feeling turned off by his insecurities and wanting to end the relationship once again.

As a result, she doesn't see any point in giving him another chance and then having to go through with another break up.

So, she ends up rejecting him when he tries.

This is why, you need to make sure that you are fully prepared and ready to attract your ex girlfriend in new, interesting and more appealing ways when you next interact with her.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that, include:

- Being a lot more confident and self-assured around her, rather than feeling insecure and unsure of yourself, or being kind of confident.
- Being an emotionally independent man who loves her and does want her back, but doesn't actually need her back to feel better about himself.
- Standing up to her or putting her back in her place in a loving, but assertive way, rather than letting her get away with bad behavior (e.g. insulting you, being unreasonable, lying about or exaggerating the reasons for the break up, throwing tantrums, completely blaming you for the break up, accusing you of being a bad boyfriend to her, making herself out to be an innocent victim, even though she contributed to the break up in many ways).
- Using humor to diffuse an angry, tense conversation about the relationship, rather than resorting to blaming her, trying to make her feel guilty or feel bad about herself. This is an example of standing up to her in a loving, but assertive way (i.e. you're not cowering under her pressure or feeling intimidated by her anger or annoyance. You have the balls to remain calm, confident and in control and use humor to lighten the mood, even though it seems risky to do so. You're not intimidated, but you're not being an asshole about it. You're doing it in a loving, but assertive way).

- Being an emotionally masculine guy that she can look up to, respect and depend on because you are in control of your emotions, rather than copying her way of being (e.g. becoming very emotional, always wanting to talk about your feelings with her, being too cute to the point where you end up acting more like a boy than a man, throwing a male tantrum, sulking, storming out of the room in a huff or because you're upset and can't control yourself).
- Being more assertive (in a loving, respectful manner) towards her, rather than acting like a nice guy to hopefully suck up to her. Women aren't attracted to nice guy who try to suck up to them. You always have to maintain your masculinity, while still being a good guy. If you stop being masculine and start being too soft, gentle, accommodating and nice, her attraction for you will switch off.
- Using ballsy humor or playfully challenging humor to make her smile, laugh and feel good in your presence, rather than being so serious about everything and making her feel tense or bored. For example: She asks you, â€œSo, have you missed me?â€ and you say in a confident, playful manner, â€œOnly as much as youâ€™ve missed meâ€ or, â€œMissed you? Hang on, whatâ€™s your name again? Who are you?â€ or, â€œIâ€™ve missed your cooking, but not youâ€ or, â€œI only miss you when Iâ€™m doing laundry. Can you do my laundry for me?â€
- Flirting with her to make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman, rather than treating her like a neutral friend and giving her the impression that you're not interested in her sexually and romantically anymore.

The more that you attract your ex girlfriend in new, interesting or appealing ways, the more she will feel as though it's in her best interests to give you another chance, or else she will end up regretting it later on.

However, if you try to get her back by giving her what she had with you in the past or behave like you did leading up to, during and after the break up, it's almost certainly not going to be enough for her.

So, she will keep trying to find herself a replacement man to help herself move on and discourage you from trying to get her back.

2. Don't immediately try to get her to commit to a relationship

[image: Don't immediately try to get her to commit to a relationship]

You might be totally ready to get back into a relationship with your ex right now, but she's probably not feeling the same way about you yet.

You can change how she feels, but until then, it's a one-sided relationship (i.e. you feel attracted to her and want her back, but she doesn't feel the same way).

The thing is, when a woman breaks up with a guy, she will have usually disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him in advance.

Weeks, months and sometimes even years in advance, a woman will begin preparing herself to break up with and move on from her man.

Then, when she eventually breaks up with him, she will usually be at a point (emotionally) where she feels completely disconnected from him and ready to begin moving on.

So, if her ex then tries to push her into getting back together, without first reactivating her feelings, rather than thinking, “Oh, wow – he sounds so sincere about changing and making me happy. Maybe I should give him another chance,” she will usually think something like, “How can he even think about us getting back into a relationship? Doesn’t he realize that my feelings for him are gone and that nothing about his actions and behavior has changed that so far? He wants me back now, but he hasn’t even changed yet. I have no guarantee that he will change and at this point, I just can’t be bothered waiting around to see if that will happen. I fell out of love with him a while back and it just feels like too little, too late for me now. I’m done.”

She then tells him that he doesn’t have a chance with her, she is over it and he should just move on.

That’s why, if you want another chance with your ex girlfriend, it’s very important that you don’t put any pressure on her to commit to being in a relationship with you.

The best approach is to interact with her and focus on having fun and feeling good as you talk to each other.

Make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you, rather than making her feel tense, stressed out or pressured to commit to getting back together.

The more relaxed she feels when talking to you over the phone or in person, the more open she will become to seeing you in a different light.

Then, rather than focusing on your past mistakes, she will begin to see the positive things about the new and improved you.

As a result, her guard will come down and she will begin to reconnect with her sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

At that point, she will feel as though you and her are boyfriend and girlfriend again, but haven’t officially gotten back together.

She then wants to get back with you and explore her new feelings for you, rather than risking you losing interest and moving on with another woman instead.

Another thing that will increase your chances of getting back with your ex girlfriend is

3. Don’t waste time ignoring her for many weeks or months

Sometimes a guy will the mistake of thinking that giving his ex girlfriend a lot of space, will eventually cause her to forgive his mistakes, miss him and want him back.

She will then contact him and he will get her back.

Sounds great, but it rarely works out that way.

Why?

In most ex back situations, the woman has lost too much respect, attraction and love for her ex to care that he’s not contacting her anymore.

In fact, she will usually feel relieved and happy that he (her ex who she is no longer attracted to and no longer wants to be with) is not trying to convince her to give him another chance.

She knows that he could probably convince her to give him another chance if he re-attracted her and seduced her, but if he doesn't try, then she is free to move on with other men.

So, what a woman will usually do, is use the time that her ex isn't contacting her, to move on.

This usually involves her going out with her single friends and meeting and hooking up with new guys, for drunken one night stands that she often doesn't even admit to her friends (i.e. she tells her friends that she shared a taxi or Uber with the guy, but she got out at her house and he went home. She never admits to future boyfriends, or her husband that she has has one night stands).

Alternatively, she gets on dating apps, lines up a bunch of dates with random, handsome men, hooks up with one or two of them and possibly gets into a new relationship and falls in love.

Then, by the time her ex eventually reaches out to her again, he is shocked and disappointed to find out that she has been happily moving on and enjoying single life, or has fallen in love with a new guy and is in a committed relationship with him now.

Her ex is then left feeling devastated and wondering what went wrong.

He thought that cutting off contact with an ex woman was a great trick to use, but it wasn't.

Why?

Unfortunately, what a guy like that often doesn't realize is that ignoring an ex who doesn't have feelings for you, is the absolute worst approach to getting her back.

The reality is that even if a woman does still care about her ex and is secretly hoping he will attempt to get her back, there is no guarantee that ignoring her for weeks (or a month or two) is going to get her back.

Instead, in most cases, the woman begins thinking things like, "Well, I guess he doesn't have feelings for me after all. If he did, he would have at least called me to check how I was doing, but he walked away and has never looked back. What a fool I've been for hoping that we could possibly work things out, while he's probably been moving on by having sex with other women. Well, enough is enough. I'm done with him. It's now my turn to move on!"

She then opens herself up to going out, meeting, having sex with and dating new men.

Then, when her ex finally gets in touch with her, she will likely say something along the lines of, "Why are you calling me now? We've been broken up for ages. I don't get it. Anyway, I'm seeing someone else now and I'm happy. So, please don't call me again. Bye."

So, what should you do instead?

If you want to give your ex girlfriend some space to let things calm down between you and her, that is totally fine.

However, giving her any more than 7 days of space is a waste of time.

Why?

Waiting longer than that can cause a woman to believe that you're no longer interested in her.

So, a woman will usually then double her efforts to fully get over you and move on.

This is why, you should give her a few days to a week of space if you want to.

During that time, you should fully prepare yourself to give her an upgraded attraction experience when you interact with her again, so she actually feels motivated to get back with you.

Then, call her on the phone, re-attract her and get her to want to catch up with you in person.

In person, fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

That's how real men get women back.

No games, just natural attraction and a confident, assertive, loving approach that works.

4. Level up as a man in ways that she wasn't expecting

For a woman to want to give an ex man another chance, she usually wants to see that he's leveled up as a man and is now able to offer her a new, exciting and different attraction experience than he did before.

For example: He can now stand up for himself when she is talking down to him, but do it in a way where he is being lighthearted and easygoing, while also being assertive.

As a result, he's still being a good guy, but is more ballsy or manly now, which she likes.

Alternatively, he's more confident and self-assured now, he is focused on his goals and ambitions and is starting to make progress, or he makes her feel like a desirable woman rather than a neutral friend, buddy or housemate.

If her ex can show her that he's not stuck at the same level as before, she will automatically start to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

She won't necessarily jump all over him and want him back immediately just for that, but it will make it easier for him to get her back because she'll see that things really would be different now.

On the other hand, if a woman notices that her ex's approach hasn't really changed or improved or has become unattractive in other ways (e.g. he's become too nice, he's trying to suck up with her, he seems desperate and lost without her), she will feel as though she'd probably be better off without him.

As a result, she will want to continue moving on from the break up.

By the way!

If you're unsure how to go about leveling up in ways that she will find attractive, here are some questions that will help you figure it out.

Ask yourself:

- Do I make her feel feminine in contrast to my masculine vibe and approach, or does she only really experience neutral, friendly feelings for me now, or worse, only feel negative, uncomfortable feelings?
- Am I always able to remain confident when she tries to test my confidence by being cold and distant, throwing a tantrum or pretending not to be interested in me anymore, or do I crumble and become insecure and unsure of myself under her pressure?
- Do I believe in myself and in my value to her no matter what, or do I feel as though she's out of my league and I was just very lucky to have her?
Am I emotionally independent (i.e. don't need her reassurance to make me feel confident, happy, or sure of myself), or am I clingy, needy and insecure?
- Do I make her feel as though she needs to put in effort to impress me and maintain my interest, or am I way too keen, nice and predictable, so she doesn't feel the need to impress me much, or at all?

- Am I able to break through her bad moods and get her to smile, laugh, open back up to me and feel like being close with me, or do her moods intimidate and confuse me?

By asking yourself the questions above, you may have begun to realize some of the ways that you had been turning off, as well how you can now re-attract her in ways that she isn't expecting.

When you re-attract her in ways that she isn't expecting, she suddenly feels drawn to you again and realizes that she isn't completely over you.

Additionally, she realizes that if she gave you another chance, it would be enjoyable for her too.

As a result, giving you another chance becomes something she warms up to.

However, if you remain stuck at the same level you were at before, not only won't she be interested in giving you another chance, but you will struggle to find or keep another quality woman like her.

When a guy experiences that, he often ends up feeling unworthy of quality women (even though is more than worthy) and eventually accepts a woman that he's not even very attracted.

Then, he spends his life feeling secretly miserable, missing his ex and wishing that he could get her, or another quality woman like her.

Yet, if he doesn't ever level up his ability to attract and keep a quality woman, he will almost certainly struggle in that area for life.

So, be sure to level up (and quickly) before you contact her in the next week or so.

Don't wait too long.

Make it happen asap and get her back.

5. Let her sense that if she got back with you now, it would be a completely new and enjoyable relationship dynamic

[image: Let her sense that if she got back with you now, it would be a completely new and enjoyable relationship dynamic]

Getting the dynamic in a relationship right, is the best ways to make a woman feel motivated to be loving, attentive and devoted to you for life.

It makes her feel as though she made the right decision to be your girl and that it would be next to impossible for her to find another man like you.

As a result, she doesn't want to leave you and works hard to maintain the relationship and be a good woman to you.

On the other hand, if you get the relationship dynamic wrong, a woman will be unhappy, fall out of love with you over time and begin heading towards leaving you.

Eventually, when is ready to do so, she will break up with you and leave.

So, if you want another chance with your ex girlfriend, it's essential that you understand how to let her sense that if she got back with you, it would now be a completely new and enjoyable relationship dynamic.

What are some examples of good vs. bad relationship dynamics?

- A good relationship dynamic is when you are the more emotionally dominant one, so she can relax into thinking, acting and behaving like a feminine woman around you.
- A bad relationship dynamic is when youâre submissive, timid, hesitant and essentially allow your woman to walk all over you with her confident, dominant personality, which ends up making her feel like the boss in the relationship, or like the âmanâ or the one who is wearing the pants.
- A good relationship dynamic is when you make your woman feel sexy and desirable.
- A bad relationship dynamic is when you treat a woman more like one of your buddies, or end up taking her for granted and making her feel like you arenât really impressed by her appearance or feminine appeal anymore.
- A good relationship dynamic is when you believe in yourself and in your value to a woman, which then causes you to think, act and behave in a confident, emotionally strong way.
- A bad relationship dynamic is when you feel as though you got very with her and sheâs out of your league, which can cause you to become needy, clingy, jealous and overly protective of her.

So, are you ready to interact with her today, make her feel attracted to the changes in you and then get her back?

Alternatively, do you need a little more help to prepare yourself, before you interact with her, re-attract and get her back?

4 Mistakes to Avoid if You Emotionally Abused Your Ex and Now Want Her Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your ex feels as though you abused her emotionally and is reluctant to give you another chance, it doesn't mean that you have no chance with her at all.

Even though emotional abuse isn't a good thing, the reality is that millions of couples break up and get back together over much worse things than emotional abuse.

So, don't count yourself out yet.

You still can get another chance with her and create new, happier, more loving and mature relationship that feels amazing for the both of you.

You can do that if you approach the ex back process correctly (i.e. in a way that makes her feel attracted and drawn to you and wanting to be with you again).

If you want to achieve that and get another chance with her, be sure to avoid making any of the following common following mistakes that other guys make when in a situation like yours:

1. Not getting clear on new and better ways of communicating with her, before reaching out to her again

[image: Not getting clear on new and better ways of communicating with her, before reaching out to her again]

Better ways of communicating with her doesn't mean going from being a bit of an asshole, to being a super nice, sweet, polite, caring guy.

That's just not going to work.

Guys who use the nice guy approach with women struggle with dating, when in relationship and when trying to get an ex back, because women simply don't find it attractive when a guy is being too nice, in order to suck up to her.

Additionally, being too nice often comes from a place of desperation (i.e. the guy is desperate to get laid or get a girlfriend, but has no idea how to make women want him. The guy notices that his girlfriend is losing interest and thinking of breaking up with him, so he becomes really nice to hopefully get her to take pity on him and not leave. The guy feels guilty for emotionally abusing his ex, has no idea how to re-attract her, so starts being really nice to hopefully get her to take pity on him and give him another chance).

So, if you want to get your ex back, you need to make sure that you are ready and willing to use a communication style with her that will actually re-attract her.

For example: If you didn't really listen to her opinions before and would put her down, start listening to her opinions and being open to them, but don't just agree with everything she is saying to hopefully get her to take pity on you.

She won't.

Instead, she will feel as though she's got too much power over you now (due to your desperation to get her back) and as a result, she will feel turned off by you.

So, listen to her opinions, be open to them and take some of them on board, but also remember to make the interactions feel fun and cause her to feel attracted to you, by adding in some humor, playfully making fun of some of the things she is saying, playfully making fun of yourself and just generally making the situation feel a little lighter and more easygoing, rather than so serious, angry and confrontational.

So, if she angrily said, â€œYou always pointed out my faults and never complimented meâ€ you can say (in a joking way), â€œThatâ€™s because there is nothing to compliment.â€

You can then smile, laugh and say, â€œJust kidding. I was an asshole for not complimenting you, when there were so many things about you that I could have complimented and that I could compliment you on now. I never told you that I thought you looked beautiful in the morning when you would wake up. You always looked cute in the mornings, but I never said it. I also never told you how much I appreciated your support of me; just the way you are as a woman. You had my back, but I didnâ€™t have yours because I was being an asshole.â€

When a woman hears you say something like that with sincerity, she can then realize that you really do get where you were going wrong with her and more importantly, that things might actually be different if you got back together.

Additionally, this is a more subtle point, but is also very important.

That is, many women are attracted to the idea of turning an asshole of guy (or a bad boy or player,) into a good, loving, committed man, who still maintains his confidence and masculinity (i.e. he doesnâ€™t turn into a sappy, nice guy).

Itâ€™s not something that women like to go around admitting openly, but many women do feel attracted to unpredictable, challenging, emotionally unavailable men who they can potentially tame and turn into a more loving, present man.

Likewise, many women struggle with understanding what they actually want from men because a woman will often meet a really nice guy, who is kind, committed and totally serious about her, but she wonâ€™t want to be with him, even though that is what she wants.

Whatâ€™s missing for her is the attraction, because guys like that are often too nice, accommodating, predictable and easy (i.e. she doesnâ€™t really have to do anything and the guy treats her like a princess and is totally committed to her. She can even treat him very badly, ignore him, disrespect him and use him and heâ€™ll still keep treating her like a princess. As a result, she feels as though he is desperate, or has no backbone).

Itâ€™s a difficult thing for a lot of people to understand, but the answer is simple.

Itâ€™s about attraction.

If a woman feels attracted to a guy (e.g. because heâ€™s confident, a challenge, a good man, charming, charismatic, funny), but heâ€™s also a bit emotionally unavailable or emotionally abusive, she will usually be much more willing to try and make that relationship work, compared to a relationship with a guy who she isnâ€™t attracted to, but he is doing all the â€œniceâ€ things that come with a relationship.

A lot of women really struggle with that and end up getting in and out of relationships into their 30s and 40s as a result.

Yet, if one of those women were to find a good man who treated her well, but also knew how to make her feel attracted, then she would happily settle down with him.

The problem for women is that those men are so hard to find.

So, in terms of you and your ex: You most likely have a lot of qualities that she looks for in a man and she probably felt a lot of attraction for you in the relationship.

As a result, she is probably still feeling a certain level of attraction to you and wondering why she feels that way, even though you were emotionally abusive.

Itâs not that she wants the emotional abuse, but she wants the attraction she felt with you, as well as a relationship where she is treated well, loved, respected and appreciated.

If you can interact with her and let her sense that you are now that kind of man (donât tell her that, because it can easily appear to her that youâre trying to sell yourself to her out of desperation), she will struggle to get over you and will want to give you another chance.

So, hereâs the thingâ|

Your ex is likely expecting you to talk and behave in the same ways you did before the break up (e.g. not listen to her and insist that your opinion is the right one, take everything she says too seriously and then get annoyed or upset with her), or try to get her back with a nice guy approach (i.e. suck up to her).

If you approach her in those ways, itâs an almost 100% chance of failure.

So, donât do it.

Instead, surprise her and reawaken her feelings for you by communicating in a new and better way that matches where you and her are at right now.

When you do, you will see a complete change in her and her treatment of you.

Yet, if you use the same old approach, or turn into a nice guy, then sheâs going to keep moving on without you.

Another mistake to avoid isâ|

2. Seeking forgiveness in a way that seems selfish to her

[image: Seeking forgiveness in a way that seems selfish to her]

For example: A guy might apologize by telling his ex girlfriend how guilty he feels about the pain he caused her and how he hasnât been able to sleep or eat since she left him.

He will tell her that he has been suffering emotionally and may even be depressed now because of it.

He might also say that heâll never be able to forgive himself if she doesnât accept his apology.

From his point of view, heâs trying to emphasize how deeply sorry he is, but from her perspective, all sheâs basically hearing is, *âMe, me, me!*â

As a result, she naturally perceives him as being selfish and not having changed at all.

So, she continues to move on without him.

3. Hoping she will be impressed and want him back, if he says that heâs been going to a therapist, or psychologist to get help and fix his issues

[image: Hoping that it will impresses her if he says that he's been going to a therapist, or psychologist to get help and fix his issues]

Women don't like it when an ex guy goes to therapy, or sees a psychologist and then tells her all about it to hopefully get her to praise him for becoming a better man, or to feel pity for him and give him another chance.

It can not only make the woman feel like the guy is a mess and she should steer of him, but it can also make her feel as though he's trying to manipulate her into giving him another chance by making her feel guilty (i.e. how could she dump a guy who has huge issues stemming from his childhood, or previous relationships? How could she just leave him like that? Does she have no heart?).

So, what should you do instead?

What a woman wants to see from her ex after a break up (if she is still interested in him), is that he levels up as a man and then lets her experience that, without having to tell her all about the journey he has been on (i.e. going to therapy sessions, seeing a psychologist for hours and crying his eyes out about his childhood or previous relationships).

A woman doesn't want to feel like she has to say, â Oh, there, there. You poor thing like a mother, or big sister.

She wants a man that she can look up to, respect and feel proud to be with, not a guy who is a mess and needs her to take pity on him.

So, if you have to fix, adjust, change or improve certain things about yourself, then by all means, do it.

Just don't tell her all about it.

Instead, let her experience the new and improved you, feel attracted to you because of it and then naturally want to give you another chance as a result.

If she doesn't open up to giving you another chance right away, it will be on her mind all the time because she has felt a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

As a result, she will begin missing you, worrying about you moving on without her and fearing that she may regret not giving you a chance while she still can.

4. Writing her a letter to explain everything he has learned, what he's sorry for and how much she means to him

[image: Writing her a letter to explain everything he has learned, what he's sorry for and how much she means to him]

Sometimes a guy will do that because he hopes that if he puts himself down enough times in the letter, his ex will feel like she has finally gotten through to him and he is now worthy of another chance.

Yet, a letter leaves way too much room for misinterpretation because she can't hear the sincerity in his voice, sense his vibe or assess his body language.

As a result, rather than giving him the benefit of the doubt (i.e. totally believing that he is coming from a sincere place, is confident, has truly changed), she may assume that his letter is another way for him to attempt to manipulate her and abuse her emotionally (i.e. by making her feel sorry for him enough to give him another chance. Then, she finds out that heâ€¢s still the same as before. Yet, before she has a chance to dump him, he dumps her for revenge).

That is why, you should try to achieve everything via texts, emails or messages with your ex.

If you want your ex to forgive you and want to give you and the relationship another chance, the best approach is to interact with her over the phone (audio or video call) and preferably in person.

When you talk to her over the phone or in person, you should give her a brief, sincere apology and then just focus on reawakening her feelings of attraction for you.

My Ex Said That I Was Emotionally Abusive

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 7 common reasons why a woman will say that to her ex man.

Which one do you think most applies to you and your relationship with her?

1. She is trying to make him feel guilty, so he feels like the break up was all his fault

[image: She is trying to make him feel guilty, so he feels like the break up was all his fault]

Sometimes, a woman doesn't want to admit the fact that she was at least partly to blame for the relationship problems between her and her ex.

So, to avoid having to take responsibility for her actions (e.g. because she doesn't want to look bad in other people's eyes, she doesn't want to have to change and improve, she wants to get sympathy from people), she will accuse him of being emotionally abusive to her.

That way, she puts all the blame on him and makes him feel guilty for ruining their relationship, while she gets to be the suffering victim.

Of course, most guys are good, honest men and being accused of something like that can be very shocking and cause a guy to feel very guilty and regretful of his actions.

He can start to view himself as being a horrible boyfriend, when in fact, he simply got a little annoyed or angry at her at times, which she also did with him.

Maybe he went a little further with his annoyance or anger than her, or maybe he tried to control her or make her feel worse about herself than she did to him, but in almost all cases, he isn't a horrible, bad man that needs to feel deeply guilty.

Instead, he simply stuffed up because he didn't know how else to deal with the relationship problems.

Yet, he has learned from the experience now and knows that he would react differently, if he could only get another chance with her.

Unfortunately though, some women are very good at making their ex boyfriend feel like the worst man on Earth, so in many cases, he will feel guilty and see the break up as being all his fault.

She can then manipulate him and make him follow her wishes (e.g. tell him to leave her alone and never contact her again because she can't deal with talking to him due to all the emotional abuse and how hurt she still is from it, get him to do favors for her to help her out, force him to be extra nice to her and suck up to her), because he's feeling so much guilt for what he did to her.

Meanwhile, she doesn't have to feel any guilt for all of the angry outbursts she had, the insults she dealt him, the selfish behavior or anything else she did.

She is the victim and he is the one at fault.

Another reason why a woman will tell her ex that he was emotionally abusive is because

2. She is being overly-dramatic to make him feel as though he has no chance with her now

In some cases, a woman doesn't want her ex to try and get her back because she knows that if he does try, he will probably succeed.

She will give in, open up to him and give the relationship another chance, if he is able to successfully re-attract her.

So, to avoid giving him the chance, she will accuse him of being emotionally abusive to her, in the hope that he will feel so bad for what he supposedly did to her that he will stop chasing her and leave her alone.

She can then move on and start seeing new men, rather than being seduced back into a relationship with her ex.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize what is happening and end up believing the overly dramatic show that their ex girlfriend (or wife) is putting on when texting him, talking to him on the phone or in person.

She's acting like he was such a bad guy who has caused so much emotional damage, pain and hurt and trying to make him see that he has no chance with her now because of it.

Yet, the reality is that if her ex sticks around and uses interactions with her to reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for him (e.g. by using humor to diffuse awkward, negative interactions and make her smile, laugh and feel good to be interacting with him. Staying calm, composed and confident, rather than panicking and getting sucked into her fake drama that she is creating to make him feel insecure and unworthy of her), she will naturally begin to change her mind about not wanting to give him another chance.

Not because she simply changes her mind, but because he is making her feel attracted to him again. Attraction changes everything.

When a woman experiences new, exciting and interesting feelings of attraction for her ex, she realizes that she's not done with him yet.

She still has feelings for him and will want to explore them, rather than missing him for months and trying to get over him, or not giving him a chance and then regretting it when she sees him with a new woman.

So, for example, if she is being a drama queen about the whole thing and the guy has already apologized to her, he doesn't need to keep apologizing.

Instead, he can remain calm, confident and composed and then laugh at her in a loving way as he says, "You're such a drama queen. Oh, I was so emotionally abusive, wasn't I? I was the worst boyfriend in the world. Your poor thing."

Initially, she might act shocked that he's not reacting the way she's expecting him to and she may say, "How dare you make fun of my feelings that way! That just proves my point that you're emotionally abusive."

Yet, she will know that he is only joking and that he is being a good guy, because he has been treating her well and said something like the above in a loving, easy-going manner.

He didn't say it in a mean, aggressive manner.

He was smiling and remaining composed, in the face of the chaos that she was trying to create in the moment.

Women respect that and they feel attracted to it, even though they might not admit in the moment.

So, when a guy has the balls to say something like that in a confident, composed, loving manner, his ex woman will respect him and feel attracted to him for not getting dragged into her drama and losing control of his emotions as a result (e.g. getting angry, pleading with her, losing confidence).

Another reason a woman will say that is because

3. He was emotionally abusive and she realizes that now

[image: He was emotionally abusive and she realizes that now]

Sometimes, a woman will be so in love with a guy that she will accept whatever he throws at her (e.g. he patronizes her, criticizes the things she is interested in, makes hurtful jokes about her, withholds affection to punish her).

She might even make excuses for his bad treatment of her by saying, It's just how he is, or It's his way of talking. He doesn't mean any harm or, He will change. I know it.

Yet, if nothing ever changes, she will start to wonder if she is going to be happy with him in the long run or not.

Will he just dump her and leave her for another woman one day?

Will he get worse and start being physically abusive as well?

Will he lose more and more interest in her over time and expect her to just remain in the background of his life, while he focuses on things he loves and enjoys?

Will she ever be truly happy with him?

Likewise, if she notices how well the husbands and boyfriends of her girlfriends, coworkers and female family members treat them, she may feel envious of them without fully understanding why.

She knows that something about her relationship feels off but she can't explain it to herself, or she doesn't want to completely blame her man.

Then, when she eventually decides to go through with breaking up with him, the realization might dawn on her that he was emotionally abusing her (e.g. he never made her feel good enough, he controlled her, he manipulated her, he caused her a lot of unnecessary pain and stress).

At that point, she might then feel angry with herself for putting up with his bad treatment for as long as she did.

If he asks for another chance, or asks why she left him, she might even admit it to him, You were emotionally abusive. You made me feel like crap the whole time I was with you or, You made me feel guilty about everything. You tried to get me to focus only on you because you are so insecure. I couldn't even talk to anyone else without you going crazy, or making me feel like I was a disloyal, cheating bitch! or, You caused me so much stress and anxiety. I am no longer like that, so I know it was you and so on.

Another reason a woman will say that her ex was emotionally abusing her in the relationshipâ!

4. He took her for granted and expected her to put up with it

[image: He took her for granted and expected her to put up with it]

Most guys are good guys.

Yet, even though a guy is a good guy and has good intentions with a woman, he might fall into the trap of believing that the love between him and his woman will last for life because it was so good at the start.

A guy like that might become neglectful and careless with his affection (e.g. stop complimenting her for the efforts she makes to look attractive for him, focus on the negatives about her physical appearance, rather than complimenting her on the positives to make her feel beautiful and feel motivated to put in more effort to look beautiful) and participation in the relationship (e.g. stop helping out with the chores, or complain or become moody when he has to do something).

So, if a woman notices that sheâs always cleaning up after him, doing most of the housework and errands and generally putting in more effort than him in the relationship, she may begin to feel taken for granted and emotionally abused.

Likewise, if he also isnât really making her feel as beautiful as he used to when they first met, she will start to feel taken for granted.

Yes, her body might have changed a little since they met, but itâs still her and she still wants to be loved and made to feel beautiful.

If he wants her to put more effort into her physical appearance, it will come from her loving her and accepting her as she is, while also creating a relationship dynamic where she wants to impress him.

When a man does that, a woman will feel appreciated and loved, but will also want to maintain her physical appearance to continue impressing him and being attractive to him.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys donât realize that until itâs too late (e.g. theyâve been picking on the womanâs appearance for months or years and criticizing her).

A woman will usually put up with it for a while, but might also begin to complain to him about it in the hope that he will change.

If he fails to change, she will eventually begin to feel resentful and will start disconnecting from her feelings of love for him.

Soon after, she will decide to break up with him.

Then, she will try to find a replacement guy who makes her feel the way she wants to feel in a relationship (i.e. loved, appreciated, respected), if she doesnât line a new guy up prior to the break up, that is.

Many women will already have a new guy lined up, or will cheat to get out of the relationship and cause their ex emotional pain, in revenge for how he treated her.

Another reasonâ!

5. He used her insecurities and fears to control her, by making her feel like she needed him

[image: He used her insecurities or fears to control her, by making her feel like she needed him]

If a guy is insecure and secretly worried that his woman could do better than him, he might try to make her feel as though she needs him more than he needs her.

For example: A woman might want to start a university course for adults, so she can get a degree, which may then lead to her getting a better job.

Yet, she's worried that she's not smart enough to accomplish it, or might not have the follow through to complete it, or might not have enough time and so on.

If she mentions her fears to her boyfriend, rather than encourage her and support her, he might say, â€œDon't be ridiculous, you can't do that! I've never seen you follow through on anything for more than a couple of months. You'd give up, believe me. Besides, I'm here to take care of you anyway. As long as you've got me, you don't need to get a better job.â€

He can then feel a little bit safer (even though he's still worried), knowing she probably won't leave him for another while yet because she still needs him.

6. He didn't know how else to handle the relationship problems they were having

As a result, he would get angry at her and become emotionally abusive by:

- Yelling and screaming at her as a way of intimidating her and making her give in to him and accept his point of view.
- Calling her names (e.g. stupid, bitch, idiot).
- Using the word 'always' when pointing out what he perceives as her mistakes (e.g. â€œYou always make a big deal out of everything,â€ or â€œYou're always on my case about something,â€ or â€œYou're always stuffing up and then taking it out on meâ€). Generally speaking, that is how some women (not all) talk when they are being overly dramatic about things. It's not how a man should talk though. If a man is going to be respected and looked up to by his woman for life, he needs to maintain control of his emotions and be logical and rational. She has to be able to trust in him as her rock, rather than being something that crumbles under pressure.
- Blaming her for all their problems as a couple.
- Stomping out of the room in the middle of their argument, thereby keeping the problem unresolved. Then, being very moody when she tried to talk to him, or when he went to talk to her again.

Those sorts of behaviors naturally erode a woman's feelings of respect, attraction and love for guy and then, the idea of sticking around doesn't appeal to her anymore.

When she looks back on it, she might come to the conclusion that he was an emotionally abusive guy, without ever really giving him the benefit of the doubt (i.e. realizing that he just didn't know what else to do).

Another common reasonâ€¦!

7. He was too controlling

For example: Some of the ways that a guy will become too controlling of his girlfriend, includeâ€¦!

- He insists on knowing where she is at all times and demands that she responds to his calls or texts immediately, no matter where she is or what sheâ€™s doing (e.g. at work, driving, hanging out with a friend).
- He shows up unexpectedly to check if sheâ€™s where she said she would be (e.g. at her parentsâ€™ house, at a specific coffee shop with friends).
- He checks her internet history, emails, texts, and social media account and might even demand that she give him all her passwords.
- He insists they have a shared bank account and then makes her ask him for money or get permission to buy things, rather than trusting her to spend the money wisely, or respect their budget.
- He tries too hard to control how she talks or behaves when around him, to the point where she canâ€™t relax and be herself anymore.

What a guy like that often doesnâ€™t realize, is that even if he means well (i.e. he just wants the relationship to work), when he is being controlling, he is literally destroying his womanâ€™s feelings of trust, respect, attraction and love for him over time.

Then, without enough of those feelings present in the relationship, she simply stops feeling motivated to stick with him.

Deep down, she may still love him and wish things didnâ€™t turn out that way, but she wonâ€™t want to get back with him again, unless she can see that he truly gets it now.

He knows where he went wrong and is a completely different man now.

More importantly, she can feel that, sense that and see it when she interacts with him.

When she feels differently around him (in a good way), she realizes that what they had doesnâ€™t have to be over and could actually be a lot more enjoyable this time around.

Love Letter to My Ex Wife

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 essential tips for writing a love letter to your ex wife, which help cause her to second guess her decision to leave you:

1. Keep it brief and to the point

Women don't appreciate long-winded, emotional letters from men that they are not romantically in love with.

So, getting a letter from you going into detail about how much you love her and why you believe that you and her share a special connection and how you feel it would be a mistake to lose all that forever, is unlikely to impress her as much as you might be hoping for.

Instead, she will probably feel turned off by what she perceives as your neediness and emotional softness, especially at a time when she really needs to see that you're being manly and in control of yourself.

So, be sure not to get all soppy and emotional and hope that it will make a difference to her.

The best approach is to keep your letter brief and to the point, while still being interesting and fun to read.

In that way, you will make her feel curious about you and she will then open up to talking to you on the phone, or seeing you in person.

It then becomes a lot easier for you to reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you and get her back, compared to if you tried to achieve all of that in a love letter.

2. Use some humor to keep it light

[image: Use some humor to keep it light]

Humor is always an effective way to break down a woman's defenses and make her feel less closed off and defensive.

So, don't be afraid to use it in your letter to her.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should write jokes or anything like that.

Instead, while you're telling her how much you value what you and her shared together, you can then throw in a joke about something she used to do for you to make her reconnect with some positive memories from your marriage together.

For example: You might say, "I really miss your laugh," you can then use some humor by saying, "Especially when I burn dinner and you're not there to make fun of me anymore!" and if appropriate, add a smiley face or an "Lol" to let her know that you're just teasing her.

When you use humor and get your ex wife smiling and laughing, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to hold on to her negative feelings about you.

Instead, she starts to feel some respect and attraction for you again.

When that happens, it becomes a lot more difficult for her to remain closed off.

She then naturally becomes open to interacting with you over the phone and in person to see how she feels (i.e. does she feel attracted to you again or do you turn her off with your attitude, conversation and behavior).

So, don't be afraid to use humor to break the ice when you write a love letter to your ex wife.

Just make sure you don't overdo it and come across as being too silly and non-serious and end up turning her off instead.

3. Say sorry, but keep it brief and sincere

It's important to apologize for the one or two main things that you know really matter to her.

For example:

- If you allowed everyday stresses and bothers (e.g. running a home, taking care of expenses and bills, looking after your children) to come between you and her and cause you to become emotionally distant and preoccupied all the time, apologize for that. Let her know that you now understand how she felt left out and alone in the relationship because of how you closed yourself off in that way.
- If you took her for granted (e.g. by expecting her to do all the housework even though she also has a job, not pulling your weight with the children, not making time to do things together anymore as a couple, not appreciating the efforts she made to be attractive for you), then say you're sorry for that.
- If you put more value in the opinions of your boss, friends, or family and disregarded her feelings time and again over theirs, let her know that you now see how that made her feel disrespected and undervalued.

Don't go on and on about it though.

Just mention the problem briefly, add that you now understand how it made her feel when you did that thing and say you're sorry.

By calmly apologizing to your ex wife, while being confident and emotionally mature enough to admit your mistakes, you're showing her that you're no longer the same man she divorced.

You have learned your lesson and are taking positive steps to become a better man than before.

This is attractive to her.

It automatically re-sparks some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you and brings down her guard, thereby opening up the way for you to seduce her and get her back.

4. Leave her wanting more

By keeping the letter short, to the point and making her laugh, you're essentially giving your ex wife a taste of the new and improved you.

She then feels curious about the changes in you and she then becomes more open to talking over the phone and meeting up with you in person to experience them for herself.

So, make enough of an impression on her to motivate her to want to find out more about you, rather than revealing too much about yourself, your feelings and what you've been up to since the divorce so she feels like there's nothing left to say.

5 Love Letter Mistakes That Can Turn Your Ex Wife Off

[image: 5 Love Letter Mistakes That Can Turn Your Ex Wife Off]

1. Going into a lot of detail about your relationship problems

A guy might do that in a love letter to his ex wife, because he wants to show her that he's serious about her and wants to fix things so they can get their marriage back together again.

Yet, what he doesn't understand is that as his ex tries to read through the pages and pages of problems, the opposite of what he's hoping for happens.

She quickly realizes how troubled their marriage was and may begin to believe that it would be impossible to repair.

She then starts to close herself off from him even more.

Here's the thing!

When you send a love letter to your ex wife, you have to focus on making her feel attracted and happy to be hearing from again, rather than stressing her out by focusing on all the problems you experienced as a couple.

Of course, there's nothing wrong with apologizing for a mistake or two, but you shouldn't dwell on the problems and turn it into something that pushes you and her further apart.

Instead, make sure that the main focus of your letter is to make her smile, feel good and open her up to wanting to talk to you over the phone and see you in person again.

2. Constantly putting yourself down in the letter to hopefully gain her pity

In most cases, a woman can see right through a guy's secret intentions (i.e. he's putting himself down to make her feel obligated to forgive him and give him another chance out of pity).

Yet, women don't want to be with a guy out of pity.

As a result, she will lose even more respect for him for trying to manipulate her in that way.

She will then likely decide that she's better off discouraging him by being cold, distant or even ignoring him, rather than give him false hope that there's a chance of them getting back together again.

Here's the thing!

Putting yourself down a little can work, especially if you were taking her for granted, but she will already pick up on the fact that you're sorry based on the one or two main things you apologized for.

However, from there, you need to leave her wanting to know more.

You can then apologize further in person, where it really matters.

3. Hinting at or directly asking her to reconsider her decision for the sake of the children

Even if getting back together will be the best thing for you as a family, the fact is that a modern woman doesn't want to be forced into a relationship with a man out of a sense of duty.

This takes the romance out of the marriage and turns it into an obligation.

That only creates a relationship dynamic where he's happy to have her back and she feels resentful, trapped and like she's missing out on being happy and in love with someone else.

Remember: A woman wants to be with a man because she loves him and because he's someone she can look up to, rely on and respect.

So, if you want your ex wife back, you need to make her want it too based on how you make her feel when she's with you, not blackmail her into it out of feelings of guilt.

Remember: Even if your ex wife decides to give you another chance for the sake of your children, if nothing about you has really changed or improved, she will leave again and this time it will likely be permanent.

So, don't waste your chance to get her back.

4. Telling her that you want her to be happy, when you really don't Lying about the fact that all you want is for her to be happy now, even if that means her moving on and finding a new man to be with, is not a good idea.

Remember, your ex wife knows you well enough to know what you would be thinking (i.e. that you want her back for yourself and you definitely don't want her having sex and being happy with another guy) and the usual tricks you would use on her to keep her around.

So, don't lie.

There's nothing wrong with admitting that you still miss her from time to time, as long as you're being confident, mature and emotionally strong when you say it.

By being open and honest with your ex wife in a strong, emotionally masculine way (rather than a needy, insecure, emotionally weak way), you're building on her feelings of respect for you.

The more she respects you, the more she will feel attracted to you and with those two emotions building up inside of her, it then becomes easier for her to reconnect with her feelings of love for you.

That's how it works.

Respect comes first, then attraction and then her love for you begins to flow back into her heart.

So, focus on that and forget about trying to trick her into opening back up to you by lying to her.

That will likely only backfire on you, especially if she contacts you and says, "Great news!

I've met someone else and I'm happy now," and you then have to pretend that you're excited for her.

5. Using the same old approach to attraction that she became bored of in the marriage

If you try to re-attract your ex wife by using the same approach as before, (e.g. being too pushy and controlling and not taking her feelings into consideration, or being too soft and giving her too much power over you by letting her call all the shots, or trying to convince her to want a relationship even though she no longer feels sexually attracted to you and instead has neutral feelings for you), she will most likely reject you.

This is why, you need to start creating feelings of sexual and romantic attraction inside of her instead, so she naturally opens back up to you.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€¦!

- Showing her your confidence and emotional strength every time she pushes you away and acts cold and indifferent towards you.
- Bringing back the fun and laughter in your interactions with her rather than being so serious all the time.
- Teasing her in a ballsy, flirtatious way so she starts to feel desirable in your presence again.

When you do that, her sexual and romantic feelings for you naturally begin to resurface, whether she wants them to or not.

You can then build on those feelings and get her back, without her even realizing sheâ€™s falling in love with you all over again.

Making Peace With Your Ex Girlfriend

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 steps for making peace with your ex, which then also allows you to get her back if you want to:

1. Get clear on how the break up changed you in a positive way

A good way of doing that is by thinking about how you've learned from your past mistakes and how you've become a better man as a result.

For example: You might realize that

- You're now a lot more confident than you were before and this allows you to feel good about yourself regardless of what other people say or do. In other words, you no longer need your ex's approval, or anyone else's approval to feel worthy.
- You're less insecure and self-doubting now, which means you don't feel the need to get jealous or clingy when you're with a woman. You know that you're good enough and that any woman is lucky to have you.
- You're more emotionally independent, which means that even though you want her back, you don't need her back to be able to live a happy and fulfilling life.
- You've learned that to create a relationship dynamic that makes a woman want to stick around and treat you well; you don't have to suck up to her and let her walk all over you. Instead, you can be ballsy and still be a good guy.

When you realize how much you've changed and improved since the break up with your ex, you will no longer blame yourself, or her, for what happened.

You will understand that everyone makes mistakes in a relationship sometimes and as long as you learn from them and become better as a result, there's no reason not to make peace with your ex girlfriend.

When you interact with her and she sees for herself that you're no longer the man she broke up with, she won't be able to hold on to her negative perception of you anymore.

She will then want to make peace too, because it will feel like the right thing for her to do.

2. Spend an hour feeling grateful for her, the relationship and the break up

[image: Spend an hour feeling grateful for her, the relationship and the break up]

Regardless of how things turned out with your ex, when you take the time to be grateful, you will realize how much you gained along the way.

For example: By being grateful for the relationship you will be able to remember all the good times you and her shared together.

You will also recall many moments of laughter, happiness and love that will always be a part of you.

You will understand that you and her will always share a special and unique connection and that no matter what happens, she will always be a part of you because your life and hers have intertwined (even if briefly) and she helped you experience things that would never have happened without her (and visa versa).

Of course, things didn't turn out as you may have hoped for, but even the break up is something you can be grateful for.

For example: You can be grateful that you've leveled up as a man because of breaking up with your ex and as a result, you can now easily re-attract her if you want to, or get another high quality woman (and keep her) if you prefer.

When you look at things in that way, you will naturally want to make peace with your ex girlfriend, because you will genuinely feel grateful for having had her in your life.

3. Get clear on what you would say and do to re-attract her and start the relationship again

[image: Get clear on what you would say and do to re-attract her and start the relationship again]

For example: Do you need to apologize to her, or you have you already done that?

If not, then make sure that when you do, the apology is brief and sincere, not long, complicated or overly emotional.

Additionally, make sure that you don't plead for another chance (it will make you look desperate, which is unattractive to women), or totally blame yourself (or her) for what happened.

Just briefly apologize for not living up to what she expected you to be, letting her down and causing her to have to go through a break up with you.

BTW: Don't try to do the apology via text, email or social media.

Apologies are best done in person, or at least over the phone (on a phone call, or video call) because the woman can sense the sincerity in what you're saying, rather than seeing a bunch of words on her phone or computer and having to guess at how you might be saying it.

So, try to get the apology done on a call, or in person.

Then, if you want her back: After apologizing to her, make sure that you focus on saying the kind of things that will re-spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you, so she feels motivated to make peace with you.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by

- Keeping the conversation light-hearted and fun, so she finds herself laughing and smiling rather than frowning and looking for ways to get away.
- Adding in some playful teasing now and then to create some sexual tension between you.
- Showing her by the way you respond to her that you're now a different man to the one she broke up with (e.g. more confident, ballsy, able to stand up to her).
- Passing her confidence tests by not getting upset if she creates fake drama and blames you for everything that happened.

When you approach her in that way, she naturally drops her guard and opens up to making peace with you and possibly even being with you again romantically and sexually.

4. Begin preparing yourself to be able to make her feel an undeniable spark with you again

It's very important that you prepare yourself to properly re-attract her when you contact her, so she starts to feel a spark between you again.

In other words, you need to be able to attract her in the ways that she really wants.

For example: Sometimes a guy will contact his ex girlfriend and try to make peace with her by sending her flowers, writing her a soppy card, buying her a special gift, or some other gesture that he hopes she will see as being sweet and romantic.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that romance is only enjoyable to a woman if she respects him, feels attracted to him and is either falling in love with him or is in love with him.

So, rather than be impressed by his romantic gesture, she's instead acts cold towards him and doesn't seem interested in making peace at all.

This is why it's so important that you prepare yourself to make your ex feel attracted in the ways that matter to her.

In other words, interact with her and make her feel truly attracted to who you are now.

Don't try to sell yourself by telling her how much you've changed.

Let her experience the new you for herself, by listening to how you talk and observing your body language and actions.

When she does, even if she tries to hide it or pretend that she's not feeling it, she will be feeling a flood of renewed sexual and romantic attraction for you.

She will then want to make peace with you for her own reasons.

5. Contact her and get her to agree to catch up and say hi as friends

Once you've prepared yourself to re-attract her, go ahead and give your ex a call.

Start off by using some humor to lighten the mood and make her feel relaxed and happy to be talking to you again, especially if she's initially cold and unfriendly towards you.

Then, after a few minutes of light-hearted conversation where you reactivate some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you, you can say, Hey, it's been good talking to you. I feel so proud of us for being so mature about things and being able to laugh again together. I think it would be fun to catch up as friends and say hi in person. Of course, it's not about getting back together again. It's just two mature exes having a cup of coffee together and making peace after everything that happened. So, how about it? Which day suits you best?

If you've made her feel attracted, she will likely say, Yes, but don't be too disappointed if she doesn't.

Most women don't agree right away.

The important thing is that you maintain your confidence and then tell her that it's no big deal and that it's just two friends saying Hi, over some coffee.

She will then likely agree (especially if you've been making her laugh and smile during the conversation with you), because she will want to see for herself if you really have changed or not.

[image: Make peace with your ex girlfriend and then re-attract her and get her back]

You can then meet up with her, fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back if you want to, or make peace with her so you can both move on and make a fresh start with someone else.

5 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Truly Want to Make Peace With Her

1. Trying to make peace by sending her a long letter, email or message

If your ex is refusing to talk to you over the phone or in person, you may feel tempted to make peace with her via a letter.

Yet, in almost all cases, a letter doesn't get the results a guy is hoping for.

The main reason for that is because when a woman has disconnected from her feelings for a guy, she's prone to view everything he says or does in a negative light.

So, if your ex can't see your body language or hear the tonality of your voice, rather than give you the benefit of the doubt that you're being confident, mature and sincere, she will likely assume that you're too afraid to call her and make peace with her in person.

She will then lose even more respect for you for not being man enough to face her and say what you need to say.

2. Telling her, in detail, about all the things you have learned and gained as a result of being with her

It might look like you're complimenting her for being a great girlfriend to you, but from her perspective, she feels as though she came out of the relationship a loser (i.e. because you gained from her but she didn't get anything back in return).

She then feels resentful, used and annoyed.

So, don't try to trick your ex into wanting you back by pretending that your letter is just an innocent expression of gratitude and that it's all about her and that you don't have an ulterior motive for sending it.

Most women aren't stupid and can easily see through a guy's intentions.

If she senses that you're trying to suck up to her so she will forgive you and give you another chance, she will perceive you as being selfish and immature and then focus on moving on without you.

3. Asking her to make peace with you so you can get closure

Once again, that seems selfish to her and if she isn't attracted to you, she's not going to feel motivated to want to do it.

So, if you want to make peace with your ex, focus on doing it in a fair and balanced way.

She needs to feel as though she has also benefited by being with you and that forgiving you and making peace with you will be in her best interests as well, rather than it only being about you getting what you want.

4. Holding onto anger about your ex and it then ruining your future relationships with other women

The angrier you stay with your ex, the higher the chances of you becoming bitter and jaded.

You may then begin thinking that all women are the same (e.g. disloyal, drama queens, unable to commit).

Then, when you interact with other women, that belief will come through and make you either treat women like they can't be trusted, settle for women that you don't feel attracted to and won't fall in love with, or avoid women altogether.

As a result, you never find a high quality woman to be with and you go through your life with feelings of anger and disappointment.

5. Wanting her back, but using a slow, ineffective approach and then regretting it for many years later

If you want your ex girlfriend back, then ignoring her, waiting for her to contact you, or waiting for her to forgive you before you make a move is a waste of time.

Not only does it slow things down, you also stand the risk of losing her to another man who comes along and makes her feel strong feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for him.

That's why, you need to take action now.

Call her.

Re-spark some of her feelings for you.

Make peace with her.

Get her back if you want to.

My Ex is Indecisive

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 6 of the most common reasons why an ex woman will be indecisive after a break up, as well as what a man can do to give her the clarity she needs to get back with him:

1. She likes him as a person, but doesn't really feel much of a romantic spark with him

[image: She likes him as a person, but doesn't really feel much of a romantic spark with him]

Basically, she likes him and cares about him, but those feelings are non-sexual and friendly, or even sisterly, rather than romantic and sexual.

As a result, she feels unsure about whether it's worth it to give him another chance and see if things improve (i.e. he relights the spark inside of her), or if she's better off moving on and finding a new man who does make her feel attracted.

This is why, rather than sit around waiting for your ex to stop being indecisive, or nagging her to make up her mind, the best approach is to use interactions with her to reactivate her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you again.

For example: Some effective ways to do that are by

- Being more manly around her, rather than letting her dominate you with her confident personality.
- Turning conversations into laughter and fun, rather than being too serious all the time.
- Being ballsy enough to tease her and flirt with her so that she starts to feel like a sexy woman around you again, rather than like a good friend or big sister.
- Showing her that you remain confident and continue to believe in yourself and your value to her every time she says something like, "I can't decide what I want," rather than becoming insecure or unsure of yourself.

The more you relight the romantic spark between you and her, the more she will believe that being your girl again is what she wants.

2. He puts a lot of pressure on her to commit, but she's the sort of girl who likes a guy who is more of a challenge

[image: He puts a lot of pressure on her to commit, but she's the sort of girl who likes a guy who is more of a challenge]

In other words, he chases after her and makes her feel that no matter what she does to him (e.g. she's cold and aloof, she messes him around by not making up her mind), he's still willing to put up with it and wants her back.

This doesn't motivate her to put in any effort to impress him and try to make him chase her.

She knows that he will be predictable and boring (i.e. he'll continue to push for a relationship even though she's being disrespectful), so she remains indecisive.

What he doesn't realize is that she wants him to make her feel that she needs to be on her best behavior around him and chase after him because he's a catch, not like she's doing him a favor by being with him.

So, if you want your ex to make up her mind and get back with you, be more of a challenge during interactions, rather than making her feel that you're desperate for a relationship with her.

3. She doesn't want to be with him anymore and is only pretending to be indecisive for now

[image: She doesn't want to be with him anymore and is only pretending to be indecisive for now]

A woman will do that so that her ex feels the need to treat her well, to avoid her becoming annoyed and then making a final decision, usually one that he doesn't like.

This gives her time to move on.

Then, when she does find a new man, she may say, âI've thought a lot about us and I've decided that it's better if we just take a break from each other for a while. I hope you understand, as a way of letting him down easy and avoid him getting upset, angry or try to make her change her mind.

She will then focus on moving on with her new man.

Alternatively, she might just come out and tell him that she's seeing someone else and ask him to leave her alone.

Don't let that happen to you.

If you want your ex back, focus on making her feel attracted to you in ways that will make her want a relationship (i.e. sexually and romantically attracted).

4. She is attracted to him, but isn't sure if she should commit to a relationship at this point in her life

Some reasons for that might be:

- She's too young and wants to enjoy being single for a bit longer before she takes on the responsibilities of a serious relationship.
- She's still at university and wants to finish her studies.
- She wants to make progress in her career first before she settles down.
- She's suffering from FOMO (Fear of Missing Out) and is worried that if she settles down now, she might miss out on experiencing different kinds of love and relationships with other men.

Here's the thing though:

If a woman is happy in her relationship with her man, nothing about the single life would be able to make her feel tempted to give up what she's got.

She won't want to be single again because what she has now is so much better than anything else she might experience on her own.

This is why, if your ex is being indecisive, you need to show her that being with you again will be so much better than anything else she might experience in her life without you.

When you make her feel attracted in new and exciting ways, she will quickly make up her mind to get back with you.

5. There are many things about him that she likes and many that she doesn't

To date, he hasn't been able to fix the things that she doesn't like about him, so she feels nervous about getting back with him and experiencing the same problems as before.

So, if you want her to give you another chance, you need to show her that you've leveled up in the ways that are important to her.

For example: Some changes she might want to see in you are!

- Showing her that nothing she says and does makes you feel insecure or doubt your value and attractiveness to her or other women.
- Constantly creating a relationship dynamic where she feels motivated to be a good, loving, attentive woman to her, while you also make her feel good.
- Being ballsy enough to tease her in a loving way and make her feel desirable, rather than being too nice and neutral so she doesn't feel a spark with you, which then makes her feel drawn to other men.

When you show your ex that you truly have leveled up in some of the ways that actually matter to her, her walls begin to crumble and she then finds it easy to make a decision (i.e. to get back with you).

6. She knows that he will put up with pretty much anything just to get to talk to her or spend time with her, so she keeps doing it Basically, she feels as though she has power over him, so she abuses it by messing him around and acting like she's indecisive, when in reality she's not.

Here's the thing though!

A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy that is willing to let her push him around and manipulate him, just for a chance to be with her again.

She might give him the impression that she wants to be in control, but she's not going to respect him if he actually falls for it and hands his power over to her.

If she can't respect him, she won't be able to feel sexually attracted to him and without those two things in place, being in a relationship with him isn't something that appeals to her romantically.

So, don't give your ex power over you by letting her decide.

Instead, maintain your confidence with her and focus on re-sparking her feelings for you every chance you get.

The more respect and sexual attraction she feels, the faster she will come to the conclusion that you're the only man she wants.

Make Her Decide to Get Back With You Faster, By Avoiding These 5 Mistakes

1. Not having the guts to give her a week of space, before contacting her and re-attracting her

If you maintain almost constant contact with your ex, she will eventually block you, or say that it's over and she doesn't want to speak to you anymore.

On the other hand, if you give her a week of space, where you don't contact her at all (not even a little text), you will give her a chance to actually begin missing you and maybe even start wondering if you're moving on without her.

Then, when you call her after a week, she will almost certainly be happier to hear from you than she has been up to now.

Then, focus on re-sparking some of her feelings for you again so she starts to feel drawn to you again in a good way and wants to meet up with you.

You may then be surprised at how quickly she decides that she wants to give you another chance.

2. Asking her why she is so indecisive

If she doesn't know how to explain it to you she's going to feel cornered by your question and may become defensive and closed off.

Additionally, she doesn't want to explain it to you.

Instead, she wants you to take the lead and make some adjustments to your approach to attraction with her.

She can then make up her mind based on the man you truly are, not the man she told you how to be.

3. Showing her how upset and insecure her indecisiveness is making you feel

Regardless of how frustrating it might feel to be waiting for your ex to decide what she wants, getting upset and insecure over it is one of the surest ways to turn her off and convince her you're not the right guy for her.

Remember: Women want a confident, emotionally strong man who remains strong no matter what life or a woman throws at him.

So, if she notices that you're losing it over her indecisiveness, she's going to take it as a sign that you're none of those things and therefore, not the guy she wants to be in a relationship with.

The truth is, you will have a lot more success in getting her to make up her mind about being a couple again when you portray some of the qualities and personality traits that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence, emotional strength, self-belief, manliness), rather than by losing control of your emotions.

So, make sure you approach getting her back from a position of strength rather than weakness.

4. Assuming that she will be impressed if you remain loyal to her, even when she moves on

Sometimes, a guy thinks that if he remains loyal to his ex and doesn't go out or have fun without her, she will take it as a sign that he really does love her and want him back.

Yet, it doesn't work that way.

A woman doesn't want a guy who is stuck in a rut in his life and can't be happy and forward moving without her.

She wants to know that if she gets back with him, it's because he's a catch and she will be lucky to have him, not because she's doing him a favor.

This is why, if you want your ex to stop being indecisive, don't be afraid to let her see that you're actually getting on with and enjoying your life without her.

It actually makes her feel worried about losing you.

As a result, she quickly makes up her mind about being your girl again.

5. Not knowing that you can easily turn the tables and make her really want to be with you again

The truth is, the decision about whether you and your ex get back together again is not up to her.

When you take control of the ex back process by focusing on actively re-attracting her, rather than hiding in the background and hoping she will eventually make up her mind about you, everything changes.

She realizes that you're the kind of man she always wanted you to be (e.g. confident, persistent, motivated, emotionally strong) and her walls naturally start crumbling.

She then wants to get back together again because it's in her best interests to do so (i.e. she will be getting the man of her dreams).

So, take the lead and get her back while you still can.

After a Break Up, the Loyal One Stays Single. True or False?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Not necessarily.

Thereâs an online quote that says, âAfter a break up, the loyal one stays single and deals with the damages until healed. The other one is already in a relationship.â

That simply isnât true.

For example: Here are 5 common variations on what can happen after a break up:

1. After a break up, the dumper might remain single for weeks or even months, but still wonât care if the dumpee is waiting around and being loyal

[image: After a break up, the dumper might remain single for weeks or even months, but still wonât care if the dumpee is waiting around and being loyal]

Even if a woman breaks up with a guy (or visa versa) and then doesnât move on for a long time, it doesnât mean itâs a sign that she misses her ex and wants him back.

Instead, she may just be enjoying being single again and free of her unhappy relationship.

For example: She mightâ

- Focus on making progress on some of the things that are important to her like her studies or job.
- Do things she avoided because her ex wasnât interested (e.g. going traveling, volunteering at the local pet shelter or charity, taking up a new hobby or sport).
- Hang out with her single friends and go to bars, clubs and parties where she also gets to meet new guys, flirt and feel sexy and desirable again.
- Spend time by herself doing whatever she feels like (e.g. eat, sleep, watch TV) without having another person around to interrupt her.
- Make her own decisions without having to take her guyâs opinions or feelings into consideration.
- Hook up sexually or date different guys without the responsibilities of a committed relationship.

In a case like that, a woman wonât care what her ex is doing, or if heâs sitting around being loyal to her by not dating other women and moving on.

So, if you notice that your ex is still single weeks after your break up, donât assume that sheâs going to be impressed if she finds out that youâre being loyal to her by not getting on with your life.

Remember: Sheâs could be having fun and enjoying her newfound freedom, while youâre stuck waiting for her to come running back.

If you want her back, the best approach is to regularly interact with her and actively re-spark her feelings for you again.

Thatâs what works.

2. After a break up, sometimes both the man and woman move on right away and don't look back

[image: After a break up, sometimes both the man and woman move on right away and don't look back]

Moving on right away is not about being disloyal to the other person.

Instead, it's about wanting a relationship in which you are in love and attracted.

It's also not a reflection of how much you loved your ex or she loved you.

You can be completely in love with someone at the beginning of a relationship, but over time, that love can fade because of the way the other person makes you feel when you're with them.

Here's the thing!

A woman might be totally committed to being with a guy, but as the relationship progresses and she notices that he no longer makes her feel respect and attraction for him, her feelings will start to fade (e.g. because he stops being the confident guy she fell in love with and becomes needy and clingy, he takes her for granted, the sexual spark fades away and they feel more like friends).

The same applies to a guy.

He might really love his woman, but eventually, she starts to say and do things that annoy him and turn him off (e.g. she becomes whiny, she nags him all the time, she stops wanting to have sex).

In a case like that, when they break up, they will both move on and find new love with someone else, without needing to remain loyal to prove that they once cared for each other.

3. After a break up, sometimes the dumper remains single, misses the dumpee and is then disappointed to see that the dumpee moved on

[image: After a break up, sometimes the dumper remains single, misses the dumpee and is then disappointed to see that the dumpee moved on]

This can happen when the dumper realizes that she (or he) made a mistake and that she still has feelings for her ex.

In some cases, a woman might even break up with a guy to shock him into leveling up and becoming more of the guy she wants him to be (e.g. decisive and determined, less easily influenced by his friends or family, more serious about their future together).

However, secretly she may be hoping that once he changes and improves in some of the ways that are important to her, they will get back together again and have a relationship that is 100% more loving and successful than before.

So, if the guy doesn't remain loyal and instead moves on, she will feel disappointed and upset.

This is why, if you want your ex back, you don't have to move on if you don't want to, because she might be waiting for you to get her back.

Realize that, as the man, it's your role to be the more courageous one after a break up to get the ex back process started.

So, go ahead and prepare yourself (i.e. by quickly improving on some of the things that turned her off).

Then, call her, reactivate some of her sexual and romantic feelings for you and get her to meet up with you in person, so that you can seduce her and get her back.

4. After a break up, sometimes both the man and woman remain single for weeks or months

This can be a sign that they miss each other and don't want to let go of the possibility to working things out and getting back together again.

However, it can also be a sign that they're just enjoying being single and not having to deal with the commitment of a serious relationship anymore.

The good news though, is that if a guy wants his woman back in this time, it's pretty easy for him to make it happen.

All it takes is the right approach and he can quickly and effortlessly reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for him and get her back.

For example: Some of the ways he can do that are by:

- Interacting with her over the phone and in person as often as possible (without coming across as needy or desperate) and using ballsy humor to show her that he doesn't doubt himself and his value and attractiveness to her.
- Making interactions feel fun and interesting, rather than stressful, tense or annoying.
- Teasing her in a cocky, playful way so that it creates sexual tension between them, which then needs to get released through kissing and sex.
- Taking control of the ex back process in an emotionally masculine manner and leading the way, rather than letting her call the shots.
- Being aware that she's going to test him (e.g. by pretending that she's not interested in him anymore) and remaining confident and emotionally strong, rather than feeling insecure and unsure of himself around her.

When she experiences the new version of him, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling attraction and respect for him again.

They can then get back together again and enjoy a new, improved relationship together.

5. After a break up, the dumper often won't care about, or even want the dumpee's loyalty

[image: After a break up, the dumper often won't care about, or even want the dumpee's loyalty]

That's mainly because the dumper no longer has feelings for her (or his) ex.

As a result, whatever he does becomes irrelevant to her, especially if he's not actively doing anything to reactivate her feelings for him.

She will then focus on moving on as quickly as possible by hooking up with, dating and falling in love with a new man.

That's why, if you want your ex back, you stand a better chance of making it happen if you stay in her life and use interactions with her to re-spark her feelings for you.

For example:Â The next time you talk to her, ask yourself:

- Am I making her feel feminine and girly, or does she feel more like a non-sexual friend?
- Am I being manly and emotionally strong with her, or am I being too soft and passive, to the point where she feels like the more emotionally strong and dominant one?
- Am I confident and self-assured around her, or am I feeling nervous and unsure of myself, especially if sheâs not showing a lot of interest and is being cold and distant towards me?
- Am I making her feel good in my presence by making her laugh and smile, or am I causing her to feel anxious, tense or stressed out?

When you begin to offer her the attraction experience she always wanted from you but didnât get, she will naturally begin to view your loyalty to her in a more positive light.

She then becomes open to giving you another chance.

3 Mistakes to Avoid if You Want Her Back

1. Assuming that she will be impressed by how loyal youâre being, even though she has moved on

If your ex finds out that youâre staying single while sheâs moving on, itâs highly unlikely that she will think, âWow! Heâs being so loyal to me. Maybe I underestimated his devotion to me. Is it possible that I made a mistake by dumping him after all?â

Instead, she may even perceive you in a more negative light and lose even more respect for you for not being able to find a new woman.

The truth is, a lot of guys donât realize that most women feel attracted to and want a man who is desired by other women. Why?

It makes her feel that he must be valuable and worth having if other women want him, especially attractive, high quality women.

She then feels more open to talking to him over the phone and meeting up with him in person to see what happens (i.e. if he will be able to reactivate her feelings for him so they can get back together again).

So, if you want to get your ex back, you stand a much better chance of making it happen by showing her that youâre moving on and living a happy and fun-filled life without her, than if you stay single to prove to her that youâre the loyal one.

2. Assuming that women know about online quotes like that and live their life by them

Even if a woman does know about the quote and thinks that itâs true, sheâs not going to want to get back with a guy that she isnât attracted to and in love with.

Itâs just a quote.

What matters to her the most is how she feels when she thinks about her ex, or interacts with him (e.g. attracted, excited, happy, in love or annoyed, turned off, tense, stressed out).

So, the best approach is to forget about what some quote might say, and focus instead on using interactions with your ex to reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

You can do that by making her grin, giggle and feel like a cute girl in your presence.

You can tease her playfully so she feels turned on and excited again.

The more you reawaken her dormant feelings for you, the more drawn to you she will feel again

Yet, it won't matter to her if you've stayed single.

The only thing that will matter is how she feels with you now and from now on.

3. Assuming that she will be impressed by how damaged you are as a result of the break up

Although it's totally fine for you to feel hurt over the break up, letting your ex see it isn't the best way to reactivate her feelings for you.

Most women are turned off by emotional weakness and hopelessness in a man.

So, if you want her to see you as a real man and feel renewed respect and attraction for you, you need to deal with your emotions like a man.

In other words, feel the emotions, but then get on with the solution to the problem.

Don't get stuck feeling sad, lonely or lost without her.

Instead, get to a new emotional state of feeling confident, positive and hopeful.

Then interact with her, re-attract her and get her back.

I Gave My Ex a Ring When She Broke Up With Me and She Still Left Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 of the most common reasons why a woman will still break up with a guy, even though he offered her a ring to show how committed he was:

1. A ring is an object and she's not in a relationship with an object

[image: A ring is an object and she's not in a relationship with an object]

Regardless of how expensive or amazing a ring is, it's not the main thing that makes a woman want to be in a relationship with a guy.

Instead, a woman falls in love with a guy and wants to be with him because of the way he makes her feel.

Of course, some women are gold diggers or desperate and will accept a proposal from a guy because he bought her a pretty ring.

Yet, most women will only stay in a relationship with a guy because he creates a relationship dynamic that makes her feel loved, appreciated and taken care of, while at the same time, motivates her to be a good woman to him too.

So, even though you gave your ex a ring when she broke up with you, what you likely didn't realize is that it wasn't the ring she was after in the first place.

She may have said that she wanted to settle down, get married or start a family with you, but in most cases a woman will say that as a way of encouraging her man to level up and be more emotionally mature and reliable (e.g. because he still doesn't have a clear purpose and direction in life and is drifting along doing odd jobs, wasting time drinking alcohol and messing around with irresponsible friends).

If he picks up on that and quickly transforms himself, she will then want to stick with him, ring or not.

However, if he continues to turn her off via his attitude, actions and behavior, she won't care that he gave her the most dazzling, expensive ring he could find, because he's not making her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with him (e.g. attracted, happy, optimistic about the future).

2. Offering her a ring after she dumped him, seems insincere and a little forced

[image: Offering a ring after she has dumped you seems forced and insincere to her]

Although your ex might have wanted you to give her a ring, if she were to accept it now, the love would feel forced, rather than natural, real and spontaneous.

She would then likely always wonder, "Did he do it because he really loves me and wants to be with me for life, or was it a desperate move on his part to just stop me from leaving him?"

As a result, she would struggle to feel safe in the relationship, because at the back of her mind she might be waiting for you to change your mind.

This is why, to make her believe that you genuinely want her because you love her and not because she's pushed you into giving her a ring by breaking up with you, you have to take the pressure off her.

You need to focus on making interactions with her over the phone and in person feel fun and relaxed, while at the same time, building her feelings for you in a way that reawakens her respect, attraction and love for you.

When she feels drawn to you again in a good way, the idea of accepting a ring from you will feel right to her, because it will be coming from your heart, rather than you being forced into it.

3. A ring doesn't guarantee that the relationship problems will be solved

[image: A ring doesn't guarantee that the relationship problems will be solved]

Your ex is probably intelligent and mature enough to realize that getting married, won't solve the relationship problems that you and her have been experiencing.

So, rather than accepting your ring, pretending that nothing is wrong with the relationship and then ending up going through a divorce later on, she chose to leave you.

You can get her back, but you're going to need to show her (in a non-desperate, non-pleading way) that you have already become the man she wanted you to be (e.g. more confident, have a clear purpose and direction in life, are more responsible and disciplined, no longer needing her emotional support to function as a man because you've become emotionally independent and strong).

You don't have to be perfect in all of those areas, but you do need to have clearly improved on them. It doesn't take months to make improvements either.

You can literally improve, adjust and change in clearly noticeable ways within a few days, to a week. You can then interact with her and let her experience the new and improved you, without asking her for another chance.

Just let her realize that she is attracted to you again and now feels like she doesn't want to leave you, or lose you.

When that happens, she will naturally want to accept a ring from you or at least get back together to see how things go for a while.

From her perspective, she will be gaining something (i.e. a better relationship, more intense feelings of love, respect and attraction), rather than losing something (i.e. her time with a guy who she doesn't believe in).

So, if your ex still left you even though you bought her a ring, she almost certainly felt as though the ring wouldn't change anything, or fix the relationship problems you and her had, or the ways in which you were turning her off (e.g. insecurity, too emotionally dependent on her, unreliable in certain ways).

From her perspective, she felt as though it would be better to break up now, rather than risk breaking up later on when the stakes were a lot higher (e.g. you're married and have children together, she's older and it's then harder for her to find a new man and start over with him).

4. A ring doesn't change the fact that she is no longer attracted to him or in love with him

When a woman has disconnected from her sexual and romantic feelings for a guy, a ring is the last thing that will make her stick with him.

In fact, it might actually scare her off even more, because she won't want to risk him thinking that the reason she's breaking up with him is that he didn't propose to her earlier, when in fact it has nothing to do with that.

That's why, if you want your ex back, you need to focus on reactivating her feelings for you first. One of the ways to do that is by using interactions with her from now on to create a spark between you and her.

You can do that by:

- Realizing that your confidence is one of the qualities about you that she feels most attracted to, so you don't become insecure and nervous when she's being closed off and distant and says that she isn't interested in you anymore.
- Using ballsy humor to bring down her defenses and make her want to interact with you more and more.
- Playfully teasing her to create some sexual tension between you.
- Being more emotionally dominant than her so she can relax and feel totally feminine in your presence.

The more you reactivate her feelings for you, the more she will then want to spend time around you, which opens up the way for kissing and sex.

Sex speeds up the process of reconciling a relationship and stops a lot of the mind games or playing hard to get on a woman's part.

She then drops her guard and becomes open to being your girl again.

Only then will she be happy and excited when you give her a ring.

5. A woman wants her engagement to a guy to be something she is proud of, not secretly embarrassed about

In most cases, when a woman leaves a guy, it's after a lot of arguments, fights and near break ups.

That means, a woman's friends, family and even coworkers will have noticed her crying, feeling sad, or looking angry and frustrated several times throughout the course of her relationship with him.

If she then suddenly tells them that she almost broke up with him, but he stopped her from leaving by giving her a ring, rather than congratulate her and feel happy for her, they will likely feel pity for her.

From their perspective, they will assume that she's so desperate to get married, that she's even willing to accept a man who doesn't make her happy to make it happen.

Yet, that's not how a woman wants to feel about her engagement.

Instead, she wants to be the envy of other women, because she's marrying a great guy who she feels proud of and who is worthy of her love and affection.

She will then not only feel motivated to hold on to him and treat him like her king, she will also want to show him off to everyone, because she knows that heâ€¦s a catch and that sheâ€¦s lucky to have him.

Get Her Back Faster By Avoiding These 4 Mistakes

1. Assuming that women can be easily tricked with rings, gifts or romantic gestures

[image: Assuming that women can be easily tricked with rings, gifts or romantic gestures]

Almost all women donâ€¦t choose to be with a guy because of what he can buy for her.

She doesn't want to feel like she is being bought, like a hooker, or feel obligated to be with a guy because he bought something for her.

Instead, a woman chooses to be with him based on how he makes her feel when sheâ€¦s with him (e.g. attracted, in love, safe, turned on, excited about the future, relaxed, happy, light-hearted).

So, when a guy tries to make her stay with him by giving her a ring, rather than see it as a romantic gesture, she instead feels heâ€¦s trying to trick her into accepting him, even though heâ€¦s not giving her the attraction experience she really wants.

For this reason, if you want your ex back, rather than trying to buy her love back, focus on making her have strong feelings for you again, based on how she feels when she talks to you and interacts with you.

Thatâ€¦s what really counts.

2. Becoming desperate and turning her off more than she already has been

For example: Out of desperation a guy mightâ€¦

- Start begging and pleading with her to change her mind, which makes him come across as emotionally weak and wimpy and turns her off even more.
- Make promises to change and become the man she wants him to be if she will just give him another chance.
- Send her a long letter, email or series of text messages telling her how much he still loves her. However, because she no longer has feelings for him anymore, she doesnâ€¦t care and even perceives him as being selfish and only thinking about himself and what he wants.
- AskÂ her to tell him what he needs to do to make her change her mind, which stresses her out and turns her off more, because he needs her to help him to become a better, more attractive man for her.

She then closes herself off even more and focuses on finding a replacement man as quickly as possible, so that she can have an excuse not to have to give him another chance.

Donâ€¦t make that mistake.

The proper way to get your ex back is to focus on making her have feelings for you by quickly changing your approach to be more attractive and appealing to her.

Not in a desperate, hurried way, but in a relaxed, confident, easy-going way.

3. Assuming that all she really wants from you is commitment

In many cases, a woman will break up with a guy due to his behavior in the relationship.

For example:

- He ignored her and placed her in the background of his life due to excessive work or playing video games.
- He became addicted to drugs or alcohol and expected her to put up with it.
- He changed from being a nice, loving boyfriend to a mean, vindictive boyfriend.
- He discouraged her from pursuing her dreams and made her feel like she wasn't good enough, because he worried that she would outgrow him and then leave him.
- He put more value on other people's opinions (e.g. his friends, coworkers, family, even acquaintances) rather than hers.

So, to make your ex want you back you first need to be able to re-attract in the ways that really matter to her (i.e. that you level up as a man), rather than giving her things that she doesn't actually want (i.e. a marriage proposal).

When she experiences your new, attractive behavior, she will naturally begin to feel more respect and attraction for you as a man.

She will then drop her guard and allow herself to open back up to the idea of being in a relationship with you again.

4. Hoping that if you cut off contact and wait, she will regret her decision and come back

When a woman is attractive, it's easy for her to find a new man to hook up with sexually, date and get into a relationship with.

So, if she has disconnected from her feelings for her guy and he then ignores her for weeks or even months, in the hope that she will come running back to him, she's probably not going to care.

Instead, she's going to focus on finding a replacement man as quickly as possible to move on with, rather than chase after a guy she no longer loves or feels attracted to.

In a case where she is hoping that they will get back together again and he ignores her, she may take it as a sign that he doesn't care about her anymore and feel rejected.

She will then hook up with a new man to make herself feel better.

Either way, he ends up losing out and regretting his decision for many years to come.

So, if you want your ex back, it's up to you, not her, to make it happen.

My Fiancé Left Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 common reasons why a woman will do that and how you can get her back:

1. She had been having doubts for a while and could no longer deal with that level of commitment

Most couples will experience some doubts about getting married and before they, may give themselves a chance to wonder things like, “Is he/she really the one for me?” or, “Am I really ready to spend the rest of my life with him/her?”

Usually, those doubts are temporary and go away pretty quickly when the other person makes them feel loved, wanted and appreciated.

However that's not always the case.

Sometimes, the doubts will continue to eat away a woman's feelings for her guy (or visa versa). She may then begin feeling confused, unhappy, stressed out and even trapped.

Initially, she might try to convince herself that she's getting cold feet and that there's nothing wrong.

She may even hint about her uneasiness to her guy in the hope that he will say and do something that will show her he's the right guy for her (e.g. make her feel loved and appreciated in a confident, manly way).

However, if he responds in an unattractive way (e.g. he becomes clingy and needy out of fear of losing her), her doubts will intensify.

She might then decide that she can't go through with the marriage anymore and break up with him.

So, if you want your fiancé back, you need to show her during your interactions from now on, that you really are the right man for her.

When she realizes that you make her feel more respect, attraction and love than anyone else, her doubts will naturally melt away and will want to be your wife.

2. He hadn't been listening to her requests for him to change and she feared that it would just get worse if they got married

[image: He hadn't been listening to her requests for him to change and she feared that it would just get worse if they got married]

Every relationship experiences some problems at times.

Likewise, there will be some things that annoy the woman about her man and visa versa.

However, the key to a lasting relationship is that when an issue arises that can be fixed, adjusted or changed, the other person listens and then puts in the effort to fix, adjust, change or improve.

As a result, the love, respect and attraction between the couple grows and intensifies and they feel like they want to be together for life.

On the other hand, if a woman realizes that the problems between her and her man aren't going away, regardless of how often she talks to him about it, she will strongly begin to doubt her decision to marry him.

In some cases, she may even break up with him if she gets a sense that things will only become worse after they get married (i.e. because he'll assume that he's got her now so why put in the effort to change).

So, if you want your ex back, you need to make sure that you show her (not tell her) that you've truly changed some to the things that are important to her.

For example:

- You're less insecure and self-doubting now, which means you don't feel the need to get jealous and cling to her.
- You're more emotionally independent, which means that you don't rely on her for your sense of purpose and identity.
- You're less nice and sweet, which means she can't walk all over you knowing that you'll stick around no matter what.
- You're no longer being held back by the addictions or issues you might have had in the relationship (e.g. spending way too much time playing video games and not enough time on achieving goals in real life, using too alcohol or drugs too often or too much, working way too much, being overly obsessive about certain things).

When you interact with her again and she can sense that you really have changed, she will begin to open up to the possibility of forgiving you, giving the relationship another chance and then becoming your wife.

3. She wasn't feeling enough of a spark and didn't want to get into that kind of marriage

Your ex fiancée may have some feelings for you, but not enough to make her want to become your wife.

This often happens when a relationship starts off well (e.g. they had an amazing connection, he was a good guy to her, the sex was great, they had a lot of fun and interesting times together), but then, over time the sexual spark fizzled out.

In other words, the relationship ended up feeling more like a friendship than a sexual romance.

Some women will put up with having a spark-less relationship, but a lot of women won't.

If your fiancée left you, it could be because she doesn't feel enough sexual attraction for you to make her want to end up in a passionless, sexless marriage.

However, you can change that by re-sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

When you make her feel very feminine in comparison to your masculinity (e.g. by not being neutral around her, being a good man but not a pushover, laughing at her in a loving way when she creates drama) she will automatically feel attracted to you.

Then, the idea of becoming your wife begins to appeal to her once more.

4. She knew that they wouldn't last and she didn't want to become a divorced woman, so she ended it while she still could

[image: She knew that they wouldn't last and she didn't want to become a divorcee, so she ended it while she still could]

A woman will sometimes accept a marriage proposal from a guy, even though she's not fully attracted to him and in love with him.

Some of her reasons might be:

- She's getting older and she worries that if she doesn't say Yes, she may end up single for life and lose out on having a family of her own.
- She's being pressured by her family.
- She's noticing that her friends are all settling down and she doesn't want to be left behind.
- He's a good guy and she feels he'll be a good provider for her and any children they may have, so she's willing to overlook the fact that he doesn't make her feel sexual and romantic attraction for him.

Yet, deep down, she knows that it probably won't last and that eventually, she'll begin to want more from the relationship.

So, to avoid getting divorced later on and potentially having to deal with putting children through that as well, she decides to end it now before it's too late.

She will then look to find a replacement man as quickly as possible who is good to her, but also motivates her to be a loving, devoted, faithful woman to him too.

Of course, you can still be that guy.

The more attracted you can make her feel when she interacts with you, the more she will believe that getting back with you is about her following her heart and surrendering to the exciting feelings of loving attraction, rather than settling for a man who is not her ideal match.

Getting Your Fiancée Back is Easier When You Avoid These 6 Mistakes

1. Crying to her and pleading for another chance

A woman's attraction to a guy is based mostly on his ability to make her feel like she can look up to him and respect him as a man.

So, when a guy is crying and pleading and being emotionally weak and desperate, he's essentially making her feel the opposite of the way he needs to make her feel to convince her to be his wife again.

Instead, he's actually turning her off even more when what he should be doing is quickly re-sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for him again, so she naturally becomes unsure about her decision to leave him.

2. Not figuring out the core reason for her lack of attraction

If a guy interacts with his ex woman and makes the same old attraction mistakes that he made before, it goes without saying that she won't feel very motivated to give him another chance.

Instead, she will continue to feel that something important is missing and that will convince her that she made the right decision to leave him.

So, if you want your fiancée to change her mind about being broken up, you need to show her that you understand her core, possibly even secret reason for losing attraction for you (e.g. your lack of emotional strength made her feel as though she had to take care of you so she felt more like a mother or big sister than your girl, the way you treated her made her feel like a neutral friend around you rather than a desirable woman).

You need to think, act, behave and respond to her in a way that inspires her and wakes her up to a new attraction experience.

Only then will she open back up to you again.

3. Trying to get her back before figuring out how to make her feel attracted again

If you push for a relationship with your ex fiancée before making her have feelings for you again, you will almost certainly get rejected. Why?

Even though you feel attracted to her, love her and want to be with her, right now she doesn't feel the same way.

As a result, she will likely feel that you're being selfish and only looking out for your own well-being without bothering to take her feelings into consideration.

She will then naturally push you away and refuse to work things out.

This is why you need to approach the ex back process with your ex fiancée in a way that will open her up and make her want to talk to you and be around you more, rather than less.

In other words, you need to make the feelings between you and her mutual, or at least close to mutual.

If you don't do that, she won't feel motivated to fix the relationship and be your girl again.

4. Trying to get family or friends involved to help convince her to give you another chance

This is usually a bad idea for several reasons:

Most family and friends don't want to get caught up in the middle of a break up and have to choose sides.

If she finds out that you went behind her back she might actually get angry with you and feel even more convinced that she made the right decision.

Often family and friends will try to talk you out of trying to get her back by saying things like, It's better that you broke up now, rather than going through a divorce later on. Clearly it wasn't meant to be.

So, if you want your fiancée back, don't get other people involved, regardless of how desperate you might feel.

5. Falling into depression and becoming unattractive to her and other women as a result

There's no denying that losing the woman you were planning to spend the rest of your life with is a big deal.

You wouldn't be human if it wasn't.

However, if you let it break you and cause you to sink into a pit depression and despair, you'll actually be hurting your chances of getting your fiancée back.

Why?

Essentially, you're stopping yourself from moving forward and becoming the kind of man who can attract her back (e.g. confident, someone who can handle adversity and come back emotionally stronger and better than before).

Then, when you interact with other women, or your ex fiancée and they notice your hopelessness, they will feel turned off by what they perceive as your emotional weakness.

As a result, you then struggle to find a new woman to move on with, or re-attract your fiancée and get her back.

6. Hoping that she will change her mind if you just wait

One of the fastest ways for you to lose your ex for real, is by waiting around for her to realize she made a mistake and come running back to you and doing nothing.

The truth is, if a woman has disconnected from her sexual and romantic feelings for you and you don't actively do anything to change that (i.e. interact with her every chance you get and spark her feelings for you again), she's likely going to focus on fully getting over you.

That usually involves her going out with her single friends to clubs and bars, drinking alcohol and flirting and even hooking up with guys she meets there.

She might also accept dates from guys that have been interested in her and have been waiting in the sidelines for her to break up with you.

Additionally, she can join an online dating site or use an app like Tinder.

Basically, it's very easy for an attractive woman to find a new man if she wants to.

So, while you're waiting around being a good, faithful ex fiancée, she will be moving on and forgetting all about you.

Don't let that happen!

You have to be active in the ex back process, not passive.

My Ex Wife Has Started Messaging Me Again

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 6 of the most common reasons why an ex wife will do that and what you can do to get her back:

1. She wants to see if you're still missing her and wanting her back, but isn't 100% interested in getting back with you yet

[image: She wants to see if you're still missing her and wanting her back, but isn't yet interested in getting back with you]

Sometimes, a woman will message her ex husband as a way of finding out what her options are.

For example: If he's still missing her and wants her back she might be willing to work on the relationship so they can get back together again.

However, if she gets a cool response from him, she will then focus on fully getting over him and moving on (usually by hooking up with and dating other guys).

So, if you want to reconcile with your ex wife, don't let this opportunity go to waste.

That doesn't mean you should chase after her or behave in a desperate or needy way.

Instead, respond to her messages once or twice in an easy-going and fun way and then just go ahead and call her.

On the phone, it's a lot easier for you to reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

The reason is, she can hear the confidence and sincerity in your voice, which means it's harder for her to make assumptions about you like she would via text (e.g. she might assume you're feeling nervous or unsure of yourself while texting, but when she hears your voice or even sees your face on a video call she won't be able to make that mistake).

She then naturally feels drawn to you and becomes open to meeting up with you in person to see where things go from there.

2. She misses you and hopes that by messaging you, a spark will ignite and you and her can reconcile

[image: She misses you and hopes that by messaging you, a spark will ignite and you and her can reconcile]

Basically, she's likely hoping that you will take the lead and relight the spark of sexual and romantic attraction between you and her.

For example: Some of the most effective ways to do that are by:

- Using ballsy humor, or playfully challenging humor to break down her walls and make her feel at ease and happy to be talking to you, rather than just talking to her in a neutral way, or being on your best behavior to hopefully get her to take pity on you.
- Being flirtatious when talking to her to create a sexual spark between you, which then makes her want to see you and release the built up sexual tension with kissing and sex.

- Being more emotionally dominant than her (while still treating her well and being a good man), so she can feel feminine and girly inÂ comparison to you.
- Making her feel that she will be lucky to get you back, rather than like she would be doing you a favor because sheâs too good for you.

The more you attract her in ways that she doesnât expect, the more she will want to interact with you on the phone and in person to experience it.

Itâs then pretty easy for you to fully reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you and get her back.

3. She has been having a difficult time dating and has reached out to you to make herself feel better

If a woman struggles to find a replacement man to date after she gets divorced, it might dent her confidence.

So, to give herself a bit of a self-esteem boost, she might start messaging her ex again to see what happens.

If he seems overly excited to hear from her, or if she gets a sense that heâs been sitting around unable to move on without her, she will feel better knowing that he still wants her.

She might then use that confidence boost to go out and try her luck at hooking up with other men again, knowing that even if she fails, her ex husband will still be there to make her feel good about herself if she needs it.

The important thing in a situation like this is not to allow your ex to use you in that way.

Instead, use her contacting you as an opportunity to re-attract her and get her back.

4. Sheâs testing to see how you react

[image: She's testing to see how you react]

This can be out of curiosity (i.e. she may be thinking, âI wonder if he still has feelings for me after all this time?â), boredom (i.e. sheâs got nothing to do and thought it might be fun to text you and see what happens), or interest (i.e. she still has some feelings for you and wants to explore them).

She will then wait to see what you will do when you get her messages.

For example:

- Will you get overly excited about hearing from her and desperately chase after her?
- Will you just ignore her?
- Will you have the confidence to respond to her, reactivate her feelings and get her back?
- Will you lose control of your emotions and begin pouring your heart out to her and telling her how much you missed her and how lost youâve been without her?
- Will you try to make her feel bad, by telling her how happy youâve been without her?
- Will you show her that even though you do want her back, you donât really need her back in order to feel good about yourself or to live a happy, successful life?

Depending on your reaction, she will either go back to ignoring you and focus on moving on, or she will open herself up to seeing you in person again to see how she feels.

5. She doesn't feel as though you and her need to continue cutting off communication like you have been

This is often the case when a woman feels that she's over her ex husband and is now ready to be friends with him instead of pretending they didn't once share a special connection.

The good thing about a situation like that is that if you still want to get back together with your ex wife, you can use the friendship to make it happen.

Of course, that doesn't mean you should pretend to be her nice, neutral friend who is no longer interested in her in a sexual and romantic way and hope that eventually she will realize what a great guy you've become since the divorce and want you back.

That's not how attraction works.

Instead, you've got to actively spark her feelings of attraction for you every chance you get (e.g. making her feel sexy and desirable when she's with you, creating exciting tension between you through teasing and ballsy humor).

Of course, it's totally fine to be friendly with her.

Just ensure that you're also making her feel strong waves of sexual and romantic attraction for you too.

When you do, the relationship will naturally get back together right away, or very quickly.

6. She has forgiven you for your part in the breakdown of the marriage and now thinks of you in a more compassionate way

She probably now realizes that mistakes were made by both you and her and the mature thing is to acknowledge that, rather than not taking responsibility for her actions and blaming you for everything.

At the same time, she understands that you shared a great love and that is something that bonds you and her forever.

Based on that, it's better that you forgive each other so that you can both move on without the baggage of the past casting a big shadow of any future relationships you might have.

Yet, the wonderful thing about forgiveness is that it automatically makes her stop looking at you in a negative way.

She recognizes that who you are now and who you were before the divorce are two different people.

You've changed as a man because of what happened and are now a better man because of it.

When she goes through that emotional transition, she automatically starts to feel better about interacting with the new and improved you.

She finds it easier to open herself back up to you and when she does, you need to make sure that you're able to make her feel enough respect and attraction for you to actually want to be in a relationship with you again.

4 Mistakes to Avoid Now That She's Messaging You Again

1. Sticking to text and she then gets her fill and loses interest

Playing it safe by sticking to only messaging back and forth with your ex wife and never calling her, is a tactic that rarely (if ever) works in getting a woman back.

The reason for that is because in most cases, a woman who doesn't have strong (or any) feelings for her ex and he in turn, isn't doing anything to make her have feelings for him, will get bored of texting with him.

She may then begin to wonder What's the point? and lose interest.

She will then usually focus her attention on other guys she knows who are interested in her and are bold enough to call her and meet up with her, because she can see that things are progressing with them, unlike with her ex.

So, if you want your ex wife back, it's up to you to be a man about it and lead the way by calling her and reactivating her feelings for you again.

That's what works.

2. Sticking to text and she then assumes you're not interested in anything more than that [image: Sticking to just texting and she then assumes you're not interested in anything more than that]

If your ex wife has any feelings left for you and is secretly hoping that you and her can try and work things out, sticking to text will likely ruin that.

Why?

She may decide that if you're not willing to call her or see her in person, then you're probably not interested in her anymore and are perhaps being too polite to tell her.

As a result, she assumes that you're doing the nice thing of being a good ex husband who responds to her messages, but that you're not interested in anything more.

She will then likely force herself to go out and meet, date and hook up with other men to get over you and move on.

3. Having in depth conversations via text and she then becomes exhausted by it and wants to stop

It's only natural that interacting with an ex husband can be a bit stressful for a woman (i.e. they had a special connection and then things got ruined and they ended up getting divorced).

So, even if she's the one who started messaging him again, it's likely that her intention wasn't to get caught up in long, stressful discussions about the marriage and subsequent divorce.

Instead, she probably just wants to test the water and see if they can still have a nice, friendly, light-hearted chat and see where things go from there.

So, if you try to get into a deep, meaningful conversation with your ex wife via text, she will likely start to feel overwhelmed and stressed out by it.

She may then think something like, â€œMessaging him again was a mistake,â€ and she might then stop replying to you, or if you continue to put her under pressure, even block you.

4. Getting to a phone call, but not getting her to meet up with you to say hi as friends, so you can then re-attract her and seduce her

Something that a lot of guys don't understand when trying to get an ex woman back, is that if you're not reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you in person, she's going to remain a neutral friend.

Think of it this way!

A relationship is two people who spend time together, enjoy doing things with each other, touch, kiss and have sex.

You can't successfully do any of that via text or on a phone call (i.e. even phone sex can't replace the real thing).

So, if you want to get back with your ex wife, you have to be courageous enough to make it happen. Take the lead by re-sparking her feelings for you in person so she wants to be around you more and more.

She wants to touch, hold hands, hug, kiss and have sex.

Only then will she be willing to try again.

On the other hand, if all you do is talk over the phone, she will eventually feel that your interactions are leading nowhere.

She then assumes that it's over and decides to forget about you and make a fresh start with someone else.

Don't let that happen.

Get your wife back today, tomorrow or in the next 1-2 weeks.

You can do that.

Every day, new men take a chance and get their ex wife back.

You can do it too.

Second Chance Relationship Advice

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 6 essential pieces of second chance relationship advice that every man needs to know, if he sincerely wants to get his ex woman back:

1. Most ex women will seem completely uninterested, until you re-attract them

Sometimes a guy will try his best to get a woman back after a break up, only for her to reject him (again!) and say things like, âSorry, but Iâm not interested. Itâs over. You need to move on.â

At that point, he might give up and walk away, feeling as though heâs lost the love of his life forever.

Yet, what a guy like that doesnât realize is that even when a woman hates a guy, if he interacts with her and sparks some respect and attraction inside of her (i.e. by showing her that heâs truly leveled up in some of the ways that matter to her), her feelings will automatically begin to change. She might not want them to, but she wonât have any control over them (i.e. because when you display traits that women naturally find attractive, she will automatically feel drawn to you, whether she wants to or not).

On the other hand, if you give up at the first sign of resistance from her (i.e. when she says sheâs not interested in you anymore), you may lose your second chance with her.

So, you have to be ready to maintain your confidence, regardless of what she says or does to push you away.

Then, you need to spark her sexual and romantic feelings for the new and improved you, so that you can bring down her guard and get her back.

2. Asking for a second chance at a relationship before re-attracting her will usually result in a, âNoâ

The fundamental rule to getting an ex back is: Attraction comes first and everything else follows after that.

Unfortunately, some guys arenât aware of that fact and make the mistake of asking for a second chance before theyâve fully re-sparked their exâs sexual and romantic feelings.

The guy is then left feeling hurt and bewildered when she says, âNo.â

So, if you want your ex to give you another chance, you need to make sure that you reactivate her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you first.

A few examples of how you can do that are:

- Take control during interactions in an emotionally masculine manner and lead the way, rather than constantly worrying about what sheâs thinking, or if sheâll get annoyed if you donât let her call the shots.
- Be confident and believe in your value to her, rather than thinking negative thoughts such as, âI donât stand a chance with her anymore.â

- Be flirtatious and create as much sexual tension between you and her so that she wants to release it with hugging, kissing and sex, rather than being nice or neutral around her and pretending that you only want to be her friend,

The more you make her feel attracted in ways that she always wanted but didn't get, the more her sexual and romantic feelings for you start flooding back.

She then wants to give you a second chance, because it feels right to her.

[image: Most ex women will seem completely uninterested, until you re-attract them]

Before you know it, she's over at your place, or you are at her place and you hug, kiss and have sex.

If you've done a great job at re-attracting her, then the make up sex will feel amazing for her.

She will feel so in love with you again and wanting to give the relationship another chance.

3. Even if your ex is interested, she might not want to show that in case you reject her

Sometimes, a woman will secretly still have feelings for her ex and is hoping that they will get back together.

However, rather than make it obvious to him, the best she might do is give him subtle signs and wait for him to take the lead and make it happen.

For example: She might be open to interacting with him via text, social media or on phone calls, but she won't openly show interest in case he says something like, "Hey, I enjoy chatting sometimes, but I want to make it clear that I'm not interested in a relationship."

Alternatively, she fears that if he realizes how she feels about him, the thrill of the chase will fade away for him (i.e. he sees that he can easily get her back and loses interest in chasing her).

She will then end up feeling rejected, hurt and left behind.

So, rather than her taking a risk and having it backfire on her, your ex may just be waiting to see if you have the courage to make a move.

If you do, she will quickly open up to giving the relationship a second chance.

However, if you don't she may then force herself to move on and find a new man to be in a relationship with.

4. You don't have to wait for weeks or months to start the ex back process

Some guys think that giving a woman lots of space (i.e. using the No Contact Rule and ignoring her for 30 or 60 days) will make her change her mind about the break up.

Yet, that almost never works out and the guy ends up losing her to another man.

The fact is, in most cases, the sooner you start reactivating a woman's feelings the better.

So, don't hesitate.

Strike while the iron is hot (i.e. while she's still single and possibly missing you).

Interact with her over the phone and in person and re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

You can do that by being easy-going and flirtatious so she feels relaxed and happy around you again.

Then, when her defenses are down, initiate a hug, kissing, hook up with her sexually and get her back.

5. She will back out if she senses that the relationship dynamic will be the same or worse than before

What a lot of guys don't know is that the relationship dynamic that makes a woman feel the happiest, most in love and makes her want to stick in a relationship with a guy is one that is balanced. For example: A woman doesn't want a man who is always giving and she's always taking, because that makes her feel more valuable than him.

When she feels that way, she then can't look up to him and respect him and then the idea of submitting to him sexually doesn't appeal to her.

At the same time, she doesn't want to be the one who is always giving and he's the one who is taking, because she then feels taken for granted.

This then leads to her feeling angry, bitter and resentful towards him, which isn't a good basis for a healthy relationship.

So, if you want a second chance with your ex, you need to make sure that you create a relationship balance where you're good to her and she feels motivated to treat you well too.

Only then will she want you back.

6. Most women know that reunited love (and sex) feels amazing

If your ex loved you before and she can see that you truly have transformed yourself into a better man, then she will almost certainly want to give the relationship a second chance.

She will instinctively understand that when a couple improves and changes and becomes even better as a result of the mistakes that were made before, the relationship naturally feels more amazing.

She realizes that she could be so much happier, so much more in love and so much more fulfilled this time around.

As a result, her defenses come down and she opens back up to giving you a second chance.

You can then lead her through the final steps of the ex back process and enjoy the good times ahead.

5 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Want a Second Chance With Her

1. Asking her for another chance because you love her

Those are your feelings not hers.

In fact, she may even get annoyed and see you as being selfish if you talk to her about how much you love her.

She only cares about her feelings right now, not yours.

So, focus on making her have strong sexual and romantic feelings for you during interactions (e.g. by breaking down her defenses with humor, being flirtatious, being more manly).

When you do, she will also appreciate that you still love her and she will open back up to giving you another chance.

2. Asking for another chance at a relationship, even though she isn't attracted

Right now, you have feelings for your ex, but she probably doesn't have feelings for you.

So, if you ask her for a second chance, she will likely refuse.

The truth is, for a relationship to get back together, there needs to be mutual feelings.

It doesn't have to be exactly mutual, but she needs to have some feelings for you (e.g. she is 60% – 70% into the idea of getting back with you).

If you try to get her back when she's at 0% or even 30%, then you're likely going to end up feeling like she's being stubborn and uncooperative.

Yet, she's not.

She's just not motivated to want you back yet.

So, if you want another chance with your ex, you need to reactivate her feelings for you first.

When you do, you will notice how quickly and easily she opens back up to being your girl again.

3. Trying to attract her in ways that don't matter to her

For example: Some of the ways guys will try to win an ex woman back are by:

- Being extra nice to her.
- Promising her that he will do whatever she wants if she gives him another chance.
- Changing his physical appearance to become more attractive to her (e.g. building some muscle, getting new clothes or a different hairstyle).
- Sending her flowers or gifts.
- Writing her a love letter or card.

Yet, that rarely works.

The thing you need to get clear on, is that what matters most to a woman is how you make her feel when she's interacting with you (e.g. happy, interested, attracted, or bored, turned off, annoyed).

When you give her the kind of attraction experience she always wanted from you but didn't get, she will naturally begin to drop her guard and allow herself to open back up to the idea of being in a relationship with you again.

4. Trying to get her back by showing her how committed you are to making it work

Sometimes, a guy assumes that if he shows his ex how serious he is about the relationship (e.g. by going to therapy, staying faithful to her even though they're broken up), she will be impressed and want him back.

Yet, here's the thing:

If she has lost respect and attraction for him, she's not going to really care.

Instead, if she currently perceives him in a negative light, she's likely just going to think that he's desperately trying to impress her and she will feel turned off by him even more.

So, rather than try to impress your ex by showing her how committed you are to making the relationship work, focus instead on reactivating her feelings for you during interactions.

Then, not only will she be happy that youâre serious about getting her back, she will feel equally motivated to make the relationship work too.

5. Trying to get her back on the basis that you are genuinely sorry for your mistakes

Actions speak louder than words.

So, donât bother telling your ex how sorry you are, in the hope that she will want you back.

Of course, itâs perfectly fine to apologize for making mistakes in the relationship with her.

However, one short, sincere apology is enough.

Then, after youâve said youâre sorry, itâs much more important to focus on showing her, via your attitude, actions, behavior and the way you respond to her that youâve leveled up in some of the ways that are important to her.

When she can see that youâre now more of the man she always wanted you to be, it will make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Then, the idea of reconnecting with her feelings for you and giving you a second chance starts to feel like something she may be willing to do.

4 Mistakes Guys Make When an Ex Girlfriend Cuts Off All Contact

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The first thing you need to realize is that, if she cuts off contact, itâs not final and you do still have a chance.

There is always a chance to re-attract a woman and make her have a change of heart about you.

Unfortunately, most guys donât realize that and donât ever find out what youâre about to learn, so they make one or more of the following mistakes and end up decreasing the chances of getting their ex girlfriend back...

1. Waiting for a month and not hearing from her, so he decides to wait even longer

When a woman breaks up with a guy, itâs usually because she no longer feels enough respect, attraction or love to want to be with him.

In other words, sheâs done.

Sheâs over it, she doesnât have enough feelings for him anymore and wants to start moving on.

So, if he doesnât contact her after the break up, a woman usually wonât suddenly feel attracted and in love with him again and then call him, or desperately chase him and try to get him back.

Of course, sometimes a woman will feel curious about why her ex boyfriend isnât contacting her, because he seemed so upset when she broke up with him and in cases like that, she might reach out to him via text.

Yet, all she really wants to find out is if he is still missing her, still interested or hasnât moved on yet.

She can pick up on those details during a text conversation by what he is saying or suggesting, or she can fake interest in him to see if he shows interest back (e.g. âYou knowâsometimes I miss you. Sometimes I regret the break up in a wayâ) or directly ask him (e.g. âSo, do you miss me?â).

Alternatively, she can show some initial interest, get his hopes up and then start talking about her new boyfriend to assess how he reacts.

If he seems upset via text, or suddenly appears to be feeling rejected if sheâs talking to him on the phone or in person, she can then assume that he was still interested in her and hoping to get her back.

Whatever way she goes about it, she will try to find out whether or not heâs still missing her and wanting her back.

Once she gets those details, she can then continue moving on with her life knowing that he still wants her back, but she doesnât want him back.

That way, she doesn't have to feel rejected by the fact that he didn't contact her.

She gets to continue feeling like the dumper and the one who has walked away from the relationship, rather than the dumped one who was rejected and left behind.

At that point, her texts will suddenly come to a stop and she'll go cold.

Her ex is then left wondering, "Why she did stop contacting me?" because she did seem kind of interested initially.

If he then asks her why she has gone cold or won't reply to his texts anymore, she might tell him that she was just reaching out to say hi, or if she had given him the impression that she was possibly interested in him again, she might say something like, "After we texted, I realized that it's best if we just continue going out separate ways. Thank you for helping me realize that. You're a great guy and I'm sure you will find the right woman for you one day. I wish you all the best."

He is then left wondering if, "you're a great guy" means that she does like him and see him as a great guy, if she's just being nice or if she just sees him as a friend.

Essentially, she leaves him hanging and wondering.

In other cases though (I'd estimate about 80% of cases, based on the 1,000s I've worked on over the years), the woman won't EVER contact her ex again.

So, when the guy finally works up the courage to contact her, he finds that she's been seeing a new guy and is happy with him.

Alternatively, she's been enjoying the single life and says that she doesn't want a relationship right now because she's just having fun (i.e. in other words, enjoying having casual sex with different men).

This is why I always recommend that guys stop making the classic mistake of waiting and waiting for a woman to make all the moves.

Women rarely try to get an ex back that they have dumped!

You've got to realize that.

So, if you actually want your ex girlfriend back, don't just sit around waiting and hoping for her to suddenly change her mind about being in contact with you.

She might change her mind and contact you, but there's a high chance she won't and you will never hear from her again, unless you contact her and she actually replies.

This is why, if you want her back, you will need to build up the courage to make it happen, rather than just waiting and hoping that she does it for you.

Another mistake that other guys make in situations like yours is

2. Using the last remaining way to contact her (e.g. email) to ask her why she has cut off contact

Women hate it when guys send emotional emails, or try to ask questions after a break up via email.

These days, email is more associated with work, rather than play for most people, so when a woman gets an email, it feels more like work to her than anything else.

That aside, asking a woman why she has cut off contact will rarely, if ever, get you a truthful answer. Why?

She doesn't want to explain things like, "Oh, it's because I'm no longer attracted to you and have dumped you. You became too insecure in the relationship and turned me off."

Why would she want to say those sort of things?

If she did, the guy might get angry at her, annoyed or plead with her to give him a chance, by promising her to be more confident, or by saying that he has realized his mistakes and is already more confident.

She's just not going to want to open that type of conversation with him.

Additionally, if a guy asks a woman why she has cut off contact, she can feel as though he's trying to make her feel guilty for cutting him off.

He's seeking pity and trying to make her feel sorry for him, or feel as though she is going overboard by cutting off all communication.

If she's feeling pissed off with his approach to getting her back, she might even go on to think something like, "How dare he ask me why I've cut off all contact with him! He doesn't own me! After everything he did to ruin the relationship with all of his insecurity and unattractive behavior, he should already know why I don't want anything to do with him anymore. It's just so typical of him to act like he's the victim and try to make me feel as though I'm being a bad person for not wanting to talk to him. Well, I'm not going to let him make me feel guilty for putting myself and my needs first for a change. He had his chance with me and he blew it. I don't owe him anything. I'm not reply to this crap. I'm moving on."

She then continues to ignore him and focuses on finding herself a replacement guy as quickly as possible, so she can have an extra barrier between herself and her ex.

That's women for you.

They can get pretty emotional and angry, especially if they feel as though a man feels entitled to them after being dumped.

Also, as you would know, it's pretty easy for a woman to get laid, or line up a bunch of dates, which is what women usually do to make themselves feel better after a break up, or to create an additional barrier between themselves and their ex.

That way, if she does talk to her ex, she can say, "I've already met someone else and we're seeing each other" or, "I went out recently with the girls and ended up sleeping with a new guy. I can't believe I did it. It was so unlike me. I like being single though. It's a lot of fun" to break her ex's heart and hopefully stop him from seducing her back into a relationship.

This is why, if you don't want to push your ex even further away than she already is, don't make the mistake of asking her why she has cut off contact with you.

Another mistake that other guys make in a situation like yours is

3. Trying to get mutual friends to pass on messages to her

Putting friends, family or coworkers in the uncomfortable, awkward situation where they have to pick sides (i.e. be on his side and help him) to get messages to his ex, is one of the fastest way to convince her that she has to continue cutting him out of her life and moving on.

Unfortunately, some guys just don't care at that point.

They are in such pain from the break up, so heartbroken, so stressed and panicked that they are willing to do anything to get through to her.

Usually, this comes from a fear that she might date, sleep with or get into a relationship with a new guy, before he has the chance to get her back.

Women know this.

So, when an ex guy is trying to get mutual friends (family or coworkers) to pass messages onto her, it not only becomes an uncomfortable situation for the person or people involved, it makes him look desperate.

Women aren't attracted to desperation, so it simply pushes his ex away even more.

Another mistake that other guys make in situations like yours isâ

4. Assuming that there's no way he can get her back now

There is always another way to do something that you haven't tried yet.

I can tell you (from my many years of helping new men get women back, in all sorts of difficult, challenging situations) that getting her back comes down to your mindset and the approach you use with her.

If your mindset is one of feeling hopeless, or assuming that you've tried everything and nothing can work for you because your situation is so different, then you'll get stuck.

Likewise, if feel unworthy of her and your mindset is essentially, *âI messed up too badly. She will never forgive me or want me back,*â then she will pick up on that insecurity and self doubt if you interact with her and she will feel even turned off by you.

This is why, if you are serious about getting her back, then you need to get your mindset and approach right.

The right mindset is one of confidence, worthiness and readiness and the right approach is to focus on attraction.

When you make her feel attracted to you again, everything changes.

She goes from not wanting to communicate with you, to wanting to be around you, hug you, kiss you, have sex with you again and love you.

So, you really have to ask yourself, *âHas the approach that you have been using working?*â

If not, it's time for a new approach.

It's time for a new way.

It's time to get her back, while you still can.

My Ex Has Cut Off All Contact With Me. Now What?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 tips to make her want to communicate with you again and get back with you:

1. Get ready to use the next interaction you have with her to make her feel re-attracted

[image: Get ready to use the next interaction you have with her to make her feel re-attracted]

Just because she has cut off all contact, it doesn't mean it is permanent.

She could become open to communicating with you in the next day, few days or week or so.

If she doesn't, then I'll explain what to do about that later, but for now, let's assume that she will become open to communicating with you again in a week.

In that case, you absolutely must prepare yourself to make the most of that communication, rather than causing her to feel turned off, uninterested or uninspired by her conversation with you.

For example: Imagine that your ex does answer your text or call next week, but as she communicates with you, she senses that you're nervous, unsure of yourself and hesitant.

Women just aren't attracted to that, especially in a guy that they've dumped, so it's not going to inspire her to want to keep talking to you.

That is why you have to prepare yourself to be fully confident and ready to communicate with her in the same kind of way you did when things were good between you and her (i.e. you were together, she attracted to you, loved you, you were happy together).

Come from that place, rather than from a place of insecurity and unworthiness and your communication style will be much more attractive and appealing to her.

One of the ways you can begin preparing yourself to be fully confident, is by replacing the negative thoughts running through your head with positive ones.

For example: If you think, "My ex has cut off all contact with me, so clearly it's a hopeless situation now. She doesn't want anything to do with me anymore. I'm only be kidding myself if I believe that she could open back up to me again," it's not going to make you feel confident about getting her back.

Instead, it's almost certainly going to make you feel discouraged and dejected, which will then cause you to feel depressed and lost without her.

It might also cause you to feel unworthy of her now, nervous about talking to her and afraid that she will reject you again.

As a result, when you do have an interaction with your ex and she picks up on your insecurity, self doubt and fear, she's going to feel turned off by you.

She will then close herself off and want to avoid any communication with you, which might lead to you thinking that you were right to believe you could never get another chance with her.

Then, you're on your own.

She's gone and you feel hopeless about the situation.

You might even feel turned off about the idea of being with other women, because you're so hurt by the break up and only want her or nothing.

That can lead to months of loneliness, while she happily moves on and enjoys her life without you.

Don't go down that path.

Choose the path of confidence, self-belief and possibilities, rather than insecure, doubt and negativity.

For example: Start telling yourself things like, â€œYes, it's true that she has cut off all contact with me for now, but that doesn't mean I can't get her back. I can. I can change my approach with her and make her feel attracted in new and interesting ways. All of a sudden, she will feel surges of sexual and romantic attraction for me and as a result, she will be the one wanting to talk on the phone and meet up in person. She will feel drawn to me again and I can then guide her back into a relationship. The relationship will be even better than the one we had before because I'm going to understand where I went wrong, make some adjustments and create a new relationship dynamic between her and I that makes us both feel happy, alive and lucky to be together.â€

When you think that way, the way you carry yourself automatically changes.

You become more confident and self assured.

You feel good about yourself.

You feel alive, inspired and motivated.

Additionally, if you improve your understanding of how to attract her, you start believing in your attractiveness and value to your ex and to other women as well.

As a result, it comes through in the way you talk, act, think and behave and you naturally seem to be a more attractive man to your ex and to women in general.

When you interact with her, she realizes that she still has feelings for you and isn't fully over you, so she stops wanting to cut off all contact and instead, wants to open up and explore what she is feeling for you now.

So,

2. Give her a week to contact you and if she doesn't, just go ahead and contact her

[image: Give her a week to contact you and if she doesn't, go ahead and contact her]

Don't give her any longer than a week though.

A week is more than enough time to prove the point that you're not being needy, desperate and chasing her.

These days, so many guys make the mistake of giving their ex a lot of space (e.g. 30 to 60 days) before contacting her.

Then, when he eventually contacts her, she either doesn't respond, blocks him or lets him know that she has moved on and is happy with someone else now.

So, don't make the mistake of sitting around for weeks or months hoping that she will eventually text or call you.

That can happen in some cases, but a woman will usually only contact her ex to find out if heâs still missing her and wanting her back.

When she finds that out, she then stops contacting him again and continues moving on with her life.

Essentially, she just wanted to have the peace of mind that comes with knowing that he still wants her back, rather than never knowing why he stopped contacting her and potentially assuming it was because he didnât care.

So, just give your ex a week to contact you and if she doesnât, go ahead and contact her.

If you try to call her and she doesnât answer, you can text her something like this, *âHey, I know you donât want to talk to me right now and I respect that. However, I really need to ask you something quick over the phone, so Iâm going to call you in 10 minutes time. Donât worry, itâs nothing serious. Just something quick I want to ask you. Talk to you in 10.*â

Then, give her a call 10 minutes later.

If she doesnât answer, donât keep calling and calling and end up coming across as needy and desperate.

Instead, leave it for a day or two and then try to call her again.

If she still doesnât answer your call, text her this, *âHey, I hope youâre having a good day. I tried calling you a few days ago to ask you something quick, but I guess you must have been busy. No problem. I might try to get hold of you some other time so I can ask you this question.*â

She then might text you back and ask, *âWhat do you want to ask me? Just text it to me now.*â

Whatever you do though, donât text her back though.

You have to call her.

Why?

Itâs so much easier to make her feel attracted on a phone call when she hears your voice, senses your confidence and smiles or laughs when you make her feel attracted.

On the other hand, itâs so easy for her to continue being cold or distant if you just texts her.

So, if she insists that you text her, just respond with something like, *âWhat I need to ask you can only be done over the phone.*â

In most cases, a woman will be curious enough about what you want to ask her and as a result, she will then answer your call.

BTW: What you want to ask her is to meet up with you in person, but donât make the mistake of saying that to her before youâve sparked some of her feelings for you first.

If you do, she might get angry with you and end the call and then getting her to talk to you again will be a lot more difficult the second time around.

So, when you get her on the phone, start off by using some humor to get her smiling, laughing and feeling happy that she agreed to talk to you again.

Then, when she seems relaxed and open again and is possibly even saying things like, *âI really didnât want to talk to you again, but Iâm glad I did,*â get her to agree to catch up with you in person.

Tell her that is what you wanted to ask her, but you wanted to ask her over the phone, because if you asked her via text, she would have almost certainly said no.

You can also add in some humor like (said in a playful, joking tone of voice), â€œYouâ€™re so much nicer on the phoneâ€ if it fits the situation.

Essentially, just make sure that you are confident enough to say things like that to her, rather than holding back and seeming nervous or unsure of yourself as a result.

Let her experience your confidence and feel it, so she can feel attracted and realize that she still does have some feelings for you.

Then, when you meet up in person, build on her feelings of attraction for you, get to a hug and kiss and get her back.

By the way!

3. If she doesnâ€™t ever answer or respond, you will have to attract her indirectly

[image: If she doesnâ€™t ever answer or respond, you will have to attract her indirectly]

In some cases, an ex woman will make it very difficult for an ex to get in touch with her (e.g. she will ignore his texts, refuse to answer any of his calls or just block his number), so the only option in a case like that is to attract her indirectly (i.e. via your social media posts).

Via your social media profiles (e.g. Instagram and Facebook), you need to let her see that you are confident, happy and enjoying life without her.

Not by yourself though.

The photos (or videos) that you post to your social media profiles need to show you around other people looking confident, happy and included.

If you donâ€™t have a profile, make one.

If you donâ€™t normally post like that, start doing it.

It doesnâ€™t matter if it is out of the ordinary for you.

You are technically a single man now and in her mind, are supposed to be living your life without her.

So, donâ€™t be afraid to do what will attract her from a distance, by posting up photos or videos of yourself having fun with other people.

How will doing that help get her back?

It shows her that you arenâ€™t needy of her, which actually makes her feel subtly rejected and as though she no longer has the power over you that she once had.

It also makes her feel respect for you, for having the emotional strength to get on with enjoying your life so soon after being dumped and heartbroken.

It also makes her curious as to why you feel so confident and happy all of a sudden.

Was she dragging you down, or holding you back?

Are you happier without her?

Are you over her now?

These are questions that cause a woman to toss and turn at night and lose sleep.

You are on her mind, she's feeling drawn to you again and you don't seem to be wanting her back.

So, to make herself feel better, she will contact you to see if she can find out whether or not you miss her and want her back.

By the way!

If your ex has unfriended you on Facebook or doesn't follow you on Instagram, simply post the pictures as a public so anyone can see them.

Don't worry, she will check up on you at some point.

She might do it every day, once every few days, once a week, or she might try to avoid looking at your profiles for a couple of weeks.

Yet, sooner or later, she is going to check and when she sees you looking confident, happy and enjoying life without her (around other people, not on your own), she is going to feel compelled to contact you.

A woman will usually then send a simply text to say Hi or, Hey as a way of opening up the lines of communication again.

She might text more, but if you get at least get something from her, then it's a sign that she is feeling left behind, rejected and hurt and is trying to find out if you still want her back.

You then need to make sure that you don't give her the satisfaction or peace of mind that she is seeking.

Just flirt with her, show some interest, but don't let her sense that you've been waiting and hoping for her to call or text, so you can get her back.

Instead, keep things like and if you can, get her on a phone call and make her feel attracted to the new and improved you.

Then, arrange to catch up in person to say hi and then get her back.

4. When you do talk again, don't use the same old approach to communication that she became bored of, or turned off by in the relationship

[image: When you do talk again, don't use the same old approach to communication that she became bored of, or turned off by in the relationship]

If you were too nice to her leading up to the break up, or were insecure, unsure of yourself and gave her too much power, make sure that you don't come across in that way when you talk to her again.

If she senses that you haven't changed, then she's not going to be interested in getting back into a relationship that will most likely end up in a break up again.

This is why you need to make sure that you fully prepare yourself to use a different approach, so you can re-attract her and successfully get her back.

If you're not sure what to do differently and end up feeling stuck while talking to her, here are some questions you can ask yourself!

- Am I making her feel feminine and girly and therefore turned on and attracted, or am I making her feel like we're just friends or buddies and therefore uninspired about the idea of getting back with me? If you're making her feel as though you and her are just like friends now, you need to step up your masculine approach to the conversation (e.g. be more manly in the way you talk, have a more manly vibe, be more assertive, stop looking at her as your equal in terms of dominance and realize that she wants to feel less dominant than you, think of her as a cute, young woman who likes you and that you're trying to seduce and sleep with, rather than an ex who doesn't like you, or an ex that you're not worthy of anymore).
- Am I making her laugh, smile and feel glad that she's in contact with me again, or am I making her feel stressed, tense and regretting her decision to talk to me? If you're making her feel tense, have the courage to add in some humor, or more humor to the conversation. Have the courage to be more lighthearted about things, rather than following her serious, distant vibe and feeling like you're not allowed to joke around with her.
- Am I maintaining my confidence regardless of what she's saying or doing to make me feel unsure of myself, or am I feeling nervous, insecure and unsure and turning her off as a result? Regardless of what she says, you have to maintain belief in yourself as being more than worthy of her, while also being good to her, respectful and charming. Don't doubt yourself for a second.

When you use a new, more attractive approach with her during the interaction, she will realize that things really would be different (in a good way) if you and her got back together.

She wouldn't be getting back into a relationship that was going to be the same as before.

Instead, she would get to feel a whole new level of attraction, love and respect for you.

Additionally, because you are using the new approach already, she's going to be feeling some of that new respect, attraction and love for you.

Therefore, the idea of cutting off contact with you isn't going to feel right to her.

She's going to want to explore her new feelings for you.

She knows that if she doesn't, she's going to regret it and miss you a lot now.

As a result, it becomes very difficult for her to hold onto her previous negative feelings about you and the relationship.

Of course, she might initially act like she still doesn't really want to have any contact with you, but once her sexual and romantic feelings for you have been reawakened, her guard will come down whether she likes it or not, or whether she admits it or not.

It then becomes a lot easier for you to get her back, because she's open to it and wanting it.

4 Mistakes to Avoid if Your Ex Doesn't Believe in Second Chances

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It is possible to make a woman change her mind and want to give her ex man another chance, even if she had said to him, â€œI don't believe in second chances.â€

She will change her mind if he re-attracts her and makes her feel like she is losing him, rather than he is losing her.

Yet, a lot of guys don't know that, don't know how to do it, or aren't willing to risk making her feel that way.

As a result, they don't get her back.

Instead, a guy will often use of the following approaches, which just pushes a woman like that further away:

1. Trying to discuss your way back into a relationship with her

[image: Trying to discuss his way back into a relationship with her]

Having a discussion with an ex woman and trying to get her to see your point of view (i.e. how much you love her, how the relationship used to be good, how you can make things work, that you know where you were going wrong and just want a chance to show that to her) seems like the logical thing to do, right?

Yes, it's logical, but it doesn't work on a woman who isn't attracted, or doesn't believe in second chances and wants to continue moving on.

Why?

When a woman doesn't feel attracted to you anymore, she's just not going to feel motivated to want to discuss the relationship and work things out with you.

To her, you are an ex that she no longer feels drawn to and instead, feels like what you and her had is over now.

If she was feeling attracted to you, then it would be a different story altogether, but if she isn't, then no matter what you say to her, or how convincing you think your arguments are when you talk to her, she's most-likely just going to keep saying, â€œNo.â€

So, rather than wasting your time and energy trying to convince her and then getting rejected, just focus instead on doing what works on women.

What works is reactivating her feelings.

In other words, making her feel a renewed sense of respect and sexual attraction for you.

Some of the ways you can do that are by:

- Using humor to break down her walls and get her to smile, laugh and feel good when talking to you.
- Using flirting to create sexual tension between you and her, so she feels drawn to you in that way.

- Remaining totally confident when talking to her, even if she is trying to make you feel insecure or unwanted based on what she is saying.

When you approach interactions in a way that awakens feelings of attraction inside of her, then she starts to feel as though what you and her had isn't over.

She realizes that she does want to give you another chance and best of all, you're not trying to push her to do it.

Instead, she wants to do it.

She wants to give the relationship another chance.

So, just focus on attraction and forget the discussions where you try to convince her to give you another chance.

Another mistake to avoid making if you want to get a second chance with your ex is that

2. Apologizing over and over, which is what previous guys would have done

[image: Apologizing over and over, which is what previous guys would have done]

Your ex is almost certainly the kind of woman who is used to being able to gain power over a boyfriend, by saying that she doesn't give second chances.

It's just her style.

She makes guys feel lucky to be with her, she plays hard to get, she seems unsure about her feelings all the time and tries to make a guy feel like he has to jump through loads of hoops to please her.

In the case of her saying something like, "I don't give second chances" it can sometimes result in her ex boyfriend chasing after her, being extra nice and sweet and even making himself available to her 24/7 (e.g. if she needs anything, wants to talk to someone, needs him to help her with something) as a way of hopefully winning her back.

[image: Previous boyfriends will have tried sucking up to her and it didn't work]

A woman like that simply uses her ex boyfriend to her heart's content and then moves on when she's had enough of him, or no longer needs him.

This then leaves him feeling as though he's been dumped twice, instead of just once.

His heart feels broken and feels lost without her.

He might also feel a bit angry, bitter or revengeful at her for using him the way she did.

Either way, she doesn't feel motivated to get back with him because he's unable to handle her usual games and is acting like pretty much every other boyfriend she's dumped, or guy she has rejected.

So, don't play into her games by apologizing over and over and trying to suck up to her to get another chance.

Instead, just give her one brief, sincere apology for any mistakes you might have made, in a calm, confident and sincere manner and then show her via your actions, behavior, vibe and the way you respond to her from now on that you have changed.

For example: You no longer panic or worry if she isn't showing you obvious signs of interest, or seems to be rejecting you.

You are able to remain confident in your attractiveness and value to her, without needing her to reassure you.

Likewise, you no longer put yourself in a position of begging, pleading or lowering yourself to hopefully gain some pity from her and get another chance.

Instead, you show respect to her, but you also show respect to yourself by believing in yourself, knowing that you're good enough for her and behaving accordingly.

When she realizes you're not handing over your power to her like the other guys have done in her past, she will automatically become interested in you again.

After all, a woman like her will have a very difficult time finding a guy who is emotionally strong enough not to crumble under her pressure (e.g. her subtle rejections, her moods, her demands).

If she can see that you've leveled up as a man and can now handle a woman like her, she will realize that she is going to miss you and want you back.

As a result, she will open up to being with you again to see what happens (i.e. are you going to be able to continue handling her with confidence, or will she steamroll you again with her confident, independent personality?).

3. Using the same old approach to attraction that she became bored of in the relationship

[image: Using the same old approach to attraction that she became bored of in the relationship]

It's only natural that if you keep using the same approach with your ex that you've been using since the break up (e.g. being too nice and sweet with her, letting her get her way all the time, feeling afraid to be assertive with her, trying to convince her to see things your way, being afraid to flirt with her, being reluctant to touch her in case she doesn't like it), she is going to continue feeling turned off by you.

Likewise, if you use the same kind of approach that caused her to become bored in the relationship, she's not going to feel inspired about the idea of getting back with you.

Instead, she will almost certainly keep reminding you that she doesn't believe in second chances and will begin moving on without you.

That's why you need to try something new while you still can.

Do something completely different and unexpected that she will really like and feel drawn to.

For example:

- If you were too nice in the relationship, you need to start bringing out more of your bad boy side, while still being a good guy to her and treating her well.
- If you were too predictable and boring to her, you need to start being more of a challenge.
- If you were too neutral in your behavior (i.e. treated her more like a buddy), you need to start flirting with her and making her feel girly in comparison to your masculine energy, approach, behavior, conversation style and vibe.

- If you took her for granted and stopped making her feel appreciated, you need to tell her some of the things that you love and appreciate about her, but don't forget to continue behaving in the ways that initially attracted her to you (e.g. you being a bit of a bad boy, a challenge, she felt the need to impress you). Don't make the mistake of just being nice, appreciative, grateful, loving and so on. Women aren't attracted to really nice guys, especially after they've dumped him. So, make sure that if you are going to show her appreciation, you approach it in a balanced way.
- If you would previously get jealous or insecure over little things, it's no longer an issue for you. You are so much more confident and secure in yourself now that she can sense it a mile away.

When you attract her in ways that she wasn't expecting from you, it shocks her (in a good way) and causes her to realize that you aren't so bad after all.

Additionally, she realizes that if she doesn't give you another chance, another woman will happily take you and she will then be left behind feeling rejected by you.

So, rather than feeling that rejection and the pain of losing you when she is feeling attracted to you again, she opens up and wants to give you another chance.

4. Trying hard to understand her, rather than just attracting her

Women don't want an ex guy trying to be her therapist, who digs into her childhood issues, or baggage from previous relationships to hopefully work out why she is breaking up with him.

Likewise, she also doesn't want a guy (that she has broken up with), trying to get her to explain all of her reasons for being unhappy with him, or reasons for breaking up with him.

Why?

She fears that he will then be in the position to say, "Well, if you give me a chance, I will change that. I promise."

Instead, what she wants to see is that you understand where you've been going wrong, have already made adjustments and changes and as a result, she now feels so much more attracted to you when she interacts with you.

That's what she wants.

She doesn't want long, drawn out, emotionally draining discussions.

She doesn't want to explain her reasons in details.

She just wants to feel attracted and in love.

You can make her feel attracted and in love, but just make sure that you are willing to try a different approach with her.

If you use the same old approach to attraction that she got bored of, then she's just going to keep believing that she doesn't give second chances.

As a result, she will keep moving on without you.

How to Get Another Chance With an Ex Who Doesn't Believe in Second Chances

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 things you can do:

1. Understand that women often say one thing and do the complete opposite, when it comes to men and relationships

[image: Understand that women often say one thing and do the complete opposite, when it comes to men and relationships]

It's just their nature.

For example: A woman will say that she wants a nice guy, who is sweet and caring, but then lust after a bad boy who doesn't care about her and only wants to use her for sex.

Alternatively, a guy will be talking to a woman in a bar and she might say something like, "I just want you to know that there's no way I would ever have sex on the first night or date with a guy. I'm not like that," only for her to hook up with him sexually later on that night.

Another examples is where a woman will say that she doesn't give out her phone number to guys at bars, but then she gives her number to him when he asks.

Then, there is also the woman who breaks up with a boyfriend and says, "I will never, ever change my mind about leaving you. It's over between us and the sooner you accept it the better, because I'm not getting back with you again! I'm the sort of woman who doesn't believe in second chances. I never give second chances" only to find herself in a relationship with him again days or weeks later and feeling more in love and more devoted to him than ever before.

So, what makes a woman say one thing and then do the complete opposite of that?

Attraction.

Attraction changes everything.

When a guy triggers a woman's sexual and romantic feelings for him during interactions, everything she previously said goes flying out the window.

Not because she was lying before (most women wholeheartedly believe what they say when they say it), but because he managed to changed her feelings for him, so what said no longer applies.

It's just how women are.

Men on the other hand, tend to say what they mean and do what they say.

That's our nature.

Yet, women tend to go with how they feel, even if that means changing their mind after making a seemingly very serious statement like, "I don't believe in second chances."

What makes her change her mind is when you change how she feels and what you need to change about how she feels, is how attracted she is to you.

How much attraction a woman feels for you is largely under your control, because it's based on she feels in response to your behavior, attitude, conversation, tone, vibe and actions.

In other words, she reacts to who you are and if you are being attractive when you interact with her, she will feel attracted.

If you make her feel attracted enough, she will then begin to feel compelled to go back on what she said, change her mind and give you another chance, or at least open up to it and see how it goes.

So, if you want your ex back, don't give up because of what she's currently saying to you, or has recently said about herself (i.e. she doesn't give second chances).

Instead, just use any interactions you have with her, to re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by

- Making her laugh, smile and feel good to be interacting with you again, rather than making interactions feel stressful, or annoying for her by focusing on her decision to give you a second chance. She will go with how she feels and if she feels attracted, she will open up to it. If not, she will remain closed.
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension between you, rather than being too serious and making the interactions feel boring and unnecessary, or being too friendly and making her feel like she only sees you as a friend now.
- Being confident and self-assured with her, regardless of what she says or does to make you feel as though she would never give you a second chance.
- Having the balls and social intelligence to use humor when she is being bitchy or cold, while also making her warm back up to you by being a good guy about it (e.g. She says, "I don't believe in second chances" and you laugh and confidently, calmly and lightheartedly say, "Okay, but you believe in third chances, right? We can skip over the second chance and just go to third base" and have a laugh with her).
- Showing her via your attitude, behavior and actions that you've leveled up as a man and are no longer the same guy she broke up with (e.g. you're no longer insecure like you used to be, you're more manly in how you express your emotions or points of view, your behavior is more manly, you seem to know how to make her feel attracted and turned on in new ways as you talk to her).

When you do that, her feelings change and what she previously said about being someone who doesn't believe in second chances, suddenly becomes less important to her.

She realizes that maybe there are times when she can make an exception and give a guy a second chance.

After all, if she doesn't give you a second chance and she's feeling attracted and drawn to you, then she's going to miss you.

If she misses you, wants you back and then sees that you move on without her and are happy with another woman, she will feel like the one who has been left behind.

As a result, she opens back to you and gives you another chance, rather than having to experience the pain and regret that will come with a rejection like that.

Another thing you can do to get another chance with an ex who doesn't believe in second chances is

2. Stop making her feel like you want a second chance

[image: Stop making her feel like you want a second chance]

If your ex currently believes that she is against giving second chances, then she won't respond well if you try to convince her to give you one (i.e. give her reasons why she should).

A lot of guys don't realize this until it's too late.

As a result, a guy will often make the mistake of:

- Begging and pleading with her to change her mind. He then comes across as desperate, emotionally weak and needy, which then turns her off even more.
- Promising her that he will change and become the man she wants him to be, if she will just give him one more chance. In most cases, a woman doesn't believe he can change, or even knows how to change, so she refuses.
- Asking her to tell him what it will take for her to give him a second chance. This causes a woman to feel stressed, repelled and turned off because the guy needs her help to understand how to be a more desirable man. She doesn't want to teach him and be his mentor. She wants him to understand how to be a desirable man, or learn it and then do it. If he needs her to tell him, then she will avoid telling him because she doesn't want him following her instructions like a lost puppy. She wants a man who knows how to be attractive and desirable and then just gets on with doing it, so she can get on with being a happy, feminine woman who is in love with her man, rather than a mentor.
- Showering her with gifts, flowers or attention. A woman doesn't fall in love with a guy because of what he can buy for her, but rather for how he makes her feel when she's with him. For example: A guy can buy her a huge ring and she can still feel turned off and want to leave him, if he is insecure, needy and fairly clueless about how to attract her naturally (i.e. with his confidence, masculine energy).
- Sending her a long series of text messages, letters or emails, where he pours his heart out and tells her how much she means to him. Yet, the woman doesn't care about his feelings anymore because she has broken up with him. Due to that, she is only focused on how she feels and what she wants. She will only want him back if he reactivates her feelings for him. His feelings for her are irrelevant prior to that.

How about you?

Can you relate to any of the mistakes above?

If so, don't worry about – you can still recover the situation.

What's most important now and what will ensure the highest chance of success at getting her back, is for you to change your approach with her from today onwards.

For example: Don't push for a second chance and instead, just focus on making her feel attracted and drawn to you when you next interact with her.

How?

Imagine that you're on a phone call or video call with your ex and she says something like, â€œLook, I think it's pointless to keep talking to each other. What we had is over and nothing is going to change that.â€

Rather than getting upset, feeling insecure or starting to panic like you may have done in the past, respond by saying something like, “Hey, I know I’ve been trying to convince you to give me another chance, but I realize now that it’s not going to happen. Ever. It’s over between us. So, I want you to know I accept your decision. However, that doesn’t mean we can’t be mature adults about the whole thing and still be friends, right? We can at least be friends, even though we’re never getting back together.”

By saying something like that to her, she can begin to relax her guard because and breathe a sigh of relief, because you’re not going to be pressuring her for a second chance anymore.

As a result, she will more than likely agree to being friends, which is exactly what you want.

Why?

Simple.

You can then use the friendship to build on her feelings of attraction and as a result, make her feel like she is missing you and wants to see you and potentially hook up with you.

Whatever she does, you’re always on her mind.

She can’t seem to forget about you.

Why?

Attraction.

When a woman is attracted to you, her focus will be on you.

Natural chemicals such as dopamine, oxytocin begin to activate in her brain and cause her to feel good about talking to you.

They also cause her to want to be close to you physically, or at least in your proximity, which results in her being more likely to say yes to catching up in person.

Of course, as long as you suggest catching up in a way that continues to make her feel attracted (i.e. say it with confidence, rather than seeming insecure, desperate, worried about being rejected, giving her too much power in the conversation, etc).

Another thing you can do to get another chance with an ex who doesn’t believe in second chances is a|

3. Make her feel like she’s got something to lose

[image: Make her feel like she’s got something to lose]

At the moment, you are the one who feels like you’ve got something to lose.

She is doing fine and will probably continue to do fine without you.

That is, until you make her feel like she is the one who’s got something to lose.

How?

Re-attract her to make you want you again and then pull away.

Give her a few days of space and let her miss you and realize that she still has feelings for you and what you and her had, isn’t over.

For example: Imagine that you’re on a phone or video call with your ex.

Initially, she might try to put you off by being cold, distant and by saying things like,

â"Hhhhhâ"|why are you calling me? I thought I made myself clear that Iâ"m not interested in getting back with you. Itâ"s over. I donâ"t believe in second chances. I told you that.â"

Regardless of what she says or does to put you off, the most important thing is for you to maintain your confidence with her.

Confidence is attractive women and whatâ"s even more attractive, is confidence under pressure.

When you can maintain confidence in your attractiveness and value to her, or your ability to attract her as you talk to her, she will sense that and it will naturally make her feel attracted to you.

On the other hand, if she senses that you doubt your attractiveness, value or ability to attract her and as a result, are insecure, she will naturally feel repelled and turned off.

In a relationship, a woman will put up with that for a while because itâ"s often a huge inconvenience to go through with an actual break up and it can end up being quite stressful (e.g. with the deep and meaningful conversations, the post break up texts, etc).

Yet, after a woman has dumped a guy, she usually has close to zero tolerance for insecure behavior.

If her ex is being insecure, sheâ"s going to sense that, feel turned off and repelled and feel more certain about her decision to have broken up with him.

So, make sure that you maintain confidence no matter what she says or does.

To amplify her attraction, you should also add in some humor to get her smiling, laughing and feeling good when talking to you, especially if she is trying to put you off by being cold, distant, rude or difficult to talk to.

When you get her to crack a smile and laugh, it begins to get rid of some of the negative feelings she may have been experiencing when she initially heard your voice.

Then, as she starts to relax and seems happy to be talking to you, have the courage to throw in some flirting to create sexual tension between you and her.

When you do that, she naturally feels sexual desire for you again and as a result, she realizes that her feelings for you arenâ"t dead.

She then begins to feel compelled to catch up with you and potentially hook up again to see how she feels afterwards.

If she doesnâ"t immediately suggest it to you, she will be forced to think about it when sheâ"s alone and missing you.

She will imagine herself meeting up with you, feeling attracted, hooking up and enjoying it.

She might also imagine herself just trying to forget about you and move on, but then seeing you with a new woman and regretting not giving you a second chance.

All of a sudden, she realizes that she has something to lose now and as a result, she opens up to seeing you before itâ"s too late (i.e. you change your mind, you attract a new woman and end up liking her more).

Another thing you can do to get another chance with an ex who doesnâ"t believe in second chances isâ"!

4. Let her see how much youâ"ve changed, so she can feel differently about you

[image: Let her see how much youâ"ve changed, so she can feel differently about you]

Itâ€™s so important that you get to an in person meet up, so she can experience the new and improved you for herself and more importantly, realize that she now feels a lot differently around you (i.e. more attracted, more challenged (in a good way), more excited, more aroused).

Essentially, you need to allow her to realize that the feelings she wasnâ€™t getting in the relationship (e.g. feeling proud to be your girlfriend, feeling girly in comparison to your masculine approach, feeling safe and protected because youâ€™re so emotionally strong, feeling respect for you because you can handle her even when sheâ€™s being moody) are now available to her because youâ€™ve changed.

What needs to be changed, adjusted or improved will be based on why she really broke up with you. For example: Some of the changes she might want to see in you are thatâ€™!

- Youâ€™re a lot more confident and self-assured now and as a result, you donâ€™t feel the need to be clingy or jealous anymore. You donâ€™t see other guys as competition for her. You see yourself as the man. Yet, at the same time, youâ€™re not being arrogant about it. Youâ€™re confident, cool and composed about it. Youâ€™re more of a challenge now and as a result, you naturally make her feel like she needs to put in some effort to impress you to maintain your interest in her. Itâ€™s no longer a one-sided relationship where you are trying to win over more of her love and attraction. Now she feels the need to use her charms (e.g. being girly, being loving and warm, giggling at your jokes, touching you in a sweet, affectionate way, making you feel manly around her) on you to make you want her more.
- Youâ€™re still a good guy who is loving and attentive, but you no longer allow her control you with her dominant personality and push you around like she used to. It doesnâ€™t matter how cold, moody or irritable she is being, you are now able to maintain your cool, remain confident and bring a loving, lighthearted vibe into the interaction. As a result, her ice melts and she always finds herself warming back up to you, rather than continuing to be cold. She also feels silly for being such a pain in the butt and then begins trying to be less moody and more loving, warm and in control of her emotions around you.
- You have a clear purpose for your life that includes real goals, ambitions and dreams and are working towards achieving those things with or without her. Yet, at the same time, you also make her feel wanted, loved and appreciated. Your life isnâ€™t all about her anymore, or all about your work. Youâ€™re more balanced now.
- Youâ€™re more emotionally mature now and as a result, you and her are more in sync with each other than you were before.
- When she experiences the right changes, adjustments or improvements in you, she will naturally feel renewed respect and attraction for you.

She will suddenly stop feeling as though youâ€™re a turn off, or canâ€™t be the kind of man she wants.

Instead, she will realize that you now make her feel differently (in a good way) and if she doesnâ€™t give you a second chance, sheâ€™s going to regret it.

Should I Act Busy When My Ex Girlfriend Calls Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Not necessarily.

Here are 5 possible reactions from her if you act like you're busy when she calls you:

1. She sees right through it and starts playing hard to get in return

[image: She sees right through it and starts playing hard to get in return]

If your ex girlfriend knows you even a little bit (most likely a lot), she will know how you think, or have a good idea how and why you behave in certain ways.

So, if you act busy when she calls you, she might assume that you're just playing hard to get to hopefully make her chase after you even more, or to make her suffer for breaking up with you or make her jealous and begin wondering what you're up to.

Essentially, she might assume that you're playing games with her and then possibly feel quite annoyed at you for trying to manipulate her in that way.

As a result, it can lead to her cutting off all contact with you (i.e. she stops calling and texting you. Eventually, if you don't try to contact her, she might unfriend you on social media), to punish you for playing mind games with her.

It then becomes more difficult for you to get her back, because she's not taking your calls or respond to your emails or messages.

So, don't let that happen to you.

If you want her back, the best approach is to be a man about it (i.e. answer her call, make her feel very attracted to you on the call, make her smile and laugh and feel happy that she took the chance to call you).

Another possible reaction from her if you act busy when she calls is that

2. She feels rejected and then tries to move on quicker than you, to make herself feel better

[image: She feels rejected and then tries to move on quicker than you, to make herself feel better]

For some women, calling an ex is a big deal because she's putting herself on the line and risking being rejected by him.

So, if he acts busy, rather than make her chase after him and want him more, she might just take it as a sign that he no longer has feelings for her and has been getting over her and moving on.

She then forces herself to get over him and move on, before he hurts her further by letting he know that he has met a new girl and is happy.

If that happens, then she will feel like the one who got dumped and left behind.

So, she will begin trying to move on before he does.

For example: She might

- Get on an online dating site, or use an app like Tinder, Hinge or Bumble where she can instantly start meeting guys and then line up some dates.
- Go out with her single friends to clubs, bars or private house parties and hook up with guys she meets there.
- Go on dates with men that have been interested in her all along (e.g. a guy at work or university, an ex, a guy friend who has been hanging around waiting for a chance with her, a random guy that she met while in the relationship, but only ever added as a friend on social media because she didn't want to cheat).

As you would know, it's pretty easy for women to get laid.

So, if she happens to open herself up to meeting guys, or going on dates and ends up sleeping with a guy and then really liking him, you can suddenly be seen as Plan B for her, or a back up guy in case she ever feels lonely.

Yet, if her new relationship goes well and she starts falling in love with the guy, you can suddenly be looked at as an unwanted ex, even though she was calling you and trying to get you back a few weeks prior.

So many guys experience that kind of thing, which is why I don't recommend that you act busy, or act anything when your ex calls.

If your aim is to get your ex girlfriend back, use an approach that makes her feel happy about giving you another chance.

She will feel that way when you focus on reactivating her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you when you interact with her.

On the other hand, if you play games with her, you might end up causing her to play games with you, which can result in her deciding to hook up with a new man and move on to get revenge on you for how you made her feel.

Another possible reaction from her is that

3. She feels impressed that you're no longer being needy and desperate

[image: She feels impressed that you're no longer being needy and desperate]

This will apply if a guy got broken up with because he became too emotionally dependent on girlfriend, which resulted in him being needy, jealous and clingy in the relationship (e.g. needing her to text with him all the time, needing a lot of hugs or affection to feel wanted and sulking if he didn't get it, checking her phone to see if she was messaging anyone else, feeling jealous about her past boyfriends, or about any male friends who she still knew, not wanting her to spend time with anyone else unless he was there).

In a relationship like that, a woman will feel smothered by her boyfriend's emotional weakness and neediness, which will then result in her losing a lot of respect and attraction for him.

Eventually, she will feel compelled to break up with him, even if it hurts her (i.e. because she did really love him, but didn't like who he eventually became).

In a case like that, if he doesn't respond to her calls right away, she might take it as a sign that he's improved himself since the break up and has become a more emotionally secure and independent.

She may then feel enough curiosity to wait until he does respond, to see if he really has changed in the ways that sheâs been hoping for.

If he contacts her (e.g. later that day, the next day, or the day after) and she senses that the changes could be genuine (i.e. he is more confident and emotionally independent now), she will start to feel some renewed respect and attraction for him, which will cause her to open up to meeting up with him in person.

As a result, it will become possible for him to get her back.

On the other hand, if she talks to him and realizes that he was only putting on an act (i.e. by acting busy, or ignoring her calls) and is still the same as before, she will lose even more respect for him. She will then want to try to block him out of her life and move on faster, so she can stop thinking about him and focus on a new guy.

So, while acting busy can work in some cases, at the end of the day, you still need to be able to follow through with the changes that she is hoping to see in you to decide to give you another chance. If itâs all just an act, she will be able to sense that and will lose interest.

Another possible reaction if you act busyâ!

4. She says that she will call back later because youâre busy, but is then turned off by how you react after that

[image: She says that she will call back later because youâre busy, but is then turned off by how you react after that]

A woman usually wonât mind if her ex (who she dumped and doesn't really want to be with anymore) is busy when she calls him and will simply decide to call back at a more convenient time.

Yet, if she says something like, âOkay, fineâ! Iâll call you another time. Youâre obviously too busy to talk to me,â a guy might panic and worry that she wonât call back and will possibly ignore his calls if he tries to follow up.

As a result, he might rush and say, âNo! Please donât go! Itâs fine. We can talk now. Iâd rather talk to you.â

She might then say, âNo. You do what youâre doing. Weâll talk laterâ and then hang up.

If he then desperately starts calling her, or texting her to apologize and try to have a conversation with her, she will start looking at him as being desperate.

As you may know, desperation is never attractive to women (unless the woman is a psycho and she wants to manipulate a guy like a victim. Those women are the 1%, not the 99%).

So, regardless of what a woman says or does, you should never become desperate because it is not attractive and therefore, will push her away further.

A lot of guys donât realize that, or canât control themselves under pressure (i.e. when he seems to be losing a woman), so they become desperate and display that to the woman.

In the case of a guy acting busy when his ex girlfriend calls and then panicking in desperation, it can cause her to wonder if he was just lying to her to make himself seem more valuable in her eyes.

She will then feel turned off by his insecurity and may just decide that sheâs wasting her time with him and should move on.

So, she doesn't call him back later as promised and just focuses on moving on with her life without him.

Another possible reaction!

5. You acting busy seems weird or forced to her, so she puts her guard up to protect herself against being manipulated

[image: You acting busy seems weird or forced to her, so she puts her guard up to protect herself against being manipulated]

For example: A woman might call her ex at a time where she knows that he's not busy (e.g. at the start of the week, late in the evening because she remembers that he's usually preparing to go to bed at that time, Saturday afternoon when he's usually at home chilling out).

Yet, when he answers the call, he says that he's busy and can't talk to her.

From his perspective, he is trying to show her that he's not sitting around feeling lonely and lost without her and is actually living his life without her.

To her though, it just seems weird.

She knows that he really wants her back and would happily drop whatever he is doing to talk to her, but now he seems like he is busy and isn't really interested in talking to her.

As a result, she wonders if he's trying to mess with her head to manipulate her into missing him, feeling like she's losing him and so on.

So, she then becomes more guarded (i.e. doesn't want to say much, keeps her feelings to herself, seems suspicious of whatever he says or does), which then reduces his chances of getting her back.

If you really want to get your ex girlfriend back, I recommend that you be a man about it.

Don't be afraid to answer her calls and don't think that you look keen by doing it.

You can answer any call you want because it's your phone and you aren't a needy guy.

Simple as that.

If you make it more complicated than it needs to be (i.e. by acting), then you run the risk of causing her to play games back with you, which can result in her feeling the need to get revenge on you by hooking up with new guys.

4 Mistakes That Can Turn an Ex Girlfriend Off When She Calls You

1. Assuming that women don't understand social dynamics and are easily fooled

When a guy uses a trick on a woman like 'acting busy', he is often unaware that she has been doing that to guys ever since she became a woman and started dating.

She knows what he is doing, why he is doing it and how she should react in return.

As a result, a guy will often find that if he acts busy (when he's not), his ex girlfriend will quickly pick up on that and then start playing hard to get in return, or lose interest and begin rejecting him for trying to manipulate her.

2. Assuming that if you reject her attempts to talk to you or meet up, she will want you even more

Although that can happen if a woman is still deeply in love with her ex and is secretly hoping they can get back together again, in most ex back cases, it just doesn't play out like that.

Instead, when a woman sees that her ex is being cold towards her and ignoring her attempts to contact him, she feels insulted.

She also worries that if she shows more interest, he might continue to push her away and act busy, to hopefully make her feel more rejected and needy for him.

Yet, she is the one who broke up with him and doesn't want to end up chasing him hard to hopefully get him back.

So, in many cases, the woman will stop contacting her ex and open herself up to meeting, dating and sleeping with new men.

3. Trying too hard to seem busy and unavailable, which then makes her see you as having changed in a negative way

[image: Trying too hard to seem busy and unavailable, which then makes her see you as having changed in a negative way]

She feels as though you've become cold and unfriendly and have lost the easy-going, carefree charm that initially drew her to you.

You used to be so cool, confident, warm and open when you talked to her.

Yet, now you seem self-centered, distant, uninterested and potentially revengeful (i.e. trying to move on before she does).

You seem to have changed in a negative way and she doesn't like it.

As a result, she feels that you're no longer the kind of guy she wants to be in a relationship with.

She then puts in extra effort to get over you and move on, usually by going out more often, meeting new men, accepting dates with them and potentially sleeping with one of them.

4. Not realizing that getting an ex girlfriend back can be done quickly in a very simple, straightforward way

As you would now know by reading through this article, acting busy can work, but it can also backfire horribly.

So, why take that chance when there's an easier and much more effective approach?

If your ex girlfriend calls you, just answer the call, re-attract her and make her laugh, smile and feel happy that she took the risk to call you.

4 Funny Things to Say to My Ex Girlfriend

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 funny things you can say to your ex girlfriend in different situations, to make her feel attracted and more open around you:

1. If she texts you and asks if you miss her

[image: If she texts you and asks if you miss her]

If your ex girlfriend texts you something like, “Do you miss me?” you might be tempted to just tell her that you do.

Yet, with women, it's always best when you have the confidence and courage to joke around with them, or playfully tease them, especially when they're not expecting it.

So, a funny reply would be, “Who is this?” or, “Who's this?” to suggest that you no longer have her number in your phone.

A few seconds later, you can then send a follow up text with an emoji of a smiley face with the tongue sticking out, to let her know that you were only teasing her.

Alternatively, if she texts, “Do you miss me?” you can reply with, “Yeah” and then a few seconds later follow up with, “When I'm trying to figure out how the washing machine works. I still haven't figured it out. I think you need to come over and help me with it” and add a laughing emoji with tears running out of the eyes.

One more example is if you respond with, “I miss you as much as you miss me” and then add a winky smile emoticon.

With that last one, you're essentially letting her know that she is asking you because she is missing you, but you're not directly saying that.

Women love that type of communication and find it interesting, funny, exciting and attractive because it makes them think about you non-stop and wonder, “What did he mean?” and so on.

2. If you talk to her on the phone

[image: If you talk to her on the phone]

So, these examples are based on her actually answering, which not all women do right away when an ex calls.

They will often ignore the first few calls, before eventually answering, or will answer right away if the ex has been making her smile, laugh and feel attracted via text beforehand.

So, let's assume that your ex does answer, but in one scenario she is happy to hear from you and in the other, she isn't and ends up being cold or distant towards you.

Let's start with her being happy to hear from you!

After the initial “Hello, how are you?” and a bit of chit chat, she asks you something like, “So, what are your plans for the rest of the day?”

You then reply with, “It depends.”

She will likely ask, “On what?” and you can say, “Whether you’re making dinner for me tonight or not. I miss your roast chicken, or at least your pasta if you can’t be bothered making roast chicken,” and then have a laugh with her.

By using humor in such a confident way, while still being good to her, it becomes difficult for her to keep blocking out her feelings for you.

As a result, she naturally opens back up to seeing you again, which makes it easier for you to fully re-attract her and get her back.

Yet, how about if you call her and she says something like, “What do you want?” and seems annoyed, cold or distant towards you?

First and foremost, don’t lose confidence.

Women are not attracted to men who are afraid of them, so always remember to maintain your confidence.

So, if she says, “What do you want?” you can say, “Well, someone’s in a mood today, aren’t they? Little Miss Annoyed and Irritable” and have a laugh with her.

Alternatively, you might say, “Well, since you’re asking what I want – I’d love some of those blueberry muffins you used to make. I wouldn’t mine one or two of those with a coffee. You in the mood for baking?” and have a laugh with her.

She will most likely laugh, or at least smile at how you handled her bitchy attitude in a confident, but humorous way.

Her guard will then begin to come down, which allows you to more easily reawaken more of her feelings for you and want to see you in person.

3. If she says, “No” to your initial attempt to get her to meet up with you in person

[image: If she says, "No" to your initial attempt to get her to meet up with you in person]

Imagine that you’ve been talking to your ex girlfriend on the phone for a few minutes.

You have been confident, making her laugh and as a result, you have successfully sparked some feelings for you inside of her, even if she doesn’t want to openly admit it.

Attraction is a reaction to attractive traits that are displayed, so if you display them and aren’t being desperate about it (i.e. seeming to be trying too hard), a woman will naturally feel attracted to you.

So, don’t doubt yourself if you’re being attractive.

If you’re being attractive, you are attractive (as long as you’re not being desperate about it, of course).

So, you’ve been talking to your ex girl on the phone and you then say something like, “So, anyway, how about we meet up for a coffee sometime this week to say hello as friends?” and she responds with, “No, I don’t want to have coffee with you.”

What then?

Give up?

Lose confidence?

No.

Remain confident and turn a potentially tense moment like that into laughter and smiling, by saying something like, â€œOkay, if you donâ€™t want to have coffee with me, weâ€™ll have tea thenâ€ in a joking tone of voice.

Let her sense that youâ€™re joking, but at the same time, youâ€™re not losing confidence based on her being a little distant, or cold.

You are so confident (which is very attractive to women) that no matter what she says or does, you donâ€™t become insecure and start doubting yourself.

You know that women naturally feel attracted to a manâ€™s confidence and if a man has the confidence to deal with the cold, bitchy or distant nature of a woman, without being an asshole about it, she will respect him, feel attracted to him and like him a lot.

The reality is that a confident, independent woman will usually have a very difficult time finding a guy who can handle her.

After a break up, a woman will usually feel more confident (because her ex still wants her) and independent (because she gets to do whatever she wants now) than usual, so itâ€™s very important that you donâ€™t become less confident in reaction to her increased confidence.

Donâ€™t be afraid to joke around with her, even if she seems a little cold, distant, bitchy or moody.

Youâ€™ve got to let her sense that, even though youâ€™re continuing to be good to her and treat her well, youâ€™re not afraid of her mood and arenâ€™t going to act like an intimidated guy as a result.

Instead, you always have the balls to playfully joke with her and get her smiling, laughing and feeling good.

If you can do that, she will know that it is going to be so hard for her to find another guy like you out there.

As a result, she will open back up to you and want to see if the relationship can work this time around.

4. When you meet up with her in person

[image: When you meet up with her in person]

Imagine that your ex girlfriend agrees to catch up with you for a coffee.

You sit at a table together, say hello and a bit of chit chat and order some coffees and something to eat.

She orders a cappuccino, or a latte with a fair bit of milk foam on top and when she takes a sip, there is some milk foam on her top lip.

To make her smile and feel happy that she agreed to see you again, you can tease her in a light-hearted way by looking at her and grinning.

She will likely feel a bit self-conscious and say, â€œWhat?â€ or, â€œWhy are you looking at me like that?â€

You can then say something like, â€œYouâ€™re the only woman I know who can rock a foam mustache! It looks really sexy on you!â€ and then have a laugh with her, as she rushes to wipe it off.

Note: You can even say that if she doesn't have any milk on her lip, just for the fun of it and when she tries to wipe it off, you can laugh and say, â€œJust kidding. You don't have anything on your mouth. It's all good. I was just messing with ya.â€

She will almost certainly laugh and might even lightly punch you on the arm and playfully refer to you as being a jerk, asshole or being mean to her.

As you would know, it's not a serious thing when a woman says that in response to a guy joking around with her in a confident way.

She's simply feeling attracted to guy's confidence and ability to make her laugh, feeling like she is under the spotlight and trying to deflect some of the attention off her and onto the guy to avoid looking too embarrassed.

Women love feeling that way around a guy though, as long as it's done with good intentions (i.e. he's just kidding, just messing with her, just flirting with her).

So, when you have the confidence to playfully tease your ex girlfriend about something like milk foam on her lip (even if there isn't any), she will feel a rush of respect and attraction for you, based on you not being intimidated by the moment and because you're also being a good guy to her at the same time.

As a result, she will begin reconnecting with her feelings for you and realizing that what you and her had, isn't over.

There are still strong feelings on her part and if she doesn't hook up with you, or see how things go from here, she will regret it when she sees you moving on without her.

As a result, she will naturally want to open up and give the relationship another shot, or at least hook up with you to see how she feels afterwards.

4 Mistakes to Avoid When Using Humor to Re-Attract Your Ex

1. Trying too hard to be funny and ending up coming across as a bit desperate

Humor is one of the easiest ways to get an ex girlfriend to drop her guard, smile and open up to feeling something for you again.

However, when a guy tries too hard to make her laugh (or do anything around a woman), she will see it as being desperate and then lose respect and attraction for him as a result.

So, while you should use humor, just make sure that you are relaxed, easygoing and free flowing about it.

Don't force it into conversations or moments where it doesn't need to be.

Let your humor come through naturally and in a relaxed, easygoing manner.

2. Using too many emoticons or emojis when texting her and coming across as a little cheesy or lacking in masculinity

Although adding some emoticons or emojis is a great way to reduce the seriousness of a text, or bring a bit of playfulness and teasing into an interaction, when a guy uses too many emojis, emoticons or exclamation/question marks (e.g. What's news???? LOL! Hey!!!! Hope you had a great day!!!!) it can actually turn a woman off.

The truth is, women secretly feeling turned off by guys like that because it makes them feel like they're interacting with a boy, rather than a man.

So, be sure to text and respond to her in a manly way, while also adding in an emoji or emoticon here and there.

When she sees that you're being manly and confident (i.e. due to maintaining control of your emotions while texting, using humor in a manly way by being brief and direct with what you say, not overusing emojis), rather than boyish and insecure (i.e. overusing emojis or exclamation marks) etc), she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you.

When she feels respect and attraction for you, she will begin to test how she feels by reconnecting with her feelings of love for you.

If she likes what she is feeling, or is at least curious to explore her new feelings for you further, she will open up to meeting up with you and seeing what happens.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Hoping that a funny text will be enough to make her change her mind and then show you a lot of interest

Being funny and making an ex girlfriend laugh, is only part of what is involved in actually getting her back.

As you would understand, it's not the one and only, final move to get her back.

Instead, a funny text can catch her attention and make her open up to the idea of interacting with you a bit more to see what happens.

Yet, in almost all cases, it's not going to be enough to make her want to get back with you right away.

For her to feel that way, she needs to experience the new and improved you (i.e. you are now more confident than before, more manly in your behavior, more able to handle her behavior) over the phone and in person, where she can hear the tonality of your voice, observe your body language and see how you respond to her, especially when she's being cold, unfriendly or saying she's not interested.

That's why, after you send her a funny text to open the lines of communication between, you then need to progress to a phone call (or video call) and then meet up with her in person.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that until it's too late.

A guy will send a funny text to his ex girlfriend, get a laugh and a bit of a text exchange and then waste days or weeks waiting for her to respond further and show interest in getting back together.

Yet, she stops responding because she needs more than just a text to be certain that it would be a good idea to get back with him.

4. Not focusing on the other ways to attract her as well

[image: Not focusing on the other ways to attract her as well]

Sometimes a guy will make the mistake of thinking that if he just gets his ex laughing at his humor, it will be enough to get her back.

Yet, in almost all break up cases, the woman felt turned off in the relationship due to the man being insecure, not being manly enough, taking her for granted or being too emotionally sensitive.

So, she is going to want to see that he is now more confident, manly in his behavior and ability to handle her, loves her and appreciates her more, but isn't being desperate about it and is now so much more emotionally strong than before.

If she interacts with him via text, on a call or in person and has a laugh, but notices that he's still unable to handle her moody behavior like a man (i.e. not become insecure in reaction to her, be able to occasionally laugh at her for being a pain in the butt, not take her so seriously, smile and playfully make fun of her or focus on her until she smiles, laughs and breaks out of her bad mood), then she will feel as though the relationship would essentially be the same as before.

As a result, even though she did laugh when around him, she isn't interested in getting back together because he hasn't really changed the things about himself that caused her to want to break up with him in the first place.

I Sent a Happy Birthday Text to My Ex, But She Didn't Respond

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why an ex woman won't respond to a happy birthday text from her ex guy:

1. She doesn't feel attracted to him anymore and a birthday text isn't going to change that [image: She doesn't feel attracted to him anymore and a birthday text isn't going to change that]

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy after a break up, she usually won't suddenly feel attracted to him again and want to talk to him as a result of a getting a happy birthday text.

Instead, in many cases, she will either feel nothing and just ignore it, or may see it as a weak attempt from him to open communication with her, because he's too afraid to text her on a normal day, or give her a call and create a spark with her on the phone.

Of course, sometimes a guy isn't afraid of contacting his ex, but has simply been waiting for what he sees as the perfect time to contact her.

He hopes that by sending her a birthday text, she will feel sad that he's not there for her birthday, miss him and then want to start texting back and forth.

Yet, the reality is that if she is over him, or had lost a lot of attraction for him leading up to, during and after the break up, a happy birthday text isn't going to change her feelings.

Instead, a woman will usually ignore it, or think something like, â€œYeah, nice tryâ€ and continue moving on.

So, if you want her back, you're going to need to be braver and more courageous enough to send more than just a happy birthday text.

On that note!

2. She was impressed, but wants to see more than just a birthday text before she shows some interest back

[image: She was impressed, but wants to see more than just a birthday text before she shows some interest back]

Even if a woman is happy to get a text on her birthday from her ex, she won't always want to show that to him.

Instead, she will wait to see if he's got the confidence to text her further, get her interested and then get her on a phone call or video call, even though she initially appears to not be interested in texting back and forth with him.

A common reason why a woman will do that is if one of her reasons for breaking up, was due to him being too insecure and unsure of himself in the relationship.

So, to test whether or not he has changed (i.e. he is now able to maintain confidence in his attractiveness to her, or ability to attract her, despite her not giving him clear signals all the way), she will ignore him and see how he reacts.

If she doesn't hear from him again, she may assume that he doubted himself (as usual) and as a result, it still essentially the same guy, so a relationship with him would end up being the same.

On the other hand, if he texts her again and begins to flirt with her and make her feel interested to be texting with him, despite her somewhat cold or distant approach, she will begin to feel curious.

As she continues to text him, or when they get on a phone call or video call, she will see that he is so much more confident than he used to be, which will automatically cause her to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

When that happens, she will naturally feel drawn to him and become open to catching up with him in person, to see what happens.

Then, he can give her a birthday present if he wants to, or can allow her to enjoy exciting, passionate, emotionally charged make up sex with him.

There's nothing quite like make up sex, where you and a woman hook up again after being broken up.

If you've leveled up as a man (i.e. more confident, more masculine in your behavior and approach to her), she will feel so attracted and turned on, that it will be one of the most enjoyable, exciting, sexual experiences of her life.

Of course, it will be amazing for you too.

Yet, you're not going to get there, if you give up after texting her on her birthday and not getting a response.

You need to be more brave and courageous than that, if you truly want her back, or at least want to get to the point where you and her hook up again.

Another reason why a woman might not respond to her ex's text is

3. She was worried that he might be just sending her a happy birthday text to be polite, but isn't actually interested

[image: She was worried that he might be just sending her a happy birthday text to be polite, but isn't actually interested]

Even though a guy might sincerely interested in getting his ex back and then send her a birthday text to hopefully get the process started, she might not see it that way.

Instead, she might think something like, He's probably just being nice to me, but it doesn't mean anything. I'll ignore it. If he texts me more, then okay, but I'm not responding to that. It's probably just a polite text to be nice, or to make himself feel like a good person. Who knows. I'll ignore it though and see what he does next.

Essentially, she is worried that if it is just a polite text and she then shows interest, or starts texting and becomes interested again, only to find out that he's not interested, she will end up feeling rejected.

Then, it will be like he has broken up with her, which will cause her the kind of emotional pain that youâve been experiencing since the break up, (not exactly, but it will still hurt her).

So, if thatâs the case with your ex, then she is currently waiting for you to do more than just send her a potentially polite birthday text that doesnât really mean you like her.

4. She was busy having a great time on her birthday and didnât feel motivated to reply to him

If a woman is having a party with her friends and is around men who are flirting with her and making her feel special on her birthday, she usually wonât be worried about her ex who she no longer has strong feelings for.

Even if he sends her a text to wish her a happy birthday, she usually wonât pay much attention to it because sheâs having so much fun without him in that moment and needs to focus on the people around her.

However, that doesnât mean she wonât respond if he gives her a call later on that night or a couple of days later and makes her smile, laugh and feel happy to be hearing from him again.

Yet, the problem is that so many guys these days just donât have the guts to call their ex girlfriend and simply stick to text.

A phone call, or video call just seems like too much, whereas a text is so much easier and less risky for him.

So, he either tries texting her again in a few days or weeks, or just waits and hopes that she will eventually miss him and text him.

He then discovers that she has moved on and is happy without him.

Donât let that happen to you.

If you want her back for real, now is the time to be courageous, not afraid.

Text her again asap and flirt with her via text, or give her a call.

5. She got a lot of birthday texts and posts on her Facebook wall from friends and family and didnât end up having time to reply right away

Then, after leaving it for a few days, she felt as though it might be too late to reply to him.

She worries that if she replies, it might make her look too keen or lonely, or whatever.

Women have all sorts of insecurities and worries, which is why itâs so important to be confident, courageous and brave as a man.

Text her again and flirt with her, or call her asap.

For example: If you call her, you might start the call off by saying something like, âHey, how you doing? Just thought Iâd call and say hi.

If she then responds with something like, âOh, hi. Thanks for the birthday text by the way, you can then jokingly say, âNo problem. Iâll be around later on for my piece of the birthday cake. I hope you didnât forget to save me a slice, have a laugh and tell her that youâre just kidding.

If she has been missing you, enjoys that you have the balls to joke around with her like that and still has some cake, she might even say, â€œWell, there is still some cake if you want.â€

You can then arrange to catch up with her for a coffee at her place, have some cake then progress to a hug, kiss and sex.

If she doesn't say something like that though, she will still be impressed that you had the balls to call her, even though she didn't respond to your text.

You can then chat with her for a little while in an easy-going, relaxed way and then after a few minutes go ahead and get her to agree to meet up with you so that you can wish her a Happy Birthday in person.

At the meet up, continue to build her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

From there, get to a hug, kissing, sex and back together again.

5 Mistakes That Guys Make When an Ex Girlfriend Doesn't Reply to the Birthday Text He Sent

1. Giving up because his birthday text didn't do the trick

The reality is that a birthday text is a nice gesture and it can sometimes open the lines of communication between a guy and his ex girlfriend, but it's not the only trick in the book, or the only move you can make.

It's just one of countless things you can do.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that and then give up too easily when they see that their text didn't work.

He was hoping that she would be grateful that he remembered her birthday and then call him or text him, or that she'd feel sad that he wasn't around anymore and want to reach out to him.

Yet, here's the thing!

In almost all ex back cases, a woman won't make it easy for an ex boyfriend to get her back right away.

Some of her reasons for behaving in that way, can be:

- She doesn't want to seem desperate.
- She wants to test if he's man enough to pursue her, even when she's initially being closed off or cold.
- He hasn't reactivated any of her feelings of respect and attraction yet, so she's just not interested.
- She's worried he might be stringing her along to get revenge on her for breaking up with him.
- She wants to see how interested he really is, before opening up to him and showing some interest back.

This is why, if you want her back, you can't lose hope just because she didn't respond to your â€œHappy Birthdayâ€ text.

2. Assuming that he has to stick to text to get her back because she prefers texting

It doesn't matter what she prefers.

What matters is what works.

What works the best, is when a guy reactivates his ex woman's sexual and romantic feelings over the phone and face-to-face.

Text is fine to start things off, but don't make the mistake of sticking to text.

If you do, your ex might respond once or twice, or even be interested for a while, but if you don't progress to something more (i.e. a phone call, video call or face-to-face catch up), she will almost certainly lose interest or play hard to get by responding less and less to your texts.

So don't be afraid of making a call, even if you think she prefers text.

Get her smiling, giggling and enjoying to be talking to you on a call and she will be so much more likely to agree to catch up with you in person, compared to if you just ask her to catch up via text.

3. Not realizing that she can easily see him texting as being afraid to call her

If a woman has a low opinion of her ex (i.e. currently sees him as being insecure, self-doubting, afraid of being rejected by her, has low self-esteem), then him just sticking to text can easily be misinterpreted by her as him not having the balls to get her on a phone call.

From her point of view, she perceives him as being insecure, unsure of himself and probably a little bit afraid of her, even if he isn't afraid of her and is actually feeling very confident as he texts her.

Think about it!

How can she honestly tell how he is really feeling via text?

She has to make assumptions because it's just text, rather than his voice on a call, or his body language and facial expressions in person, or on a video call.

If her current opinion of him is negative, then she will usually make negative assumptions about his texts, which will keep her guard up and result in her being more likely to reject him.

4. Not realizing that she's probably using the No Contact rule to help herself get over him

The No Contact Rule (i.e. cutting off contact with an ex for 30 to 60 day) was something that relationship counselors, therapists and psychologists created as a way of helping couples get over each other and move on.

Almost all women are aware of it and those who aren't, quickly find out about it when they begin searching online for advice on how to get over a break up.

It doesn't take long for a woman to encounter advice like, Ignore him for 30 days or, Cut off contact completely for 60 days that is designed to help women move on from an ex boyfriend.

So, it's quite possible that your ex is using the No Contact Rule on you right now.

Of course, she might still have an interest in getting back with you, but is slowly getting over you, day by day.

If you don't find a way to contact her and reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings, she's most likely just going to move on.

Finally, another mistake that other guys make in your situation is

5. Assuming that a woman pretty much has to respond to a happy birthday text from her ex

The truth is, when a woman breaks up with a guy, she doesn't have an obligation to stay in contact with him anymore.

She doesn't have to reply with, â€œThanksâ€ or anything else if her ex wishes her happy birthday.

She can if she wants to, but she doesn't have to.

So, in some cases, a woman will decide that responding to her ex's birthday text might open the lines of communication with him again and therefore, prevent her from getting over him and moving on.

She knows that he could re-attract her if he played his cards right, so she ignores his text and hopes that her feelings for him continue to fade.

Unfortunately, some guys don't realize that and end up feeling â€œoffendedâ€ or hurt that their ex girlfriend didn't reply to an honest, kindhearted text for her birthday.

Yes, it sucks that she didn't reply, but you should know by reading through the reasons in this article, that there are many possible reasons why she didn't reply.

So, rather than taking it personally and feeling hurt by it, or losing confidence, just focus on doing what you need to do to get her back.

Ex Girlfriend Changed When She Met a New Guy

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here 8 common reasons why a woman will change her behavior, attitude or treatment of her ex boyfriend, once she meets a new guy:

1. She was only being nice to make you continue being nice to her, long enough to allow her to move on before you did

[image: She was only being nice to make you continue being nice to her, long enough to allow her to move on before you did]

Although some women have no problem ending a relationship on a bad note and never speaking to their boyfriend again, a lot of women find it difficult to be mean to their boyfriend after a break up (e.g. because she's a nice person, she doesn't want to hurt his feelings, she doesn't want him hating her, she doesn't want to make him angry, she tries to avoid confrontations as much as possible, she still loves him, but knows that they need to break up).

So, rather than just telling her ex that it's over and saying that she never wants to speak to him again, she might be sweet, nice and friendly towards him after the break up.

This can give her ex boyfriend the impression that things are still cool between them and he might still have a chance with her.

Yet, there's often a darker side to her niceness that will end up causing him a lot of pain in the end.

For example: Sometimes, a woman will be nice to her ex boyfriend after a break up to buy herself some time.

She wants to move on before he does, so she can feel better about herself knowing that he still wants her, but she's got a new guy.

That way, she won't have to be the one being left behind, feeling rejected and abandoned.

Then, when she meets a new guy and starts dating him, she can stop being so nice to her ex boyfriend because she doesn't need him anymore.

She's won the game she was playing on him.

It's pretty nasty, but as they say, all is fair in love and war.

In other words, do what you have to do to get the love you want, or to survive a break up and come out better on the other side.

As they also say, love hurts.

It does and I'm sure you know that by now.

She hurt you.

Yet, here's the thing!

It's not over between you and her.

Just because she has met a new guy, it doesn't mean that you have no play now, or can't make any moves.

You can.

You can re-attract her, so she begins to miss you and want you back.

I'll explain how to do that throughout this article.

For now, another reason why your ex girlfriend might have changed when she met a new guy, is that

2. She has been feeling more attracted to him and as a result, feels less motivation to be good to you now

[image: She has been feeling more attracted to him and as a result, feels less motivation to be good to you now]

If a woman starts dating a new guy who causes her to have strong feelings for him, versus the milder feelings she has for her ex, she will quickly make up her mind about which man she wants to be with. After all, women tend to just go with how they feel, so if a woman feels more for another guy and doesn't feel obligated to remain loyal to another guy (i.e. because she has officially broken up with him), then she will follow her feelings.

As a result, she will look at her ex as really being her ex now and the new guy as potentially being her new boyfriend.

If they start dating, hooking up and she begins to fall in love with him, then she might stop treating her ex as well as she did after the break up.

In some cases, she does that out of respect to her ex because she doesn't want to lead him on, but other times she does it out of spite (i.e. to intentionally hurt him).

Whatever your ex's reasons for changing when she met the new guy, the main thing you need to do is maintain your confidence in your attractiveness to her and build up your confidence in your ability to re-attract her.

You then need to interact with her, ideally on a phone call, video call or in person if possible and make her feel attracted to the new and improved you.

When you reactivate her feelings of attraction and make her feel attracted in new and interesting ways (e.g. if you were too nice before, you're more of a challenge now. If you were too neutral before like a friend, or if you suppressed your masculinity to be more like her, you are now more masculine in your energy, behavior, vibe, conversation style and actions), she will begin to feel confused about her feelings for the new guy.

She will wonder why she is suddenly feeling drawn to you and worrying about you moving on, falling in love with a new woman and potentially losing interest in getting her back.

Another reason why your ex may have changed is that

3. She's trying to get you to hate her, so you give up and move on

[image: She's trying to get you to hate her, so you give up and move on]

To avoid having to explain herself (i.e. why she doesn't want to be friendly anymore now that she's met a new guy), a woman will usually start behaving weirdly, being cold or even disrespectful in some ways, so her ex boyfriend will hate her and hopefully lose interest in getting her back.

If her ex reacts by getting angry at her, calling her names, insulting her or threatening her in any way, she can make him out to be the problem and say that she never wants to hear from him again.

She can then get on with her new relationship, without feeling bad for leaving him behind.

So, whatever you do, don't react in an angry way to how she has been treating you lately.

Maintain your cool and maintain your composure.

When you interact with her, simply be the confident, manly, funny, charming guy that she initially fell in love with, so she naturally feels attracted to you, drawn to you and begins to miss you.

Don't talk to her as though you're a rejected guy, or an unwanted ex.

Instead, talk to her as though she is a new woman that you're attracting and picking up and you know that she likes you.

You are a confident, charming, cool and magnetically attractive guy that she wants to be with, but needs a little warming up before she fully opens up to it.

You can achieve that during a 2-5 minute conversation with her on a phone call, video call or in person, as long as you are interacting with her in a way that makes her feel attracted (i.e. being confident rather than self-doubting, being charming rather than tense, being flirtatious at times rather than always being neutral like a friend).

When you cause her to experience new feelings for you, she will realize that you and her aren't over.

There is still something there and if she doesn't open up to it, she will probably end up regretting it for the rest of her life.

4. The new guy has made her feel as though he will leave her, if she is still open to you

Some guys feel insecure if the woman they are dating is still good friends with an ex guy, or potentially still flirting with him.

That isn't going to be attractive to her (i.e. his insecurity), but a woman will usually still want to protect the new relationship she has, especially if she is experiencing strong feelings for the new guy.

So, your ex girlfriend might be willing to give up her friendship with you, rather than losing a chance at a long term relationship with him.

5. She suddenly realized that she doesn't need you and is now behaving in a self-centered way

Some women don't like the feeling of being single and alone.

So after a break up, a woman like that will continue being nice to her ex to make him feel like he has a chance with her.

If her ex boyfriend feels like he has a chance, he will usually be nice to her and make her feel loved and wanted.

She can use that interest from him to stop herself from feeling as lonely or depressed, as she tries to heal and get ready to move on without him.

Then, if she begins to get used to being by herself, realizes that she's actually doing okay and is even having fun being single, she will stop needing her ex's support.

Likewise, if she happens to meet a new guy and is feeling loved and wanted by him, she will suddenly stop needing her ex.

As a result, she might be selfish about the whole thing and begin behaving in a self-centered way (e.g. only caring about herself and what she wants, no longer showing an interest in her ex's life).

6. She worries that if she gives you positive signals, you will step up your efforts to get her back

Many women know that they are easy to seduce and get back into a relationship, or at least hook up with again.

They don't act easy, but know that they are easy, if a guy plays his cards right.

So, if a woman is trying to avoid getting back into a relationship that will essentially be the same as before (i.e. because her ex hasn't changed), she will try to discourage him by being cold and distant.

Essentially, she doesn't want to give him hope that he can get her back, because she knows that it will build his confidence and cause him to behave in ways that will re-attract her.

In some cases, the woman will even go as far as trying to meet new men as quickly as possible, so she has a reason to push her ex away, or a weapon to use to cause him to lose confidence (i.e. that she's happy with a new guy she has met).

7. She doesn't want you interfering with her new relationship

[image: She doesn't want you interfering with her new relationship]

If she really does like the new guy, she might want to see where the relationship goes (i.e. Could it lead to her falling in love? Will they become a great couple that eventually gets engaged or married?), rather than continuing to be open to you.

So, she gives you the cold shoulder in the hope that you'll leave her alone.

Yet, if you leave her alone and don't re-attract her, weeks, months and then years can go by without you having an opportunity to get her back.

That is why, if your ex girlfriend has met a new guy, you need to interrupt the relationship while you still can.

Interrupting the relationship means that you interact with her and attract her in new, exciting and unexpected ways, so she suddenly becomes confused about who she really likes.

When that happens, she opens up to you and you can guide her through the rest of the ex back process.

8. She's doing what you would probably do, if you broke up with her and met a new woman that you found attractive

Think about it this way!

If you didn't want your ex girlfriend back at all, had recently met another high quality woman and begun dating her, would you want to maintain a relationship with your ex?

You might feel as though youâ€¦d continue to be nice to her, because youâ€¦re a good man who respects her and cares about her.

Yet, what if your new girlfriend kept seeing you messaging her and had a problem with it.

Would you simply not care about your new girlfriend and continue to text with your ex while around her, or would you start to be less chatty via text or no longer want to answer some of her calls?

Essentially, would you change as a result of meeting a new, high quality woman that you were dating, or would you be exactly the same?

The reality is that youâ€¦d probably focus on moving on and making a fresh start with your new woman, without the inconvenience of holding on to an ex girl who you no longer have strong feelings for you.

Thatâ€¦s likely what your ex is doing too.

Currently, she doesnâ€¦t have strong feelings for you because you havenâ€¦t re-attracted her yet.

Avoid These 2 Mistakes if You Want Her Back

1. Assuming that she will come back to you one day, even though sheâ€¦s no longer attracted to you

Even if things donâ€¦t work out with her new guy, she is more likely to move on and find another guy after him, rather than come running back to you.

After all, they could be together for months, or even a year or more and by that time, she might have changed as a person, or you might not even want her back.

Additionally, even if she does feel open to getting back with you after they break up, she might not make that obvious to you.

Why?

A lot of women fear that their ex boyfriend will no longer be interested and will reject them, which will cause her to feel like the rejected one.

Alternatively, the ex boyfriend might show some initial interest, hook up with her and then dump her, to get revenge and leave her behind as the rejected one.

So, if a woman does reach out after becoming single again, it will usually only be in a neutral, friendly way, rather than making it obvious that she is open to something happening.

Yet, not all women reach out.

What Iâ€¦ve found, after helping new men get women back for many years now, is that if a woman didnâ€¦t feel enough respect, attraction and love to remain in a relationship with a guy, then she wonâ€¦t reach out to him and will simply continue to move on, unless he changes how she feels.

He can change how she feels by having the courage to interact with her and attract her in new and interesting ways (e.g. he is more confident now, more of a playful challenge, make her feel the need to impress him, but is still a good guy to her, makes her feel girly in comparison to his masculine energy, vibe, conversation style, behavior and actions).

If he doesnâ€¦t have the courage to do that and simply waits, then he will usually be disappointed.

What Iâ€™ve seen for many years now, is that the men who get ex women back at the highest rate, are those who have the courage to interact with her, re-attract her and make her want him back.

If youâ€™re not willing to do that, you should prepare yourself to move on instead.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

2. Putting your dating life on hold for many months, only to find out that she isnâ€™t coming back and youâ€™ve now lost a lot of confidence

Sometimes, a guy thinks that if he remains faithful and waits for his ex, she will be impressed with his loyalty and be more likely to get back with him if she breaks up with the new guy.

Yet, as he waits for her, a guy will usually begin to lose confidence in his attractiveness to his ex and to other women.

Essentially, at times, he might end up feeling like a bit of reject who is desperately waiting for his ex girlfriend and hoping that she takes pity on him and gives him another chances.

Then, if he does happen to interact with his ex and she picks up on his low self-esteem, neediness or lack of confidence, she wonâ€™t feel attracted and as a result, will feel happy with her decision to have broken up with him.

So, while itâ€™s fine to re-attract your ex over the course of 1-3 weeks, if youâ€™re not doing it right and as a result, arenâ€™t making progress, then you need to change your strategy (i.e. start dating to make her jealous) or improve your ability to attract an ex woman.

How to Stop Being My Ex Girlfriend's Back Up Plan

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

To stop being her back up plan, you first have to understand why she currently sees you that way. Here are the 5 most common reasons why a woman will keep her ex around as a back up plan only, rather than feeling the need to get back with him right away:

1. She knows that he will wait for her, in case things don't work out with her new guy

[image: She knows that he will wait for her, in case things don't work out with her new guy]

If a woman is already seeing a new guy, but can see that her ex boyfriend is waiting around and hoping for another chance with her, she may give him signs of hope that they could get back together, as a way of stringing him along.

That way, if things don't work out with her new guy, she can go back to her ex.

Yet, if she gets into a relationship with a man that feels more respect, attraction and love for, she will usually then cut off all contact with her ex or tell him that she's not going to change her mind.

Alternatively, she might be a bit cruel to her ex and still give him hope, therefore giving him the impression that he is her back up plan.

From her perspective though, it's over and she's not going to give him another chance.

So, here are some options of what you can do at this point:

- Option 1: Interact with her again, make her feel attracted to the new and improved you and then tell her that you wish her all the best. Then, don't contact her for a week. If you've done a great job at re-attracting her, then her feelings for you will be reactivated, you will be on her mind and she will be missing you. As a result, she will almost certainly contact you and you can then get her on a phone or video call, attract her further and then arrange to catch up in person. You can then hook up with her and start getting the relationship back together.
- Option 2: Start seeing other women and let her find out about it through friends, or by seeing you in photos with a new woman (or women) via your social media profile.
- Option 3: Completely cut off contact and just wait.

The last option seems like the easiest option, but it's actually the hardest on the man.

Why?

If you cut off contact with your ex girlfriend, who you love and want to be with, then you're going to be missing her, stressing out about her hooking up with new guy and worrying about never hearing from her again.

Everything is going to be up to her and if she doesn't feel very attracted to you anymore, then she's almost certainly not going to come running back to you just because you cut off contact.

I highly recommend Option 1 above because it gives you control over the situation with her and is probably going to be a lot easier for you to do than Option 2, depending on your level of skill with women.

Some guys can easily go out and pick up new women, but many can't.

So, if you can't get out there and pick up other women to make your ex jealous (and impressed), then go for Option 1 so she misses you and wants to see you again.

Another reason why a woman will keep her ex around as a back up plan is that

2. She knows that if she starts feeling lonely, she will be able to reach out to him to make herself feel better

[image: She knows that if she starts feeling lonely, she will be able to reach out to him to make herself feel better]

Since he is still missing her and hoping to get back with her, he will most likely be nice, sweet and loving towards her when she calls him or texts him.

For example: He might listen to her and talk to her for hours on the phone, tell her how he will always be there for her, compliment her and tell her how much she means to him.

Then, by the time she hangs up the call, she will be feeling happy, confident and good about herself again.

She will know that she doesn't have to worry about feeling lonely, because he is there as a back up plan in case she can't find a suitable replacement guy.

So, she knows that she doesn't have to contact him often, or worry about him moving on and can relax and continue to move on behind his back.

Additionally, because he's being so nice to her, it doesn't really turn her on or make her want to rip his clothes off, so to speak.

As you probably know, nice guys struggle when it comes to dating because women just aren't attracted to "only nice" behavior from men.

It's totally fine to treat women well, but if you're only nice, then you're usually only a friend to her.

So, don't become your ex's nice, reliable friend who is always available when she's feeling lonely or needs a friend to talk to.

Sure, talk to her, but be attractive (i.e. be a bit of a playful challenge when you talk to her, flirt with her, playfully tease her).

For example: Rather than answering the phone with, "Oh, hi, how are you?" answer with, "You again? hhh what do you want?" and then pause and have a laugh.

That is attractive to women because you have the balls to joke around with her like that, rather than always being on your best behavior.

If you don't have the balls to do that and she meets another guy who does, she is going to want him, not you.

So, don't be her nice, polite, sweet guy friend.

Be the guy she wants to kiss, touch and have sex with due to the attraction she feels when she interacts with you.

3. She wants the benefits of having an ex boyfriend who still loves her and wants to be with her, but without giving him any of the commitment of a relationship

[image: She wants the benefits of having an ex boyfriend who still loves her and wants to be with her, but without giving him any of the commitment of a relationship]

Some women behave in a selfish way after a break up, where they want to keep an ex boyfriend around to have real love shown to them, but then show fake love and interest in return.

If a guy is experienced with women, or is the type of guy who can easily attract pretty women, then he knows not to accept that.

However, when a guy has been dumped by a girlfriend who is more attractive or cooler than previous women he's been with, or the types of girls he can attract, then he might feel so overwhelmed by his desire for her that he becomes willing to put up with her bad treatment just to get to spend more time with her.

When a woman senses that, she feels turned off because she sees it as desperation.

Desperation is never attractive to women, especially pretty ones.

Yet, if a woman is being selfish after a break up, she will often pretend to feel attracted or in love with her ex, just to keep him around showing her love and adoration, so she can feel good about herself as she moves on without him.

So, some guys will stick around and essentially be a woman's boyfriend without getting what comes from being in a committed relationship with her (e.g. exclusive sex, being there for him emotionally, taking care of chores, being with him the entire weekend as a couple, looking attractive for him, taking a sincere interest in his life, going to family functions with him, hanging out with him and his friends, traveling together, posting photos of them together on social media).

All he really gets are texts from her, the occasional phone call and maybe a catch up in person, but she doesn't want sex, or doesn't want to discuss the relationship.

Essentially, everything is on her terms and he's got to put up with that, or else she will cut him out of her life.

So he does.

He puts up with it, but she then sees him as desperate and loses even more interest in him.

4. She never really felt motivated to commit to him because he wasn't enough of a challenge for her

Sometimes a guy will fall for a woman too easily and without much, or any effort on her part (i.e. she never felt the need to impress him because he made it clear that no matter what, he just wanted to be with her. She could treat him badly, be disrespectful, be late, ignore him and he would still keep coming at her, hoping to get her to love him more. Alternatively, he said I love you first and often, before she even felt like she loved him).

Yet, that's not what the majority of women really want from a boyfriend-girlfriend, or even husband-wife relationship.

Instead, a woman wants a man who stands up to her in an assertive, but loving way and makes her feel the need to impress him and maintain his interest as well.

In terms of saying, â€œI love youâ€ most women want to be able to say it first and only when they truly love a guy.

So many guys make the mistake of saying, â€œI love youâ€ on the first night, first date or simply before the woman says it or feels it.

As a result, he takes that away from her and she doesn't get to be a woman who is in love with her man and hoping to get him to love her as much as she loves him.

Instead, she's with a guy who is love with her, while she is still unsure if she is in love with him.

So, if something similar happened with your ex girlfriend, then you need to know that she will be searching for a rare feeling that so many women never get to experience.

The feeling of wanting to impress a man and win him over.

You can still make your ex feel that way about you, but you have to start approaching interactions with her in a completely different way.

In other words, you need to start being a challenge for her, so she lights up and feels compelled to impress you, be good to you and win you over.

In the process of doing that, her feelings for you will awaken and she will feel drawn to being with you.

She will realize that she doesn't want to keep you around as a back up plan anymore because if you happen to meet a new woman, that woman will almost certainly like you now.

So, to avoid being left behind by you, she opens up and gives the relationship another chance.

Another reason for a woman to keep her ex around as a back up plan isâ€

5. She is uncertain whether or not he is right for her, so she wants to date other guys to find out

When a woman is with a man who makes her feel the way she wants to feel in a relationship (i.e. respectful of him, attracted to him, in love, wanting to impress him and maintain his interest, proud to be his girlfriend, feminine in comparison to his masculine approach to the relationship, hopeful about a future together), she doesn't feel the need to be with anyone else.

She knows that it would be her loss to leave him, because she'd struggle to find another man who can make her feel the way he does.

As a result, she feels motivated to be the best woman to him that she can be, so he will want to stick with her for life.

On the other hand, when a woman wants to date other guys, it means that something was missing from the attraction experience she was getting from her boyfriend.

For example: Some of those things might beâ€

- He stopped being the confident guy she fell in love with and instead became insecure and needy. This caused her to stop feeling respect for him and no longer feeling as proud to be his girlfriend.
- He let her boss him around and get her way, even when she didn't deserve it, rather than be the one wearing the pants in the relationship. This stopped her from feeling the need to impress him. She also felt turned off by his lack of masculinity because he couldn't even stand up to a woman and get her to comply and be respectful towards him.

- He made her feel more like a non-sexual friend than a desirable woman. As a result, she stopped feeling as though she was in love with him in a boyfriend-girlfriend way and started feeling as though they were just buddies now.
- He became emotionally dependent on her (i.e. needed her to show him love, interest and affection, otherwise he couldn't feel confident and secure). This caused him to become clingy and smothering, which made her lose respect for him.

How about you?

What part of the overall attraction experience in a relationship was missing between you and her?

What part of it weren't you able to offer her (i.e. did you become insecure and as a result, weren't able to offer the feeling that comes with being with a confident boyfriend)?

If you honestly want to stop being your ex girlfriend's back up plan and want to get her back, you need to focus on understanding the type of attraction experience she really wants and then begin giving it to her during interactions with you.

Don't ask her what she really wants though, because women don't tell guys about that.

You either know this stuff, or you don't.

A woman doesn't want to be a guy's teacher in life about how to be a man.

If you need to learn that, you learn it from other men, or from a lot of experience with women throughout life.

I'm here to help you, so make sure you learn what you need to learn and then interact with her and re-attract her, so you can get her back.

5 Mistakes to Avoid if You Want Her Back For Real

1. Rejecting her offer to be friends because you think it will make you seem needy

Being friends with your ex will only seem needy to her if you behave in needy ways (e.g. text, call or message her all the time and ask her what she's doing, make yourself available to her 24/7).

However, if you accept her friendship, let her know that you completely accept the break up and then calmly and confidently re-attract her, she will see you as charming, interesting and intriguing.

She will experience new, compelling feelings for you that she will want to explore by meeting up with you and hopefully getting to a hug, kiss and then sex.

Always remember though: Being your ex's so-called "friend" is not about being a nice, innocent non-flirtatious friend who is in the friend zone and isn't allowed to flirt with her.

Instead, it's about being her friend and using that as an opportunity to interact with her, re-attract her and naturally seduce her back into a relationship with you.

2. Expressing your feelings for her in the hope that it makes her realize her feelings for you

If a woman doesn't feel attracted or in love with her ex and has dumped him as a result, she isn't going to suddenly feel attracted and in love if he tells her about his feelings for her.

She already knows how he feels and that he wants her back.

It's obvious to her.

So, what should you do instead?

If you want your ex girlfriend to care about losing you and want you back, you need to reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

You then need to let her get the sense that she is going to lose you, if she doesn't give you another chance.

When she gets that sense and realizes that other women will find the new and improved you attractive, she will naturally want something to happen between you and her.

Yet, if you try to get her back by telling her about your feelings, then it's going to be one-sided and therefore, she's not going to be interested.

3. Doing more of what got you dumped in the first place

If you keep using the same approach with your ex girlfriend that you've been using up to this point (e.g. being too nice to her, giving her power over you that she doesn't want), she's not going to suddenly think, "Wow! He's so nice to me. He's so loyal. Why did I ever break up with him?"

It's just not how it works.

You've got to use a new approach with her that causes her to feel the need to respect you, appreciate you and love you.

That's how she really wants to feel.

She doesn't want to feel as though it's all about you hoping to get another chance with her.

If you make her feel that way, she will make you feel like her back up plan.

Then, before you know it, you will hear, "Sorry, but I've met someone new and I really like him. So, please stop contacting me. I wish you all the best and will hold a special place for you in my heart. Goodbye."

4. Not letting her see that you're happy and enjoying life without her

Sometimes a guy assumes that his ex will get angry and never want to speak to him again, if she sees that he is happy and enjoying his life (around other people).

He assumes that he needs to show her that he's sitting around at home, being 100% loyal to her, even though she's out there doing whatever she wants.

Alternatively, he assumes that seeing him enjoying himself around other people (via photos or videos on his social media), will cause her to want to do the same and she might then meet a new guy.

Yet, while a woman might pretend to be angry, she will secretly be feeling worried that she is losing her ex who loved her so much, which then causes her to want to draw him back in.

In the process of doing that, she feels more desire to get him back and it then becomes a whole lot easier for him.

Of course, sometimes a woman will go out and want to party and be around other people to make her ex feel bad, but she will be thinking about him.

If she doesn't meet a new guy that she likes and she's had a few drinks, or comes back home alone, guess who she's going to be texting?

Another mistake to avoid is

5. Assuming that she will want you back for real if you cut off contact

The reality is that your ex girlfriend might reach out to you to check and confirm that you're still missing her, but that doesn't mean she wants you back.

In fact, she might even be having sex, dating or in a relationship with another guy already and simply contact you to check to see if you still want her, so she can feel better about herself.

She can then get on with her life with confidence, knowing that she has two men who think she's amazing and want to be with her.

Alternatively, she might never contact you at all and just move on with someone else instead.

That's why, I recommend that you take control of the situation.

Prepare yourself to interact with her and re-attract her and then do it.

You will be surprised at how quickly her behavior and treatment of you changes.

Suddenly, she wants you back and she's at your place, in your arms, looking into your eyes.

You're holding her and thinking, Yes, I did it!

My Ex Said That We Drifted Apart in the Relationship

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why a couple will drift apart in a relationship and what a man can do to get her back:

1. After the initial excitement of being with each other wore off, they gradually began to take each other's presence and commitment for granted

[image: After the initial excitement of being with each other wore off, they gradually began to take each other's presence and commitment for granted]

They assumed that because they both loved each other so much at the start, it would be enough to keep them together for life, or at least for a lot longer.

So, they stopped putting in effort to make the other person feel loved, appreciated and valued.

For example: At the start of the relationship, the guy might have been very loving and attentive towards his woman.

He did that by always noticing her efforts to look attractive for him and complimenting her on her appearance.

He also told her that he loved her and appreciated all the things she did for him (e.g. cooking, cleaning, running errands to save him time, being supportive, being fun to hang out with).

Over time though, he began to take her efforts for granted and just expected her to look good, treat him well, be fun to hang out with and remain in his life out of duty, or because they were so in love at the start.

As for her, she started out the relationship by showing him a lot of appreciation and love, but over time, she began to put more of her attention into other things (e.g. work, spending time with her friends, pursuing her hobbies, playing with her phone).

As a result, they lose the connection that initially attracted them to each other and made them want to be a couple.

2. Rather than adapting to each other and building mutual goals for the future, they worked on goals that would naturally cause them to drift apart

[image: Rather than adapting to each other and building mutual goals for the future, they worked on goals that would naturally cause them to drift apart]

For a couple to be able to stay together in the long term, they need to have important mutual goals that they're working towards achieving together (e.g. getting a house together, moving to a better area, going on holidays to places that they will eventually be able to afford, doing things that they can't currently afford, but will be able to once they achieve other career goals, getting married and starting a family, creating a close, happy family together).

It's fine to have individual goals, but there also needs to be couple goals, that are big, important, meaningful and fun to look forward to, otherwise they will naturally drift apart.

Additionally, it's also fine for a man to be focused on his purpose in life (i.e. his biggest goal, ambition, vision or reason for doing what he does) and make that a success, but there also needs to be a vision, purpose and reason for them remaining together in the long run.

If there isn't, the relationship will start to feel unnecessary after a number of years and they will eventually drift apart.

3. The relationship became stale and didn't level up

[image: The relationship became stale and didn't level up]

The lust love that a couple feels at the start is completely different to the dedicated, unconditional love they can feel in the long run.

Not all couples get to that point though, hence the amount of break ups and divorces.

Yet, those who do are in a relationship that has leveled up in so many ways (i.e. the connection, what they achieve together, how they relate to each other, their understanding of each other, their communication style, the respect, attraction and love they feel, how committed they are to each other).

The only way to make a relationship last and be happy and in love for life is to level it up as you go along.

There's just no other way.

Without that, you will drift apart from each other and end up experiencing yet another break up in your life.

It will continue to happen until you understand where you've been going wrong and learn to do things differently.

It's just how it goes.

Now, with you and your ex – you still do have a chance with her.

You can re-attract her and get her into a new, leveled up relationship that feels better for both you and her.

You can do that, but you have to be willing to make some adjustment to how you talk to her, interact with her and relate to her.

If you are willing to that, you will bring out a different side to both of you that will bring you closer together, more in love and more attracted to each other than you have been in a very long time.

4. They treated each other more like housemates than anything else

They got so caught up in the responsibilities of life (e.g. chores, paying bills, running errands, cooking) that they convinced themselves they were too tired to put in any effort into keeping the romance alive in the relationship.

It just felt all too difficult for them, even though other couples who had even more responsibilities in life than them, were keeping the romance alive and enjoying a loving relationship.

Before too long, they stopped looking at each other as boyfriend and girlfriend (e.g. sexy, desirable, exciting, fun to be around) and began treating each other like a friend or housemate.

Yet, that dynamic will never work to keep a man and a woman together in a sexual, loving relationship.

It simply doesn't work that way.

To keep the spark alive, you have to look at your woman like a new woman that you're seducing and picking up, even if you've been with her for 10 or 20 years.

You've got to look at her as a woman that you want to pick up as well, rather than just a housemate, or a person who helps you pay the bills or take care of the house and other responsibilities.

If you don't look at her that way, you will begin to feel attracted to other women (or look at porn more than usual) because you no longer see her as what you want.

When that happens, your behavior towards her and treatment of her will change.

You might be nice to her and treat her well, but you won't really see her.

You will look 'through' her as though she is just a random woman, rather than looking at her and feeling desire and determination to turn her on, make her enjoy being physically close to you and have sex with her.

Instead, you might retreat to your phone, video games, TV, hanging out with friends or more work, to avoid approaching and seducing her as your woman.

If you can relate to treating her more like a housemate at times and letting her drift into the background of your life, it doesn't mean that you can't get her back now.

So many men get women back in a situation similar to yours.

What you need to do is interact with her again and make her feel attracted in new ways (e.g. if you were too neutral before like a friend, you are now more of a playful challenge and also flirt with her to create sexual tension. If you were distant and emotional insecure, you are now present and emotionally strong).

When you do that, it suddenly reactivates her old feelings for you and mixes them in with her new, exciting feelings for who you are now and how that makes her feel.

She then begins to feel as though she would seriously regret it and miss you if she didn't get back with you, or at least give the relationship another chance for a while to see how she feels.

As a result, she opens up to you and you can get her back.

Another reason why a couple will drift apart in a relationship is

5. One of them, or both of them secretly thought that the relationship wouldn't last, so they didn't put much effort into it

[image: One of them, or both of them secretly thought that the relationship wouldn't last, so they didn't put much effort into it]

Sometimes a relationship will start out as a hook up where the couple is attracted to each other sexually, but isn't really looking to get into a serious, committed relationship that lasts for life.

Yet, due to their attraction for each other and unique connection, one of both of them might change their mind and decide to want to have a committed, exclusive relationship.

For example: A guy might realize that he finds his woman sexually attractive and enjoys having sex with her, but he also really feels drawn to her as a person.

He loves the way she thinks, acts or behaves.

He loves the way she reacts to him, how she inspires him to be better and how he wants to be a good man to her.

As a result, he naturally begins to fall in love with her and starts imagining a future together.

Meanwhile, sheâ is secretly happy to just have a short term, sexual relationship with him, but she doesnât foresee anything more, because she feels that she will eventually get bored of his approach in the long run (e.g. heâs too nice, he isnât very adventurous and just sticks to a boring routine all the time, he mistakenly thinks that doing more and more for her is the secret to getting her to love him more and treat him better).

She knows what kind of man would make her fall madly in love (e.g. a confident man who is a bit of a challenge for her to maintain the interest of, who treats her well, but doesnât put up with her bad behavior. He has a way of making her feel happy about being a good girl for him, without him really having to do anything for her. He is ambitious, but not to impress her. Heâs doing it because he wants to and she can come along for the ride if she wants, but he isnât going to drag her there. He looks at her as a feminine woman, therefore as being less dominant than him, rather than looking at her as his equal in terms of dominance. He loves her completely, but he could fall out of love if she didnât show him enough respect, affection and keep herself looking pretty. He doesnât tell her that though. She just gets that sense about him and it drives her wild (in a good way). It keeps her thinking about him all the time, wanting to impress him and win over more of his love).

A woman will know that about her desire, but she will rarely, if ever, speak of it to a man.

A man either knows it, or not.

She doesnât want to be the one to teach him, only to then see him try to act like that man and therefore, turn her off because heâs essentially following her instructions.

This is something that men simply need to know about women, or learn from other men.

Itâs not something to ask women about because they will almost always feel uncomfortable about telling the truth (i.e. what kind of woman would want to say, âI want you to laugh at me sometimes if Iâm being a pain in the butt, rather than taking me seriouslyâ?).

Women canât say that because it will usually cause a man to take it the wrong way and go too far with it (i.e. laugh at her all the time, never take her seriously, assume that she wants to be disrespected), to hopefully impress her.

Thatâs not what she wants.

She wants a balanced, good man who understands the darker side of attraction that women can rarely, if ever, speak about.

A man who will treat her well, but also give her tastes of the darker side of attraction (e.g. occasionally being very masculine in his behavior around her, or when touching her or having sex with her. Occasionally laughing at her when she is trying to be intimidating, but other times taking her seriously, being loving and warm. Occasionally looking at her with raw, aggressive masculinity in his eyes and then touching her, kissing her and having sex with her, while almost all other times, being loving, warm, intimate).

If a man is uncomfortable with the other side of the Coin of Attraction (i.e. the dark side) and is only comfortable with the light side, then he will never, ever have a woman truly love him in a sexual and romantic way.

She may love him as a good friend, a nice man or as a nice companion, but she will always secretly feel desire to occasionally experience and taste his darker side.

It might sound bad to say darker side, but it's not about good vs. evil.

It's about being nice vs. having balls, or being masculine.

There's nothing wrong with having balls around your woman (i.e. expressing the darker side of your masculinity), as long as you are also a good man to her and treat her well.

Additionally, as long as your expression of masculinity is done with love and not hate, she will respect you and appreciate you in an almost indescribable way.

Essentially, no other man will compare and she will hold you in her heart as the one.

3 Mistakes to Avoid When Attempting to Get an Ex Back After Drifting Apart in the Relationship

1. Desperately telling her that you will change whatever she needs you to change

While that seems nice, honorable and very caring, it also seems a little forced from the woman's perspective.

As a result, she will think something like, "So, it's not that he really wants to change, but is just doing it to hopefully get me back. I'm basically going to be forcing him into it and he will probably secretly resent me for it. Then, he will either fall back into his old patterns when he gets bored or tired of pleasing me, or will end up breaking up with me when he feels ready to do so."

Additionally, being desperate for a woman rarely works at all stages of the relationship cycle (i.e. meeting her for the first time, going on a first date, getting into a relationship, keeping the relationship together, trying to get her back).

If a guy is desperate when meeting women for the first time, they will rarely be interested in him and will almost always reject him.

He might get lucky from time to time, but it will rarely be with women he truly wants and if it is, they will dump him eventually.

The same applies throughout the rest of the relationship cycle.

So, if you want to get her back, don't make the classic mistake of promising to change whatever she wants, in the hope that she then gives you another chance.

Most women see that as desperate and as a result, they reject it.

2. Being unaware of the core things that make a couple feel close and connected and then using that to get her back

For example: Some of the core things include:

- Being able to be your true self around each other. That means being your true masculine self (that you honestly feel inside) and letting that come through. It also includes seemingly unimportant or silly things like eating the way you want at home, rather than having to put on act of eating very politely in front of each other, or letting an occasional fart or burp out and not being embarrassed about it around each other. The more of a fake act that a couple has to put on around each other, the less close and connected they will feel.

Knowing that the other person understands you and loves you for who you are.

- Showing interest in the things that the other person likes (e.g. football, shopping, antiques, video games) or at least appreciating that they are interested in them and letting them enjoy them (e.g. if she likes certain TV drama shows and he doesn't).
- Being able to fully trust each other.
- Being able to laugh together, especially when things are stressful (e.g. at work, after a fight, during tough times).
- Having a balanced relationship dynamic where you make her feel loved and appreciated, but she also feels motivated to be a good woman back to you.
- Being able to connect on a deep level through conversation, rather than being afraid to open up and be real about things. Of course, as a man, you should still be masculine about your emotions (i.e. express emotion, but then focus on a solution, be emotionally strong), while letting her be a girl about things (i.e. express her emotion, not have to focus on a solution like a man, cry or feel vulnerable, want to cuddle into you for support and safety).

If a man is unaware of the core things that really bring a couple closer together, then he will struggle to reconnect with his ex in a way that inspires and motivates her to give him a chance.

Instead, interactions with him will feel superficial, tired and she will feel as though the relationship is done.

3. Feeling like there's no chance to get her back because she doesn't seem to care anymore

She will care when you re-attract her.

It's as simple as that.

If you try to get her back before re-attracting her, then she's going to judge you based on how she felt leading up to, during and after the break up.

So remember: Attraction first and everything else after that.

If you try to skip re-attracting her and attempt to get another chance just by talking to her, or texting her, then you will almost certainly continue to be rejected.

Why?

Most women break up with men when they no longer feel enough respect, attraction and love to be with them.

That rarely changes due to a break up (i.e. her feelings don't automatically come back for no reason).

If you want her to have feelings for you again and care about getting back together, you have to re-attract her.

When Will She Start to Miss Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Whether or not a woman will miss her ex guy, depends on the following:

1. If she meets a new guy that she finds more interesting and attractive

[image: If she meets a new guy that she finds more interesting and attractive]

If she does, she might end up getting so caught up in the enjoyment of being attracted and falling in love, that she doesn't really miss her ex much, or at all.

As you may know, everything can seem perfect at the beginning of a new relationship and feel like it's going to last forever.

So, if a guy is hoping that his ex misses him, but she's happy in a new relationship, she's probably going to be focused on all of the positive things about her new guy (e.g. he's more confident, more of a challenge, seems to treat her better, seems like he might be able to offer her a more stable, secure future).

Of course, that doesn't mean her new guy is perfect.

He will almost certainly have his faults too.

However, a woman usually won't be focused on that as much in the beginning.

As a result, it's a lot easier for her to not get caught up in missing her ex and feeling drawn to him again.

Yet, if her ex builds up the courage to contact her, interact with her and re-attract her, he can reactivate her feelings and get her to begin questioning whether or not she is really over him.

Using that approach is always more effective for men (who want to get women back), then being afraid to do anything and just hoping that she will somehow miss him and come running back, for some reason.

Some guys do get women back by doing nothing, but it's so rare and in most cases, the guy waits for weeks or months for his ex to miss him, only to see her continue to move on without him.

Watch the video below if you want me to explain that in further detail, as well as other problems guys encounter when they take a passive (rather than active) approach to getting an ex woman back.

The reality is that you don't need to give your ex loads of time to hopefully miss you.

You can interact with her, re-attract her and make her want you back within days, or at the latest, 1-2 weeks.

You can take control of the situation, rather than waiting around, stressing out about her moving on and then finding out that she's happy with a new guy and now wants nothing to do with you.

Something else that will determine when she will start to miss you is!

2. If she realizes that the break up was petty and she should have been more patient with you

[image: If she realizes that the break up was petty and she should have been more patient with you]

Sometimes a break up can happen over something very small (e.g. an argument that got out of hand and turned into a big fight, a little misunderstanding over a text from another woman that made her feel insecure in that moment, or texts on her phone that made him insecure, temporary added pressure from to her studies or work).

In the moment, it can seem so serious and lead to a feeling that she should definitely break up with him.

Yet, once sheâs calmed down, a woman often realizes that she overreacted and is now actually missing her ex a little and wanting him back.

In some cases, she will then contact her ex and try to reconcile the relationship, so they can get back together.

Not all women do that though.

As a man, what you really need to understand is that a woman missing a man and making a move to get him back are two different things altogether.

The truth is, a lot of women wonât contact an ex after a break up (even if it was her fault), in case he rejects her.

Women fear that if they do contact their ex after dumping him, he may then reject her and make her feel like the one who is getting dumped.

Alternatively, he might open up to her emotionally again, seem to be getting back with her, have sex with her and then say that he doesnât want to be with her anymore because of what she did to him.

As a result, she ends up feeling rejected and like the one who is getting dumped.

This is why, a woman will usually wait for ex to make the first move, before she will then begin to let down her guard and open up to getting back with him.

So, rather than being passive, you should be active like a man and call her, re-attract her on the call and then give her a few days to miss you, before contacting her again.

In most cases, the guy doesnât have to wait a few days to contact her, because she is already missing him (due to him re-attracting her on the call) and has reached out to him.

He then arranges a catch up, builds on her attraction and gets her back.

Another thing that can determine how long it takes for her to miss you, or whether she will miss you at all isâ!

3. If she still finds you attractive or not

[image: If she still finds you attractive or not]

When a woman still feels attracted to her ex, she will naturally miss him because attraction is what motivates men and women to be together as a couple.

For example: If you turn off a manâs hormones and stop him from feeling attracted to a woman, he will suddenly lose interest in having sex with women or having a girlfriend.

The same applies with women.

Women are only drawn to men based on their attraction to them and if you take that away by switching off her hormones, then she will suddenly lose interest in men and focus on little hobbies, hanging out with her girlfriends or other things not relationship to sexual relationships with men.

So, in terms of your ex: Her hormones make her feel motivated to be with a man that she feels attracted to.

This natural function is designed to make women come together, have sex and be together long enough for offspring to be created.

Even if a man and a woman don't want to have children, their attraction to each other is fueled by their hormones and other chemicals in their body, which are driving them to be together, have sex and stay together long enough for offspring to potentially be created.

This is why, if your ex doesn't feel sexually attracted to you anymore, then her natural, bodily functions are going to push her to get away from you and find a guy that she is actually attracted to.

Even if she doesn't want children, her body will push her to be with a man that she is very attracted to, so there will be a lot of sex and eventually, the potential for offspring to be created.

So, if you wait around for your ex to hopefully miss you, it's only going to happen if she is still actually attracted to you.

If she isn't, she will feel driven to be with a new man who makes her feel a lot of attraction.

This is why, if you think that your ex isn't very attracted to you anymore, then you should build up the courage to interact with her, make her feel attracted to you again and then give her a few days of space to miss you.

That is what works and gets the highest results when it comes to getting ex women back.

Sitting around and doing nothing rarely produces any result and results in the woman moving on with a man who makes her feel attracted.

4. If she ever did really love you or not

[image: If she ever did really love you or not]

Sometimes a woman will get into a relationship because she doesn't want to be alone.

Secretly, she plans on eventually breaking up with the guy at some point, unless he is able to level up as a man (i.e. become more confident, more manly in his behavior, be more of a challenge, make her feel the desire to impress him and treat him well) and make her truly fall in love with him and want to be with him.

So, when a woman like that gets bored of the relationship because he isn't changing and might even be getting worse (i.e. becoming more insecure), or if she realizes that her feelings for him just aren't developing, she will usually decide to just go ahead and break up with him.

In cases like that, she won't really miss him and will instead feel disappointed that she wasted her time with him.

On the other hand, when a woman truly loves a man in a relationship and honestly wants to be with him, then she will naturally miss him from time to time after a break up.

The reason why is that true love doesn't die.

Sometimes, true love gets buried under negative emotions such as anger, disappointment and misunderstandings, but it is still always there in the background.

So, what should you do?

If she didn't really ever love you, then it will be due to the approach you used with her (i.e. too nice, not enough of a challenge).

As a result, you need to prepare yourself (quickly, over the next few days) to interact with her and let her sense that you have changed and are now the kind of man she finds attractive and appealing.

Then, give her a few days to miss you and proceed with the rest of the ex back process.

If she did truly love you, then don't sit around any long wondering things like, When will she start to miss me? and risk losing her if she meets someone else, or if she assumes you don't care about her anymore.

Just call her, reactivate some of her feelings, meet up in person and make her fall in love with the man you are now.

Let her see that you have realized where you were going wrong, have made changes and are letting her experience those changes, but aren't trying to sell yourself to her by telling her how much you've changed and asking if she'll give you another chance based on that.

Just let her experience the new, exciting feelings that she will have in reaction to the changes and adjustments you've made.

If she truly loved you and can now feel new, exciting feelings, then she will naturally open up and want to get back with you.

Another thing that will determine when she will start to miss you is

5. If she has girlfriends who will take her out to meet new guys, or if she has no problem lining up dates via dating apps

[image: If she has girlfriends who will take her out to meet new guys, or if she has no problem lining up dates via dating apps]

If a woman doesn't have many girlfriends to hang out with, who will build up her confidence and encourage her to start dating, she might end up sitting around at home, feeling lonely and missing her ex.

On the other hand, if a woman has a lot of girlfriends who push her to go out to clubs, bars and parties with them to meet guys, then she's a lot less likely to notice her ex's absence in her life.

Alternatively, if she is the type to use dating apps like Tinder, Hinge or Bumble, then she will usually find it pretty easy to line up a bunch of dates and start hooking up with new guys to help get her over her ex and moving on.

3 Mistakes to Avoid When Trying to Get an Ex to Miss You

1. Assuming that absence always makes the heart grow fonder

[image: Assuming that absence always makes the heart grow fonder]

Sometimes being out of a woman's life does make her miss you, but in most ex back cases where a woman has dumped a guy that she no longer feels enough respect, attraction or love to want to be with, it doesn't.

Instead, the opposite happens (i.e. *â□□ Out of sight out of mind*â□□) and she begins to completely forget about him, only to randomly think of him sometimes, but not really miss him or want him back.

Essentially, if you donâ□□t interact with your ex and reawaken her feelings for you or create new, exciting, compelling feelings for you, then some other guy will attract her instead.

So, if you want her back for real, donâ□□t make the classic mistake of sitting around and waiting for her to miss you for no reason.

She will either forget about you, block you out of her mind, or actually miss you, but be too afraid to contact you in case you reject her.

As a result, she will focus on moving on with a new guy to make herself feel better.

Then, if the new guy happens to make her feel more attracted and in love than you ever did, she will put her focus on him and leave you behind.

You can get her back, but just donâ□□t put yourself in a situation where you leave everything in her hands.

Be a man about this and take control of the situation.

Get her back.

Another mistake to avoid isâ□□!

2. Not realizing that you probably wouldnâ□□t be missing an ex woman and yearning to get her back if you werenâ□□t attracted to her anymore

Think about it this wayâ□□!

If you dumped a woman that you didnâ□□t want to be with anymore, would you be sitting around missing her and wishing you could get her back, if you could easily attract and hook up with new, pretty women?

Probably not.

It might be hard for you to imagine, because your thoughts are focused on your ex at the moment and you really do want her back.

Yet, try to imagine how youâ□□d feel if you happily broke up with a woman and didnâ□□t want to be with her anymore.

Youâ□□d probably just move on.

Of course, if that ex woman arranged for you and her to meet up and then made you feel attracted to her again (e.g. by being sweet, warm, loving and looking very sexy and attractive in your eyes), then youâ□□d probably feel attracted enough to want to be with her again.

Then, if she didnâ□□t contact you after the catch up (assuming that you and her didnâ□□t hook up that day or night), you most likely be missing her and wondering what sheâ□□s up to.

Why?

She made you feel attracted to her again.

Attraction is what brings men and women together in a sexual way and without that, itâ□□s just not a boyfriend-girlfriend or husband-wife relationship.

So, if you want to get your ex back, just know that attraction is the most important, most fundamental thing you need to get right.

When you get it right, the whole ex back process just flows from one step to the next because she wants it to happen too.

Just don't make the mistake of hoping that she'll miss you, even though she probably isn't feeling attracted to you and hasn't since the break up.

Make her feel attracted again, so she has a reason to want to open back up to you.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Assuming that the way to get an ex woman back is to let her go and just wait

There are so many reasons why that approach can backfire on a man who wants a woman back.

For example: The woman might

- Take it as a sign that he's interested anymore and feel hurt and rejected by that. She then hooks up with a new man to feel better about herself and potentially likes the new man better than her ex.
- Focus on having a lot of fun being single, flirting with new men and forgetting all about her ex.
- Assume he's using the No Contact Rule on her (i.e. ignore an ex for 30 days in the hope that she comes back). As a result, she feels angry at him for trying to manipulate her like that and wants to hook up with a new man and fall in love, to make her ex regret ignoring her.
- Gradually get over him during the time he ignores her, so that when he eventually does get in touch, she doesn't really care about him anymore and rejects him again. He had his chance, but he left it too long to make a move.

This is why, if you want a woman back, you shouldn't wait too long.

You've got to figure out where you really went wrong with her (e.g. being insecure, not being manly enough in your behavior, attitude, actions or emotions, giving her too much power over you, which she didn't want) and then interact with her, let her experience the new and improved you and as a result, cause her to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

When she is feeling that, she is going to be missing you and wanting you back, or at least wanting to open herself up to hook up with you again to see how she feels afterwards.

I Want a Second Chance With Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

You can get a second chance with her, but the question isâ€¦!

1. Do you know what would make her feel motivated to give you a second chance?

[image: Do you know what would make her feel motivated to give you a second chance?]

To get a second chance, you first have to get clear on the subtle things about you that caused her to want to end the relationship, so you can make the right, subtle changes that will naturally re-attract her and make her want to open up to giving you another chance.

If you try to get back with her and she senses that youâ€™d probably make the same old mistakes as before (e.g. be insecure, give her too much power in the relationship), then she isnâ€™t going to feel motivated to want to give you another chance.

Some of the subtle things that women look for in men include:

- He treats her well, but at the same time, also makes her feel then need to treat him well without having to push her to do it. Where guys go wrong: Just being good to a woman and hoping that she will love them for that. Thereâ€™s more to romantic love than just being good to a woman.
- He is emotionally open and available, but is also a bit of a challenge for her at the same time. Where guys go wrong: Just being emotionally open and available, so the woman feels as though she doesnâ€™t have to try to win over more of his love. He is already giving 100%, so there is no challenge for her and therefore, no need for her to try any harder.
- He remains confident and in control when she tests his confidence and composure under pressure, by being moody and distant. Where guys go wrong: Losing confidence, becoming clingy or getting irritable or angry when a woman is moody or distant. Real men donâ€™t react negatively to a womanâ€™s ever changing moods. Real men remain confident and sure of themselves at all times, while still being respectful and loving towards the woman.
- He makes her the most important person in his life, but not the most important thing. Where guys go wrong: Making a woman the most important person and thing. Therefore, his whole life revolves around her and he then becomes jealous, controlling, needy and insecure. Real men see their purpose (or vision) for their life as the most important thing and work towards achieving the goals associated with that. A woman gets to be the most important person in his life, but she can lose that position if she doesnâ€™t respect him, treat him well or if she tries to stop him from pursuing his big goals and dreams.
- He is a good man, but he is also masculine in his energy, therefore making her feel feminine in comparison to him and happy that she is being treated well. Where guys go wrong: A guy will suppress his masculinity because he thinks itâ€™s â€œwrongâ€œ or â€œdisrespectfulâ€œ towards a woman to be anything but nice, soft or neutral around her like a good friend. As a result, she doesnâ€™t feel feminine and therefore, doesnâ€™t feel sexually and romantically attracted. Instead, she feels more like a friend, or sister to him. Real men embrace their masculinity and let it come through via their body language, vibe, conversation style, tone of voice, behavior and actions. Women rarely get to be around men like that and when they do, they feel deeply and magnetically attracted.

How about you?

Can you relate to any of the examples above, in terms of where you might have gone right or wrong with her during the relationship?

Maybe you started out being quite confident, masculine and goal-oriented, but lost some or a lot of that over time in the relationship.

What subtle things about you really turned her off and caused her to lose interest?

That is what you need to get clear on first, before you even attempt to contact her because if she senses that you haven't really changed, then she's not going to feel motivated to get back with you.

2. Would you know how to create a new relationship dynamic with her that caused her to be more respectful, affectionate and loving towards you?

[image: Would you know how to create a new relationship dynamic with her that caused her to be more respectful, affectionate and loving towards you?]

Women want to be good to their man, but you have to bring that side of them out.

One guy will bring out a bitchy, mean, cold side of a woman and another will bring out a loving, sweet and warm side of her.

It's the same woman, but each guy used a different approach with her and as a result, created a different relationship dynamic.

For example: If a guy is too nice, accommodating, nervous and unsure of himself, a woman is naturally going to feel a lot less respect, attraction and love for him, compared to a guy who is good to her, a bit of a challenge, confident and assertive.

Likewise, if a relationship starts off well, but the guy eventually becomes insecure, needy and jealous, then it doesn't how many great dates they went on in the past, how great the sex was or how much she loves him; she's going to lose interest.

Additionally, his insecurity, neediness and jealousy is going to bring out a different side of her, where she starts becoming more and more distant, unloving and detached.

If he is unable to stop behaving in that way and change the relationship dynamic, she will eventually tire of it and break up with him.

So, before you reach out to her and get her back, ask yourself: Will I be able to create a new relationship dynamic based on the changes I've made, or will it essentially be the same as before?

If you feel as though you haven't really changed your insecurities or issues, then you should address those first.

Of course, you don't need to change everything about yourself or become perfect first to get her back, but you do need to begin making some adjustments and preparing yourself to succeed at making her want you back.

3. Will you know what to do if she initially plays hard to get?

When a guy reaches out to his ex woman (who is secretly open to potentially getting back together), she will usually play hard to get, rather than being open and easy to get back with right away.

Most women do that because they want to be sure that heâs worth giving a second chance to. Essentially, sheâs looking to find the answers to questions like:

- Will you lose confidence in yourself and in your worthiness to her, if she isnât making it easy for you initially?
- Will you give up on getting a second chance if she doesnât seem interested after the first message, or first few messages you exchange?
- Will you get angry at her?
- Are you really interested in her, or just reaching out to her because you are bored, or want to get her interested again and then lose interest in her to get revenge?
- Will you lose control of your emotions and start pouring your heart out, telling her all about your feelings for her and how hard it has been for you? (Thatâs not attractive to women).
- Will you have the confidence to joke around with her and flirt with her like old times, or will you lack confidence and assume that you are only âallowedâ to talk to her in a nice, friendly, polite way?
- Do you seem to have changed based on how you now talk to her, or are you still essentially the same guy, with the same insecurities, who is giving it one last effort to try to get her back?
- Do you seem wiser, more mature and more confident now?
- Are you able to make her feel open, relaxed and interested when talking to you, or does she feel the need to remain closed up, tense and distant?

As a result, she will either feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, or she will feel as though she probably made the right decision to end the relationship (i.e. because nothing has changed).

If you want her to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction and therefore, be willing to open up and see where things go, you have to be able to give her the impression that she would have a different, more enjoyable experience with you now, based on the changes youâve made.

She will get that impression based on how differently you interact with her and how that now makes her feel (i.e. she now feels more excited, turned on, alive and interested when talking to you).

Of course, if she is the type to play a little hard to get, she might not make that 100% obvious to you right away, which is why you need to maintain your confidence, continue to build up her attraction and then move things forward (i.e. to a phone call, catch up in person to say hi, hug, kiss, sex).

4. If you dumped a woman that you werenât attracted to, what would she have to do to get a second chance with you?

Since the real, more secret reason why most men break up with a woman is due to her physical appearance, she would usually have to improve her physical appearance (e.g. lose some weight, wear sexier clothes, change her makeup) in order to get another chance.

Of course, sometimes a guy will be struggling to get laid after dumping his ex girlfriend and will take her back briefly, just so he can have sex with her and hang out with her again.

Yet, in most cases, if a man has broken up with a woman due to no longer finding her physical appearance attractive (or if he never did and was just with her for a while, or until he found something better), then sheâs going to have to make herself look a whole lot better to make him willing to give her another chance.

Interestingly though, it doesn't work the same way for women who dump men.

Why?

Women are much more attracted to how a man's behavior, attitude and actions makes them feel, rather than how he looks.

The real, more secret reasons why a woman will break up with a man include him not being manly enough (in his attitude, behavior or actions), being too insecure, being jealous and needy and so on.

If he were to suddenly become a lot more manly in his attitude, behavior and actions, be confident, emotionally independent and sure of himself, while still treating her well and being a good man, then she would suddenly see him as being attractive again.

So, while it is totally fine to take care of your physical appearance as a man, it's truly not the deciding factor for almost all women out there, when they judge a man as being attractive in terms of relationship potential.

What really matters are things like this:

- Can she relax into being fully feminine in your presence, or does she feel more like she has to lead you and tell you what to do?
- Do you make her feel turned on and excited to be interacting with you, or does she feel bored, stressed or indifferent?
- Can you make her smile and laugh even when she is being moody or distant, or are you afraid to be another other than nice during those times, or stay out of her way to hopefully not get into trouble with her or to stay on her good side?
- Are you more confident than her in social situations, therefore making her feel protected, safe and proud to be with you, or is she more confident, therefore making her feel like she has to protect you and feel embarrassed at your lack of manliness at times?
- Do you make her feel loved, special and wanted, while also making her feel a natural desire to make you feel the same way in return? Are you only able to give love, but not get enough of it in return, or are you on the other end of the extreme where you take love, but don't give enough in return?
- Are you able to make decisions and confidently follow through on them, without needing her to encourage you along, or approve of your decisions, or do you essentially need her input and backing before you do anything important? While it's good to make some joint decisions as a couple, a man has to be able to make his own decisions about his own life as well. If he is too dependent on a woman, she ends up feeling like his mother or big sister, which kills her sexual attraction for him.

Those things and more are much more important in a relationship than a guy's appearance, so make sure that you don't make the mistake of thinking that looking good (i.e. wearing nice clothes, working out at the gym, getting a new hairstyle) will seal the deal with your ex and land you a second chance.

If she senses that the things she is really looking for in you (e.g. confidence, emotional masculinity) aren't there, then your efforts to look good won't impress her.

You can re-attract her, get her back and enjoy a second chance with her, but just make sure that you do it right.

You have to start within (i.e. your emotional attractiveness) if you honestly want her to feel differently when she interacts with you and eagerly want to open up and give you another chance.

That's how men really get their ex woman back and you can do it too.

Just don't sell yourself short by focusing on your physical appearance, or trying to get her back without really changing anything from within.

After all, who you really are on the inside, always comes through on the outside.

She will sense it, so get it right and she will naturally feel attracted and feel compelled to give you a second chance.

Another question to ask yourself is

5. Do you think she has been missing you, or having second thoughts about the break up?

[image: Do you think she has been missing you, or having second thoughts about the break up?]

If so, then you should reach out to her and start the ex back process as soon as possible.

A classic mistake that guys make is to ignore their ex for many weeks or months, only to eventually see her move on.

The reality is that when a guy doesn't contact his ex woman, she will usually see it as a sign that he doesn't care about her anymore and is moving on.

So, rather than contacting him and risk getting rejected, she forces herself to continue getting over the break up and moving on (usually by going out on dates and hooking up with other men).

Meanwhile, her ex who wants her back, is ignoring her in the hope that it makes her build up the courage to contact him.

Yet, she never does and he ends up missing her for years or decades after that; always wishing he'd just called her and gave it a shot.

3 Mistakes That Can Reduce Your Chances of a Second Chance With Her

1. Asking for a second chance via text, message or email

It's a lot easier for a woman to assume negative things about you and reject your request for a second chance, when she can't see your body language, or hear the tonality of your voice.

Even if you really have transformed yourself into a better man, it's difficult, if not impossible, for to fully determine the changes in you via text, social media message or emails.

This is why, you should only use texts, messages or email as an initial way to get back into contact with her, but should get to a phone call (or video call) as soon as possible, so she can get a sense of the changes you've made.

Then, get to an in person meet up as soon as possible, so you can re-attract her more directly and let her see for herself that she really does feel differently around you now (i.e. she's more attracted, feels excited, alive and turned on, drawn to you, butterflies in her stomach, feels her love for you coming back).

Then, get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

You can do that, but it will rarely, if ever happen, if you just hide behind the safety of texts, social media messages or emails.

2. Expressing your feelings for her and then asking for another chance

Although it would be nice if all you had to do was tell a woman how you feel and she would then instantly want you back, it just doesn't work that way.

If a woman has disconnected from her sexual and romantic feelings for you, telling her about your feelings isn't going to suddenly make her feel the same way about too.

The only way to make her have feelings for you, is to interact with her and focus on making her feel attracted to the new and improved you.

That can be accomplished during the first interaction you have with her, but it might take 2 or 3 depending on if she is playing hard to get and keeping her guard up to see how you react.

However, at the end of the day, she's going to be feeling attracted and drawn to you and as a result, be interested in exploring her new feelings for you.

You can then get her back when you meet up with her.

Yet, if you just tell her about your feelings for her and ask for another chance, then it's one-sided.

The feelings aren't mutual, so she doesn't feel motivated to give you another chance.

Make the feelings mutual, or at least close to mutual first, before proceeding through the rest of the ex back process.

This is something that can be achieved very quickly, but you have to be willing to do it in the right order.

Women respond to ex's a lot differently than men do, so you need to understand what makes a woman want to quickly get back with a guy and give him another chance.

3. Apologizing to her and then asking for another chance

Although apologizing is an important part of the ex back process, it's not the main thing that will make your ex give you another chance, because it doesn't actually fix the problems that caused the break up.

It's fine to apologize, but your main focus needs to be on re-attraction, otherwise she's simply not going to care about being with you and will continue to move on.

So, if you want a second chance with your ex, don't waste time and energy trying to do it by promising her that things will be different this time.

Show her that things will be different by letting her experience the new and improved you for herself.

She will then open back up to you naturally and easily, because she really wants to.

5 Tips For Getting an Ex Back Who Was Your High School Sweetheart

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Millions of couples who were high school sweethearts break up when they are young and then get back together later in life.

You can be one of those couples and get her back.

How?

Here are 5 things you should do to ensure the highest chances of getting her back into a new, sexual, romantic relationship with you:

1. Clean up your social media account before re-adding her or re-approaching her

[image: Clean up your social media account before re-adding her or re-approaching her]

If you haven't spoken to her in a long time and you try to add her on Facebook, or reach out to her via email or text, then she is going to want to do a little research on you first, to see what kind of man you are today.

In other words, are you lonely, socially insecure and reaching out to her because you don't have many people in your life, or are you confident, happy and living a life that she would like to be a part of (i.e. you have friends, or get out and do fun things every now and then)?

That isn't as important to a man when selecting a woman and in most cases, he's not concerned if a woman doesn't have any or many friends or seems lonely and left out, but women do care about that because it can suggest a lot of things about the mental and emotional state of a man.

As you probably know at this point in your life, women feel attracted to men for different reasons that men feel attracted to women (i.e. women feel attracted to a man's confidence and manliness, whereas most men feel attracted to a woman's sweetness, softness and femininity).

With that in mind, if you want to get your high school sweetheart back, make sure that you approach the reconciliation in a way that attracts her, rather than repels her, or causes her to put her guard up and not want to experience new feelings for you.

The best way to start the reconciliation is to ensure that you will appear attractive to her via social media, when she checks up on you after you contact her.

So, if your high school sweetheart is already a friend of yours on social media, then spend a couple of weeks getting some photos of you enjoying life with friends, doing things outdoors and looking confident and happy, before you send her a message.

If she isn't currently a friend of yours, make sure that you update your social media profiles (e.g. Facebook, Instagram) to make you look more attractive and appealing before you contact her again.

It will help your chances and make her feel more attracted to you, if there are no posts or photos of you looking sad, lonely, bored nervous (e.g. sad selfies, you alone in a photo at an event looking a little left out or nervous).

Likewise, if you only have photo of your pet, food at a restaurant when eating alone, landscapes, gardens or buildings, then it's not going to make her see you as a man who is well liked by other people.

Instead, it is possible that she will assume you are lonely, don't have much going on in your life and are reaching out to her because of that, which will make her put her guard up and potentially even reject your offer, suggestion or request to catch up in person.

So, what you post on your profile from now should show you looking confident, happy and enjoying time with other people (including female friends or acquaintances if possible) to let her see that you in a more attractive and appealing light.

I've been helping new men get women back for many years now and I can tell you from experience that improving your social media profiles before contacting an ex woman, is one of the effective ways to ensure she opens up, is interested and curious to meet up with you.

So, once you've updated your social media profile(s), reach out to her.

2. Start off with a friendly message that includes a bit of light flirting as well

[image: Start off with a friendly message and add in a bit of light flirting]

For example: You might say something like, â"Hey ex girlfriend. Long time no speak! How are you? I just thought I'd get in touch to say hi as a friend. Would love to chat."

Alternatively, if you can add in some private humor to flirt with her, or an old joke that you and her used to say, then all the better, but keep the initial message brief.

Whatever you do though, don't make the classic mistake of saying that you still have feelings for her, or haven't been able to find a woman like her again and so on.

Just keep it briefly, friendly, include some flirting and then let her get back to you.

If she hasn't heard from you in a long time, she will likely think something like, â"Wow, this is unexpected. I wonder what he wants to chat with me about after all this time."

In almost all cases, she will then go and look at your social media profile to see what you've been up to lately (i.e. do you seem lonely, or do you have a fun, interesting looking life?).

When she can see that you're not lonely and in fact, are liked and loved by people around you, then she will almost certainly feel comfortable replying to you.

Then, when she responds to your initial

3. Ask for her number so you can call to say hi, or go ahead and call her if you already have it

If you've misplaced her number, or if she's changed it since your break up, simply ask for it and then get her on a call.

For example: Reply to her message and add on, â"BTW: What's your number? I'll give you a call to say hi."

If you already have her number, you can message her and reply to what she said, while also adding in, â"By the way – I'll give you a call to say hi sometime this week. Will be good to chat and have a laugh I'm sure."

4. Attract her on the phone, have a laugh together and then suggest catching up in person to say hi

Make sure you start off the call by using some humor (as early on as possible) to ease any awkward tension and get you and her connecting like you used to.

At the same time, make sure that you display attractive traits, rather than just talking to her as a friend, so when you suggest a meet up, she will be more likely to agree.

For example: Some attractive traits areâ€¦!

- Being relaxed, confident and at ease, rather than seeming tense or losing confidence if she seems a little closed off, guarded or unsure.
- Letting the tonality of your voice and the way you react and respond to her, show her that youâ€™re now at a different level to when you and her broke up (i.e. you are much more confident, manly and sure of yourself, while still being respectful towards her and treating her well).
- Playfully teasing her to create a sexual spark between you again, rather than just being nice (e.g. rather than just saying, â€œOh, wow congratulationsâ€ when she says that she achieved something big in her life, you can playfully tease her about it first, before congratulating her. So, if she got promoted at work and is now the manager, you can say, â€œWell, that suits you because you always were kind of bossyâ€ and have a laugh with her, before congratulating her).

Then, when her guard is down and she is relaxed and happy to be talking to you again, say something like, â€œHey, we should catch up to say hi. Letâ€™s meet up for a cup of coffee sometime this week. As friends of course. It would be good to catch up and have a laugh. Long time no speak.â€

If you have been displaying attractive traits and making her feel attracted as a result, then she will most likely agree to catch up and you can then arrange a time and place.

5. Re-attract her at the meet up and at least get to a hug

At the meet up, continue building on her sexual and romantic feelings for you by displaying attractive traits.

Show her via your body language, attitude, conversation style, actions and behavior that youâ€™re now a very different man to the one she knew in high school (e.g. youâ€™re so much more confident now, rather than being self-conscious and uncertain like you were in the past, youâ€™re more emotionally masculine and as a result, are able to make her feel like a real woman in your presence).

To ensure that she wants to get to a hug (and even kiss with you), using flirting to build up sexual tension between you and her.

Then, if you think that she is ready for a hug while the meet up is still taking place, you can say something like, â€œItâ€™s good to see that we still get along so well after all this time. Come here, bring it in for a hugâ€ and then give her a hug.

Alternatively, if you think that itâ€™s not appropriate to hug her during the meeting, then do it at the end.

You can say something like, â€œWell, it was great catching up with you. I think youâ€™re even more beautiful today than you were back then. Anyway, let's head off. Bring it in for a goodbye hug and then give her a hug.

If she doesn't pull away from the hug and keeps holding onto you, go ahead and lean in for a kiss.

Then, if she's open and seems to want to catch up to continue, go to your place or hers and hook up with her sexually.

From there, you and her will either get back together right away, or will begin seeing each other and developing the relationship.

4 Mistakes Men Make When Trying to Get a High School Sweetheart Back

1. Being afraid to get to a phone call or meet up, so he hides behind messages and she eventually loses interest

Messages are fine as a first step, but you have to take things to the next level.

When a man reaches out to a woman he used to love, but only texts her for weeks or months, she can end up thinking, "I don't understand why he bothered to contact me in the first place. Does he want a texting buddy or something? A pen pal? Does he like me or what?"

She will usually then begin to respond less and less, until she eventually stops responding altogether.

In some cases, a woman will continue responding in a case like that, but will also keep moving on with her life without him (e.g. having sex, dating and falling in love with other men).

So, if you want to get your high school sweetheart back, make sure that you're bold enough to get her on a phone call and then to a meet up with you.

Don't waste time hiding behind endless messages where you are trying to get to know her again, or build up enough of a connection before you think it's time to get on a call, or set up a time to meet.

Get things moving along between you and her while you still can.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Being too neutral when messaging her or talking to her on the phone

[image: Being too neutral when messaging her or talking to her on the phone]

If you don't actively make your ex feel attracted to you during interactions, she's probably not going to feel a spark with you.

As a result, she won't be motivated to stay in touch other than as a friend.

She will see you as an ex that she used to have feelings for, but not anymore.

This is why you need to focus on making her have feelings for who you are now, by displaying attractive traits when you interact with her.

3. Feeling like it would be wrong to flirt with her, even though it's one of the keys to making her feel a spark again

For example, a guy might think, "I can't afford to blow my chances by coming on too strong. It's better if I just act like a friend and then hopefully something will develop."

Yet, here's the thing!

If you don't actively make her feel sexual and romantic attraction for you, then she will probably assume that all you want is to be friends.

As a result, she won't flirt with you or show much interest, in case you reject her.

Additionally, since you're only talking to her as a friend, she will likely see you the same way too.

So, don't be afraid to flirt with your ex when you talk to her again, to create a spark between you and her and make her feel motivated to get to a hug, kiss and sex with you.

Also, remember this: For a woman to want to be in a sexual, romantic relationship with a man, she has to feel sexual attraction for him.

If those feelings aren't there, it's a friendship at best, or a waste of her time at worst and as a result, the communication will dry up and she will lose interest.

4. Not being aware that many high school sweethearts end up reuniting and then staying together for life

It's not something that has been covered in large scale studies, so it's difficult for men to know how common it is, but I can tell you from personal experience that I've heard from countless men over the years who have successfully gotten their high school sweetheart back.

It happens at all ages as well.

Sometimes, the man and woman broke up only a few years ago and then got back together, but in many cases it is 10, 20, 30 and sometimes even 40 years later.

How do they get her back?

By reawakening her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction, so she feels motivated to open up to him and see where things go.

You can have that effect on your high school sweetheart and get her back, but the question is: Are you ready to do it, or you do need some additional help to get yourself ready?

If you are serious about this, you and her could be back together within weeks and you can make her love you even more than she ever did back then.

It can be an amazing, life changing experience for the both of you, but you have to be willing to step up to the plate and do what it takes to get her back.

We Didn't Have a Lot in Common, So She Left Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 7 common reasons why a woman will break up with a man for that reason and how he can get her back:

1. She didn't feel much of a romantic spark

[image: She didn't feel much of a romantic spark]

A couple can have nothing in common or a lot in common and still break up due to a lack of a romantic spark.

When it comes to relationships, a romantic spark is the thing that makes a woman look at a man and feel excited, alive or what women often refer to as 'having butterflies in her stomach.'

So, when a woman notices that that all important romantic spark is missing, she will naturally begin feeling that something isn't right.

Initially, she might make excuses (e.g. it's just a phase and things will eventually get better, or they don't have much in common now, but will once they get to know each other).

Alternatively, she might try to create a romantic spark by suggesting romantic dinners or weekends away for the two of them.

Yet, if nothing really changes and she still feels like there is a lack of a romantic spark, then she will begin to want to break up with him.

Some women go directly to a break up, others create so many problems in the relationship that the man ends up breaking up with them and others ask for space to find themselves and what they really want.

Either way, a relationship without a spark is doomed to break up at some point, or be miserable for life.

In reality, it doesn't really have much to do with not having much in common though because couples who are very different will adapt and enjoy the other person's interest if the romantic spark is strong enough.

As the old saying goes, 'Opposites attract' and it is true, but only if there is a romantic spark.

This is why, to get an ex woman back who left you because you and her didn't have a lot in common, you need to interact with her again (using a different approach to interactions) and create a new, exciting romantic spark between you and her.

For example: If a guy was too neutral around his woman and treated her more like a friend or housemate, he needs to prepare himself to flirt with her to create a more sexual vibe between them.

Additionally, if he tended to only have serious, straightforward conversations with her, which lead to the relationship feeling boring, he needs to prepare himself to be a bit of a playful challenge (at times) as he talks to her to create more of a spark between them.

These are things that a guy can quickly prepare himself to do and then do, to get an ex woman back.

New men do it every day, all over the world in all sorts of ex back situations and they get women back.

Itâ€™s not difficult, but you have to be willing to level up your ability to attract her and create a spark.

If youâ€™re willing to do that, both you and her will experience new, exciting feelings for each other than will bring you closer together and make her feel motivated to enjoy more things about you and what youâ€™re interested in.

As a result, she will feel as though you and her have more in common than you used to and will be happy to adapt to you further due to the romantic spark being there.

2. She didnâ€™t feel much of a sexual spark

[image: She didn't feel much of a sexual spark]

A sexual spark in a relationship is different to a romantic spark, in that itâ€™s purely about the sexual desire you have for each other and how easy it is to get turned on by each other.

Itâ€™s also something that is created based on your approach to her.

Women literally react to the manâ€™s approach and either feel turned on, or not (e.g. if he is confident vs. insecure, assertive vs. passive, masculine vs. feminine or neutral in his energy).

Some guys struggle with that their entire life and can never keep a relationship together, because they think things like, â€œThis is just who I am. Iâ€™m a soft, gentle guy. I just want to be nice to a woman.â€

Yet, they donâ€™t realize that itâ€™s only who they are right now, because they donâ€™t know how to be any other way, or fear being any other way in case it feels uncomfortable or unnatural for them.

For example: Being more masculine in his behavior around a woman, rather than being so reserved, soft and gentle.

Initially, a guy might feel as though he is being â€œfakeâ€ by being more masculine, but once he does it and sees that not only does he feel better about himself by being more manly, but his woman respects him, feels attracted to him and loves him so much more because of it, he suddenly sees that as who he is now.

Itâ€™s no longer â€œfakeâ€ to him and is now one of the most important parts of who he is.

So, just know that if you were behaving in ways that caused a lack of a sexual spark between you and her, you donâ€™t have to keep behaving in that way and suffering the negative consequences with her, or with other women for the rest of your life.

There is another way to be with women and that is; to be truly, deeply attractive to them.

Once you understand how to do that, you realize how much power and control you actually have over initially attracting a woman and then maintaining and building on her attraction for you for life.

Additionally, once you get used to it, it literally becomes automatic and natural for you.

In other words, you donâ€™t have to think about it or try to do it because you automatically say and do the things that women find truly, deeply attractive.

It becomes part of who you are and raises the quality of your life and relationships with women.

So, when it comes to your relationship with your ex and her leaving you for not having much in common, what should you do now?

Well, just understand that women go with how they feel.

If a woman feels sexually and romantically attracted to a guy, she won't be able to stop thinking about him.

That can be you.

If you're not willing for that to be you with her, let it be you with your next woman by building up your confidence in attracting and keeping a woman.

Another reason why a woman will break up with a guy due to not having a lot in common is

3. She felt as though they would grow apart over time due to their differences, so she broke it off now to avoid wasting time

A woman's natural instinct is to find a man, get him to fall in love with her and then keep him for life, so he will protect her and provide for her if they should ever have any offspring.

Even if a woman is independent, emotionally strong and says that she doesn't care about babies or marriage, she still has the instinct of trying to find herself a man that she can stick with for life.

This comes from the natural risk of potentially getting pregnant to a random boyfriend and then having to deal with being a single mother.

This applies even if the couple is using a condom, or she is on the pill.

Deep down, her instincts urge her to make sure that she is with a man that she could potentially stick with for life, rather than continuing on with a man wouldn't be a good match for her life in the long run.

So, if a woman realizes that she and her man are too different (e.g. they have completely different morals and values and neither of them are willing to make adjustments to adapt to each other, he's a loner while she's an extrovert, he isn't serious about his career while she's climbing up the levels, he is too serious about everything while she is more of a free spirit) and as a result, she believes the relationship is unlikely to last, she will often decide to end things rather than investing more of her time into him.

He can get her back, but she is only going to feel motivated to want to give the relationship another chance if he interacts with her and creates a new romantic and sexual spark.

If he is unwilling to do that, she will continue to see the relationship as over and will move on without him.

On to the next reason.

Sometimes a woman will use "not having a lot in common" as an excuse to break up with a guy when

4. She didn't feel proud to have him as her boyfriend, especially around her family or friends

[image: She didn't feel proud to have him as her boyfriend, especially around her family or friends]

Women prefer to be with a man they can look up to, respect and feel proud of to show off to her family, friends and coworkers.

So, if a man behaves in ways that make people feel embarrassed for his girlfriend (e.g. he sulks when things don't go his way, says a lot of rude or inappropriate things around her family, treats her badly in front of them, is too shy and reserved and comes across as being unfriendly or awkward, is seen as immature by a lot of her friends and family), she will stop feeling as proud to be his girlfriend.

If she also happens to notice how happy and proud her sisters, cousins, girlfriends or coworkers are of their boyfriend or husband, she will begin to wonder why she's wasting her time trying to make things work with a guy who makes her feel embarrassed or ashamed.

In almost all cases, a woman will never admit that to her boyfriend though because she doesn't want to hurt his feelings, or have him potentially become very angry and possibly physically aggressive with her in response.

So, she will break up with him for other reasons and he will be left behind to try to figure out what really went wrong.

In some cases, he might assume that it was mostly because of him and her not having a lot in common, but deep down, he probably knows that he didn't make her feel very proud to be his girlfriend.

The reality is that if a woman feels proud to be your girlfriend and there is a strong sexual and romantic spark between you and her, then she will stick to you like glue and adapt and adjust herself to your interests and likes in life.

You need to know that to help you understand that it is possible to get her back, as well as know it for future relationships with women if you decide not to get your ex back.

Either way, you have to make sure that a woman feels proud to be your girlfriend and feels a strong enough sexual and romantic spark with you that she wants to adapt and adjust herself to fit into your life.

That is what works and results in the best relationship dynamic between men and women early on and in the long run.

5. There was some initial attraction, but the relationship dynamic soon killed that [image: There was some initial attraction, but the relationship dynamic soon killed that]

Sometimes a woman will initially feel drawn to a guy because he's a good guy, who treats her well and makes her feel special.

Yet, after being in a relationship with him for a while, she might begin to realize that the things about him she initially liked are actually making her feel bored, restless and even turned off.

For example: Sometimes a woman will notice that her boyfriend is very nice or generous towards her because he has no idea how to attract her, or make her happy in any other way (e.g. by being a bit of a challenge, flirting with her, creating a relationship dynamic where she wants to impress him and maintain his interest).

If she notices that heâs being very nice or generous because he has no idea what else to do, she will begin to feel as though she is with a guy who is essentially sucking up to her so she doesnât leave him.

That makes him seem desperate, which isnât a trait that women find attractive in men.

If she also notices that she has treat him badly, disrespect him and use him and he wonât stand up to her, then she will lose respect for him.

When she loses respect for him, she will struggle to feel a sexual and romantic spark with him, which will kill the relationship.

6. She felt as though they were on a different level socially

If a woman comes from a higher or lower social class than her boyfriend, she might feel uncomfortable when they go out socially (e.g. because their manners donât match, her family and friends donât approve of him or visa versa).

If she has strong sexual and romantic feelings for him, she will try her hardest to ignore that and just hope that they gel and become more socially compatible over time.

Yet, if there isnât a strong enough spark, she will struggle to ignore their differences.

For example: If sheâs from a higher social class to him, she will worry about where they might end up living together, how he will fit in with her family and friends, how they will raise their children if they have any.

If sheâs from a lower social class, she might feel judged by his family and friends, or not really enjoy going out to social functions with him due to the clear difference in how she eats/looks/what she wears/how she speaks in comparison to the kinds of people he hangs out with.

Depending on the manâs ability to create and maintain a strong enough spark with her, she will either feel motivated to make the relationship work with him despite their differences, or leave him.

7. The conversations between them often seemed to be forced Instinctively, a woman knows that she should be able to get along with her boyfriend naturally and easily, without having to force conversations because it seems like thereâs nothing to talk about when theyâre around each other.

So, if she finds herself trying hard to keep conversations going and keep them interesting with her boyfriend, she may feel as though they have so little in coming that they canât even have a discussion without it feeling forced or awkward.

That problem can be fixed, but it requires the man to care enough to adjust his style of communication with her slightly, to make things flow more smoothly.

For example: Rather than only talking to her in a serious, straightforward, logical manner (i.e. like he would when talking to another man), he includes flirting, playful teasing and is a bit of a challenge at times, so she lights up, smiles, laughs, giggles and feels girly and energized when talking to him.

He doesn't need to behave like her of course (i.e. girly) to make her feel energized.

Instead, he needs to flirt with her, playfully tease her and be a bit of a challenge in a manly way.

If he does that, then she will naturally feel attracted to him, excited to be talking to him and won't want to leave him.

All of a sudden, she won't care if they don't currently have much in common and will want to adjust and adapt herself to suit him and his life, so she gets to be with him.

That is the kind of effect you can have on her, if you want to.

Can I Get My Ex Back if She's Already Dating?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes.

Here are 5 reasons why:

1. You can interrupt the relationship by re-attracting her

Interrupting her relationship means that you use every interaction you have with her, to reawaken her feelings of respect, sexual attraction and love for you.

Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€¦

- Making conversations with you feel fun, interesting and full of laughter, so that when sheâ€¦s with her new guy, she canâ€¦t stop thinking about you and how much she enjoyed talking to you again.
- Showing her that you donâ€¦t see her new guy as competition, by always feel confident and believing in yourself and in your attractiveness and value to her.
- Being a playful challenge when you talk to her, so she feels excited when talking to you and misses you when she doesnâ€¦t. Women always feel attracted to guys who are a challenge and bored by guys who arenâ€¦t. So, when you are a playful challenge to her, you will be on her mind all the time, even if she feels guilty about it and tries to stop herself from thinking about you.
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you and her, so she feels confused about who she really wants.
- Laughing at her in a loving way when she tries to make you feel jealous by saying how much better her new guy is to you.
- Using humor to break down her defenses and make her go from being cold and distant to warm and open.

The more you attract her in ways that she doesnâ€¦t expect, the more confused she will feel about her feelings for the new guy she is dating.

She will feel as though what you and her had isnâ€¦t over and if she doesnâ€¦t get back with you, or at least hook up with you again (to see how she feels afterwards), then sheâ€¦s going to regret it.

Another reason why you can get your ex back if sheâ€¦s already dating is thatâ€¦

2. Her interest in him might only be temporary

[image: Her interest in him might only be temporary]

She might seem like she is happy to be dating again, but it doesnâ€¦t mean that she is serious about the new guy, or any of the new guys she has met or gone on dates with.

Additionally, she might only be pushing herself to date for one of the following reasons:

- She doesnâ€¦t like feeling lonely, so she is dating again to make herself feel okay about being broken up with you.

- Her confidence is low at the moment (due to the relationship with you failing), so she is trying to convince herself that lots of guys like her and she can easily get herself a new boyfriend. Women often do that to try to help themselves avoid going back to an ex. It doesn't mean her ex can't get her back though. It's just her trying to move on, for now.
- She fears that her ex will move on before she does and she will be left behind. If that happens, she might end up feeling like the one who got dumped. So, she starts dating and hooks up with a man quickly, to ensure that she moves on first.
- There is a guy that has liked her for a while (e.g. at work, university, in the neighborhood, through friends) who isn't exactly what she wants (i.e. he's either too nice, or he's too much of a player), but he is good enough for now.

So, just because your ex is dating again, it doesn't mean that the new guy in her life is perfect for her.

In many cases, the guy is simply a rebound relationship (i.e. the relationship a woman gets into right after a break up to make herself feel better) and secretly, she might not see much of a future with him.

If you want her back, you need to focus on making her have strong feelings for you again during interactions, so her new guy (or other guys who are interested in her) no longer seem as appealing.

When she begins to reconnect with her feelings for you, she realizes that what you and her had isn't over because she still has real feelings for you.

Another reason why you can get her back is that!

3. You can level up and attract her in ways she isn't expecting

For example: She probably won't be expecting to see photos on social media of you having fun with other people and then find herself feeling jealous, left behind and hurt.

Instead, she might expect you to be sitting around feeling lonely and missing her, which will make her feel as though she still has power over you and has nothing to worry about.

So many guys get that wrong and assume that their ex will be impressed and want them back, if he remains loyal to her by avoiding people and women and essentially waiting around for her to come back.

Yet, what actually works on a woman who has broken up with you, is when you make her feel regret, sadness, loss and rejection by seeing you looking confident, happy and enjoying life without her.

Not only does it hurt her, but it makes her feel attracted to you and drawn to you in a good way (i.e. because you have the emotional strength to get back on your feet and enjoy life without her).

Women are naturally attracted to emotionally strong men and turned off by emotionally weak men.

So, don't ever think that you will make a woman want you more by displaying emotional weakness or neediness.

It just doesn't work.

Women are attracted to the emotional strength in men, so attract your ex by being more emotional strong than you've ever been before.

You can do that with photos on social media, or you can do it based on how you talk to her in person. Let her sense that you have become so much stronger emotionally, to the point where you no longer feel insecure, become emotionally sensitive or lose confidence based on things she says or does.

Also let her sense that you're not afraid to joke around with her and flirt with her when you talk to her.

You're not an insecure ex who feels unworthy of her now because she has broken up with you, or has started dating again.

Instead, you are the most confident guy she knows right now and will probably ever know because you have the emotional strength to believe in yourself and your attractiveness to her, despite the fact that she is dating again.

You see yourself as the man and don't see any other guy as being competition for her because they simply don't compare.

The more you can attract her in ways she isn't expecting, the more surprised, curious and interested she will be to feeling attracted to you again.

She will realize that her feelings for you aren't dead and that other guys she has met haven't been able to make her feel the way you do.

As a result, she will naturally want to open back to you and give you and the relationship another chance.

Another reason why you can get her back is that

4. Most new relationships don't last and many exs do get back together

For example: A woman might start dating a new guy that she sees as being very different to her ex (e.g. he's more loving and emotionally open, compared to her ex who was emotionally closed off and distant. He's more confident and self-assured, compared to her ex who was insecure, clingy or needy. He's more of a bad boy and doesn't tolerate her drama, compared to her ex who was a soft, nice guy who put up with her bad treatment of him just to get to spend time with her).

Initially, that might interest her because she is finally getting some of the things that were missing from the relationship with her ex.

Yet, after the initial excitement of being in a new relationship starts to wear off, his flaws might become glaringly obvious to her, which will result in her breaking up with him.

Think about it this way

So far in life, your ex has a 100% failure rate when it comes to relationships.

As a result, it's highly likely that she won't find the perfect man right away, settle down with him and be with him for life.

Instead, she will probably break up with him soon, or getting broken up with.

So, don't assume that she is happy and will be able to completely move on without you right away.

She might seem happy, but what she probably doesn't realize now is how happy she will be to get back with you.

The reality is that getting back with an ex can feel amazing for a woman when her man has truly leveled up and is able to create a new, more enjoyable relationship dynamic with her (e.g. if he was a pushover, he is now more of a challenge. If he took her for granted, he now makes her feel wanted and loved, but doesn't suck up to her and treat her way too nicely. If he was emotionally distant due to a fear of getting hurt, he is now emotionally open because he doesn't fear getting his heart broken anymore).

Additionally, every day, all over the world, couples break up and get back together right away, after a few days, weeks or months.

In many cases, if the couple gets back together after weeks or months, then the woman (or man) will have been dating other people in the meantime.

It still doesn't stop them from getting back together though.

So, just understand that you can be one of the men who gets his ex woman back into a relationship that is better and more fulfilling than ever before (i.e. because you have leveled up your ability to attract her and make the relationship feel more enjoyable for the both of you).

5. Dating someone new doesn't mean that she is truly committed to him and can't hook up with you if she wanted to

[image: Dating someone new doesn't mean that she is truly committed to him and can't hook up with you if she wanted to]

If your ex is dating a new guy, or going on random dates, it doesn't mean that she is engaged or married to those guys.

So, at this point, she will still be open to meeting up with you and hooking up with you, if you contact her and re-attract her on a phone call (or video) call.

Get her to catch up in person with you to say hi, re-attract her further and then get to a kiss and sex.

If you've changed and improved since the break up, then she is going to feel that and it's going to make her feel more drawn to you and open to giving the relationship another chance.

So many couples get back together in that way, so don't count yourself out just because she's already dating.

3 Mistakes That Can Stop You From Getting Her Back

1. Not realizing how much stronger and wiser you will become by getting her back

When a guy learns from the mistakes he made in the relationship, he automatically becomes more emotionally attractive to his ex and to women in general because he becomes wiser about relationships, emotionally stronger and more mature.

So, if you want her back, use the break up as your opportunity to level up as a man (e.g. become a lot more confident, more focused and determined to accomplish your goals, more emotionally independent and able to feel truly happy without her) and then interact with her and re-attract her.

When she senses that you really have changed, she will automatically feel respect and attraction for you even if she tries to hide it, or tries stop herself from feeling it.

It's a natural, automatic reaction and when it happens, she suddenly realizes that her feelings for you aren't dead.

As a result, she opens up to the possibility of getting back with you.

Then, when you get her back, you will be so much wiser and stronger when it comes love and relationships with women.

You will know that just because a couple breaks up, it doesn't mean the relationship is over forever and can't get back together.

Additionally, you will know that even if a woman starts dating after the break up, it doesn't mean that a guy can't get her back and enjoy a relationship with her that is even better than it was before.

You will know all that because you will have had the courage to go through the ex back process and get her back.

From then on, your life will be changed forever.

You will no longer feel helpless when it comes to attracting women because you will know how to do it on purpose.

You will be in control.

Another mistake that can stop you from getting her back is

2. Rejecting her offer to be friends, or assuming that being friends will ruin your chances with her

When you remain friends with your ex, you can then openly text, call and even meet up with her to say hi in person and it's fine because that's what friends do.

Yet, if you reject her offer to be friends and essentially ask for all or nothing (i.e. she either gets back with you or nothing), then there's no reason for her to stay in contact with you, especially when she's already dating someone else.

So, it's in your best interests to accept a friendship, or if you haven't done so already, reach out to her and say hi as a friend.

Of course, when you interact with her, you need to also include flirting to create sexual tension between you and her, as well as attract her in ways that she isn't expecting.

She will then use the friendship as an excuse to contact you and suggest catching up.

You can then build up the sexual tension between you in person and release it with passionate, enjoyable kissing and sex.

There's nothing quite like having sex with an ex, especially when both of you are feeling very drawn to each other again.

It's enjoyable for both the man and the woman, so don't deprive you or yourself of that amazing experience by rejecting her offer to be friends, or by ignoring her and hoping that she comes back to you someday on her own.

Make it happen.

3. Seeing the other guy as being better than you, so you just give up

Yes, she might be dating someone else, but that doesn't mean the guy is better than you.

In fact, if you want to attract her back, you should begin to look at yourself as being better than any other man she could possibly ever meet.

It doesn't matter who it is; you are better.

You are the man.

Always remember: Women always feel less attraction for the guy who sees other guys as being more attractive and valuable than him.

Women may feel sorry for the insecure guy, but they will always feel more attracted to the more confident guy.

Even though your ex is dating, she still wants you look at yourself as â€œthe man,â€œ regardless of what she says or does.

If you interact with her and she senses that you feel inferior to the guy she is dating, or are worried that she no longer sees your value, then it will turn her off.

So believe in yourself no matter what and get her back.

I Pushed My Girlfriend Too Far and She Broke Up With Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 8 common reasons why a guy will get broken up with for pushing his girlfriend too far and what he can do to get her back.

Which one of these applies to your situation?

1. He threatened to break up with her one too many times, so she eventually decided to break up with him

[image: He threatened to break up with her one too many times, so she eventually decided to break up with him]

If a man threatens to break up with his girlfriend near the beginning of a relationship (i.e. during the first couple of months) because she isn't treating him well enough, it will usually cause the woman to improve her behavior and treatment of him.

So, it's a good technique to use early on.

However, if a man continues to threaten his girlfriend with a break up after being with her for a long time, then she will start to feel as though she can't trust him.

She will feel as though if she gets more committed to him (i.e. falls more in love, opens up to getting engaged to him, does more for him), he could just turn around one day and say that it's over.

This can cause her to begin to want to change his behavior and make him more committed to her.

As a result, she will then decide to break up with him to hopefully teach him a lesson.

To get her back, he needs to avoid being desperate (i.e. begging for another chance, crying to her again and again, pestering her with endless texts) and simply remain calm, knowing that he will be able to re-attract her.

One of the ways he can re-attract her is by showing her that he is now more in control of his emotions (e.g. rather than getting upset over her cold, distant treatment of him, he now uses humor to get her laughing, smiling and feeling close to him again. Additionally, rather than losing confidence when she isn't showing him love or interest, he maintains his confidence and knows that she will find that attractive, which she does. Women always find it attractive when a man is able to remain confident, composed and in control under pressure).

When his girlfriend feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him, she then naturally opens back up to giving him another chance, regardless of the mistakes he made in the relationship.

She knows that if she doesn't give him another chance, she will most likely regret it and feel like the rejected one if he moves on with another woman.

So, to avoid that emotional pain, she opens up to giving him another chance, or at least hooking up with him again to assess how she feels afterwards.

Another reason why a woman will break up with a boyfriend who pushed her too far is that

2. He took her love and devotion for granted

[image: He took her love and devotion for granted]

For example:

- He spent way too much time playing video games and just expected her to wait around in the background. Thereâs nothing wrong with playing video games when you have a girlfriend (or wife), but you have to maintain a balanced lifestyle (i.e. work, sex life, social life or getting out and doing things with her, giving her enough attention and then gaming, rather than gaming and then everything else after that).
- He assumed that he could treated her any way he wanted and sheâd always put up with it because of how much she loved him.
- He rarely put in the effort to continue getting to know her family and usually avoided accompanying her on family visits, if possible.
- He eventually stopped noticing her efforts to look attractive for him (e.g. when she wore a sexy outfit, changed her hairstyle) and started looking at her as though she didnât wow him anymore. He may of even gone to the extreme of regularly criticizing her appearance, rather than praising any of her her efforts to look good and therefore, making her feel motivated to put in more effort.
- He barely pulled his weight around the house (e.g. didnât fix things that were broken or get someone to fix them, didnât take out the trash even though she did all of the other housework) and when she complained about it, he accused her of being a nag.
- He regularly got angry at her and treated her badly for hours or days, based on little misunderstandings, rather than being mature and loving about it by maintaining control of his emotions and focusing on using misunderstandings to bring them closer together and more in love (i.e. by clearing up the misunderstanding in a relaxed, loving way, rather than acting like her enemy or a person who wants to see her fail or hurt her emotionally).

When a woman finds herself in a relationship like that, she will usually put up with it for a while and give her boyfriend a number of warnings.

Yet, if he continues and even gets worse, then a woman will usually decide that it would be better for her to break up with him and try to find a new guy.

In some cases though, she will hope that by breaking up with him, it will be a wake up call for him and cause him to change.

As long as he isnât desperate about it (i.e. doesnât keep crying to her, begging for another chance) and is manly about it (i.e. owns his mistakes, apologizes briefly and sincerely, maintains belief in his attractiveness to her, guides her back into a relationship), then she will be open to seeing where things go.

3. He treated her more like his annoying girlfriend than a woman that he was in love with

When a man is in love with a woman and wants to be with her (and if he understands how to behave in a relationship to make it last for life), he will treat his woman with respect and care.

He will know that she is important to him and it would be silly to ruin the relationship and lose her, so he will avoid treating her like she is an annoying pest in his life.

On the other hand, when a guy doesn't know how to treat his girlfriend right, or slips into a habit of treating her like an annoying pest, she will start to look at him differently.

Rather than seeing him as the man who will love her, protect her and care about her for life, she begins to see him as a guy who wants her to hurt, feel rejected and steer clear of him as much as possible.

It won't really make sense to her why he is doing it, especially since she does love him and wants to be with him.

For example: Even though she is sticking around and trying to make the relationship work, he might continue to:

- Criticize or belittle her behind closed doors and sometimes, even in front of others.
- Get irritated if she asks him to do something for her (e.g. take out the garbage, put gas in her car, pick her up from work), but then expect her to do things for him and not complain about it.
- Sulk or become very difficult to be around, if she asks him to spend time with her doing some of the things she really likes (e.g. watch a romantic movie or TV show together, go out to dinner at a restaurant sometimes rather than always ordering takeout, hang out with her friends once in a while).

If he keeps treating her that way, or gets worse, a woman will usually decide to just break up with him and try to find someone new who will give her a more balanced, loving relationship that can last for life.

Of course, her ex can still get her back, but he needs to understand where he went wrong and prepare himself to interact with her and let her see that he is now a completely different man.

He shouldn't try to sell himself to her (i.e. âI've changed. I'm no longer like that, so please give me another chance), but instead, should let her pick up on the changes he has made based on how he now talks to her, reacts to her, treats her and behaves.

Women prefer to pick up on details in that way, rather than having a guy trying to sell himself to her. Remember that and use it to re-attract her and get her back.

4. He became aggressive with her on one too many occasions

Sometimes a guy will fall into the habit of getting angry with his girl over little things.

At times, he might even push her, shake her, choke her or grab her arm and shake it aggressively while arguing with her.

If that happens once, a woman will usually be able to overlook it.

Yet, if it happens over and over again, she will naturally begin to worry that he might eventually go from just being aggressive to being seriously violent (e.g. punching her, beating her or worse).

So, rather than sticking around and becoming one of those women who are stuck in abusive relationships and can't get away, she decides to break up with him now, while she still can.

If a guy wants to get his girlfriend back in a situation like that, he has to honestly make a decision to never become physically aggressive or violent with his girlfriend ever again.

If he can honestly decide that and know that he won't do it again, then he will be able to sincerely tell her that.

If she is still in love with him and is open to being with him, then there is a chance she might forgive him and give him another chance.

5. He never really committed to her, even though she treated him well, gave her heart to him and was patient for a long time

For a relationship to last past the initial phase of lust, a couple needs to connect on more than just a superficial level.

In other words, they need to ultimately want the same things in life and be heading towards that together, rather than one person wanting to settle down, get married and start a family, while the other one wants to stay boyfriend and girlfriend and avoid a serious commitment.

So, if a woman notices that she's the one investing more into the relationship and is maturing faster than her guy, she may begin to worry that she's wasting her time with him.

The reason why is that a woman's natural instinct is to find a guy, get him to fall in love with her and then stick with him for life.

It's not what women go around admitting these days, as they like to act independent and as though they don't care about men.

However, deep down, it's what almost every woman really wants when it comes to men.

So, if a woman isn't getting that from her boyfriend, she will usually hint at her unhappiness (i.e. seem distant, throw tantrums, subtly complain about his treatment of her) in the hope that he will pick up on it.

If he doesn't change, she might then directly say that she isn't happy with him and doesn't know how long she can put up with it.

Alternatively, she might go directly to a break up by saying something like, I need time to be by myself to figure out what I want.

In those types of cases, a man needs to become more open to committing to her and making her feel loved and wanted, but he has to avoid being desperate about it (i.e. rushing to buy her a ring, promising the world to her if she gives him another chance, crying).

If a man has already made those mistakes, then he needs to let her know that he behaved like that because he loves her so much, but now realizes that he would have looked silly.

He should then laugh at himself, rather than taking his behavior so seriously, so she can laugh at how he behaved as well, therefore making her become open to forgiving him because she sees that he now understands and isn't going to continue being desperate.

6. He was used to being a player and being able to push girls away, only to see them coming back for more

That is a technique that works early on in a relationship, but if a guy continues to do it years into the relationship, a woman will usually change her approach to gain some power.

For example: She will stop being as affectionate, start spending more time away from him and being more independent, no longer fall for his player tricks and seem distant, unimpressed and as though she is ready to break up with him for real.

If he is a real player (i.e. knows how to make women fall deeply in love with him to the point where she sees him as being better than any other guy, no matter how he treats her), then she will struggle to find a new guy who makes her feel as much love as he did.

As a result, a woman like that will pretty much always be ready to go back to her ex if he is ready to give her what she wants (i.e. commitment) without losing touch with what actually attracts her about him (i.e. that he is a player and she feels the need to impress him and maintain his interest).

7. He continued to flirt with other women, or sleep with other women even though he was supposed to be exclusive with his girlfriend at that point in the relationship

Some women will put up with being one of a number of a man's girls near the start of a relationship, but if he continues on with that approach for too long, she will eventually grow tired of it.

Essentially, the best approach to use with women is to let them see that you could have other women easily, but you are committed to them.

Women pick up on this based on how women react to you, without you having to explain it.

Unfortunately, some guys go too far with it and flirt with other women too obviously and too much in front of their girlfriend, or they even go as far as exchanging numbers, texting back and forth or even hooking up with other women when the relationship is supposed to be committed and exclusive.

Women will usually take a man like that back, but he has to let her see that he isn't like that anymore, without being desperate about it.

8. He tends to only really appreciate women who have the guts to break up with him

Sometimes a guy is very attractive to women and can easily get himself a girlfriend, which can cause him to see women who like him as being a dime a dozen (i.e. women like that are everywhere, it's too easy for him).

Yet, when a woman adores him and does everything she can to make him happy, he ends up taking her for granted (i.e. not making her feel appreciated, treating her however he wants and knowing that she'll likely just keep putting up with it to be with him, ignoring what she wants from the relationship).

On the other hand, if a woman that he likes has the guts to break up with him, she suddenly appears more valuable in his eyes.

He finally gets to experience the pain of not being able to have the woman he really wants, because women are usually throwing themselves at him in a relationship.

Suddenly, he feels heartbreak, panic, loneliness, loss and regret, which makes him want her back.

and she knows that.

Some women simply use that as a technique to get guys to commit.

So, to get her back, he needs to ensure that he remains a challenge to her (that's what attracted her to a guy like him), but also makes her feel appreciated, loved and wanted without being desperate about it.

My Wife and I Are Going Through a Trial Separation. How Do I Get Her Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you don't do what it takes to re-attract her during the trial separation, there's a high chance she will want to go through with a divorce.

So, here are 5 things you can do while you still have a chance to save your marriage and get her back:

1. Let her sense that you honestly accept the trial separation and although you will miss her, you respect her need for space

[image: Let her sense that you honestly accept the trial separation and although you will miss her, you respect her need for space]

Even though you probably just want to be back with her as soon as possible, or right away, it's best to let her sense that you do respect her need for space and trust that everything will work out the way it's supposed to.

Where a lot of men go wrong is to give the impression that they are panicking, worried and stressed that the trial separation will definitely lead to a divorce.

It won't because you are going to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and when she feels that, she will naturally begin to reconnect with her romantic love for you.

More about that later.

For now, here's another thing you can do to save your marriage and get you and her back together!

2. Agree not to talk to each other for a week and to then say hi after that [image: Agree not to talk to each other for a week and to then say hi after that]

A week is a long time for a married couple not to speak and that's the point really.

When she agrees not to speak to each other for a week and starts missing you, or wanting to reach out to you during that time, she will feel the pain of not having you in her life anymore.

So, say to her, "Let's start by giving each other some space for about a week. No calls or even texts during that. After that, I'll give you a quick call to say hi. No pressure, or even questions about us getting back together again or anything like that. Just us having a friendly chat. So, it's bye from me for now and I'll chat to you in a week."

Then, stick to your word, give her a week of space and allow things to calm down between you and her and for her to start missing you a little bit.

After a week, make the call and be sure to use some humor to ease the tension and make her feel happy to be talking to you again, rather than having a serious, sad, or distant type of conversation with her.

By using humor and remaining calm, confident and relaxed while you're talking to her, she will naturally feel good to be talking to you again.

As a result, she will be much more likely to say “Yes,” when you suggest catching up to say hi.

When you catch up, you can then re-attract her by being confident, emotionally masculine, flirting with her and using humor.

You can start to get the spark back between you and her and as a result, she will realize that she still loves you and doesn't want to be separated from you anymore.

3. During the week apart, rapidly improve your ability to spark feelings of attraction inside of her

If you interact with her again and are using the same old approach to attraction that she has become bored of, then she's probably not going to be interested in getting back into a romantic, sexual relationship with you.

She might just decide to continue with the separation and go through with a divorce, so she can get out there and find herself a man who will make her feel attracted (e.g. she will go for a man who is more of a challenge or bad boy, if her husband was a pushover or nice guy).

This is why, you need to use the time apart from her wisely by preparing to give her an upgraded attraction experience, which will make her feel excited to be getting back with you.

So, what should you change about your approach to attraction with her specifically?

That depends on who you are, what mistakes you made in the relationship and what your wife really needs to experience around you to feel enough attraction to want to give the marriage another shot.

For example: A wife might want to see some of the following changes in her husband!

- He maintains his confidence when she tries to make him feel insecure by teasing him about things, rather than being emotionally sensitive like he has been in the past.
- He is more loving, caring and attentive towards her now, but doesn't suck up to her in a desperate way while doing it.
- He uses humor to snap her out of a bad mood, rather than getting upset with her and losing control of his emotions.
- He makes her feel like she's still the sexiest, most desirable woman in the world in his eyes, rather than letting the spark die between them and allowing every day routines and responsibilities turn them into roommates, rather than lovers.
- He stops doing the things that have been annoying her and pushes himself to take on new, more attractive and appealing behaviors.
- He makes her feel happy to show him respect and treat him well, rather than sulking about her treatment of him and trying to guilt-trip her into treating him better.
- He stops being so serious and stressed around her and starts being more easygoing, lighthearted and relaxed.
- Whatever you do, just don't catch up with her and essentially make her feel the way she did in the recent past.

She is tired of the old relationship dynamic and you need to put in an effort to change your approach, so she can feel differently around you and want to keep the marriage together.

4. Use any interactions you have with her (after giving her a week of space) to reactivate her feelings of attraction for you

[image: Use any interactions you have with her (after the week of space) to reactivate her feelings of attraction for you]

Rather than getting into serious conversations with her about the marriage, or only talking to her about your mutual responsibilities (e.g. the house, the kids, or pets), focus instead on making interactions with you feel fun and enjoyable.

Make your wife to feel like she did when she was falling in love with you the first time (e.g. â□□butterfliesâ□□ in her stomach, feeling excited about the sparks flying back between you and her, wanting to be around you more and more, looking at her phone all the time, in case she missed a text or call from you).

5. Let her see that you are confident, happy and enjoying your life without her, but be well-mannered about it

For example: Rather than telling her how happy you are without her, let her make that assumption by seeing photos of you on social media hanging out with other people and having fun.

Sometimes a man will be afraid to post up photos of himself having fun around other people out of a fear that his wife will get angry and say something like, â□□Well, you didnâ□□t waste any time to start living your life without me, did you? I guess our marriage wasnâ□□t important enough to keep you home during our trial separation. Well, donâ□□t let me stop you from enjoying the good life. In fact, once the divorce is through, you can have all the fun you want!â□□

Alternatively, he worry that family and friends will comment and ask where she is, or why he didnâ□□t invite her along.

Yet, hereâ□□s the thingâ□□!

Even though your wife probably wonâ□□t admit it, she will definitely feel more attraction for you for being emotionally strong enough to get on with enjoying life without her, compared to just sitting around feeling sad, lonely and depressed.

It might hurt her, but in many cases, that is what is needed for a wife to realize that she does love her husband and doesnâ□□t want to go through with the divorce.

As for family or friends commenting and asking where she is, he can simply say that she was busy, or â□□wasnâ□□t able to make itâ□□ and leave it at that.

However, he shouldnâ□□t avoid doing what will make his wife want him back, merely because a friend or family member might ask where she is, or think badly of him for having fun without her (i.e. if the family or friend knows that they are going through a trial separation).

So, donâ□□t worry if she pretends to be angry or upset that you seem happy without her and donâ□□t worry what friends or family might think.

Just do what works.

The reality is that women feel more attracted to emotionally independent, confident men than emotionally dependent (i.e. needy), insecure men, so you will be making her feel attracted by being strong enough to get out and enjoy yourself and seem confident and happy, despite what you and her are currently going through.

Believe me, I know that it sounds risky to post up photos of yourself having fun with others, but Iâve been helping new men get women back for many years now and I know what works.

Youâve got to make her feel the pain of potentially losing you, even if it results in her pretending to be offended, insulted or angry at you for having fun without her.

At the end of the day, when she feels the stinging pain of seeing you confident and happy without her, it will make her realize that she does care about you and doesnât want to lose you.

As a result, she will want to cancel the trial separation and get back with you, to avoid continuing to feel that kind of pain and despair.

Of course, some men think, âBut, what if she goes out and does the same thing back to me?â

That could happen, but the reality is that when she sees you looking confident, happy and enjoying life without her, it will make her feel respect and attraction for you for having the strength to do that without her.

It will also make her feel a little worried that if she doesnât get back with you, she might end up losing you to another woman and will then regret it for the rest of her life.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making When Going Through a Trial Separation

1. Forbidding her to talk to, flirt with or date other men during the time apart

[image: Forbidding her to talk to, flirt with or date other men]

If you make a point of trying to get your wife to agree to not flirt with other men during the trial separation, it will simply make her want to do it more because she will feel turned off by the fact that you see other men as being better than you, or more attractive than you.

Women are always more attracted to a man when he doesnât see other men as competition, so donât make her think that you feel threatened by men who might have a crush on her.

If you do, she will naturally feel more attracted to those men if they seem more confident and sure of themselves than you do, which can lead her to want to explore her feelings and see what itâs like to sleep with one of those men.

Additionally, if you try to prevent her from flirting with other men during the separation, she might feel more motivated to do it just to spite you for trying to control her (especially if one of the core problems in your marriage).

So, if you want your wife to remain faithful to you during the separation, donât act like an insecure guy who is worried about another man being better than you.

Instead, let her see that you believe in yourself and in your value to her, regardless of the circumstances youâre in at the moment.

You are the man, end of story.

No other man compares.

Thatâs how you should be thinking of yourself.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

2. Not using the time to figure out the core problems in the relationship, rather than the surface problems

Some men make the mistake of looking at the surface problems (e.g. arguments, disagreements, misunderstandings) and assume that fixing those things will make the relationship work.

Yet, there are usually deeper issues that lead to surface problems in the relationship.

For example: The spark has died and as a result, it feels like they are just sticking for because of the kids, to not have to go through the embarrassment of a divorce, because they are paying off a house together, or canâ€™t afford to move out on their own.

So, if a husband and wife are going through a trial separation and the husband just hopes that things will fix themselves and the marriage will get back together, he will often be shocked and disappointed when his wife says that she wants to go through with a divorce.

To avoid that happening to you, make sure that you get clear on what the core problems in the relationship are and prepare yourself to give her a different experience around you the next time she interacts with you.

Youâ€™ve got to be able to make her feel as though things really would be different if you got back together, based on how you now talk to her, react to her, behave around her and get her to behave around you.

Donâ€™t tell her that things will be different.

Let her feel it based on the adjustments you make to how you approach interactions with her.

That is what works.

3. Accepting her requests for more and more space, without realizing what she is really up to

In many cases, a woman will ask for more and more space and time during a separation to get over her husband and possibly even meet a new man to get into a relationship with.

Then, when sheâ€™s over him and ready to announce her desire to divorce, or when sheâ€™s found a new man and has decided to have a relationship with him, she can then confidently say to her husband, â€œIâ€™ve made up my mind. Our marriage isnâ€™t going to work and I want a divorce. Iâ€™m sorry to have to do this, but itâ€™s for the best.â€

She can then move on without too much trauma because sheâ€™s already prepared herself emotionally for it, or because she has a new man who is making her feel safe, secure and wanted.

Meanwhile, her husband is left behind feeling rejected, stressed, sad and lost without her in his life.

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me Because She Thought I Was Cheating

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 8 of the most common reasons why a woman will break up with her boyfriend for that reason and what he can do to get her back:

1. She has an insecurity about being cheated on and has been over-analyzing his behavior and accusing him of things he hasn't done

Sometimes, a woman will get cheated on by a guy in a previous relationship where everything seemed fine.

She thought that her boyfriend loved her and believed the relationship was working, so she was shocked and devastated when she found out that he cheated on her.

A painful experience like that can cause a woman to become insecure when it comes to relationships and always be secretly worrying that she could get cheated on once again.

So, even when she's in a stable and happy relationship with a good guy, she will be secretly worrying that he will end up cheating on her as well.

If she happens to notice that his behavior or actions seems similar to that of her cheating ex (e.g. he suddenly starts to work late, he doesn't answer her calls sometimes at odd times of the day or evening, he starts to shower at the gym even though he never did that before, he leaves the room when texting, he seems a little distant, he seems happier when talking to a woman who is a friend of his) she will automatically take it as a sign that it's happening to her all over again.

Then, despite her boyfriend's denials, she will struggle to believe him and just let it go because she doesn't want her worst fear to come true.

As a result, she breaks up with him and hopes that she has just saved herself from the pain of being cheated on again.

2. He refuses to let her see his texts, social media messages or emails, to give her the peace of mind she needs

[image: He refuses to let her see his texts, social media messages or emails, to give her the peace of mind she needs]

There's nothing wrong with a guy letting his girl look at his private messages once, as long as she promises to believe him from then on and not ask again.

Yet, if he doesn't allow her to look and she's an insecure woman who is worried about being cheated on, then she will usually take it as a sign that he's hiding something (i.e. he's flirting with another woman and is getting ready to cheat on her, he has already physically cheated on her with a new woman, he is emotionally cheating on her by having an online relationship with another woman, or via chat).

As a result, she will feel as though it's only a matter of time before she is forced to feel the pain of being cheated on.

To avoid getting cheated on, a woman will often just break up with her boyfriend and try to move on, or hope that he can change and be more understanding of her insecurity (i.e. let her see his texts, social media messages or emails and get the piece of mind she needs).

3. He has female friends and texts with them or talks to them fairly often There's nothing wrong with a guy maintaining close relationships with female friends early on in a relationship.

Yet, in most cases, when a boyfriend-girlfriend relationship becomes serious, the guy should focus more of his attention on his girlfriend and only maintain casual friendships with female friends (i.e. only talk to them occasionally, or see them at times when he is with his girlfriend, only have brief text exchanges when necessary).

If he is always texting or talking to his female friends and not giving enough attention to his girlfriend, it's only natural that she might feel a little insecure, or worry that he likes one of his female friends, or one of them likes him and it's only a matter of time before he cheats.

Think about it this way!

The same would likely happen if the situation was reversed and the woman was the one regularly chatting and talking to guys, who were so-called friends.

Imagine her boyfriend sitting there and being ignored for hours and she chatted with other guys via text, or on phone or video calls.

That would be totally fine if her guy friends weren't into women, but if they were heterosexual guys and she is attractive, then they would almost certainly be secretly hoping that they could get to have sex with her, or even a relationship with her.

In a case like that, the boyfriend might end up feeling insecure and wondering things like, Has she slept with any of those guys in the past? or What if one (or more) of them is secretly in love with her and is actively trying to seduce her? or, Does she find one of those guys more attractive than me? or, Is she planning on hooking up with one of those guys when she gets the chance? and so on.

So, if a woman's boyfriend is always chatting with other girls and from her perspective, seems to like one or more of them, she will often decide to break up with him now, rather than getting cheated on in the near future.

4. He has cheated on her or kind of cheated on her in the past and she just can't get over it

[image: He has cheated on her or kind of cheated on her in the past and she just can't get over it]

Kind of cheating is when a guy likes another woman enough to be flirting with her via text (e.g. saying she is beautiful, sending her emojis that suggests he likes her), or catching up with her behind his girlfriend's back, but not kissing her or sleeping with her.

Actual cheating includes kissing and sex.

So, if a guy has kind of cheated or actually cheated on his girlfriend in the past, she will often have a difficult time fully trusting him and it may lead to a break up.

If a guy wants to get his girlfriend back in a situation like that, he needs to interact with her and make her feel such a strong, renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for him that she feels compelled to give him another chance, despite her concerns.

Men get women back in that way all the time, all over the world.

So, if your girlfriend dumped you due to assuming you were cheating when you werenât, or even because you did cheat, just know that it is possible to get her back.

Another reason why a woman will break up with her boyfriend for this reason isâ

5. Sheâs just using the break up as a technique to get him panicking, chasing her and being willing to commit to her now

She knows that he hasnât really cheated, but she is worried about her committed to him.

So, she creates a lot of drama (e.g. by getting angry at him, accusing him of cheating, calling him all sorts of names) and then dumping him.

She hopes that he will apologize for his behavior, promise to be more committed to her and stop doing the things that are making her so insecure.

Yet, in many cases, if a guy desperately apologizes for his behavior when he hasnât really done anything wrong and then starts being way nicer, more attentive and committed, a woman will actually lose interest in him.

Women arenât attracted to desperation in men, so her plan will fail to work if her boyfriend does become desperate and she ends up feeling turned off by him.

6. He caught up with his ex girlfriend just as friends

If a woman thinks that her boyfriendâs ex girlfriend is more attractive than her, she may feel jealous and insecure about him meeting up with her.

Even if her boyfriend is 100% in love with her and finds her more desirable than his ex, she may struggle to believe him if she doesnât consider herself very attractive, or sees the other woman as being more attractive than her.

Feeling insecure like that can cause her to believe that he is cheating on her, even when itâs not the truth.

In a case like that, a guy needs to make his ex feel that sheâs truly the only woman he wants to be with.

Of course, not in a desperate, âPlease believe me!â kind of way, but by remaining confident, relaxed and making her feel happy, attracted and wanted when around him.

In terms of meeting up with his ex girlfriend, he should tell his girlfriend that it was a one off meet up as friends because his ex wanted to say goodbye in a mature way.

He should also tell his girlfriend that he understand it might have made her suspect he was cheating, but he didnât and she can ask his ex if she wants to.

Of course, if sheâs very insecure, she probably still wonât believe it if his ex girlfriend confirms that nothing happened, but itâs a start.

After hearing it from his ex girlfriend, his girlfriend will likely begin to feel a bit silly for overreacting and will start to miss her boyfriend.

As a result, she will naturally want to open back up to him and give the relationship another chance, or at least hook up again for fun and see what happens from there.

7. She cheated on him, he knew about it and she then became worried that he would cheat to get revenge

As a result, she began to overanalyze his behavior and worry that he was planning to cheat on her whenever he got the chance.

So she accused him of wanting to get revenge by cheating on her and break her heart for what she did to him.

If he then became desperate and pleaded with her to believe him that he wasn't cheating, or he became very angry at her and potentially a bit too physically aggressive, then she might have used that as a reason to break up with him.

8. She over-reacted to an innocent message from a girl

Jealousy and insecurity can make a woman do crazy things, including breaking up with her boyfriend because she thinks he's cheating on her.

However, if he's a good guy who wouldn't do anything to betray her trust and hurt her, then she will realize that she made a mistake and want him back.

Yet, in many cases, even if she does want him back, a woman will rarely admit it because she will worry that her boyfriend will reject her due to the way she behaved and treated him.

Alternatively, she will worry that if she comes crawling back to him, sucking up to him and apologizing, it might cause him to feel as though he doesn't need to treat her as well as he did in the past.

So, a woman will usually just wait for her boyfriend to contact her, get rid of the negative and awkward tension between them and get the relationship back together.

3 Mistakes Men Make When a Girlfriend Breaks Up With Them and Accuses Them of Cheating

1. Chasing her and begging for her trust

A woman's attraction to a guy, is based mostly on his ability to make her feel as though she can look up to him and respect him as her man.

So, when a guy is desperately chasing after his girlfriend and begging for her trust, he is making her feel the opposite of how she needs to feel to want to get back with him.

Additionally, she begins to look down on him and see him as the less valuable one in the relationship, even though he isn't.

As a result, she doesn't feel motivated to give him another chance, because she thinks she can do better.

2. Becoming a pushover, even though she prefers guys who are a challenge

If a woman is attracted to guys who are a challenge (i.e. she needs to impress him and maintain his interest), but her boyfriend is being a pushover (i.e. doing whatever she wants, bending to her will, being very soft and gentle with her, being extra nice), then sheâs just not going to feel attracted to him.

From his perspective, he may feel as though heâs âdoing the right thingâ by being extra nice to her and essentially sucking up to her, but from her perspective, his weak, wimpy behavior is just another reason to want to be broken up with him.

3. Assuming that if he cuts off contact, she will come running back

Cutting off contact can sometimes work if a woman is still in love with her ex boyfriend and only really broke up with him as a way of making him fear losing her, so that he would commit to her or treat her a little better.

In almost all other cases though, when a woman doesnât hear from an ex she thought was cheating on her, she will take it as a sign that she was right (i.e. he didnât really care about being with her and probably already cheated on her, or would have in the near future).

She will then likely hook up with a new man to make herself feel better.

Then, by the time her ex decides itâs time to contact her again (e.g. after 30 days), itâs usually too late because sheâs either moved on with someone else, gotten over him, or doesnât want to try again because she doesnât think he would actually commit to her in the long run.

Ex Girlfriend Said I Treated Her Like a Child

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

6 common reasons why a woman will say that to her ex boyfriend:

1. He tried to control her

[image: He tried to control her]

For example: Some of the ways a boyfriend might try to control his girlfriend and be somewhat of a father figure to her, are by

- Checking her phone and social media accounts to see who she's talking to and what she's saying.
- Forbidding her to hang out with her work colleagues and instead, to come straight home after work.
- Not allowing her to wear make up, or clothes that are too revealing or sexy, in case it attracts men.
- Putting her through an interrogation every time she wants to go out, insisting that she tell him where she's going and with whom and then forbidding her to go if he doesn't approve.
- Requesting that she text him throughout the day, or if she is going anywhere, so he knows that she is safe.
- Calling and texting her all the time to check up on her.

Although from his point of view, he might feel as though his behavior is totally fine and he's just being a loving, devoted boyfriend, she doesn't see it that way.

From her perspective, it feels like he's treating her like a child who can't take care of herself, make her own decisions and live her life without his constant support.

That isn't attractive and appealing to almost all women, because a woman wants to be able to feel like she has her own freedom, while still being loyal and committed to her man.

If she feels as though her boyfriend is controlling her and restricting her, due to not trusting her, or due to his insecurities, then it will ruin her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him over time.

If her boyfriend doesn't listen to her complaints and change his behavior and treatment of her, she will eventually feel like the best decision for her is to just break up with him, get her freedom back and try to find a more relaxed, loving, confident and trusting man.

2. He made her feel hopeless or dumb, so she would feel like she really needed him

[image: He made her feel hopeless or dumb, so she would feel like she really needed him]

To make a woman feel in need of his intelligent, fatherly presence in her life, a guy will sometimes take on the role of being the person who makes fun of his girlfriend's dreams, ambitions ideas or opinions, or might pick on her and put her down when she makes a mistake.

For example:

He will say things like, You wouldn't succeed at that, so don't even try, or “You’re always stuffing things up, so I will make the decisions from now on,” or “You’re so dumb. You have no idea how life works. I don’t know what you’d do without me. You’d be so lost.”

Essentially, he’s hoping that by making her feel stupid, she will stick with him because no other guy would want a girl who is as dumb or lost as her, or that he’s essentially doing her a favor by being her boyfriend.

Yet, the truth is, his actions aren’t all based on kindness and generosity and she either knows that right away, or eventually figures it out.

She realizes that he is trying to break her down emotionally and make her feel needy of him, so he can hold on to her and treat her badly, knowing that she will likely just keep putting up with it because she’s lucky to have him.

Of course, that approach can work for a little while, but eventually a woman gets tired of being made to feel like she’s not good enough, being treated like a child and being treated badly by a boyfriend who is acting like he’s Mr. Innocent and she’s to blame for all their relationship problems.

As a result, not only will she disconnect from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her guy (i.e. fall out of love with him), but she will also begin to resent him and eventually even hate him.

So, how can a guy get his girlfriend back in a situation like that?

Firstly, he needs to truly believe in himself and in his value to his ex, as well as to other women.

In other words, he needs to be totally confident in knowing that he is a cool, interesting and attractive enough guy and can re-attract his ex, or attract other women easily.

Then, he needs to interact with her and reactivate her feelings for him by showing her through his actions, behavior and how he treats her, that he’s now a much more confident, self-assured, loving, well-rounded man who can keep a relationship together.

Of course, he should tell her that he is now that kind of man and as a result, wants a relationship with her.

Instead, he needs to let her experience those changes in him by interacting with her in person, or at the very least on a phone call or video call.

When she experiences the changes in him and feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him as a result, she will then naturally begin to become open to the idea of getting back together.

In many cases, simply based on how differently he now makes her feel, they will end up hugging, kissing and hooking up sexually right away.

If that doesn’t immediately happen in your case though, don’t worry.

Just interact with her and make her feel attracted to the new you and how much she enjoys how she feels when around you, or when interacting with you now.

When that happens, she will naturally begin to feel attached to you again and will begin to worry that if she doesn’t get back with you, or at least give you another chance for a while, she is going to regret it for many years or potentially the rest of her life.

As a result, she will open up to spending time with you, hooking up and seeing where things go from there.

Another reason why a woman will tell her ex boyfriend that he treated her like a child isâ€¦!

3. He initially treated her like a woman, but gradually began to change and then went too far with it

[image: He initially treated her like a woman, but gradually began to change and then went too far with it]

When he first met her, he showed her respect, listened to her opinions and saw her as being a capable, grown up woman.

Yet, over time, he began treating her more like a child, by not feeling the need to show her much or any respect, disregarding her opinions and looking at her as a confused, naive girl who needs him to take care of her.

Hereâ€¦s the thing thoughâ€¦!

While a woman does like to feel taken care of by a man, she doesnâ€¦t want a man to treat her as though she is incapable of taking care of herself.

She can take care of herself and make her own decisions, but will often want to take a step back and let her man lead the way, so she can feel like his feminine woman.

It doesnâ€¦t mean that she wonâ€¦t ever want to make decisions, or canâ€¦t take care of herself, but instead, it means that sometimes she likes to relax and let her man lead the way.

If a man gets a big head about that and thinks that heâ€¦s so much smarter, better and wiser than her, to the point where he treats her like a child, then she will stop feeling respect for him.

She will start to feel as though he is taking it too far and is expecting her to act like a lost, little girl who needs daddy to take care of her.

If sheâ€¦s like most women, she doesnâ€¦t want to be like that and instead, wants her man to take charge or take the lead, but still be respectful, considerate and loving towards her.

If her boyfriend stops caring about her opinions, puts her down and expects her to just shut up and listen to him, then she will eventually grow tired of that and want to break up with him.

4. She liked it initially, but then became more mature and began to resent it

[image: She liked it initially, but then became more mature and began to resent it]

Sometimes, a woman might enjoy occasionally being treated like a little girl by her man (e.g. he pampers her, decides what she should wear, eat or watch on TV, he protects her) at the start of the relationship.

Yet, as the relationship evolves (if they are an older couple) or she becomes more emotionally mature (if they are a younger couple), she will usually want to be more independent, make her own decisions and take care of herself.

Initially, she might gently try to get him to understand that she is changing (e.g. by telling him that he doesnâ€¦t always have to make decisions for her, or take care of things for her).

Yet, if he doesnâ€¦t get the message and change, or isnâ€¦t willing to change, she will then start to become more frustrated.

Eventually, arguments will break out and she will accuse him of being controlling or treating her like a child who can't make her own decisions, or take care of herself.

If he still doesn't change, or isn't willing to change, a woman will usually then decide to break up with her boyfriend and look for a man who treats her the way she really wants.

So, if your ex feels as though you treated her like a child in the relationship, she probably won't be feeling like giving you another chance right now.

You can change that though.

How?

Show her during interactions that you've leveled up as a man (e.g. you no longer feel the need to control her) and give her the attraction experience she always wanted, but didn't get (e.g. treat her like a mature woman while still being manly and displaying the kind of traits that attracted her to you initially, rather than making the mistake of sucking up to her and being extra nice to hopefully get another chance with her), she will naturally begin to reconnect with her feelings for you.

In many cases like that, a couple will get back together right away, but if your ex takes a little longer, don't worry or panic.

Just know that if you honestly level up as a man and are able to attract her in new and exciting ways as you interact with her, she will almost certainly feel as though it would be her loss (not yours) if she doesn't give you another chance.

So, rather than having to deal with the pain of seeing you move on with another woman while she has feelings for you and wants you back, she will most likely just open up to giving you another chance.

You can then get her back into a relationship that is happier, more mature and more enjoyable than before.

5. He is older than her and wanted her to respect him based on that, so he treated her like a child

If a guy is older than his girlfriend, he will often be a lot wiser and more experienced at life than she is.

As a result, he might feel as though she should follow along with whatever he wants because he's the wiser, more experienced one.

Yet, regardless of whether he's right or not about his level of wisdom and experience compared to her, when a guy becomes too forceful with a woman to the point where he treats her like a clueless child who needs his advice or direction, she will begin to resent him.

When she resents him, she will lose respect for him and when that happens, she will stop feeling attracted to him.

From her perspective, she figures that if he's treating her that way now and isn't willing to change, or doesn't know how to change, then he's probably only going to get worse as the years go on.

Then, regardless of the fact that he is a good guy and could possibly be her lifetime love, she will decide to break up with him to regain her sense of self-respect, rather than continue to be treated like a child.

6. He misunderstood her occasional desire to be thought of as being as delicate as a little girl, for wanting to be treated like one all the time

For example: If a woman stubs her toe on the side of the bed, she might put on a little girl face and say in a little girl voice, â€œHoney, I stubbed my toe,â€ and want her boyfriend to come and comfort her.

Essentially, sheâ€™s acting like a little girl who is delicate and needs to be taken care of.

Alternatively, if sheâ€™s cold, she might put on a little girl face and say in a little girl voice, â€œBrrrâ€¦Iâ€™m coldâ€¦I need a hugâ€¦honeeeey, please hug meâ€¦Iâ€™m colllld,â€ and show that vulnerable side of herself.

In that moment, she wants to feel vulnerable and be girly around her man, knowing that heâ€™s there to take care of her when sheâ€™s feeling helpless or hurt.

In other words, she feels safe with him and wants to let her guard down for a moment and be girly.

However, that doesnâ€™t mean she wants to be treated like a child all the time, have him solve all her problems for her, or encourage him to be like a drill sergeant from the army or a personal trainer at the gym who is ordering her to push herself to be better all the time.

Instead, sheâ€™s just enjoying moments of being girly, mixed in with being a fully grown, capable woman.

Unfortunately, some men donâ€™t understand that and end up assuming that their girlfriend wants to be treated like a helpless, hopeless girl all the time.

Then, all of a sudden, she starts throwing tantrums, getting angry and starting arguments over his controlling behavior, or about him treating her like a clueless child who needs his help with everything.

As a result, a guy will often then feel misunderstood, unappreciated, unwanted and even angry at her for shoving all of his good deeds back in his face.

He has been so attentive towards her, has always had her best interests at heart and has been trying to help her grow up so she could be happier with herself and now she is throwing that back in his face.

He doesnâ€™t realize that treating a woman like a girl when sheâ€™s being vulnerable is fine, but if he does it all the time, the relationship dynamic goes out of sync because in reality, she is a grown woman and doesnâ€™t want to be thinking, behaving, feeling or acting like a child all the time.

3 Mistakes to Avoid if She Said You Treated Her Like a Child

1. Forgetting that if she initially felt attracted to it, then she prefers a guy who is more manly around her

If your ex girlfriend initially felt attracted to the fact that you were manly and she could feel girly around you, then she is still going to be attracted to that dynamic.

After being dumped, a lot of guys make the mistake of suddenly becoming very soft, gentle, nice and sensitive around her, to hopefully make her happy.

Yet, while she might appreciate the fact that he is trying, itâ€™s just not what she finds attractive about men.

So, make sure that if your ex girlfriend is the kind of woman who likes a manâ€™s raw masculinity

(i.e. his ballsiness), don't go turning into a soft, sensitive guy to hopefully win her over, because that will have the opposite effect and you'll end up in the friend zone with her.

To get her back, you need to treat her like a grown woman, but don't lose touch with the things about you that attracted her to you in the beginning.

Additionally, if you want to make sure that she wants you back, then learn and prepare yourself to attract her in new and exciting ways, so she feels like losing you will be her loss, not yours.

(That's what I can help you with).

2. Not understanding that she now feels the need to be emotionally independent and achieve things on her own, to prove to herself that she can manage without you

If you fight against your ex girlfriend trying to enjoy life without you, it will simply make her want to do it even more.

She will assume that you're still treating her like a child by trying to prevent her from making her own decisions and living her life the way she wants to.

As a result, she might end up blocking you or unfriending you, which will make it difficult for you to interact with her, reactivate her feelings and get her back.

This doesn't mean you should ignore her and give her weeks or months of space.

In most cases, that approach doesn't work.

Instead, you should give her a few days of space and then contact her and re-attract her, so she realizes that her feelings for you aren't dead.

Let her see that you're not trying to stop her from enjoying herself or moving on without you and then get her to catch up with to say hi as friends.

Then, when you catch up with her, you can attract her further and get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a new relationship that is better than before.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Assuming that you've totally screwed up and there's no chance that she will ever forgive you or feel attracted to you again

Yes, you did stuff up during the relationship, but that is done now.

So, just let that part of the story go.

From now on, understand that you have learned your lesson and have become a better man as a result.

You are ready to attract her and get her back.

Believe it and make it happen.

4 Mistakes to Avoid if Your Ex is Showing Off Her New Relationship On Social Media

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Think about it...

Your ex posting up photos of her looking happy and enjoying herself without you has worked on you, hasn't it?

It has hurt you, made you feel jealous and left behind to the point where you're now searching about it and reading an article on the topic.

This is why, the first mistake to avoid when you want to get ex back who is posting about her new relationship on social media is...

1. Not doing the same or similar back to her

[image: Not doing the same or similar back to her]

Even if you don't want to get into a new relationship with another woman (because you just want her back, or you don't feel like it at the moment), you can still get out there and have fun with new people, including women and post up photos on social media.

Of course, you might be wondering something along the lines of, â€œWon't that look obvious to her? Won't she see right through it and just think I'm trying to look happy on social media to make her jealous and want me back?â€

No.

Ask yourself!

Was what she did obvious to you?

Did you think that the only reason she is posting about her new relationship and seeming happy, was to make you jealous?

No.

You most likely felt a little jealous, left behind and have been wanting to get her back even more since seeing it.

In other words, it doesn't even matter if her intention was to make you jealous because it worked.

It doesn't matter if it is â€œobviousâ€ to you what she is doing because it worked.

[image: Make your ex jealous via social media]

Likewise, when you post up photos of you looking confident, happy and enjoying life without her, it doesn't matter if you are worried that she might think it is â€œobviousâ€ what you're up to.

She will see you looking confident, happy and enjoying life without her around other people and she will respect you for that.

Why?

It takes a lot of emotional strength to bounce back after a break up, especially when you've been dumped by the woman you love.

Women are naturally attracted to men who are emotionally strong and they respect them so much more than emotionally weak and needy men.

So, when she sees you looking confident, happy and enjoying life without her, she is naturally going to feel respect and attraction for you regardless of whether she wants to or not.

It will happen automatically.

Yes, she might briefly consider whether you are trying to make her jealous, but it won't matter, because she will be looking at you in a positive light now and as a result, she will be feeling drawn to you.

When that happens, it brings up all sorts of feelings inside of her that she may have been blocking since the break up (e.g. she knows that she used to love you and wanted the relationship to work, she does still like a lot of things about you, she knows that you weren't all that bad, she knows that you could possibly change and be the kind of man she really wants and that would feel amazing to her).

Additionally, when she sees you looking happy, confident and enjoying life without her around other people, she might feel a little rejected that you're moving on and aren't feeling sad and at home alone missing her.

Suddenly, she doesn't have as much power over you as she thought she did.

As a result, she may begin to question, Am I over him as much as he is over me? Is he happier without me now? Will he meet another woman who will love the new and improved version of him? Will my new relationship work? and so on.

Then, when you reach out to her (via social media, text, or on a phone call), she will be much more open to interacting with you.

If you can get her on a phone call or video call and get her laughing, smiling and feeling good to be talking to you, she will almost certainly agree to catch up and say hi in person.

If you sense that she is worried about her new guy finding out, you can simply say, No one has to know. It's just us catching up as friends, that's all. We're mature enough to do that. It's just an innocent catch up to say hi.

Women love those sort of things because it makes her love life feeling like a drama TV show or an exciting, romantic movie.

It's exciting and pretty much any woman will want to go with how she feels (i.e. attracted and open to meeting up with you), rather than saying no and regretting it for months or years afterwards. So, don't be afraid to post up photos of you having fun, looking confident, happy, included and loved when other people.

Additionally, don't make the mistake of posting about random things (e.g. the news, memes, sports, video games, etc) that suggest you are alone.

Only post photos (and or videos) that show you looking very confident, happy, loved and included when around other people.

She will see that and naturally begin to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and as a result, will begin to miss you and wonder whether or not what you and her had is really over.

On the other hand, if you just post up lonely things, or nothing at all, she will naturally be more inclined to think negatively about you and feel like she made the right decision to break up with you. Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

2. Unfriending her from social media and then losing one of the best opportunities to re-attract her and get her back

[image: Unfriending her from social media and then losing one of the best opportunities to re-attract her and get her back]

Some guys get all emotional and feel like the best revenge on an ex who has dumped them, or is with a new guy, is to unfriend her or unfollow her.

Yet, it rarely works.

In some cases, the woman assumes that he has unfriended her because heâ€™s jealous, hurting and canâ€™t handle seeing her with another guy, which makes her lose more respect for him because it suggest to her that he doesnâ€™t feel as though he can match up to the new guy.

In other cases, the woman assumes that he is trying to make her panic and worry that she is losing him forever, but if sheâ€™s no longer attracted and in love with him, then she simply doesnâ€™t care.

As a result, it doesnâ€™t work.

Additionally, unfriending her cancels out part of your ability to re-attract her via posts of you looking confident, happy and enjoying life without her.

In todayâ€™s world, the best way to get an ex back is by keeping the lines of communication open, so she can feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you based on how you handle yourself after the break up.

So many guys make the classic mistake of cutting off contact and hoping that it makes their ex girlfriend (or wife) panic and want them back.

Yet, most women can easily move on by opening themselves up to the hoards of guys out there who would love to have sex with her and many who would love to have a relationship with her.

As a result, if a woman breaks up with a guy that she no longer feels enough respect, attraction or love to want to be in a relationship with, then she really doesnâ€™t care if he unfriends her, or stops contacting her.

She might initially feel a bit shocked, but because she doesnâ€™t want to get back with him, she figures that itâ€™s best to just not worry about him and move on.

So, she does and her ex never gets another chance with her.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

3. Posting lonely photos on social media

Sometimes a guy will try to make his ex feel guilty or feel pity for him, by posting lonely photos of himself on social media (e.g. photos of him hanging out with his pet, a landscape photo, eating food for one, him alone at home, bathroom selfies, photos of him alone at a tourist attraction).

He hopes that she will see how lonely he is and realize that he hasn't moved on because he's so committed to her, or so hurt from the break up and potentially then reach out to him to say hi.

Yet, in almost all cases, rather than making a woman think, â€œOh, wow. I never realized how hard my ex is taking this break up. He's really looking so sad and lonely, while I'm being such a selfish bitch by flaunting my happiness on social media. Maybe I should text him to see if he's okay. I feel so bad. He must really still love me. Maybe I made a mistake by breaking up with him after all,â€ she will see him as a bit of an unwanted loser who can't attract new, quality women, or can't handle a break up like a man and â€œneeds time to heal.â€

Here's the thing!

Emotional weakness or neediness is not attractive trait to women, especially after they've broken up with a man who they don't feel enough respect, attraction and love to want to be with.

So, if a woman senses that her ex is emotionally weak and lost without her, it will make her feel more certain that she made the right decision to move on with someone else.

Additionally, when a woman has disconnected from her sexual and romantic feelings for a guy and broken up with him, him looking sad and lonely without her doesn't really matter to her anymore.

After all, he is no longer her responsibility, priority or boyfriend.

He is an ex to her now.

He's on his own and needs to take care of himself, rather than needing her to be nice to him and make him feel better.

Likewise, if she has moved on and is in a new relationship, then her new boyfriend becomes her focus.

Of course, you can change that.

You can make her focus back on you, open up to interacting with you, feel attracted to you again and even want to give the relationship another chance.

Yet, you're not going to achieve that by posting up sad, lonely photos on social media, so avoid that completely.

Only post up photos where you are around other people and look confident, happy, included, loved and enjoying yourself.

That is what works.

Another common mistake guys make when their ex is showing off her new relationship on social media isâ€

4. Not realizing that, in most cases, it's easy to interfere with and break up a woman's new relationship and then get her back

Even if your ex seems happy in her new relationship right now, it doesn't mean you can't interfere with how she is feeling and make her want you back.

In fact, that is the most common way that men get women back who are dating a new guy.

You can interfere with how she is feeling by interacting with her and letting her experience a new and improved version of you that makes her feel so much respect and attraction than before.

For example: Sometimes a guy will get dumped because he became too insecure in the relationship and stopped acting as manly as he did in the beginning.

As a result, his woman loses respect for him and then finds it difficult to feel attracted to him.

Eventually, she falls out of love with him and dumps him.

Yet, he can immediately begin to turn things around with her by interfering with her current feelings about him.

When he interacts with her and she feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for the more confident, emotionally masculine man that he has become, she will naturally start to think about him in a more positive light.

She will then begin to realize that her feelings for him aren't dead and if her relationship with the new guy isn't perfect, she will naturally open up to meeting up with her ex.

That's how it's done.

So, don't hide away and think that you have no chance with her now that she's posting about her new relationship on social media.

You do have a chance and you can get her back.

My Ex is Showing Off Her New Relationship On Social Media

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why:

1. She is trying to show off to friends and family to let them see that she can easily get herself a new boyfriend and be happy again

[image: Showing off to her family and friends and trying to show that she can easily get a new boyfriend]

Sometimes a woman will feel embarrassed about not being to keep a relationship together (i.e. your ex has a 100% failure rate with relationships so far), compared to her family and friends who are in happy, stable relationships that last.

A woman like that will often feel like the odd one out, who is unlucky in love and will want to prove to her friends and family that she is lovable, wanted and can make a relationship work.

As a result, she will quickly try to find herself a new boyfriend after a break up and then begin showing off her new relationship on social media, to make sure that all her friends and family know about it.

Her friends and family will then feel obliged to focus on her new relationship and respect that, which will help her get over her ex and move on.

So, while it might look like your ex is being nasty by showing off her new relationship, she might be doing it to boost her self-esteem or to make her friends and family see her in a more positive light.

Another possible reason why your ex is showing off her new relationship on social media isâ€¦

2. Sheâ€™s happy for now, but wonâ€™t necessarily be happy for long

[image: Sheâ€™s happy for now, but wonâ€™t necessarily be happy for long]

At the beginning of a relationship, itâ€™s easy for a woman to feel happy and excited because everything is new and she isnâ€™t really focusing on her new boyfriendâ€™s flaws or potential issues.

Instead, she is feeling like she is falling in love, or at least enjoying herself around someone new and as a result, she will often want to share that with all her friends on social media, so they click like, heart or whatever to show their support.

Yet, the reality is that, even though she might seem happy now, there is no guarantee that she will continue to be happy with him, or that the relationship will work.

After all, she has a 100% failure rate with her relationships so far.

So, some questions I have for you are:

- Did your ex show off her relationship with you at the start?
- Did she seem happy in photos with you at the start?
- Did it seem a relationship with her would work because you were so attracted and interested in each other?
- Did things suddenly change one day, when you reacted badly to something she said or did, or did she suddenly change without you doing anything wrong?
- Did she stop feeling as much respect, attraction and love for you as she did in the beginning and then start to pull away?

As you may have realized while reading through those questions, your relationship started out well and seemed happy, but fell apart over time.

So, thereâs no guarantee that the new guy is going to be able to make things work with her, just because she seems happy with him now.

Additionally, her posting on social media like that is most likely just the way she does things (i.e. she likes to inform people about whatâs going on in her life, even if what is going on is only temporary).

After the initial thrill of being with someone new wears off, she might realize that she isnât as happy with him as she hoped she would be.

Suddenly, his flaws or unappealing traits begin to seem obvious to her (e.g. heâs confident, but heâs kind of arrogant and selfish, or heâs really nice to her and treats her like a princess, but thatâs because he doesnât know how to attract her by being confident or masculine, or he initially seemed ambitious and as though he wanted to achieve a lot in life, but she notices that he just procrastinates, wastes time and makes excuses about why he isnât making progress in life).

When she begins to see who he really is, her initial feelings of respect and attraction will begin to fade and she may see the relationship as being a mistake, or she could simply write it off as a rebound (i.e. a temporary relationship that a person gets into after a serious break up to make themselves feel better).

So, what should you do?

If you want her back, donât just sit around doing nothing.

Instead, you need to see this new guy as just a temporary, passing phase in her life, rather than getting upset and feeling jealous, or like you have no chance with her anymore.

She is your woman and will get back with you if you are willing to go through the ex back process and make her want to get back with you.

If you are willing to do that, then you need to interact with her and reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you, so she starts to feel confused about her feelings for the new guy and begins to feel attached to you again.

When you plant that seed in her mind, she will struggle to keep you off her mind and will feel compelled to interact with you and even catch up with you in person.

In person, you can then build on her reawakened attraction for you and proceed to a hug, then a kiss and then sex.

That might seem impossible to you know, but that's only because you haven't interacted with her and re-attracted her yet.

When you re-attract her, you will see that her behavior and treatment of you immediately changes. She stops looking at you as her ex that she doesn't want anything to do with and starts looking at you as the man she will likely regret losing for the rest of her life, unless she opens up and gives you another chance.

No one wants to live with the pain of regret, so when your ex feels it and wants to open up to you again, you will instantly see that her behavior and treatment of you changes.

Suddenly, she becomes more friendly, chatting and open to meeting up.

Then, when you meet up with her, you can re-attract her, seduce her into having sex with you again and get her back.

Another possible reason why your ex is showing off her new relationship on social media is that

3. She's trying to make herself look happy, even though she isn't

[image: You should know that behind a happy photo, there can be other feelings as well]

Sometimes people smile for the camera, but then feel disconnected afterwards, or don't actually feel very happy while taking the photo.

If you think about it, photos like that might have even happened with you and her.

Maybe she was being distant and was losing interest in the relationship, but in a photo you took together, she smiled and cuddled up to you.

From other people's perspective, everything seemed fine.

You seemed like a happy couple with no relationship problems.

So, even though your ex might be posting lots of photos of herself and her new man, it doesn't mean that deep down, she is happy with him, or that she's still not thinking about you or missing you.

Her smiling, seeming happy and seeming to be having fun also doesn't mean that she is serious about him, totally loves him and is planning on marrying him.

Go back and look at photos of you and her at the start.

She probably seems just as happy or similar, right?

You most-likely seemed like a happy couple together in the photos you posted.

This is why, if you want her back, you shouldn't take what she's posting on social media so seriously that it ends up causing you to walk away and risk potentially losing the love of your life. Instead, build up the courage to interact with her (over the phone and especially in person), so you can reactivate and reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

When you do that, you will see a complete change in her and how she approaches you from now on.

Many guys in your situation report back to me saying that it was like night and day, in terms of how her behavior changed.

She went from being cold, distant and not wanting anything to do with him, to being warm, open and wanting to catch up.

So many guys have gotten ex women back in your situation, so don't kill your confidence by assuming that she's totally happy with him now and you have no chance.

There is always a chance to get a woman back.

Another possible reason why your ex is showing off her new relationship on social media is

4. She's trying hard to get over you and create a new life for herself that she can look at whenever she checks her phone

[image: She's trying hard to get over you and create a new life for herself that she can look at whenever she checks her phone]

The more posts she makes, the further down her memories of you and her are.

Of course, if she's like most women, she will have deleted or hidden photos of you and her, so only she can see them.

Yet, there will still be photos of her that you took, which will remind her of you and her being together.

So, if she's like most women out there, she will try to make a lot of new posts, to bury the memories of you and her further down into her profile.

That way, when she checks her phone, she can see her new life and focus on that, rather than constantly thinking about you and her and what happened.

5. She's trying to make you jealous to rub it in that she's no longer with you

There are many reasons why a woman might want to make her ex jealous after a break up.

For example: Some of those might be

- She's angry and wants to punish him for the way the relationship turned out, by rubbing her happiness without him in his face.
- He made her feel as though she wasn't attractive enough in the relationship (e.g. he made fun of her looks or her weight gain in some areas, he put her down and made her feel stupid, he treated her more like a friend or roommate, rather than a desirable woman), so she now wants to show him that she's still got it and that guys find her attractive.
- He was jealous and controlling in the relationship and she now wants to let him see that she is free to do whatever she wants, with whomever she wants.
- Secretly, she still has feelings for him and is hoping that he wants to get her back after seeing that she is moving on.
- Even though she knows that her ex regrets losing her, she wants to make him feel even more pain and realize that he has lost a great woman and will probably never find someone else like her ever again.

So, if her posts have been making you feel jealous, sad, depressed and regretful, then her strategy has worked.

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

It doesnât actually matter why your ex is showing off her new relationship on social media.

What matters is what you are going to do about it.

Are you going to let her happiness make you feel even more depressed, rejected and left out, or are you going to do what it takes to re-attract her and get her back, so you can feel better about yourself?

Alternatively, are you going to try to forget all about her and get yourself a new, high quality woman?

What Does it Mean if My Ex Girlfriend Doesn't Text Me Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 things that her not texting you back could mean and what you should do to get her back:

1. She's playing hard to get to see how you will react

[image: She is playing hard to get to see how you react]

For a woman to really want to get back with an ex, she usually needs to feel that things will be different this time around.

She doesn't want to get back into a relationship with the same old dynamic, where she ends up feeling bored, turned off and wanting to break up with him again.

She wants to be able to see that her ex has leveled up as a man, to the point where she can now fully love, respect and feel attracted to him.

So, rather than making it easy for him to get her back, a woman will sometimes test him by playing hard and assessing how he reacts.

For example, if she doesn't reply to some or all of his texts:

- Will he just give up and walk away because deep down, he doesn't really care about getting her back?
- Will he lose confidence in himself and start coming across an insecure way via text?
- Will he lose control of his emotions and begin pouring his heart out via texts, emails or online messages?
- Will he get angry with her for not texting him back and then possibly become aggressive towards her?
- Will he have the confidence to call her and reactivate her feelings for him on a phone call or video call, or will he be too afraid to do that and instead, just stick to texting even though she's ignoring him?
- Will he lose interest and just move on with a new woman?
- Will he start begging and pleading with her to reply?

Depending on how he reacts, she will either continue ignoring him, or will open herself up to interacting with him on a phone call or in person, to see where things go from there.

So, if your ex girlfriend doesn't text you back, don't sit around thinking negative thoughts like, "Her not texting me back definitely means she doesn't want anything to do with me anymore," or "It must be a sign that she's over me and has probably forgotten all about me," or "She must hate me if she's not replying," or "I have no chance with her now because she's not replying to my texts."

You've got to be stronger than that.

When it comes to relationships between men and women, the man always has to be the more courageous, emotionally strong one who isn't afraid of rejection.

So, in your case, you need to find a way to make her open up to you again, so you can start the ex back process with her.

How?

Start by calling her.

She might not answer right away and that's okay.

You've got to be courageous, emotionally strong and not afraid of rejection.

So, if she doesn't answer, try calling her again in about 5 minutes.

If she doesn't answer, try calling her again in an hour.

If she still doesn't answer, text her this:

Hey. Just want to let you know I accept that we've broken up, but I want to ask you something really quick over the phone. Don't worry, it's nothing serious. I'll call you in 10 minutes.

Then, try to call her 10 minutes later.

If she doesn't answer, don't keep calling her over and over again because that will just annoy her and make her more determined not to talk to you.

Instead, try calling her again after a day or two.

If she doesn't answer and possibly texts you something like, What do you want to ask me? or, I don't want to talk on the phone. Just say what you want to ask me via text and be done with it, then don't panic or worry.

Instead, just call her.

If she still won't answer, text her this:

It's not something that can be said via text. I'll call you in 5 minutes. After that, if you decide that you never want to talk to me again, I promise I will never text you or call you again, ever.

She will be intrigued by that and will want to answer to find out what it is you want to ask her over the phone.

Then, call her after 5 minutes.

By the way!

What you want to ask her is to meet up with you in person, but don't ask her that right away.

Instead, start the phone call off by making her feel some attraction for you initially (e.g. using humor to break down her defenses and make her laugh, maintaining your confidence regardless of how cold or unfriendly she seems at first, bringing up a private joke you and her have, talking in a more masculine tone of voice while still being yourself).

When she sees that you have the balls to go after what you want without fear and you have the ability to spark her feelings for you, her defenses will naturally come down and she will begin to open up to you.

She might not make that obvious, but it is what will happen.

When a woman feels a rush of renewed respect and attraction for her ex, she can't stop herself from feeling good and feeling more open to him.

She might try to hide it, but she will be feeling it.

So, once youâve done that, you can then go ahead and arrange a time for you and her to catch up and say hi.

If she asks why you couldnât send that via text, simply laugh and say, âBecause thereâs no way you would have said yes if I asked you via textâ and have a laugh with her.

You can then add in, âLook, I accept that weâve broken up and are never getting back together. Yet, it will be good to catch up and say hi and end our relationship in a mature way. If you donât ever want to talk to me again after that, I promise to never text you or call you ever again.â

Since she will be feeling respect and attraction for you in those moments, she wonât like the idea of never hearing from you again.

She will feel as though she is losing you and will realize that she is going to regret it if she doesnât open up to seeing you again as assessing how she feels at the time.

As a result, she will almost certainly agree to catch up and say hi in person.

Then, when you meet up in person, you can fully reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you and get her back.

Another thing it could mean if your ex girlfriend doesnât text you back isâ!

2. Sheâs trying to signal to you that she doesnât just want to be texting with you

[image: She is trying to signal to you that she doesn't just want to be texting with you]

These days, texting has become the preferred method of communication for most people.

In fact, according toÂ Portio Research at the time of typing this article, people around the world already send about 16 million text messages per minute, 23 billion per day or 8.3 trillion in one year.

In other words, texting is a big deal and is only getting bigger by the day.

Additionally, people are becoming more and more used to just texting each other, rather than talking on the phone or in person.

For example: Currently, in the USA, one third of the population prefers texting over talking on the phone.

So, itâs possible that you and your ex might have texted each other a lot more than talking on the phone.

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

Although texting is fine between a couple who are in love, it becomes a lot trickier between exâs, especially when one of them is no longer in love.

The reality is that texting leaves way too much room for misunderstandings and misinterpretations.

For example: Texting something innocent like, âDid you get my earlier message?â can be taken as a sign of neediness and desperation.

She can read the words in a different tone of voice that you actually meant it to be in.

You might have asked in a casual, easygoing way, but she might read it in a way that suggests you are being demanding, angry, needy or desperate.

As a result, in some cases, a woman can end up thinking, “Why is he pestering me with texts and expecting me to reply right away? Does he think that I just sit around all day waiting to hear from him and then text him back right away? Maybe he’s forgotten that we’re broken up. Maybe he doesn’t realize that I don’t have to text him if I don’t want to because we’re not a couple anymore.”

So, she will begin to ignore more and more of his texts, to hopefully let him know that she isn’t interested in texting back and forth with him anymore.

Yet, it’s not just that.

As I said, texting can be easily misinterpreted and misunderstood.

For example: Sometimes a woman does want to get back with her ex boyfriend, but she wants him to do more than just text her.

If he is just texting her, she can misinterpret that as meaning that he’s only putting in a half-hearted effort to get her back.

In her mind, she feels as though a man needs to call a woman and set up a time to meet up in person if he wants her back.

Yet, her ex is just texting her, so she feels as though he doesn’t really care and doesn’t value her enough to do what it takes to get her back.

She then becomes even more determined to ignore his texts.

Then, when he stops texting her because he assumes she is no longer interested, she feels as though he doesn’t care and she then decides to go out and meet other guys, or go on dates to start moving on without him.

It was all a complete misunderstanding because he was sticking to just texting her, rather than getting her on a phone call or video call and then arranging a time to catch up in person (after he’d make her feel attracted on the call).

Always remember: It is so much easier to spark a woman’s sexual and romantic feelings for you on a phone call/video call where she can hear the tonality of your voice, experience your confidence and sense your intentions, compared to just texting her.

When you talk to her on a phone call or video call and she starts off being cold, but you are able to make her laugh and smile by using humor, then she instantly begins to feel differently about you.

She begins to realize that you’re not so bad after all and in reality, there still is something there between you and her.

As a result, she naturally begins to feel attached to you again and open to something potentially happening between you and her.

Yet, if she’s being cold to you via text and you’re trying to reason with her or explain yourself, then she’s not going to be feeling happy, attracted and drawn to you.

Instead, the texts will start to feel draining, annoying and pointless to her because she doesn’t feel attracted to you and therefore, doesn’t feel motivated to try to work things out.

Then, she will naturally stop replying to your texts.

So, don’t waste time continuing to try to text your ex girlfriend back.

Instead, have the balls to call her, re-attract her, meet up with her and then get her back for real.
Another thing it could mean if your ex girlfriend doesn't text you back is!

3. She doesn't feel attracted to you anymore, so she doesn't feel motivated to reply

When a woman disconnects from her feelings of sexual and romantic feelings for a guy leading up to, during and after a break up, she will usually feel like it would be a waste of her time to remain in contact with him.

In her mind, she knows that she's not attracted to him anymore (e.g. because he became too insecure in the relationship and has no idea how to fix it and start being the confident, emotionally strong guy she needs), so there's no point texting back and forth for weeks or months after the break up.

So, she will do her best to ignore her ex's texts and focus her attention on finding a new man to move on with.

If you want her to care about you and want you back, you must start with re-attraction.

Without attraction, there is no boyfriend-girlfriend relationship.

Attraction first and everything else after that.

Another possible reason why she hasn't been replying to your texts is!

4. She is using the No Contact Rule on you to help herself move on [image: She is using the No Contact Rule on you to help herself move on]

The No Contact Rule (not being in contact with your ex for 30 to 60 days) was originally invented to help couples get over each other and move on.

It's essentially about getting your ex, âOut of sight, out of mind and moving on during a set period of time.

So, it's quite possible that your ex has been actively cutting off contact with you for 30 to 60 days to help herself forget about you, meet new men and move on without you.

This is why, if you want her back, you shouldn't waste time sending her text messages that she ignores, or rarely replies to.

You have to be more assertive and courageous than that by getting her on a phone call or video call, rather than hiding behind the safety of texts.

If you don't, then the next time you hear from her, it might be when she texts you something like, âI want you to know that I've met someone else. I'm in love and I'm happy with him. What you and I had is over. You need to accept that and move on.

If you don't want to find yourself in that position, then get past just texting with her.

Get to a phone call or video call and arrange a time to meet up in person.

When you meet up with her in person, make sure that you are fully prepared and ready to properly re-attract her and make her want you back.

Donâ€¢t just go to a meet up and hope that everything works out.

Get yourself ready to re-attract her (i.e. be ready to remain confident if she is initially being cold or closed off. Be ready to flirt with her and create a sexual vibe, rather than just talking to her as a friend, an ex or as a guy who is no longer worthy of her).

Prepare yourself to succeed, so you actually get her back for real.

Another thing it could mean if your ex girlfriend doesnâ€¢t text you back isâ€¢!

5. She has recently met, or hooked up with a new guy and is beginning to lose interest in you

One of the most common ways a woman will try to get over her ex, is by finding herself a new man. To accomplish that goal, she might:

- Go to clubs, bars or parties and hook up with a guy for a one night stand.
- Go on dates with guys that have been interested in her all along (e.g. a guy at work or university, a neighbor, a friend of a friend).
- Hook up with an ex who is still missing her.
- Using online dating, or an app like Tinder where she can easily set up a bunch of dates.

For most women, itâ€¢s pretty easy to quickly get some sex, or line up a bunch of dates with guys who are interested in her.

So, itâ€¢s possible that your ex girlfriend may have already gone on a date, or even kissed or hooked up sexually with a new guy she has met, or a guy who has liked her for a while and has been waiting in the wings for her to break up with you.

If that has happened, it doesnâ€¢t mean that you no longer have a chance with her.

You can still get her back if you interact with her on a phone call, video call or in person and begin reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Then, arrange to catch up in person, attract her further and then get to a hug, kiss and possibly sex to begin getting things back on track for you and her.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys donâ€¢t follow through like that and just text their ex girlfriend and as a result, she simply continues to move on without him.

3 Mistakes to Avoid if Your Ex Doesn't Feel Attached to You Anymore

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Right now, you still feel totally attached to her.

You want her back so badly and think about her often, if not every day.

She's always on your mind and you just want to be able to hug her, kiss her and love her again.

Yet, she's not feeling the same way at the moment.

You're essentially alone with this.

Feeling that loneliness, rejection and the pain that comes with it can often lead a man to making one of the following mistakes, which only pushes his ex further away.

So, if you want her back, be sure to avoid the following 3 mistakes:

1. Trying to have a deep and meaningful conversation with her when she's not even attracted anymore

[image: Trying to have deep and meaningful conversations when she's not feeling attracted]

Think about it from her point of view.

She has lost touch with her feelings of love, respect and attraction for you.

As a result, she no longer really cares about the relationship and is trying to steer herself in a direction that will allow her to feel respect, attraction and love for a man again.

She doesn't feel it with you, so she is closing herself off to you.

So, if you then start talking about the relationship and saying things like, "Yes, we went through some difficult times and I made some mistakes, but the love we shared was real. I've never loved a woman as much as I have loved you. That must mean something. You have to admit that you and I had an amazing connection before. The love was real and it is still there for me and I know you would still feel it a bit too. So, we shouldn't just be throwing this love away. You mean everything to me. Don't I mean something to you?" she's just not going to be feeling the same way you do.

As a result, it will highlight to her that the feelings between you and her aren't mutual anymore.

She will realize that you are trying to hold onto something that just isn't there for her.

As a result, she might say something like, "Sorry, but I just don't feel the same way as you do. We're no longer together anyway because we've broken up. So, as far as I'm concerned, the relationship is over and I really don't want to be talking about it. We gave the relationship a shot, it didn't work out and now it's time to acknowledge that and move on. So, please just accept it and let me get on with my life."

Essentially, she doesn't have feelings for you in that moment, so discussions about being your girlfriend again will seem uncomfortable, inappropriate or unwanted to her.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend to be interested in giving the relationship another chance, you first have to focus on making her have sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Without sexual and romantic feelings, she won't feel motivated to get back with you, or to discuss the relationship or work on it.

Yet, when you reawaken her feelings first and make her want to get back with you, then she naturally becomes open to talking about the relationship and trying to get back together with you.

2. Hoping that expressing your feelings will make her have feelings

Sometimes a guy will hope that if he pours his heart out to his ex girlfriend, she will be flattered that he really does love her and it will make her want to reciprocate his romantic words by saying that she loves him too.

Yet, it almost never works out that way.

Why?

She has broken up with you because she stopped feeling enough respect, attraction and love to want to be with you.

As a result, when she ended the relationship, she didn't really feel as though she was losing much and saw it as being more of a benefit to her to move on without you.

After the break up, she may have felt some pain that comes with a break up, but because she didn't feel much respect, attraction and love for you, the pain will have gone away fairly quickly.

In a matter of hours, or days in some cases, she will have felt as though she was over you and ready to move on by meeting and dating new men.

So, if you come to her and express your feelings and pour your heart out to her (e.g. "I love you so much. You mean everything to me. Please just give me a chance. I would do anything for you"), then it's not going to seem romantic to her, or seem like something she wants.

The reality is that women only appreciate romantic gestures, words and actions from a man that they are sexually attracted to and want to be with.

So, if your ex girlfriend wasn't feeling much sexual attraction for you leading up to the break up and hasn't been feeling it since, then she isn't going to want to be with you in a boyfriend-girlfriend relationship.

As a result, she isn't going to be amazed, flattered and compelled to give you another chance if you pour your heart out to her and tell her how special she is, how much you love her and how you'd do anything to make her happy.

Instead, she will see your misplaced, romantic attempt to get her back as a desperate move because you don't know what else to do.

Additionally, in cases like that, a woman will often see her ex man's actions and selfish.

Why?

Essentially, he is telling her how much she means to him and how much he wants her back, so to her, it's basically all about him and what he wants.

He wants her back so badly, he needs her back to feel okay again and is willing to do whatever it takes.

From his perspective, he isn't being selfish and is being totally honest and sincere about his desire to make her happy and be a better man for her.

Yet, from her perspective, he's just doing it to make himself feel better so he doesn't have to live with the pain of being the rejected one and being left behind.

It's a subtle thing that plays out in break ups that most men never understand and as a result, they are unable to get their ex girlfriend back.

So, what you need to understand is this: All that matters right now are her feelings.

To her, your feelings don't matter.

She knows how you feel and knows that you want her back, but that's not what will get her back.

What will get her back is when you reawaken her feelings for you, so she naturally has the motivation to want to get back with you.

Additionally, she begins to worry that if she doesn't get back with, she will end up regretting it and missing you as you move on with a new woman who sees your worth and value.

So, when a woman feels like that, she wants to avoid the pain and rejection that will come with a scenario like that and as a result, she opens herself back up to her ex.

Suddenly, she feels attached to him again and wants to be with him.

Yet, if you approach the ex back process by making the mistake of pouring your heart out to her when she isn't attracted to you, then she's just going to want to move on and leave you behind.

3. Assuming that she will feel attached again if you cut off contact and wait

[image: Assuming that she will feel attached again if you cut off contact and wait]

This is one of the biggest mistakes that guys make when trying to get an ex girlfriend back.

She isn't attracted, doesn't care about him anymore and he thinks she will suddenly care and feel attracted to him if he doesn't contact her.

Instead, she is already over him and simply begins to move on.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that until it's too late.

By the time a guy realizes that he's been waiting and waiting and she hasn't contacted him, she will have already moved on, or will be in the process of moving on without him.

So, when he finally reaches out to her (e.g. after 30-60 days), she will then say something like, "I hadn't heard from you in such a long time that I assumed you had moved on. I'm actually surprised to hear from you. Anyway, I'm not going to lie to you – I'm with someone else now and I'm very happy. I don't want to be texting back and forth with you because that would be disrespectful to my new boyfriend. So, please respect my new relationship. I wish you all the best."

Her ex is then left feeling rejected once again.

He thought that she would fall for the trick of not contacting her, but like most women, she didn't.

She had already lost a lot of respect, attraction and love for him by the time she broke up with him, so she was ready to get over him and move on pretty much right away.

and she did.

So, here's what you need to know!

In most ex back cases, 3 to 7 days of no contact is long enough to allow an ex woman to calm down, miss you and open up to the idea of interacting with you again to see what happens.

Anything longer than that and a woman will usually open herself up to meeting new guys, going on dates, having sex and falling in love again.

Over the years, I've heard from so many guys who have been disappointed after giving their ex girlfriend (or even ex wife) a month of space before contacting her.

They then find out that after a couple of weeks, she decided to go out with her girlfriends and get drunk and ended up sleeping with a guy, or she decided to get on dating apps and had gone on a bunch of dates.

In most cases, the woman then says that she is enjoying single life and doesn't want to get back together.

This is why, if you want your ex girlfriend back, you shouldn't wait too long to make it happen.

As the old saying goes, âOut of sight, out of mind.â

The longer you wait, the less you will be on her mind and without you around, she will naturally start to feel attracted to new men.

Like other women, she has sexual urges and sometimes feels horny and if you're not around to satisfy that urge, then she will open herself to being with a new man instead.

So, if you want your ex to feel attached to you again and to feel attracted to you, then make it happen.

Interact with her in the next few days and reawaken her feelings for you (e.g. being confident and emotionally masculine, using humor to make her feel relaxed in your presence, making her feel feminine and girly, flirting with her, being a bit of a challenge in a playful way as you talk to her).

When her feelings have been reactivated, she will naturally open up to being your girlfriend again, or at least hooking up with you to see what happens after that.

So, don't waste another day avoiding her.

Call her or meet up with her as soon as possible, reactivate her feelings and get her back.

How to Get My Ex Girlfriend to Feel Attached to Me Again

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your ex girlfriend doesn't feel very attached to you anymore, then she is going to open herself up to being with other guys.

When she hooks up with another guy, she won't really be missing you or worrying about you and will simply begin to move on without you.

On the other hand, if you take action now to make her feel emotionally attached to you again, then she will feel drawn to you and won't want to open herself up to other guys.

If she happens to go on a date with a new guy in the meantime, she won't be fully invested into it and will be wondering whether or not she should just get back with you.

So, how can you make her feel emotionally attached to you again, so she only wants to be with you?

Here are 5 things you can do:

1. Attract her in new, more mature ways

[image: Attract her in new, more mature ways]

For example: In the relationship, a guy stopped acting manly around his girlfriend and instead, became a bit of a wimp (e.g. emotionally sensitive, needy, jealous).

His girlfriend then stopped feeling attracted to him sexually and romantically and as a result, no longer felt that boyfriend-girlfriend attachment that she felt initially.

All of a sudden, she starts to feel as though he is like a stranger to her, or like a guy who is just hanging around her and trying to hold onto something that just isn't there anymore.

If a woman feels that way long enough, she will eventually break up with her boyfriend.

So, in a case like that where a guy is trying to get his ex girlfriend to feel attached to him again, he needs to interact with her and attract her in new, more mature ways.

Rather than being emotionally sensitive, needy or jealous, he needs to let her see that he is now very confident and emotionally independent.

When she sees that he really is different now and more importantly, she really does feel differently while interacting with him, she will naturally start to reconnect with the attachment she used to have for him.

How about you?

Can you think of any ways that you behaved in the relationship that she would have seen as immature or unattractive?

For example:

- Getting into arguments with her when she was moody, rather than being mature and emotionally strong enough to change her mood with humor, flirting or playful behavior. Mature men who know how to handle women are aware of the fact that you don't always have to get into arguments with a moody woman.

- Taking her tantrums too seriously because you expected a woman to behave more like you (a man), where she should always maintain a steady mood. You took her seriously because you didn't realize that a woman's mood changes all throughout the month (not just during her period) due to the ovulation cycle and how it effects her hormones.
- Wanting to check her phone to see if she was messaging anyone and if so, what she was saying and what it could mean. A mature man knows that the best solution to keeping a woman faithful is to create a relationship dynamic where she wants to impress you and feels lucky to be with you. Then, give her your 100% trust and don't see any other man as competition for your woman. If you do that, a woman will always respect you, feel attracted to you, love you and want to be with you and only you. She will know that it will be her loss if she loses you, because the majority of men never truly figure out how to approach relationships with women in a mature, effective way that results in a loving, passionate, happy relationship that lasts for life.

The list goes on.

There are so many subtle things that you might not be aware of when it comes to women and how to handle them in a relationship.

However, if you are willing to learn and then interact with her and attract her in new, more mature ways, she will definitely feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

When she feels that, she will then begin to worry that if she doesn't get back with you, she will regret it for the rest of her life.

As a result, she will naturally begin to feel attached to you again.

2. Meet up with her, re-attract her and create new, unforgettable moments based on how you and her now connect

[image: Create new, unforgettable moments based on how you now connect]

So many guys get stuck in the ex back process by simply texting their ex girlfriend and hoping that something happens.

Yet, the reality is that if you want to fully reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings, you need to meet up with her in person and let her experience the new and improved you for herself.

If you don't think she will agree to meet up with you, then make sure that you ask her on a phone call, or video call, rather than text.

It's way too easy for a woman to play hard to get via text, or say yes and then cancel later, but if you talk to her on the phone (and get her laughing and feeling good) and then suggest catching up, she is so much more likely to agree and stick to her decision to meet up.

One of the reasons why is that she can see that you're not being needy, desperate or awkward about the whole thing.

You're being confident, easy-going and have the courage to joke around with her to get her laughing and feeling good when talking to you.

As a result, she feels as though if you and her met up in person, it would be like that as well.

Yet, if she gets the sense that a meet up with you would be tense, awkward and uncomfortable, she will naturally want to say no, or cancel after agreeing.

So, if youâre talking to her on a phone call, or video call and have gotten her laughing, smiling and feeling good, you can then say something like this.

âHey, I know that weâre not a couple anymore and I totally accept your decision to be broken up. Weâre never getting back together and I accept that. However, I really do believe that weâre mature enough to be able to meet up for a coffee as friends and say hi. It would be good to catch up, have a chat and say goodbye on good terms. So, letâs have a coffee sometime this week. Iâm not busy on Wednesday or Thursday, so any of those days is fine. How about 7pm on Thursday?â

She will most likely agree, but if she doesnât, you can always add on this, âOkay, well letâs agree to this then. After we catch up to say hi, if you never want to see me again, I promise that I will never contact you again. So, letâs catch up for a coffee. Thursday at 7pm. See you then?â

Then, when you meet up, make sure that you are ready to attract her in new ways and create new, unforgettable moments based on how you now connect with each other.

Based on the changes youâve made to your approach to her, you and her connect on a whole new level.

It feels exciting for the both of you.

She feels so much more respect for you than she did in the past because you really have leveled up as a man and as a result, she feels more feminine and girly in comparison to you.

A new spark develops between you and she begins to feel attached to you in a new way.

She doesnât feel the need to keep her guard up and look at you as her ex boyfriend that she no longer wants anything to do with.

Instead, you and her automatically begin creating a new bond based on who you are and how you make each other feel now.

Once youâve established a new, more appealing connection, you should then progress to giving her a hug, a kiss and then hook up with her sexually.

Another thing you can do to make your ex girlfriend feel attached to you again isâ!

3. Attract her in new ways and let her see that you are interested in her, but donât need her back

Where a lot of guys go wrong when trying to get an ex girlfriend back, is that they make it obvious that they want a relationship BEFORE theyâve even re-attracted her.

Thatâs a failing strategy that almost always results in rejection, because without attraction, she isnât going to feel a strong enough boyfriend-girlfriend connection to feel attached and want to get back together.

So, if you begin talking about getting back together without first giving her a different and more interesting attraction experience than what sheâs had with you in the past, then sheâs almost certainly not going to feel motivated enough to open back up and love you again like she used to. Instead, sheâs will focus on moving on by finding herself a new man who can make her feel attracted and turned on in the ways that she feels you canât (e.g. if youâve become too needy of her, then she will feel attracted to a man who is more of a challenge and who makes her feel needy for him).

So, if you want to make her feel attached to you, start attracting her in new and interesting ways so she feels drawn to you again, but donât put any pressure on her to get back together.

For example:

- If you were always nice and sweet to her in the past, start being more challenging and ballsy, while still being a good guy to her.
- If youâve become nervous and unsure of yourself around her since the break up, focus on being more confident and self-assured. Women are always attracted to confidence in men and turned off by insecurity, so make sure that she doesnât sense that you are insecure, unsure of yourself or doubting yourself around her.
- If she has become more dominant during conversations, change the dynamic from now on by laughing at her in a loving way and showing her that she canât dominate you with her confident personality anymore. Donât tell her that though. Just let her see that you no longer feel intimidated, or no longer feel the need to be cautious and worried around her. You have gotten your balls/courage back, but are still being good to her.
- If you always bent over backwards to please her in the past, start being more of a challenge around her so she feels as though she needs to work hard to impress you too, rather than everything being so one-sided.

When you have made her feel attracted in new ways, let her see that you are interested in her by flirting with her and letting her see your attraction for her via your body language.

Yet, donât come across as though youâre after a relationship.

Let her be the one who wants to get back together and she will then automatically feel attached to you in a way that is exciting and compelling for her.

Another thing you can do to make your ex girlfriend feel attached to you again isâ

4. Do fun, interesting or adventurous things with friends and let her feel like she is missing out

[image: Do fun things without her and let her feel as though she is missing out]

After a break up, many guys want to curl up in bed and hide from the world while they privately deal with their pain.

That is one of the main reasons why you shouldnât.

Women are attracted to the confidence, emotional strength and emotional independence of men (i.e. not needy).

So, if you want your ex to feel attracted and attached to you again, sheâs not going to feel that if it seems as though youâre needy for her, or in pain without her.

What makes an ex feel attracted and attached very quickly, is the fear of missing out, or the fear of being left behind and having to live with regret.

This is why it's so important for you to get out of bed, or the house and do fun, outdoor activities with friends where you can take photos and post them to social media.

Let her see how confident, happy and forward moving you are without her, so she can feel attracted to your emotional strength and emotional independence and as a result, feel like she is losing a man that she is attracted to.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys simply don't understand how a woman's attraction work.

As a result, a guy will sometimes believe that if he comes across as sad and lonely, it will make his ex girlfriend feel guilty and she will then open up to giving him another chance with her.

Alternatively, he might hope that she sees that he is being 100% loyal to her and isn't interested in being around other people and potentially meeting new women.

He hopes that will make her realize how lucky she is to have such a loyal, loving guy who is still committed to her after the break up.

Yet, that's just not how it works.

If a woman breaks up with a guy that she no longer feels enough respect, attraction or love to be in a relationship with, she isn't going to get back with him because he wants her so badly.

What makes a woman want to get back with a man is when he has the courage to make her want him back badly.

Most guys don't have the courage to do it, because they worry it (i.e. posting up photos of themselves having fun with other people) will piss her off and make her want to move on.

So, a guy will often just sit around waiting and hoping that his ex girl comes back because he's not doing anything without her.

Weeks or months later, he will find out that she has moved on with another guy and his plan didn't work.

Of course it didn't.

If you want a woman back, you've got to re-attract her so she has a reason to be back with you.

Any other plan or strategy is just gambling with your chances to get her back and it's usually a losing bet.

The winning bet is always to re-attract and let the woman feel the desire to want to be back together.

Then, you let her get back with you.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys who lose their girlfriend don't know how to do that, or don't have the courage to do it, so they never get her back.

Another thing you can do to make your ex girlfriend feel attached to you again is

5. Reawaken her feelings of romantic love

[image: Reawaken her feelings of romantic love]

A woman feels romantic love for a man that she is sexually attracted to and wants to be with.

If you want to get your ex to feel attached to you again, you absolutely must focus on making her feel sexually attracted to you in new and interesting ways.

When you do that, she will automatically begin to feel romantic love for you and when that happens, she will feel attached to you in a new way.

She will see you as the man she no longer wants to be broken up with.

She wants to be with you sexually and romantically.

She wants to spend time with you and make things work.

As a result, you get her back naturally and easily.

4 Mistakes to Avoid if You Still Live With Your Ex and Want Her Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

When you still live with your ex, you have something almost most guys don't have after a break up.

That is, you have a chance to interact with her in person on a regular basis and make her have strong, compelling feelings for you again.

Unfortunately, on the down side, you can also end up saying or doing things that turn her off and make her want to continue going through with the break up or divorce.

So, if you want to make her feel attracted and in love with you again, be sure to avoid the following common mistakes that a lot of men make when in a situation like yours:

1. Taking on more of the household chores to hopefully score brownie points with her

[image: Taking on more of the household chores to hopefully score brownie points with her]

While it's fine to help around the house and make her life feel a little easier, it isn't going to make her fall in love with you again and want to be with you sexually and romantically.

She might appreciate it, but if she is currently feeling turned off by you, she will also be suspicious about why you're doing it.

For example: She might suspect that you're only doing it to suck up to her, to get her to take pity on you, or because you don't know what else to do to make her happy.

So, while you might feel as though you're a great man and are worth sticking with based on the extra work that you're putting in around the house, she isn't feeling the same way.

Instead, she will start to completely overlook how much effort you're putting into the housework and focus on the fact that no matter what you do, she doesn't feel the kind of respect, attraction and love that is needed for her to want to stay with you.

As a result, she will naturally start to feel as though she should go through with the break up and be with new man, or date new men and enjoy herself for a while until she finds a man who makes her feel the way she wants to feel in a relationship (i.e. attracted, in love, respectful and appreciative of him, girly in comparison to his masculine approach to her).

So, if you want her back, don't suck up to her by doing extra housework or chores and hope that it will be the thing that changes her mind and makes her want to stick with you.

It's fine to chip in and help out, but being a doormat for her to walk all over, is not the way to make her want to be with you again.

If you want her back, you've got to make her feel attracted to you based on how you make her feel when you interact with her and talk to her face-to-face.

She's got to be able to feel a spark based on how you approach conversations with her (i.e. with confidence, not afraid to flirt with her) and how you behave when around her (i.e. you don't seem intimidated or as though you've lost confidence in yourself, she feels appreciated, but also feels like she should be showing appreciation towards you as well).

It's only when you can make her feel attracted during interactions will she then start to realize that going through with a break up or divorce, is something that she is going to regret.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Acting neutral and nice around her, but then hoping that she feels a sexual and romantic spark anyway

[image: Acting neutral and nice around her, but then hoping that she feels a sexual and romantic spark anyway]

As you may know, nice guys don't do very well when trying to attract new women in the dating scene.

A guy being too nice (i.e. going along with whatever she wants, being afraid to truly express his masculinity around her, being extra polite or careful with what he says) or neutral (i.e. just acting like a friend with no sexual attraction for her) just isn't sexy or attractive to a woman.

The same applies when in a long term relationship or marriage.

If you want your woman to feel a spark for you, then you need to display behaviors and traits that make her feel that spark (e.g. being playfully challenging, being assertive while still being a good guy to her, expressing your raw masculinity during interactions with her while still being loving and considerate of her, never feeling intimidated by her, but still being loving towards her, using humor to break her out of her bad mood and not feeling afraid of any initial, negative reaction that she might have to you using humor in a moment like that).

Unfortunately, a lot of men end up not knowing how to handle the changes in their woman's behavior, mood and treatment of them.

As a result, a man will often resign to just being nice, neutral and putting up with her disrespectful, unloving and unappreciative treatment of him, to avoid getting into arguments with her, or worse, having her threaten to break up with him.

Yet, when a man falls into that trap, his woman can no longer feel respect for him and when a woman doesn't respect a man, she can't feel attracted to him.

If that goes on for long enough, she will fall out of love with him.

Now, in your case, you and her have broken up, but are still living together.

So, you need to be totally clear on the fact that if she no longer feels enough respect, attraction and love to want to be in a relationship with you, then she's almost certainly not going to suddenly fall back in love with you because you're being nice or neutral.

Instead, by using a default nice and neutral approach to her, she is going to feel unsatisfied by the relationship, uninspired (i.e. not feeling the need to impress you, make you feel appreciated) and restless.

As a result, she will want to move out as soon as possible, so she can start dating new men who will actually give her the feeling that she wants to have in a relationship (i.e. to be in love).

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

3. Worrying that if you enjoy your life outside of the home, she will want to hook up with a new man to make herself feel better

When a man is totally committed to a woman, he will often want to let her see that he is 100% loyal to her and only wants to spend time with her.

Yet, in order to have a balanced relationship, a man should get out and catch up with a friend or two every now and then, or at least occasionally do something enjoyable that doesnâ€™t involve her.

Women actually prefer that because it gives them a chance to miss their man, worry about other women hitting on him and as a result, appreciate him more.

Itâ€™s not 100% necessary to do that, but it does help to make a woman appreciate you in a relationship.

Of course, you and her have broken up now, but are still living together, so the question is: Should you just sit around the house showing her how loyal you are to her, or should you make her feel a little worried by getting out and enjoying life without her every now and again?

Well, it might feel a little scary to do, but in a case where you are trying to make her want you again, you should get out and have some fun with other people.

You donâ€™t have to hook up with any women of course, so you are still going to be loyal to her and the relationship.

However, you can simply catch up with friends and do some fun things, so she can see that you are happy, confident and enjoying life, rather than having her see you as being sad, insecure and lost now that she has broken up with you.

One of the reasons why that works is that women are naturally attracted to confident, emotionally strong and emotionally independent men.

In other words, confident men who donâ€™t need a woman to be by their side 100% of the time, or even to be committed to them, in order to feel confident, happy and forward moving in life.

When you can let her sense that kind of confidence in you, she naturally feels drawn to you and realizes that if she leaves you and feels sad, depressed and lost without you, itâ€™s going to hurt her to see you happy, enjoying life and potentially moving on with a new woman.

As a result, she opens up to getting back with you, rather than going through a painful experience like that, where she ends up feeling like the one who has been dumped and rejected.

So, although you might feel bad for going out and enjoying yourself without her, just know that it will have a positive effect on her.

Donâ€™t make the mistake that other guys make, where they worry that going out to enjoy themselves will push her to start dating and hooking up with new men to make herself feel better.

Of course, there is always a chance that a woman will do that, no matter what her ex man does (i.e. if she already likes a new man and has been flirting with him for months, prior to announcing her decision to break up).

However, you will always have more of a chance of making her look at you in a new, positive light and feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you if you confidently get on with enjoying your life, versus curling up into a little ball of insecurity who sticks around the house and hopes that she changes her mind and wants to get back together for no reason.

If you want her back, you've got to make her feel like she wants to be back with you and that comes with her feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and also beginning to worry that it will be her who is losing you, not the other way around.

Another mistake to avoid is

4. Letting her create an awkward dynamic between you and her

[image: Letting her create an awkward dynamic between you and her]

When a woman wants to make it clear that she has no intention of getting back with her ex, she will usually act cold, distant and tense around him, or when interacting with him.

If a guy falls for her hardened act, he may fall into the trap of being extra nice to her, seeming intimidated by her or just wanting to stay out of her way to avoid any trouble.

A guy like that might reason with himself and think something like, "If I'm nice and stay out of her way, she won't have any reason to get annoyed with me. So, there won't be any arguments and fights and then hopefully, over time she will open back up to me. When that happens, we can hopefully get back together."

It seems like a good plan, but unfortunately it almost never works out.

Why?

The woman senses his fear and hesitation around her, which makes her feel as though she is the more dominant one in the relationship.

When a woman feels more dominant than a man, it doesn't make her want to submit to him sexually, or fall into his arms and be held by him.

Instead, she naturally feels repelled by him because he clearly isn't strong enough emotionally to be able to handle her in a situation like that.

A woman I know once told me, "A man that will stand up to me, will stand up for me and that is a turn on."

She mentioned that when the subject of nice guys and guys who are intimidated by women came up.

She was saying that she had trouble finding a boyfriend that she could truly respect, feel attracted to and love in the long run, because guys were so intimidated by her strong, independent personality.

With a woman like her, the only guy who she is going to be satisfied with is a man who can stand up to her (in a loving, but dominant way. Not in an angry, aggressive way).

If a guy is unable to do that, she will be turned off at her core because every woman, no matter how strong or independent she is, wants to feel as though she is with a man who would stand up for her and protect her if the situation called for it.

So, if you allow your woman to create an awkward vibe between you and her around the home, then sheâ€s not going to be impressed by you or attracted to you.

Instead, she will secretly feel repulsed, disappointed and even angry at your lack of manliness in the situation.

As a result, she will feel determined to move out (or get you to move out) and move on as soon as possible.

How to Get an Ex Back That You Still Live With

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you still live with your ex, you have the perfect opportunity to get her back by interacting with her often and re-attracting her.

Re-attracting an ex is the key to getting her back because it makes her feel drawn to you in a sexual and romantic way again.

By using that approach, rather than just being friendly or staying out of her way, you can literally turn things around in days, or at the latest 1-2 weeks and have her wanting to be back with you.

So, here are 3 things you can do to re-attract her and get her to change her mind about the break up:

1. Start setting off positive chain reaction effects during interactions

Essentially, everything that you say or do around your ex is setting positive or negative chain reaction effects in the relationship.

Here's an example of a negative chain reaction effect:

- You want her back, but feel insecure about your chances.
- This causes you to seem nervous and unsure of yourself when interacting with her.
- Not knowing what else to do, you start being extra nice to her, or take on more of the household chores or expenses. You hope that it will impress her, get her to take pity on you and start being nicer to you, or feel as though she owes you another chance.
- Yet, from her perspective, she looks at your approach to her as being weak and desperate. She starts to look at you as a pushover (i.e. because she can now get away with contributing less and you'll just put up with it).
- She realizes that you have no idea how to be the man in the relationship anymore, have lost most of your confidence around her and are hoping she will take pity on you.
- Women don't want to be with a man out of pity and desperation and insecurity aren't turn ons.
- She loses more and more respect and attraction as the days go on and feels increasingly certain that she wants to leave you as soon as she is able to move out on her own, or get you to move out.
- Meanwhile, she begins feeling very attracted to other men who seem confident and emotionally strong compared to you, which further reduces your chances of getting her back.

Now, here's a positive chain reaction effect:

- You want your ex back and believe in your ability to re-attract her and make her want you again. If you don't currently believe you can do it, you learn how to do it, so you can have the confidence that comes with it. Either way, you now feel confident and self-assured when interacting with her.
- You display attractive qualities (e.g. emotional strength, courage, charisma, ambition) and use attraction techniques (e.g. flirting, being a bit of a challenge, using ballsy humor).

- Even if she tries to hide it, she can't stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.
- She begins to think, "What's going on? He seems so different all of a sudden. I actually look forward to seeing him around the house now, rather than dreading our interactions, or looking for ways to avoid him. I'm now making excuses to be around him more often than before. Maybe we can fix our relationship and get back together after all. I certainly feel okay about it."
- You continue using attraction techniques and displaying attractive qualities and she continues looking at you in a whole new light.
- She begins to feel sexually attracted to you again and since you're not kissing or having sex yet, sexual tension begins to build up between you.
- She begins imagining hugging you, kissing you and being intimate again, which makes her want to flirt with you and be around you more.
- When you are around each other, you continue building on her feelings (e.g. by being confident, regardless of how warm or cold she is being towards you in any given moment, showing her via your attitude, actions, behavior and the way you interact with her that you're at a different level now than when you and her broke up).
- She then begins to realize that it's pointless to break up, because she feels like she loves you again.
- This then results in you and her getting back into a relationship that is even better than it was before.
- Hopefully you can clearly see the difference between using one approach vs. the other (i.e. being insecure and sucking up to her vs. being confident and re-attracting her).

When you focus on setting off positive chain reaction effects, it's almost a certainty that you will get back together.

She will realize that breaking up is just going to be pointless because she's going to miss you and probably won't be able to find a man who is able to make her feel the way you now do.

Another tip on how to get your ex back when you still live together, is to

2. Flirt with her to build up sexual tension

Sexual tension happens when the desire for sex is there, but it's not happening due to an obstacle of some kind.

With you and her, the obstacle is that you're currently not back together yet.

So, when she is feeling sexually attracted to you, but can't just walk over and kiss you and start having sex with you, sexual tension will build up inside of her so much that she will feel compelled to just give in to her desires and have sex with you again.

One of the many ways to build up sexual tension is via flirting.

Flirting is essentially where you behave as though you're attracted to her, but only in a playful way, rather than being too serious about it all.

Flirt (verb): To behave as though you're attracted to or trying to attract someone, but for | amusement, rather than with serious intentions.

So, how can you flirt with an ex that you still live with?

Imagine that you and her are in the kitchen at the same time to make a cup of coffee.

In this case, itâs the morning.

Rather than just being quiet and staying out of her way, talk to her as though you are totally welcome and âallowedâ to flirt with her.

[image: Flirt with an ex you live with, to build up sexual tension between you and her]

You can say one of the following (or your own variation), in a playful, easygoing tone of voice:

- Good morning ex girlfriend / Good morning ex wife.
- Good morning beautiful.
- Well, someoneâs looking pretty this morning.
- Oh, youâre making me a coffee. How sweet, thank you! (Then smile and laugh).
- Oh, youâre making a coffee too. Well, they say ladies before gentleman, so you go first...and make me one while youâre at it. (Then smile and laugh).
- Good morning my beautiful ex girlfriend. How are you?
- Coffee time. Great minds think alike.

Youâve got to feel welcome to talk to her like that.

So many men make the mistake of thinking that theyâre allowed to flirt with their ex, or itâs âinappropriateâ or itâs not their place or role anymore to do that.

Donât be so serious!

Additionally, donât be so worried about how she might react.

If you want her to feel attracted to you and for sexual tension to build up between you and her, then you have to have the balls to flirt with her.

If she senses that youâre afraid to flirt with her, then she will lose even more respect and attraction for you based on you being intimidated by her.

On the other hand, if she senses that even if she gives you a bad reaction (e.g. rolls her eyes, says that you and her arenât getting back together, says youâre not funny, says she doesnât like it), you are able remain confident and continue to feel free to flirt with her in a playful, non serious way, then she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, even if she doesnât admit it.

She will realize that you really are being the man and nothing she says or does, will knock you off balance.

That is attractive to women and it is attractive to her, but just donât expect her to admit that to you.

Of course, each situation is different and sometimes a woman will admit what she is feeling, or say that she likes the change in her man.

[image: Flirt with your ex to make her want you back]

For example: Sometimes a guy will start flirting with his ex girlfriend at home and theyâll immediately begin feeling a spark again, smiling and laughing a lot more around each other.

She will feel like getting back with him and will openly admit that she likes the changes in him, or may even say something like, â€œWhy weren't you like this before?â€

Yet, in other cases, a man will be flirting with his wife of 20 years and she will be as cold as ice for the first few times he does it.

Eventually though, she will crack a smile and then open up to laughing and flirting back with him. Before she knows it, she will be actively flirting with him and the spark will be back between them. She will begin looking forward to her interactions with him and even planning how she's going to flirt with him in advance (i.e. what she will say and do).

So, make sure that you are ready for whatever reaction she might give you initially and just know in advance, that it's not wrong to flirt with an ex that you live with.

Remember what flirting actually is: It's a playful display of interest for amusement/fun.

It's not a serious thing.

Yet, it works.

Flirting is extremely powerful because the confidence, charisma, charm, humor, social intelligence and masculinity you display while flirting, automatically makes a woman feel attracted and drawn to you.

When she feels attracted to you, but you and her aren't having sex yet because you're still broken up, then sexual tension will build up inside of her.

She will start feeling drawn to the idea of hugging you, kissing you and having sex with you.

When that happens, her whole thought process changes (i.e. she realizes that she doesn't want to break up, realizes that you're not so bad after all, realizes that the spark isn't dead between you and her) and as a result, her behavior changes (i.e. she initiates conversations, wants to sit next to you on the couch, flirts with you, touches you and is receptive and open when you touch or hug her).

[image: Getting an ex back that you still live with]

Before you know it, you and her will be hugging each other with love, kissing and having sex to reconcile the relationship.

3. Let her see that you aren't chasing a relationship, but still find her attractive

When she feels attracted to you, but notices that you're not chasing a relationship, hinting at it or trying to pressure her into it, there will be a space open there for her to be the one wanting it to happen.

She will get to take on the role that a woman truly wants, which is to want to be with you even more than you want to be with her.

Not many women will ever admit that because they don't want a man to take it the wrong way (i.e. say to her, â€œI don't really care about you. I could take you or leave youâ€).

She obviously doesn't want to hear that because it's disrespectful, unloving and doesn't make her feel safe about a future with him.

Yet, what she does want to feel is an intense desire to be with you, impress you and maintain your interest, so she gets to keep you.

Unfortunately, a lot of men take that away from women by taking on the role of the one who is trying hard to impress her and maintain her interest, so he gets to keep her.

As a result, later on in a relationship, the woman will usually start to feel bored, take the man for granted and think about cheating or leaving because there's no challenge for her.

There's no desire to want to impress him because he will stick with her no matter what she does, how little effort she puts into looking for him or how much she disrespects him.

So, it's important to know that about women.

It's not something they will tell you, or that you need to discuss with her, but you should know it as a man.

In the case getting your ex back that you still live with, you need to start making her want the relationship more than you do.

Don't say that you don't care about a relationship, or don't want it.

Instead, just avoid talking about the relationship and focus on making her feel attracted to you in new and exciting ways.

Build up sexual tension to the point where she can't stop herself from wanting to hug, kiss and have sex with you.

Then, don't push for, hint at or even ask about having a relationship, or getting back together.

Let her be the one thinking or asking you, â€œSo, does this mean we are back together?â€

Also, be prepared for her to say something like, â€œThis doesn't mean we are definitely getting back togetherâ€ to maintain her position as the dumper (i.e. the one who broke up the relationship and is in the position of power as a result).

If she says something like that, you can say, â€œI know. We're never getting back together and that's fineâ€ in a relaxed, easygoing tone of voice.

Let her see that her pretend lack of interest in the relationship hasn't rattled you, or knocked you off balance.

Instead, it has left her feeling a little rejected because she is secretly feeling attracted to you again.

She then instantly realizes that she doesn't want the relationship to be over, but probably won't admit that to you right away.

So, from then on, just continue to flirt with her, remain confident and not push for a relationship, hint at it or even ask about it.

Just let her desire for a relationship build up to the point where she stops talking about her plans to move out, or asking you about your progress on moving out.

Instead, she becomes more open to being around you, flirting, discussing the future and acting like a normal couple once again.

Eventually, she will bring up a question like, â€œSo, do you want to get back together or not?â€ and you can playfully say, â€œAbsolutely not!â€ to make her feel attracted to your confidence and humor in that moment.

You can then smile, have a little laugh and say, â€œWell, I do love you, but if you want to remain broken up, then that's how it isâ€ and she will then start to feel compelled to stop the games and just get back with you.

She will realize that if she doesn't get back with you and either of you move out, she's going to regret it and want you back.

Additionally, if either of you move out and you end up dating and falling in love with a new woman, then she is going to feel like the one who has been dumped and left behind.

As a result, she will want to get the relationship back together while she still can.

How to Get an Ex Back Who Has Lost All Respect For Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 things you can do:

1. Understand that the amount of respect she feels for you, changes based on what you say and do when interacting with her

Your ex's level of respect for you isn't set in stone and unchangeable.

Instead, her feelings of respect are a reaction to what you say and what you do when you interact with her, other people and how you approach your life in general.

So, even though some of your actions and behavior caused your ex to lose all respect for you, it doesn't mean you can't regain that respect.

You can.

The way to do it is by interacting with her and letting her experience a completely new version of you.

A version of you who understands where you were going wrong and have already transformed, changed and adjusted your behavior, conversation style and actions as a result.

Don't tell her that you've changed and are hoping that she will respect you again.

[image: Let her experience the changes in you and naturally begin to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you]

Just let her experience it for herself, by talking to her and allowing her to sense the changes in you.

For example: Imagine that a woman lost all respect for her boyfriend (or husband) because he became too needy and clingy, which resulted in him behaving like an emotional wimp, or trying to control her to avoid losing her (e.g. telling her who she can and can't speak to, monitoring her phone).

To regain her respect, he needs to show her that he's no longer that guy and that he's now an emotionally independent man (i.e. he is happy, fulfilled, confident and is making progress in his life without her).

He shouldn't tell her that, especially in a way where he is hoping that by telling her, she will take pity on him and give him another chance.

Instead, he should let her pick up on it throughout a conversation and sense that he doesn't need her approval, pat on the back or âgood on youâ to feel like he is doing the right thing by being so emotionally independent.

When she picks up on it, she will naturally begin to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him because he has been able to quickly get over his neediness and start being his own man, for his own reasons.

He didn't need her support or encouragement to make it happen and now doesn't need her pat on the back to keep going.

This makes her respect him and feel attracted to him in new ways, which causes her to begin questioning her decision to break up with him.

Suddenly, she feels as though the relationship might not really be over because she no longer feels like she is over him.

She is feeling drawn to him.

You can have that effect on your ex.

So, don't lose hope simply because your ex has currently lost all respect for you.

Always remember that her level of respect for you will change, based on what you say and do when you interact with her.

In other words, you have a lot of control over how much (or little) respect she feels for from now on.

[image: She can go from hating you to loving you]

When you make her feel a sudden rush of respect for the new and improved you, she can literally go from hating you (or feeling disappointed and resenting you), to feeling like she loves you again and wants to open up to the possibility of getting back together.

When she is thinking like that, she wants to forgive you for her own reasons (i.e. she doesn't want to lose the new, more attractive version of you and regret it), which results in her being willing to explore her new feelings for you.

Another thing you can do is

2. Level up your ability to attract her, so she feels motivated to respect you again

You were initially able to attract her into a relationship, which is great.

She probably felt a lot of respect, attraction and love for you in the beginning, which is also great.

Yet, if you want her to feel motivated to forgive you and respect you again, you almost certainly won't be able to do that by trying to attract her the way you did back then.

You literally have to use a new approach to attraction.

For example: If a guy got a woman into a relationship with a nice, charming approach, she isn't going to respond well to that when she is feeling turned off by him and no longer respects him.

So, what he would need to do is have the balls to be a bit of a challenge (in a playful way) when interacting with her, rather than just being a nice, ex boyfriend.

Here are some other examples of what guys might need to do, in their specific case:

- He believes his attractiveness and value to his woman, rather than feeling like he's not good enough for her, or like every other guy she meets is better than him. He sees himself as the man and her as his girl. They are meant to be together and no other guy compares to him. He is the best man out there. End of story. No doubt. No question. He is the man.
- He laughs at how silly he was behaving and briefly, but sincerely apologizes to her about it, rather than behaving in a timid, meek, unworthy way around her and constantly apologizing to hopefully get her to take pity on him.

- He is now able to communicate with her in a way that makes her feel loved, appreciated, attracted to him and in love with him, rather than making her feel annoyed, irritated, misunderstood and turned off.
- He no longer needs her emotional support because he is a man who doesn't get emotionally sensitive about things and instead, focuses on solutions and then follows through on it, without sulking, seeking pity, complaining or wasting time. In other words, he approaches life like a real man.
- He no longer becomes flustered, angry or defensive when she is being moody, challenging him during a conversation or being a little bitchy. He now has the balls to laugh it off because he knows that he is the man and doesn't need to take the fluctuating moods of a woman so seriously. He is still respectful and loving, but he doesn't get dragged into her drama. He remains in control of his emotions like a real man, which turns her on at her core, even though she may act like she is pissed off about it. He doesn't worry though because he knows that she is simply testing his masculinity and making sure that he really is the man now.
- He stops talking about his feelings all the time (i.e. stops being so feminine when it comes to relationships) and simply focuses on making her have feelings for him by displaying attractive traits (e.g. confidence, emotional masculinity, emotional independence).
- He is able to be a good, loving man, without sucking up to her or being too nice.
- He is able to make her feel the need to impress him, show him respect and be nice to him, based on him being such a well-rounded man now (i.e. he is aware of all of the above and she picks up on that as she talks to him and interacts with him. He doesn't tell her. She picks up on it).

How about you?

Can you relate to any of the items listed above?

Were you too emotionally sensitive, jealous, controlling, needy or insecure?

Is that what caused her to lose respect for you?

Whatever the case is for you, just know that admitting to yourself that you made a mistake (or mistakes) with her, doesn't mean that you're a bad guy.

You simply messed up and as a result, the amount of respect she had for you decreased, or was destroyed.

From this moment onwards, you can increase and repair her respect for you.

It all comes down to what you say and do when interacting with her from now on.

On that note!

3. Don't make getting a relationship your number one priority right now

Even though your number one priority is a relationship, don't make it seem that way to her.

If she gets the sense that your motives for interacting with her are solely to get her to forgive you and respect you again, so you can then get another chance, she will feel pressured and keep her guard up.

If you want her to let her guard down, you have to focus on making her feel respect and attraction for you again, while not seeming to be pushing, hinting at or even trying to get her to commit to a relationship.

When she is feeling respect and attraction for you, but notices that you're not pushing for a relationship, she will begin to feel like she is wanting a relationship more than you, which will attract her more.

Women always want to be in a situation where they are more attracted to a guy and more keen to be in a relationship than he is (i.e. he is a challenge).

When a woman finds herself in a situation like that, she then has to try to use her charm to win him over and want what she wants (i.e. a relationship) and in the process of doing that, it makes her want him even more.

She ends up feeling like she has to get him back, or at the very least, she really wants to get him back and not have to see him walk away and hook up with a new woman and then forget all about her.

On the other hand, if you approach her in a way where it's obvious that you're just trying to get her to commit to a relationship, she may end up thinking things like, â€œDoesn't he understand that I don't have feelings for him at the moment? Why would I want to get back with a guy that I don't have feelings for? I'm sure I've made my feelings clear to him, but he's acting as though my feelings don't even matter at all as long as he gets what he wants. That just makes me even more convinced that I made the right decision to break up with him. He is too selfish and doesn't know how to treat a woman in a relationship. Maybe it's time for me to cut him out of my life completely, rather than continuing to talk to him and give him the impression that I might change my mind.â€

That can then lead to her blocking your number, unfriending you on social media and avoiding going to any of the places where she knows there's a chance she might accidentally bump into you.

So, don't push her to that point by making it seem like a relationship is your number one priority.

Remember: A relationship is the LAST step of the ex back process.

Before you get to the last step, you first have to get your ex to the point where her feelings for you are as strong, or almost as strong, as your feelings are for her.

It can't be all about you loving her and wanting her back.

She will see that as selfish on your part, even though you're not really being selfish and are simply trying to get her back.

Yet, she will see it as selfish because it's all about you wanting her back and trying hard to get her to give the relationship another chance.

To successfully get her back, it has to be about both of you loving each other and feeling as though not being in a relationship together will be something you'll regret later on.

To do that, you need to use every interaction that you have with her from now on, to make her experience new feelings of respect, attraction and love for the new and improved you.

She might not admit that she is feeling it, but she WILL be feeling it if you:

- Maintain your confidence around her, regardless of what she says and does to make you feel like you don't have a chance with her (e.g. she's cold, distant, says that she's happy being single, says that she is moving on, tells you that she hates you for what you did, says that she can never respect you again). When you maintain your confidence and don't fall into the trap of doubting yourself, she will see that you really are different now. You are so much more confident than you ever were. That will make her feel respect and attraction for you, even if she doesn't admit it. When she feels respect and attraction, she will begin to question her decision to break up with you.

- Use humor to ease the negative tension or awkwardness between you, rather than being timid, extra nice, polite or reserved because you're worried about how she might react.
- Flirt with her to create some sexual tension, rather than making the mistake of feeling as though you're not allowed to do that now because you're her ex. You are currently her ex, but you will be back with her soon and one of the fastest ways to get back with an ex is to behave as though you and her have ALREADY made up (i.e. you flirt with her like a boyfriend and girlfriend do when they are happy, in love and attracted to each other). There are other fast ways to get her back, but that is one of the easy ones, if you know how to flirt that is.
- Stand up to her in an assertive, but loving way when she is out of line, rather than letting her dominate you (or even bully) you with her confident, independent personality.
- Show her (via your attitude, conversation style, actions and behavior) that you've leveled up as a man, rather than saying and doing the same kind of things you did before and convincing her that she made the right decision to break up with you.
- Be more emotionally independent and show her (don't tell her) that even though you want her back, you don't need her back to be happy and fulfilled in your life.

When you interact with her and display some or all of the above traits, she naturally starts to feel respect and attraction for you.

[image: She realizes her feelings for you aren't dead]

She then realizes that her feelings for you aren't dead.

She is feeling drawn to you and feels as though if she doesn't give you another chance, she's going to regret it in the weeks, months and possibly even years to come.

Rather than living with that regret, almost all women will decide to open themselves back up to their ex and see where it goes.

So, be ready for that sudden change her and be prepared to guide her through the rest of the ex back process.

Another thing you can do to get an ex back who has lost all respect for you is!

4. Increase your emotional masculinity

One of things that matters most to a woman about her man, is how he responds and reacts to the more challenging situations he encounters in life (e.g. if he loses out on getting a job or promotion, fails an important exam, loses money in an investment, is in the middle of an argument with her in the relationship).

Is he the sort of man who can maintain control of his emotions, look for a solution and then apply that solution, or does he lose control of his emotions (e.g. get angry, sulk), give up and think that it's just all too difficult?

This is important to a woman because women aren't like men.

Women tend to lose control of their emotions very easily and cry or feel sad and depressed over little things.

Women also tend to not be as competitive and driven as men.

So, women naturally feel more attracted to a man who has a competitive, driven, ambitious, emotionally strong nature to him.

When a man is like that, she can then trust in him to remain strong and ensure that the both of them keep striving forward to achieve what they want in life.

Yet, if a man tends to crumble under pressure, be too emotionally sensitive about things, not follow through on his goals to completion or blame everyone else around him for his lack of success, then a woman just won't be able to truly respect him and feel attracted to him.

She may love him as a person, or have pity for him due to him being such a good guy, but the respect and attraction that she needs to feel to remain in love and want to be in a lifetime relationship with him, just won't be there.

This is why, if you want to regain your ex's respect, you must to show her via your attitude, actions and behavior that you are a much more emotionally masculine man now.

The more emotionally masculine you are (i.e. courageous, brave, driven, fearless, confident, assertive), the more respect and attraction she will for you.

It will happen right away.

As I mentioned earlier, she might not admit it, but she WILL feel it.

When she feels it, she will naturally begin to open back up to you and you can then quickly guide her back into a relationship.

This time though, the relationship will be so much more mature, fulfilling and enjoyable for the both of you because you will have completely leveled up as a man.

As a result, her feelings for you and her desire to commit to you, will be so much stronger than it ever was before.

6 Common Mistakes Men Make When They're Unsure How to Get an Ex Woman Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

When a man has been dumped by the woman he loves, he may find himself wondering, âWhat the heck do I do now? Can I get her back? Will she want me back?â

He might also feel very lonely, depressed and evenÂembarrassedÂ that his once great relationship with her has ended up in ruins.

They used to be happy, but now she doesnât want anything to do with him.

What can he do to get her back?

Unfortunately, when a man is unsure what to do, he will often make one or more of the following mistakes, which drastically reduce the chances of him getting her back.

1. Waiting too long to start the ex back process and she then moves on without him

In some cases, itâs possible to get a woman back immediately or within a few days, if a guy figures out where he has been going wrong (i.e. he has been turning her off by being too insecure) and interacts with her to make her feel re-attracted and begin to question her decision to break up with him.

He can then get to a hug, kiss and begin to make up with her.

In all other cases, a guy can get his ex woman back within 1-2 weeks if he approaches the ex back process properly (i.e. focuses on re-attraction).

Unfortunately, a lot of guys wait many weeks or even months before they build up the courage to start re-attracting their ex woman and getting her back and in some cases, the woman has already moved on by then.

He can still get her back if she has moved on, but he has made the process more difficult for himself.

If you want her back, donât put yourself in that kind of position.

Make it as easy as possible for yourself by getting started with the ex back process TODAY (i.e. figure out what subtle things about you were turning her off, learn what to do instead so you can attract her in new, subtle ways and then interact with her to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you).

When she feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, it plants seeds of doubt in her mind about the break up.

She wonders things like, âIs it really over between me and him? Should I give him another chance? What would it be like to hook up with him again? What would it be like to see him again? What if I donât see him again and he meets a new woman who finds who he is now very attractive? What if sheâs prettier than me and he then loses interest in me?â

When you plant those seeds of doubt in her mind about her decision to break up with you and cause her to begin imagining what it would be like to get back with you, or to lose you, she naturally opens up to meeting up with you in person.

On the other hand, if you wait many weeks or months to get started on that, you may end up regretting it when you find out that she has a new boyfriend and is in love with him, or is at least dating him and hooking up with him.

So, if you want her back, don't wait too long to get started.

2. Sending out feeler texts to see if she is interested and then giving up if she doesn't respond positively, or at all

[image: Sending out feeler texts and then giving up, if she doesn't reply or only replies in a cold, distant way]

When a guy isn't feeling confident about his chances of getting an ex woman back, he might decide to at least give himself a chance by sending her a feeler text (e.g. Hey or, Hey, how's it going? or, Hey, I just thought I'd say hi) to see how she will respond.

If she sounds happy to hear from him, he'll then take it as a sign that she's interested and then keep texting, or call her and set up a time to meet.

On the other hand, if she seems cold, distant or disinterested, or if she doesn't reply to his initial feeler text, he might then assume she is over him and still doesn't want anything to do with him.

As a result, he then gives up and tries to deal with the pain of losing her forever.

Yet, here's the thing!

Even if a woman is interested, she won't always show that via text.

Instead, she will remain guarded because she doesn't want to come across as being too eager and risk him rejecting her.

For example: Sometimes a guy will text his ex girl, just to see if she is missing him and is still open to being with him.

He doesn't want to get back with her, but just wants to make himself feel better by knowing that she is open to him and has been missing him.

So, if a girl opens herself up to that, shows interest in her ex and then discovers that he's happy without her, seeing a new girl or simply not interested in getting back with her, it can make her end up feeling like the one who got dumped, rejected or left behind.

This is why, many women will either not respond to an initial feeler text, or will respond, but in a distant or cold way.

[image: Some women play mind games and string an ex along, to make themselves feel more confident as they move on without him]

In other cases, sometimes a woman will play games with her ex via text to make herself feel better.

For example: She will say that she misses him, or even ask what he thinks about the idea of getting back together.

It's simply her way of checking to see how much he is missing her, if he is unhappy without her and if he is still hoping to get her back.

If she isn't interested in him, but he is interested in her, she can then lead him on via text for days or weeks, but never agree to catch up in person.

She just feeds off the interest he is showing her and uses it to make herself feel more confident and secure as she moves on without him (i.e. by dating other men).

So, what should you do?

Essentially:

- Don't rely on your ex's response style via text to tell you how she is really thinking.
- Don't stick to just texting her. Get to a phone call (audio or video) as soon as possible, so she can feel attracted to your confidence and the conversation can be more real and effective.
- Don't ask her if she is still interested via text. Instead, make her interested by using attraction techniques (e.g. flirting, being a bit of a challenge, using ballsy humor).
- Don't give up if she doesn't respond to a feeler text, or even two feeler texts. There are other ways to get an ex to contact you.

Another common mistake that guys make when they don't really know where to start to get their ex back, or what to do to make her change her mind is

3. Feeling overwhelmed by how much he thinks he needs to do because he doesn't yet know how simple attraction really is to understand and master

Here's the thing

Your relationship and break up was unique.

That is true.

There were also some complex things that went on between you and her, which lead up to the break up.

Thankfully though, the solution to get her back is simple and natural.

It's all about re-attracting her.

When you understand how to re-attract an ex and you do it, you instantly see how easy it actually is.

You begin to realize how much power and control you actually have over your interactions and relationships with women, now that you have a better understanding of how a woman's attraction works and how women tend to just go with how they feel.

[image: Your ex can go from hating you to loving you, all based on the approach you use with her from now on]

This means that a woman can literally go from hating her ex, or feeling disappointed and turned off, to loving him and feeling impressed, attracted and excited to be around him again.

It's the same guy, but he has simply changed his approach to attraction.

So, up until this point, you may have been thinking that getting your ex back was a difficult, if not, impossible thing for you to do.

[image: Getting her back by changing your approach to attraction]

You may have even convinced yourself that there's no way she would give you another chance, after what happened between you.

Yet, the truth is, just because you don't yet know exactly how to re-attract her and get her back, it doesn't mean you can't learn it and then do it.

You can.

4. Assuming that to get a woman back, a man has to go through a long period of no contact

This is one of the biggest myths out there when it comes to getting an ex back.

The reason why is that for women to get a man back, it usually works well to cut off contact with him after he has dumped her.

The man feels like he doesn't have power over her anymore and wants to contact her to see if she is still missing him, or he can't get laid or get a new girlfriend for weeks or months and then contacts her.

The same rule doesn't apply for men who want to get women back though.

In almost all cases where a man is trying to get a woman back, she is no longer attracted to him, isn't interested in getting back with him and can easily attract new men for sex, dating or relationships.

So, when a guy cuts off contact for 30 to 60 days after a break up, he will almost always find that his ex girlfriend or wife simply moves on without him.

Now, of course, cutting off contact can work on some women in some cases, but it's usually only when the woman still has strong feelings for her ex and doesn't really want to be broken up with him, or if by some chance, she isn't able to meet a new man and move on and then becomes lonely and misses her ex.

However, in almost all other cases, if a woman has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for her ex, then not hearing from him for 30 to 60 days actually helps her get over him and move on.

She has time to get on dating apps and line up dates with new men, or date the guy at work (or university) who has a crush on her, be introduced to men via her friends, or go out to party, get drunk and flirt with new men who are keen to hook up with her.

So, if you decide to use No Contact on your ex (i.e. not contacting her for 30 to 60 days), just know that it can backfire and result in you losing her to another man.

On the other hand, if you take action right away and begin re-sparking her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you, she could be back in your arms today, within a few days, or at the latest, 1-2 weeks.

5. Trying to get her back by telling her how you feel, before you even re-attracted her

If a woman no longer feels attracted or in love with her ex, him pouring his heart out and telling her how much he still cares, isn't going to make her say, â€œWow! Oh, you care about me do you? You love me? Oh, well that makes all the difference then. Let's get back together!â€

That's not how it works.

If you want her to care, you have to make her feel attracted to you again, so she looks at you in a sexual and romantic way, rather than looking at you as an ex that she is over and no longer wants anything to do with (sexually and romantically).

6. Asking her if she is open to talking about the relationship, before you begun re-attracting her

The relationship you and her had is over, at this point.

You can get the relationship back, make it even better than before and make her love you, respect you and feel more attraction than she ever did before, but youâre not going to get that by discussing the relationship if sheâs currently not attracted to you.

Always remember: Attraction first and everything else after that.

When your ex is feeling attracted to you again, she will naturally start to feel as though what you and her had isnât over.

She thought she was over you, but sheâs now getting that feeling âdown thereâ and wants to be close with you physically.

As a result, she begins to imagine kissing you, being held by you and having sex with you and it feels good to her.

She also starts to imagine falling back in love with you, feeling amazing together and being able to have more mature, harmonious relationship this time around.

When she is imagining those things (AFTER you have re-attracted her first, by interacting with her and using attraction techniques), she will naturally open up to the idea of having a relationship with you again, or at least hooking up with you to see how she feels.

You donât even have to ask her if sheâs open to discussing the relationship, or try to convince her to give you another chance because she will want to herself.

She will feel compelled to meet up with you, be close with you and explore her new, exciting feelings for you.

If you donât think that is possible with your ex, then you simply arenât aware of how a womanâs attraction actually works.

Itâs so easy to do.

I Want to Get Her Back, But I Don't Know Where to Start

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Start the ex back process by:

1. Understanding how to fix the subtle things about yourself that were turning her off

If you don't do that first, you will almost certainly end up behaving the way you used to, which will continue to turn her off (e.g. insecure, afraid of her reactions to what you want to say or do, being too emotionally sensitive).

You can contact her all you want without changing, but she's most-likely going to keep saying no because she knows that a relationship with you would just be the same as it was before.

If she gets that sense from you, it can lead her to think something like, "Why would I want to get back with him when he still doesn't understand what I really want in a man? He doesn't know what it takes to make a woman like me truly respect him, feel attracted to him and love him. So, if we got back together, it would just end in a break up again and there's no way I'm going to put myself through that. So, I'm better off moving on and finding myself a new man who can handle a woman like me, rather than wasting time with my ex who still doesn't have much of a clue about how to make me feel the way I want to feel in a relationship."

[image: Understand the subtle things that turned her off]

This is why, it's absolutely essential that before you try to get her back, you first understand out her real, more subtle reasons for breaking up with you.

If you're not sure what they might be, here are some questions that can help you figure it out:

- Did she like that you were a confident, emotionally strong and independent man initially, but end up feeling turned off at how you slowly became too clingy, needy, insecure or emotionally sensitive over time in the relationship?
- Did she feel loved and appreciated in the relationship, or did she feel as though you were taking her for granted?
- Did she feel like you loved her way more than she loved you and she didn't have to do anything to impress you (i.e. there was no challenge for her)?
- Did she feel safe knowing that you and her wanted the same things for the future, or did she feel like you and her were out of sync?
- Did she feel sexy and desirable with you, or did she feel more like a neutral friend, buddy or roommate to you?
- Did she like that you took the lead in the relationship and allowed her to relax into behaving like a feminine woman around you (i.e. she could be emotionally sensitive, girly, giddy, silly, irrational, change her mind like the weather), or did she feel as though she had to be the more emotionally strong, sensible, stable one because you couldn't take on the masculine role?
- Did she feel as though she could behave badly around you and get away with it because you didn't have the balls to stand up to her in case she dumped you?
- Did she feel as though you became too aggressive when standing up to her because you couldn't get her to respect you in other ways?

- Was she able to see you rise through the levels of life and strive to achieve your goals, or did she put up with hanging out, wasting time and secretly feeling annoyed by your lack of drive and ambition as a man?
- Did you often become enthusiastic about a new thing (i.e. a project, a job you could get, a business you could start, a sport, a hobby), only to then lose interest and never follow through until you achieved what you wanted, or fail initially and then never try again?
- Did you become too jealous, needy or controlling in terms of how often she used her phone and how that made you feel (i.e. neglected, ignored, worried that she might like another guy)?

The next step in the ex back process isâ€¦

2. Preparing yourself to interact with her and let her experience the new version of you Don't try to attract her or get her interested using the same old approach you've used before. She's seen all that and it's not going to peak her interest.

For example: If you initially got her to become your girl by sending her flowers, buying her meaningful gifts, writing her love letters or poems and generally being nice and sweet and agreeable, she's not going to be impressed by those things the way she was back then.

One of the reasons for that is women only appreciate romantic gestures from men that they are attracted to, or interested in.

Since you are her ex that she has dumped and most-likely doesn't want to be with right now, she is almost certainly not going to be swept off her feet by romantic gestures from you.

Instead, she might think something like, “Is that all he knows how to do? Based on his approach so far, it's pretty clear that nothing has really changed and he is still stuck at the same level he was at before. I'm not going to get back into the same kind of relationship we were in. Doesn't he get that?”

She will then close herself off to you even more than she has and possibly even start ignoring your texts, calls or social media messages from then on.

This is why, if you truly want to get her back, make sure that you use the time that you're not interacting with her to prepare yourself to properly re-attract her.

Don't contact her and offer her the same old attraction experience that caused her to leave you in the first place.

Instead, use the time apart from your ex to improve your approach to attraction, so she can feel excited, turned on and drawn to when she next interacts with you.

Here are some examples:

- If you were needy and clingy before, you are now more emotionally independent, happy and forward moving in your life without her.
- If you were too emotionally sensitive before, you're now more manly in the way that you think, act and behave.
- If you let her dominate you with her confident personality before, you now stand up to her in an assertive, but loving way when she's out of line.

- If you were insecure and unsure of yourself around her near the end of the relationship, youâ€™re now more confident and believe in your value and attractiveness as a man.
- If you couldnâ€™t handle her tantrums or moods in the past and would go into your shell, or get angry at her about it, you can now handle it and are able to change her mood and get her laughing and smiling by using humor and flirting. If you donâ€™t have the balls to do that, then you havenâ€™t leveled up and canâ€™t handle a woman like her. Youâ€™re too scared to do anything other than be quiet, go inward or get annoyed when she is being moody, irritable or throwing a tantrum. Thatâ€™s not what she wants. A woman wants a man who has the balls to change her mood, even if it means her pretending to be angry at him temporarily before laughing, smiling and changing her mood.

When she interacts with you and realizes that she is feeling a newfound respect, attraction and love you, the relationship doesnâ€™t feel like itâ€™s over.

Itâ€™s as though you and her are still boyfriend and girlfriend (or husband and wife), but were on a break from each other.

Now, you have used that time apart to level up as a man (donâ€™t tell her about that. Just do it. She doesnâ€™t want to hear about your journey, or hear that youâ€™re using techniques on her) and she feels so much more respect, attraction and love for you as a result.

If she asks you what caused you to change, just say something like, â€œI donâ€™t know. I just feel different. I like who I am nowâ€ and leave it at that.

[image: Let the changes you make remain a mystery]

Thatâ€™s what women want.

They want the mystery.

A woman doesnâ€™t want you telling her that you went to therapy, or you got a program online and learned how to re-attract her.

She just wants you to shut up and re-attract her, so she can enjoy the exciting emotions that come with being seduced back into a relationship.

Suddenly, you and her are having make up sex, kissing passionately and holding each other with love pulsing through your body.

It feels amazing for both of you.

Remember that.

This isnâ€™t just about you getting her back.

Sheâ€™s going to enjoy the amazing experience of getting back with an ex man who blows her mind with his new approach to attraction.

So, once you have prepared yourself to re-attract her, the next step isâ€

3. Interacting with her, re-attracting her, but not pushing for a relationship

[image: Interacting with her, re-attracting her, but not pushing for a relationship]

When you re-attract her and she opens back up to you, it can be very tempting to then start pushing for, hinting at or simply asking for a relationship.

Don't do that.

Let her be the one who is wanting the relationship to get back together and then allow her to have it. That way, she feels excited about getting back with you and invested in making the relationship work.

She feels lucky that she is so in love with you now and has been able to get a relationship back together, rather than continuing to go through life with her track record of 100% of her relationships failing.

You and her are the exception and better still, it feels amazing to be back with you.

She experiences emotions for you that she's been wanting to have all along and can see that the new relationship really is going to be different.

That is what works.

However, if your ex gets the sense that it's essentially all about you being lucky enough to get her back, then she will naturally keep her guard up.

It will most-likely be a reluctant reconciliation (i.e. where she gives in and gives you a chance, but isn't really sure about it), rather than an excited, passionate one (i.e. where she feels a tremendous amount of new respect, attraction for you and is excited about a future with you).

So, make sure you don't cheat her out of experiencing the excitement and passion, which comes with allowing her to want the relationship to be back together and then hinting at it, asking for it or even pushing for it.

To allow her to experience it, make sure to control yourself and remain calm, even when she is kissing you and telling you that she loves you again.

Tell her that you love her and kiss her back, but just don't say that you want a relationship, or make the mistake of asking, "So, does this mean we're back together?"

Let her be the one asking that and then jokingly say, "Well, as long you treat me well, I'll let you be my girlfriend again" and have a laugh with her.

Create the kind of relationship dynamic that women crave, but rarely ever find.

That is, where you are a confident, good man who treats her well, but you also make her feel the need to win more of your love over time.

Don't give her all your love right away.

Let her work for it.

Women want that experience, as long as you're treating them well and being a confident, good man.

When you do that, she is going to want to stay with you and never leave you.

So, if you want your ex back, but you don't know where to start, now you do.

You know where to start, but the question is: Will you continue?

Will you follow through on the ex back process and get her back?

4 Mistakes to Avoid if You Suspect Your Ex is a Dismissive Avoidant

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

1. Assuming that she must have mental problems and that's why you weren't able to get her to love you and want to be with you

Some women do have a dismissive avoidant personality, where they don't ever really open up, fall madly in love and totally commit to a man.

Yet, in most cases, when a woman isn't opening up in a relationship, it's not because she's a dismissive avoidant.

Instead, it's because the guy simply isn't making her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with him (i.e. sexually and romantically attracted, in love, confident about opening up and being vulnerable with him).

From his perspective, he has been doing everything he can to get her to open up, trust him, love him and want to be with him.

He has been extra nice, considerate, patient, loving, understanding and accommodating when it comes to her unloving, cold or distant behavior when it comes to him.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that what a dismissive avoidant woman wants is to meet a man who doesn't chase after her when she is being distant, but does continue to make her feel attracted, respectful of him and in love with him.

This is where so many guys mess up when it comes to relationships with dismissive avoidant women and when trying to get them back.

In a relationship, a guy will chase her love and try to win her affection and then after a break up, he will go to the other extreme and totally ignore her in the hope that it will make her chase him.

Yet, that's not what works with dismissive avoidant women.

To get a woman like her to want you and only you and to open up, love you and stop being distant, you have to be more of a challenge for her, while still being a good man.

In other words, be a good man, but make her feel the need to impress you and win more of YOUR love.

The only man a woman like her will fall for, open up to and truly want to be with is a man who can do that.

Every other man who tries to make a relationship work with her will fail miserably, if he goes to one extreme or the other (i.e. being needy and chasing her love vs. being indifferent and not caring about her at all).

[image: Most guys will never understand her]

Likewise, men will fail if they just try to be a nice, good, loyal boyfriend to her, without making her feel challenged.

Then, when she breaks up with one of those men, he might think, She's crazy! Iâm such a good guy. Why the heck would she break up with me? She must have mental problems. That's why she was never able to love me the way I love her. She needs help. She should go see a psychiatrist or something.

Then, after a lot of searching online, he might come to the conclusion that she was probably abused as a child, or is bipolar, depressed or has a dismissive avoidant personality.

He will try to justify why he couldn't get her to love him in the way that he loved her, or get her to want to participate in the relationship at the level he wanted her to.

Yet, in almost all cases (when women behave like that with men), the man just wasn't able to make her feel the kind of attraction and love that would cause her to open up, fall in love and totally commit to him.

She's not crazy.

She's just looking for a very specific attraction experience (i.e. a good, confident man who is a challenge and causes her to want to win more and more of his love over time) and she won't be happy until she finds it.

If she finds that, many of her ex boyfriends (who couldn't figure her out) will look on in shock, disappointment, sadness or even anger (in some cases), when they see that not only is she in love and gushing about the new man in her life, but within a short period of time, she is engaged to him.

Soon after, she then gets married and starts a family with him.

She seems so much happier than before and contrary to what he might be thinking, it's not because she's taking a new, revolutionary drug from a pharmacy to fix her so called dismissive avoidant personality disorder.

Instead, she's been seduced by the love drug that comes from real sexual and romantic attraction and has found that âlock and keyâ experience she's been looking for in a good, confident man who is a challenge to her.

So, if you want to get her back, don't try to make yourself feel better by assuming that she's nuts.

That might give you some temporarily feelings of gratification where you convince yourself that it's all her fault, but you will then have to live the rest of your life regretting losing her when you see that she is happy, in love and totally committed to another man who understands her and what she really wants.

You can be that man, but you can't do it if you think she needs help, or that a woman like her can't be truly in love, committed, affection and open.

She can, but it will take the right âlock and keyâ approach to unlock that side of her (i.e. you interacting with her and letting her sense that you are now the confident, good, challenging man that she has been looking for).

She won't immediately jump up and down in excitement and say, âWow! You're the one, but she will start to feel giddy inside.

She will feel excited about the new, highly desirable emotions she experiences when around you, or interacting with you.

She will begin to realize that she doesn't have to look elsewhere to hopefully find a man who gets her, because you already do.

On the other hand, if you keep using the same old approach that you've been using with her and expect that she isn't responding well because she's crazy, then you will end up regretting it later on when you realize you could have gotten her back with a different approach.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Getting the same (or similar) type of reaction from your next girlfriend and the next and then assuming that all women are damaged

Some guys go through life getting into relationships with women who always seem to be a bit closed off initially and then become even more closed off as the relationship continues.

No matter what he tries (i.e. how much he succeeds in life, how well he makes himself look physically by working out, how loyal and supportive he is to women, how generous and kind), women always tend to give him way less love, affection and sex than he actually wants.

Additionally, women always tend to break up with him and use the reason of, It's not you, it's me or, I need time to work on myself or, I need to be alone for a while to figure out what I want because they don't really have any obvious reason to break up with him.

After all, he's a good guy and hasn't really done anything wrong, so it's not as if she can say, I'm breaking up with you because you're a selfish asshole because he's not.

This is why, he will get vague excuses that he can't really do anything about, such as, I need space to focus on myself or, You deserve better than me. I can't give you what you want or, I can't deal with a relationship right now. I have too many issues from my childhood and need to get help to heal myself before I will be ready for a relationship and so on.

Essentially, the woman is acting like she has issues, needs help (i.e. from a psychologist or psychiatrist), when in fact, she's just not feeling enough attraction and love for the guy to want to remain in a relationship with him.

This is usually based on him trying to win over more of her love, by being the best boyfriend he can to her.

What he doesn't realize, is that to open up a woman like her, he needs to be a good man, but get her to feel the need to impress him and win over more of his love.

Even if he does realize it, a guy like that will usually be unwilling to do it because he only wants to be nice to women and sees anything else as being disrespectful, rude, selfish, mean or unloving.

He doesn't realize that the love between a man and a woman isn't all about the nice stuff.

There is an edge to love that needs to be there as well, which comes from the challenge and desire to impress the other.

If that is one-sided (i.e. it's only the man who feels challenged, or feels the need and desire to impress her), then it won't feel like real love to the woman.

She will feel bored, restless, unsatisfied, annoyed and irritable and will want to get out of the relationship, even though the guy is a good guy and hasn't really done anything wrong.

So, if you weren't able to offer your ex the love and attraction experience she really wanted and you then do the same thing with another woman in future, you're almost certainly going to get the same result (i.e. she won't really love you and will always have one foot out the door, ready to leave you when and if she can).

Guys who repeat that kind of pattern in their relationships with women, often end up feeling very angry and thinking things like, â€œWomen are all messed up. You can't please them. I've tried everything and nothing ever works for me. It always ends. I get dumped, she cheats or I break up the relationship to save myself the pain. So, I'm done. I don't want another relationship. I'm going to remain alone for the rest of my life.â€

As a result, a guy like that might then close himself off, stop dating and become a very bitter, angry person who secretly hates women.

Don't let that happen to you.

If you want to get your ex back and have a happy, successful, lifetime relationship with her, or if you want to attract a new woman and do that, you have to be willing to use a new approach that makes women truly love you.

3. Feeling like you have no chance of getting her back, due to her dismissive, avoidant personality type

If you let your feelings about her personality type cause you to doubt your chances of re-attracting her, then your frame of mind will end up turning your ex off.

She will pick up on your feelings of unworthiness and become even more closed off towards you than ever before.

She will see that you are just every other guy who doesn't understand her and what she really wants (i.e. a confident, good man who is a challenge and makes her want to win more and more of his love over time).

By feeling like you have no chance and giving off vibes of self-doubt and unworthiness, you are essentially telling her, â€œI don't think I'm good enough because you're not showing me love. I need you to show me love before I can feel confident about my ability to make you feel love.â€

In other words, you need her to be someone she's not (i.e. be a woman who helps a man feel confident around her).

She's not going to do that because she wants a man who is confident around her no matter how she behaves.

If you doubt yourself, you lose.

That's the deal with women like her.

You've got to be confident in yourself and your value and attractiveness to her all the time, regardless of what she says or does.

That is the man she will love, open up to and totally commit to.

Every other guy just won't be able to truly capture her heart and will be dumped.

4. Never realizing how much power and control you have over how a woman feels for you

Currently, you might feel as though little to no control over how your ex girlfriend feels about you

(i.e. because she dumped you and seems to be in control of the situation).

Yet, what you need to realize is that women are reactive and go with how they feel.

This means that when you interact with her and begin attracting her in new, exciting and appealing ways, she reacts by feeling attracted and having new desire for you.

She realizes that what you and her had isn't over and instead, is alive, new, interesting and exciting for her.

She notices that you're not behaving like you used to, or reacting to her like you used to and have completely leveled up as a man.

You have tapped into what really makes her feel attracted and in love and as a result, she begins looking at you as the one.

She knows that if she doesn't give you a chance, she will struggle to find another man who makes her feel the way you now do.

As a result, she will feel compelled to open up and give you and the relationship another chance.

In fact, a man has a lot of control over the ex back process when he focuses on making his ex woman have sexual and romantic feelings for him again.

Does My Ex Girlfriend Have a Dismissive Avoidant Personality?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It's very easy to assume that a woman is a dismissive avoidant, but in most cases, the real reason a woman behaves like that is due to a lack of sexual and romantic attraction.

She might have been like that with you, but it doesn't mean she would be the same way with another guy.

So, here are 4 reasons why your ex may seem to have a dismissive avoidant personality when she actually doesn't:

1. She didn't feel attracted to you in the kind of way that would make her want to be close with you

Sometimes a woman will get into a relationship with a guy that she isn't fully attracted to, but hopes that she will be able to feel more attracted to and fall in love with over time.

She will justify her decision by thinking something like, "He's a really nice guy and he treats me so well. I don't feel butterflies around him, but maybe when we get to know each other better over time, the spark will grow. Besides, there has to be more to a good relationship than sexual attraction, right? I mean, I want a good guy and I've found one, so I need to try to be happy with what I've got. Hopefully I will feel more attracted to him over time and then, I will have secured myself a good guy that I'm very attracted to, so it will work out well in the end."

Yet, as time goes by, she may notice that she's not feeling more attracted to him and doesn't really feel motivated to fully open up, commit and be his girl for life.

What would?

Well, with a girl like her, it's almost always a guy who is more of a challenge (i.e. a guy who makes her feel the need to impress him and win more and more of his love over time in the relationship).

You didn't offer that to her, right?

What you offered her was a relationship experience where YOU were trying to win more and more of her love over time.

She didn't feel the need to win more of your love, because you took that role from her.

You played the part that she wants to play and that will make her open up, fully love and commit to a guy.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend may seem to have a dismissive avoidant personality when she actually doesn't is that

2. You gave her too much power in the relationship, which she didn't want

Some guys make the mistake of thinking that in order for a woman to be happy in a relationship, she needs to feel like the more powerful or valuable one who is essentially in charge of how the relationship unfolds.

A guy like that will pretty much always give in to his woman's demands (even if she is being unreasonable and disrespecting him) and leave all the important decisions up to her.

He will justify his actions by thinking something like, "If I make decision that she doesn't like, then she will get annoyed and feel unhappy with me. Yet, if she chooses what she wants all the time and I just go along with it, then she will have no reason to be unhappy or annoyed. That way, she will always be satisfied and won't want to leave me."

Additionally, women who tend to bring that side out of a man are usually women who complain and tell stories of how they were treated badly by ex boyfriends, or abused as a child or abandoned and so on.

Essentially, women like that will put on a "pity me" act and if the guy falls for it and starts being softer, more gentle and more timid when it comes to her, she will lose respect for him for not being able to get her behave like a sensible, grown up woman.

At the end of the day, she doesn't want a wimpy boyfriend who falls for her act of being a messed up girl who doesn't know what she wants.

She knows what she wants.

She wants to look up to a man and respect him, feel attracted to him and be in love with him.

She wants him to be able to laugh at her (in a loving way), when she's going on and on about her past and trying to use it to manipulate him into being a pussy around her.

The ONLY man that a woman like her will open up to and fully commit to is a man like that.

Not a pussy, not an emotionally sensitive guy who is always there for her and not a shoulder to cry on.

Instead, man who has the balls to laugh at her (in a loving way, of course) and get her to laugh at herself when she's being a pain in the butt.

A man who gets her to grow up and start being a sensible woman (regardless of whether she is young or very mature in terms of age) who opens up to experiencing fearless, committed love.

That's the man who will win her heart and keep her.

You can be that man, but you can't use the same old approach you used with her that lead to you getting dumped.

You've got to understand her psychology and start giving her the attraction and relationship experience she really wants.

She doesn't want to feel like she has a lot of power over you.

She doesn't want you to be afraid of saying or doing things around her, because you're worried about her getting annoyed, angry, becoming moody or throwing a tantrum.

She wants you to be fearless in the face of her ridiculousness.

She wants you to be able to do that, so she can laugh at herself and start to mature emotionally.

If you can't do that, then you're not the man for her.

If you can, then she will stick to you like a magnet and will want to continue the relationship, so she can finally grow into the fearless, loving woman she has always wanted to be.

3. You weren't able to create enough of a masculine/feminine dynamic in the relationship to make her want to be loving, attentive and affectionate towards you

[image: You weren't able to create enough of a masculine/feminine dynamic in the relationship to make her want to be loving, attentive and affectionate towards you]

Regardless of what a woman does for a living, or what kind of personality she has (i.e. submissive vs. assertive), when it comes to her relationship with a man, she almost always wants to relax into thinking, talking and behaving like a feminine woman.

In other words, even if she's the boss at work who calls all the shots, when she's with her man, she wants him to be the more emotionally masculine one (i.e. be more courageous than her, more decisive, more emotionally strong, more emotionally stable and steady) so that she can let go and be a real woman around him (i.e. she can cuddle into his arm when watching a scary movie, act girly and giggly around him, be emotional and cry when she needs to).

Only a masculine man can bring that side out of a confident, independent modern woman.

If a man is soft in comparison to his woman's strong personality, then she won't feel like being girly around him, which will make her feel deeply unsatisfied, restless and even angry.

So, if you weren't able to create a relationship dynamic where she felt girly in comparison to your masculine strength (i.e. your courageousness, your fearlessness about life, your emotional strength, your confidence) and instead, made her feel like you and her were equals in terms of emotional strength or worse, she was stronger than you, then it's only natural that she would seem like she had a dismissive avoidant personality.

Yet, I assure you that if she meets a man who can bring out her girly side, she ain't going to be a dismissive avoidant.

Instead, she will totally into him, will completely open up and be madly in love with him.

He will be the one for her.

You can be that man, but you have to be willing to create a very clear difference between you and her, rather than making her feel like your equal in terms of emotional strength.

You have to embrace your masculinity (i.e. accept and embrace that you are the man and she is the girl), so she can feel completely different in her energy compared to you.

When you do that, she will automatically feel attracted to you on a deep level that will cause her to want to see you, spend time with you and explore her new feelings for you.

4. She doesn't like guys who want to discuss their feelings all the time

If you watch politically correct TV talk shows, or read politically correct articles online, you will be told that women want to be in a relationship with a nice, sweet, dependable guy who listens to them and can open up and discuss his feelings like women do.

Unfortunately, that's only ONE side of what I call, The Coin of Attraction.

On one side, you have all the nice stuff (i.e. sweetness, generosity, gentleness, kindness and so on) and on the other, you have the things that people are rarely willing to talk about (i.e. ballsy humor, challenging behavior, an undertone of aggression while still being a good man, assertiveness, laughing at a woman when she is being a pain the butt, roughly caressing a woman during sex sometimes, rather than always being soft and gentle and so on).

If you only offer a woman one side from The Coin of Attraction, then she's just not going to feel deeply attracted and turned on by you.

She will see you as a nice guy and will most likely appreciate you, but that primal urge to take your clothes off and start riding you or sucking you, just won't be there.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize this and end up paying way too much attention to all the nice stuff people talk about on TV shows, in person, online and in movies.

That can lead to a guy being overly emotionally sensitive in a relationship with a woman, with him constantly talking about his feelings with her (e.g. about work, their relationship, his family, his problems) and being really nice, gentle, generous and sweet to her pretty much all the time.

In his mind, he believes he is being the ultimate boyfriend (or husband) because he thinks what he is doing is what women really want in a relationship.

Secretly though, he will feel pissed off at the lack of affection and respect he gets from his woman and may even complain to her about how she treats him by saying, "I'm such a good guy to you and this is how you treat me. It's unfair. I deserve to be shown love. I deserve to be respected. Why are you treating me like this?"

Well, it's not as if the woman is going to say, "Because you're being a pussy. You're just too nice. I need you to have more balls. Put me back in place sometimes. Don't put up with my BS so much. Make me feel the need to impress you. Be more of a challenge."

She's not going to admit that because she doesn't want him focusing on one side of The Coin of Attraction and going from being a total nice guy, to a total asshole, in the hope of impressing her.

She wants a guy who has the ability to maintain the right balance, where is being a good guy to her, but is still a challenge (i.e. she feels the need to impress him, look good for him, respect him, treat him well and win more and more of his love over time).

So, if you were the type of guy who was regularly discussing your feelings with her and coming across as being a little too sensitive, it would be one of the reasons why she seemed like a dismissive avoidant to you, even though she most likely isn't one.

Here's the thing:

There's nothing wrong with feeling emotions as a man, but when you regularly want to discuss your feelings with a woman, she ends up looking at you as being more like a woman, which kills her attraction.

You're not a woman, of course, but you feel like one to her if you are always going on and on about your feelings.

It's just how it works.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't understand how women feel attracted to men, so they make the mistake of talking about their feelings like a woman talks about her feelings.

This often happens in a long term relationship, where a guy essentially starts to copy his girlfriend's behavior (i.e. he gets moody like her, he becomes emotionally sensitive and reactive like her and so on).

Yet, what you need to understand is that in order to make a woman feel the most attraction possible, you have to be the OPPOSITE of her in terms of your emotional energy.

In other words, you need to have the emotional energy of a MAN, so she can have the emotional energy of a WOMAN.

If she feels like you are pretty much like her, or one of her girlfriends, rather than an emotionally strong man that she can look up to and respect, then she just won't be able to feel much or any attraction for you.

What you need to understand is that, even though many women act like they are strong these days and don't need a man to take care of them, they still feel vulnerable in this world.

Instinctively, they still feel the need to be with a man who makes them feel protected, based on his emotional strength.

This is why women all over the world are attracted to men who are confident, emotionally strong and able to cope with whatever life throws at them.

Some women will temporarily accept an emotionally weak or sensitive guy, but they won't want to stick with him in the long run and will get out of the relationship when they can (i.e. when she can afford to pay rent on her own, when she meets a new guy, when a girlfriend invites her to come and live with her for a while, when the kids are old enough to take care of themselves and so on).

If you want to get your ex back and you want to keep the relationship together for life, you simply must be willing to quickly grow into your masculinity.

Embrace being the man and let her sense that things really would be different if she got back with you.

Don't tell her that.

Let her sense it based on how you now interact with her.

When you do that, you will see that she instantly stops being so avoidant and dismissive when it comes to you and instead, opens up to what she has now found in you.

4 Mistakes Men Make When Trying to Get an Ex to Feel Sorry For Them

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Some guys never find out that making an ex woman feel sorry for them isn't the best approach to use to get her back.

As a result, many of those guys make one or more of the following mistakes, which end up pushing the woman away further.

1. Trying to show her how sad and lost he is without her, to hopefully make her to feel guilty enough to change her mind about the break up

[image: Trying to show her how sad and lost he is without her, to hopefully make her to feel guilty enough to change her mind about the break up]

When she was in love with him, she would most likely care if he wasn't feel happy and would want to make him feel happy.

She was okay about doing that every now and then because he was the man that she loved and wanted to be with.

Yet, now that she has broken up with him, he is no longer her responsibility.

As a result, in almost all cases, a woman simply isn't going to care or feel compelled to rush to her ex and help him feel better about himself if he seems sad, lost or lonely without her.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that and end up posting lonely photos (e.g. photo of a beach or landscape that he took by himself, a selfie of himself at home, a photo of his pet dog or cat) or updates on social media (e.g. talking about how difficult love and relationships can be), or telling mutual friends how much he misses her in the hope that they will tell her, she will feel sorry for him and then get back with him to make him feel better.

Yet, it almost never works out that way because women aren't attracted to emotional weakness in men; especially when it comes to an ex man that they've dumped.

So, rather than making her want to get back into a relationship with him, she loses attraction for him for being emotionally weak and feels even more certain about her decision to move on without him.

As a result, she opens herself to dating and having sexual encounters with men to find herself a new boyfriend, or to just have fun for a while and enjoy the single life.

While doing that, she might occasionally feel sorry for her ex (if he hasn't been able to move on, or figure out how to re-attract her and get her back), but she isn't going to run back to him if she's having fun and enjoying herself with new men; especially if those men are much more confident than her ex.

Instead, she's going to feel as though her ex is showing her that he's no match for her anymore and she was right to break up with him, to focus on finding herself a more confident, emotionally strong man.

So, if your aim is to get back into a relationship with your ex, make sure that you don't let her see how sad you are without her.

Instead, show her that even though you still care about her and want her back, you don't need her back.

Don't tell her that, of course, as it's not a nice thing to say and will result in her wanting to get emotional revenge on you.

Instead, just let her see it and feel it based on what you post on social media (i.e. photos of you having fun with other people), or how you talk to and interact with her (i.e. you flirt and joke around with her, but aren't pushing for a relationship and seem totally confident, fulfilled and happy without her).

That is what makes women feel attracted to men after a break up.

They don't go around admitting it though because they don't want to encourage men to act totally uninterested.

Just think about what happens when women say, âI just want a nice guy.â

Millions of men all over the world hear women say things like that and end up behaving VERY nicely towards women, to the point where they are total pushovers who are trying to suck up to women and hope to be chosen for their niceness.

This is why women can't say what they really want from a man.

If they were to say, âWhat makes me want to get back with an ex is when he seems totally happy without me and doesn't even care if he wants me back,â because it would result in men saying to women, âI don't care about getting you back. I'm happy without youâ or acting very uninterested in the woman.

So, women keep quiet about what actually works on them and the men who understand it, are the ones who enjoy easy, consistent success with women.

In terms of getting your ex back, you've got to understand that she will respond with feelings of respect, attraction and love and will miss you if she can sense that you are honestly happy, enjoying life and making progress with or without her.

She may pretend to be offended or shocked if you seem so happy without her, but that's just to check if you're faking it.

If you are honestly happy without her, then you will be able to sincerely respond to any fake anger, shock, disappointment or offense from her (about you seeming happy without her), by saying something like, âHey, you were the one who broke up with me, remember? What did you want me to do? Sit around and do nothing for the next 10 years? I do still love you, but I am enjoying my life. I'm not going to let the break up ruin my zest for life. I love life and want to enjoy it. No disrespect to you, but I have to take care of myself. We're not a couple anymore.â

It might sound risky to say something like that to her, but it's the sort of thing that makes her feel rejected, left behind and sad that she doesn't have you, which makes her want you back.

Additionally, you're also being a good man to her when saying something like that, which makes her respect you.

You're not saying it in a mean way and instead, are saying it with love and respect.

So, she can't be mad at you for being mean, rude or selfish.

Instead, she can only walk away feeling regret for breaking up with you and a desire to get back with you to stop the emotional pain she is feeling.

That is what works.

On the other hand, trying to make a woman feel sorry for you to hopefully get her back rarely, if ever works because women simply aren't attracted to emotional weakness in men.

Instead, by making her feel sorry for you, it will simply cause her to feel more attracted to confident, happy, high-self esteem men who don't need her pity because women are attracted to the emotional strength in men, not the emotional weakness.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Not understanding what kind of attraction experience she really wants

[image: Not understanding the kind of attraction experience she really wants]

Imagine this!

A guy gets into a relationship with a girl and initially, things go well because he is confident around her and in life, treats her well and makes her feel loved and appreciated.

He also makes her feel the need to impress him too, which she really loves.

So, they are enjoying a relationship that is exciting, enjoyable and attractive for the both of them.

Then, one day, the guy starts becoming insecure and jealous.

He worries about who she might be chatting to on her phone.

He asks her if she is flirting with other guys and seems worried, which makes her look at him as being an insecure guy who doesn't believe in his value and attractiveness to her.

As a result, she starts to lose a bit of respect for him, but puts up with it because the relationship is otherwise all good.

Yet, a week later, he ends up telling her that he has serious trust issues because a previous girlfriend cheated on him.

He tells her that he wants to be able to monitor what she is doing on her phone, by being able to check her messages whenever he feels like it.

She feels disappointed that after all the love she has shown him and the fact that their relationship has been great, he doesn't trust her and wants to monitor her to be sure.

She also finds that insulting and is annoyed that he is looking at her as being an untrustworthy woman.

She realizes that he hasn't been able to deal with the issues he's faced in his life prior to meeting her and is now using those issues to cause problems with her.

Suddenly, she begins to look at him as a needy, insecure boyfriend and assumes that his previous girlfriend probably cheated on him because she was turned off by his insecurity.

As a result, she looks at him as an unattractive guy and begins questioning whether or not she is making a huge mistake by being with him.

She then begins to push him away, until she eventually breaks up with him.

Now, can you see what happened to the attraction experience in that relationship?

She went from feeling respect, attraction and love for him based on his initial approach to the relationship, to feeling disappointment and even disgust for the insecure guy he became, or turned out to be in the end.

It was the SAME guy with the same appearance, but he suddenly became very unattractive to her based on the unappealing experience he caused her to continually have to face in the relationship. The relationship could have worked, but he messed it up by becoming so insecure, needy, jealous and controlling.

How about you?

What happened between you and her?

Did you start off giving her the kind of attraction experience she wants in a relationship, but then mess that up by changing your behavior around her, or your treatment of her?

That is what really counts to her.

If you want to get her back, you have to become very clear on how you messed up, so you can then make the correct adjustments to your thinking, behavior and treatment of her.

When you do that, she will naturally and automatically feel differently when interacting with you, which will allow her to see that a relationship with you now really would be so much better.

When she feels that, she can then begin to open up to the idea of getting back to you.

When she does that, she will also realize that if she doesn't get back with you right away, other women are going to find the new, improved version of you so much more attractive and she might end up losing you.

As a result, she feels compelled to get something going between you and her as soon as possible.

Yet, if you're just using the flawed strategy of hoping she will get back with you based on feeling sorry for you, then you're probably going to end up feeling sorry for yourself when she moves on.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Assuming that since making people feel sorry for him worked as a boy, it will work now that he is a grown man

[image: Assuming that because making people feel sorry for him worked as a boy, it will work now that he is a grown man]

If a young boy cries and makes people feel sorry for him (e.g. his parents, teachers, older siblings), he will usually get his way, or at least be shown love and attention.

Yet, when a guy becomes a man, those rules no longer apply.

In fact, if he cries or regularly seeks pity, people will see him as a bit of loser, even though to his face, they might be nice and show him some sympathy or empathy.

In terms of women, they are instinctively turned off when a grown man hopes to make a woman feel sorry for him and essentially come to his rescue like people did when he was a boy.

Of course, women don't go around telling men about this.

For example: Some women will say that men should cry like and be vulnerable or emotionally sensitive, but that's just political correctness.

In reality, women are sexually attracted to a man when he doesn't need a woman to rescue him, pity him or feel sorry for him in any way.

Women see that man as a real man, whereas they secretly see men who seek pity as being pussies.

Itâs not just something they can openly admit though, due to political correctness and due to the fear of confrontation they naturally have when it comes to men (i.e. they donât want to make a man angry and have him become violent or aggressive in response to being called a pussy).

So, women resort to being nice and showing sympathy to pussy men, but secretly feel deeply turned off by them and want absolutely nothing to do with them sexually, or romantically.

This is why, when a guy is trying to get his ex back by making her feel sorry for him, she might be nice to him, but she will reject his attempts to get back with her and will try to find herself a replacement guy as soon as possible.

She can then scare him off by saying something like, âIâve got a new boyfriend now and he doesnât want me talking to you. So, donât contact me anymore. I wish you all the best. Goodbye.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

4. Not realizing that he can get his ex woman back quickly and easily by making her feel jealous and left behind, rather than making her feel pity for him

[image: Not realizing that he can get her back quickly, by making her feel like the one who is being left behind]

Feeling jealous, left behind, rejected and unwanted by an ex man that she feels attracted to, is one of the fastest ways to make a woman want to get back with him.

Yet, as you would probably know by now, making her feel sorry for you isnât the way to make her feel that attraction.

What will make her feel attracted is when she can see that you are living a happy, confident, enjoyable life around other people.

Of course, thatâs one of the LAST things a guy wants to do when he has been dumped and is now heartbroken and missing his ex girl.

âand thatâs the reason why it works.

When a guy focuses on getting on with his life after the break up (e.g. by going out with his friends and having fun, meeting and hanging out with new women, doing exciting things that he never used to do with her), his ex woman automatically feels attracted to his emotional strength and ability to get back on his own two feet without her around.

That gets her attention and she wonders why he is feeling so confident and happy without her.

Additionally, if sheâs not feeling very happy, or hasnât really been enjoying life since the break up, she can end up feeling the one who is being left behind.

She broke up with him, but now she feels like the one who has been broken up with.

That makes her feel motivated to reach out to him, flirt with him and even get him back to make herself feel better again.

On the other hand, if her exâs strategy to get her back is to make her feel sorry for him, she will feel turned off and will focus on moving on.

Does My Ex Feel Sorry For Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

She might, but if she does, it's not actually the best approach to get her back.

Why?

1. Feeling sorry for an ex man doesn't make a woman want to be with him and stay with him, unless she is attracted to him

If a woman is very attracted to a guy, he can make a whole bunch of mistakes (e.g. appear sad, lost and a bit lonely without her) and she will often make an exception and get back with him.

She does it for herself because she is very attracted to him, not because he's making the mistake of appearing emotionally weak, lost or lonely without her.

In all other circumstances though, making a woman pity you just doesn't work and should be avoided at all costs.

In fact, using pity to try to keep a relationship together before a break up, or to get it back together after a break up isn't the right strategy to use.

Think about it this way!

If your ex girlfriend had been crying and was feeling sad and depressed, would you instinctively want to have sex with her, or comfort her?

If you're like most guys, your natural protector instincts will kick in and you'll want to take care of her, console her, comfort her and make her feel better.

You probably wouldn't be turned on by her depression and want to have sex with her due to feeling sorry for her, right?

What does make you want to have sex with her is a completely different thing altogether (i.e. her femininity, her radiance as a woman, her girly ways, her body, her cute expressions).

Likewise, if your ex looks at you as being a sad, lonely guy who is struggling to cope with the break up, she's not going to feel attracted to you and want you back because of that.

Unless she is very attracted to you and is hoping to get you back, she's not going to suddenly think, "I have to get back with him, so I can take care of him and make him feel better" because you seem sad, hurt, lost or dejected after the break up.

Instead, she will feel turned off by your inability to handle the curveball that life has thrown at you (i.e. the woman you love has broken up with you).

What you've got to understand is that women are attracted to the emotional strengths (e.g. confidence, self-esteem, self-assurance, assertiveness, courage) in men and turned off by emotional weaknesses (e.g. insecurity, low self-esteem, self-doubt, timidity, fear).

So, if you want your ex to feel a real, magnetic desire to get back with you, make sure that she doesn't feel sorry for you and instead, looks up to you and respects you based on your emotional strength.

2. Feeling sorry for an ex can make a woman feel like the relationship would be too much of an emotional burden for her

[image: Feeling sorry for an ex can make a woman feel like the relationship would be too much of an emotional burden for her]

If a guy behaves in ways that make his girlfriend feel more like his mother, or big sister where she essentially has to say, “It’s okay sweetie, everything is going to be okay. I’m here for you. I know things have been tough and you’re struggling to cope, but I’m going to make everything better for you. Don’t you worry about a thing anymore; I’ve got this,” then she will lose respect and attraction for him (for being so boyish or needy) and as a result, won’t feel much or any desire to want to keep a relationship going.

Being with him will feel like too much of a burden to her, because she is the one who needs to take care of him emotionally, which isn’t what a woman wants.

A woman wants to feel as though her man is emotionally strong and as a result, he is her “rock” as women call it.

Essentially, that means she can always rely on him to be the strong one in the relationship and allow her to be the girl, rather than having to be such a strong, brave and fearless woman to make him feel safe.

Women don’t go around explaining this to men, but it’s just how they feel.

Women want to be with a man who can make them feel protected, due to him being emotionally strong no matter what happens to him, them or in the world around them.

So, if your ex feels sorry for you, it’s not something that is going to make her feel like rushing back to you.

Instead, she might think, “Why should I waste my time with a guy who can’t take care of himself emotionally? He’s just so needy. I know that I can find a man who isn’t like that. I don’t have to settle for an emotional wimp. I deserve a real man.”

If she begins to have those type of thoughts, she will naturally open herself up to dating other men and trying to find herself a man who doesn’t need a pat on the head from mommy, so to speak.

This is why, it’s absolutely essential that you get your emotions under control right now and begin displaying confidence, emotional strength and emotional independence to her.

Emotional independence is about being confident, happy, secure and forward moving in life with or without her support, reassurance or presence.

On the other hand, emotional dependence is about needing her in order to feel confident, happy, secure and forward moving in life.

If your ex gets the sense that you’re emotionally dependent on her (i.e. needy), then you will feel more like a burden than a benefit to her life and as a result, she wants to keep pushing you away.

By the way!

There’s nothing wrong with feeling sad, dejected or even a bit lonely without your ex.

Heck, you’re human and it’s totally natural to feel things.

However, if you want to re-attract your ex so she wants to get back into a relationship with her, do not show her how sad, dejected, lost or lonely you are without her.

Youâ€¢ve got to display traits that will attract her (i.e. confidence, emotional independence, high self-esteem), not repel her (i.e. insecurity, neediness, low self-esteem, loneliness).

Another reason why your ex feeling sorry for you isnâ€¢t the best approach to get her back is thatâ€¢

3. If she meets a new man who is confident and has high self-esteem, he will seem so much more attractive than an ex she feels sorry for

Essentially, the new manÂ will be displaying qualities that make her feel sexually and romantically attracted (i.e. confidence, self-assuredness, high self-esteem).

As a result, she will feel the desire to be with him sexually, or to get into a relationship with him.

He will become her new crush, or new love.

On the other hand, feeling sorry forÂ an ex guyÂ only makesÂ a woman feel likeÂ patting him on the back like a lost child and saying, â€¢There there, itâ€¢ll be okay. Youâ€¢ll find someone else one day,â€¢ rather thanÂ wanting to beÂ his girl.

It's just not attractive for a woman to look down on a man as needing her help to feel happy, confident or whole again.

Women are naturally attracted to men who are happy, confident, fulfilled and forward moving in life, regardless of whether a woman is there by his side or not.

So, if youâ€¢ve been trying to make your ex pity you, or if you've been hoping that sheâ€¢ll feel sorry for you and then give you another chance based on that, you need to stop using that strategy right away because it almost certainly wonâ€¢t work.

Instead, use a strategy that has the highest potential to make her feel drawn to you and want you again.

That being, interact with her and make her experience new, appealing and exciting feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

That is what makes her want you back.

You always have to remember that women want to be with men that they feel respect, attraction and love for and ask yourself, "Am I making my ex feel that way about me now?"

If you're not, you need to start making her feel that way, so she can start feeling drawn to you again and want you back.

4. Pity isnâ€¢t the fundamental ingredient upon which a lifetime relationship is based

Pity is an emotion that comes with a burden for the other person (i.e. they feel as though they need to take care of, or show empathy towards the person they pity).

A woman will do that temporarily if she truly loves a man, but itâ€¢s not something she can sustain because itâ€¢s simply not what her attraction for a man is based on.

If a guy does create a relationship dynamic based on making her pity or guilt she will end up resenting him.

She will then become cold and unloving towards him, until she eventually decides that she doesn't care how difficult it will be for him to cope without her and dumps him.

In the case of getting an ex back, if a woman doesn't feel much attraction or love for ex guy, then she's not going to draw to the idea of having to deal with the burden of taking care of a guy that she feels pity for.

Instead, she will see the relationship as being too difficult, or too much work and will naturally want to close herself off to it.

At the same time, she will begin opening herself up to new, sexual and relationships experiences with men who don't need her emotional support and just want to have fun.

So, if you want her back, make sure that she is NOT feeling sorry for you and instead, is feeling a lot of respect for the new and improved you.

Make her feel like she has got something to lose now, if she doesn't get back with you.

4 Mistakes to Avoid When an Ex is Pushing You Away Because She is Scared

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your ex is pushing you away because she's scared of getting too attached to you and doesn't want to get too close, then make sure that you avoid the following mistakes.

1. Apologizing for making her scared and promising to take things slow from now on Apologizing once is fine, but don't go overboard with it and promise to take things slow so she isn't scared of getting hurt.

Why?

The reality is that women who act "scared" of getting hurt, secretly hate it when men believe them and then follow along with her little "pity me" game.

She's done it to other guys in the past, they believed her, became soft towards her and she then lost interest and moved on.

[image: Stop being such a pain in the butt. You ain't scared girl. You love me]

What she's looking for is a man who doesn't take her fear of getting too close so seriously, or a man who can make her not take it so seriously (i.e. get her to laugh at herself for being so serious, worried or fearful when it comes to having feelings).

So, a mistake that some guys in a situation like yours is to be extra sweet and supportive towards their ex girlfriend, even though she doesn't need it or want it.

What she actually wants is to feel excited, open and confident about being in love, rather than having a guy fan the flames of her unnecessary fear.

Additionally, if her ex boyfriend is being extra nice, sweet, soft, gentle and supportive towards her, then she's not going to feel attracted to him because of that.

Why?

As you may know, nice guy behavior doesn't make women feel attracted and turned on.

Nice guy behavior gets guys rejected when they're trying to pick up women, makes women feel bored and turned off in a relationship and makes women feel unmotivated to get back with an ex after a break up.

If you want her back (and for her to stop acting like she is scared), then you need to have the balls to laugh at her, or get her to laugh at herself when she is acting like she is too scared to get back with you.

If you can't do that, then she will feel as though you're too weak (emotionally) and can't handle a woman like her.

If she feels that way, then she will absolutely keep pushing you away because she won't want to get back into a relationship where she knows she will continue to feel turned off.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Never really understanding what attracts a woman on a primal level, which results in you getting rejected by her and other women you really want

[image: Never really understanding what attracts a woman on a primal level, which results in you getting rejected by her and other women you really want]

There are certain personality traits and behaviors that automatically attract women (e.g. confidence, emotional masculinity, assertiveness, purpose and direction, being a bit of a challenge) and others that turn them off (e.g. insecurity, neediness, being too nice).

The more attractive traits you display when interacting with women, the more they feel attracted to you.

Likewise, the less you display, the less they feel attracted to you.

How about you?

Are you aware of some of the attractive and unattractive traits you've been displaying to her?

Are you willing to improve, adjust and make some quick changes so you can begin displaying a lot more attractive traits when interacting with her, so she then becomes open to giving you another chance?

Unfortunately, a lot of guys who are trying to get an ex woman back are willing to improve, but they just don't know what to do.

As a result, a guy might think that his ex will stop feeling scared to commit to him if he:

- Tells her how much he loves her.
- Is extra nice, helpful and generous towards her.
- Becomes a shoulder to cry on and is "there for her" as a good friend.
- Tell her that he is willing to wait as long as it takes for her to feel comfortable about being with him.

Yet, when a guy uses that approach, it doesn't turn his ex on at a primal level.

She just sees him as a nice guy and may even appreciate that about it, but she won't much or any desire to be with him sexually and romantically.

In many cases, she won't want to admit that though (i.e. because she doesn't want to hurt his feelings, or cause him to plead with her to give him a chance to make her have feeling for him again), so she will push him away whenever he tries to get too close.

So, if you want your ex to stop feeling scared and pushing you away as a result, you need to get clear on what aspects of the attraction experience were missing in the relationship (i.e. Did she want you to be more of a challenge? Did she want you to stop taking her fake drama so seriously? Did she want you to stop acting like her savior from the big, bad world out there? Did she want you to stop entertaining or encouraging her repeated stories of how she was abused by a previous boyfriend, or has issues from her childhood? Did she want you to have the balls to get her to laugh at herself for being such a drama queen?).

Guys in your situation often fear doing anything other than being nice to their ex girlfriend who is apparently "scared" or has issues.

Yet, women like that are secretly looking for a man who has the balls to laugh at her (in a loving way, of course), or get her to laugh at herself and stop being such a pain in the butt.

You can realize that now, start doing it and re-attract her back into a relationship, or you can continue being afraid to be like that and then realize it many years later, when she has settled down, married and started a family with another guy.

I say that because I know from experience that it takes some guys years to eventually realize the truth about their ex girlfriend and what kind of attraction experience she really wanted.

Don't let that happen to you.

Understand what she really wants and start doing it today.

3. Trying to explain yourself in long emails, texts or social media messages

Long messages from guys (especially ex guys) turn women off for the following reasons:

- It makes the guy look desperate. If a guy isn't desperate for a girl, he won't go to all the trouble of writing long, emotional messages to her. Additionally, if he is confident in his attractiveness to her (this is what your ex wants you to be and what other women want you to be, by the way), then he keeps messages brief, relaxed and playful. He won't feel the need to write long, emotional messages to her.
- It makes a guy look feminine (like a girl). Girls tend to rant and write long messages because they get caught up in the emotions of things and just go for it. Yet, just because girls do that, it doesn't mean guys should do it too. You should always make yourself different to a girl by being the more masculine one. If she feels as though you're writing like a girl, she simply won't feel attracted to you.
- It can seem selfish to her (i.e. he is talking about his feelings and expressing what he wants her to understand, what he wants from the situation, how much he cares for her, how much she means to him. It's really about him trying to get her back and nothing else).
- It can make her feel more disappointed by the fact that no matter how much he tries to write, she still doesn't feel attracted to him.

So, what can you do if your ex refuses to talk to you on the phone, or meet up in person and you've got is text or email?

It's fine to text, email or send social media messages, but just don't use it as a way to explain yourself.

Instead, use the interactions to make her feel attracted to you.

When she feels attracted to you, she will then care about losing you and as a result, will open up to talking to you on the phone (audio or video call), or meeting up with you in person so she can explore her feelings further.

Then, when you see her in person, be prepared to make her feel more respect, attraction and love for the new and improved you, so she feels as though losing you would be her loss.

When she touches on that feeling of potential loss and regret, her guard will naturally come down and she will stop pushing you away.

4. Continuing to chase until she fully closes up emotionally and possibly even blocks your number

If she gets the sense that you are only after one thing (i.e. a committed relationship) and are going to keep pushing for it, don't be surprised if you eventually scare her off completely.

Unless she has strong feelings for you (i.e. she is very attracted to you, or in love with you), being pressured back into a relationship just isn't going to feel right to her.

She's going to start to get the sense that you are trying to control her, or push her into something that she doesn't want.

Women don't respond well to that approach.

So, what you need to do instead is focus on making her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you whenever you interact with her on the phone or in person.

Let her see that she really does feel differently when she interacts with you now (i.e. she feels more drawn to you, she feels comfortable opening up to you without you reacting too eagerly and causing her to go inward again, she likes how you're more of a challenge now, she feels worried about losing you).

When she feels that way, it just won't feel right to her to leave you and try to move on because she has found what she has been looking for all along.

That elusive, hard to find feeling where she is in love, open and doesn't want to lose you, no matter what risks are involved (i.e. potentially getting hurt down the line).

She doesn't care about that and just wants to be with you.

When you approach it that way, you will see that she suddenly stops being so worried about getting hurt, or getting too close and instead, wants to open up and get as close as possible with you before she loses you.

Is She Pushing Me Away Because She is Scared?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Itâ€™s possible, but you should also know that a woman will push a man away after a break up for the following common reasons:

1. She isnâ€™t attracted to him anymore

Sometimes a woman will give her ex the impression that she is pushing him away because sheâ€™s scared to open up to him, in case she gets hurt again.

Yet, what she doesnâ€™t tell him is that she no longer feels a spark of attraction with him, so the idea of being his girl once again doesnâ€™t really appeal to her anymore.

If she told him that, he could then say, â€œOkay good, weâ€™re making progress. Now that I know what I need to do, just give me a chance to get the spark back. Please. I promise you that I will do whatever it takes to make you happyâ€ and so on.

Then she would be dealing with a whole different kind of break up (i.e. where she reluctantly gives her ex another chance and he desperately tries to make her happy, which ends up turning her off because women arenâ€™t attracted to desperate men who do whatever they can to make a woman happy).

So, by giving her ex the impression that sheâ€™s scared to get hurt, she makes him feel obliged to be very gentle with her, patient and kind, or else she might push him away further.

As a result, she effectively buys herself some time to find a replacement guy and move on, without having to hurt his feelings (i.e. by telling him that she no longer feels attracted to him), or deal with him begging or pleading with her to give him another chance.

Then, weeks later, she tells her ex that sheâ€™s met someone else and is happy with him and then asks her ex to stop contacting her and respect her new relationship.

Another reason why a woman might push a man away after a break up isâ€¦

2. She only wants casual sex, but he wants a relationship

Sometimes a woman will be at a point in her life where she only wants casual sex and doesnâ€™t want to be totally committed in a relationship.

This can happen when she is single and it can also happen after a break up that hurt her emotionally. After a break up, if she just wants to be on her own for a while and have casual sex with her ex, she will rarely admit the second part to him.

For example: She will have no problem saying, â€œI want to be on my own for a while,â€ but will only feel comfortable saying that she is open to having casual sex, if she can see that her ex isnâ€™t trying to secure a committed relationship with her.

So, if her ex clearly wants to be in a committed boyfriend-girlfriend relationship with her, then she will simply keep pushing him away.

How about you and your ex?

Do you think that itâ€™s possible that she would be open to casual sex, or a friends with benefits type of relationship, as long as you are not trying to get her to commit?

If yes, then let her know that you accept the break up and agree that you and her will never get back together again.

Then, let her know that if she is open to hanging out as friends to have a little fun if she is ever feeling horny, you think it might be fun to do that once or twice, but you want her to know in advance that you totally agree with the break up.

She can then relax, open up and reach out to you when she is feeling horny and just wants some intimacy without the commitment.

3. She wants a guy who is more of a challenge and he just doesn't know how to offer her that experience

[image: She wants a guy who is more of a challenge and he just doesn't know how to offer her that experience]

Sometimes a guy will assume that being nice, sweet, romantic, agreeable and generous is the key to keeping a woman happy in a relationship.

So, when his girl finally breaks up with him, he will often feel confused, hurt, angry and even used by her.

He may think, â€œI did everything to make her happy, but she still dumped me. What the heck do women want? Iâ€™m a good guy. Isnâ€™t that enough?! I donâ€™t understand women. They make no sense! How could she dump ME of all people?â€

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that almost all women want to feel like they need to impress you and maintain your interest in a relationship, while also being treated well by you.

A relationship is not a one-way street.

Instead, itâ€™s a two way street where both the man and the woman should feel the need to treat each other well, maintain each otherâ€™s interest and make the relationship happy and enjoyable.

If itâ€™s just the guy doing that and he has no idea how to make her want to do it in return for him, then almost all women will get bored of that and leave (or cheat and then leave).

4. She can see that he hasn't changed and getting back with him would be the same

In most cases, a woman doesn't just decide to break up with her guy the first time he makes a mistake.

Instead, she gives him plenty of chances to adjust his approach and get things right, but if he can't ever do that, she will eventually decide to go ahead with the break up.

When the break up finally happens, the guy is usually shocked by it and didn't really see it coming.

As a result, he panics, feels lost without her and becomes desperate to get her back.

He might then chase after her and try all sorts of things to convince her to give him another chance.

For example: He mightâ€

- Beg and plead with her to change her mind.
- Apologize to her over and over again and promise her that heâ€¦ will do whatever she wants him to do from this point onwards, because all he wants to do is make her happy.
- Ask her to tell him what he needs to do to make her happy (i.e. reveal to her that he has no clue about how to naturally attract her and make her want him).
- Buy her flowers and gifts.
- Send her emails or texts telling her how much he loves her, how sorry he is for hurting her and how he canâ€¦t live without her.

Heâ€¦s trying, but itâ€¦s just not what works.

Rather than making a woman think, â€œThat is so sweet. He really seems to have learned a lesson this time around. Okay, I will forgive him and give him another chance,â€ she pushes him away even more.

Why?

Nothing about what heâ€¦s doing to get her back, is proving to her that he really has changed.

Instead, his actions seem to highlight to her that he doesnâ€¦t even know what she wants him to change.

Heâ€¦s just begging, pleading, asking, pouring his heart out, being extra nice or generous, but thatâ€¦s not convincing her that things would be different if she gave him another chance.

So, she remains afraid to open back up to him.

Additionally, by behaving in that way (i.e. being desperate), it automatically turns her off because women arenâ€¦t attracted to desperation in men.

This is why, if you want your ex to stop pushing you away and you really do want to get her back, you need to show her (not tell her) that you have already changed in some of the ways that are important to her feelings of attraction for you.

For example: Some of the things that are important to a womanâ€¦s feelings of attraction about a man are thatâ€¦

- Heâ€¦s loving, caring and attentive, but doesnâ€¦t let her push him around, get away with bad behavior, or be disrespectful towards him.
- He makes her feel like a feminine, girly woman, rather than treating her like a neutral friend that he wants to just hang out with. He makes her feel feminine by not suppressing his masculinity around her (i.e. to be nice, because he thinks itâ€¦s disrespectful or wrong, because he thinks she doesnâ€¦t want to experience it), which then allows her to connect with her femininity and feel like a real woman in the relationship (i.e. girly, giggly, emotional, irrational, sexual, in love).
- He uses humor to change her mood from annoyed, sulky or whiny to happy, rather than getting dragged into her fake drama and losing control of his emotions. Women often create fake drama to test how manly a guy is (i.e. does he lose control of his emotions like a woman, or does he maintain control of his emotions like a man?).
- He creates a relationship dynamic where he is good to her, but also makes her feel motivated to be good to him, treat him well and make him feel loved as well.
- He has a definite plan for his life (and by association, her life too) and he is actively pursuing that plan, rather than drifting through life and being clueless about what heâ€™s going to do in the future, working in a dead end job that he hates, or starting new projects all the time, but never following through until he truly succeeds.

- He doesnâ€™t get insecure or doubt himself when she tests his confidence by pretending not to be interested in him, not being as affectionate as usual or pretending to be turned off by him. Women always do that to test a manâ€™s confidence in a relationship because your confidence is the number source of her attraction, which is based on her instinctive need to feel like she is safe with a strong man.

So, if you want to get her back, you have to truly understand how a womanâ€™s attraction works and then let her experience a whole new kind of exciting, irresistible, instinctively satisfying type of attraction for you.

If she gets the sense that a relationship with you would be pretty much the same as before, then sheâ€™s just not going to feel motivated to get back with you if her real, secret reason for breaking up with you was that she didnâ€™t feel enough respect, attraction and love for you in the end.

5. She is reacting to his approach to the relationship

Women essentially react to the approach that you use with them.

This applies to picking up women, going on dates, being in a relationship, having sex and getting an ex woman back.

If youâ€™re coming across as desperately longing for her, or being willing to do whatever she wants to hopefully get another chance, a woman will react by feeling as though she is more valuable than you, even though sheâ€™s not.

As a result, she will think things like, â€œWhy should I settle for him? Heâ€™s just not good enough for a woman like me. I deserve betterâ€ and naturally push you away.

So, if you want her back, make sure that youâ€™re not giving her the impression that everything is up to her, you are at her mercy, she is the prize and you are lost without her.

If you do that, she will naturally react in a negative way towards you.

How to Get Your Ex Girlfriend to Trust You Again

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's what you need to do:

1. Make her feel the motivation to want to trust you again

[image: Make her feel the motivation to want to trust you again]

Her motivation to trust you, will come from her feeling attracted to you again and then realizing that she has something to lose now.

So, you need to focus on making her feel attracted to the new and improved you by interacting with her and letting her see that you're no longer behaving, thinking or reacting the way you used to. That won't instantly make her trust you again, but she will begin to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, which will make her feel some motivation to want to forgive you and trust you again.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that and end up begging, pleading and apologizing over and over to a woman, in the hope that she takes pity on them.

Yet, a woman doesn't want to get back into a relationship with a guy out of pity, or guilt.

She will get back with a guy if she feels compelled via her newfound feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

So, start off by building her feelings for you via text, or social media if she's currently reluctant to interact with you in any other way.

Then, get to a phone call, video call or in person meet up, rather than just sticking to text.

Don't make the mistake of getting into a long, drawn out conversation about the relationship or how you stuffed up via texts or social media messages, because too many things can go wrong when using that approach.

For example: She can simply ignore your texts or messages, which will essentially stop the ex back process in its tracks.

Alternatively, she might misinterpret a lot of what you text because she can't see you and assess your body language, or hear the tone of your voice.

If you apologize to her for what happened via text, rather than thinking something like, â€œThat's so sweet. He's taking responsibility for his actions and I appreciate thatâ€ she might think, â€œHe probably doesn't even mean it, he just thinks it's what I want to hearâ€ or, â€œWhatever. He's just trying to suck up to me to get another chance. I will only believe him if I talk to him in person and can see that he is sincere and has really changed.â€

As a result, she remains closed off and distant because you're only texting her and she doesn't have any real evidence that anything would be different between you and her, or that she'd feel differently.

So, I recommend that you only use text, social media messages or emails as a way to get her on a phone call or video call with you.

On the call, focus on reawakening her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction, so she opens up to meeting up in person.

Then, get her to meet up with you in person, so she can see that not only have you truly changed, but she honestly feels a lot differently around you now (in a positive way).

She looks at you as being a man who has transformed and deserves her forgiveness and trust, based on the significant changes you've made and how that now makes her feel.

Another way to get her to trust you again is

2. Tell her that trust can be felt again and if she feels it now, then it's okay to go with that feeling

For example: You might say, I broke your trust. That is true. You were totally right to lose trust in me. However, trust is something that can be felt again. If you can see that I am honestly different now and you naturally feel more trust for me, then you can go with that. You don't have to block it out and think that it's impossible to trust me again. If you do that, you're going to give yourself trust issues. The better thing to do is to be mature about this and understand that trust can be felt again and if you feel it, it's okay to go with it.

She then feels more motivated to go with her current feelings towards you (e.g. trust you a bit more, respect the new you), rather than stick to how she felt about the old version of you.

It then becomes easier for you to interact with her and reawaken her feelings for you over the phone and in person, because she's now more open to it.

You can then build on her feelings and regain more of her trust, which will cause her to feel compelled to give you another chance.

3. Tell her that there is no rush to even think about getting back together

This is a bit of reverse psychology that works so well on women.

It's just as powerful, by the way, when meeting and dating new women.

When you say, There's no rush for us to have sex or, We don't have to have sex right away it flicks a switch in a woman's head where she then wants to.

She feels attracted to you and wants to have sex with you, but was holding back to be more ladylike (and therefore, more trustworthy and girlfriend material in your eyes) and now you're saying that you and her don't have to have sex right away.

It's just something that turns women on and makes them want to have sex.

Likewise, when your ex is feeling attracted to you again and wants to get back with you, but you say that there's no rush to even think about getting back together, it makes her want to think about it.

When she thinks about it, she realizes that she is feeling attracted to you again and wants you back, so she then opens up to giving you and the relationship another chance.

Another way to get your ex girlfriend to trust you again is

4. Let her know that people do make mistakes that can make them seem untrustworthy, even though they are trustworthy

[image: Let her know that people do make mistakes that can make them seem untrustworthy, even though they are trustworthy]

For example: You can say, “Look, I know I stuffed up and I’m not going to make excuses for that. However, I’m sure you know that sometimes people make mistakes that can make them seem untrustworthy, even though they are trustworthy. Sometimes it’s a mistake based on immaturity, or lack of experience. Other times, it can be because a person wasn’t in the right state of mind (e.g. intoxicated by alcohol, angry during an argument). Yet, there were also many times where that same person proved that they are trustworthy. So essentially, a trustworthy person can sometimes slip up and that’s what happened with me. That said, I know now that trust in a relationship can be fragile and even one slip can make a person seem untrustworthy. I’ve learned from my mistake and I hope that you can forgive me. I’m not asking for us to get back together, but I think we are mature enough to at least be friends now.”

Of course, make sure that you are making her feel attracted to you as you talk to her as well (i.e. by being a bit of a challenge, flirting with her, using humor, maintaining confidence in yourself no matter what she says or does), so she feels motivated to want to trust you again and give you another chance.

If you just text her something like that above, or say it in a way where you are pleading with her, then it won’t work.

You need to say something like that while also being attractive as you interact with her, so she feels the motivation to want to forgive you and give the relationship another chance.

So, don’t forget about, or try to avoid the most important thing of all: Her attraction for you.

4 Mistakes That Slow Down the Process of Regaining Her Trust and Getting Her Back

1. Writing a long email or a series of messages or texts to hopefully regain her trust

What some guys don’t realize is that many women see long emails, texts, messages or letters from an ex as being a selfish act.

Why?

In most cases, the messages are all about the guy talking about himself, what he wants, what he has realized, what he wants her to realize, how much he cares about her, how much he appreciates the time they spent together and so on.

In other words, it’s pretty much all about him, his feelings and what he cares about.

Even though his intentions are good, a woman will usually see it as being selfish because he is expecting her to read all of his long texts, messages or emails and then trust him again, so he can get her back.

If she doesn’t feel attracted to him, or isn’t in love with him anymore, she will think, “Why should I care?”

The way to make her care is to re-attract her first, so don’t make the mistake of trying to fix everything with apologies, explanations and requests via text, social media messages or emails.

Youâ€¢ve got to get to the point where she feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you first, otherwise she will almost certainly not feel motivated to trust you again simply based on texts, messages or emails.

The next mistake that can slow down the process of regaining an ex girlfriendâ€¢s trust isâ€¢

2. Crying to her when apologizing

If you have already ruined your ex girlfriendâ€¢s trust in you to be a reliable, emotionally strong and dependable man, then she isnâ€¢t going to want to see you lose control of your emotions and cry to her.

It doesnâ€¢t matter how sad you feel, or how sorry or bad about how youâ€¢ve treated her, or what you did to lose her trust.

Donâ€¢t cry.

Women need to be able to trust in you to be a man that they can depend on to remain strong, no matter what happens.

She might be nice to you if you cry her, but she will be secretly feeling very turned off and disappointed that you are essentially seeking pity from her based on how sad, regretful or down you are feeling about the break up.

Itâ€¢s totally fine to feel the emotions (i.e. you donâ€¢t need to be an unemotional robot. She does want to see that you care), but just donâ€¢t lose control of them and cry to her.

3. Apologizing over and over again

Apologizing is important and necessary, doing apologizing over and over again isnâ€¢t what will convince her to give you another chance.

Why?

Apologizing repeatedly doesnâ€¢t actually get to the core of the problem.

Instead, youâ€¢re just saying how sorry you are, but those are just words to her.

It doesnâ€¢t prove that you really have addressed the problem that led to her losing trust in you, or that you really would never break her trust again in future.

So, donâ€¢t bother apologizing to her over again and again.

Instead, give her one brief, genuine apology in a matter of fact way (i.e. get to the point, be real, donâ€¢t be too emotional) and then focus on showing her via your attitude, actions, behavior and the way you respond to her from now on that you really have leveled up as a man.

4. Making the conversations between you and her feel exhausting and stressful, rather than easygoing and lighthearted

Getting into stressful conversations about what happened to cause her to lose trust in you, isnâ€¢t the way to create exciting, enjoyable and appealing feelings of sexual and romantic attraction inside of her.

Instead of feeling happy and turned on, she feels annoyed, stressed and frustrated as a result of continually focusing on all the things you did wrong in the relationship.

As a result, she wants to get away from you and try to move on.

On the other hand, when you are able to make her feel happy, relaxed, open-minded, easygoing and lighthearted, then she stops focusing on the bad things that happened.

As a result, you and her can establish a new relationship based on her growing trust in who you have now become.

Get Her Back After She Lost Interest

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 tips to make her want you back again:

1. Identify the main missing pieces of the attraction experience that caused her to lose interest

The attraction experience in your relationship is the overall feeling a woman gets based on your approach to attraction.

In other words, your approach to attraction either makes her want you more or less over time.

If you approach it in a way that makes her want you more, then she doesn't leave.

If you approach it in a way that makes her want you less, then she will eventually cheat on you or dump you.

It's just how it works.

So, are you aware of what REALLY caused her to lose interest and feel turned off by you in the relationship to the point where she broke up with you?

For example: Here are 10 subtle things about a man that can turn a woman off and 10 that can turn her on.

Turn Offs:

1. He is too needy and clingy (i.e. always needs to be with her, constantly texting her, calling or spending all of his spare time with her, always needing her reassurance that she loves him, doesn't like her talking to anyone else, becomes insecure if she is around other people, needs to be close with her physically and emotionally to feel okay about himself).
2. He spends his remaining spare time watching TV, playing video games or playing with his phone because he's too afraid to follow through and make progress on his big goals, dreams and ambitions in life.
3. He finds it difficult to make decisions without seeking her input or encouragement first.
4. His body language is weak, unsure, nervous, stressed, needy, desperate or feminine.
5. He lacks presence as a man (e.g. he is too "in his head" and struggles to just flow with a moment and live in the moment, he seems intimidated by other men in social situations to the point where he withdraws his presence and allows the other men to be more powerful, he surpasses his masculine energy around her to be nice or because he's afraid of how she might react if he is a more powerful, dominant man).
6. He tends to get annoyed or angry about things that she thinks he shouldn't get so worked up about (e.g. other people's decisions or actions that don't affect him, the taste of food at a restaurant, the weather).
7. He is emotionally unavailable and distant when it comes to her, but available and close with his friends or family.
8. He doesn't put in much effort to build relationships with her family and friends and tends to avoid them as much as possible, even though she has told him that family and friends are very important to her.

9. How heâs unable to make her feel feminine and girly in his presence and instead makes her feel neutral, or like she is more powerful than him, which then causes her to feel repulsed by him, rather than feeling respect and looking up to him.
10. He doesnât feel worthy of her love and has no idea how to make her feel attracted to him and as a result, he tries to make pressure her into being loyal to him in other ways (i.e. he becomes controlling, makes her feel guilty about wanting to spend time on other things that donât involve him, makes her promise she would never cheat on him).

Turn Onâs:

1. He makes her feel loved and appreciated, but doesnât let her walk all over him. Instead, she feels the need to impress him and treat him well also.
2. He is happy and would be successful in his life with or without her (i.e. he wants her, but he doesnât need her to make progress in life, or to feel good about himself).
3. He makes her feel like a sexy, desirable woman in his presence, regardless of how many years theyâve been together or how comfortable they feel around each other (i.e. he never falls into the trap of treating her more like a neutral friend than his woman).
4. He easily passes her confidence tests (e.g. when she rolls her eyes at him, pretends to disagree with him during a conversation, or acts like sheâs annoyed about things that she doesnât really feel annoyed about) by remaining confident, rather than getting upset and doubting himself around her. This allows her to look up to him and respect him as the more confident, dominant and powerful one in the relationship, which causes her to feel a deep, exciting and ongoing attraction for him.
5. He always feels confident and at ease around other people in social situations, which makes her respect him and feel safe when with him.
6. He is a bit of a challenge to her, so she feels the need to put in effort to maintain his interest, rather than taking him for granted.
7. He has a clear and definite purpose in life and is working towards achieving it.
8. He is respected by other people because of how confident, emotionally masculine and emotionally secure he is.
9. He allows her to relax into thinking, behaving and acting like a feminine woman when sheâs with him, because he thinks, behaves and acts like a masculine man (i.e. rather than being like a neutral friend, or worse, acting like a feminine guy).
10. He is able to communicate with her in a way that deepens her respect, attraction and love for him over time (i.e. he understands that men and women communicate different and women donât always want a man to offer a solution when they bring up a problem. In many cases, a woman just wants to express her emotions and see that her man understands, rather than him immediately going into problem solving mode and making her feel like she has to think, behave and act like a man).

There are many subtle things that turn women off or on and if you want to be successful in a relationship (or with getting your ex back), you need to understand them.

If you donât ever understand how women feel attracted and what turns them off, you will never know what youâre doing and will always be at the mercy of her (i.e. hoping that she doesnât suddenly break up with you).

On the other hand, when you know how to maintain and build on a woman's attraction in a relationship, she will never leave.

She will know how difficult it will be to find another man who understands what you do and as a result, is able to make her feel so madly in love after so long.

Likewise, when you understand what to adjust and then interact with your ex and let her experience the new you, she will immediately begin to realize that a relationship with you would feel completely different now.

As a result, she will naturally drop her guard and begin opening herself back up to the idea of being with you again.

Another tip to regain her interest in you isâ€¦

2. Understand that what you think of yourself will directly affect how she perceives you

[image: Understand that what you think of yourself will directly affect how she perceives you]

Your thoughts about you and your chances of getting her back are very important.

If you believe in yourself, you will naturally exude the type of confidence that is attractive to women (what I call, Independent Confidence), but if you doubt yourself, you will naturally exude insecurity, self-doubt and fear, which will turn your ex off.

For example: A guy who doubts himself around his ex girlfriend, will often think something like, â€œI don't deserve her after the way I treated herâ€ or, â€œThere's nothing I can do to change her mind about breaking up with meâ€ because she has lost interest in meâ€ or, â€œShe said it's over and that she doesn't have feelings for me anymore, so I guess I need to accept that. I can never change how she feels and get her back.â€

To him, the situation will feel hopeless and he will feel like he has no chance.

As a result, he will naturally feel dejected and sad about the situation.

If he interacts with his ex, she will easily pick up on that because women are hard-wired to assess a man's emotional strength.

It's one of their natural talents, which pretty much every woman masters as she goes through life and has experiences with men.

If a guy doubts himself, she will see it in his body language, hear it in the tonality of his voice and pick up on it based on what he says and how he says it.

This is why, it's very important that you gain control of your thoughts by quickly getting to the point where you are 100% confident about your chances of re-attracting her.

Don't have any doubt at all that you can re-attract her.

Know that you can and then do it, rather than placing yourself in the friend zone with her, or worse, thinking that you're not even worthy of being her friend now.

You can make her feel attracted to you again and you can get her back.

Believe it!

Then, do it and you and her will be back together within days or 1-2 weeks at the most.

3. Donâ€¢t try to get her to commit to a relationship right away

So many guys get rejected by an ex girlfriend (or wife) by focusing on trying to get her to agree to a relationship, rather than allowing the relationship to naturally get back together as a result of hooking up and beginning to see each other again.

When a guy is immediately pushing for a relationship (i.e. to get back together as boyfriend and girlfriend, or husband and wife), the woman will say no, or ask for more time to think about it, if she isnâ€¢t fully re-attracted and is still unsure.

Then, if sheâ€¢s not feeling much attraction and isnâ€¢t missing him after telling him to give her time to think about it, she will let him know that sheâ€¢s sticking to her decision to remain broken up and will wish him all the best.

Iâ€¢ve seen that happen in so many ex back cases, so donâ€¢t make the mistake of pushing for a relationship right away.

Instead, just focus on rebuilding her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good when she interacts with you, changing your approach to attraction so she feels as though youâ€¢ve understood what caused her to lose interest in you in the first place, making her feel like a feminine woman in your presence rather than like a neutral friend, flirting with her to build up sexual tension that she wants to release via kissing and sex with you).

The more attracted she feels, the more open she will be to hooking up, hanging out, seeing each other and assessing how she feels.

If she feels good being back with you, then you will have gotten her back.

If she doesnâ€¢t, then a break up will happen again.

So, make sure that you prepare yourself and are ready to properly re-attract her.

4. Donâ€¢t try too hard to impress her

Sometimes a guy will try to impress his ex woman being extra nice and sweet towards her, putting up with any bad treatment she dishes out to him or even helping her out financially.

He hopes that if he shows her how dependable and totally devoted he is, she will be impressed and want to give him another chance because of that.

Yet, when a guy uses that approach, a woman will usually just take advantage of him temporarily (e.g. allow him to help her financially, use his continued interest in her to feel good about herself while she secretly moves on behind his back) and then eventually tell him that she wants him to stop contacting her and leave her alone.

Alternatively, a guy might try to impress his ex by pretending that he has loads of options with other women, even though it isnâ€¢t true.

She then says, â€¢If youâ€¢re so popular with women, why donâ€¢t you date one of them? Why are you contacting me? Are you trying to show off? I donâ€¢t care. Iâ€¢m dating new guys, so letâ€¢s just not talk to each other anymore. Iâ€¢m moving on and you should too.â€¢

So, what should you do instead?

Let her see that you are interested in getting back together if it happens, but at the same time, you feel confident, happy and are making progress in life with or without her.

When she notices that you don't need her back, but are open to it if it happens, she will naturally begin to look at you in a more positive light (i.e. you're not needy, you have been able to bounce back from the break up and get on with life without her, you are going to be a lot more attractive to other women now based on your improved emotional strength and maturity).

As a result, she will begin to wonder whether or not things really need to be over between you and her, which can lead her to being much more willing to catch up in person if you suggest it.

5. When you get back together, make sure that it's a completely new relationship dynamic

[image: When you get back together, make sure that it's a completely new relationship dynamic]

The relationship dynamic (i.e. who is the more dominant one, how much love, respect and attraction flows between the couple, the settings they have about who does what, how they relate to each other, the expectations they have, the way the relationship operates) will determine whether or not the relationship will feel good for both you and her.

So, if you get back with her and aren't able to create a new, more enjoyable and effective relationship dynamic, a break up will almost certainly happen again.

To put it into perspective for you, here are some examples of a relationship dynamic that is out of sync:

- A guy is too submissive and allows his woman to dominate him with her confident personality. As a result, she ends up losing respect for him not being man enough to stand up to her and put her back in her place in a loving, but dominant way.
- A guy puts all his love and attention on his woman and neglects his goals, dreams, interests and friends just to spend every spare minute with her. With nothing else to focus on, it usually leads to a guy being overly clingy and needy, which cause the woman to feel smothered by him and want to get away and have her own space.
- A guy becomes overly controlling and jealous towards his woman, which can cause her to resentful and closed off towards him, or to eventually cheat on him or dump him (usually when he is at an emotionally weak point in life) to get revenge for how he has treated her.
- A guy becomes so comfortable in the relationship with his woman that he starts treating her more like one of his buddies. This leads to the sexual spark dying between them and she then ends up feeling more like a neutral friend, or a housemate than his sexy girlfriend or wife. She then starts feeling more attracted and drawn to men who see her as a sexy woman, which often leads to cheating or a break up in the long run.
- A guy spends most of his time playing video games, getting high and chatting with friends and expects his girlfriend to just wait around in the background of his life. She may put up with that initially, but she will eventually feel neglected, bored and resentful, which will usually lead to cheating or a break up.
- A guy is following through on his goals and dreams, but he is still being clingy, needy, controlling or overly jealous with his woman. So, she doesn't care that he's being a man by following through on his dreams, because she's so turned off by his emotional weakness and selfishness when it comes to her.

So, when you get her back, make sure that you are ready to create a new relationship dynamic that causes her to fall more and more in love with you over time.

Itâs not difficult to do because youâre going to be using an approach to the relationship that causes a dynamic anyway.

Itâs simply about approaching the relationship in a way that creates a dynamic, which causes her to feel more respect, attraction and love for you as the days, weeks, months and years go by.

When you do that, she simply wonât ever want to break up with you again.

She will know how difficult it is to find that kind of relationship dynamic and also wonât want to leave you because she will be in love with you.

Women simply donât want to break up with a guy that they are in love with and want to be with.

Of course, first you have to get her back and then you can establish the new relationship dynamicâ!

What to Say to My Girlfriend Before Starting No Contact

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 2 examples of what to say:

1. Let her know that you accept the break up, but you and her should be mature enough to remain friends and be okay about saying hello if you ever want to

[image: Let her know that you accept the break up, but you and her should be mature enough to remain friends and say hello if you ever want to]

For example: You can say something like, â€œHey, I just want you to know that I accept your decision to break up with me. Obviously I would have preferred it if we were still together, but I accept your decision. The only thing I would ask, is that we are mature enough to at least remain friends and even say hello if we ever want to.â€

She can then relax and know that youâ€™re not trying to get her back, which in a way, makes her feel a little rejected.

She probably thought youâ€™d still want to plead with her and convince you to give you another chance, but youâ€™ve accepted the break up and seem like you are going to move on in your life without her.

Suddenly, she doesnâ€™t have the power over you that she once had.

Youâ€™re no longer her boyfriend.

As a result of losing that power over you, she will much more likely to say, â€œYesâ€ to staying in touch as friends.

Then, by keeping the channels of communication and telling her in advance, â€œand even say hello if we ever want toâ€ she knows that she can contact you if she wants to.

So, after you and your girlfriend have agreed to remain friends and to even say hello if you want to, go ahead and start No Contact.

I donâ€™t recommend 30 days of No Contact because in most cases, itâ€™s way too long and leads to the woman moving on.

I recommend that you cut off all contact with her for at least 3 days, but up to a week.

She will likely contact you during that time, in which itâ€™s totally fine to reply and even get her on a call and then arrange a time to catch up in person.

When you catch up, you can then make her feel attracted to you, hook up with her and get her back.

However, if she doesnâ€™t contact you during the 3-7 days, donâ€™t worry.

Just wait the week and then contact her.

Another thing you can say to your girlfriend before starting No Contact isâ€œ

2. Let her know that youâ€™re going to give her a lot of space and move on with your life, but you do still love her and will miss her from time to time

[image: Let her know that you are going to give her a lot of space and move on with your life, but you do still love her and will miss her from time to time]

For example: You can say something like, â€œIf this is what you want, I promise Iâ€™m not going to stand in your way. I accept your decision. Iâ€™m not one of those needy, clingy ex boyfriends who donâ€™t know when to let go of a relationship. Itâ€™s over. So, from today onwards, Iâ€™m going to back off and give you all the space you need to move on and Iâ€™m going to do the same in my life. Of course, that doesnâ€™t mean I donâ€™t still love you, or that Iâ€™m wonâ€™t miss you from time to time. However, I accept the break up and wish you all the best.â€

By telling her that youâ€™re going to give her space to move on, she can then relax and drop her guard a little because she no longer has to feel ready to push you away.

Youâ€™ve already pulled back and she is now on her own without you.

As a result of saying something like that to her, she also starts to feel some renewed respect for you for being so mature about the break up, rather than acting like a desperate, needy ex and making the whole process difficult and stressful for her.

When she starts to respect you again, she will also naturally begin to feel some attraction for you, which means that when she doesnâ€™t hear from you during the No Contact phase (up to a week), she will be most likely thinking about you and missing you.

She will feel as though it really is over and she no longer has power over you (i.e. based on your desire for her).

Youâ€™ve accepted it and she really is on her own now.

So, when you finally do contact her to say hi, she will almost certainly be more open to interacting with you via text, social media, over the phone and seeing you in person.

5 Mistakes to Avoid Making When Using No Contact

1. Going No Contact for too long and ending up losing her

Some guys who use the No Contact Rule believe that it will only work if they ignore her for a full 30 or 60 days.

Yet, what a guy like that often doesnâ€™t realize is that the longer he remains out of her life, the more time she has to fully get over him and meet someone else who sparks her sexual and romantic feelings for him.

For example: In a case where a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy, him disappearing out of her life will actually seem like a favor to her.

Rather than thinking, â€œOh no! Why isnâ€™t he contacting me? I feel so worried that heâ€™s moved on without me. Maybe I should call him because I donâ€™t want to lose him,â€ she is much more likely to feel relieved about not having to deal with an ex who is constantly trying to get her back.

She will simply use the time that he is ignoring her to go out, meet new men, hook up sexually and possibly even start dating and falling in love with a new man.

Then, by the time her ex makes contact with her 30 or 60 days later, she might say, â€œWow, why are you calling me after all this time? I thought youâ€™d moved on. I mean, you didnâ€™t call me or anything. I thought youâ€¦ found someone else or something. Iâ€¦ in a new relationship now and Iâ€¦ happy, so please donâ€¦ call me again. What we had is over. I wish you all the best.â€¦

He is then left feeling dejected and wondering what went wrong.

The answer is simple: He waited too long.

Hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

If a woman still has feelings for a guy and is secretly hoping theyâ€¦ll work things out and get back together, him ignoring her for 30-60 days usually makes her assume that he isnâ€¦t interested in her anymore.

So, rather than contacting him and risk getting rejected she puts in the effort to get over him and move on by finding herself a new man instead.

Donâ€¦t let that happen to you.

If you intend on using No Contact on your ex girlfriend, make sure you donâ€¦t drag it out for many weeks or months.

From my many years of experiencing helping men to get women back (No Contact works differently if a woman wants to get a man back who dumped her), men only need to wait 3 to 7 days before starting the ex back process.

If they wait any longer than that, it usually results in the woman moving on, or getting over him and no longer being interested in reconciling.

Another mistake to avoid making when using No Contact isâ€¦!

2. Worrying that if you break No Contact, you will seem weak or desperate

If she doesnâ€¦t know that youâ€¦re using No Contact (i.e. you havenâ€¦t told her, â€¦I wonâ€¦t be contacting you for 30 days”), then sheâ€¦s not going to think youâ€¦re weak or desperate for â€¦breaking No Contact.â€¦

Sheâ€¦s just going to see that you are contacting her and she will react and respond to you in a positive or negative way, based on how much respect and attraction you can make her feel when you contact her.

Thatâ€¦s what will matter to her.

3. Breaking No Contact, but only texting her and never getting to a phone call

Even if she does respond to your texts, it doesnâ€¦t mean youâ€¦ve gotten her back, or are getting her back.

To get her back for real, youâ€¦ve got to get to an in-person interaction so you can make her feel attracted and turned on, hook up with her and get her back.

If you just stick to text, she might text back and forth with you for a while, but she will lose interest if she notices that youâ€¦re not going to do anything more than text her.

When she loses interest in texting, you might then make the mistake of assuming youâ€¦ve lost her and then give up on the idea of getting her back, which will then lead to you actually losing her for real.

So, if you want your girlfriend back, make sure that you only text her as a way of opening up communication between you and her again.

Then, proceed to a phone call where you make her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again.

From there, get to an in-person meet up, where you fully reactivate her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you (e.g. by maintaining your confidence with her regardless of how cold and aloof she's being, showing her via your attitude, actions and behavior that you've leveled up as a man, making her feel feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine vibe) and get her back.

4. Telling her not to contact you during the No Contact period because you won't be able to handle it

Women aren't attracted to emotionally weak men, so don't say or do anything that shows emotional weakness.

Instead, let her see that you are totally fine, completely confident and at ease about the break up, even though you do love her and may miss her from time to time.

Additionally, you don't have to tell her that you're going No Contact on her.

Instead, just say what I've given you at the top of this article and then give her 3 to 7 days of space.

During that time, prepare yourself to be able to re-attract her and make her want you back when you contact her.

5. Ignoring her attempts to contact you during the No Contact period

Some guys assume that when using No Contact, they then need to ignore her for the full 30 to 60 days for it to work.

As a result, a guy will ignore any attempts his ex makes to contact him during that time.

Then, by the time he eventually contacts her, she says something like, "I tried contacting you, but you didn't reply. I guess you thought I was going to sit around waiting for you forever, right? No, I didn't. I have a new boyfriend now and I'm very happy with him. So, please leave me alone. What we had is over now. You had your chance and you blew it. Goodbye."

Don't let that happen to you.

If your ex takes the risk to contact you during the No Contact period (i.e. she faces up to the possibility of being rejected and contacts you to try to get something going), make sure you respond to her.

Get to an in-person meet up and then hug, kiss, have sex and make her your girlfriend once again.

Grass is Greener Syndrome Reconciliation

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If your ex left you because of a GIGs (Grass is Greener Syndrome) situation, then here's what you need to do to get her back:

1. Don't look at the other guy as being better than you in any way

[image: Don't look at the new guy as being better than you in any way]

If you do see him as being better than in you (in any way), you will naturally feel insecure and that insecurity will come through based on how you interact with and talk to your ex, which will turn her off.

So, the first thing you must do is see yourself as being better than him, no matter what.

It doesn't matter if you think he has some qualities that you don't.

You've got to believe in yourself and your value as a man, otherwise you just won't be able to display the confidence required to properly re-attract your ex.

This applies even if your ex has said that she's happier now she is with him.

Regardless of what she has said, or what qualities he has, it does not mean that he is better for her than you are.

The reason why she thought the grass was greener on the other side in terms of this guy, is that he is simply filling in the emotional gaps that you were unable to fill in the relationship.

For example: Imagine this:

A woman is in a relationship with a guy who doesn't take life seriously enough, so she can't ever really feel safe about a future with him.

He spends most of his time playing video games, hanging out with friends and basically acting like nothing really matters.

If she nags him to man up and start being more responsible, he might say something like, "Stop nagging me! We're still young and should enjoy ourselves while we still can. There will be plenty of time to get serious about life's responsibilities later. All that stuff can wait."

Unfortunately, she doesn't look at life the same way as he does.

She wants to feel safe about a future with him, based on him being the sort of guy who has big goals and ambitions and follows through on them, rather than hiding from them (e.g. behind gaming, chilling with his buddies, watching more TV than he needs to, getting high all the time and so on).

So, she breaks up with him and hopes to find herself a guy who will give her a real sense of security about the future.

She then meets a guy who is a lot more serious, focused and driven than her ex and he has already been making good progress in life (e.g. he's been promoted at work, has been able to pay off his car, is saving up for a deposit on a home, he talks about how he wants to have a family one day).

So, she starts dating him and really feels as though the grass is greener with him, because he offers so much more hope about a secure future.

As a result, she feels safer about potentially getting pregnant to a guy like that because at least he is making progress and has shown that he can get things done, compared to her ex who has been in a dead end job for a while (i.e. with no real options to get promoted) and is happy to just cruise and chill when it comes to life.

From her perspective, the grass is definitely greener with the new guy.

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

The new guy isnât necessarily going to be perfect.

He has also had 100% of his previous relationships fail up until that point, so thereâs no guarantee that he will be able to make a relationship work with your ex.

For example: He might be driven and ambitious, but he might also be insecure, needy, selfish, controlling, untrustworthy and manipulative.

As a result, when she begins to pick up on that, she will naturally lose interest in him.

Of course, you donât have to wait for her to hopefully lose interest.

Instead, you can interrupt her new relationship and get her back.

Watch the video below for some examples.

So, if she is currently happy with the new guy, donât make the mistake of looking at him as being better than you in anyway.

Always believe in yourself and your value to your ex (and to other women), rather than seeing other guys as being better for a woman than you are.

If you can honestly believe in yourself, you will naturally exude the type of confidence that women are magnetically attracted to.

Another thing you can do to ensure a grass is greener syndrome reconciliation isâ!

2. Re-attract her with a completely new approach to attraction

[image: Re-attract her with a completely new approach to attraction]

For your ex woman to currently be feeling that sheâs getting something better from her new guy than she was with you, it must mean that heâs attracting her in new ways.

So, if you want her to feel drawn to you, itâs important that prepare yourself to attract her in new ways that you may not be used to, or that might even scare you a little initially, before you get comfortable with it and grow into it.

For example: If your approach to attraction was to shower your woman with flowers, gifts and romantic gestures, praise and attention, you should ease up on that and begin to be a bit of a challenge when interacting with her.

For example: Imagine that you call her and she answers and says something like, âWhy are you calling me? Why canât you just accept that Iâm with another guy now?â

If youâve been a bit of a pushover in the past, she will be expecting you to get emotional and respond with something like, âPlease, just talk to me. Just give me a chance. I will do anything to make it up to you.â

Yet, what you do instead is confidently say something like, âRelax. We can talk as friends. No need to be so dramaticâ and have a laugh.

Say it in a relaxed, easy-going, but assertive manner to let her see that youâ€¢re still being a good guy, but she canâ€¢t walk all over you like she has in the past.

Youâ€¢ve manned up.

Youâ€¢ve grown a pair of balls when it comes to her.

Of course, when you say something like that, a woman will often pretend to be shocked or offended that you would dare say something like that to her.

Yet, deep down she will be feeling a lot of respect and attraction for you having the balls to joke around with her like that and still be a good guy about it.

As a result, she will begin to think of you in a new light.

Additionally, if her new guy is starting to become a bit insecure, or is jealous of her talking to you, but you seem so confident, sure of yourself and are not jealous at all, then you are going to seem like the more attractive guy.

Women are always attracted to the more confident guy, so you must always remember to display confidence no matter what.

If you do, women canâ€¢t help but feel attracted to you.

Itâ€¢s not about being arrogant, boasting or anything like that.

Instead, itâ€¢s about knowing that your approach to women makes them feel attracted and drawn to you.

When you know that, do it and see that it always works, then you naturally feel so confident in yourself that you have the balls to be a bit of a challenge.

Itâ€¢s similar to how hot women have the guts to be a bit of a challenge, reject guys, play hard to get and so on.

She knows that guys will still try to get with her because they feel so attracted to her.

Guys will put up with her playing a bit hard to get and they will try to impress her to get a chance with her.

The same thing applies when you know how to attract women and be a bit of a challenge; women simply feel drawn to you in ways that they canâ€¢t control.

3. Talk to her as though the other guy doesnâ€¢t even cross your mind

[image: Talk to her as though the other guy doesn't even cross your mind]

Donâ€¢t even see the other guy as existing, or being part of the picture.

This is about you and her, not him, you and her.

You and her had a relationship and you and her are going to get back together.

He is irrelevant.

So, if she brings him up in conversation, just talk about something else when you can change the topic.

Donâ€¢t let him become a big part of what you and her talk about.

Make it about you and her.

Of course, donâ€¢t tell her, â€¢I donâ€¢t want to talk about himâ€¢ because thatâ€¢s insecure.

Simply change the subject when you can, rather than continuing to talk about him.

When she sees that you aren't asking her questions about him and her, or worrying if he is making her feel more love and attraction, she will feel curious as to how you can be so confident in yourself and your attractiveness and value to her.

If she brings him up and you don't become jealous, but simply change the topic when you can, she will also see that you aren't looking at him as being better than you.

You are focused on you and her.

As a result, she will feel like you and her still have a private connection that isn't over yet.

There's something there.

This will naturally cause her to miss you and want to see you.

4. Don't try to have deep and meaningful conversations about her leaving you and being with a new guy

She doesn't want to feel exhausted by having to get into long, deep and meaningful conversations about why she did what she did.

If you want her back, she will need to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

So, make her feel that.

When you interact with her, focus on flirting with her and getting her laughing and smiling, so she feels as though what you and her had isn't over.

There is still a spark between you and her and she feels it every time she interacts with you.

In many cases, I've heard back from clients who have told me their ex girlfriend (or wife) had then told the new guy that she still had feelings for her ex and was feeling confused.

This usually leads to the new guy become insecure, jealous and controlling, which then leads her right back into your arms because women are always more attracted to the more confident guy.

So, keep things light between you and her and focus on flirting with her and getting her laughing and smiling.

For example: She asks how you've been lately and rather than just saying, â€œYeah, pretty good. How about you?â€ or something standard like that, flirt with her instead.

Say something like, â€œI've been fantastic. It's such a relief not having you in my life anymoreâ€ and then pause and have a laugh, to let her know you're joking.

Then add in something like, â€œNo, just kidding. I've been fantastic and it's great that you and I can still be friends.â€

Essentially, you're flirting with her by being playfully challenging and showing her that you do still like having her in your life.

Additionally, by adding in, â€œit's great that you and I can still be friendsâ€ it makes her feel a little rejected and as though she has lost your romantic interest.

Since you will be making her feel attracted to you as you talk to her (i.e. by being confident, charming, challenging, flirtatious), she will naturally be feeling that maybe she doesn't want to just be friends with you.

That then makes her feel open to catching up with you in person to see what might happen (i.e. will she feel compelled to kiss you and have sex with you? Will she fall back in love with you and want to dump the new guy?).

5. Donât seem like youâre trying hard to impress her and win back her love

For example: Sometimes a guy will try to impress his ex by telling his ex thatâ

- Heâs working hard to get a promotion at work.
- Heâs planning on buying himself a new car.
- Other women are interested in him, but he isnât interested because only wants to be with her.
- Heâs been going to the gym to get in shape, or heâs trying to lose weight or gain weight.
- Heâs been going to a therapist to work on his issues.

Essentially, he hopes that his ex will be impressed and then want him back because of how much effort heâs putting in to improving himself.

Yet, women donât want to be with a guy who is doing everything for her.

Women are attracted to a man who does things because he wants to do them, not so he can hopefully gain a womanâs approval.

Women want a man who approves of himself right now, as is and then improves himself further because he wants to.

Additionally, women donât want to hear about their exâs âjourney of improvementâ where he goes to a therapists and tries to fix his childhood issues.

A woman just wants a man to get on with being an attractive man and not have to discuss it with her, or seek encouraging words from her.

She doesnât want to seem like a mentor to him, or like a parental figure.

She wants to feel like a guyâs girl and that can only happen if he is his own man (i.e. he does what he wants because he wants to do it, not because he hopes it will impress her).

Itâs a difficult one to understand for some guys, because on one hand, you do have to impress an ex to get her back.

However, just donât come across as though youâre trying hard to impress her to hopefully get her to say yes to taking you back.

Simply be an impressive man that she can look at and think, âWow. He has really changed. Heâs so much cooler/more confident than before. Maybe he isnât so bad after all. If I donât get back with him, other women are going to find him much more attractive now, so he might end up with a prettier woman than me. Maybe I should just give him a chance while I still can.â

3 Mistakes Guys Make When Theyâve Been Dumped in a

GIGs (Grass is Greener Syndrome) Situation

If you want to win your ex girl back, you have to make sure that what you say and do from now on reawakens her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

This is why, itâ€™s essential that you donâ€™t make any of the following mistakes that will push her even further into the arms of her new guy.

1. Assuming that she was just confused, rather than realizing that she wasnâ€™t attracted

The reality is that rather than being confused, she broke up with him due to not feeling enough attraction for him anymore (i.e. because he was too insecure, the relationship became boring and stale, he ended up being a bit too jealous or controlling).

So, if he just sits around waiting and doing nothing to improve his approach to attraction, the new guy is going to enjoy a relationship with her and will probably be attracting her in the ways that she always wanted (e.g. he is more confident, more masculine in his behavior, isnâ€™t insecure, is more driven and ambitious, knows how to put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way).

Then, before he knows it, weeks, months and maybe even a year will pass and she might still be together with the new guy.

This is why, if your ex left you due to losing feelings for you (i.e. she no longer felt enough respect, attraction and love to want to stick with you), then donâ€™t assume she is just confused and doesnâ€™t know why she is with that guy.

She almost certainly knows that he is currently making her feel more attracted than you.

If you want her back, youâ€™ve got to change your approach to attraction, so she feels more attracted to you than to him.

2. Secretly looking at her as your only decent option, so you end up coming across as needy and insecure, even when you try to hide it

[image: Secretly looking at her as your only decent option and then coming across as needy and insecure, even when you try to hide it]

If your ex gets a sense that youâ€™re lost without her and unable to move on, itâ€™s going to turn her off.

Women arenâ€™t attracted to desperation or neediness, so make sure you show her (by the way you think, talk and behave) that you are an emotionally strong, emotionally independent and confident man who is opening to being with her, but doesnâ€™t need her back to feel good about himself.

3. Not realizing that she probably isnâ€™t completely happy with you

Sometimes a guy is so happy in a relationship that he fails to notice the signs that his girlfriend (or wife) doesnâ€™t feel the same way.

He assumes sheâ€™s just being moody, or complaining about things she doesnâ€™t need to and that she will get over it.

Yet, even though she does like him in some ways, sheâ€™s just not happy with the dynamic of the relationship and how it makes her feel (e.g. he loves her way more than she loves him, he is needy for her, he gets jealous very easily because he isn't confident when being compared to other guys and worries she will easily like another guy, she can't be her true self around him and needs to be extra careful with her words or behavior because he's so emotionally sensitive).

She puts up with it for a while, hoping that he will change, but if he doesn't, then she will eventually dump him or cheat on him and leave him for what she sees as greener pastures.

So, here's the thing!

If your ex was tempted by another guy, it means she wasn't completely happy with you.

If you want her back, you need to be willing to change your approach to attraction, or focus on adjusting or changing things about yourself that were turning her off (e.g. if you were too insecure, weren't able to be the man in the relationship because she walked all over you with her confident personality, weren't able to make her feel ongoing desire for you, so she ended up feeling more like a friend).

If you are willing to make some quick adjustments (I can help you with that) and then interact with her, then you can re-attract her and get her back.

My Ex Said Everything Happens For a Reason

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 common reasons why a woman will say that:

1. She believes that the break up happened to teach you both a lesson as you move on without each other

[image: She believes that the break up happened to teach you both a lesson as you move on without each other]

Sometimes a person needs to experience a failed relationship before they feel motivated enough to improve and become an even better person (i.e. more emotionally attractive, more honest, fair, loving, emotionally strong).

So, if your ex can see that there are things about you that need to improve in order for you to make a relationship work, then she may see the break up as fate, destiny or as happening for a reason.

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

What your ex might not realize is that when you learn from your mistakes and make the appropriate adjustments, you and her can experience a relationship that is so much better than it was before.

The love you will both feel will be deeper, more meaningful and more fulfilling because it on a whole new level.

For example: A guy was too insecure in the relationship and his woman could never really look up to him and respect him, so she couldnât feel much attraction for him.

Then, he figures out how to be a confident man and then interacts with her to let her experience his confidence.

She is then able to feel new kinds of respect and attraction for him that were unavailable while they are in a relationship.

She then starts to realize that what he and her had doesnât have to be over.

In fact, may the break up happened so he could improve and they could then reach a new level as a couple.

Of course, thatâs not something you should tell your ex.

Instead, you simply have to let her experience the changes in you and naturally want you back.

Another common reason why an ex will say that everything happens for a reason isâ!

2. She believes that you and her met for a reason, butâ probably isn't sure what that reason is yet

[image: She believes that you and her met for a reason, but probably isn't sure what that reason is yet]

Sometimes, a woman will truly believe the old saying, âEverything happens for a reason,â so she will actively try to find meaning and reason when things happen to her.

In some cases, it will all make sense and she will see a clear reason.

Yet, in other cases, she will struggle to understand why something happened and may be unsure about it for years or even decades.

In your case, she might still have some feelings for you or feel a connection with you, but not be totally sure why you and her couldn't make it work and had to break up.

As a result, she will still be open to discovering the true meaning of the situation, or the reason why it happened.

The reason could be that you and her were meant to have a break for a while and then get back together, or it could be that you and her were meant to be together for a while, break up and go your separate ways.

Which way it goes is largely within your control.

How so?

If you know how to re-attract her and get her to want a relationship again, then you will get her back, but if you don't, then you will probably end up missing her for many months or years, before eventually trying to push yourself to fully move on.

Here are some ways that you can re-attract her:

- Instead of doubting your value in her life or feeling unworthy of her, be confident enough to believe in yourself as being the one for her. Don't tell her that you're the one. Make her feel that way by re-attracting her. Actions speak louder than words, so always focus on making her feel, rather than making her think.
- Instead of being needy or clingy when it comes to her, start being more emotionally independent (i.e. feel confident, happy, fulfilled and purposeful in life, with or without her). You love her and want her, but you don't need her to feel like you have a sense of identity in this world, or to feel happy or complete. She will be a great addition in your life, but she isn't the basis of it. Of course, don't tell her that. Just make her sense it. Women want to be a part of a man's life, but they don't want to be his purpose or main reason for living.
- Instead of being a nice guy who always gives in to her demands no matter how unreasonable they might be, start standing up for yourself and being more assertive in a respectful, loving way.
- Instead of letting her dominate you with her confident personality, stand up to her and put her back in her place in a loving, but assertive manner.
- Instead of treating her like she's your friend now, treat her like the sexy, desirable woman she wants to be seen as.
- Instead of sticking to polite, nice conversations, have the balls to be a bit playfully challenging when you talk to her. For example: She says, "Everything happens for a reason" and you laugh and say, "Yeah, we broke up so I didn't have to eat your horrible cooking anymore." Obviously, you are only joking. So, you add in something like, "Only kidding. I loved your cooking, but I agree – everything happens for a reason. We broke up and will never get back together again." Saying that last part makes her feel like she is losing you, which doesn't feel nice right after you made her feel attracted by using some ballsy, playfully challenging humor.

When you understand how to make a woman feel the kind of emotions that cause her to want to be with a man, it's just way too easy.

The reality is that women gravitate towards men who can make them feel attracted and feel repelled away from men who can't.

If you can make her feel attracted in ways that she really wants, but probably can't explain to you (i.e. you being more of a challenge), she will naturally feel drawn to you and want to open up and give the relationship another chance.

Another reason why she might have said, "Everything happens for a reason" is

3. She's just trying to brush off any conversation about the relationship with you, to avoid getting pulled back into it

[image: She is just trying to avoid any conversation about the relationship, to avoid being pulled back into it]

Many women know how easily they can be seduced back into a relationship, so they will usually try to avoid talking to their ex and giving him a chance to do it.

Additionally, many women often find themselves in a relationship with a good guy, who is sincere about making the relationship work, but just isn't able to make her feel the kind of attraction she wants.

As a result, a guy like that will often try to come up with many reasons why they should remain together.

Yet, if the woman doesn't feel the way he does (i.e. he is attracted to her, but she just doesn't feel the same way), then his reasons aren't going to be enough to make her feel compelled to get back with him.

Secretly, she will know that the relationship will pretty much feel the same for her, if not worse, if she got back with him, without him understanding how to attract her in the ways she actually wants.

So, she will say something, "Yes, you make some great points, but I firmly believe that everything happens for a reason. We were meant to break up. If we are meant to be together, then we won't remain broken up, but right now, I feel like it is the right thing to do. I'm sorry, but I have made my decision."

In that way, she can avoid getting seduced back into a relationship that will essentially be the same as before.

This is why, if you want to get her back, make sure that she can sense how different a relationship will be with you now, without you actually telling about it.

Don't tell her that a relationship will be different.

Just make her feel differently when she interacts with you, by using a completely new approach to attract that will excite her, interest her and compel her to give you another chance.

Another common reason why a woman will say it is

4. She simply believes that you and her were meant to break up

Sometimes, a woman will get into a relationship with a man that she doesn't feel 100% compatible with.

Yet, she will give the relationship a shot because of one or more of the following reasons:

- Her friends, coworkers or sibling have settled down into relationships and she feels left out.
- The guy is a really nice guy and even though she doesn't feel much a spark with him, she's hoping that her feelings for him will eventually grow.
- She has just come out of a long term relationship, is hurting and wants to have a new guy to make her feel better for a while.
- He seems cool, interesting and fun enough to hang out with.
- She is horny and wants to have some sex, even if the relationship doesn't last.
- She doesn't like feeling lonely and prefers to be in a relationship.
- She plans on being with him, until she finds a guy who is more suitable. She will then dump him and get with the new guy.

So, with your case, it's possible that your ex felt as though you and her were probably going to break up at some point.

As a result, she might say something like, "Everything happens for a reason," but won't tell you, "and that reason is – I never really fell in love with you completely, so I always knew this day would come. I hoped you could make me feel differently, but you didn't, so this is how it's meant to be."

Does that mean you have no chance with her now?

No.

Of course not.

You can always change how a woman feels and when you do, her thinking, behavior and actions change (i.e. she goes from thinking that the break up was meant to be, to thinking that the break up has made her realize how much she misses you and wants you back).

As a result, she then behaves differently (i.e. is nicer, more open towards you) and acts differently (i.e. texts you more, suggests catching up to say hi, or says yes when you suggest it).

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making With an Ex Who Says Everything Happens For a Reason

Regardless of why the break up happened, the most important thing to remember is that if you want your ex back, you need to reactivate her feelings for you so she wants it too.

In other words, you need to make her feel a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love, so she realizes that what you and her had isn't over.

To ensure that you are successful in making her feel that way, be sure to avoid the following mistakes:

1. Following her direction in thinking, rather than taking on the role of a man and leading the way back into a relationship via attraction

Your ex is entitled to believe whatever she wants (i.e. everything, including your break up, happens for a reason and you and her just need to accept it).

Yet, you don't have to simply follow along with her perception of the reason for the break up. From your perspective, the reason for the break up can be that you level up as a man and then get her back.

Of course, you shouldn't try to tell her that.

Instead, you should just make her feel differently when she interacts with you, so she knows that a relationship with you would be so much better this time around.

Don't make the mistake that other guys make, where they hear their ex woman say something and then think it means it's final and he can't change how she feels.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Trying to discuss your way back into a relationship by talking about you and her as a couple, what went wrong and how you both could have done things differently

Even if you have completely good intentions with her when you try to discuss the relationship, what went wrong and what you and her can do to fix things, it's just not the most effective approach to use.

Mainly because it reminds her of all the problems, lets her see that you still really don't know what to do instead and overall, makes her feel like a relationship with you is just too much work.

She wants to be able to feel like love flows when you and her interact, rather than feeling like the love seem forced, awkward or stuck when it comes to you and her.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Not realizing that a woman can change her mind about a break up, even when she originally thought it was permanent

Just because a woman says that it's over, it doesn't mean she will feel that way tomorrow, next week or next month after you've reactivated her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Women change how they feel all the time.

So, don't give up hope just because she said that everything happens for a reason, or that the break up is meant to be or something like that.

Instead, just take control of the situation by actively making her feel attracted to you again, so she naturally begins to think and feel differently when it comes to you.

Let her sense that there is still hope for you and her, because she now feels a real spark with you again.

Dumped Because I Fell in Love Too Fast

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

A lot of guys make that mistake with a woman, but are still able to get her back.

Here are 5 things you can do to get her back into a relationship and then make her love you more than she did before:

1. Tell her that you accept the break up and want to catch up as friends to say goodbye

This makes a woman feel like she is losing you and your loving, devoted interest in her, which causes her to feel a similar type of emotional pain you felt when she left you.

Itâs much less painful, but painful nonetheless.

When she is feeling that emotional pain, she will naturally want to stop it by trying to keep things open between you and her, rather than closing you off completely.

So, regardless of what your ex is saying right now (e.g. she wants space, she thinks itâs better if you donât talk to each other anymore), donât make the mistake of thinking that itâs completely over.

Be bold enough to get her on a phone call, so you can begin the ex back process with her.

On the call, tell her (in a confident, easy-going manner) that you accept the break up and only want to meet up as friends to say goodbye, before you and her go your separate ways in life.

So, after the initial pleasantries (i.e. âHey, howâve you been?â) and a bit of banter where you make her smile and feel comfortable talking to you, go ahead and tell her.

You can say something along the lines of, âAnyway, I just wanted to say that even though I initially felt a bit shocked by your decision to break up, Iâm now totally okay with it. I fully accept your decision. Itâs over and weâre never getting back together. I accept that. The only thing I ask though is that at least catch up as friends one more time, so that we can say goodbye to each other in a mature way and without any negative emotions getting in the way.â

She might initially be a bit resistant to the idea and may respond with something like, âNo, I donât want to meet up with youâ or, âI donât think thatâs a good idea.â

Regardless of what she says though, donât get upset or start thinking, âOh no! This isnât working! Sheâs not interested. Itâs hopeless. Iâve lost her forever!â

Youâve got to understand that a woman will often initially say no, but then say yes if you can remain calm, confident and get her to feel good about saying yes.

Youâve got to be able to handle that part of relationships with women, otherwise you will always struggle.

So, if she says no, just remain calm and say in a confident, relaxed tone of voice, âHey, itâs just a catch up as friends. Itâs not a big deal. It doesnât mean weâre getting back together and I can assure that Iâm not going to ask you for that. I just want to say goodbye in a mature way and allow us to part ways without any negative feelings. So, which day this week suits you best? Iâm free on Tuesday and Wednesday. Which of those days is best for you?â

In almost all cases, a woman will then agree to catch up, even if itâ€™s just so she can end things and move on.

However, donâ€™t worry about her potential reasons for meeting up with you.

Just get to the meet up, so you can re-attract her and get her to want to be back with you.

Before you meet up with her, make sure that youâ€™

2. Prepare yourself to offer her a completely different attraction experience during the meet up

[image: Prepare yourself to offer her a completely different attraction experience during the meet up]

Essentially, what this means is that you need to make sure your approach to attraction with your ex from now on, is very different to what it used to be before she dumped you.

If you get to the meet up with her and end up talking and interacting with her in a way that doesnâ€™t make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, then she wonâ€™t feel motivated to get back with you.

This is why, itâ€™s essential that you prepare yourself to make your ex feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you when you see her.

When you meet up with her, you can:

- Adjust your approach and show her by way of your attitude, behavior, conversation style and actions that youâ€™re no longer the guy she broke up with (e.g. if you were too needy and clingy before, youâ€™re now more emotionally independent, if you were a sappy romantic before, youâ€™re now more of a challenge).
- React differently to what she says and does (e.g. if sheâ€™s being closed off, cold and distant, rather than being extra nice and sweet to her in the hope that she will open up, use ballsy, challenging humor to bring down her defenses instead. Women love that type of humor, as long as you are doing it in good spirits). An example is if she says, â€œI just donâ€™t know if weâ€™re a good match,â€ and you laugh and say, â€œYou donâ€™t know much at all. You were always pretty ditzyâ€ and let her see that youâ€™re joking, rather than being serious and pleading with her by saying something like, â€œNo, we are a good match and I love you. Please just give me a chance to show you that we can make this work.â€
- Make her feel feminine and girly in your presence by thinking, talking, behaving, feeling and acting in a more masculine way, rather than being emotionally sensitive around her and making her feel more dominant and â€œmasculineâ€ than you.
- Believe in yourself and in your value to her, rather than feel unworthy. Women want to see that you feel worthy, regardless of how they are treating you (i.e. dumping you for falling in love too fast). Women respond positively to confidence and negatively to insecurity. So, be confident in yourself, even when you feel like you deserve to feel insecure. Always believe in yourself no matter what.

3. Let her see that youâ€™ve calmed down and are no longer Mr. Ready to Commit Right Now and instead, have become a bit of a challenge

[image: Let her see that you are no longer Mr Ready to Commit Right Now and have become a challenge]

If a woman dumped you because you fell in love too fast, it will usually be because she wants a guy who is more of a challenge.

In other words, a guy who makes her feel the need to impress him, win him over and hopefully get him to commit to her eventually.

Women don't go around saying that because they don't want guys to get the wrong idea and start treating women badly, saying they will never commit and so on.

Instead, women just gravitate towards men who can offer them that attraction and relationship experience.

So, when you next interact with her your ex, let her feel as though you're not in a hurry to get her back.

Instead, you are able to remain calm and use humor, flirt with her and challenge her without expecting anything in return.

When you do that, she will immediately begin to feel more attracted to you and will want to experience more of what you are now able to offer her.

Yet, if you use the same old approach and essentially give her the sense that you're ready to commit if she is, then there's no challenge or excitement for her.

4. Flirt with her and make her smile and laugh, so she feels good around you

[image: Flirt with her and make her smile and laugh, so she feels good around you]

Some guys assume that they are no longer allowed or welcome to flirt with a woman after she breaks up with them.

A guy like that will switch into just being nice, friendly and polite when talking to her or texting her.

Yet, there are no rules that say you can't flirt with an ex.

You can.

In fact, it's one of the fastest ways to make her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

For example: When you meet up and see her looking pretty, don't be afraid to smile, look her up and down and say, â€œWow, someone's looking pretty.â€

That does not give her too much power or show too much interest or any other insecure thing that some guys worry about.

As a man, you can freely say those things without appearing needy or desperate and instead, appearing confident as you flirt with her.

How?

Don't say it from a needy place (i.e. don't say it thinking, â€œI hope this makes her want me backâ€).

Just say it because you're a confident, self-assured man who isn't afraid to express his attraction and knows that no matter what he says, he is always in the one up position in terms of dominance and value.

When you come from that place, women feel magnetically attracted to you.

Itâ€™s not something women tell me though, of course.

Women donâ€™t want men getting the wrong idea and thinking that they need to act like they are so much better than a woman, or so much more dominant.

Instead, women simply gravitate towards men who understand how a womanâ€™s attraction really works.

Itâ€™s a private understanding between men and women that doesnâ€™t need to be spoken about between men and women.

Instead, you just need to do it.

When you do, women feel attracted to you.

5. Leave the meet up with her feeling like she wants to see you again, but you are saying goodbye

If youâ€™ve been doing things right (i.e. being more challenging, flirting with her, remaining confident no matter what she says or does to make you doubt yourself), she will begin to show signs that sheâ€™s feeling attracted to you.

This is a very crucial point in the interaction that can either you result in making her want you more or less.

For example: When you see her signs of attraction, you may be tempted to start talking about getting back together.

Donâ€™t do that though.

Unless she specifically says, *â€œI want to get back together,*â€™ just avoid going there in the conversation.

If you see her signs of attraction and begin hinting at, asking or pushing for a relationship, she will then think something like, *â€œI almost got fooled into believing heâ€™d changed, but I see now that it was all an act. He is still totally in love with me and wants to commit. He canâ€™t offer me the kind of experience I want. Heâ€™s just not aware of how to be a challenge. Heâ€™s too easy for me. I donâ€™t want that. I want to feel excited. Heâ€™s excited, but Iâ€™m not.*â€™

So, donâ€™t make that mistake of hinting at, asking for or pushing for a relationship.

Instead, when you see that she is feeling attracted to you and possibly even hinting at catching up again, start to end the interaction to stick to the promise you made her (i.e. that you were only catching up as friends and you werenâ€™t going to try to get her back).

*â€œAnyway, Iâ€™m glad we were able to catch up and say goodbye as friends. I have to go now, so take care of yourself, okay?*â€™

Then, after she acknowledges that the meet up is ending (e.g. she says something like, *â€œOh, okay. Bye*â€™), give her a goodbye hug if she seems open and then leave.

She will then be left feeling like she has lost you and itâ€™s all her fault.

As a result, she will feel compelled to contact you and see you again.

So, donâ€™t worry about saying goodbye and walking away at the meet up.

It wonâ€™t be a final goodbye because you will have sparked her feelings for you (by being a bit of a challenge and giving her that elusive feelings she was missing), so she will naturally want to see you again.

3 Things to Avoid When Getting an Ex Back Who Dumped You For Falling in Love Too Fast

1. Apologizing for moving too fast to hopefully get her to take pity on you and give you another chance

A guy apologizing to his ex for moving too fast might initially seem like a good idea.

After all, when someone apologizes, the other person usually accepts it.

So, he hopes that she will see how remorseful and sorry he is and then give him another chance.

Then, everything will be okay again.

Yet, regardless of how sincere his apology might be, it's not actually the thing that will convince her to forgive him and give him another chance.

Why?

Apologizing doesn't actually get to the core of the problem (i.e. that he is more in love with her than she is with him).

Additionally, in most cases, a woman can see right through a guy's secret intentions (i.e. he is hoping that his apology will make her feel obliged to give him another chance out of pity).

Yet, women don't want to be with a guy out of pity.

So, here's the thing!

There's nothing wrong with apologizing to your ex for moving too fast, especially if you use humor to laugh at yourself and show her that you've learned from your past mistake (e.g. I have to laugh at myself now. I get it. I fell for you too fast and it was probably funny for you to see. Yet, now I don't feel anything for you, so it's all good and then laugh and say, "Just kidding. I like you, but I accept the break up and I'm sorry for being such a sappy romantic guy with you. You had that effect on me.")

If you apologize in that way, she can then see that you've calmed down and gained control over your emotions, rather than continuing to be a lovesick puppy.

As a result, she will feel new kinds of respect and attraction for you for being man enough to learn and grow from your mistake.

2. Not being able to slow down because you don't have the right balance in life

The right balance as a man, is that your biggest goals, dreams and ambitions are your first priority and a woman is your second priority.

That doesn't mean you treat a woman as though she isn't important, or as though she isn't valuable to you.

Instead, it means that you love her and are happy to have her in your life, but your life isn't all about her.

That's what women actually want.

Unfortunately, many guys don't realize that until it's too late.

So, a guy will make his woman the centre of his world (i.e. he is essentially living for her, she is his main reason for happiness, everything he does, he does for her, he only wants to focus on the relationship with her and doesn't really care about his big dreams or ambitions anymore because he has her), which will cause her to lose respect for him for being too emotionally dependent on her (i.e being too needy).

This is why, you must be able to show your ex that even though you still care about her and want her back, you don't actually need her back to feel happy, fulfilled or confident in yourself.

Your happiness, confidence and feelings of fulfillment come from you following through on your biggest goals, dreams and ambitions in life.

You don't have to achieve them overnight or even within the next year, but you do need to focus on them and start making real progress.

When she can see that you're no longer being an emotionally needy guy and have become your own man, her guard will come down.

She will then begin to open herself up to the idea of giving you another chance.

On the other hand, if she gets a sense that you desperately need her back because you can't cope without her, she will feel happy with her decision to dump you and will want to continue moving on without you.

Another mistake to avoid making is!

3. Not realizing that you can still be a good guy and be a challenge

Being a challenge to a woman doesn't mean you have to be mean to her, treat her badly and make her feel disrespected.

Instead, it's about making her feel loved and appreciated, while at the same time creating a desire inside of her to impress you and treat you well, otherwise you might lose interest in her.

If you can offer her that type of attraction experience, she will naturally want to hold on to you because she knows how difficult that desire is to find (i.e. because most guys are just too nice, easy and willing to be with her, without her really having to do anything to impress them).

So, go ahead and continue being a good guy to your ex, but just make sure that you're also being a challenge to her, so she gets to experience the feeling she really wants when in a relationship with a man.

My Ex Treats Me Like Her Boyfriend, But Doesn't Want a Relationship

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 common reasons why a woman will do that to her ex and how you can turn things around and get her back into a relationship:

1. She is stringing you along while she secretly tries to move on [image: She is stringing you along, while she secretly tries to move on]

Some women don't like the idea of their ex finding a new woman and moving on before they do. This is why a woman will often string an ex guy along (i.e. give him false hope that she still has feelings for him and they might get back together sometime in the future,) while she secretly focuses on finding a new man.

When she does find a new man, a woman will usually then tell her ex that she's with someone else and ask that he leave her alone from now on, or not contact her because she doesn't want him to ruin her new relationship.

Alternatively, rather than telling him that she is seeing someone else, she will simply respond less and less to his texts, avoid his calls and is generally be a bit colder towards him when they talk.

If he then asks, â€œIs there someone else?â€ she can then say something like, â€œI will tell you, but promise not to get angry.â€

She can then break his heart all over again by telling him that she is seeing someone else now.

Don't let that happen to you.

If you want to be her boyfriend again, focus on making her feel attracted to you in ways that will make her want a relationship.

In other words, level up and start being the kind of man she is now looking for.

When you do that, she will begin to realize that she doesn't need to look elsewhere because you are what she wants.

2. She still loves you as a friend, but doesn't feel a spark with you anymore

[image: She still loves you, but doesn't feel a spark with you anymore]

In some cases, a woman will realize that even though there's no sexual spark anymore, she still likes having her ex around because she likes him as a person and he's a really good guy.

By approaching the break up in that way, they can continue doing some of the fun things they used to do as a couple (e.g. text, call each other, go out to restaurants, watch movies at the cinema together, go out shopping).

So, she doesn't really feel like she is losing anything and can comfortably move on behind his back (i.e. by texting other guys, going on dates, eventually hooking up with a new guy).

Here's the thing|

Just because your ex is comfortable keeping you in her life and enjoying the benefits of having a â€œboyfriendâ€ without the commitment of a relationship, it doesn't mean you have to accept it.

Of course, you shouldn't say, â€œI don't want you treating me like your boyfriend if you don't want a relationship with me. I want a relationship or nothing,â€ because she will likely then say something along the lines of, â€œOkay, well I guess we should stop seeing each other then. Sorry, I can't give you what you want.â€

Instead, what you need to do is use interactions with her from now on to spark her sexual feelings for you again (e.g. by being more manly around her, rather than letting her dominate you with her confident personality, turning conversations into laughter and fun, rather than being too serious, treating her like a desirable woman, rather than like a good friend).

The more you relight the spark between you and her, the more she will believe that being your girl again is what she wants.

For her, getting back together will be about her following her heart and surrendering to the exciting feelings of sexual and romantic desire that she's feeling for you again.

So, she will essentially be getting back into a relationship with you for her own reasons, without you having to waste your time and energy trying to plead with her or convince her based on exhausting, emotional conversations.

3. She doesn't want to give you a relationship because you haven't really changed

If your ex got back into a relationship with you now, would it really be much different?

Have you changed enough, to the point where she is going to feel very different around you now (i.e. feel the need to impress you, feel like she is lucky to have you, feel girly in comparison to your masculine approach to her)?

If she gets back with you without seeing that you've truly changed, then she fears that you won't be motivated to follow through on the changes she really wants to see in you.

As a result, the relationship will end up being the same as before.

This is why, you need to change some of the things that are truly important to her.

If you're unsure of what you might need to change, here are a few questions to ask yourself to find out:

- Do you make her feel like a hot, sexy woman when she's with you, or does she feel more like a non-sexual friend?
- Are you manly and emotionally strong with her, or are you a bit too soft and docile around her to the point where she feels like the more emotionally strong and dominant one?
- Do you approach the relationship in a way that makes her want to be a good, loving woman to you, or does she feel like she can treat you as badly as she wants and you will just put up with it?
- Are you confident and self-assured around her, or do you become insecure and unsure of yourself when she's being moody or closed off towards you?

If you're not offering her the kind of attraction experience she wants in a relationship, she simply won't feel compelled to get back with you.

Yet, when you begin to offer her the attraction experience she always wanted from you but didn't get, she will naturally begin to look at you differently.

She will realize that a relationship with you would feel so much better than it did in the past and as a result, she will become open to getting back with you.

4. She's treating you well to make you feel obligated to treat her well in return

Sometimes, a woman wants her ex to feel as though she will get angry and cut him out of her life, if he doesn't appreciate the fact that she is being friendly towards him even though they've broken up.

As a result, a guy might make the mistake of feeling obligated to accept what she's offering (i.e. a relationship without commitment or in some cases, without any sex), because he is afraid he might lose her for real if he says anything.

5. She is currently open to having casual sex with you and seeing where it goes, but she won't tell you that [image: She is currently open to having casual sex with you and seeing where it goes, but she won't tell you that]

Sometimes a woman will want to keep an ex boyfriend around for casual sex and just see how things go (i.e. does she fall back in love with him based on the adjustments he makes, or does she continue to see that a relationship just won't work because he still doesn't understand how to attract her in the ways she really wants?).

Yet, a guy won't always know that and as a result, he will just talk to her like a friend and end up placing himself in the friend zone.

Then, if she starts looking at him as just a friend now, she will start looking at other men to satisfy her sexual and romantic desires.

So, if your gut instinct is telling you that she is open to having sex, then go ahead and do that.

However, make sure that you also make adjustments to your behavior around her, so she can see that a relationship with you really would be different this time around.

4 Mistakes That Can Reduce Your Chances of Getting a Relationship With Your Ex Again

1. Saying that you want a real boyfriend-girlfriend relationship or nothing

Sometimes a guy will be pushing for a relationship and essentially giving his ex an ultimatum like, It's either a relationship or nothing.

Then, the woman will say something like, Okay, fine. It's nothing then. I'm sorry, but I can't give you what you want. I don't want a relationship and you don't seem to understand that. So, we should just go our separate ways. Please stop contacting me from now on and I will do the same with you.

Itâ€™s an approach that rarely works because women donâ€™t like to feel as though they are being pressured into giving an ex another chance.

Additionally, if a woman doesnâ€™t feel the respect, attraction and love that he feels for her (i.e. she doesnâ€™t have feelings for him) and heâ€™s pushing for a relationship, then it can make her feel resentful towards him.

She can end up feeling like he is being selfish and just trying to get what he wants, even though he isnâ€™t offering her what she wants (i.e. a different attraction experience).

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

2. Letting her see that you really donâ€™t have any other options with women

[image: Letting her see that you don't really have any other options with women]

If a woman senses that her ex wants a relationship because he would struggle to find a new, quality woman, it can make her feel as though the only reason he is clinging on is due to desperation, rather than real love.

Since women arenâ€™t attracted to desperate men, she will then feel more determined not to get back with him and just move on.

So, if you want a relationship with your ex, donâ€™t make her feel as though itâ€™s because you canâ€™t find another quality woman to replace her with.

3. Believing her when she says that she isnâ€™t interested in dating anyone else right now

Sometimes a guy might believe that his ex girlfriend is not the sort of woman to immediately, or very quickly begin hooking up with a new guy after a break up.

Yet, days or weeks later, he is surprised to find that she is dating other guys or has already slept with a new guy, while heâ€™s been sitting around in the background as her nice, dependable ex boyfriend.

So, if your ex has been saying things like, â€œIâ€™m not going to date anyone else either. I just want to be on my own for a while,â€ you need to be prepared for the fact that she might not be telling you the 100% truth.

Secretly, she might be texting other guys, going on dates or planning to go on a date with a guy she has a crush on, or a guy who has had a crush on her and has been waiting for her to end the relationship with you.

Either way, donâ€™t rely on her simply saying that sheâ€™s not going to be dating anyone else right now.

She can say one thing today and do something completely different tomorrow.

That same principle applies to her desire for a relationship with you.

Lately, you may have been turning her off the idea of having a relationship with you, but can now start making her want it by using a new approach.

Finally, another mistake to avoid in a situation like yours isâ€¦

4. Assuming that she will become desperate and want you back badly if you stop contacting her

That approach can make her initially curious, but if she doesn't have much or any sexual or romantic feelings for you anymore, she will simply see it as the relationship breaking up and fading away.

Additionally, if she meets new men who make her feel a lot of sexual and romantic attraction, she will care less and less that you're not contacting her anymore.

Then, by the time you contact her again (hoping that not contacting her has made her desperately want you back), she might say something like, â€œHey! How have you been?â€œ and then tell you that she has a new boyfriend and is in love with him.

Don't let that happen to you.

My Ex Girlfriend Shouts at Me When I Try to Talk to Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why a woman will behave that way towards an ex boyfriend:

1. She is trying to get you to react badly, so she has more of a reason to remain broken up with you

[image: She is trying to get you to react badly, so she has more of a reason to remain broken up with you]

When a guy tries to talk to his ex girlfriend, but she is shouting at him and making things difficult, it can cause him to feel very frustrated or even angry.

If he becomes angry and shouts back at her, she can use that as another reason to remain broken up with him (i.e. say that he is 'scaring her' or that she's had enough of his bad treatment of her and so on).

For example: A guy might get angry with her when she shouts at him.

He might then shout back and say things like, What the hell is wrong with you? I'm trying to talk to you and you're fking shouting at me. Why don't you just SHUT UP for a minute and let me talk!

That kind of reaction might be exactly what she's been waiting for, so she can then say something along the lines of, Why are you shouting at me? You're so angry these days. You scare me now. I mean, what would stop you from becoming violent if I keep talking to you or hanging out with you? I'm sorry, but I can't risk being with a man who loses control of his emotions so easily. You need help. Goodbye. It's over.

Alternatively, rather than getting angry, a guy might become upset and overly emotional.

He will beg, plead and in extreme cases, even cry to her and say things like, Why are you doing this to me? Please, just give me a chance. Yes, I made some mistakes, but I don't deserve to have you shout at me when I try to talk to you. I have treated you so well in the past. The least you could do is show me some respect. I love you. I care about you. Please don't do this to me.

She can then use that (i.e. him crying, pleading with her) against him and say something like, You really need to grow up. I don't know why you're crying. It's really quite pathetic. I don't want you contacting me anymore. It's over. Goodbye.

Getting him to react in an angry, or overly emotional way, then gives her more reasons to remain broken up and not give him another chance.

This is why, if you want your ex to stop shouting at you when you try to talk to her and even begin regretting her decision to break up, you need to maintain control of your emotions around her no matter what she says or does.

When she notices that you're being calm and relaxed and are maintaining your confidence, she will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect for you.

When she respects you, she will also begin to feel attracted to you and open up to being with you again.

2. She is abusing the feeling of power she now has over you

[image: She is abusing the feeling of power she has over you now]

Some guys assume that the best tactic to use to get an ex girlfriend back is to be nice to her and put up with her moods and bad treatment.

A guy like that will hope that if he is nice enough to her, she will eventually take pity on him and give him another chance.

Yet, women see that type of nice guy reaction from a guy as being desperate and desperation isn't attractive to women.

Additionally, women just can't respect men who are desperate for them.

It just doesn't work.

Here's the thing!

A woman will often give the impression that she's the one calling the shots (and prefers it that way), but she doesn't.

The reality is that women simply do not respect men who believe their act of dominance.

Women know that they are not the more dominant ones when it comes to sexual, romantic relationships between men and women.

They also don't want to be the dominant ones.

A woman wants to be with a man who has the confidence to stand up to her in a dominant, but loving way, rather than allowing himself to be walked all over by her.

This is why, if you take your ex's drama (i.e. her shouting at you) too seriously, she won't be able to respect you because she will feel as though she is the one in control.

3. She is testing to see if you are man enough to handle her outbursts and get her to respect you again

[image: She is testing to see if you are man enough to handle her outbursts and get her to respect you again]

In some cases, a woman will shout at her ex as a way of seeing if he's man enough to handle a woman like her now (due to her changing after a break up), or if she should remain broken up with him and go for a more confident, masculine man.

She will shout, get angry and become dramatic and look to see how he responds.

For example:

- Does he crumble and start doubting that he has a chance with her?
- Does he beg and plead with her to tell him what he's doing wrong?
- Does he walk away and give up on getting her back just because she's being mean to him?
- Does he suck up to her in the hope that she will be nice to him?

If he reacts in any of those ways, she will begin to feel as though he's not the kind of man she can look up to and respect (i.e. because he's too emotionally weak and sensitive).

As a result, she will push him away by saying something like, â€œLook, I've had enough, okay?

Itâ€™s over. Just leave me alone. Go away and never contact me again.â€™

She might then block his number, mark his email as spam and unfriend him on social media.

On the other hand, if her ex remains calm and confident no matter how loudly she shouts at him, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling a renewed sense of respect for him as a man.

When she feels that respect, she will then start to feel attracted to him again.

From there, her defenses will come down and she will naturally start to open up to the possibility of getting back together.

Alternatively, she will open up to hooking up with him again to see how she feels afterwards.

4. She knows you will put up with it and pretty much any other bad behavior she dishes out

When a woman knows that she can get away with treating a guy badly, it often brings out a nasty side to her (e.g. unloving, distant, selfish, inconsiderate, mean).

On the other hand, when a woman feels as though she needs to treat her man well, or else she could lose him, it brings out a different side to her.

To keep him happy and avoid losing him, she will be much more loving, affectionate, kind, thoughtful and nice towards him in the relationship.

Now that you and her have broken up, the same rules still apply.

If you want to bring out her good side, you need to make her feel so respectful and attracted to the new and improved you that she doesnâ€™t want to treat you badly.

Suddenly, she fears that if she loses you, she will regret it and miss you.

As a result, she will want to stop shouting and creating drama and instead, start being more friendly and open when talking to you.

5. She wants you to hate her, so you donâ€™t want to be with her anymore

If a guy wonâ€™t give up on trying to get his ex girlfriend back, she might begin treating him badly (e.g. by shouting at him when he tries to talk to her, being rude, being selfish, insulting him), so he can start to hate her.

She hopes that he will think something like, â€™What a bitch. Who needs a woman like her anyway?! Forget it. Iâ€™m over her. Iâ€™m not interested in getting her back anymore. Screw her. Iâ€™m going to move onâ€™ and then walk away.

She can then get on with her life and find herself a new man to get into a relationship with.

Hereâ€™s the thing thoughâ€¦

If you want her back, donâ€™t fall for her attempts to make you hate her, so you then feel motivated to find a new woman instead.

If you want her back, maintain control of your emotions and guide her through the ex back process.

Part of that process is re-attracting her.

So, rather than getting upset when she shouts at you, focus on making her feel attracted by remaining confident, using humor and flirting with her to create sparks between you and her.

When she notices that youâ€™re not falling for her fake drama and beginning to hate her and sheâs falling back in love with you, then she will naturally feel drawn to the idea of getting back with you.

You can then guide her back into a relationship with you thatâs based on a whole new level of respect, attraction and love.

It will feel more mature, deep, exciting and fulfilling for the both of you.

So, go for it.

4 Mistakes to Avoid Making if She Shouts at You Again

1. Appearing intimidated by her outbursts

[image: Appearing intimidated by her outbursts]

Women arenât attracted to men who are intimidated by them.

So, when your ex girlfriend is acting angry and shouting at you, she doesnât want you to take her dominant act so seriously.

She wants you to look at her as a girl and you as the man.

Sheâs not more powerful than you.

As a result, you donât feel intimidated or scared when she is angry, shouting or being ridiculous.

Instead, you remain calm, confident and in control like a real man.

You still treat her well and listen to her, but you donât get intimidated and you donât take her emotional outbursts so seriously.

When your ex notices that, she will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

2. Becoming more angry and aggressive than her to hopefully get her to respect you

In most cases, tit for tat doesnât work in relationships (i.e. if she gets angry, you get angry, or if she shouts, you shout).

So, just because sheâs behaving like an out of control brat, it doesnât mean you should copy her.

If you do, she will simply blame the drama on you and make you out to be the angrier one, or say that sheâs scared of you now or something like that.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

3. Not getting to the core reasons why she doesnât feel the need to respect you

A woman will usually disrespect a man because heâs given her a number of reasons to not respect him.

For example:

- He became too clingy and needy, so she felt like she was responsible for his emotional well being.
- He lost confidence in his value to her, so she felt like she was too good for him.

- He always seems to become nervous and unsure of him when she was being moody, so she felt like he couldn't handle a girl like her.
- He stopped making decisions in case she didn't like what he decided and just went along with what she wanted, so she felt like he lacked masculinity.

When you know the core reasons why she lost respect, you can then quickly make some adjustments and interact with her.

When you do, she experiences newfound feelings of respect and attraction for you, based on the man you have become.

Suddenly, she starts feeling like what you and her had isn't over yet.

As a result, she opens up to seeing you or being with you.

4. Constantly trying to push for a relationship, even though she is treating you badly and currently isn't attracted to you

If you continue to push for a relationship with a woman who is disrespecting you, then you are just rewarding her bad behavior.

When you do that, a woman can't respect you and if she can't respect you, she will struggle to feel attracted to you.

Without respect and attraction, she's not going to feel like being in a relationship with you.

So, from now on, use interactions with your ex girlfriend to reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

When you approach the ex back process correctly, she naturally wants to be back with you, or at least give you another chance to see how things go.

How to Let Go of a Relationship and Move On

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 optional approaches to let her go of her and move on.

Option 1: Re-attract her, have sex with her one last time and then move on [image: Re-attract her, have sex with her one last time and then move on]

Doing that gets rid of the feeling of being rejected by her because she does want you again.

She becomes attracted, you hook up with her and she really wants it.

It's like a little victory for yourself to see that you haven't been totally rejected by her and left behind.

After hooking up with her one last time, you can then move on, knowing that she did want you, but you decided to just move on and find a new woman.

So, start by interacting with your ex over the phone (an audio or video phone call is best, rather than just sticking to texts) and in person.

Don't act like a neutral friend who just wants to be her text buddy, or call her to see how she is doing.

Instead, adding some flirting to create a spark and build sexual tension between you and her again.

Sexual tension happens when a man and a woman feel sexual desire for each other, but can't immediately release it with kissing and sex (e.g. because they are exes and it doesn't seem appropriate, they are talking over the phone or are in a public place, so it's impossible to just start kissing and having sex in that moment).

It's a powerful emotional state that makes both men and women do whatever they can to get to the point where they can kiss and have sex.

So, the more sexual tension you can build between you and her (you can do it during a 2-5 minute conversation with her), the more compelled she will feel to meet up with you and release the sexual tension with kissing and sex.

As a result, she will almost certainly say yes to meeting up for a coffee, or hanging out at your place or hers.

Then, you and her can have make up sex, which is enjoyable for both the person who got dumped and the dumper.

It can end up being quite an overwhelming (in a good way), emotional experience for the woman, where she realizes that what you and her had isn't over.

She still feels like she wants to be with you and keep seeing you.

Yet, you can then be the one who decides to end the relationship and move on.

Of course, you also have the option of sticking with the relationship as well.

The choice will be yours.

Another approach to let go of a relationship and move on isâ

Option 2: Re-attract her, make her want you back, don't have sex with her and leave with her wanting more, so you can walk away as the dumper

[image: Re-attract her, make her want you back, but don't have sex with her. Leave her wanting more, so you can walk away as the dumper this time]

This causes her to feel like there is unresolved sexual tension between you and her.

She wants you sexually and also feels romantically attracted to you again, but you are walking away.

Like the first option, it comes a little victory for you where you aren't the one who got dumped in the end.

She did.

That alone will help you move on, because you're not stuck feeling like you've been rejected, or that you're not attractive enough or lovable.

For her, you are the one that got away.

From then on, she will always look back and regret that she wasn't able to get back with you and have another shot.

Of course, that's not the only way to make an ex regret breaking up with you and then want you back!

Another approach to let go of a relationship and move on is Option 3: Have a final conversation with her to let her know that you accept the break up. Then, start sleeping with new women who you see as being more attractive than her

[image: Have a final conversation with her to let her know that you accept the break up]

For example: You might say something along the lines of, "Hey, I know that I didn't initially accept your decision to break up, but I just want you to know that I now completely accept that it's over between us and I'm not going to bother you again about changing your mind or anything like that. We can now both move on and be happy, without feeling like we're holding on to any negative baggage from the past. I wish you all the best."

By saying something like that to your ex, you're effectively letting her know that you're no longer sitting around missing her and hoping she will somehow change her mind and give you another chance.

This naturally awakens some feelings of respect for you for being an emotionally strong man, rather than an emotional wuss who can't function without his ex woman.

When she feels some respect for you, she will also start to feel a bit attracted to you again, but in a new way.

She might not do anything about it though, of course, but she will be feeling.

Then, when she sees you moving on with women that she potentially sees as more attractive than her, she will feel even more respect and attraction for you.

If you happen to see the new women as being more attractive than her, then you will definitely feel a lot better about letting go of your ex and moving on.

Another approach to let go of a relationship and move on isâ€¦!

Option 4: Improve your ability to attract high quality, beautiful women and start sleeping with them

[image: Improve your ability to attract high quality, beautiful women and start sleeping with them]

There's probably no faster way to get over a woman and start moving on, than to sleep with a new, high quality woman.

Of course, not every guy knows how to do that, so let me begin to help you understand how it works. Almost all women are attracted to or turned off by certain qualities, personality traits and behaviors in a man.

These are things that you can literally learn how to display and when you do, women feel attracted to you.

For example: Some qualities, behaviors and personality traits that can make a woman feel drawn to a man are thatâ€¦!

- He maintains his confidence with her, regardless of what she says or does to unsettle him or make him doubt himself.
- He is loving, caring and attentive, without being needy or clingy.
- He makes her feel like a sexy, desirable woman in his presence, rather than making her feel like a friend or buddy.
- He has his own goals, ambitions, friendships, hobbies and interests that are separate from his relationship with her.
- He stands up to her in a loving way when sheâ€™s behaving badly.
- He doesnâ€™t let her disrespect him or be rude to him and he also doesnâ€™t disrespect her.
- He doesnâ€™t sulk or get upset when she creates drama and instead, he uses humor to change her mood and lighten things up.
- He has a plan for his life (and by association hers) and heâ€™s actively pursuing that plan.
- He treats her well, but also motivates her to be a good woman to him and treat him well in return.
- Heâ€™s a good guy, but heâ€™s also a bit of challenge, so she feels like she has to work hard to impress him and keep him interested in her.

On the other hand, some unattractive qualities, behaviors and personality traits that women feel turned off by in a man areâ€¦!

- He is too self-absorbed (e.g. only cares about his work, going to the gym, playing video games, watching TV, hanging with friends) and as a result, he takes her for granted.
- He is insecure about his value to her and it makes him needy, clingy, controlling or jealous.
- He lets her walk all over him and dominate him with her confident personality because he fears her leaving him.
- He loses control of his emotions when she creates drama, or throws a tantrum.
- He is drifting through his life without a plan, or is just settling for a mediocre life and expecting her to stick around and accept that for life.
- He does everything he can to make her happy, rather than creating a balanced relationship where both of them want to make each other happy.

- She ends up feeling turned off because there is no challenge for her and she doesn't feel accountable to him.
- He has nothing important going on in his life other than his relationship with her (i.e. he isn't following through on his biggest dreams, ambitions and goals in life).

Those are some examples of things that attract, or repel a woman.

When you know how to attract women, they simply feel drawn to you.

They really like you and want to be with you.

You can then select from women you want.

Not many guys know how to do it, so they just settle for whatever they can get and end up unhappy in the long run.

If you want to truly let go of the relationship you had with your ex and move on, then you need to understand what makes women feel attracted to men and then start doing it.

You will see an instant improved response from women and it will become stronger and stronger every day from then on.

You literally become more attractive to women every day, because you understand and then embody the traits that are naturally attractive to them.

As a result, you can access higher quality women and even have your choice of them.

It might seem impossible for you at this point, but you're not there yet.

You will be though if you start and then continue your journey of becoming more and more attractive to women every day from now on.

4 Problems Men Run Into When Trying to Let Go of a Relationship and Move On

1. Trying to forget her, but secretly knowing that she was the best girl you have ever had

[image: Trying to forget her, but secretly knowing that she was the best girl you have ever had]

Some guys don't realize that it's possible to get a woman back after a break up, or they do know it's possible, but simply don't know how to do it.

Additionally, in many cases, a man will get dumped by a woman who seems like she wants nothing to do with him anymore.

Her words, behavior and actions when breaking up with him, make him believe that he has no chance.

As a result, he assumes the break up is final and that he has to just accept it and move on.

Yet, here's the thing!

These days, it's fairly common for couples to almost break up several times during the course of their relationship, or even go through one or more actual break ups before the relationship eventually works out.

Additionally, men all over the world are able to get women back in seemingly impossible situations (e.g. she is seeing someone else after the break up, he reacted in a very angry way to her breaking up with him, to the point where she became a bit scared, he made classic mistakes like begging for another chance and so on).

Couples get back together all the time, even though the break up seemed totally final and that there was no chance of reconciling.

So, if you see your ex as the best girl you've ever had and you really do want her back, don't assume that you have no chance of getting her back.

You will have a chance if you interact with her and re-attract her.

The more attraction you make her feel, the more drawn to you she will be and as a result, she will become open to exploring her new feelings for you.

Men all over the world use that approach to get ex women back and it works.

It's totally natural and it's very powerful.

2. Not knowing how to re-attract her back into a relationship, or how to attract a new, high quality, beautiful woman to take her place

Some guys make the mistake of thinking they need to change their physical appearance to re-attract their ex (e.g. go to the gym, wear better clothes, get a new haircut).

In other cases, some guys assume they need to buy her flowers or a gift to show their sincere interest.

Yet, when a woman breaks up with a guy, it's almost always not because of his physical appearance, or his lack of gifts.

Instead, it's because she is turned off by his behavior and how that makes her feel.

Likewise, when it comes to attracting new women in person (not on dating apps), it's mostly about how your behavior makes her feel.

In other words:

- Do you make her feel girly and feminine in response to your masculine vibe, way of thinking and behaving, or do you make her feel like a neutral friend, a coworker, big sister or like another one of the guys?
- Are you able to maintain your confidence no matter how she is behaving, or do you suddenly appear uncomfortable and tense if she isn't being straightforward, nice and gentle with you at all times?
- Are you able to make her laugh and feel good when talking to her, or does she feel bored by your approach to the conversation?
- Do you flirt with her to build up sexual tension, or do you just try to have a nice, get to know conversation by asking her about her work, where she lives, her age, where she grew up, etc?

And so on.

Essentially, when a guy doesn't know how to re-attract his ex woman, or get himself a new, high quality woman, he will find it difficult to let go and move on.

He will keep looking back at his ex as the one for him, but will feel stuck because he won't know how to re-attract her, or replace her with a new, quality woman.

In some cases, this can lead to a guy becoming insecure, unsure of himself and nervous around women that he finds very attractive.

Deep down, he knows that he has no idea what he's doing when it comes to attracting women and is just hoping to get lucky.

Yet, when it comes to quality women, you will only ever get lucky here and there and if you do, the relationship won't last.

If you want to be successful with women for life, you have to know how to attract them initially and then maintain their interest in a relationship.

3. Assuming that he has to delete photos, videos and messages of her to get over her

That's not a real solution.

After all, he can simply search her on social media when he's missing her.

So, it doesn't work.

The only thing that works for real is re-attracting her back, or getting yourself a new, high quality woman.

Additionally, you don't need to try to hide from the fact that you're missing her.

Embrace it and use it to get her back.

Alternatively, use the emotional pain you've been feeling to motivate you to learn how to easily attract other high quality women.

Use the great opportunity in front of you to level up as a man and begin enjoying life on a whole new level.

4. Wanting her back, but never trying the ex back process and always looking back in regret

Sometimes a guy will really want his ex girl back, but can't ever build up enough courage to make it happen.

As a result, he spends a lot of time missing her and struggling to move on.

In some cases, a man never gets over his ex woman, no matter how many new relationships he has.

So, the question is: What are you going to do?

Are you going to move on by attracting yourself a new, high quality woman, or are you going to get her back?

My Ex Said She Will Never Date Me Again

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 reasons why she isn't necessarily telling you the truth when she says that:

1. She is basing that statement on how she feels about you now, not how she will feel next week or next month

[image: She is basing that statement on how she feels about you now, not next week or next month]

When you make a woman feel a renewed sense of a respect and attraction for you after a break up, her thoughts and feelings automatically begin to change.

She goes from thinking that she is over you and never wants to date you again, to feeling drawn to you again in a new way and worrying that she might end up regretting it if she doesn't give you another chance.

That opens her up to you then being able to easily attract her back into a relationship with you, or at least get her to hook up with you again and begin to establish a relationship after that.

Right now, your ex might be saying that she will never date you again, but that doesn't mean her feelings can't change.

For example: Think about how many times her feelings for you have changed in the timeline of you and her knowing each other.

Initially, she felt nothing for you because she didn't know you.

Then, she started to feel sparks of attraction when she met you, or got to know you.

When you then began a sexual relationship, her feelings probably changed from liking you to beginning to love you.

Unfortunately, somewhere along the line, her feelings changed in a negative way.

She lost respect for you, stopped feeling as much attraction and as a result, stopped loving you in a romantic way.

She might even have begun to feel annoyed and irritated by just spending time with you.

As a result, her feelings then slowly changed to disappointment and resentment she decided to just break up with you, rather than waste more time on a relationship that seemed like it couldn't work.

So, right now, if she's saying that she will never date you again, it means that she is stuck in those type of negative feelings.

However, the reality is that when you interact with her and behave in ways that she actually likes and feels attracted (e.g. you're confident rather than insecure, you make her laugh and smile rather than make her feel tense and annoyed, you're emotionally masculine rather than wimpy or insecure), her feelings will automatically start to change once again.

Of course, she won't come running back into your arms in a second just because you're being attractive, but she will begin to feel differently and as a result, she will start to think differently.

She will go from thinking, "I will never date him again," to "Why am I feeling drawn to him all of a sudden? I don't want to be with him, so why do I suddenly feel like I miss him?"

donâ€™t know why, but I want to see him.â€

The fact is that she wonâ€™t be able to stop that from happening, because feelings are an automatic reaction to an external event.

In other words, if a woman always smiles when she sees a baby, regardless of whether she wants to or not, the next time she sees a baby, her instincts will take over and she will smile.

In the same way, because a womanâ€™s feelings of respect and attraction for a guy are triggered by his actions and behavior (e.g. his confidence, masculine behavior), then when he behaves in ways that are attractive to her, she will automatically feel attracted and drawn to him again whether she wants to or not.

Something inside of her will switch back on.

So, when you make your ex feel that way, she will stop saying that she never wants to date you again and will instead open herself up to talking to you over the phone and meeting up with you in person to see how she feels.

You can then show her that you really are a completely new man now (i.e. arenâ€™t insecure like you used to be, can now make her feel attracted to your masculine vibe and behavior, understand what really makes a woman feel attracted to a man), so she can fall back in love with you.

Thatâ€™s how men do it all over the world, every day.

Countless couples get back together, even when a woman starts out saying, â€I donâ€™t want to be with you anymoreâ€ or, â€Iâ€™d never date you again,â€ or, â€Thereâ€™s no chance for you.â€

Yes, there is a chance.

You get the chance by reawakening her feelings for you.

When you do that, she feels differently and as a result, her thinking, behavior and actions automatically begin to change (i.e. she opens up to being with you again, or at least hooking up with you again to see how she feels afterwards).

Another reason why your ex isnâ€™t necessarily telling you the truth when she says that she will never date you again isâ€

2. Many women say one thing and think another when it comes to men

[image: Many women say one thing and think another when it comes to men]

Have you ever had a female friend who said things like, â€That guy is such a jerk.â€ I donâ€™t know why any woman would want to be with him,â€ only for her to start dating him a little while later?

Alternatively, have you ever had a female friend who said, â€I want a nice guyâ€ only to then date a guy who a bad boy, jerk or player?

Have you ever had a woman say that she doesnâ€™t sleep with guys on the first date, only to sleep with you on the first date?

Have you ever had a woman say that she likes to get to know a guy and become friends before she sleeps with him, only to see her immediately kiss and then hook up with a guy she has met?

If you answered â€Yes,â€ to any of those questions, then youâ€™ve had first hand experience of a woman who says one thing, but does another when it comes to men.

The thing is, sometimes a woman will say that she doesn't like a guy and wouldn't ever date him as a strategy to actually get him to date her.

She will say something like, â€œHe's a player. I would never date him. He only wants one thing. No thank you.â€

Yet, she secretly thinks something like, â€œI really like him, but I don't believe he's interested in me. So rather than letting anyone know that I like him and then seeming like a reject if he isn't interested in me, I'm going to just pretend that I'm not interested in him.â€

She then covertly use her charms to flirt with him, build up a connection and get to the point where he and her hook up.

She then says, â€œI found out that he's actually a really nice guy once you get to know him. I like him. I don't care if he was a bit of a player with other girls. He's nice to me and that's all that counts.â€

That's women for you.

They will often say one thing and then do something completely different when it comes to relationships with men.

In the same way, your ex might be saying, â€œI will never date you again,â€ but deep down she may be thinking things like, â€œI still have feelings for him and I would actually get back with him if he would just show me that he's leveled up as a man and that things would really be different this time around.â€

This is why, you can't take what she said about never dating you again so seriously.

Don't make the mistake of cutting off contact with her and then sitting around thinking, â€œI wish I could get her back, but she said she doesn't want to date me again. So, I have no choice but to accept it and move on.â€

The truth is, you DO have a choice.

If you want her back, you simply need to change how she feels about you, so she wants to get back with you.

You are in control of that, not her.

Always remember the reality of how women behave when it comes to men.

For example: A woman might say one thing (e.g. â€œI hate you and never want to be with you againâ€ when she's feeling angry or turned off, but when you reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you, she will naturally change her tune and say something completely different (e.g. â€œI miss you and just want to see you.â€)

So, rather than taking what she's saying so seriously, you can use what she is saying to get her back.

For example: She said that she would never date you again, so you can then accept that and suggest that you and her just be friends from now on.

Of course, you're not going to just be a polite, neutral, nice friend who doesn't make her feel sexually and romantically attracted.

You're going to use the friendship as a way of keeping the lines of communication open between you and her, so you can re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship.

Donâ€™t doubt your ability to re-attract her.

You can do it.

A womanâ€™s attraction for a man can change in an instant.

You just have to know what attraction triggers to focus on (e.g. making her feel girly in comparison to your masculine approach to the conversation and interaction) and she will naturally feel drawn to you.

Another reason why your ex isnâ€™t necessarily telling you the truth when she says that she will never date you again isâ€¦!

3. Attraction can make her change her mind today, tomorrow or this week

[image: Attraction can change her mind today, tomorrow or next week]

Unfortunately, a lot of guys miss out on getting their ex girlfriend back because they feel hopeless when she says something like, â€œYou have no chance to get me back. I will never date you again.â€

They honestly believe her.

They assume that her feelings can never, ever be changed.

Yet, the reality is that just because she feels turned off in the moment when saying something, it doesnâ€™t mean she can be turned back on today, tomorrow or even this week.

She can.

What a guy has to do is focus on using the power of attraction to make her feel drawn to him and compelled to give him another chance.

Itâ€™s the ultimate weapon and itâ€™s natural and easy to use.

So, donâ€™t let what your ex has been saying lately put you off, or make you doubt your chances of re-attracting her and getting her back.

Instead, simply focus on using any interactions that with her to make her feel attracted to you again.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€¦!

- Always projecting confidence, rather than seeming insecure, uncertain and unsure of yourself. Being more manly in your attitude and in how you think, talk, act and behave, rather than being soft and allowing her to dominate you with her confident personality.
- Adding to your strengths (e.g. becoming more confident than you already are) and improving your weaknesses (e.g. becoming more emotionally independent, so you no longer come across as being needy, controlling or jealous), rather than staying the same and expecting her to want you back without making any attractive changes or adjustments to yourself.
- Seeing yourself as a real catch, rather than thinking sheâ€™s better than you and accepting any crumbs of attention sheâ€™s willing to throw your way.
- Being more of a playful challenge to her (e.g. playfully teasing her, not always answering her questions in a straightforward manner and using humor instead, not taking everything that she says or does so seriously), rather than always being nice, accommodating and predictable. Women donâ€™t want to feel bored in a relationship with a man. They want that feeling of challenge and as a man, you need to have the balls to bring that into the relationship, rather than being afraid of how she might react. She might initially react in a negative way to test if your new balls are real and if you don't get scared or start worrying, she will feel a tremendous amount of respect and attraction for you.

- Making her feel like a sexy, desirable woman in your presence, rather than making her feel like just a friend or texting buddy.

There are so many ways you can make her feel attracted as you interact with her and when you do, everything changes.

You will see that when you do it correctly.

It's amazing how a woman can literally go from, â€œNoâ€ to, â€œPlease don't go.â€

You have to experience for yourself to see.

When you do, you will realize the power you have over attracting women and can not only use it to get her back, but to keep the relationship happy, passionate and in love for life.

Another reason why your ex isn't necessarily telling you the truth when she says that she will never date you again is

4. Many women don't really know what they want and simply go with how they feel

[image: Many women don't know what they want and simply go with how they feel]

After a break up, a woman will often feel totally convinced that she will never date her ex again, because she just doesn't feel enough respect, attraction and love for him anymore.

She will focus on the things that caused her to disconnect from her feelings and want to break up with him and it will make her feel certain that she won't give him another chance.

For example: Some of those things might be

- He took her for granted (e.g. he stopped noticing her efforts to look good for him, he rarely if ever acknowledged or thanked her for all the things she did to make his life easier, he didn't pull his weight in the relationship and ended up being more of a burden than a benefit to her).
- He was too clingy and needy because regularly needed her to show him attention, interest and tell him that she loved him and would never leave him.
- He was too immature (e.g. she wanted him to be more serious about their future together, but he preferred to just mess around, hang out with his friends, play video games, get high and let time pass by).
- He lacked purpose and direction in life (e.g. he isn't following through on his biggest goals and ambitions and instead, is simply working a mediocre job and letting life pass him by. He isn't interested in reaching for his true potential in life, or he doesn't care about having a direction in life and just prefers to do whatever he feels like).
- He stopped putting in enough, or any, effort to create feelings of love and make her laugh and enjoy being with him.
- He assumed that she would stick around for life because things were good at the start.
- He was always nice and sweet to her and let her have her way, to the point where she felt bored and like she no longer had to do anything to impress him or be a good woman to him.

- He gave her too much power in the relationship and thought that's what she would want, but she wants a guy who is more of a challenge.

Can you relate to any of those above?

If so, just know that they are fixable.

You can change your approach to her and interact with her based on your new understanding of what women actually want.

When you do, she will go from not being interested in you to feeling the panic of potentially losing you and regretting it later on.

So, what is something a guy can do to make his ex feel attracted, change her mind and want to give him another chance?

One example is where a guy was being a pushover (e.g. he did everything he could to hopefully impress her, did whatever she told him to do, followed her lead, backed down immediately if she threw a tantrum, was in a mood or simply doesn't like something), causing his woman to feel like she had way too power over him.

As a result, she couldn't respect him and feel attracted to him, so her love for him died and she wanted to break up.

In a case like that, he needs to man up and let her experience a more confident, assertive side of himself, while still being a loving, good guy.

Manning up isn't about telling her, "Hey, I've changed and I'm not going to let you dominate me emotionally anymore," because she can easily shoot him down by saying, "Oh, you're so tough. Don't worry, I won't be dominating you emotionally because I won't be speaking to you anymore. Goodbye."

If she says that to him, he will most likely then panic and apologize, or will have dug himself a hole that's difficult to get out of.

So, you don't need to tell her that you're much more manly now and she can't boss you around.

Instead, just let her experience it.

When she experiences it, she will feel differently and then think about you in a new way.

She won't look at you as being the same guy she broke up with.

She will see that you are a different man now; a man that is attractive to her.

When you are attractive to her, she feels drawn towards you, even though she might not be able to explain it.

It's just something that naturally happens as a result of feeling attracted.

Getting an Ex Back Who Was a Fling

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

If you were only with your ex for a short time (i.e. she was a fling, you were just having casual sex for a while), you can still get her back and make the relationship work for real.

Here are 5 tips on how to make it happen:

1. Interact with her in person again and let her see that you and her can be more than what you've been together so far

[image: Interact with her again in person and let her see that you and her can be more than what you've been together so far]

When you and her first started the fling, it probably seemed like that was more than good enough. You may have felt like you were cool with that kind of arrangement, but now you want her back. If she is still thinking that, “It was only a fling,” then you need to change her perspective of you by offering her a new type of relationship experience that she will be attracted to. In many cases, that will involve you completely changing the way you approach attraction in the relationship.

For example: She might have been happy to have a short term relationship with you because she could see that she would get bored of your approach in the long run (e.g. because you were too nice, or too much of a player).

She always knew that it wouldn't last and therefore, mentally prepared herself to be able to break up with you and move on without any worries.

Yet, when you interact with her again and let her see that you are now capable of offering her the kind of relationship experience she would happily commit to, then she feels like she doesn't want to lose you.

2. Make sure you fill in the missing pieces of the attraction experience this time around

[image: Make sure you fill in the missing pieces of the attraction experience this time around]

For a woman to feel motivated to go from having a fling with a guy to being in a more serious relationship with him, she needs to be able to see that he's the kind of guy she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love in the long run.

That means, he displays the kind of behaviors and personality traits that she's looking for in a man (e.g. confidence, emotional strength, dependability, emotional masculinity, courage, resilience, ability to be a bit of a challenge for her to continually win over), rather than just being a good guy and treating her well.

Women can find thousands of good guys who would treat her well, but it's the men who have the personality traits and behaviors that make women feel respect, attraction and love in the long run that they are really looking for.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back who was a fling, youâre going to have to show her that youâre more than a good-time-Charlie (i.e. a frivolous guy who doesnât take things seriously), a fuck boy (i.e. a player type of guy that women just hook up temporarily), or a nice guy who is hoping to 'save her' from all the bad boys.

By making the correct adjustments to your conversation style and how you behave and interact with her, she will naturally begin to see for herself that youâre more than as just a fling.

Instead, you are the kind of man she wants to hold on to, because she knows how difficult it is to find a wholesome man who is able to make her feel the kind of respect, attraction and love she really wants to feel in a relationship.

She also knows that if other women meet you, they will naturally feel attracted to the new and improved you and will try to get you into a relationship.

She doesnât want to lose you to another woman and she doesnât want to end up dating a whole bunch of other guys who donât understand respect, attraction, love and relationships the way you do.

As a result, she opens back up to sleeping with you again, hanging out and seeing where things go. So, the next time you interact with your ex (e.g. on a phone call or in person), ask yourself:

- Am I turning her on right now (by being confident, emotionally masculine, emotionally mature, being a bit of a challenge and making her laugh), or am I turning her off (by being insecure, unsure of myself, timid, too laid back and disinterested, too much of a try hard, too aloof, too jealous or too needy)?
- Do I make her feel like Iâm interested in more than just sex with her (e.g. by listening to her, showing interest in what she likes, doing things together without it having to end in having sex), or do I make her feel more like Iâm just passing time with her until another, better woman comes along?
- Does she feel like she could win me over and get my commitment if she treats me well enough, or does she feel like I would probably never commit, so thereâs no point?
- Does she feel the need to impress me to win my commitment (this is what women want, as long as you are also treating them well), or do I make her feel like all I want is commitment and will do anything I can to impress her and win her over (almost all quality women get turned off by that approach)?
- Am I making her smile, laugh and enjoy talking to me, or does she feel bored being around me when weâre not having sex, or does she feel like Iâm just too serious, uptight or closed up emotionally so she finds it difficult to connect with me emotionally?
- Does she feel like she can look up to me, respect me and depend on me to be an emotionally strong man, or does she feel like Iâm too irresponsible, emotionally immature or unreliable for her?
- Does she feel like weâre socially compatible enough (i.e. youâre able to vibe with her on her level, without her feeling the need to be gentle with you, or suppress her real personality), or does she feel a lot cooler than me, or as though I wouldnât be able to get along with her friends or family?

If you are doing it right, she will naturally look at you as serious boyfriend material (or husband material), rather than just a fling.

She will know how difficult it is to find a guy who can attract her in the ways you can and as a result, she will let down her guard and open herself up to seeing where her feelings for you will take her.

3. Start having more conversations that bring you closer as a couple

[image: Start having conversations that bring you closer together as a couple]

When a couple is having a fling, they will often try to avoid talking about anything too deep or significant.

Instead, the conversations will usually be kept to fairly basic topics (e.g. they might talk about movies theyâ€™ve seen, clubs theyâ€™ve been to, music they listen to, celebrity drama, food, travel) to avoid getting to know each other on a deeper, more personal level.

Yet, in order to have a relationship that lasts for life, you do need to be able to slowly open up to the other person and have them open up to you.

You need to be able to truly understand each other, because â€œfeeling understoodâ€ and supported, is one of the most fundamental things people look for in a relationship.

When someone finally â€œgets you,â€ and theyâ€™re not judging you for it AND you feel attracted to them, then itâ€™s not a relationship you want to get rid of anytime soon.

Yet, itâ€™s important to point out that just understanding a woman isnâ€™t enough.

If she secretly doesnâ€™t feel very attracted to you (e.g. because youâ€™re too nice, too gentle, not enough of a challenge), then she isnâ€™t going to want to stick with you for life just because you understand her.

Attraction is at the core of relationships between men and women.

Without that, itâ€™s just not going to last.

So, if you feel like your ex does feel attracted to you, but you just werenâ€™t connecting with her on more deeper levels, or making her feel understood, then you can do that when you next interact with her.

For example: You can have deeper, more interesting and complex conversations that allow you and her to connect on much more meaningful levels, rather than just sticking to the superficial layers of a topic.

For example: You can talk about your childhood experiences and how they shaped you into the person you are today.

However, as a man, it's always best to talk about how you overcame problems, became stronger, wiser and more resilient, rather than being one of those guys who remains stuck in life based on childhood issues.

Women are always more attracted to men who become more from the experiences they encounter in life, rather than guys who go into their shell and become less of a man as a result.

Also, don't go looking for pity from her, or a pat on the back and a, "There there, it's okay."

Always let her see you as a man who can overcome obstacles and become stronger, wiser and more resilient over time, so she can then look up to you, respect you and feel attracted to you as a result.

At the end of the day, a woman wants to be with a man who she feels safe and protected by, not a guy who need her protection and is scared of things due to the experiences he has had.

So, if you are going to have deeper conversations with her that bring you and her closer together, make sure you do it in a way that increases her respect, attraction and love for you, rather than decreasing it.

4. Donâ€™t seem to be desperate for a relationship, even though thatâ€™s what you are now trying to create with her

[image: Don't seem desperate for a relationship, even though that is what you're currently trying to get with her]

If she currently believes that a casual fling was all she really wanted with you, then she isnâ€™t going to react well to you pushing for a relationship.

So, donâ€™t push for a relationship at the moment.

Instead, just make interactions with you feel fun and commitment free, while at the same time, focusing on building her feelings for you by interacting with her in a way that reawakens her respect, attraction and love for you.

Let her experience you in ways that she never has before, so she wants you back for her own reasons (e.g. sheâ€™s attracted to you again sexually, but at the same time she now feels worried that if she doesnâ€™t give a relationship with you a chance, another girl will take you and she might end up regretting that later on).

The more you make her realize that youâ€™re the man she wants to be with in the long term (e.g. emotionally strong, emotionally mature, dependable, charming, ambitious, interesting, funny, a challenge for her to win over), the more she will want to take the next step and commit to being with you.

On that noteâ€¦|

5. Make her fall in love with the man you are now, so she wants to be your girl

Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€¦|

- Making sure that you believe in yourself and in your value to her as a long term boyfriend, rather than feeling as though sheâ€™ll never think of you as anything more than a fling. If she senses your self-doubt, she will feel turned off. So, make sure that you subtly project confidence and self-belief in your attractiveness and value as a man. I say â€œsubtlyâ€œ because you shouldnâ€™t start boasting or telling her that youâ€™re a catch. Just let her sense that by subtly letting her sense that you have a lot of confidence in your value and attractiveness to her and other women.
- Being prepared for her to potentially play a bit hard to get with you, so you can maintain your confidence in the moment, rather than suddenly seeming insecure, or as though youâ€™re being rejected by her.
- Using humor to make her smile, laugh and feel relaxed to be around you again, rather than stressing her out by getting into emotionally exhausting, drawn out discussions where you try to â€œwork things outâ€œ with her and get her to commit.

- Not being afraid to flirt with her and keep the spark alive, rather than just acting like a friend and potentially making her feel like there isn't enough of a spark between you and her anymore to have a committed relationship.
- Showing her (by your actions, behavior and conversation style) that you really are the kind of man that she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, rather than behaving in ways that make her perceive you as being just a fling.
- Giving her a new attraction experience that makes her see you as a man worth committing to.

When she feels the kind of respect and attraction that causes a woman to fall in love with a man, she will naturally start looking at you as more than just an ex that she had a fling with.

She will begin to worry that you might be "the one that got away" and she might end up dating a whole bunch of guys who never turn out to be the one.

As a result, she opens back up to you and starts seeing you again in the hope that you and her become more than just a fling.

3 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Want a Relationship With an Ex Who Was a Fling

What you may not realize is that many couples start off having a fling with each other (i.e. casual sex, no commitment or not much of a commitment), and then transition into a loving, lasting relationship or marriage.

People usually don't want to admit that though, because they don't want to ruin their love story in the eyes of friends and family, but it's the truth.

Many couples who end up together life, were only dating and having fun initially and it ended up turning into something much more.

You and your ex can be one of those couples too.

Whether or not you achieve that though, all depends on your approach to her from this point onwards.

To get it right, avoid the following mistakes:

1. Coming on too strong while trying to show how keen you are to commit to her now

[image: Coming on too strong while trying to show how keen you are to commit to her now]

Essentially, women rarely respond well when a man is desperate for a relationship.

It's just not attractive.

To get a woman to want to commit to you, it's always best to make her be the one who is trying to get you to commit.

You then allow her that privilege.

Many women won't ever admit that they love it when they meet a guy who makes them chase and they then finally win him over, but it's the truth.

Women don't like to admit it because they don't want guys going too far with it and being too arrogant, or making them chase too much.

So, what women do is that they go for guys who give them that feeling, but they rarely openly admit. Instead, they say things like, â€œI like him. Heâ€™s really nice. Heâ€™s a great guy.â€ deep downâ€œ while her friends say, â€œHeâ€™s a player. You can do betterâ€ and so on.

Yet, she is reacting to how he is making her feel.

She is excited to feel so attracted and in love and wants to be able to use her charm to hopefully win him over.

If he does commit, then she gets the man she wants and she feels special to have been chosen by him. On the other hand, when a man puts himself in the position of desperately trying to get with a woman who only saw him as a fling, it doesnâ€™t turn her on and make her feel special.

Itâ€™s just not how a womanâ€™s attraction works.

Women arenâ€™t turned on by desperate men who have no clue how to make them feel attracted and in love.

So, whatever you do, just donâ€™t go showing her that youâ€™re super keen to have a relationship and will do whatever you can to hopefully get her to commit.

That wonâ€™t work.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€œ|

2. Treating her way too nicely, when sheâ€™s actually attracted to more of a bad boy type of guy

Part of what is attractive to a woman about having a fling is that the guy usually displays bad boy qualities (e.g. he doesnâ€™t suck up to her with a nice guy act, he doesnâ€™t get all romantic and soppy after sex, he gives her the impression that he could take her or leave her, he has other girls interested in him and is probably seeing them on the side).

Even though women will rarely admit it, they feel attracted to guys like that because the guy is a challenge compared to how men normally are (i.e. nice, trying to secure a relationship with her, fall in love pretty much right away).

So, when a guy has a fling with a woman that he doesnâ€™t initially intend on sticking with, he will often accidentally display bad boy qualities that attract her.

Yet, if he then starts feeling attached to her, he might switch into being a bit of an insecure, needy, jealous and clingy guy, which women simply donâ€™t feel attracted to.

She might then dump him, or just say that she doesnâ€™t want to keep seeing him and that he needs to accept that it was only ever a fling.

He might then panic and think that he can get her to want more by being really nice to her (e.g. sending her sweet messages, offering to help her financially, buying her things, being the best friend to her that he can, or doing whatever he can to make her see him as a good guy).

Yet, if she senses that heâ€™s doing it out of desperation and not having a clue about how to attract women, then sheâ€™s doing to feel turned off.

She might even get to the point where she wonders what she ever saw in him in the first place.

So, hereâ€™s what you need to understandâ€œ|

Pretty much every woman is attracted to and wants to be in a relationship with a good man who treats her well, but is enough of a bad boy to also make her feel as though she needs to be a good girl for him too.

She needs to get the sense that if she doesn't treat him well, maintain her attractiveness and make him happy, then she could lose him.

Of course, women will rarely admit that, but it's what they feel most attracted to, as long as the guy is also a good guy and treats her well.

So, don't make the mistake of thinking that you need to be a good boy who agrees with everything she says, lets her call all the shots and essentially treats her like a princess in order to get her back.

Treat her well, yes, but also make her experience the exciting, irresistible feelings that come with feeling the need to impress you and maintain your interest.

Let her feel the challenge that women want to feel in a relationship, while also making her feel loved, appreciated and wanted.

If you can do that, not only will she want you back, but other women will wish they could be with you as well.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Hiding behind texts and ending up losing her to another guy

In today's world, communicating with people via text and social media is the norm.

Yet, when it comes to getting a woman back into a relationship after a break, just texting her rarely works.

You've got to move things forward to either a phone call, video call or a catch up in person.

If you just hide behind texts, hoping that she will eventually make it obvious that she wants you back, then you'll most likely lose her to another guy.

Another guy will come along, interact with her in person, hook up with her and you will just be a bunch of texts on her phone and memory of a fling.

If it works out with him, then you're left behind.

If it doesn't, then she might start texting you again, but you still have to make a move and get things to a phone call, video call or in person meet up.

I Feel Betrayed After Being Dumped Because She Promised She Would Never Leave Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why you feel that way:

1. You forgot that relationships between men and woman are always an ongoing choice, not an eternal obligation

[image: You forgot that relationships between men and women are always an ongoing choice, not an eternal obligation]

Many romantic relationships between men and women start off with the best of intentions (i.e. to be together forever).

Yet, it doesn't always work out.

For a relationship to last past the initial lust and falling in love phase, there needs to be more than just a superficial respect and attraction between the man and woman.

In other words, although they might initially feel physically attracted to each other, enjoy each other's company and have loads of fun together, that simply won't be enough to keep the relationship together for life.

For a relationship to last past the initial phase, a couple needs to connect on a much deeper level.

For example: They need to

- Want the same fundamental things in life (e.g. to settle down, get married, and start a family together, or to pursue individual careers, or to go traveling together) and be making progress towards achieving those goals as time goes by.
- Be able to handle and then avoid arguments by being more loving, playful and easy-going (e.g. rather than a man getting angry at annoyed when his woman is in a bad mood, or being rude, he needs to learn how to be strong enough to laugh and use humor to break her out of her bad mood. If he does that, she will then follow his lead and lean on using humor and being playful when he is being in a bad mood. They will then begin to become of the couples who don't take everything so seriously and are able to get along and enjoy each other's company, without getting into pointless arguments that drive most couples apart over time).
- Learn to communicate with each other better (e.g. being able to forgive little mistakes, understand each other's true intentions, get messages across without insulting the other person and so on).
- Be able to experience a deeper respect, attraction and love for each other over time, rather than those feelings fading away and being replaced with indifference, boredom or even resentment.
- Be happy and hopeful about a future together, rather than miserable and unsure (e.g. by talking about their goals and future in a positive way and feeling good about it, rather than talking about why things aren't going well, why it might be too difficult to succeed, why life seems so unfair to them and so on).
- Experience new levels of life together, rather than remaining stuck at the same level while couples around them (e.g. friends, family, coworkers, acquaintances) all seem to be moving on to new levels (e.g. getting a house, getting engaged or married, being able to travel when they have time off work, having children).

- Have a balanced approach to work life and love life (i.e. a man not working so much that he neglects his woman, or not spending all of his spare time with her and smothering her).
- Have a big goal or dream in life that theyâ€”re working towards achieving together as a couple, rather than just drifting through the relationship as boyfriend and girlfriend and expecting that to be â€”enoughâ€” for life.
- If those elements are in place, a couple isnâ€”t ever going to want to break up because theyâ€”re getting everything they want and more by being together as a couple.

In a relationship like that, a woman knows that she would find it almost impossible to find another man who is able to maintain a relationship in that way, so she doesnâ€”t ever want to leave.

Additionally, when a man approaches a relationship in that way, it makes a woman feel increasingly respectful, attracted and in love with him over time.

So, thereâ€”s pretty much no chance of a break up happening, which is why approximately half of marriages still last for life.

Some couples know how to do it and other donâ€”t.

Itâ€”s as simple as that.

This is why, when a woman finds herself in a relationship that doesnâ€”t seem to be working, or making her feel increasingly respectful, attracted and in love with her man, she will decide to leave her man, even if she had once promised him that sheâ€”d never leave him (i.e. back when she was first falling in love with him, or when the relationship was going well).

At that point, a man might feel betrayed after a break up like that because she promised she would never leave him.

He really believed her.

Partly because as a man, when we say something, we mean it and we will stick by it and honor our word (i.e. the majority of divorces are initiated by women. Men rarely do it, even when things are bad because they want to stick to their word. He promised to be with her for life, by saying â€”I doâ€” in front of family and friends).

Yet, when a woman says something or makes a promise, it is in her very nature to not stick to that promise if her feelings change.

Itâ€”s just how women are.

If she promises to never leave a man and he is able to maintain the relationship and cause her feelings for him to increase and deepen, then she will stick to her promise.

Yet, if he canâ€”t do that, she wonâ€”t stick to it and will instead break up with him and open herself up to a new man, who will hopefully be able to maintain and build on her feelings over time.

Some men might feel pissed off about that and think that women are being unfair or unreasonable, but itâ€”s just the nature of women.

You need to be able to maintain and build on a womanâ€”s feelings, otherwise her promises donâ€”t mean anything.

She will break up with you and move on and not feel bad about it at all.

Of course, in many cases, a woman will initially stick with a relationship in the hope that things will change, but if they don't and she ends up disconnecting from her feelings of respect and attraction, the reality is that she can choose to leave if she wants to.

Her boyfriend (or husband) doesn't own her and she's not obligated to stick to a promise she made when things were different (i.e. she was in love and felt that they had enough in common to stick together for life).

So, with your ex, it's possible that somewhere along the line, she realized that you and her were no longer compatible (e.g. her attraction was fading, she couldn't really respect you anymore, she didn't feel in love), so she no longer felt the need to stick with the relationship for life, even though she may have once promised that she would never leave you.

In her mind, she didn't break her promise to you because when she made that promise her feelings for you were different.

That's not how men make a promise, but it's how women do it.

So, if you want her back, you simply need to reactivate her feelings, so she feels like losing you will be her loss.

Another possible reason for feeling betrayed after a break up!

2. You were a great boyfriend/husband to her and did everything you could to make her happy, but she still dumped you

[image: You were a great boyfriend to her and did everything you could to make her happy, but she still dumped you]

Most men are good guys and because of that, a man will usually want to treat his woman well and make her feel special.

For example: He might!

- Allow her to have things her way, even if it means sacrificing something he wants, or doing something he doesn't really like or enjoy.
- Buy her gifts or flowers for no special reason, take her out for romantic dinners, focus his attention on her to make her feel like she's the most important thing in the world to him.
- Text and calls her multiple times per the day to check up on her, say hello, tell her he loves her and make sure that she's okay.
- Try to make her life as convenient as possible by doing whatever he can for her, not expecting her to do chores and helping her manage her life.
- Let her make a lot of the decisions in the relationship because he assumes that when she's in control of everything, she will be happy.
- Stop hanging out with his friends, gives up his hobbies or interests and stop pursuing his big goals or dreams in life, to devote himself completely to her.

In his mind, he is the perfect boyfriend (or husband) because he is dedicated to making his woman feel happy and content in her relationship with him.

So, he falls into a comfort zone where he believes that she will never leave him because he's such a good guy.

Then, when she break ups with him, he understandably feels shocked, betrayed and like she has really let him down.

He might even think something like, â€œHow could she do this to me after everything I did to make her happy? I did my best for her and it wasn't enough. I treated her better than any other woman I've ever been with. She said she loved me. How could she betray me this way after she promised she would never leave me?â€

Yet, here's the thing!

Although he truly believes he was being a good enough boyfriend to her, what he doesn't realize is that something crucial was missing.

In many cases, it's a lack of a spark.

He's a good man, he treats her well, but she just doesn't feel that spark where she feels in love with him.

The relationship is good, their life is okay, he might have a good job and they might go on holidays, but if there is not much of a sexual and romantic spark in her heart for him, then her commitment to him isn't guaranteed.

The sexual and romantic spark is so important that even men who don't treat their woman very well, don't succeed in their career and aren't able to go on fancy holidays, are still able to keep their woman for life and have her remain in love with them.

If the spark is there, it's there and for a lot of women, that is enough to keep them around.

Not all women, of course.

Some women do want to be in a relationship where they are making progress in life with their man (i.e. are able to get a house, go on great holidays, afford to treat themselves to new clothes or phones every now and then).

Yet, if the spark isn't there, a woman will even break up with a man who is successful in life.

Just think about all the celebrity men who get dumped, or the millionaires and billionaires who struggle in their dating and relationship life.

At the end of the day, you've got to be able to create and maintain a relationship dynamic that makes a woman feel increasingly respectful, attracted and in love with you over time.

Many couples are able to do that, but some aren't and they suffer the consequence of a break up or divorce as a result.

For example: Sometimes a guy has a good job, treats his woman well, stays in shape, has good friends, has a good relationship with his family and so on.

He's also completely devoted to his woman and pretty much does everything to make sure she is happy.

On the surface, he seems like a perfect catch for a woman.

Yet, a guy devoting fully himself to making his woman feel happy is actually a secret turn off for a woman.

Secretly, a woman actually wants a man to make her feel like she has to put in some effort to impress him and make him happy too, rather than feeling like she can walk all over him and get away with it, or she can behave badly and he'll put up with it because he wants her to see how good of a guy he is.

The reality is that without feeling the need to please her man, a woman becomes bored.

The relationship loses its excitement and becomes predictable and dull.

It's hard for some men to accept; especially men who think that doing anything other than being nice to a woman is disrespectful towards her.

A man like that essentially wants to be a woman's knight in shining armor (i.e. treat her like a princess, make her life as convenient as possible, save her from other guys), but what she really wants is to be a loving, devoted woman who feels the need to impress him and treat him well.

She doesn't want a one-sided relationship, where it's pretty much all about him doing things for her.

So, if you want to get her back and make her want to be with you for life, you need to understand and accept that being a good guy to her simply isn't enough.

You really have to come to terms with the fact that men and women are very different and as a result, what makes a woman happy isn't always what seems to make sense based on your male way of thinking.

One of the reasons why I'm able to explain all this to you, is that I've devoted my life to understanding relationships between men and women.

I've also experienced more than a decade of having multiple girlfriends at once and then settled down with my perfect girl and got married.

I've been happily married for almost 8 years now as of typing this article.

It takes a long time to figure out all the things I teach, so if you don't really understand women and how they tick, then keep learning from me.

I have all the answers you seek.

The more you read (or watch my videos), the more you will understand where you've been going right and wrong with women and what you need to do from now on to be successful; including with getting your ex back.

Another possible reason for feeling betrayed after a break up is!

3. You were serious when you said that you wanted to be with her for life (i.e. you are a man of your word)

[image: You were serious when you said that you wanted to be with her for life]

The fact that you gave her your word and were totally committed to her really meant something to you.

You didn't just say it for the sake of it.

You meant it.

Unfortunately, saying, "I want to be with you forever" or, "I want to grow old with you" or, "I never want us to break up" or, "I will never leave you" didn't mean as much to her as you would have hoped.

As a result, you've been left feeling betrayed, used and empty without her.

You might also feel a bit blindsided the break up, because it seemed to just come out of nowhere.

Yet, for her, she was most likely building up to it for quite some time.

No matter how hard she tried, she just couldn't ever feel the kind of respect, attraction and love for you that would make her want to stay in the relationship.

She stuck around for a while because you're a good guy, but deep down she didn't feel like she should be with you for life.

If you were to ask her why she wasn't feeling the way she wanted to feel, she probably couldn't explain it.

Instead, she would have said something like, "I don't know. I just don't feel the same way anymore," or, "I don't know. I'm confused" or, "You're a good guy, but I don't know if this relationship is going to work."

What could you have done at that point to save the relationship?

You would have needed to understand her real reasons for breaking up with you and then made adjustments and changes, so she could naturally feel respect, attraction and love for you again.

For example: Sometimes, a woman's real reasons for breaking up with a guy, which she won't ever tell him (i.e. to avoid him promising to change that, or him becoming angry or defensive, him being insulted for life, etc), are that he just isn't manly enough for her.

She is able to walk all over him with her dominant, independent personality and he just can't handle it.

She wants a man who is able to put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way.

A man who makes her feel the need to be a good girl for him, rather than a man who makes her feel like she can do whatever she wants and he will stick around because he would struggle to be able to attract and pick up another quality woman like her.

There are many subtle, secret reasons like that, which never get discussed and instead, a lot of guys just hear things like, "I don't know why, but I don't feel the same way anymore. Maybe I just need time. Give me some space and time to think. Maybe I will miss you."

She then uses that space to start dating new men and move on, so that when they talk again, she can say, "I'm sorry, but I met someone else and I'm happy with him."

If that happens, you will only feel betrayed once again.

So, if you want to avoid that happening, make sure that you approach the ex back process correctly from now on.

Don't make classic mistakes, don't give her too much power, don't cut off contact and wait and so on.

Do it right.

Get her back and make her feel so damn happy that she gave you another chance.

You can do that.

Another reason why you might be feeling betrayed after being dumped is!

4. You were the one who got dumped

[image: You were the one who got dumped]

Imagine if the break up was the other way around and you dumped her.

Can you imagine how she would feel, especially if you had promised to never leave her and she was still in love with you?

Naturally, she would be the one feeling betrayed, not you.

She would feel as though you lied to her and are now leaving her behind.

Additionally, she might also feel like she is unlovable, or unworthy of true love because she wasn't even able to keep it when she had it with you.

Even though she put everything into the relationship and gave you her trust, time, love, devotion and commitment, it wasn't enough to make you stick around.

That would feel like a slap in the face.

Of course, in your case, that didn't happen because she was the one who dumped you.

Why?

She didn't feel enough respect, attraction and love to stick around, even though things were really good at the start.

If you look at it from her perspective, would you like to be stuck in a relationship with a woman who is no longer attractive to you and who doesn't make you happy?

You might say that you'd stick around, but what if you knew you could easily attract another woman who would be prettier, more loving, fun to be with and a potentially better option in the long run?

What if you were unhappy in a relationship with a woman that you weren't attracted to and you met a new, beautiful woman who seemed to have everything you were looking for and was interested in you?

Would you leave the woman you were unhappy with and no longer attracted to?

You might want to say, â€œNoâ€ and that might be true, but you might also think a little differently if you were in that situation for real.

Essentially, a relationship between a man and a woman isn't an eternal contract that must be fulfilled.

Instead, it's something that only lasts as long as both people continue wanting to be in the relationship.

If you want it, but she doesn't, she isn't obligated to stay and vice versa.

So, even though you're the one feeling betrayed because you gave your all to your ex, only for her to throw it back in your face, it's possible that she just wasn't feeling it the way you were.

Fortunately though, even if that is the case for you and her, you do have the power to change how she feels.

When you interact with her and reactivate her feelings for you, getting her back becomes natural and easy because she wants it too.

She wants to be your girl again because interacting with you makes her feel good now.

She feels drawn to you and the new, exciting, appealing and even arousing way she feels when interacting with you.

So, don't let temporary feelings of betrayal (even though they are valid feelings) ruin your chances of getting her back.

Just do what you need to do to get her back and when you do, she may even apologize for betraying you or letting you down in the way she did.

You can then make her feel so in love with you that she never wants to lose you again.

You really can do that.

Another possible reason for feeling betrayed after being dumped is

5. You didn't realize that both men and women often say grand things when they are in love, but can then change their mind later on

Sometimes, the thrill of falling in love can make a couple feel that the relationship is perfect, 100% right for them and will last for life.

It could last for life of course, but only if the couple knows how to approach a relationship in the long term in a way that causes it to last.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys feel like they've secured a woman based on what she felt initially, but as you now know, the initial buzz of falling in love isn't enough to make the relationship last for life.

So, when a guy is falling in love with a woman, he might then tell her that he wants to spend the rest of his life with her, which is totally natural and fine.

However, he might then make the mistake (it's a needy, insecure and unnecessary thing to ask of a woman, because she will only stick to her promise if she feels like it) of saying, Promise me that you will never leave me.

If his woman is caught up in the romance of the situation, she might say, I love you too. Of course I promise never to leave you. Why would I? I love you. This is what I want.

In that moment, she's probably being totally honest about her feelings for him, but it doesn't mean her feelings won't change down the line when she gets to know him better, or if he changes his approach to the relationship.

For example: A woman might say that she loves the guy and will never leave him because he initially makes her feel a lot of sexual and romantic attraction.

Then, as time goes by, she notices that he's also a kind, caring, emotionally masculine guy who has a definite purpose and direction in his life.

That makes her respect him, feel attracted to him and love him even more.

As a result, she wants to good to him, treat him well and be affectionate and loving towards him because she feels lucky to have him.

She also never feels the need to break up with him and look for someone else.

She only wants to be in a committed relationship with him, because that's when she feels the happiest and most fulfilled.

If that's the case, then the relationship will continue.

Yet, if it doesn't go that way, then what she said initially when she was falling in love, or when things were good, no longer stands.

For example: A woman can initially feel drawn to a guy because he makes her feel attracted at the beginning of the relationship (e.g. he is confident, cool, intelligent, interesting to hang out with, makes her laugh).

During that time, she might say that she will never leave him at when she says it, she honestly feels that she is speaking the truth.

She truly feels like she would never want to leave him.

Yet, if she begins to notice things about him that she initially overlooked because she was caught up in the thrill of falling in love (e.g. heâs actually not as confident as he appeared and is in fact quite clingy and needy), her feelings for him will begin to change.

As a result, she will no longer want to stay with him for life, even though she initially promised to never leave him.

Thatâs just the way relationships with a woman go if a man is unable to maintain and build on his womanâs feelings of love, respect and attraction for him over time.

If the relationship dynamic doesnât make her feel like she is in love (e.g. heâs too insecure, or he treats her badly for too long), she just wonât feel motivated to stay with him anymore.

It might seem like women are being selfish, mean or unloving by doing that, but thing about the result it produces.

If women were to just love a guy and put up with his insecurities (or bad treatment of her, for example), then what kind of life would women live?

Additionally, how inspired would men be to become even better, more well-rounded men?

Thatâs why itâs built into the nature of relationships between men and women.

The sooner you accept it and work with it, the sooner you will experience the benefits of it.

Yet, if you try to fight against nature and assume that women should just love and accept a man regardless of how he thinks or behaves, then you will struggle with relationships your entire life.

Avoid These Mistakes to Get Her Back

1. Trying to make her feel guilty for the emotional pain you are experiencing

[image: Trying to make her feel guilty for the emotional pain you are experiencing]

Although your pain is 100% real, trying to make your ex feel bad about it is one of the fastest ways to push her away even further.

Hereâs the thingâ

Even if a woman does feel guilty about breaking her promise to a guy, what she doesnât want is him rubbing it in her face.

If he does, it shows her that he doesnât understand how women operate (i.e. they go with how they feel).

It also shows that he is expecting her to be more like a man (i.e. be a man of his word, no matter what).

If a man is expecting a woman to be more like a man, it turns her off at a deep, instinctively level. Additionally, regardless of how much guilt a woman feels, that emotion isn't enough to make her want to get back in a relationship with a guy.

Women don't want to feel like they are being emotionally blackmailed into a relationship (i.e. being made to feel guilty for leaving a guy and having to give him another chance out of a feeling of pity for him).

The fact is, if a woman is no longer attracted to her man and can see that he has no idea how or what to change to re-attract her, then she's not going to fall for his, â€œHow could you betray me after you promised you would never leave me?â€ routine.

It just won't work.

Instead, she will feel even more determined to get away from him and move on.

So, if you want to regain your ex's respect, attraction and love, make sure you're not trying to make that happen by making her feel guilty for not sticking to her promise to never leave you, or for making you hurt or suffer based on leaving you the way she did.

If that's your approach, she will push you away even more and possibly cut you out of her life completely (e.g. unfriend you on social media, block your number, refuse to meet up with you).

Another mistake to avoid isâ€

2. Asking her how she could promise something like that to you and then betray you

It's just not a question to ask her because, as a woman, she doesn't really have an answer that would please your masculine way of thinking.

For example: You might want to hear her logical, rational and sensible reasons for going back on her promise, but she will likely say, â€œI don't know. It's just how I feelâ€ because women simply go with how they feel.

So, even though you might feel like you deserve to know why she changed her mind, asking her why will only cause her to put up her defenses.

Additionally, when a guy is asking, â€œWhy? Why? Why?â€ in an emotional way where he clearly seemed confused, then she can feel turned off by his lack of awareness about women and how to make them want him.

She looks at him as yet another guy who is mistakenly thinks that women think, feel and behave pretty much like men do.

If she gets that feeling, then she will naturally want to get away from her ex and hopefully find herself a man who not only understands that men and women are completely different, but is able to make her want him and stick with him for life.

3. Showing anger and contempt for her

As you may know, getting angry with your ex, accusing her of lying to you or or being selfish isn't going to accomplish anything other than push her away further.

When a man gets angry at a woman for breaking up with him, she will see his anger and contempt as another sign that she probably made the right decision to break up with him (i.e. because he's now coming across as a potentially scary, abusive ex who she might need protection from).

This can result in her feeling like she needs to get away from him, or get a new man ASAP, so she has a barrier in between her and him.

So, if you want to get her back, the best way to go about it is by reactivating her feelings for you, so she regrets breaking up with you and naturally wants to give you another chance, rather than trying to pressure her into changing her mind.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

4. Losing confidence over the following months and years because you remain emotionally stuck and damaged, due to the way she left you

Itâ€™s totally fine for you to feel hurt by her actions.

However, if you want her to see you as a real man (and therefore feel respect and attraction for you), you need to deal with your emotions like a man.

That being; feel the emotions, but then get on with the solution to the problem.

Donâ€™t get stuck in the emotion of feeling betrayed or let down by her.

Instead, get to a new emotional state of feeling confident, inspired, hopeful, enlightened and ready to re-attract her and get her back.

When you do that, she will naturally feel attracted to you and you will naturally feel proud of yourself, as well as feel like you are growing into your masculinity as a man.

You will see that no matter what challenges you face in life, you always come out better, stronger, wiser and more prepared to succeed.

When you approach life in that way, not only do women find you deeply attractive, but people in general respect you, admire you and want to be part of your life, or at least be around you to feel safe and protected by what they see as a real man.

Just think about the men you know who approach their life in the way I mentioned.

You respect them and look at them differently than you do men who lack the courage and masculinity to take on life with endless determination, resilience and self-assurance.

As for women, they find those men deeply attractive and wish they could find one.

So, when you let your ex see that youâ€™re now walking the path of life as what she will see as a real man, she will naturally feel like losing you would be her loss.

As a result, she will open up to you and want to get back with you.

Yet, if you remain stuck in the emotions of feeling betrayed by a woman you loved (and possibly did so much for), then you may end up losing confidence in your ability to re-attract her and other women.

This will result in your ex and other women feeling instinctively turned off by you because women arenâ€™t attracted to self-doubt and fear in men.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

5. Not focusing on what actually works to get a woman back

Every day, all over the world, men are able to get ex women back right away, within days and in more difficult cases, within 1-2 weeks, when they approach the ex back process correctly.

This means focusing on reawakening her feelings by interacting with her.

When a woman's feeling are turned back on and she feels drawn to you, then her decision to want to be broken up with you immediately begins to change.

She goes with how she feels, which is that she feels like she wants to be back with you.

She misses you, she feels attracted to you and she loves you.

So, she gets back with you.

That's how it works and you CAN do it.

7 Signs That Your Ex Loves You, But is Scared of Getting Hurt

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Sometimes a woman still loves her ex and wants him back, but won't make it obvious.

You can't know for sure, but you can look out for common signs that signs that she still loves you and secretly wants to get back together.

1. She keeps reaching out to you and then pulling away when she sees that you want a relationship

[image: She keeps reaching out to you and then pulling away when she sees that you want a relationship]

Sometimes a woman will still have feelings for her ex, so the idea of getting back with him is something that she's willing to think about.

She's open to it.

Yet, that doesn't mean she wants to be rushed into making a decision right away.

Instead, in many cases, a woman like that wants to take things slow and see if her ex has actually changed before she makes her decision.

So, if she reaches out to her ex and he immediately starts putting pressure on her to get back together without first letting her experience the changes in him (based on how he now talks to her and reacts to her), she will feel like he is wanting a relationship too soon.

As a result, she may think something like, "I do have feelings for him, but I just don't feel right about getting back into a relationship immediately. I could end up regretting it and having to go through the pain of another break up. At this point, I don't even know if he has truly understood why I broke up with him and been able to change those things about himself."

For example: She may have broken up with him because he was too soft, too nice and allowed her to have too much power over him in the relationship.

In cases like that, she will want to see that he is now more ballsy, confident and assertive, while still being a good guy.

Alternatively, she may have broken up with him because he took her for granted, treated her badly and made her feel unloved,

In a cases like that, a woman will want to see that her ex man is now a more genuinely loving, balanced man who appreciates her and loves her, but hasn't become desperate and changed into a sappy romantic type of guy to hopefully win her back.

Essentially, the woman wants to see if her ex man is now attractive to her or not and if he now understands how to maintain a happy, successful relationship with a woman.

So, if your ex has been reaching out to you and then pulling away, it may be because you've been pushing for a relationship, or hinting at a relationship before allowing her to experience the relevant changes in you.

If that's the case for you, then stop focusing on a relationship with her and start focusing on re-attracting her and making her want you in a sexual and romantic way.

When you do that, she will naturally want to have a relationship with you again, or at least hook up with you again to see how she feels afterwards.

Another sign that she loves you and wants you back isâ€¦!

2. She says that she loves you or misses you, but isn't sure if the relationship would work

[image: She says she loves you, or misses you, but isn't sure if the relationship would work]

Imagine thisâ€¦!

Youâ€¦re talking to your ex on the phone and she then says something like, â€œYou know, I really do miss you.â€

If you then say something like, â€œI miss you too. If thatâ€s how we feel, why donâ€t we just get back together?â€ she may respond by saying, â€œIâ€m not sure thatâ€s a good idea. We miss each other yes, but the relationship probably wouldnâ€t work. I donâ€t want to go through another break up with you. It hurts too much.â€

Although that may sound like sheâ€s saying â€œNo,â€ to the idea of getting back with you, the truth is, sheâ€s simply hinting that she wants you to prove to her that things will be different between you if she says, â€œYes.â€

How can you do that?

Not by saying that things will be different, but by letting her feel and experience the difference as she interacts with you.

For example: You can do that by reacting differently than you used to before (e.g. if you and her have a disagreement about something, rather than getting upset or angry, you now use humor to ease the tension and turn the situation back to feelings of laughter and love).

You can also show her that youâ€re no longer making the same old mistakes as before (e.g. you are no longer feeling insecure, jealous or needy and are now a confident, trusting and emotionally independent man).

When she can see that youâ€re already begin changing into the kind of man she always wanted you to be, her uncertainty about giving you another chance will automatically fade away.

Her guard will come down and she will open up to being your girl again.

Another sign that she loves you and wants you back isâ€¦!

3. She puts a lot of effort into impressing you via text, but keeps backing away when you try to get her to meet up

If a woman isnâ€t interested in getting back with her ex, then she usually wonâ€t put any effort into texting him after the break up.

In fact, in many cases, a woman will completely ignore her ex after breaking up with him and might even go as far as blocking him.

While ignoring him, or while he is blocked, she will then try to move on by finding herself a new man, or enjoying single life for a while (e.g. partying with her girlfriends, hooking up with random guys).

Soon enough, her ex will start to seem like a distant memory.

So, if your ex has been texting you and seeming to put a lot of effort into her texts to you (e.g. joking with you, trying to impress you, discussing things with you), then she most likely still loves you and wants to be in a relationship with you.

However, she might also still have her doubts about whether the relationship could work this time around.

Alternatively, she might be worried about getting her heart broken (e.g. if she gets back with you, is enjoying the relationship and you then decide to break up with her to get revenge), or turned off by the idea of having to potentially deal with another emotionally draining break up if things don't go well.

As a result, she will back away when you try to secure a meet up with her and will say things like, â€œI need more timeâ€ or, â€œIâ€™m not sure yetâ€ and so on.

In cases like that, you just need to ensure that you're not giving her the impression that your number one goal is to get her to commit to a relationship with you.

Instead, let the interactions that you have with her be enjoyable, free of any pressure to commit to anything and more importantly, full of sexual tension.

The more sexual tension you build up between you and your ex, the more she will want to see you in person, to then release that sexual tension with hugging, kissing and sex.

Another sign that she loves you and wants you back isâ€

4. Your gut instinct tells you that she is keen, but she tries to act like she isn't

If a woman has broken up with a guy, but still secretly loves him, she will often keep that to herself and even pretend as though she isn't interested in getting back with him at all.

Why?

Each woman will do it for slightly different reasons, but some of those include:

- To hopefully maintain the position of power (i.e. as the one who dumped him and doesn't really want him back) as she gets back into the relationship.
- To see if her ex will give up because he feels rejected, therefore showing her that he lacks the emotional strength and resilience that women look for in men.
- To see if her ex gives up because he didn't really care about getting her back for real and was only initially trying to make himself feel better (i.e. by seeing that he could get her back temporarily).
- To see if her ex will lose control of his emotions (e.g. start crying to her, get angry, pour his heart out to her in a desperate attempt to win her over) or if he will maintain control of his emotions like a real man and just guide her back into a relationship.

So, if you remain calm and confidently focus on reawakening her sexual and romantic feelings and guiding her back into a relationship, then she will go along with it.

Yet, if you give up hope at her first sign of resistance or lose control of your emotions, then she will most-likely take that as a signal that you're not going to be able to give her the attraction experience she really wants from a relationship.

She will likely then decide to focus her efforts on getting over you by moving on with someone else who can give her what she wants.

Don't let that happen to you and her.

If your gut instinct is telling you that she is keen, or even open to getting back with you, then make it happen while you still can.

Another sign that she loves you and wants you back is!

5. She talks about good memories you and her had

When interacting with her ex guy, a woman will sometimes talk about good times they shared together.

Sometimes, it will just be a passing thought and she will mention it, but other times, she will talk about good memories because she misses them and misses you.

Additionally, in most cases, if a woman doesn't want to get back with her ex, she will usually try to avoid talking about good memories.

Why?

She doesn't want to open up a conversation that may seduce her back into a relationship, by causing her to miss her ex, want to see him and want to experience more good memories with him.

So, if your ex is talking positively about the past, it's usually a strong sign that she still loves you and is hoping you will pick up on that and make a move to get her back.

This is why, you should waste this chance by feeling uncertain and wondering, Does she, or doesn't she?

Just take action and begin re-attracting her right away.

Before you know it, you and her will be back together.

Can you imagine it?

Hugging her and feeling the softness and warmth of her body against yours.

Kissing her and feeling her lovingly kissing you back.

Having sex with her and touching her body the way you used to.

Hanging out with her and seeing her smile, laugh and enjoy herself around you and then cuddle into you and show you the love you deserve.

You can have that again, but you have to make a move.

You have to stop doubting yourself and start re-attracting her and guiding her back into a relationship.

Another sign that she loves you and wants you back is!

6. Her friends or your mutual friends say that she still isn't over you

After a break up, a woman will often turn to her friends for emotional support while she tries to get over her ex.

She may hope that they will tell her what a jerk he is and that she's better off without him, so she can feel better about the break up.

Yet, in some cases, a woman will struggle to get over her ex and move on, which can result in her talking to her friends about him in a more positive way.

She will mention how good things used to be at the start, but that the relationship fell apart due to whatever happened.

If her friends, or their mutual friends, notice that she misses him and is probably still in love with him (even though she doesn't openly say it), they might take the initiative and try to get them back together again, by telling him that she probably isn't over him yet, or is probably still open to getting back together if he plays his cards right.

Essentially, they're hoping that he will take the hint and initiate the ex back process with her while he still can.

So, if you've heard from her friends or mutual friends that you had, or have been getting hints that she isn't over you, then make a move.

Another sign that she loves you and wants you back is that

7. She flirts with you, but is afraid to express her love for you

[image: She flirts with you, but is afraid to express her love for you]

As you may have noticed by dating other women, some women are very obvious when they express their interest in you, but many women feel shy about expressing their feelings because they worry about being rejected by you (i.e. by seeming too keen or easy, by misreading your signals and assuming you like her, but finding out that you only see her as a friend).

A lot of women are good at acting like they aren't afraid of rejection, or aren't even interested in guys, but the reality is that almost all women fear rejection and are super keen to find themselves a boyfriend.

Now, in your case, you're dealing with an ex woman and the same fears and insecurities that women experience also apply to a getting back together after a break up.

For example: Sometimes a woman will worry that her ex could be angry with her for leaving him and would therefore want to get revenge on her by getting back with her and then dumping her.

That way, he can walk away as the dumper and she is the one who got rejected and left behind.

This is why, rather than saying how she feels (i.e. I still love you and I want us to get back together), a woman will simply flirt with her ex to see how he responds.

If he flirts back with her, shows some subtle interest and then takes action to get her back, she will be less worried about getting rejected if she shows a little more interest.

On the other hand, if she flirts with him and he just responds and reacts in a way that suggests he and her are only friends, then she will usually just assume that he's no longer interested in her in a sexual and romantic way.

To avoid getting her hopes up and then being rejected, she will then focus on getting over him by dating and hooking up with other man.

So, if your ex has flirted with you lately, or the last time you interacted (even if that was months ago), don't sit around waiting for her to tell you that she loves you and wants you back.

Instead, be man enough to take the lead and get her back, with or without her giving you any more clear signs that she wants you to.

4 Mistakes That Can Reduce Your Chances of Getting Her Back

1. Being too gentle with her to the point where you begin to seem unattractive to her

After a break up, a guy will sometimes make the mistake of being on his very best behavior around his ex girl.

Basically, heâs hoping that if she sees how gentle and patient heâs being, she will drop her guard and open herself up to giving him another chance because heâs such a nice, respectful guy. Unfortunately though, in most cases, the opposite happens because she looks at his attempts to be really nice as a desperate ploy to make her take pity on him.

Women donât want to be with a guy out of pity.

A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy who submits to her and allows her to walk all over him, just so he can make her want him again, or a guy who turns into a really nice guy because he has no idea how to re-attract her.

So, if you want your ex woman back, make sure she doesnât look at your approach to her as being needy, wimpy or soft.

Instead, be an emotionally strong, confident and assertive, while also being a good man to her.

When she sees that youâre able to be manly, but loving when under pressure, she knows that you understand what really makes a woman feel attracted and are desperately trying to seek pity and hope that she will feel sorry for you enough to feel attracted to you and give you another chance.

Some guys are able to get a second chance from a womanâs feelings of pity, but it never lasts.

If you want to get back and have the relationship last, you have to do what makes women feel attracted and in love with a man.

2. Hoping that she will admit how much she loves you, if you keep telling her how much you love her

If a woman senses that a guy doesnât have the balls to make a move (i.e. call her, arrange a meet up and get her back) and is trying to text or email his way back into a relationship, then her guard will go up.

Women arenât attracted to fear in men.

So, donât use a fearful approach where you are afraid of being rejected and are hoping that she will take all the risks (e.g. admit that she loves you), so you can then get her back.

Youâve got to be courageous when getting an ex back, while also using an approach that causes her to feel a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for you.

That is what works.

On the other hand, being fearful and hiding behind text messages, emails or social media likes or comments, will almost certainly lead to her assuming that you donât have the guts to guide her back into a relationship.

If she feels that way, she will naturally feel attracted to other men who display more confidence and courage than you.

3. Promising to never hurt her, if she will just give you another chance

Even though you are sincere and have every intention to keep your word, she may see your promise as you trying whatever you can to make her take some pity on you to hopefully give you another chance.

What actually works is when you let your attitude, actions and behavior do the convincing for you, rather than trying to convince her with words.

In other words, rather than making her a whole bunch of promises, just let her experience new, more appealing emotions when she interacts with you, so she can see that there is a spark between you and her that she doesn't want to lose.

Another common mistake to avoid in a situation like yours is...

4. Waiting for her to hopefully make a move and try to get you back

What if she really does love you and would be open to getting back with you, but she can never seem to overcome her fear of potentially being rejected by you, if she lets you know that she is interested?

What if that fear holds her back and you then miss out on your chance to be with her?

What if she is missing you right now and is hoping that you contact her and get her back?

Just do it.

Realize that, as the man, it's your role to be the more courageous one after a break up to get the ex back process started.

Don't miss your chance and regret it for the rest of your life.

Get her back while you still can.

How Can I Make My Ex See That Our Love is Real?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 ways you can do it:

1. Stop talking about love with her and just make her feel it

[image: Stop talking about love with her and just make her feel it]

If you've ever watched a romantic movie or TV sitcom, you will have seen a guy pouring his heart out to his woman after a break up, pleading with her and declaring his undying love for her.

Initially, the woman will reject him, but if he just keeps trying (and usually saves the world, or rescues her from something), she then opens back up to him and they get back together.

Then they end up living happily ever after.

How sweet.

Yet, it just doesn't work like that in the real world.

Why?

Well, apart from a guy being unable to "save the world" or not having an opportunity to save the woman from an evil monster, a bad guy or some other situation, the reality is that most women hate it when men talk about their feelings all the time.

It's just not romantic, attractive or appealing at all.

Instead of being swept off her feet, she looks at him as being an emotionally sensitive, weak, confused guy who is so desperate to get her back that he'll practically say anything to hopefully make it happen.

Basically, he's going on and on about how much he loves her and how he believes they're made for each other and that their love is real, but she's just not feeling it.

Additionally, because she has broken up with him (due to not feeling enough respect, attraction and love to warrant remaining in a relationship), she simply doesn't care about how strong his love is for her anymore.

It has become way too one-sided, where he is essentially the rejected guy who is still in love with her and she is over it.

So, rather than falling into his arms like a woman will do in a romantic movie (when the rejected guy saves her from something), she pulls away from him and feels turned off by the "hopeless romantic" act that he has been putting on for her.

This is, if you don't want your ex to see you as being a hopeless, confused romantic, just don't bother trying to convince her that your love is real with soppy words.

Instead, you have to make her feel love based on the way you now interact with her, react to her, behave around her, feel, think and talk.

Essentially, you have to start behaving in an attractive way, so she has a reason to want to open herself back up to you again.

Without attraction, there is no romantic love between a man and a woman.

There can be one-side love, but it won't be mutual.

If you want mutual love, then you have to focus on attraction.

Another way you can make your ex see that your love is real is

2. Start being more of a challenge, so the love feels more exciting and interesting to her

[image: Start being more of a challenge, so the love feels more exciting and interesting to her]

Most guys want to be a good boyfriend (or husband) to their woman, which is great.

Yet, some guys make the mistake of thinking that to be a good boyfriend, all they need to do is be nice, sweet, supportive and loving.

That's just one side of the coin of attraction.

The other side is cheekiness, being a challenge, making her want to impress you, playfully pushing her away a little before pulling her back to you, occasionally laughing at her when she is being moody, rather than always being Mr. Supportive.

Unfortunately, some guys fear their woman's potential negative reaction to them being a challenge that they become bored, tame, neutral, predictable guys, which just isn't exciting or attractive to a woman.

With women, you have to have the balls to be a bit challenging, even though women will sometimes pretend to be angry at you about it, to test whether your balls/courage/confidence is real.

If it is real, then she feels so much sexual and romantic attraction for you that her love for you becomes real.

More real than the superficial love that comes from just one side of the coin of attraction (i.e. the nice side).

When both sides of the coin are present in a relationship, there is a beautiful balance that results in the woman feeling ongoing and building respect, attraction and love for the man.

The relationship feels so good that it becomes almost impossible to break up, because the woman knows that she would absolutely struggle to ever find anything like it again.

Sadly, many guys don't ever realize the power they have to attract and keep a woman.

Without that power, a guy will often try to keep a woman by being nice to her, giving her more and more power over him, doing whatever she wants and hoping that it will make her happy.

Yet, rather than a woman thinking, "Wow, my guy is so loving, caring, nice, attentive and kind. He would do absolutely anything for me. I'm so lucky to have him! I will never leave him! This is what real love is supposed to be like. It's supposed to be all about niceness and sweetness. Awww! I feel giddy" she instead finds herself feeling bored, turned off and restless.

One of the main reasons why, is that women almost always want to be in a position where they feel the need to impress you, rather than being in a position where you are always trying to impress them.

Women don't go around admitting that because if they did, people would look down on her, think less of her or say, "No girl. A man has to impress you! He has to do everything for you! He has to treat you like a princess at all times" and so on.

Yet, if you notice the women who are the happiest and most in love with their man, it's when the woman feels the need to impress him, maintain his interest and try to win more and more of his love. That doesn't mean the man is a bad man who treats her badly.

Instead, when a woman is the happiest with a man, he is a good man who treats her well, but also makes her feel a strong, ongoing desire to impress him and win more of his love.

That is an exciting, ongoing, enjoyable, lifelong challenge for a woman that keeps her addicted to her man and never wanting to be with anyone else.

The same fundamental principle will apply to your ex.

Even though she would probably never admit it to you, she secretly wants to feel as though she needs to be a good, loving, devoted woman to you so that you will feel impressed by her and thereby want to stay with her, rather than feeling like she can treat you badly, take you for granted, disrespect you and just get away with it because you need to be with her.

So, if your main approach to making your ex see that your love is real has been to be a sweet, nice, caring, generous guy to her and do whatever she wants you to do, then you need to become more of a challenge.

Of course, don't be mean or unkind towards her in any way.

Instead, simply make her feel some need to chase after you for a change.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are:

- If you tend to always respond to her text messages right away no matter what time of day or night she contacts you, from now on, take your time and get back to her when you're not busy (e.g. reply after 5 minutes in some cases, 30 minutes other times, hours other times and even noon the next day in some cases, such as her texting you late at night).
- If she is being overly dramatic about something, rather than getting upset or fearful, simply laugh at her (in a loving way) and say something like, "You are such a drama queen sometimes."
- If you want to meet up with her, rather than asking if it's okay with her and timidly asking when would be a good time, simply be assertive (in a loving way) and tell her which days you are available and suggest one or two of those days with a time (e.g. "Okay, well I can catch up tomorrow or Wednesday. So, let's catch up to say hi at 8pm"). The part about being a challenge happens if she says no, in which case you can laugh and say (in a relaxed, assertive and slightly playful manner), "Oh, it's fine. We're not getting back together. It's just a catch up to say hi as friends. We're mature enough to do that, right? Or are you scared I will make you want me and you'll jump on me and start kissing me?" You essentially don't take no for an answer and while doing that, you make her want to say yes because of how attracted to you she is feeling (i.e. due to your confidence, assertiveness, ability to still be good to her even though you are pushing for a catch up). This challenges her and makes her feel the need to be alert and ready to interact with you, rather than always knowing that she can walk all over you by being moody or demanding and shut you down with a simple no to your requests.

The more of a challenge you become to her, the more sexual and romantic attraction she will feel for you.

She literally won't be able to stop thinking about you and wondering why she is so attracted to you all of a sudden.

Why she suddenly feels like walking away from you is a mistake and maybe it's time she opens up and gives another chance.

Then, when you get her back and she feels rushes of new, exciting love for you and realizes that she doesn't want to lose you, she will then know that the love you shared is real.

Another way you can make your ex see that your love is real is!

3. Discover the missing pieces of the attraction experience that have caused her to lose interest in the love you share together

[image: Discover the missing pieces of the attraction experience that have caused her to lose interest in the love you share together]

If your ex doesn't feel like she is in love with you anymore, she isn't going to be wowed by your declarations that you and her are meant to be and that your love is real.

It's just going to seem out of place to her.

The reason why is that the love isn't mutual because the two driving forces of her sexual and romantic love (respect and attraction) aren't being fueled enough by you.

She might feel some respect and attraction, but not enough to feel like she is in love with you.

This is why, you need to understand your ex's real reasons for breaking up with you, so you can begin giving her the kind of attraction experience she needs to feel like she is actually in love with you.

If you're unsure what parts of the attraction experience were missing in your relationship with your ex, here are some questions to help you find out!

- Did you remain being the confident, emotionally strong guy that she first fell in love with, or did you slowly become insecure, needy and clingy in the relationship?
- Did you remain emotionally masculine around her, thereby making her feel like a feminine, girly woman in your presence, or did you instead start behaving more like her friend or roommate? Alternatively, did you end up behaving in a fairly feminine kind of way, which ended up causing her to feel like the stronger, more dominant and powerful one in the relationship? Did you forget that a woman wants to be loved, penetrated and supported by a force that is more powerful than her (i.e. an emotionally masculine man)?
- Did you put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way when she behaved badly (e.g. was disrespectful towards you, created unnecessary drama), or did you put up with her bad behavior because you were afraid that she would leave you if you stood up to her?
- Did you try to stand up to her in a confident, loving way, but she then became angry and emotional and dragged you into a heated argument?
- Did you ever realize that a man needs to be able to maintain control of his emotions around a woman, rather than being dragged into the drama she will try to create to test his masculinity and position of dominance?
- Did you have big goals in life that you were aiming for and working towards, or were you just drifting along in life, living a mediocre life and expecting her to be happy with that for life? Did she feel like a future with you would be safe or uncertain, based on your approach to life? Did you realize that a woman wants to feel like she can rely on a man, especially if she ever gets pregnant to him and there are children to raise and take care of? Did you know that a man doesn't have to be successful or become successful in life to make a woman feel safe and happy, but instead simply needs to be aiming towards his goals and making good enough progress? Did you know that a woman will feel increasing amounts of respect, attraction and love if a man sticks to his word and does his best to succeed in life, rather than coming up with excuses, or wasting time to avoid following through on his goals?

- Did you remain emotionally strong throughout the relationship to the point where you felt confident, secure and happy regardless of what she said or how she behaved, or did you become emotionally sensitive and need her to be gentle and nice to you all the time, or else you would become upset, irritable or moody?

A lot of men don't really ever understand what you were realizing as you read through the list above.

Women and relationships remain a total mystery to them for life.

A man who doesn't understand what you're learning now, will often make the mistake of assuming that women are impossible to please and that relationships cannot work or be happy for life. Yet, the reality is that when you understand how women think and how relationships work, women become incredibly easy to please and a relationship becomes one of the easiest, most enjoyable parts of your life.

So, if you want to get your ex to see that the love you and her shared is real, start by understanding what kind of attraction and relationship experience she really wants.

When you understand that, you can then make the subtle adjustments and changes that wake her up to the fact that she loves you and only wants to be with you.

Another way you can make your ex see that your love is real is!

4. Blow her mind by attracting her in the new ways you have discovered by understanding what has been missing

[image: Blow her mind by attracting her in the new ways you have discovered by understanding what has been missing]

Most guys have a general idea of how to make a woman feel happy in a relationship (e.g. treat her well, make her feel loved and appreciated, communicate well).

Yet, even though a woman does appreciate those things in a relationship, quite often there are other, more subtle things she wants from her man that he might not be aware of.

For example: A guy might be a good guy to his woman, but he treats her more like a good friend or a roommate than a sexy, desirable woman.

She knows that other guys would find her very sexy and attractive and as a result, they would look at her and touch her in a way that makes her feel sexy and attractive.

Yet, when she is with her boyfriend (or husband), it seems as though he doesn't see her in that way anymore.

He might find her attractive, love her and want to be with her, but she just doesn't feel that from him because he doesn't seem to show it.

So she feels as though something vital is missing from their relationship (i.e. a mutual spark).

Even though she does love him and was hoping to be with him for life, it has ended up feeling more like a friendship than a romantic relationship, which makes her feel restless and unhappy.

If that goes on for long enough, she will break up with him, or in some cases, cheat on him and then break up with him.

Another example is when a guy is so good to his woman that he ends up being a pushover (i.e. he does whatever she wants, is way too nice and accommodating, is afraid to be assertive in case she gets moody).

Rather than being an emotionally dominant man who leads in the relationship, he becomes timid around her and hopes that she will start treating him better one day if he just keeps on being really good to her (e.g. generous, kind, caring, understanding).

What he doesn't realize is that a woman doesn't want a pussy for a boyfriend.

It's just not attractive to a woman.

A woman does appreciate it when her boyfriend takes her feelings into consideration, asks her opinion about things and cares, but when it comes down to it, she wants him to man up and be in charge, so she can be a feminine woman in the relationship.

If she is always in control, making decisions, leading the way and setting the tone of the relationship, she ends up feeling more like "the man" in the relationship (i.e. the more emotionally dominant one, the more powerful one).

Women don't want that.

A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect, not look down on and treat like a boy who needs to be scolded and kept in line by his mother.

If a guy is unable to man up to the point where she can relax and start being a real, feminine woman around him, she will always be unsatisfied, regardless of any good thing he does for her (e.g. how caring, generous, kind, understanding, patient and nice he is).

How about you?

What fundamental pieces of the attraction experience were missing in your relationship with her?

Here are some questions to ask yourself to find out now:

- Did you start out being a confident guy in the relationship, but end up becoming insecure, needy and clingy (e.g. because you began to doubt your value and attractiveness to her over time, you gave her too much power, you feared her reactions if you were confident or assertive, you lost touch with your ability to be "the man" in the relationship)?
- Did you make her your sole reason for living (or main source of happiness, identity and security as a man) and as a result, end up becoming jealous, controlling and overly protective of her? Did you realize that you were turning her off due to your emotional dependence on her (i.e. your neediness for her), but didn't know how to stop yourself from being that way?
- Did you make her feel feminine and girly in your presence, or did she feel more like your neutral friend or roommate?
- Did you create a relationship dynamic that caused her to want to be good to you, treat you well, be affectionate and be loving towards you, or did you unknowingly cause her to feel like - pulling away from you, being closed off and treating you with less and less respect over time?

- Were you a challenge to her, so she felt like she had to work hard to impress you and keep you interested in her, or did she feel as though you would put up with anything (i.e. her bad behavior, lack of respect towards you, lack of affection) just so you could stay with her?

By understanding what was really missing in your relationship with her, you can then blow her mind by attracting her in the ways that she always wanted to experience with you, but never got to.

You can literally make her begin to experience that during a 2-5 minute interaction in person.

When she begins to experience it, she will instantly feel a new kind of respect and attraction for you.

This causes her to drop her guard and open up to interacting with you more, so she can continue to experience more of the respect and attraction you are making her feel.

When she does that, she naturally begins to feel new sparks of love for you, which then causes her to realize that the love you and her share is real and hasn't died.

In fact, the break up has been what you and her needed to level up your love and both realize that you and her are meant to be.

5. Attract her again and then pull away, so she misses you and knows that her love for you is real

[image: Attract her again and then pull away, so she misses you and knows that her love for you is real]

Have you ever heard expression, â€œYou don't know what you've got until it's goneâ€?

It's true, but it doesn't apply to every ex back situation.

Why?

If your ex doesn't feel much (or any) respect, attraction and love you and is certain about her decision to break up with you, then you not being in her life probably won't change that.

She will simply begin to move on by dating new men and will then completely or pretty much completely forget about you.

You might pop into her mind from time to time, but since she will be happy and in love with another man, or enjoying a fun, single life, she just won't care that you're not in her life anymore.

So, that's why you have to do this correctly.

How so?

Before you cut off contact with her, you have to interact with her and re-attract her, so she will actually miss you when you're not contacting her.

Important: Don't go overboard and act too hard to get by ignoring her for weeks or months.

That doesn't work in almost all ex back cases.

[image: Give her a chance to miss you after re-attracting her]

What works is 3 to 7 days of space after re-attracting her.

She feels attracted to you, begins questioning her decision to break up with you and feels like she wants to see you in person, but you then cut off contact for a few days, or up to a week.

She then feels like she is losing you.

In many cases, a woman won't be able to stand that for very long and will reach out to her ex (e.g. via text or a phone call) to say hi.

He can then go ahead and get her back.

However, it's very important for you to understand if she doesn't contact you after a few days to a week, it doesn't mean that she's not missing you.

In some cases, a woman will avoid reaching out to her ex in case he rejects her.

Why?

If she contacts you and you don't answer, don't seem interested or worse, tell her that you're not interested anymore, then she ends up feeling rejected and broken up with.

So, to hold onto her position as the one who broke up with you, she doesn't contact you and secretly hopes that you will contact her.

This is why, if you've done the right thing of re-attracting her before cutting off contact for a few days to a week, then just go ahead and call her.

On the call, make her feel sparks of attraction for you (e.g. by being confident, using humor, flirting with her) and get her to meet up with you in person.

When you meet up in person, make her feel sparks of attraction for you and then progress to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship with her after that.

Avoid These 4 Mistakes to Make Her See That Your Love is Real

When you use the right approach to getting an ex woman back, things just flow and you and her get back together.

She automatically feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and wants to be your girl again.

On the other hand, when you use the wrong approach, it results in the woman putting her guard up, wanting to get further away from you and in some cases, even blocking you from seeing her or contacting her.

If you want to use the right approach, be sure to avoid the following mistakes that guys often make when in a situation like yours:

1. Trying to explain all the reasons why your love is real

You probably have plenty of great reasons why the love between you and your ex is real and shouldn't be thrown away.

Yet, if your ex woman has detached from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you (i.e. she doesn't feel like she's in love with you anymore, she's over it, she doesn't feel the way you feel), then she's not really going to care about your reasons.

What she cares about now is how she feels.

You may be in love with her, but that doesn't make her be in love with you.

So, if you try to explain why the love you and her share is real, she just won't connect with it in the same way you do.

In a case like that, she may end up saying something like, â€œI do care about you and I appreciate everything you've said, but I've made my decision and you need to respect that. I cherish the time we spent together, but it's over and we need to move on. I'm sure you will find someone special who loves you as much as you deserve to be loved. I can't be that woman for you anymore. I wish you all the best.â€

Alternatively, in a case where a woman still does feel some love for her ex, she may stop for a moment and consider what he is saying, but she will ultimately come to the same conclusion of wanting to remain broken up from him.

For example: She may think, â€œI want to believe that our love is real, but I can't help but wonder – if it is real, then why do I want to break up with him? Surely if it is real, then I will want to be with him and only him. Yet, I think something is missing. Maybe that's because he just doesn't understand the subtle things that have ruined my feelings for him over time, like his insecurity, lack of manliness around me or inability to put me back in my place when I'm being bitchy. There have also been way too many arguments, disagreements and misunderstandings between us that never really got resolved properly. We just kept sweeping things under the carpet and hoping they'd go away, but they didn't. The same fundamental problems between us were always there and he didn't know how to fix them. It's like we did love each other and it was real, but he wasn't ever able to make the relationship work with me. So, now I just want to move on with my life and find a man who understands me, knows how to make me remain in love with him and wants to build a future with me.â€

In a case like that, a woman will then close herself off from you (e.g. by unfriending you on social media, blocking your number, refusing to meet up with you in person), making it difficult for you to re-attract her and get her back.

This is why, you shouldn't waste time trying to explain to her why you believe your love is real, because at the moment, she probably doesn't care.

If you want her to care, you have to focus on one thing and one thing only: Her feelings for you.

You can make her experience strong, renewed feelings for you by interacting with her and making her feel sparks of respect and sexual attraction for you (by being confident, being a bit of a challenge, using humor and flirting, making her feel girly in comparison to your masculine approach to the interaction).

When you do that, she will naturally begin to think about the reasons why the love you and her share is real and shouldn't be thrown away,

When that happens, she naturally starts to feel as though the relationship is worth fighting for and that she would be losing out if she didn't give you another chance.

2. Asking her to try and remember how much she used to love you

It doesn't work.

Why?

By getting her to focus on how good things used to be between you and her, it simply highlights how bad things have become.

It reminds her that what she wants to feel is the kind of love she experienced in the beginning and that just doesn't seem possible with you anymore.

So, what you need to do instead is focus instead on building new, exciting feelings for you based on how you make her feel now.

When you interact with her, does she feel new sparks of respect and attraction for the new and improved you?

Have you made the correct adjustments to how you approach attracting her, or are you essentially using the same kind of approach that caused her to want to break up with you?

3. Asking her what you can do to get her to love you the way she used to

It seems like it makes good sense to ask a woman what you can do to get her to love you.

After all, she knows exactly what she wants, so if she tells you, then you can follow her instructions and everything will be great.

Unfortunately, that's not how love and attraction works between men and women.

In fact, when a man asks a woman what he needs to do to get her back or what he can do make her love him the way she used to, rather than please her and make feel excited, it overwhelms her and disappoints her.

She feels overwhelmed when she thinks about the amount of work she'd have to put into changing him and transforming him into the kind man she wants him to be (e.g. deeply masculine to his core, a challenge that she wants to impress and win over more and more throughout her life).

When she imagines what she'd have to go through with him to make that happen, it's disappointing because she knows other women get that without having to teach and mentor their man.

So, don't make the mistake of asking your ex what you can do to get her to love you the way she used to.

Instead, just start being the kind of man she truly wants you to be.

You don't have to be perfect and have mastered everything.

Instead, you just have to let her see that you get it now and are already beginning to think, feel, behave and act like the kind of man she always wanted you to be.

When she sees that, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling respect and attraction for you again.

When she's feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she will automatically begin to connect with the love she used to feel for you, as well as experiencing the new, more exciting love she now feels for you.

4. Pouring your heart out to hopefully change her mind based on how much you care about her

A woman only cares that you have feelings for her, if she has feelings for you.

If your ex has disconnected from the love, respect and attraction she once felt, then you telling her how much you love her isn't going to make her suddenly want to be your girl again.

The feelings (of respect and attraction) have to be mutual, or at least close to mutual before a woman will care and be excited that you love her and want to be with her only her.

If it's a one-sided thing where you are so in love with her, but she feels nothing or little for you, then a woman can even get a bit annoyed and react in an angry way.

For example: She may think, “Why do you keep telling me that you love me and need me in your life? Why are you being so selfish that all you care about is how you feel? What about how I feel? Don't you understand that I don't love you anymore? Do you even know why? Do you realize that every time you tell me about your feelings, you make me feel as though you're disregarding my feelings? It's like it's all about you and what you want. You don't even know what I want.”

When that happens, she closes herself off even more (e.g. ignores your texts, doesn't reply to emails, unfriends you from social media) so she can begin moving on without you.

Don't let that happen to you.

If you want her to realize that your love is real, then make her feel it, rather than trying to explain it to her.

Is it Possible to Get Back Together After a Bad Breakup?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes.

Here are 5 reasons why:

1. As the old saying goes, “All is fair in love and war”

[image: All is fair in love and war]

In other words, people don't always stick to being as nice as they usually are, or follow normal rules of behavior when it comes to love or war.

Sometimes, due to becoming so emotionally attached, a person will lash out or end up saying or doing things that they later regret.

So, it's totally understandable that you might not have behaved in totally perfect ways during and after the breakup with her.

The reality is that both men and women often behave completely out of character (and end up regretting it) when going through a break up with someone they truly love and don't want to lose.

For example: In terms of a man:

- He starts begging, pleading and even crying as a way of hopefully making his woman change her mind.
- He gets angry with her for wanting to leave him and says things that he regrets later on (e.g. “I can't believe you're being such a bitch to me! What the fk has gotten into you?” or, “I was so stupid to trust you and get into a relationship with you. After all I've done for you. How dare you break up with me like it's just nothing. I'm going to make sure you regret this” or, “Yeah? Well I never loved you anyway. Fk you! Get the fk out of my house!” and so on). It can get pretty nasty between some couples.
- He becomes physically aggressive and possibly even violent towards her (e.g. he grabs her arm during arguments, he slaps her, he tries to choke her, he chokes her, pushes her or hits her).
- He accuses her of cheating on him and calls her names (e.g. slut, tramp, whore, skanky ass bitch).
- He insists that she owes it to him to stay in the relationship and work things out. He becomes very serious about that and pressures her to the point where he is being unreasonable.
- He demands that she tells him what he's done wrong and how to fix it, so they can work things out.
- He panics and sends her a whole load of texts; most of them emotional and irrational.
- He writes her long, detailed texts trying to fix the relationship, which only causes her to feel exhausted to have to read it all and turned off by the fact that he's ranting on so much to her via text.
- He starts calling her friends and family names behind their back to her (e.g. “You're family are a bunch of clueless idiots” or, “Your friend is a bitch. She has been trying to ruin our relationship from the beginning” or, “Your sister is a mean, manipulative, jealous bitch who can't stand you being happy. Can't you see that? You're delusional if you think she has your best interests at heart” and so on).

- He turns up at her work with flowers and card, pleading for another chance, or simply leaves the flowers and card at reception and asks them to be passed on to her. Then, had the office knows she is experiencing relationship problems, which then annoys her and causes her to want to distance herself from him even more.
- He arrives at her home in tears, hoping that she take pity on him and allow him inside.
- He threatens to kill himself or hurt himself if she doesn’t give him another chance.
- He doesn’t let her leave his house/apartment when she is trying to break up with him and forces her to stay there and continue talking to him about everything.

Of course, with a lot of those things above, they aren’t ‘fair’ and accepted just because it’s a break up.

Some of those things can get a man into trouble and shouldn’t ever be done (i.e. physical violence towards a woman), so I have to say that for the record.

All that aside, it’s important to understand that both men and women sometimes end up acting a little crazy, or a little out of character when they are being dumped.

In some cases, women get physically violent towards men and scratch, hit, bite, push and punch them during a break up.

Things can really get nasty between some couples.

Yet, the reality is that many of them do get back together, apologize and aim to never make the same mistakes again.

So, if you reacted in a way that you’re not proud of during and/or after your relationship with her, just know that you’re not alone.

Both men and women often mess up when they’re in the process of getting dumped, but thankfully, in many cases, the break up can be reversed and the couple can get back together.

The most important thing right now, is that you learn from the mistakes you made during/after the break up and adjust the way you act, behave and interact with your ex from now on.

For example: One adjustment that a man can make when talking to his ex woman, is to literally laugh at himself regarding how he behaved and then apologize.

He might laugh at himself and say, “Wow! I really lost it, didn’t I? I can’t believe I reacted that way. That was me being a real jerk. I’m sorry about that. I feel like a real idiot now for behaving in that way. I don’t expect you to forgive me of course, but I am sorry. It was very silly of me to react in that way” and try to have a laugh with her about it.

By being able to laugh at yourself and honestly apologize, it show her that you’re fully aware your behavior was unattractive, immature and silly.

As a result, she can then feel some respect for you based on you taking responsibility for your actions, rather than trying to sweep it under the carpet or pretend that it didn’t happen.

When she can see that you’ve learned from the experience and have already taken steps to become a better, more emotionally strong and mature man, she will naturally be able to drop her guard a little bit.

You then have your opening to reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

All over the word, millions of couples get back together after being able to forgive the other personâ€™s overreaction to the break up.

In fact, even in something as horrible as a divorce (thatâ€™s a really bad break up involving lawyers, separation of assets, division of family members and a whole lot of stress), couples are able to get back together and then stay together for life.

For example: According to research conducted by Nancy Kalish, Ph.D., professor emeritus of psychology at California State University, Sacramento, married couples that reunite after divorce have a 72% chance of staying together for life.

In other research from the Department of Communication Studies at the University of Texas, it was found that approximately 65% of U.S. college students had broken up and then gotten back together.

I can also tell you, after more than 15 years (as of typing this article) of experience helping men succeed with women that I hear back from new men every day whoâ€™ve gotten a woman back after all sorts of horrible break up situations.

Pretty much every man starts out thinking, â€œBut my situation is differentâ€ and he is right.

His situation is different, but the solution to get a woman back is the same (i.e. you need to get her respect back, make her feel attracted to you again and she will then open up to loving you again).

That can literally happen in minutes, hours or over the course of a few days to a week.

Itâ€™s only when you understand that, accept it and begin to do it that your ex then opens up and wants you back.

So, donâ€™t go through the next few weeks or months of your life thinking that your situation is too different, or is impossible.

Every guy thinks that at the start.

Yet, the smart men realize that although their situation isnâ€™t the same as other people, the steps to get an ex woman back are the same, so they go ahead and do it and get her back.

Another reason why it is possible to get back together after a bad breakup isâ€¦!

2. Sexual and romantic attraction is more compelling to a woman than almost anything else in life

[image: Sexual and romantic attraction is more compelling to a woman than almost anything else in life]

Although women donâ€™t often like to admit it, they do think with their heart and pussy, not just their brains.

Women often like to try to demean men by saying, â€œMen think with their dick,â€ but women have urges too.

The reality is that pretty much every woman on the planet has found herself lusting after a guy that she knows isnâ€™t good for her (e.g. a bad boy, a cheater, a guy who doesnâ€™t care about her, a guy who would only use her for sex; otherwise known to women as a fk boy).

Additionally, pretty much every woman has found herself behaving totally out of character and bending over backwards to please a man, when she has been romantically attracted and in love with him.

So, although most women like to give everyone the impression that they are totally in control of their emotions and attraction for men, it simply isn't true.

The majority of women will change their mind about a break up, if their ex suddenly causes them to feel strong respect, attraction and love again.

She will then rationalize it by saying, "I think he has changed. It's different this time. I can feel it. My woman's intuition is telling me to give him a chance."

Yet, she is simply feeling a renewed sense of sexual and romantic attraction for him based on the way he is now interacting with her, or possibly making her feel from a distance via social media.

So, even if your ex has said things like, "I hate you and I will never forgive you for how you behaved during our breakup. I don't care how sorry you are now, nothing you say or do will ever be able to change how I feel about you now," it still doesn't mean her feelings are cast in stone and never change.

The truth is, feelings change all the time.

Think about it!

There was a time when you and her were complete strangers and she didn't have any feelings for you whatsoever.

Then, when you met, she began to feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you.

Then, when she became your girlfriend, her feelings for you intensified and she started to really love you and adore you.

Yet, somewhere along the way, the relationship began to fall apart and her feelings started to change in a more negative direction.

Rather than feeling love, respect and attraction for you, she began to feel anger, resentment, disappointment, frustration and regret.

The reality is that your ex's feelings for you have changed multiple times in the past and they can easily change again.

How?

By making her feel the way she wants to feel when interacting with a man (i.e. feminine, girly, excited, challenged, comforted, in love, open).

It's a special mix of feelings that women search for and rarely find, so when you are the kind of man who can offer her that experience, she feels attracted to you like a magnet.

When a woman feels that level of attraction for a man, she will almost always be willing to forgive him and get back with him, even if they had a bad break up.

Of course, women will rarely admit that openly, but they pretty much all do it and will do it again if they feel like it.

Another reason why it is possible to get back together after a bad breakup is!

3. You and her can quickly get to a point where you forgive each other and even laugh about how badly the break up went

[image: You and her can get to a point where you forgive each other and even laugh about how badly the break up went]

Forgiveness can make a woman drop her guard and open back up to the idea of being with you again right away, or soon after.

Itâ€™s sort of like a melting of any resistance that a woman is holding onto against you.

Forgiveness allows her to let go of all of that and just see you for who you are now.

Yet, you have to go about it in the right way.

For example: Getting her to forgive you isnâ€™t about begging and pleading with her by saying things like, â€œPlease, forgive me. I know I stuffed up, but Iâ€™ll do anything to make it up to you. Just tell me how and I will do it I promise. Please just forgive meâ€ because it gives her a power over you that she doesnâ€™t want.

It can also make you seem desperate, which is never attractive to women.

So, what should you do instead?

Telling her that forgiving you will be for her benefit, not just yours and more importantly, that itâ€™s not about getting back together.

At this point, itâ€™s just about forgiveness so her remaining feelings of resistance against you can melt away and she then open up.

Whether you get her back at that point depends on your ability to attract her sexually and romantically.

For now though, just focus on getting her to forgive you.

For example: You can say (in a relaxed, easy-going manner without any trace of desperation or pleading) something like, â€œLook, I know that I messed up and Iâ€™m truly sorry for hurting you. Breaking up was a big wake up call for me. It actually made me understand that I was making a whole bunch of mistakes in the relationship and I deserved to get dumped. On a more positive note, it also made me realize how important you are to me and how silly I was for treating you the way I did. I donâ€™t expect you to believe me, but I really have changed and I would appreciate it if youâ€™d forgive me, so we can both move forward without being negative and bitter about our past. We all know what it feels like to be angry and bitter at another person and to carry that around for a long time. Itâ€™s not a nice feeling. If you arenâ€™t able to forgive me, then you might carry that into your next relationship it might cause problems for you. So, the mature thing to do here is to forgive me by understanding that people do make mistakes and sometimes, they can learn from those mistakes and change. Iâ€™m not asking you to give the relationship another chance. Weâ€™ve broken up and that is done. All I ask is that you forgive my mistakes, so we can both move on with a clean, healthy state of mind. So, can you forgive me and be able to walk away as friends, without any negative feelings?â€

Note: Getting her to forgive you like that isnâ€™t about literally encouraging her to move on and find a new man.

Instead, when she genuinely forgives you, she naturally begins to look at you in a new light, without so much negatively, or without any negativity at all.

This causes her to not want to completely block you out of her life and instead, to remain open to interacting with you, even if youâ€™re just interacting as friends.

Then, you can use that to interact with her and make her feel new sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you, which will naturally make her want to hook up with you again, or even get back with you for real.

When that happens, the bad break up that you and her went through will become something you can both look back on and laugh about.

Another reason why it is possible to get back together after a bad breakup isâ€¦!

4. What you might feel was a bad breakup, others may see as pretty normal

The truth is, no relationship is perfect all the time.

Couples often fight, disagree and even get to the point where one or the other is saying things like, â€œThatâ€™s it! Iâ€™ve had it! I am fed up with your crap. Itâ€™s over! Iâ€™m leaving you. Goodbye!â€

In fact, itâ€™s fairly normal for couples to almost breakup several times during the course of their relationship.

For example: According to a study conducted by Amber Vennum, an assistant professor of Family Studies and Human Services at Kansas State University, about 37% of couples living together, and 23% of married couples have broken up and then gotten back together again.

Additionally, as mentioned earlier in the article, the Department of Communication Studies at the University of Texas found that approximately 65% of U.S. college students had broken up and then gotten back together again.

So, breaking up and getting back together is pretty normal.

The reality is that many relationships even go through one, or even several actual breakups before it eventually works out (i.e. theyâ€™re happy and stay together for life).

Additionally, just because your breakup seems bad to you (e.g. because itâ€™s your first serious breakup with your girl, youâ€™ve never experienced a breakup before this one, things got a little heated, you said or did things that you now regret, she seemed very upset with you), it probably wouldnâ€™t seem as bad to someone else who has more a lot more experience with relationships.

Sure, you may have stuffed up, but many people (men and women) overreact or react badly to getting dumped and then get the relationship back together.

If you are willing to learn from your past mistakes and change your approach to attraction with your ex (i.e. understand how to attract her in new ways and then interact with her to let her experience it), you will be surprised by the results you get (i.e. you will almost certainly get her back).

So, donâ€™t let a bad breakup stop you from being with the love of your life again.

Get her back.

Another reason why it is possible to get back together after a bad breakup isâ€¦!

5. Women donâ€™t always walk away feeling 100% sure about the breakup

[image: Women don't always walk away feeling 100% sure about the break up]

Even if a woman breaks up with a guy, swears that she never wants to see him again, says she hates him and that nothing he says will ever change her mind, itâ€™s no guarantee she will feel that way a few days, a week or a month from now.

When the dust settles and the negative emotions associated with the break up (e.g. anger, resentment, bitterness) start to fade into the background, her view on never forgiving her ex may start to change.

For example: She may begin to think, â€œI said that I would never forgive him, but Iâ€™m starting to realize that some of the reasons we broke up over were trivial and heâ€™s not all that bad. Maybe I overreacted. Maybe we could have saved the relationship. I donâ€™t know. Iâ€™m just not as sure about this as I was a few days/weeks ago.â€

She then naturally drops her guard a little bit and opens up to at least texting or talking with her ex again, even though she initially said that she never wanted to talk to him or see him again.

This small opening, is all a guy needs to then reactivate her feelings and make her want him back for real.

Couples get back together based on that all the time.

In the same way, regardless of how bad your breakup was, it doesnâ€™t mean your ex will continue to feel as certain about never wanting to see you again as she did when she broke up with you.

The reality is that after she calms down and begins to remember some of your good qualities (this usually happens within 3 to 7 days), she will begin to think of you and the break up from a different perspective.

This is why, if you donâ€™t think you can get her back immediately, giving her 3 to 7 days of space will help calm things down.

While giving her space, you need to get yourself ready to properly re-attract her, get her to forgive you and make her want to give the relationship another chance.

Donâ€™t just wait a week and then contact her via text with a, â€œHeyâ€ or some other type of feeler text to see if she is responsive.

Then, if she isn't, just waiting and seeing if she will eventually respond.

Youâ€™ve got to be more thorough than that if you want her back, especially after a bad break up.

Get Her Back After a Bad Breakup By Avoiding These 4 Mistakes

1. Feeling like you have no chance, so you just cut off contact and wait and hope that she reaches out to you

Feeling dejected and discouraged after a bad breakup is normal.

Yet, if you want her back, you have to get past those feelings, rather than letting them consume you and stop you from taking the action you need to take to get her back.

In many cases, guys have no idea how to get their woman back, so they just cut off contact and hope that she reaches out to get him back.

It rarely works though.

Why?

When a woman has had enough of her boyfriend (or husband), is turned off by him, wants to remain broken up and is planning on moving on without him, then sheâ€™s usually not going to care if he doesnâ€™t contact her anymore.

Instead of thinking, â€œOh no! Why isnâ€™t he calling me?â€ or, â€œI miss him so much now that Iâ€™m not hearing from him. Maybe I should text him to say hi,â€ she will usually feel relieved that she no longer has to deal with him.

The time he wastes cutting off contact, will almost always be the time a woman uses to open herself up to dating and hooking up with new men, so she can make herself feel better and move on from him.

So, by the time he realizes that she's not going to make the first move and decides to contact her (e.g. 30 or 60 days later), a guy is often shocked to find out that she has already moved on.

In many cases, she is happy in a new relationship and in love and asks him never to contact him again.

His whole plan to cut off contact backfired completely and he ended up losing her.

So, don't fall into the trap of thinking that giving your ex a few weeks or even months of space is what will make her come running back to you.

In almost all ex back cases I've seen, it doesn't.

Instead, the woman gets over him and moves on.

What should you do instead?

Interact with her, get her to forgive you, reawaken her feelings of respect, attraction and love and get her back.

That's how men all over the world do it and it works.

It's the manly way to do it because you take control of the situation, rather than waiting around in the hope that she takes control of the situation.

In almost all cases, a woman who has dumped a guy won't suddenly take control of the ex back process and get him back.

She will just move on.

So, if you want her back, you need to man up by taking control of the situation and guiding her back into a relationship with you.

2. Apologizing over and over for how badly you behaved

Sometimes a guy feels that if he apologizes over and over again, his ex will take pity on him and give him another chance based on that.

Yet, women don't want to feel as though they are being manipulated into sticking with a man out of pity.

This is why, one sincere apology is enough.

You can also add in a "Sorry" here and there in the natural course of a conversation with her, but try to avoid repeating your overall apology (i.e. where you briefly go into some detail about why you are sorry).

If you do keep repeating the overall apology, a woman can get the sense that you're desperate or confused about how to re-attract her, which will turn her off.

Repeating the overall apology can also give her a false sense of superiority, where she feels like she is the more valuable one in the relationship compared to you.

If that happens, she can begin to look down on you and feel as though she'd almost be doing you a favor by getting back with you.

That is a total turn off for women, so don't make her feel that way.

It may feel like the "right thing to do" because you behaved so badly and want to show her how sincere you are, but repeating your apology over and over (especially with a sense of desperation, pleading or unworthiness) isn't going to make a woman feel attracted.

It's very important for you to understand that a woman's attraction for a man doesn't work the same way as a man's attraction for a woman.

For example: If a woman apologizes over and over and even in a desperate way, it can make a man feel more attracted to her because she is showing him so much respect and devotion.

Yet, a woman's attraction for a man is largely based on her being able to look up to him and respect him as a man, so if he gives off a sense of being desperate or pleading with her, she simply can't look up to him in those moments and will therefore be turned off.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Trying to repair the damage by explaining yourself via an email or a series of long texts or social media messages

Apart from seeming desperate (i.e. for putting so much effort into writing long texts, emails or messages to her), it can also be emotionally exhausting for a woman to have to read it all and then reply.

Essentially, if something needs to be discussed in detail or if you are trying to explain yourself in detail, it needs to happen on a phone call (audio or video) or in person.

If you try to do it all via texts, social media messages or emails, a woman will usually get to the point where she ignores the emails, doesn't reply to the texts or messages or even doesn't read them at all anymore.

In some cases, she will get so turned off and exhausted by her ex guy ranting that she will block him.

Another mistake to avoid making is

4. Feeling like she must truly hate you now

Even though your situation might seem completely hopeless, the reality is that when you begin to reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you again, anything becomes possible.

Every day, all over the world, women go back to men that they've broken up with and in many cases, after a bad breakup.

So, regardless of how your ex feels about you at the moment (e.g. turned off, over you, disgusted by you, scared of you, pissed off at you), her feelings aren't cast in stone.

Her feelings can change.

You can get her to forgive your mistakes and bring her love for you back to life by interacting with her and showing her that you truly are a better man now.

When she sees that you really have changed in the ways that actually matter to her, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some respect for you.

When she starts to respect you, she naturally also starts to feel attracted to you again and she then becomes open to reconnecting with her feelings of love for you as well.

So, don't continue feeling hopeless about your situation and assuming that it's unfixable. Don't miss out on the opportunity to get her back and have her be in love with you again. Every day, all over the world, men get women back after all sorts of horrible, bad break up situations. You can do it too.

My Girlfriend Broke Up With Me For Another Guy She Met Recently

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 reasons why a woman will do that and how to get her back:

1. She fell out of love with you, so she no longer felt the need to be loyal

[image: She fell out of love with you, so she no longer felt the need to be loyal]

When a guy begins to behave in unattractive ways in a relationship with a woman (e.g. he becomes too needy and clingy, he treats her like a buddy rather than like a desirable woman, he gets angry at her too often, he becomes emotionally sensitive), she will gradually begin to disconnect from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

When that happens, she may begin thinking things like, â€œIâ€™m just not happy anymore. Being with him used to feel so good, but now Iâ€™m just miserable all the time. The spark between us is dead and it makes me feel jealous every time I see a couple that looks happy and in love. I want that to be me. I want to be with someone who makes me feel love and desire for him, rather than stay stuck with a guy that no longer makes me feel the way I want to feel. Iâ€™m so confused. Is it time for us to break up?â€œ

If she then meets another guy who sparks her sexual and romantic feelings for him, she will naturally feel drawn to him.

Hereâ€™s the thing thoughâ€¦

Even though a woman in a relationship might feel attraction for someone else other than her guy, because she loves him, feels sexually attracted to him and respects him, she wonâ€™t be tempted to break his trust by following through on her feelings (i.e. cheating on him with the other guy).

On the other hand, if her feelings for her man have been eroded over time, then she almost certainly wonâ€™t feel like she has to be loyal to him anymore and she may use her attraction for the new guy to break up with him and move on.

So, in a case like this, for you to get your girlfriend back, you will have to interact with her (over the phone and in person) and begin reactivating her feelings for you.

The more respect and attraction she feels for you again, the more she will be able to see the flaws in her new guy (e.g. what seemed like a strong sense of confidence before now comes across as arrogance, what felt to her like he was taking the lead in the relationship now feels like heâ€™s being controlling).

At the same time, she starts to remember all the good things about you that she misses (e.g. you always treated her with respect and kindness, you have a great sense of humor and made her laugh, you got on well with her family and friends) and she realizes that she made a mistake.

She then naturally begins to reconnect with her original feelings of love for you and wants you back.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend broke up with you for another guy she met recently isâ€¦

2. She never planned on committing for life

[image: She never planned on committing for life]

Sometimes a woman will get into a relationship with a man because she doesn't want to be single while all her friends and female family members have boyfriends and husbands.

However, at the back of her mind she may be thinking things like, He's really a good guy and I know he will treat me well, but I can tell that he's not the one for me. So, I'm just going to enjoy it while it lasts, without worrying about things getting too serious.

She might enjoy hanging out with him, going on dates, being spoiled by him and always having a partner to accompany her to weddings, parties and other couples events, but she never fully commits herself to him because she doesn't really feel that all essential spark of attraction with him.

Instead, she views him more as a friend than a boyfriend that she wants to be with in the long-term and possibly even for life.

So, when another guy comes along and ignites feelings inside of her that her boyfriend never did, she won't hesitate to get into a relationship with him.

Here's the thing!

Even though a woman might not openly admit that she is looking for a man to settle down with, her biological clock is ticking and she knows it (i.e. she needs to have children before she gets too old).

If she doesn't want to have children right away (or at all), her instincts will still push her to find a man to be with for life.

So, every day she wastes in a relationship with a guy she believes is not the one for her, is another day she risks losing her perfect man to another woman.

This is why, if she meets a guy who is better able to fill her needs in a relationship (e.g. he makes her feel like a sexy, desirable woman rather than making her feel like a neutral friend), she will listen to her instincts and hook up with him.

In a case like this, if you want to get your girlfriend back, you are going to have to make her see you as the guy for her.

That means, you can't approach her as a sweet, reliable friend who is willing to hang around and wait for her to realize her mistake and come back.

Instead, you need to use every chance you get to interact with her (especially over the phone and in person) and make her feel strong surges of respect and sexual attraction for you.

The more attracted you make her feel again, the more likely it is that she will begin seeing you as more than just the ex she didn't want to commit to.

Suddenly, you seem like the right guy for her after all and she feels compelled to give you another chance in case she ends up regretting it later on.

You can then easily get her back.

However, you must spark her feelings for you first.

If you don't, she will continue to explore her feelings for her new guy.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend broke up with you for another guy she met recently is!

3. She is using him as a rebound to help her get out of the relationship with you

[image: She is using him as a rebound to help her get out of the relationship with you]

Sometimes, a woman will find herself stuck in a relationship that doesn't seem to be living up to her expectations.

It's not that bad, but it's not that good either.

However, every time she attempts to break up with her guy, he will talk her out of her decision by saying things like, "Please don't go. I promise I will change if you give me just one more chance," or "Please baby, don't do this to us. I can't live without you in my life," or "After everything we've shared together, we owe it to ourselves to try and make this relationship work. I promise things will be different this time."

Over time, she may begin to realize that nothing will ever change with her guy and that the only way to break up with him is to find a new man to get into a relationship with.

She will then use the new guy to help herself get over her ex.

Yet, once she is over her ex enough to handle being on her own, or when she meets another man she feels more attracted to, she will quickly dump the new guy.

The best way to get a woman back in a situation like this is by changing your approach to attraction.

Don't contact her and offer her the same old attraction experience that she got bored of in the relationship.

Instead, make her feel attracted to you in new and interesting ways, so she feels compelled to give you another chance, or at least meet up with you and sleep with you to see how she feels after that.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend broke up with you for another guy she met recently is

4. She didn't intend for it to happen, but she feels a better connection with him

[image: She didn't intend it to happen, but she feels a better connection with him]

In some cases, a relationship will be going along fairly well and a woman won't intend to cheat on her boyfriend, but she does.

Why?

It's usually because, despite her boyfriend being a good guy, she isn't really in love with him.

She's fairly happy, but something is missing.

Yet, because she can't put her finger on it, she usually decides to just ignore it and hopes that things get better.

That is, until she meets another guy with whom she has a much stronger connection (e.g. he's equally kind and attentive, but he's also more of a challenge which makes her feel more attracted to him, he is a good man to her, but he also makes her feel like a desirable woman when she's with him rather than treating her like a neutral friend).

Then suddenly, the missing pieces of the attraction experience between her and her guy become glaring and she feels like she can no longer stay with him.

She then breaks up with him so that she can be with her new guy.

The good news though, is that her ex can still get her back.

All it takes is for him to interact with her over the phone and more importantly, in person and give her an upgraded attraction experience.

For example: Some of the ways he can do that are byâ€¦!

- Being the same good guy to her, but also being more of a challenge so she now feels as though she has to work hard to impress him and keep him interested in her, rather than feeling like she doesnâ€™t have to put in any effort.
- Becoming more confident and self-assured about his attractiveness and value to her, rather than feeling insecure and unsure of himself around her.
- Seeing himself as more than good enough for her, rather than thinking that the other guy is better than him.
- Being more manly in his attitude and in how he thinks, talks, acts and behaves, rather than allowing her to dominate him with her confident personality.
- Improving his ability to make her feel like a desirable, sexy woman during interactions, rather than making her feel like a neutral friend, or worse, turned off by him.

The more attracted he makes her feel again, the less sure she will become about her feelings for the new guy.

She will then start to want him back for her own selfish reasons (e.g. she feels that what she has with her new guy is average compared to the way she now feels with her ex, she fears that she made a mistake and if she loses her ex she will never find true happiness again).

So, by approaching the ex back process in that way, getting her back becomes easy for him, because getting back together is what she wants to do.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend broke up with you for another guy she met recently isâ€¦!

5. She was planning on breaking up with you for quite a while and was trying to find a way to do it

[image: She was planning on breaking up with you for quite a while and was trying to find a way to do it]

Sometimes, a woman might find herself stuck in a relationship that no longer makes her happy.

Somewhere along the line, she stopped feeling respect, attraction and love for her guy, but never could find the right moment to break up with him.

In her mind, she may have even thought things like, â€œItâ€™s his birthday soon. I canâ€™t dump him now. That would be heartless,â€ or â€œAs soon as the holidays are over, Iâ€™ll break up with him,â€ or â€œI donâ€™t know what to say to end this. I donâ€™t want to hurt him, but I also donâ€™t want to give him the chance to try and talk me out of my decision to leave.â€

So, when she finally met a man who sparked her sexual and romantic feelings for him, she finally had the excuse she was looking for to break up with her guy.

If he then tried to talk her out of her decision, she could say something along the lines of, â€œSorry, but Iâ€™ve met someone else. I never meant to hurt you, but things just happened. I hope you can accept it and move on,â€™ and avoid getting into long, drawn out conversations about the relationship and what it would take to make her change her mind.

Win Her Back From the Other Guy By Avoiding These 6 Mistakes

Right now you might be thinking that getting your girlfriend back now that sheâ€™s with another guy is impossible.

Yet, itâ€™s not.

When you give her an upgraded attraction experience, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again.

This is why, what you say and do from now on matters.

It will either turn her on and make her want you back, or push her even more into the arms of her new guy.

Itâ€™s up to you.

This is why, avoiding the following mistakes is crucial:

1. Getting angry at her and trying to make her feel guilty for the pain you are now experiencing

Being dumped for another man is not a nice experience and understandably, a guy might feel angry with his girl because of it.

Yet, venting his anger on her is actually a bad idea, because not only doesnâ€™t it change anything, it usually adds to her reasons for leaving him.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

A woman is not a manâ€™s property and she doesnâ€™t have to stay in a relationship with a man if she doesnâ€™t want to.

So, getting angry with her and trying to make her feel guilty because he canâ€™t handle being dumped by her, isnâ€™t going to change her mind.

In fact, she will most likely lose even more respect and attraction for him as a man and convince her that her new guy is the right guy for her.

As a result, getting her back becomes even more difficult, because sheâ€™s now emotionally closed off to him.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

2. Asking her too many questions about the other guy and coming across as insecure

Sometimes, a guy might try to understand why his girl left him for the other guy, by asking questions about her new man.

For example: He might ask things likeâ€¦

- What has he got that I donâ€™t?
- What do you see in him?
- What does he do?
- What kind of car does he drive?
- Is he better looking than me?
- Does he have a lot of money?

Yet, even though his questions might simply stem from curiosity, in a womanâ€™s eyes it will likely look as though heâ€™s feeling insecure about himself and in his attractiveness as a man.

As a result, she will lose even more respect and attraction for him.

So, regardless of how curious you feel about your girlfriendâ€™s new guy, asking her a bunch of questions about him is not a good idea.

Not only wonâ€™t that help you get her back, it may even make him appear more attractive in her eyes (i.e. because he seems more confident and self-assured compared to you).

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

3. Never really understanding what pieces of the attraction experience were missing

[image: Never really understanding what pieces of the attraction experience were missing]

A woman wonâ€™t always tell a guy her secret reasons for breaking up with him.

Instead, she might just move on with another guy rather than have to explain herself to him.

This is why, if you want to get your girlfriend back, you have to get to the core reasons for the break up (other than her meeting someone else) and begin to fix those things, rather than giving up and walking away, or trying to patch up the relationship by offering her things that she doesnâ€™t want or even care about.

If you canâ€™t give her the attraction she really wants in a relationship, she will continue to move on with the other guy instead.

So, if you want to get her back now, youâ€™ve got to be willing to first understand what was missing in the relationship and then, to use a new approach to attraction to re-attract her.

Donâ€™t try to get her back by thinking, acting and behaving in the same old ways that caused her to look to another guy in the hope of finding what she felt was missing in her relationship with you.

Itâ€™s time to use a new and unexpected approach that shocks her into wanting to be your woman again.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

4. Hoping that she will come back on her own, if you just wait long enough

If your plan to getting your girlfriend back is to wait for her to get tired of her new guy and come back to you, youâ€™re likely in for a big shock.

Hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦

When a womanâ€™s sexual and romantic feelings are being sparked by another guy, chances are pretty high, sheâ€™s not going to suddenly start missing an ex who is ignoring her.

Instead, sheâ€™s going to be falling more and more in love with the guy who is there and is making her feel the way she wants to feel (e.g. attracted, excited, exhilarated, turned on).

So, if you want her back, you need to make sure that you're the one who is sparking her feelings. The more respect, attraction and love she starts to feel for you again, the more she will want to be your girl again.

On the other hand, if you wait on the sidelines for her to come back on her own, you could be waiting in vain.

Another mistake to avoid is

5. Losing confidence in your ability to keep a woman happy, which ends up coming through in your vibe when interacting with new women

Sometimes, when a guy gets dumped for someone else, he might begin thinking that he just wasn't good enough as a boyfriend.

However, when a guy starts thinking like that, it begins to show in his attitude and in the way that he talks, thinks, acts and behaves around his ex and other women (e.g. he puts himself down during conversation, he has a defeatist attitude, he seems nervous and unsure of himself, he uses self-deprecating humor).

What he doesn't realize is that kind of thinking is naturally unattractive to women.

Of course, when he notices that his ex and other women feel turned off by him, he then loses even more confidence in himself and in his ability to get her back.

Don't put yourself through that unnecessary pain.

If you want to win your ex back, or even attract another, high quality woman, then you have to believe in yourself and in your value to her.

If you can't believe that you're good enough for her, neither will she.

Then, the idea of leaving her new guy for a man who isn't worthy of her, simply won't appeal to her.

Another mistake to avoid is

6. Not knowing that you can break up her new relationship and get her back fairly quickly

When a woman looks like she's moving on with someone else, a guy might start believing that getting her back will be impossible.

Yet, here's the thing

Just because your ex is with someone else right now, it doesn't mean he's the right guy for her.

So, don't give up.

You really can change how she feels about you and get her back, if you want to.

You can take control of the ex back process by focusing on reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you, so she feels confused about her feelings for the other guy.

Then kiss, have sex and get her back into a relationship with you that 100% better than before.

How Will I Know if My Ex Wife Misses Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Not every woman makes it obvious that they're missing their ex husband.

Many women don't want to give their ex husband the satisfaction of knowing she is missing him.

Others are worried that if they seem to be missing him, he won't feel much need to improve or impress her in any way if they get back together.

Here are some potential signs that she is missing you, but always remember that you shouldn't get too caught up in the signs and should instead take action to get her back.

1. She gets in touch with you when she doesn't have to [image: She gets in touch with you when she doesn't have to]

Many wives walk away from a separation or divorce absolutely hating their ex husband.

It's pretty sad to see.

In cases like those, the woman doesn't want to be in contact with her ex husband unless absolutely necessary (e.g. they have shared custody of their children together and have to text or talk on the phone to arrange times and dates, they have mutual business and financial interests and have to discuss things regularly).

She doesn't want to give him the impression that she is open to talking to him casually, or still unsure about her decision to leave him, so she will avoid contacting him at all costs.

This is why, if your ex wife has no excuse to contact you, but has been doing it anyway (and being friendly), there's a good chance that she still thinks about you and misses you.

Of course, there can be other sneaky reasons why she is doing it, which I will discuss in this post, but for now, let's just assume that she is contacting you because she still does miss you and is unsure whether you and her will remain separated or divorced for life.

If she is missing you, the most important question you need to answer is, what are you going to do about it?

Are you going to take the bull by the horns and begin re-attracting her and then seducing her, so and her can get back together, or are you going to keep waiting for more signs from her and then potentially risk losing her if she opens herself up to dating new men and falls in love with someone else?

Here's the thing:

A lot of men allow their self-doubt to ruin the chance they still have with their ex wife.

For example: A man might get contacted by his ex wife and rather than take it as a positive sign and then begin the process of getting her back, he thinks, Well, it's nice that she contacts me, but that doesn't necessarily mean she misses me. She's probably just trying to find out if I'm still missing her so she can feel good about herself. Alternatively, she might just feel sorry for me, or wants to be friendly. I don't want to read too much into it, make a move and then get rejected by her. I couldn't handle losing her again.

The thing is, he could be right, or he could be wrong.

She may only be contacting him to be nice, to find out if heâs still missing her or because she wants to see if heâs okay.

Yet, she might also be contacting him because sheâs feeling lonely, missing what they had and secretly wishing they could reconcile and get a relationship started again.

Which one is true?

Well, when it comes to getting an ex back, you never know for sure, which is why you have the confident and courageous, rather than insecure and afraid.

Unfortunately, a lot of men donât learn what you are learning now and as a result, a man will doubt his chances with her and just wait for her give him a crystal clear signal that she misses him and wants him back.

Yet, that almost never happens because the woman usually doesnât want to risk getting rejected if her ex husband has completely lost interest in her.

Additionally, in many cases, she quickly gets tired of contacting him without him doing anything to get her back, so she stops trying to interact with him and begins opening herself up to dating new men.

If she happens to meet a man who makes her feel the kind of respect, attraction and love that she has been looking for, then she will rapidly lose interest in trying to rekindle things with her ex husband and will try to move on with the new man.

If you donât want that to happen in your case, then donât sabotage yourself by filling your head with negative self-talk (e.g. âThereâs no way she would want me back. We went through a horrible separation/divorce. She was totally over meâ).

Youâve got to believe in yourself and be courageous if you want her back.

So, if she has been contacting you when she really didnât have to, then take it as a sign that sheâs missing you.

Thereâs no guarantee that it means she is missing you, but take it as a sign that she is.

Use it to feel confident and as though you have a real opening to get her back.

By interacting with her in a confident way, she will naturally feel some respect and attraction for you, which will open her up further to the possibility of rekindling with you.

So, call her on the phone or better yet, meet up with her in person (e.g. to catch up for a coffee to say hi as friends) and start reactivating her feelings of respect and attraction for you again.

After all, for her to have wanted to marry you in the first place, it means that she once had very strong feelings of love, respect and attraction for you.

That will still be there in the background and you can get her to reconnect with it.

Why?

The fact is that love doesnât die.

It simply gets pushed into the background and covered over with negative feelings (e.g. frustration, disappointment, anger, resentment).

You can replace those negative feelings with positive feelings and when you do, the love will come back into the foreground.

She will literally begin to connect with the love that she used to feel for you.

Another potential sign that your ex wife misses you isâ€¦!

2. She likes your social media posts

[image: She likes your social media posts]

Although itâ€™s possible that your ex wife is only clicking like for the heck of it, to be nice, to be seen as a good person by other, or even because she wants to mess with your head.

Yet, itâ€™s also likely that she has been clicking like because misses you and is trying to show you that she doesnâ€™t hate you.

As a result of missing you, thinking about you and wondering what youâ€™re up to, she has been checking your social media as a way of keeping in touch with you, without making her feelings too obvious.

Why?

In many cases, a woman doesnâ€™t want to get rejected by the ex that she dumped, separated or divorced.

She has been able to walk away in the position of power (i.e. she left you) and doesnâ€™t want that to be switched around now if she shows interest and you reject her.

This is why, in almost all cases, a woman will wait for her ex man to take the lead in the reconciliation process.

She will give him subtle hints and signs, which could be seen as innocent (e.g. clicking like, staying in contact when she doesnâ€™t have to), rather than directly saying, â€œHey, I miss you. Want to get back together?â€

This is why, you canâ€™t get stuck doubting yourself and wondering whether or not she is showing enough positive signs of interest.

You just have to be courageous and get things moving along.

For example: Donâ€™t just click like back on her photos or leave nice comments on her posts, because that will most-likely lead nowhere.

Instead, have the balls to pick up the phone, make her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again and then get her to meet up with you in person.

In person, you can then fully re-spark her feelings for you (e.g. by showing her via your attitude, actions, behavior, conversation style and the way you respond to her that youâ€™re a completely different man to the one she divorced).

She will then naturally open back up to seeing you more often to see where things go, or will at least walk away feeling drawn to you and wanting to see you again, in which case, she will text, call or message you to stay in contact and hope that you have the courage to arrange another meet up when the time is right.

By the wayâ€¦!

If youâ€™re not on social media, you should start.

I often get contacted by men saying, â€œOh, my wife and I didnâ€™t use social media muchâ€ or, â€œIâ€™m not into Facebook or Instagram.â€

Believe me, I get it.

Iâm a married man and I donât spend much time on Facebook, let alone Instagram.

My wife is the one who posts 99% of anything that is posted about me, herself and our kids on Facebook.

I rarely post anything on social media.

However, if a man is trying his ex wife back, social media is the perfect place to let her see how confident and happy he is without her and how good life is now.

When a woman sees that, she feels respect and attraction for a man.

Contrary to what some guys believe, a woman doesnât feel attracted to a guy who is sitting around feeling sorry for himself and canât cope without her after a break up.

It doesnât make her think, Wow, heâs so loyal and instead makes her think quite negatively about him.

On the other hand, when a woman sees that her ex man seems very confident in himself, is happy and is moving forward in life, it makes her feel like he isnât a lonely loser who canât cope without her.

In fact, it makes her realize that if heâs that confident now, then other women will find him attractive and if she doesnât make a move soon, he might meet a new woman who adores him and he may end up falling in love with her.

When she feels sparks of respect and attraction for him, misses him and is also beginning to worry that she might lose him to another woman, it naturally motivates her to contact him and be open to his suggestions to catch up in person.

So, donât be afraid to show your ex that youâre doing great by posting up confident, happy photos of yourself having fun with other people.

Donât post up photos of you alone though.

That does not work.

The photos have to be of you with other people where you look confident and happy and where the other people look happy that you are there with them.

In other words, donât make the mistake of asking random people to take a photo with you.

Itâs often possible to tell when a person has done that because the body language in the photo suggests a lack of a connection between the people, or itâs obvious that the people donât really want to be in the photo with the other person.

So, make sure that you get photos of yourself looking confident, happy and included/loved by the others in the photos.

Photos like that show your ex wife that you really are happy, confident and enjoying life with other people.

Additionally, it also shows her that youâre not alone, youâre not being rejected by people and you have options.

That makes a woman feel respect and attraction for a man, even if she doesnât openly admit it.

Another potential sign that your ex wife misses you isâ

3. She still texts you as though youâre in a relationship

[image: She still texts you as though you are in a relationship]

One of the biggest clues that a woman misses her ex husband is when she talks to him as though theyâre still together.

For example: She mightâ

- Gossip about her family and friends to him like she used to when they were married.
- Ask for his advice about random things.
- Tell him things about her life like she used to in the past (e.g. her visit to the doctor and the results, her problems at work).
- Discusses her day in detail with him (she talks about work, who she bumped into during her lunch break, how she forgot to put gas in the car and almost didnât make it home).
- She sends him old photos of the two of them, or of them with their kids.
- She sends cute emojis, emoticons or stickers via chat like she used to when things were good.
- She regularly cracks jokes/uses humor (which takes a bit of effort for most people) to keep things feeling fun between them.

If a man is getting those sort of signs from his ex wife and he wants her back, then he should really make a move now while he still can.

Of course, itâs also reasonable to say that some women will contact their ex husband like that just to string him along to make herself feel better, as she secretly moves on behind his back.

Some women can be vindictive and manipulative like that.

However, you are going to be the best judge in terms of your ex wife and what your gut instinct is telling you she is up to.

So, if your ex wife has been contacting you as though you are still together, what is your gut instinct telling you?

Is she doing it to string you along, or is she showing you interest and trying to hint at her desire to reconcile?

Regardless, if she contacting you and being friendly, then you have an opportunity to re-attract her and get her back.

Use the interactions as a way to re-spark her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you by being flirtatious, making her feel girly by being very manly, being a bit of a challenge and so on.

Get the spark back and then make a move to arrange an in person meet up.

Another potential sign that your ex wife misses you isâ

4. Her attempt to date and move on without you doesnât seem to be working out

[image: Her attempt to date and move on without you doesn't seem to be working out]

After a divorce, some women try to move on as quickly as possible by dating new men.

Some women find it easy, or get lucky and find themselves a great replacement man, but many struggle.

Often, by the time a woman divorces, she has already had children, has lost her youthful good looks and no longer feels confident about her body or overall attractiveness to men.

This can cause her to approach dating in a hesitant way, where she is unwilling to open herself up to men easily, which can lead to awkward first dates, a lack of connection and hardly any second dates.

Alternatively, she can be unlucky and meet a lot of duds (i.e. men who have no clue how to attract women and are still single into their mid to late life because other women don't want them), which can cause her to realize that her ex husband isn't as bad as she once thought he was.

So, if your ex wife hasn't been able to successfully move on with a new man, it can result in her missing you and wishing that you and her could just sort things out.

Additionally, in some cases, a woman just can't ever get herself to feel ready to move on with a new man, even though she has divorced her husband.

This is why, rather than continuing to ask yourself questions like, "How do I know if my ex wife misses me?" just start making the right moves to get her back.

Don't make the classic mistake of thinking, "I'll just wait for her to come to me when she's ready" like other men do and then end up missing out on your chance to get her back.

Additionally don't make the other classic mistake of thinking, "I'll wait for more obvious signs before I try to re-attract her and get her back" and then feeling disappointed and rejected once again when you see that she has moved on.

The reality is that if you wait too long for her to make it obvious that she wants you back, she might get the feeling that you're no longer interested in her and as a result, push herself to start moving on with new men to make herself feel better.

Another potential sign that your ex wife misses you is!

5. She is open to catching up with you as a friend

[image: She is open to catching up with you as a friend]

If your ex wife hasn't slammed the door on interacting with you and instead, has been open to catching up to say hi from time to time, it's a good sign that she still has some feelings for you.

Of course, sometimes a woman wants to be friends with her ex as a way of keeping him holding on (i.e. hoping that they can get back together again), as a way of making herself feel good about herself.

She can then secretly move on behind his back and then when she's in a new relationship, she can rub it in her ex husband's face as way of getting emotional revenge for what happened.

Alternatively, a wife will sometimes remain friendly with her ex husband to make things easier for the kids, or for herself (i.e. not having to deal with an angry, rejected, humiliated ex husband).

There are many different scenarios and motives for friendly behavior from an ex wife.

However, regardless of what applies to your situation, the reality is that if your ex wife is still open to catching up as friends, then you have a perfect opportunity to re-attract her and get her back into a relationship.

Whatever you do though, don't make the mistake of acting like her nice, platonic friend who isn't interested in her sexually and romantically.

If she thinks that, she may feel hesitant to show interest in you in case you reject her, or she might force herself to get sexual with other men to make herself feel sexy, loved, wanted and attractive.

So, from now on, make sure that you use every interaction you have with your ex wife to re-spark her feelings for you and make her feel sexy in your eyes.

From there, you can progress to giving her a hug, a kiss and then having sex.

You might not get back together just because of that, but it will be a start.

You won't be in the friend zone with her anymore and if you are both feeling attracted and drawn to each other, you will both feel more comfortable about hugging and kissing from then on.

If you have also improved a lot as a man and now understand how to make a relationship feel happy, in love and fulfilling for the both of you, then she will naturally feel drawn to getting back with you for real.

Get Your Ex Wife Back Faster By Avoiding These 5 Mistakes

According to research conducted by Nancy Kalish, Ph.D., professor emeritus of psychology at California State University, Sacramento, married couples that reunite after divorce have a 72% chance of staying together for life.

That means, if you begin the ex back process with your ex wife right now and get her back, your chances of "living happily ever after" together are pretty high.

So, do what needs to be done to get her back.

You can get her back and keep the relationship together.

You really can.

However, just make sure that you don't mess up your chances with her by making any of the following mistakes:

1. Reading way too much into what she says or texts

If you know how a woman's mind works and how they feel attraction, you will know that women rarely say what they really mean.

For example: "I am fine" when she's really pissed off, or "I just want a nice man," but she actually feels turned off by men who are too nice and turned on by men who are a challenge and cause her to want to be on her best behavior around him.

So, you can't always take what a woman says as what she really means.

For example: If your ex wife is having a particularly good day and is remembering how happy you and her used to be, she may text or say something along the lines of, "Hey, I was just thinking about you and I wanted to say hi."

Alternatively, she may be having a bad day, be on her period, be feeling angry about how things ended up between you and her and as a result, end up responding to you in a cold, distant way.

Yet, neither of those two reactions prove anything other than that she's a typical, emotional woman.

It's not her way of saying she misses you, or that she hates you.

She's just in a mood.

So, don't waste your time trying to make sense of what your ex wife really feels about you based on what she says or texts.

If you try to follow a woman's moods, she will lead you around in circles to feelings of self-doubt, confusion and frustration.

So, don't focus so much on what she is saying to you, or texting to you and hoping to figure out her real feelings.

Instead, just take control of the situation by re-attracting her and guiding her through the ex back process.

In other words, interact with her, re-attract her, make her want to get back together, reconcile, establish a more effective relationship dynamic and enjoy the great times ahead with her.

That's what men do to get their ex wife back.

Yet, the men who fail often make the mistake of reading into the different things their ex wife says to them, or texts them.

It causes them to doubt themselves, hesitate, wait and before they know it, she's in love with another man.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Assuming that the ball is in her court

For example: A man might think, "She was the one who wanted the divorce, so if she wants me back, it's up to her to make it happen. I don't want to make a move and get rejected by her again. She has to make it 100% clear to me that she wants me back."

Yet, here's the thing

An ex wife (who was the one to initiate the separation or divorce) will rarely take control of the ex back process for the following reasons:

- She doesn't want to put herself on the line and risk getting rejected by her ex husband if he doesn't have feelings for her anymore.
- She doesn't want to come across as being too easy and therefore, give him the impression that they can get back together without him really having to change anything about his approach to the relationship.
- She wants to see if her ex husband has the confidence to reactivate her feelings for him and get her back, or he has lost all confidence due to her rejection.
- She is enjoying her freedom and knows that she can move on without her ex, or get back with him, but either way, she will be okay.
- She wants to see if her ex has enough interest in her to be bothered to get her back.
- She wants to be seduced and romanced back into a relationship, so she feels special and wanted, rather than just getting back together for the heck of it.
- She is worried what her family, friends, children or coworkers will think if she suddenly changes her mind and starts trying to get back the ex husband that she was speaking so badly about.

This is why, it's always best that you just build up the courage to get things moving along with her, rather than waiting for her to do everything to get you and her back together.

If you wait around for too long, she may just decide that youâre not interested in her anymore and will then almost certainly put her efforts into getting over you and moving on (usually with another man).

Another mistake to avoid making isâ!

3. Assuming that other men are going to make her feel the way you did when you and her were in love

The love, good times and connection you and your ex wife shared was completely unique.

No other man can give her the exact same experience, connection and memories that she had with you.

So, although she might be able to find another man, he will never be able to offer her the feelings that she experienced with you.

If you want to use that to your advantage, you need to interact with her and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

If you do that, she will naturally start to reconnect with the love she used to feel for you.

Of course, she wonât necessarily jump into your arms right away, but she might.

Additionally, if she sees that you really have become a totally new and improved man since the divorce (in terms of how you think, behave, feel, act and react when interacting with her), then she will feel like sheâd be missing out if she didnât give you another chance.

As a result, she will open up to you and you can then get her back.

So, donât go wasting time worrying that other men might be more attractive to her, or make her feel a new kind of love.

You can make her feel attracted to you in new ways and then, when she reconnects with her old love for you and experiences newfound love for you, it will be a new and exciting experience for her.

4. Not improving your ability to attract women in general

There are certain male behaviors and personality traits that women are attracted to, regardless of culture, age and experience with men and relationships.

For example: In a relationship, a woman will feel attracted to a manâsâ!

- Confidence and emotional strength.
- Ability to make her feel like a feminine, girly woman in his presence.
- Ability to stand up to her in an assertive, but loving way.
- Ability to make her feel important, special and loved, even though he is totally focussed on his goals and ambitions in life.
- Belief in himself and in his value and attractiveness.
- Ability to be a bit cheeky, or be a bit of a challenge.
- Masculine way of behaving, thinking, feeling, acting and reacting.
- Courage.
- Ability to flirt with her and build up sexual tension and desire.

On the other hand, here are some of the things that will turn a woman off about a man when in a relationship:

- His insecurity and self doubt.
- His inability to stand on his own two feet without her support, guidance or reassurance.
- How she can walk all over him and treat him badly because he doesn't know how to put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way.
- His inability to handle her moods (i.e. he gets moody and upset when she gets moody or upset, rather than maintaining control of his emotions like a man).
- That he's always so neutral towards her, so she feels more like his friend than a sexy, desirable woman.
- His lack of manliness in the way he thinks, behaves, feels, acts and reacts to her or to life (e.g. always complaining, whining about things, making excuses about why he isn't as successful as he wants to be, being emotionally sensitive).
- His 'my way or the highway' attitude when it comes to a relationship, rather than being the leader in the relationship, but also being loving, flexible and willing to take her feelings, needs or wants into consideration.
- His emotional dependence on her (e.g. needy, clingy).
- His tendency to ignore relationship problems and just expect a woman to put up with them for life.

Unfortunately, a lot of men try to get their ex wife back without ever truly realizing where they've been going wrong, or not being willing to make real improvements to their approach to the relationship.

As a result, the woman simply isn't interested because she feels as though the relationship will end up being the same as before.

So, if you want to get your wife back for real, make sure that you prepare yourself to re-attract her with a new approach, so she feels refreshed and open to giving you and her a real chance.

5 Reasons Why You Can't Just Be 'Friends' With Your Ex Girlfriend if You Want Her Back

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Telling your ex girlfriend that you and her should be 'just friends' from now on is a great way to remain in her life, so you can then re-attract her sexually and romantically.

However, if you only ever act like a 'friend' to her (i.e. neutral, nice, helpful, sweet) and don't focus on attracting her sexually (i.e. flirting with her, being a challenge, making her feel girly in comparison to your masculinity), then you will almost certainly just remain in the friend zone and she will move on with a new guy who focuses on making her feel sexually attracted.

So, if you and your ex are going to be 'friends' now and you want her back, then you need to use the 'friendship' an opportunity to re-attract her sexually and romantically.

To help you understand why, here are 5 reasons why you can't just be 'friends' with your ex girlfriend if you want her back:

1. Being a nice, friendly guy isn't what turns a woman on sexually

[image: Being a nice, friendly guy isn't what turns a woman on sexually]

Wouldn't it be great if being a nice, friendly guy was what made a woman feel turned on and want to stick with him for life?

If that was how life worked, all the nice guys out here would be dating beautiful women and the bad boys would be single and alone.

Yet, it simply doesn't work out that way.

Here's the thing!

Although a woman will usually appreciate good things about a guy (e.g. he's nice to her, he's reliable, he gets along well with her family and friends, he's stable), it takes more than niceness and friendliness to keep her interested in him in a sexual and romantic way.

She might like him and care about him as a person, but without that special spark of sexual attraction, the relationship will feel more like a good friendship, rather than a lust-filled romance.

Of course, from the guy's perspective, he will feel the spark and the lust even if the woman is only being nice to him.

Why?

A man's attraction for a woman works differently to a woman's attraction for a man.

Women get turned on by guys who are a challenge (i.e. she has to impress him, put in effort to maintain his effort, win more of his love) and they get very bored with guys who offer no challenge.

Yet, for a man, he doesn't need a woman to be a challenge and in many cases, he will assume that guys who are a challenge are just playing stupid mind games.

He will say things like, "Love should be based on kindness, care, commitment and connection" because he wants women to like him and love him based on his nice side.

Yet, women can't stop themselves from feeling attracted to what he might see as the 'bad' side to men (i.e. making a woman feel the need to impress him, occasionally behaving in a masculine way when interacting with her so she feels feminine and girly, playfully teasing her to keep her off balance, making her feel nervous (in a good way), not chasing after her when she is moody, not putting up with her tantrums and instead, putting her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way).

The same applies to men and what we feel attracted to about women.

We can't stop ourselves from feeling more attracted to women who are slim or slender and less attracted to women who are overweight.

Women may complain and say, "Men should want women for who they are on the inside, not what they look like on the outside" but it's just not the way our attraction to women works.

We can't turn off the fact that slender or slim women are more attractive than overweight or obese women.

Likewise, with women, they simply can't feel turned on (in the long run) by a guy who is just being nice to them.

This is why many women reject nice guys upfront, because they know how boring the relationship will end up feeling.

So, if a guy wants to get his ex girlfriend back, he has to understand that just being a nice, helpful friend who is there for her, isn't going to make her want him back, especially if she can sense that he would still make the same kind of relationship mistakes that lead to the break up (e.g. he is still kind of insecure, he doesn't know how to make her respect him or want him, he can't handle her tantrums or moods and doesn't know how to get her to be a good girl to him).

If a guy is trying to get his ex girlfriend back and is just being a nice friend to her, then she is still going to be a normal human being who occasionally feels horny and wants to have sex, or at least kiss a guy.

If she doesn't feel that desire with her ex, then she will push herself to interact with new men and if she feels a sexual spark with them, she will open herself up to dating and having sex with them, rather than going back to an ex that she doesn't feel much or anything for anymore.

This is why, if your intention is to get your ex back,Â only being nice and friendly with her just won't cut it.

If you're only nice, friendly and 'being there' for her, then you're almost certainly going to end up in the friend zone.

Of course, you can still be friendly and nice to her.

However, you also have to step up your game by making her feel real sparks of sexual attraction for you again.

If you fail to do that and she just sees you as a friend, she may just decide to keep you around as a friend while sheÂ secretlyÂ moves on behind your back.

Another reason why you can't just be friends with your ex girlfriend if you want her back isÂ

2. Just being her friend can make her assume that you no longer look at her in a sexual way

[image: Just being her friend can make her assume that you no longer look at her in a sexual way]

Imagine this...

After a break up, a guy hangs out with his ex girlfriend often, but is only nice and neutral towards like a friend, coworker or big brother.

He rarely (or never) flirts with her or uses ballsy or challenging humor to spark her sexual feelings for him.

Instead, he's pretty much always just a polite, helpful, nice, generous and agreeable, good friend to her.

Secretly, he hopes that she will eventually realize how good of a guy he is (for treating her so well after the break up) and will then want to get back with him, because no one will ever treat her as good as he does.

Yet, although a woman may feel relieved that the break up went well and they're not angry exes who hate each other, his behavior can cause her to assume that whatever they had together is now over (i.e. there's no spark anymore, he doesn't seem to want her sexually, they seem more like brother and sister, coworkers or good friends).

As a result, she focuses on fully switching off her feelings for him and begins opening herself up to dating new men (who want her sexually), so she can move on and get on with her romantic life.

Then, if he happens to mention how he still wants her back, she might respond with something along the lines of, "Huh? Why didn't you let me know sooner? I assumed that you only wanted to be friends, so I started moving on. You should have done something to let me know how you felt sooner. It's too late now though. Sorry. I'm already dating a new guy and I'm happy. I'm sure you will find someone else too."

If she didn't tell him about the fact that she was dating a new guy, he might then be left feeling hurt, betrayed and wondering what went wrong.

What went wrong is pretty simple.

A friendship is different to a sexual, romantic relationship.

A woman will naturally feel horny and want a sexual relationship, or want to be in love romantically and if she isn't getting that from her 'friendship' with her ex, she will get it from a new man instead.

So, if you don't want your ex moving on because she assumes you only want to be her friend, then make sure that you're not pretending to be an innocent friend who isn't interested in her in a sexual or romantic way.

Spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you again (i.e. by flirting with her, building up sexual tension, being a challenge, making her feel girly in comparison to your masculinity) and when you do, the relationship will naturally get back together, or you will at least start sleeping with each other again and can take it from there.

Another reason why you can't just be friends with your ex girlfriend if you want her back is that

3. If you're just friends, she won't feel like she has to remain loyal to you

[image: If you are just friends, she won't feel like she has to remain loyal to you]

When a guy breaks up with a woman and only acts like a platonic friend to her (i.e. a friend who doesn't want her sexually or romantically), he can't expect her to remain loyal to him and not date other men.

At the end of the day, she is an individual and has the freedom to whatever she wants with other men now that she's not in a boyfriend-girlfriend relationship with you.

She is also human and will naturally feel horny, or want to pursue a romance so she can move towards an actual relationship that may lead to an engagement, marriage and then family.

It's a natural drive that women have and it doesn't stop just because an ex is a good friend to her.

If you just act like a friend and then get mad, seem upset or try to make her feel guilty is she starts sleeping with new guys, she might say something like, "It's none of your business who I date or decide to sleep with. You are no longer my boyfriend, so you don't have a say in what I do anymore."

She might then decide that remaining friends with you is a bad idea for now, so she will ask for space or cut you out of her life.

So, if you want her back, don't just pretend to be her nice, neutral friend who wants to 'be there for her' and then expect her to avoid all other men based on that.

You have to make her feel sexually attracted and romantically to you, so she doesn't want to be 'just friends' with you anymore and instead, wants to be your girlfriend again.

Another reason why you can't just be friends with your ex girlfriend if you want her back is

4. If she senses that you're afraid of getting rejected by her, it will turn her off big time

[image: If she senses that you're afraid of getting rejected by her, it will turn her off big time]

Sometimes, a guy will pretend to be friends with his ex girlfriend because he doesn't have the courage to try and get her back.

He might try to convince himself that he's doing the right thing by thinking something like, "There's no rush to get back together. We can just hang out as friends for a while. I will help her out with whatever she wants and be there for her like a good friend should. When she notices that no other guy is as dependable and devoted to her as I am, she will naturally want to get back with me."

Yet, what a guy like that often doesn't realize is that by thinking in that way, he is seriously reducing his chances of ever getting her back.

Why?

Firstly, if he sticks around pretending to be her friend, then he's almost certainly just going to end up in the friend zone because she won't feel enough of (or any) spark with him anymore.

Of course, she might turn to him when she needs something (e.g. to run an errand for her, help her fix something at her house, be her emergency date for an important function, help her pay bills or rent).

Yet, she will be secretly moving on by dating new guys behind his back. .

Secondly, when a woman senses that a guy has feelings for her (e.g. based on the way he talks, acts, behaves and responds to her), but is too afraid to make a move, she will lose a lot of respect and attraction for him.

His inability to be a man of action and go after what he really wants in life (i.e. in this case, her) will be a clear sign that he's not going to be the kind of man she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love for life.

Women instinctively want to be with a good man who has balls, not a good man who is afraid of the world around him, or of what a woman might say, think or do.

So, if a woman senses that her ex is probably too emotionally weak for a woman like her, she will begin to distance herself from him as much as possible.

He may then find that the friendship he's been relying on to interact with her, starts to fade away (i.e. she ignores some of his texts, takes a long time to reply to others, doesn't answer when he calls or doesn't return his calls, makes excuses not to meet up with him in person and generally avoids him whenever she can).

Eventually, she will tell him that she is in a new relationship now and that her new man doesn't want her talking to him anymore.

Here's thing!

In life and with women, if you allow fear to stop you from going after what you want, you may not like the results you get.

Right now with your ex and for the rest of your life, courage is what's needed a man.

You've got to man up and make a move.

In terms of your ex, man up and do whatever it takes to re-attract her, seduce her into hugging and kissing you and then have sex with her again.

When you get to that point, you and her will naturally get back together in a relationship, or at least start sleeping with each other again and see how things go.

On the other hand, if you sit around feeling afraid to take action and pretending that you only want to be her friend, she will probably just move on without you.

If that happens and you secretly do still love her and want to be with her, it will hurt you.

Many men end up missing an ex woman for years or even decades after a break up.

They wish that they would have just manned up and made a move while they could.

Another reason why you can't just be friends with your ex girlfriend if you want her back is!

5. She has sexual needs too, so she will probably start dating other guys pretty quickly

[image: She has sexual needs too, so she will probably start dating other guys pretty quickly]

Imagine a woman who has just broken up with a boyfriend who she no longer feels enough attraction for to be in a relationship with.

She may love him in a way and even miss what they had, but it's over and she is now single.

As a result, she will feel like she's on her own again and will want to do something about that.

Soon enough (or right away in some cases), she will start going out with her single friends to parties, bars and clubs.

She may end up drink a little bit too much and guys are likely going to be ready to flirt with her and try to hook up with her.

If she happens to meet a guy who makes her feel more sexually attracted and turned on than her ex did, then she may end up opening herself to hooking up with him that night, or at least giving him her phone number and going on a date with him.

Alternatively, she might end up going on a date and then kissing and hooking up with one of the guys who have been waiting in the wings for her to be single again (e.g. coworkers, friends who have a crush on her, ex boyfriends).

[image: She has sexual needs too, so she will start dating again]

Many guys are often surprised at how quickly their ex girlfriend kisses or has sex with a new guy after they break up.

I've been contacted by so many guys over the years who assumed that their girlfriend wouldn't ever do something like that because she was different to other girls.

Yet, to their surprise, she was already sleeping with a new guy days after they broke up, or went out the night after they broke up and passionately kissed a guy.

That doesn't mean she is slutty.

It just means that she has sexual desires like any woman and if she is trying to help herself get over a break up, she knows one of the fastest ways to do that is to passionately hook up with a new guy.

Additionally, if a woman hasn't felt very attracted to her ex in a long time, or if her ex didn't make her feel very sexy and attractive, then she will be ripe for the taking if a confident guy interacts with her and makes her feel sexy and desirable.

Additionally, her ex is only treating her as a neutral friend and not doing anything to re-spark her sexual feelings for him.

She hasn't felt that way in a long time, so she will be craving that kind of attention and those type of feelings, so she will just go for it.

Meanwhile, her ex who is being a nice, good friend to her and 'being there' for her during the break up, is left feeling shocked and often betrayed and angry at how quickly she began dating, kissing or sleeping with new men.

This is why, you can't just be nice friends with your ex girlfriend if you actually want her back.

If you pretend that you only want to be her nice, neutral friend, then she's almost certainly going to seek to fulfill her sexual needs with other men.

3 Mistakes to Avoid When You're Friends With Your Ex But You Want More Than That

1. Assuming that she will eventually realize how honorable and loyal of a guy you are and want you based on that

Sometimes a guy assumes that if he sticks around and proves his loyalty to his ex (e.g. he's always available to her no matter what, he doesn't move on with other women, he continues to put her first in his life, he doesn't go out to socialize because he doesn't want her worrying that he might meet another girl, he stays in regular contact as a friend), she will fall back in love and want him back.

Yet, here's the thing!

While your ex might appreciate the fact that you're being a really good guy to her after the break up, appreciation is not the same feeling as sexual and romantic attraction.

If you want her back, you really have to understand what motivates a woman to want to be with a man in a relationship.

It's not just niceness, feelings of appreciation or gentlemanly behavior.

It's that feeling in her you know what, where she wants you to put something of yours inside of her.

It's that desire she feels where she feels turned on and excited when she imagines you and her having sex, kissing, holding hands, hugging and spending time together.

If she doesn't have those feelings for you, then you're just a friend.

Of course, she might not directly say that she only sees you as a friend and may hint at seeming like she wants you to be a permanent part of her life.

For example: She might say things like, "I can't tell you how happy I am that we remained friends after we broke up. You're an amazing guy and I don't know what I would do without you in my life. You're special to me and I'm so grateful that we can still rely on each other."

Yet, that doesn't mean she wants to be your girlfriend again.

Instead, it usually means that she only sees your new relationship as a brother-sister type relationship, where you are there for each other, take care of each other and love each other in a friendly way.

It's not a sexual thing and it's not going to result in you and her becoming boyfriend and girlfriend again, but it is convenient for her (i.e. because she doesn't have to feel like she is losing you) as she moves on without you.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Texting like just a friend, to the point where she gets bored and starts texting with other guys who want her sexually

Regardless of how open your ex is about texting back and forth with you, if you don't ever progress to a phone call and then a meet up in person to seduce her sexually, you will probably just remain a texting buddy to her while she moves on behind your back.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys mistakenly believe that texting is their way back into a relationship with their ex girlfriend or wife.

As a result, a lot of guys remain stuck texting back and forth with their ex woman for weeks or even months, without ever getting past that point.

They try very hard to 'be there' for her, to be funny, to be interesting and to cool via text, but it doesn't ever progress past texting.

The guy is somehow hoping that if he just keeps texting her, she will eventually say that she misses him and wants him back.

Yet, in almost all cases, a woman simply gets bored of waiting for her ex guy to man up and do something, so she starts dating new guys and moves on without him.

Alternatively, she gets bored of texting with him and gradually responds less and less, until she pretty much goes cold.

So, if you want her back, don't make the mistake of becoming her texting buddy while she dates, sleeps with and then falls in love with a new man.

If you want her back, you've got to take control of the situation and get her back.

That means, call her on the phone, reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you, get her to meet up with you, hook up with her sexually and get her back for real.

If you don't, another man will take her and she may end up really loving him and even marrying him.

So, get her back while you still can.

3. Feeling unworthy to be more than just a friend of hers

When a man feels like he is mostly to blame for the break up (e.g. he became too insecure, he turned her off in many different ways), he might fall into the trap of romanticizing about how perfect she was and how he was so lucky to have her.

Yet, by thinking like that, he naturally begins to put himself down in comparison to her.

For example: He may think, She's just too good for me. I was lucky to have her and she probably knows that. Maybe I should be grateful for the fact that she is still willing to be a friend. I can't expect anything more than that. I had my chance and I blew it.

Unfortunately, what he doesn't realize, is that feeling unworthy of his ex's love only makes him seem less attractive to her (and to other women as well).

Why?

Women are instinctively attracted to the kind of man who can always remain confident and believe in himself, no matter what happens.

So, if his ex woman senses his self-doubt, insecurity and feelings of unworthiness, she will instinctively feel turned off by him, regardless of how much of a good friend he has been to her.

She might continue to be nice to him as a friend, but if he can't even believe that it's possible for him to get her back, then he has already lost.

I Want to Be With My Ex Girlfriend in a Relationship Again

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 tips to ensure that you make it happen:

1. Understand the very specific thing that would make her want to be in a relationship with you again

[image: Understand the very specific thing that will make her want to be in a relationship with you again]

If you really want to be with your ex girlfriend in a relationship again, you can't just assume that saying you're sorry for what happened and promising to be better this time around is going to do the trick.

If you want the relationship to work this time and for her to want to stay with you, you need to improve your ability to keep a woman happy in a relationship.

When you do, she will then also feel motivated to be a good woman back to you and treat you with love, respect and devotion.

This is why it's very important that you understand what specific thing you need to do to make her want you back.

However, before you rush off and buy her flowers or expensive gifts in the hope that being more romantic is what she wants from you, take the time to figure out her real, deeper reasons for breaking up with you instead.

When you change your approach and make your ex girlfriend feel that she's now getting what was missing in her relationship with you, she will automatically drop her guard and open up to the idea of being with you again.

For example: Some specific reasons why a woman will fall out of love and end a relationship are:

- Her guy started off being confident and self-assured, but over time he became insecure, needy, clingy and unsure of himself. As a result, she lost respect for him and stopped looking at him as being a man that she could look up to and feel proud of.
- At the beginning of the relationship the attraction between them was intense, but after the initial thrill wore off, he started treating her more like a friend than a desirable woman. She soon became bored and disinterested and felt she would be better off finding a new man who can spark her feelings for him, rather than staying stuck with a guy who made her feel like his roommate or big sister.
- She felt insecure about her future with him because he didn't have any big goals or dreams that he was actively working towards achieving in his life. Alternatively, he did have big dreams, but he kept failing at them, wasn't making any progress for years and constantly blamed external things for his lack of success in life (e.g. the government, his parents, society), rather than taking responsibility for his life and learning from his past mistakes and improving until he succeeded at whatever he was trying to do.
- She got tired of always being the boss in the relationship and making all the decisions for the both of them. This made her feel much more dominant than him resulting in her losing respect for him for being too wimpy and submissive.

- She felt like she was always in second place in his life, or that she wasn't important compared to his family, friends or hobbies. As a result, she felt unappreciated and unloved which led to her breaking up with him.

Do any of those things sound like a possible reason why your ex girlfriend broke up with you?

When you fully understand what turned her off, you can then change your approach and begin re-attracting her (e.g. if you became too needy and clingy you now show her that you're emotionally independent).

The more you start giving her the attraction experience she always wanted from you but never got, the more she will drop her guard around you.

It then becomes possible for her to see herself being your girl again.

Another tip to help you get your ex girlfriend in a relationship again is

2. Don't shy away from starting the ex back process

[image: Don't shy away from starting the ex back process]

Sometimes a guy worries that if he approaches his ex too soon after the break up, she will almost certainly reject him.

So, he might decide to give her some space (quite often a few weeks or even months of space) as a way of letting things cool down and making her miss him.

Yet, that approach almost always backfires.

Here's the thing

When a woman has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for a guy, not seeing him or hearing from him for a long time actually helps her get over him.

Rather than sit around thinking things like, "I was so annoyed with him when we broke up, that I never realized I would miss him so much if he stopped contacting me. Now I think about him all the time and wish we could just go back and make things right again," she instead uses the time to move on (usually by hooking up with other guys until she finds a new boyfriend).

Alternatively, a woman might be waiting around and hoping that her ex will do something to re-spark her feelings for him, so that they can work things out.

Yet, the longer she waits for him to make a move, the more disappointed she feels when she doesn't hear from him.

She may then begin thinking things like, "I guess he never loved me as much as he said he did. He's not even trying to get me back. Well, I'm done waiting around for him. There are plenty fish in the sea and I can easily find myself a new man if I want to. So, I'm going to stop waiting for him to make a move and I'm going to find myself a new man who does want to be with me. It's over. It's time to move on."

She then focuses on fully getting over him and moving on (usually by hooking up with other men until she finds one she wants to be in a relationship with).

Then, by the time her ex plucks up the courage to call her after a few weeks or months (in some cases it can even be years), rather than jump at the idea of getting back together again, she will likely say something along the lines of, â€œIâ€™m sorry but I thought youâ€™d lost interest, so Iâ€™ve moved on. Iâ€™m with someone else now and Iâ€™m happy again. So, please donâ€™t call me again.â€

This is why, if you want to be with your ex girlfriend in a relationship again, you canâ€™t wait too long to begin the ex back process with her.

If you waste time waiting, she may eventually get to the point where she moves on way too far to want to get back with you.

Remember: Giving her 3 to 7 days of space to allow of things to calm down between you is perfectly fine.

However, anything longer than a week and youâ€™re risking giving her the time she needs to get over you and move on.

Donâ€™t wait!

Get her on a call with you right away and spark some of her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again, by maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what she says to make you feel nervous or tense).

Then, when sheâ€™s feeling happy and relaxed get her to agree to meet up with you in person so that you can fully reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

Another tip to help you get your ex girlfriend in a relationship again isâ€

3. Know that you can make her feel more respect, attraction and love for you than you ever did before

[image: Know that you can make her feel more attracted to you than you ever did before]

Everyone makes mistakes at some point in their life.

However, the greatest people in the world are those who learn from those mistakes and come back even better and stronger than before.

So, regardless of what happened in your relationship with your ex girlfriend previously, you now have the opportunity to start fresh, having learned from your past mistakes.

That means, you are now in the unique position of being able to offer her a new and improved attraction experience, mainly because youâ€™ve become a better man since the break up.

This is why, the most important thing for you to do right now to get your ex girlfriend in a relationship again, is to interact with her and make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you again, based on who you are now.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€

- Maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what sheâ€™s saying or doing to put you off (e.g. sheâ€™s saying that thereâ€™s no chance of her changing her mind, sheâ€™s being cold and aloof towards you).
- Showing her via your attitude, conversation style, actions and behavior that youâ€™re no longer the same guy she broke up with (e.g. youâ€™re more confident and self-assured rather than insecure and self-conscious, youâ€™re more of a challenge now rather than being too easy and predictable, youâ€™re more emotionally independent rather than being clingy and needy).

- Reacting differently to what she expects, (e.g. if she tries to make you jealous by talking about other guys, rather than get upset like you used to, you now laugh and say things like, â€œGood for you,â€ or â€œSounds great.â€ She then feels shocked (in a good way) by your confidence and emotional maturity and she naturally starts to feel sparks of respect and attraction for you again).
- Being less of a nice, sweet, pushover with her and more of a challenge, thereby making her feel like she is the one who now has to work hard to impress you and keep you interested in her, rather than the other way around.
- Being more emotionally masculine around her and making her feel sexy and desirable, rather than being too nice and neutral and making her feel like a friend or an acquaintance in your presence.

The more your ex girlfriend interacts with you and discovers that youâ€™ve leveled up as a man, the more her feelings of respect and attraction for you will be re-sparked.

As a result, her defenses start to come down and she then becomes more open to talking with you over the phone and meeting up with you in person, to see what happens from there.

Another tip to help you get your ex girlfriend in a relationship again isâ€¦

4. Stop thinking that the ball is in her court

[image: Stop thinking that the ball is in her court]

After they get broken up with, some guys fall into the trap of thinking that getting back with her is totally up to her and he just has to wait around and hope that she changes her mind.

As a result, he may end up thinking something along the lines of, â€œI want to be with my ex girlfriend in a relationship again, but itâ€™s not up to me. If she says no, then it has to be no. Thereâ€™s nothing I can do to change that. So, even though I really want her back, I have to wait and hope that she will eventually forgive me and then give me a sign that sheâ€™s open to at least talking to me again. My hands are tied. Itâ€™s all up to her now.â€

Yet, hereâ€™s what he doesnâ€™t understandâ€¦

A man has a lot of control over the ex back process when he focuses on making his ex woman have sexual and romantic feelings for him again.

When he makes her feel surges of respect and attraction for him again via the way he thinks, talks, acts and behaves around her, she naturally begins to want him back for her own reasons (e.g. she realizes that she now feels attracted in new and exciting ways and she wants to explore those feelings, sheâ€™s worried she may have made a mistake by breaking up with him).

As a result, he can then easily get her back into a relationship with him, because she is open to seeing where things go.

On the other hand, if a guy just sits around waiting for her to make the first move, or give him a sign that sheâ€™s open to interacting with him again, he could be waiting for a long time.

In the meantime, sheâ€™s busy hooking up and dating other guys and moving on.

This is why, you need to start the ex back process with your girlfriend right away.

Donâ€™t sit around waiting for signs from her and risk losing her to another man.

Remember: The ball is in your court, not hers.

So, if you want her back, you have to have the courage to take the lead and make it happen.

Another tip to help you get your ex girlfriend in a relationship again isâ

5. Don't aim for a relationship right away

[image: Don't aim for a relationship right away]

Even though you're pretty sure that you want to be with your ex girlfriend in a relationship again, it's very likely that she doesn't feel the same way right now.

So, if you push her into committing to getting back with you before she feels ready (i.e. you've reactivated her sexual and romantic feelings for you), rather than get her back, you will almost certainly achieve the opposite and scare her away.

She might then say, "Look, I know you mean well, but it's over between us. Please accept that and move on."

Here's the thing

[image: A woman doesn't want to be pressured into a relationship with an ex that she is unsure about]

A woman doesn't want to be pressured back into a relationship with her ex if she doesn't feel the same way about him as he does for her.

So, to avoid scaring her off, what you need to do is stop trying to get her back into a relationship right away and focus instead on having fun together.

Build on her feelings first and then from there, progress to hugging, kissing and sex.

Sex speeds up the process of reconciling the relationship and makes her feel more open to the idea of being your girl again.

Remember: Just because you're ready for a relationship again doesn't mean she is.

This is why, you have to relax and stop pushing her.

From now on, use any interactions you have with her (e.g. on the phone and especially in person) to make her laugh, smile and feel good to be around you again.

The more you do that, the more she will stop putting up walls.

When she's no longer feeling so defensive around you all the time, she will be able to reconnect with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

When that happens, the idea of being in a relationship with you again will start to feel good to her too.

On the other hand, if you give her the impression that the only thing on your mind is to get her back into a relationship with you, she will probably clam up even more and maybe even try to cut you out of her life completely (e.g. by blocking your number, refusing to see you in person, unfriending you on social media).

Don't let that happen to you.

If you're serious about getting her back into a relationship with you, the main thing you need to focus on from this point onwards is sparking her feelings for you.

When you do, it won't take long before you get what you wanted all along (i.e. a relationship with her).

Quickly Get Her Back Into a Relationship Again By Avoiding These 2 Mistakes

Getting an ex girlfriend back into a relationship is actually easier than some guys think.

Itâs just a matter of using the right approach.

This is why itâs important that you donât turn her off by making the following mistakes:

1. Giving her the impression that you donât have any other options

In some cases, a guy makes the mistake of thinking that the best way to prove to his ex that he only has eyes for her, even though theyâre broken up, is by avoiding other women.

Essentially, heâs hoping that when she finds out that heâs being so loyal to her, she will feel flattered and that will then make her open up to the idea of being in a relationship with him again.

Yet, what he doesnât realize is that, giving a woman the impression that he doesnât have any other options besides her can actually make her lose even more respect and attraction for him. Why?

Essentially because, almost all women want to be with the type of man that other women feel attracted to and want.

They might never openly admit that to you, but thatâs how they secretly feel.

So, if your ex girlfriend gets the sense that youâre clinging to her because no other women want you, she is going to be quite happy with the decision she made (i.e. to break up with you).

This is why, if you want her back, you need to make her feel worried about losing you, rather than turning her off by seeming desperate and like a relationship with her is the best you can do.

That doesnât mean you have to date other women to make her feel that way.

Instead, you just have to start being the type of guy that she knows other women would want to be with (e.g. confident, emotionally strong, focused and determined, charming).

When she realizes that not only are you now the man she always wanted you to be, but that she also risks losing you, she will automatically start wanting a relationship with you too.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ

2. Not realizing that she didnât want the old version of the relationship you offered and may be completely into the new version

Some guys give up hope after a break up, because their ex says things like, âThereâs nothing you can say or do that will make me change my mind.â

A guy like that often mistakenly assumes that thereâs nothing he can do to convince her that things can be different between them this time.

Yet, thatâs far from the truth.

When you change your approach to attraction, she will change how she feels about you.

It happens naturally and without you having to force it.

So, if you want to be with your ex girlfriend in a relationship again, focus on giving her an upgraded attraction experience from now on.

Show her by way of your behavior, conversation style and actions that you have already improved on some of the issues that were turning her off before.

For example:

If you were insecure and self-doubting before, youâre now more confident and believe in your value as a man.

If you were too nice and let her dominate you with her confident personality, youâre now more of a challenge to her so she feels like she has to try and impress you.

If you treated her more like a friend before, you now make her feel sexy and desirable in your presence.

The more she realizes that being in a relationship with you now will be completely different to the way it was before (because youâre now a new and improved man), the more she will want to give it another go.

So, donât spend any more time thinking âI want to be with my girlfriend in a relationship again.

Instead, start doing something about it right now.

Before you know it, you and her will be back together.

You will feel the kiss of her lips, the softness of her naked skin and you will hear the beautiful sound of her voice when she says, “I love you” again for the first time in a long time.

Those are some beautiful moments that you can experience with her, but you have to start doing something about it while you still can.

She Said We Want Different Things From the Relationship, So She Wants Out

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 common reasons why a woman will say that:

1. She wants casual sex, but you want commitment

[image: She just wants casual sex, but you want commitment]

Sometimes, for reasons that have nothing to do with him as a person (i.e. he's a good man), a woman just doesn't want to settle down with him at this point in her life.

Instead, she just wants to have a fun, relaxed relationship with him where they get together from time to time, hang out, have some laughs and some casual sex , but without the hassle of being in a serious committed relationship with each other.

For example: Some of her reasons for only wanting a casual sex relationship might be

- She's really young and she still feels that she has a lot of things she wants to do before she finally settles down fully in a relationship with a guy.
- She currently wants to focus on her studies or career and she doesn't want a relationship to distract her from that.
- She has some dreams that she wants to accomplish first (e.g. go traveling, write a book, enter a talent show) and she's afraid that a serious relationship will get in the way of that.
- She's afraid of settling down too quickly and ending up like her mom/a female relative who got married and had children really young and never got a chance to enjoy her life first.

On the other hand, the guy might feel as though he's found the woman he wants to spend his life with and is happy to make a serious commitment to her right away.

He might then put pressure on her to move in together or even buy a house, buy a pet, get engaged/married, or start a family.

In his mind he may be thinking that he's doing what all women want (i.e. being a serious, committed boyfriend), so naturally, when his woman breaks up with him and says something along the lines of, "I'm sorry, but we want different things from the relationship. So, I want out. I can't be with you if it's going to be like this" he's left feeling hurt confused and wondering what he did wrong.

Well, to begin with, he didn't do anything wrong, except perhaps not noticing that while he was pushing his woman for a commitment, she was pulling away.

The good news though is that he can still get what he wants (i.e. a committed relationship with her), even though she currently feels that she only wants to have casual sex with him.

How?

Firstly, by not pushing for a commitment from her.

Instead, he needs to relax and accept what she's offering him.

Then, he needs to simply use his interactions with her to build her sexual and romantic feelings for him, to the point where she is the one who wants a commitment with him, because she's afraid of losing him.

So, if your girl said that she wants out of the relationship because you wanted a commitment while she didn't, don't worry about it.

Just accept it and say something along the lines of, â€œHey, I get it. I became too serious too quickly. I realize that now and I can see how it would freak you out and for that I'm sorry. So how about we just hang out as friends for a while instead? No pressure, just two friends having fun together. We can do that, right?â€

She will likely agree to that because you're taking the pressure off her and giving her what she wants (i.e. a casual relationship which can become a 'friends with benefits' relationship later on if you both want it).

You can then use the friendship with her to really amp up the attraction between you and her.

The more you make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you, the more she will begin to want something deeper than a friendship or a casual sex relationship with you.

She will then likely end up pushing you for a commitment so that she can hold on to you, rather than keep things casual and risk some other woman snapping you up.

Another common reason why a woman will say that you want different things from the relationship so she wants out is

2. She wants commitment, but not with you based on what you've shown to her so far

[image: She wants commitment, but not with you based on what you've shown to her so far]

In some instances, a woman will feel ready to settle down and start a family right away.

Yet, deep down she can still fear that if she gets serious with him, they might end up breaking up somewhere along the line.

This fear can develop when there are certain aspects of his thinking and behavior that aren't really in line with what she's actually looking for in a man (e.g. he's not manly enough, he's too insecure, he gives her too much power in the relationship, he doesn't make her feel the need to impress him much at all).

Of course, if he can change those things about himself and give her the attraction experience she really wants from him, then a woman will usually stop worrying and start committing to him.

However, if he stays the same, she doesn't want to risk committing to him and then having to go through a divorce or a serious break up sometime in the future when they have so much more at stake (e.g. they've bought a house, have children together, she's so much more emotionally attached to him).

As a result, she may decide to just cut her losses before the pain of a break up is too much for her.

So, if you suspect that your woman was ready to commit to you, but something made her run instead, it may be because she wasn't getting the attraction experience from you that she wanted.

You can change that though.

By understanding what aspects of your attitude, thinking and behavior she felt she couldn't live with, you can make some quick adjustments to your approach to her and get her back.

For example: Some of the things that a woman may want from her guy are that:

- He maintains his confidence regardless of what life throws at him and he doesn't need her approval or encouragement to feel good about himself.
- He laughs at her in a loving way rather than getting upset and feeling unsure of himself and his value to her when she teases him, throws a tantrum or creates drama.
- He's loving, caring and attentive, but he doesn't let her push him around and get away with bad behavior or being disrespectful towards him.
- He makes her feel like she's a sexy, desirable woman, rather than treating her like a neutral friend or a roommate.
- He has a strong purpose and direction in life and he's motivated, focused and active in pursuing his goals, rather than being a grown man who still behaves like a teenager (e.g. immature, doesn't take responsibility for his life, wastes his spare time by hanging out with friends and getting drunk, watching too much TV or playing video games).
- He is secure in his masculinity and doesn't doubt that his woman would never betray him, rather than being a jealous and controlling boyfriend who constantly lives in fear that some other guy might attract her away from him.
- He leads in the relationship, rather than taking a back seat and expecting his woman to make all the decisions and carry all the responsibilities for the both of them, making her feel like she has too much power over him which turns her off as a result.
- He knows that in order for a woman to want to stay with him for life and be a good, devoted loving woman to him, the attraction between them needs to be mutual, rather than him feeling attracted to her, but not doing anything to make her feel the same way about him.

Those are just a few of the things that a woman looks out for, when in a relationship with a man.

So, the question that you should ask yourself is, "Did I do those things for her or did I unknowingly do the opposite most of the time?"

When you discover where you really went wrong, you can then quickly change your approach and easily re-attract her and get her back.

Remember: Admitting that you made a mistake doesn't make you a bad guy, terrible boyfriend or that you can't change and then give your ex what she really wants from you.

Instead, it actually makes you even more attractive to her for being a man of action who admits he made a mistake and does something about it.

She then naturally feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you and from there, getting her back becomes easy because you are now both in sync (i.e. you want the same things from the relationship).

Another common reason why a woman will say that you want different things from the relationship so she wants out is!

3. She wants to be able to see other people, but you only want her

[image: She wants to see other people, but you only want her]

Sometimes, a guy might feel that he's found the perfect woman for him.

In his opinion, sheâs everything heâs looking for in a woman he wants to spend his life with and no other girl compares to her.

Unfortunately, the woman might not feel the same way about him (yet).

So even though heâs a good guy and she enjoys his company and he has many qualities and behaviors that she feels attracted to (e.g. he makes her feel loved and appreciated, heâs ambitious and is working towards achieving his goals in life, heâs a responsible guy rather than being immature), she doesnât quite feel like heâs the one she wants to settle down with for life.

There are some aspects of his thinking and behavior that she doesnât feel are compatible with what sheâs looking for in a man she wants to commit to (e.g. heâs too jealous and controlling, he doesnât have much confidence in himself and that makes him needy and clingy, heâs too nice so she feels more emotionally dominant than him).

As a result, she prefers not to get stuck in a serious relationship with him so she can date other guys.

Essentially, sheâs still looking for the perfect guy for her.

Of course, when she finds him, she will quickly settle down and do whatever it takes to hold on to him.

So, if your ex said that you and her want different things from the relationship and she wants out, it may be because you wanted her more than she wanted you.

In your opinion she was the only girl for you, but in her mind, she was likely just using you as stepping stone to finding the perfect guy.

Fortunately though, it doesnât mean you canât become that guy to her.

However, your approach should not be about trying to get her to commit to you exclusively.

Instead, you need to make her regret breaking up with youâ!

How can you do that?

By first re-sparking her sexual and romantic feelings for you during interactions (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be around you, flirting with her to create sexual tension) and then showing her that youâre more emotionally independent now.

Yes, you still care for her and want her to be your girl, but you donât need only her to feel happy and enjoy your life.

That means you need to get out and start having fun with other people and possibly even go out with other women.

Show your ex that youâre not desperate to hold on to her.

Naturally, itâs not about going out and dating a new woman every night, especially if you donât want to.

Instead, it simply means you should start to move on, so she feels the pain of losing you and then realizes her mistake.

She will be thinking about you and how you now make her feel and her desire to see other people will begin to fade away and she will start to want you and only you.

Another common reason why a woman will say that you want different things from the relationship so she wants out isâ!

4. You want to just be boyfriend and girlfriend and not worry about the future so much

[image: You just want to be boyfriend and girlfriend and not worry about the future]

In most relationships, a couple will usually start off wanting the same things.

For example: They might be young and they agree that it's too soon for them to settle down into a serious relationship.

Instead, they prefer to hang out together, party and have fun, without putting any pressure on each other about what will happen sometime in the future.

However, although that might be fine in the beginning, after a while, the woman might start to mature faster than her guy and suddenly, what felt okay to her before (i.e. that they just hang out as boyfriend and girlfriend and not worry so much about the future), suddenly doesn't make her happy anymore.

Instead, she begins to feel that her guy is stuck behaving more like a teenager than a grown up man, while she is ready to settle down and take things more seriously.

At the same time, if she notices that all her friends, female family members and coworkers around her are moving forward in their relationships (e.g. getting married, starting a family) and she isn't, she may begin to wonder if her relationship is worth holding on to.

She may then start thinking things like, "How long must I wait for my guy to take things to the next level between us? I'm not getting any younger and I don't want to invest even more months/years of my life in a relationship that just isn't going anywhere. If I wait too long I may miss my chance to find a man who does want the same things in a relationship that I do (move in together, get married, start a family). I don't want to risk that. I need to get out of this relationship and find a guy who is ready to commit to me in the ways that are important to me. This relationship just isn't going anywhere."

Of course, because she does care for the guy, she will likely try to give him a chance first by hinting about her need to be in a more serious relationship with him.

However, if he doesn't pick up on her needs, or brushes them off by saying things like, "Why do you want to ruin what we have? Most of my friends are jealous of our relationship, so stop being a downer. This is fun," she will almost certainly get to the point where she feels the relationship isn't going anywhere and decide to break up with him.

She may then say something along the lines of, "I'm sorry, but we want different things from the relationship and I want out."

If this was the case between you and your ex and you want her back, the first thing you need to do is remain calm and not go rushing off and doing something crazy like asking her to marry you.

Instead, you need to change your approach so that when you interact with her, she can see, without you saying anything, that you're now a more emotionally mature man than before.

For example: During conversation you can talk about your goals for the future and how you're working towards achieving them.

You might mention in passing that you've stopped hanging out with some of your irresponsible, immature friends.

You may tell her about a new promotion at work, or how you're attending night classes to improve your education so that you can get a better job.

Don't force the conversation in that direction, just let it flow so that it seems natural to her, rather than you trying to impress her.

The more she realizes how emotionally mature you are now, the more respect and attraction for you she will feel.

Even if she initially tries to fight it, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

After all, you're now the man she always wanted you to be.

She will then naturally drop her guard and open back up to hanging out with you more to see what happens from there.

Another common reason why a woman will say that you want different things from the relationship so she wants out is

5. She wants to be able to party with her single girlfriends, travel and not feel tied down right now

[image: She wants to be able to party with her single girlfriends and not feel tied down by a relationship]

There are many reasons why a woman might get into a relationship with a guy.

Of course, the main reason is usually because she feels attracted to him and wants to explore those feelings in a relationship, but other reasons might be:

- Her family is pressuring her to settle down.
- She notices that her friends are getting into relationships and she feels left out.
- She worries that if she doesn't find a guy soon she might end up being single for life.
- The guy keeps pushing her to be his girl and she eventually gives in to him.

In most instances, a woman may even convince herself that settling down with a good guy is exactly what she wants to do.

Of course, if the guy then builds on her feelings for him and makes her feel strong surges of respect, attraction and love for him, she will quickly go from not being sure if she wants to settle down with him for real, to holding on to him and doing whatever it takes never to lose him (i.e. being a good, loving, devoted, loyal woman to him).

On the other hand, if the guy fails to create the kind of relationship dynamic that will motivate her to be a good woman to him, she will almost certainly begin to feel unhappy in the relationship.

If she then also notices how much fun her single friends are having (e.g. going out partying, hooking up with different men, traveling), she may start thinking things like, "Here I am stuck in a boring relationship while the best years of my life are passing me by."

When that happens, she will likely break up with her guy so that she can be free to enjoy some of the things she feels she has been missing out on.

Here's the thing though

If a woman is happy in her relationship with her man, nothing about the single life would be able to make her feel dissatisfied or like she's losing out.

Instead, she would feel sorry for all the single women out there who are missing out on the joy of being in a relationship built on mutual respect, attraction and love.

So, if your girlfriend said that you want different things from the relationship mainly because she felt being single was better than being with you, it's up to you to change how she feels. How?

By making her feel so much respect, sexual attraction and love for you again based on your approach to attraction with her (i.e. you're now making her feel attracted in new and exciting ways), that she only wants to be in a relationship with you.

She doesn't want to be single anymore, because what you have together is way better than anything she's experienced by herself.

4 Mistakes to Avoid When Trying to Make Her Stick With the Relationship

Depending on your approach from this point onwards, your ex will either realize that she made a big mistake by breaking up with you and want you back, or she will feel like she made the right decision and will then focus on moving on.

This is why, it's very important that you don't give her any more reasons to feel happy that she broke up with you.

That means, you need to avoid making any of these mistakes:

1. Promising to accept whatever kind of relationships she wants, as long as she doesn't leave you

To make your girl want to stay in a relationship with you, she needs to get the sense that things will be different this time around.

However, different doesn't mean you give up everything you want to please her.

Not only is that a bad idea for you, because you will likely end up resenting her for making you do things you don't want to do (e.g. settle down when you prefer to be more care-free, have an open relationship where you both see other people when you want only her), in the end, giving a woman whatever she wants as a way of keeping her, actually turns her off even more.

Why?

She starts to feel like she has power over you.

As a result, the relationship dynamic goes out of balance and she ends up acting like the man and being more emotionally dominant, while you fall into the more submissive role.

She then loses respect for you because she can push you around.

Without respect, she also stops feeling attracted to you and then she can't see any reason to be in a relationship with you.

Another mistake to avoid making is:

2. Trying to make her feel okay about just being friends with benefits, when she really wants to be madly in love with her guy and building a future with him

Sometimes, a guy might try to hold on to his woman by suggesting they remain friends with benefits. Yet, what a guy like that doesn't realize is that regardless of what a woman says (e.g. she wants to enjoy the single life, she wants to see other people), in most instances, all it takes is for a guy to spark her sexual and romantic feelings for him and she will quickly change her mind.

Suddenly she feels motivated to be loyal, treat him well and make him feel loved and appreciated, so he only wants to be with her.

It's just how a woman's instincts work.

When a woman finds a man she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, nothing feels more attractive to her than being in a committed relationship with him.

So, rather than offer your ex something she likely doesn't want (e.g. to be friends with benefits), make her feel so much respect and attraction for you instead, so she wants to hold on to you and never let you go.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Turning into an emotional wuss, which turns her off even more

If a woman smells desperation from a guy (e.g. he starts begging and pleading with her to give him one more chance, promises to do whatever she wants him to do to make her happy), she will automatically feel turned off, because she perceives him as being too emotionally weak and wimpy for her.

At the same time, she also starts to get a false sense of superiority over him, which makes her end up thinking that she is more valuable than him, even though she isn't.

Then, rather than think, "Maybe we can work things out between us after all," she instead thinks things like, "It's so annoying to see a grown man act so desperate because he thinks that sucking up to me is the key to holding on to me. The funny thing though, is that if I had any doubts before about breaking up with him, him being such a wuss has convinced me that I made the right decision after all. I can now move on without any regrets. He's not the one for me. He's not man enough for a woman like me."

Remember: A woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy that submits to her and allows her to walk all over him, just so that he can hold on to her.

So, focus on saying and doing the types of things that will spark her feelings for you, rather than turn her off even more.

Another mistake to avoid making is

4. Never really knowing the critical, missing pieces of the attraction experience that really caused her to break up with you

Many guys go through a break up with a woman never really knowing her deep, secret reasons for leaving him.

As a result, if a guy like that tries to get his woman back, he often gets rejected, because he's usually offering her the wrong things (e.g. she wants him to man up and take control of his life but he offers to be more romantic with her, or she wants him to relax and have more fun and he offers to work longer hours at work to be a better provider for her).

This is why, if you want your ex to change her mind about the break up, you need to understand what was missing in your relationship with her and give her that.

When you change your approach to attraction with her, everything changes.

She starts to look at you from a new perspective and then, the idea of losing you becomes something she really doesn't want to risk anymore.

How to Convince Her Not to See Other Guys While We're On a Break

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 ways you can ensure that she doesn't see other guys while you're on a break:

1. Don't try to get her to promise to not see other guys

[image: Don't try to get her to promise not to see other guys]

You might be tempted to say something like, â" Okay, I accept that we need to take a break, but promise me you're not going to start seeing other guys during this time,â" but you shouldn't.

Why?

Trying to prevent her from seeing other guys simply makes her want to do it more because she feels turned off by the fact that you see other guys as being better than you.

You should never, ever see other guys as being competition for your girl.

As a man, you always have to see yourself as the man, as being more than good enough for you woman and as being irreplaceable.

There is only one you.

No other guy compares.

That's how you need to think because it stops you from ever becoming insecure and jealous and it also maintains and builds on your woman's attraction for you over time.

Yet, if you try to convince her to not see other guys while you're on a break from the relationship, she will simply feel compelled to do it to spite you (i.e. to feel like she is free to do whatever wants) and because she feels turned off (i.e. based on you seeing other guys as being better than you).

She then begins to think something like, â" Maybe he thinks that if I hook up with other guys, I will realize that I can do better than him and then dump him for real. If he feels that way about himself, then it only highlights to me that I could be settling for a guy who isn't good enough for me after all. Maybe I can do better. Maybe I should try dating other guys to see how I feel.â"

So, if you want your girl to feel motivated to remain faithful to you while you're on a break from each other, don't go acting like an insecure guy who is worried about another guy being better than you.

What she wants to see from you is that you believe in yourself and in your value to her, regardless of what she says or does to try to make you feel insecure.

She also wants to see that, even if she mentions hanging out with other guys or even dating another guy, you still don't lose confidence because you know that you are the best.

She won't tell you that of course, but it's what she really wants from you.

[image: Don't cause her to want to defy you]

Additionally, apart from feeling turned off if you are being insecure and worrying about other guys, she will also feel angry and annoyed if you try to control her or restrict her freedom while youâ€™re on a break.

In many cases, if a guy tries to convince his girlfriend to remain faithful while theyâ€™re on a break, she will date and sleep with new guys just so she doesnâ€™t feel controlled and restricted.

She will want to defy her ex and reclaim her sense of freedom and individuality and as a result, she may even end up having a one stand or sleeping with a guy on the first date.

So, whatever you do, donâ€™t make the classic mistake of trying to control a girlfriend while youâ€™re on a break from each other.

It simply doesnâ€™t work and almost always backfires.

What you should do instead isâ€¦!

2. Make her feel attracted to you in new ways before you take a break

[image: Make her feel attracted to you in new ways before you take a break]

If you want her to regret the break and feel compelled to get back with you as soon as possible, make sure that you leave her feeling very attracted to you.

When she is attracted to you, she wonâ€™t be able to stop herself from missing you and wanting to see you again, especially when she is feeling horny and wants someone to have sex with.

Yet, if she walks away feeling more like a friend to you, or a girlfriend that used to be attracted to you, but no longer feels enough of a spark, then she wonâ€™t feel that need to get back with you asap.

Instead, if she is feeling horny, she will direct that feeling towards new men and start seeing other guys while youâ€™re on a break.

After all, she is human and she does get horny.

If she feels horny and doesnâ€™t miss you or want to do it with you, then she can easily get laid by arranging dates via a dating app, going out to party with her girlfriends or hooking up with one of the guys that likes her (e.g. coworker, friend, friend of a friend, old crush, ex boyfriend), but hasnâ€™t made any moves because she has been in a relationship.

So, before you and her officially take a break, make sure that you put in some extra effort to attract her in new ways.

For example:

Use ballsy humor when talking to her, rather than being too nice, polite or reserved with your humor or conversation style.

Flirt with her to create some sexual attraction between you and her, so she feels like the spark is still there.

Make her feel girly and feminine in comparison to your masculine approach to conversations and interactions, so other guys (who are neutral, nice and only friendly to her) seem less attractive compared to you.

If you already use that kind of approach with her (rare), then try to think of new ways to attract her instead.

For example: Sometimes a guy is very confident around his girlfriend, uses ballsy or challenging humor, flirts with her, creates sexual tension so she wants him and is very masculine around her.

As a result, she feels attracted to him.

Yet, what is missing from the attraction experience in the relationship is him being more open, loving, appreciative and committed.

If he shows glimpses of that prior to the break, she will naturally feel curious about whether he could be like that more often and as a result, she will cancel the break by contacting him again and wanting to see him.

So, before you and her officially begin the break, make sure that you are making her feel sparks of attraction in new, interesting and appealing ways.

If you do that, she will walk away feeling like she is missing out, which will make her want to interact with you or see you again, rather than seeing other guys.

Another thing you can do to help ensure that she doesn't see other guys while you're on a break, is

3. Let her see that you're not hurting from the break up and are feeling confident and happy about life

[image: Let her see that you are not hurting from the break up and are actually confident, happy and enjoying life]

If your girlfriend wants to take a break, but you love her and want to be with her, it can really hurt your confidence and happiness.

Yet, if you want to re-attract her, make her want to stop the break and get back together, then it's essential that you don't say or do things that turn her off.

Instead, you only say and do things that make women feel attracted to men.

Two very attractive traits that a man can display to a woman after a break up, or during a temporary break, are emotional strength (i.e. confidence, self-assuredness, high self-esteem) and emotional independence (i.e. not needy, you don't need her to feel good about yourself).

Women are naturally attracted to men who have the emotional strength and independence to remain confident, happy and forward moving in life, regardless of whether a woman is by his side or not.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't understand that and instead, mistakenly assume that appearing sad, lost or lonely without her will show her how loyal he is to her and then, she will want him back.

A guy like that may think something like, "I can't get on with my life and feel happy without her. That would imply I don't want her back, which is far from the truth. I want her back so much that even taking a break feels like torture to me. If I gave her the impression that I was happy without her, she would assume that I was over her. Then, it would motivate her to see other guys. That's why I think it's better if I show her how sad and unhappy I feel without her, so she can realize the depth of my love for her. Then, maybe she will stay faithful and even want to get back together because she will realize that no other guy will love her as much as I do."

I feel sorry for guys like that because they simply do not understand how a woman's attraction for a man works.

As a result, they struggle with women for many years or decades in their life and in some cases, their entire life.

If you want to be successful with women (including getting your ex to not see other guys during your break and then want you back), you have to say and do the things that make her (and women in general) feel magnetically attracted to you.

So, the next time you interact with her (i.e. over the phone or in person), you must ensure that she senses your confidence and emotional independence, rather than your insecurity or emotional dependence (i.e. neediness for her).

If she senses neediness and insecurity, she might just decide right then and there that a real break up is a better option for her.

Of course, she probably tell you that because she won't want you pleading with her to give you another chance.

Instead, she will silently decide and then say that it's only a temporary break and you and her may get back together after that.

Then, she will do everything in her power to quickly start seeing other guys, so she can eventually tell you, "Sorry, but I met someone else while we were on a break. I wasn't intending it. It just happened. We've been dating for a couple of weeks now and I'm really happy. So, I ask that you respect my new relationship by not contacting me anymore."

So, don't show neediness or insecurity at all.

Don't make her feel like she would be doing you a favor by getting back with you because you need her back to feel good about yourself again.

Don't do that.

Understand that she wants to feel as though you could easily have other women if you wanted to (i.e. because you are so confident and know how to attract women), but you are choosing her.

Don't tell her that.

Let her feel it based on your confidence and ability to attract her as you interact with her.

Women know when a guy gets it and when he doesn't, in terms of attracting women. Some guys are totally clueless, others fumble their way into relationships and others know exactly how to attract women and make women want them.

If you are the kind of guy who understands how to attract and seduce women, then she will feel turned on by that, even if she never admits to you.

So, when you interact with her, let her sense that you are happy, confident and enjoying life without her.

Of course, don't rub your happiness in her face (e.g. talk about how great your life is now that you and her are on a break, talk about other girls hitting on you, saying that the break has been the best thing that has happened to you in a long time).

Instead, just let her sense your confidence and happiness based on how you talk to and interact with her, while also making her feel good about herself too while she's interacting with you.

If you do that, she will realize that you are one of those rare men who is both confident and loving at the same time.

Men like that are a catch and women know, so she will then feel drawn to you and want to get back together before another quality woman meets you and wants you.

Another thing you can do to help ensure that she doesn't see other guys while you're on a break, is

4. Post up photos on social media of you having fun with new people and doing new things

[image: She will worry that another girl might like you and snap you up]

Put it this way

You can either sit around feeling lonely, left out and waiting for your girl to hopefully come back one day, or you can use the time apart to quickly become a more appealing man so she wants you back.

You might not be in the mood to have fun with new people while on a break with her (e.g. because you're feeling rejected, you only want her, other women don't make you feel the same way), but you've got to do what will attract her back to asap.

If you let her see that you're lonely or just alone during the break, while she's out having a great time with friends (and possibly seeing other guys), then you're not going to seem very appealing to her, especially if she meets a new guy that she finds very attractive.

[image: Have fun with your friends, or make new friends to show her that your life is great without her]

So, while and her are on a break, push yourself to:

For example

- Have some fun with your friends, especially if you've been neglecting that because of the relationship with her.
- Go out to parties, the beach, concerts, festivals or clubs with friends and post up photos on social media.
- Try new things that involve other people (e.g. a mixed martial arts course, group exercise class, go on a bar tour or pub crawl in your city even though you're not a tourist, hold a house party or invite a bunch of friends to party at a bar or club, participate in a wine tasting night, join a sports team fan club and attend some events where people meet up and hang out, invite a bunch of friends to the beach or to play some sort of ball game at the park, go to a festival with a friend and talk to some random people or just have fun there with your friend and post up photos on social media).

The important thing is that she sees you having fun with other people.

Photos of you on your own, with a pet, of a pet, of landscapes, of the food you're eating, at the beach by yourself, or other lonely photos do not work to re-attract an ex.

Women aren't attracted to lonely, left out men.

Women are attracted to men who are confident and enjoying life, regardless of whether a woman is by his side or not.

So, during the break, she will feel attracted to you if she can photos or videos of you smiling, looking confident and happy around other people.

Photos or videos like that give her real evidence, so she can believe that you aren't just sitting around feeling lonely and sad without her.

Instead, you seem confident and like you are enjoying life, which will naturally make other women feel attracted to you.

[image: Post photos on social media of you having fun with new people and doing new things]

Your girlfriend can then begin to worry that if she doesn't get back with you right away or soon, another girl might snap you up.

You might really like the new girl and not want to get back with her, so to avoid feeling rejected and left behind like that, she will want to cancel the break and see you as soon as possible.

5. Focus on improving your ability to attract her, so you are totally prepared and ready to wow her the next time you interact with her

If your current approach to attraction in the relationship doesn't make her feel like she should stick with you, then she's probably not going to want to remain faithful during the break.

She will almost certainly want to experiment with new guys to see how she feels (i.e. Do they make her feel more attracted and in love? Do they naturally understand more about what a woman really wants compared to you?).

So, while you're on a break, make sure that you put in some effort to understand the missing gaps in the attraction experience you have been offering her.

For example: If you've been too timid, nice or reserved around her, but you sense that she wants you to be more ballsy and challenging, then learn how to be like that and get ready to let her experience it.

If you've been too closed up emotionally because you're worried about her judging you or rejecting you and you sense that it has caused you and her to feel distant, or to struggle to connect deeply, then learn how to be emotionally ballsy and real.

If you've been too clingy, needy and emotionally sensitive and you know that you shouldn't be, then learn how to be more emotionally independent and strong.

Then, when you next interact with her and she senses that you can now offer her the kind of attraction experience she really wants, she will naturally feel drawn to you and want to be with you.

Yet, if you interact with her again and she senses that nothing much has changed and other guys she has met have made her feel more attracted, then she's not going to feel compelled to get back with you.

As a result, she will either want to extend the break up, ask for a little more space (so she has more time to find a replacement guy), or she will say that it's better if you and her just remain friends for now.

4 Common Mistakes to Avoid if You Want to Convince Your Girl Not to See Other Guys While You're on a Break

1. Letting her see that she holds all the power now because you are worried that she will sleep with another guy and decide not to get back with you

Almost all women prefer to be in the position where they are trying to win more of your love and commitment, not the other way round.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys never realize that and spend their entire lives trying hard to get a woman to love them as much as they love her by treating her as nicely as possible, buying her things, making her life as easy and convenient as possible, helping her in any way they can and so on.

Yet, all it takes for a woman to lose interest in a guy like that, is for her to meet a man who makes her feel the need to impress him and win more and more of his interest.

In other words, the guy is a challenge.

Women love that, but don't usually go around admitting it (especially to their boyfriend) because they don't want guys to get the wrong idea and start acting like assholes.

Instead, they just keep quiet and naturally feel attracted to guys who get it.

The guys who are clueless about it simply get friend zoned by women they like, rejected when in a relationship, cheated on or dumped (or divorced).

It's pretty sad, but it's one of the most common experiences for men out there because they simply don't understand what attracts women, or they don't want to accept it.

For example: A lot of guys want women to be attracted to niceness, politeness and generosity, rather than being attracted to a good guy who makes her feel the need to be nice, polite and generous with him.

Guys essentially want to save women, but women aren't looking to be saved.

Women want to be madly in love and they can only feel that way with a guy who is a challenge to acquire and keep.

That's the reality.

When a guy isn't aware of that, he might worry so much about his girl cheating on him during the break that he will say things like, Please promise me you won't see other guys when we're apart or, Let's agree not to see other people while we're on this break, okay?

What he doesn't realize, is that by showing her his weakness (i.e. his fear of her hooking up with other guys, his insecurity that other guys might be more attractive to her than him), he is failing to be the challenge that pretty every woman on the planet wishes she had when it comes to a man.

He's also making her feel like she has power over him that she doesn't want.

Unfortunately, that then leads to her losing respect and attraction for him.

As a result, she might begin to wonder things like, What did I ever see in him? He's so insecure and needy these days. Has he always been like that, but seemed confident because I was showing him interest? Is he one of those guys who can only feel confident when a woman is being reassuring? Maybe this break is going to end up being permanent because I really don't see myself getting back with him at this point. He's just not confident enough for a woman like me.

She will then open herself up to meeting new men and if she meets a more confident man who can handle her type of personality and make her feel a lot of attraction, she will be drawn to him. She may even start seeing him and fall in love with him. Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

2. Trying to convince her with your words, rather than with her feelings

Right now, it doesnâ€™t matter what you say to her.

What matters is how you make her feel.

If you try to convince her to remain faithful by providing her a list of reasons (e.g. guys will only want to use her for sex, there are so many STDs out there these days, you love her more than anything), sheâ€™s just not going to listen.

The only thing that will stop her from wanting to see other guys while youâ€™re on break, is to make her feel so attracted to the new and improved you that she realizes other guys pale in comparison to you.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

3. Not giving her a sense that she really could be losing you

If she gets the sense that youâ€™re just going to wait around for her while you and her are on a break, then she wonâ€™t feel compelled to get back with you quickly.

Instead, she can think, â€œI donâ€™t have anything to worry about because he canâ€™t get other girls like me, so heâ€™ll wait. Even if I hook up with other guys, heâ€™s going to forgive me and take me back. So, Iâ€™m just going to enjoy myself and if I find a new guy that I like, Iâ€™ll start seeing him. If I get bored and want to see my ex, I might do that too.â€

Yet, if she meets a guy that she finds more attractive and exciting to be with, she may end up getting serious with him and even falling in love with him.

This is why you need to give her the sense that she really could be losing you for real.

You might even say to her, â€œOkay, well I accept the break, but you need to know that you and I will probably never get back together. I canâ€™t guarantee that I will still be available for you after the break.â€

As a result, she feels like this could be it.

You might meet another girl, who she might see as being prettier than her.

If that happens, she will feel rejected and like she is the one being left behind.

To avoid feeling that way, she will want to cancel the break and get back with you, or at least keep seeing you for a while to see how she feels.

Yet, if you give her the sense that you wonâ€™t be doing anything and will be sitting around waiting for her to return after being faithful to you, then you will probably end up very disappointed.

Remember: Women are attracted to emotional independence in men, not emotional dependence, so donâ€™t display emotional dependence (i.e. neediness for her, the need to get back with her to feel good about yourself again).

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

4. Trying to control her activities or decision making while on a break from you

If she feels like you are trying to restrict her during the break, she will naturally want to defy you and be a little naughty, just so she can feel like she owns her own life.

So, if you don't want to push your girlfriend into another man's arms while you're on break, then don't tell her what to do.

If you want her to remain faithful and come back to you asap, then you need to focus on how much attraction you are making her feel.

The more attracted she feels to you, the less appealing other guys will seem to her.

Making her feel attracted isn't about improving your physical appearance, buying new clothes or going to gym.

It's about what you say and do when you interact with her via text, on the phone and in person, as well as how you make her feel via social media.

You can easily attract her in those ways and cause her to regret taking a break from you and want you back right away.

How to Make Your Ex Miss You Without Talking to Her

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

3 things you can do:

1. Post up photos on social media of you having fun with other people

[image: Make her miss you via social media posts]

Some guys worry that their ex girlfriend will be turned off, angry or will be disappointed if he seems confident, happy and forward moving in life without her.

Yet, the opposite is true.

The reality is that women are attracted to men who are able to be confident, happy and forward moving in life with or without them.

Some of the reasons why include:

- It shows that he isn't emotionally needy (i.e. needs to be with her to feel confident, happy and secure).
- It shows that other people are enjoying hanging out with him.
- It shows that he would naturally be attractive and appealing to other women based on his confidence and state of mind. Therefore, he might move on before her, resulting in her feeling like the one who got left behind.

All of that causes a woman to look at her ex boyfriend in a positive light and begin to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

Of course, she may pretend to be angry at him, so he then stops doing the thing that is working.

Yet, he has to be prepared for that.

For example, if she complains to him and says something like, "Well, I see that you clearly didn't ever care about the relationship. I suppose you're sleeping with new women now already too? Now I know how a little I actually meant to you" or, "Why are you posting up those annoying photos? Don't you have any respect for me? I will unfriend you if you keep doing that" and so on.

Essentially, she is hoping that she can stop him from making her feel attracted, so she can continue moving on without him.

Additionally, she wants him to feel bad about feeling good without her, so he stops and then gives her time to move on before he does.

Then, she can move on first and make him feel like the one who is getting left behind.

Yet, if he doesn't stop and instead says, "You know that I care about you, but you broke up with me. I can't change your mind about that, so I'm simply not trying to. I'm just living my life. Sorry if that hurts you, but I've got to move on" it causes her to feel rejected and as though she is being left behind, which is a powerful motivator for a woman to want to get her ex guy back.

Heck, the feeling of being rejected and left behind is actually one of the top reasons you want her back.

She dumped you, rejected your attempts to get her back.

She has walked away and left you behind in pain.

Itâs a horrible feeling and a part of you wants to stop that pain by getting her back, even if just temporarily.

Thankfully, you really can get her back, but you have to be willing to make her feel positive emotions about you (i.e. respecting how emotionally strong you are for being confident, happy and enjoying your life without her) and painful ones as well (i.e. regret for breaking up with you, feeling like she is missing out, feeling like she is being left behind, worrying that other high quality women will find you attractive and you will then move on before she does).

This is why, you shouldnât be afraid to show her that even though you may still miss her and want her back, youâre not letting it stop you from living your best life.

In fact, you seem even more confident and happy thanÂ you have been in a long time, or ever.

Since women are naturally attracted to a manâs confidence and emotional strength, this automatically makes her feel attracted to you.

She might not openly admit it to you, but she will feel it.

So, if you want to make your ex miss you without talking to her, do your absolute best to post up photos of you having fun with other people (e.g. at a party, at the beach, at a concert, dinner with new friends, fun outdoor activities with new people, BBQ with friends, rooftop party).

Make sure the photos are set to public, so she can see them even if she isnât your Facebook friend or Instagram follower.

The truth is that even if an ex woman once said something like, *âI never want to see you or hear from you again,*â when she broke up with her boyfriend, she will check his social media profiles to see what heâs up to.

Initially, her main reasons for doing that are usually just to see that he seems lonely and miserable without her, or that he isnât moving on before she does.

[image: Make her feel like she is the one being left behind]

Yet, if she notices that you seem very happy, confident and are enjoying life by having fun with interesting people and doing new things, she will naturally feel attracted to your emotional strength and ability to move forward without her.

As a result of feeling attracted, she will naturally start to feel drawn to you.

She will then either contact you right away to say hi, or she will keep going back to look at the photos and wonder why she is missing you and feeling drawn to you all of a sudden.

Most women donât understand why they feel attracted to certain things about men (e.g. why they feel attracted to guys who are a challenge vs. guys who are too nice) and instead, just go with how they feel.

Additionally, a lot of guys donât understand how a womanâs attraction works and as a result, they make assumptions on what might work.

For example: A guy may think, *âIf I appear sad without her, maybe she will take pity on me and give me another chance*â not knowing that women are turned off by neediness and emotional dependence in men.

Alternatively, a guy may think, “If I show her that I am still single, not doing much, not moving on and enjoying myself and am just working hard and staying fit, she will see that I am loyal to her. Then, she will realize that no guy will ever love her as much as I do, or be committed to her as I am” not knowing that when a woman breaks up with a guy, she usually isn't testing his loyalty or commitment to her.

Personally speaking, I've been helping new men to successfully get women back after breaks ups and divorces for many years now.

I've heard all the break up stories and dealt with every break up scenario possible.

One thing remains the same every time: What makes women feel attracted makes them feel attracted. Every woman is different in terms of her personality and every relationship is different in terms of what happened.

Yet, what makes a woman feel attracted remains the same.

When you do what makes a woman feel attracted to you (e.g. display confidence, emotional strength, emotional independence), she automatically feels attracted to you.

Your ex might not openly admit that she's feeling attracted and may even pretend to be angry at you for seeming to be happy and confident without her, but the fact is that she will be feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

As a result, she will begin to miss you and feel drawn to you again, without you having to talk to her.

Of course, if she doesn't contact you within a week of you posting photos on social media of yourself having fun with others, don't keep waiting for her to contact you.

You need to have the balls to contact her, attract her on a call and get her to meet up with you in person, so you can then get her back.

Why should you call or contact her and get things moving along, rather than wait for her to do all the work?

In many cases, even if a woman does miss her ex boyfriend, she won't contact him because she wants to see that he has the balls to contact her and is genuinely interested in her enough to do so.

Women are pretty always like that with men.

When women go out to a bar, they wait for men to approach them.

When a woman likes a guy, she waits for him to ask for her number, or ask her out.

When a woman is attracted to a guy and hanging out with him, she waits for him to make the first move and kiss her.

See the pattern there?

The only difference is that sometimes a woman will break that pattern and approach guy, ask a guy out or move in for a first kiss.

Additionally, with an ex, a woman will sometimes feel so compelled to contact him that she will do it first.

In all of my years of experience helping men get women back, I can tell you that the number one thing that caused an ex girlfriend (fiance or wife) to contact a man after not contacting him for days, weeks or even months, was him posting up photos on social media of himself looking confident, having fun and seeming loved and included by others.

That is the number one thing.

So, don't avoid doing it because you're not in the mood to be around other people, or because you worry that your ex won't like it.

Get yourself in the mood by getting around other people and having and your ex will like it.

Women are naturally attracted to confident men who are able to be happy and forward moving in life with or without them.

You may not want to socialize, party or have fun with other people right now and that is one of the main reasons why you need to do it.

It shows your emotional strength, your emotional independence, your confidence and your ability to be happy and forward moving without her.

All of those traits are attractive to women and will result in her beginning to miss you and want to talk to you again.

If she doesn't contact you within a week of you posting up photos though, you have to build up the courage to contact her.

Don't wait too long.

If you want your ex back, you do need to talk to her at some point.

For example: Another thing you can do to make your ex miss you without (initially) talking to her is

2. Give her a week of space where you don't talk to her. Then, contact her, re-attract her and walk away without trying to get her back

[image: Don't talk to your ex for a week, then re-attract her and walk away]

Giving an ex a few days to a week of space after a break up, allows things to calm down between you and her.

It also gives her a bit of time to stop feeling so upset, annoyed, disappointed, frustrated and even spiteful about the break up.

During the 3-7 days, she can calm down and gradually begin to think of you in a slightly more positive light.

Yet, if you give her more than a week of space before you contact her and begin getting her back, it will often result in her having too much time, to the point where she then begins to get over you, or starts moving on by dating a new guy.

Many women often have 2-3 guys waiting in the wings, hoping that she will break up (e.g. coworkers, friends, friends of friends, old crushes, ex boyfriends).

If you wait too long, she may decide to open herself to one of those guys, or simply get on a dating app and line up a couple of dates per week to meet new guys and potentially start sleeping with a new guy to get over you.

So, if you want her back, don't wait more than a week to begin re-attracting her and making her want you back.

Some of the ways you can re-attract her when you contact her, include:

Using humor to make her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again.

- Showing her your confidence, especially when she pretends to not be interested in you anymore to make you feel nervous or unsure of yourself around her.
- Not holding back on how you really want to behave (e.g. being too nice, being overly polite, seeming hesitant, letting her make most or all of the decisions because you're worried that she won't like it if you are assertive in any way, letting her lead the dynamic of the conversation because you don't want to interrupt her, being on your best behavior to hopefully make her take pity on you) and instead, letting her see that you are confident enough to talk to her using the same charm, charisma and vibe that you once had when things were good between you and her.
- Not getting into exhausting discussions about the relationship and instead, just focusing on building up exciting sexual tension between you and her by flirting, being a bit of a challenge and making her want more of you.
- Showing her (not telling her) based on how you now talk, behave and react that you've already changed and have become a much more attractive, appealing man.
- Reacting to her in a way that makes her feel attracted (e.g. staying calm when she tries to make you angry, laughing when she tries to make you jealous, flirting when she tries to act like she isn't interested).

When you approach interactions with her in a way that creates attraction, she naturally starts to drop her guard and want to open up to you to more.

Then, when she seems open, attracted and relaxed, you can pull the rug out from under her by ending the interaction and as a result, cutting off her access to the attraction she has been feeling.

You can say something like, Anyway, it was good chatting to you. I have to get going now, but maybe we can talk another time. Who knows and then leave (if you're interacting with her in person), or hang up the phone after she gives you the appropriate response (e.g. Oh, okay. Bye).

By walking away, or pulling back like that, she is then left feeling attracted to you and wanting you, but without any access to you.

This naturally results in you being on her mind and her beginning to miss you without you even talking to her.

Of course, if you want her back, you will have to talk to her again, so make sure not to avoid her for too long.

After an interaction like that, it's best to just give her a few days of space so she can miss you and want to talk to you again.

She might contact you during that time, but if she doesn't, don't wait.

Simply contact her, attract her some more and then arrange to catch up in person.

When you catch up in person, attract her more and then get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

Another thing you can do to make your ex miss you without talking to her is

3. Let her find out (via mutual friends) how awesome your life is without her now

[image: Let her find out how awesome your life is now via mutual friends]

Jealousy, the fear of missing out and the feeling of being left behind or left out are all powerful motivators that can cause a woman to want to get back with her ex, at least talk to him again.

Yet, so many guys who get dumped are totally afraid of making their ex woman feel that way, in case she gets angry and seeks revenge (e.g. starts sleeping new men).

Instead, most guys want to make their ex girlfriend feel comfortable in the idea that he is still missing her, loyal to her and wanting her back.

As a result, she doesn't have to experience any painful emotions and can instead move on in peace.

Several scientific studies have found that people are much more motivated to avoid the emotional pain of losing something, rather than the pleasure of potentially gaining something.

So, if you only make your ex girlfriend (fiance or wife) feel like the option of getting back with you is there for her, because you aren't trying to move on without her, then she doesn't have to feel the pain of potentially losing you.

Yet, if you show her that you are confident, happy and forward moving in life regardless of whether she is in your life or not, then she begins to worry about the potential of losing you to another quality woman who sees your attractiveness and value.

If you start dating a new woman who your ex sees as being prettier than her, then she will feel like she is missing out on being with you and is now the one who has been left behind as a result of the break up.

Women don't want to be stuck feeling rejected like that, so to avoid that potential emotional pain, a woman will usually give her ex another chance, or at least open up to talking to him again or catching up with him in person to see how she feels.

So, don't be afraid to enjoy your life without her over the next week and let your mutual friends find out about it.

Note: I say 'over the next week' because it's important that you don't take too long to do this.

If you build up to enjoying your life over the next few months, then your ex will almost certainly have moved on by then.

Enjoying your life without her doesn't mean that you don't care about her anymore, or don't want her back.

Instead, you are simply displaying traits that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence, emotional strength, the ability to cope well in emotionally difficult situations, emotional independence).

Some of the ways you can let her find out via mutual friends, how awesome your life is without her, is to:

- Go out with mutual friends to clubs and bars and have a great time, joke around, be confident and even flirt with some women if you can. You don't have to hook up with any women or even get a phone number, but be willing to talk, have a laugh and even flirt with some women.

- Do something daring that you always wanted to do (e.g. go bungee jumping, motorbike racing, participate in a martial arts boot camp, stand up comedy workshop) and let your mutual friends find out about it. Make sure that it involves you being around other people though. For example, going camping on your own, doing a solo road trip, surfing on your own and so on, aren't going to make your ex feel like you are being loved and included by other people. You might feel confident and happy, but by being alone, she can easily assume that you're isolating yourself to deal with the pain of losing her and because you can stand being around other people at the moment. This turns her off because women are not attracted to emotionally weak or emotionally dependent (i.e. needy) men, especially after dumping them.
- Do some traveling with friends or join a travel group for singles, even if you only go somewhere close by where you can get outside and have fun with other people.
- Catch up with mutual friends at a cafe or restaurant and have a great chat with plenty of laughs.

After getting dumped, you might not be in the mood to do any of that, but it's important to do it to help get yourself into a more emotionally attractive state of being.

If you interact with your ex and she senses that your life sucks without her, you've been miserable and lonely and you need her back to feel good about yourself again, then she is going to feel turned off.

On the other hand, if you interact with your ex and she senses that your life is great without her, you've been happy, loved and included and even though you do care about her, you don't need her back to feel good about yourself, then she is going to feel attracted to you.

She will also begin to feel the emotional pain of regret, being left behind and worrying that you might end up being the one who got away.

To avoid feeling that pain, she will then open herself up to communicating with you again to either get you back, or just check that you are still missing her and need her back.

If she senses that you are missing her and need her back, she can then continue moving on in peace without having to feel rejected.

Yet, if she senses that you do care about her, have missed her from time to time, but don't need her back, then she will feel rejected and will want to interact with you more, or catch up with you to avoid feeling that pain.

So, don't be afraid to let her find out how awesome your life is without her.

It works.

On the other hand, here are!

3 Mistakes to Avoid When Attempting to Make an Ex Miss You Without Talking to Her

1. Wasting too much time waiting for her to eventually miss you

[image: Wasting too much time waiting for her to eventually miss you]

Some guys make the mistake of thinking that every woman needs 30 to 60 days of space before she will want her ex boyfriend back.

Itâs a huge ex back myth that costs millions of confused men to miss out on getting their ex woman backâ!

In some cases though, a guy waits a long time before contacting his ex woman because he is nervous about interacting with her and just can build up the courage to do it.

Rather than risking a potential rejection, he makes the assumption that if he just waits long enough (maybe a few weeks or even months), the anger, disappointment and lack of attraction she felt will evaporate and she will then start to miss him.

Yet, hereâs the thingâ!

If a woman has broken up with a guy that she no longer wants to be with (e.g. due to a lack of attraction, him unable to handle a woman like her, him losing too much confidence and becoming insecure in the relationship), she will rarely want to go running back to him, just because heâs not contacting her.

In most cases, she just moves on with a new guy because her ex isnât doing anything to re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship.

Even if she does miss her ex from time to time, a woman will rarely contact him and try to get her back because she doesnât want to risk getting rejected by him if heâs lost interest in her.

This is why, waiting weeks or months for your ex to hopefully miss you and come running back to you, will usually be a total waste of time.

Itâs fine to give her a little bit of time to calm down after the break up, but if you wait too long, she will almost certainly just move on without you.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ!

2. Assuming that the 30 Day No Contact Rule works on any woman

The 30 Day No Contact Rule essentially means that you donât contact an ex for 30 days, in the hope that they miss you and want you back.

It can work in some cases, but it doesnât work in most cases.

For example: It can work if a woman is still in love with her ex and canât deal with not hearing from him anymore.

Him ignoring makes her miss him so much that she reaches out to him.

He can then potentially get her back.

Alternatively, if a guy ignores his ex long enough and she struggles to find a replacement guy, then she might end up reaching out to her ex to go back to something familiar.

Those are rare cases where all a guy has to do is wait and his ex girl will come crawling back.

Yet, in almost all other cases, if a woman has dumped a guy, she doesnât want to go back to him just because heâs not contacting her.

She remembers exactly why she broke up with him, doesnât want to experience that anymore and so, she continues to move on without him.

Yet, if he had the balls to interact with her and let her experience the new and improved him, then she would have something to think about.

If she felt attracted to him during the interactions (e.g. via text, on phone calls, via social media or in person) and he wasn't desperately trying to get her back, then she will feel like she is being left behind or rejected, which will usually cause a woman to show more interest and try to get the guy back.

In the process of showing more interest and trying to get him back, she misses him and feels more drawn to him.

Her desire for him increases and she just wants to get the relationship back together.

On the other hand, if her ex never contacts her, or waits 30 days to eventually contact her, then she will almost certainly start getting over him and moving on without him.

In some cases, a woman doesn't even have to work at getting over her ex boyfriend because she was already over him weeks and sometimes months before the break up.

In cases like that, not contacting her and re-attracting her, simply gives her space and time to move on in peace.

Then, by the time her ex contacts her after 30 days, she says something like, â€œWhat? Why are you contacting me? We broke up a month ago. I'm happy now and I'm dating someone else. So, I ask that you respect that and don't contact me anymore. I wish you all the best. Goodbye.â€

So, if you're thinking of cutting off contact for 30 days and waiting for your ex to miss you, then you need to ask yourself this question: Does my ex secretly still love me and want me back?

If yes, then you might have a chance of her contacting you if you cut off contact, or she might never contact you because she fears you will reject her.

If no, then you're almost certainly not going to get her back by waiting 30 days.

It won't achieve anything.

If you want her back, you've got to actively re-attract her now by contacting her, or at the very least, attract her from a distance (via social media posts) for a week before contacting her.

When you contact her and re-attract her, you need to get her to meet up with you in person.

In person, you can fully re-attract her and initiate a hug, kiss and potentially then sex as well.

If she is feeling very attracted to you, then she will be open to a hug.

When she opens up to a hug, feels warm and turned on by it, she will almost certainly open up to a kiss.

When you kiss and she feels sparks with you, then she will automatically begin thinking about the possibility of having sex with you.

If you are able to continue making her feel turned on, it will naturally happen.

Then, you and her can decide what to do after that.

Yet, if you just cut off contact and wait, she's almost certainly not going to care and will simply begin moving on without you.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€

3. Being afraid to talk to her because you're unsure how to re-attract her

When a guy doesn't know what to say or do to make his ex want him sexually and romantically, he will often decide to just ignore her in the hopes that it somehow results in her missing him and wanting him back.

As I said earlier, it can work in some cases if the woman is still in love with him, or can't find a suitable replacement guy to move on with and she then contacts him.

Yet, in most cases, not talking to her anymore simply doesn't work.

The reality is that as the man, it's up to you to initiate the ex back process and guide her back into a relationship with you.

Don't be afraid to call your ex, begin re-attracting her and making her want you back.

Create sparks of attraction inside of her, so she naturally feels drawn to you and wants to interact with you further.

Then, arrange to catch up in person to say hi.

In person, build on her sexual and romantic feelings and then get to a hug, kissing, sex and back into a relationship.

That's how most men get women back immediately, or very quickly (i.e. within a few days to a couple of weeks).

The guys who remain afraid to talk to their ex are almost always the ones who have to live with regret for the rest of their life.

I've literally been contacted by 1,000s of men about getting ex women back and have often heard them say things like, "I waited too long to contact her and she moved on" or, "I wish I would have just gave it a try. I was too afraid to contact her and she eventually moved on" and so on.

I've also heard from a lot of men who say they are still missing their ex girlfriend years and even decades after the break up.

They struggle to enjoy new relationships because they always miss her and want her back.

So, if you want your ex back, take the action needed to get her back.

Don't sit around feeling afraid to talk to her.

Man up, interact with her, re-attract her and get her back while you still can.

Should I Call My Ex Girlfriend if She Hasn't Called Me?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Yes.

Here are 7 reasons why:

1. Most women won't make the first move to get an ex guy back, especially after they broke up with him

[image: Most women won't make the first move to get a guy back, especially after dumping him]

A lot of guys hope that if they just don't contact their ex girlfriend, she will miss him like crazy, contact him and try to get the relationship back together.

It sounds like a good plan, but it rarely, if ever works.

Why?

When a woman breaks up with a guy, she usually has a bunch of real reasons (e.g. he became too insecure, was too jealous, didn't make her feel appreciated enough) why that she does not forget.

Yet, sometimes, regardless of how turned off she was and how clearly she remembers why she was turned off, she still can't stop herself from missing her ex a little.

That's when she might become open to getting back with him, if she hasn't been able to find a new guy that is.

However, even if a woman misses her ex boyfriend a little, she usually won't do much or anything about it.

Why?

In many cases, a woman fears getting rejected by her ex if he has moved on since the break up, or if he decides to reject her because of how much he hates her now.

After all, he hasn't been contacting her since the break up, so what else is she to think?

She's almost certainly not going to be thinking, "Oh, he's not contacting me because he loves me and wants me back" and will instead be thinking, "Maybe he's moved on. Maybe he will reject me to spite me if I contact him. Maybe he'll ignore me and then I'll feel rejected."

So, rather than risking feeling rejected, she simply waits for him to make the first move.

If he doesn't contact her, then she will usually see it as a sign that he is no longer interested in her, or has moved on with a new girl.

As a result, she will then focus on fully getting over him and moving on by dating and hooking up with new guys.

So, don't believe in the myth that you need to cut off contact with a girlfriend and wait for her to eventually contact you and want you back.

It's a total myth that waiting 30, 60 or 90 days will magically make an ex girlfriend want you, contact you and get back with you.

A woman will only do that in rare cases, where she is still attracted to or in love with her ex, or can't find a good enough replacement guy, so she goes back to an ex that she is still kind of attracted to.

If your ex girlfriend isn't still attracted to you or in love with you, or if she can easily find a good enough replacement guy, then she will almost certainly never try to get you back.

This is why, if you want to get back with your ex girlfriend, don't continue asking yourself, "Should I call my ex girlfriend if she hasn't called me?"

Instead, just call her.

Interact with her, re-attract her, meet up with her, hook up with her and get her back.

If you waste time wondering whether or not you should call her, then days or weeks may pass by. Then, you might end up missing your chance with her.

So, just be courageous enough to take the lead in the ex back process by calling her.

By making the first move, your ex girlfriend will automatically start to feel some respect for you again (i.e. because you weren't afraid to call her, even though she broke up with you).

Women respect that kind of courage and confidence.

When a woman respects you, she will naturally start to feel sexually attracted to you again.

When she feels respect and attraction, she will naturally feel drawn to you and open to giving things another shot.

Another reason why you should call your ex girlfriend if she hasn't called you, is that

2. She will only wait so long before she moves on [image: She will only wait so long until she moves on]

Regardless of her potential remaining feelings for you, she won't sit around waiting for you to contact her forever.

If she happens to meet a guy who makes her feel more respect, sexual attraction and love than you did, then you might just become a distant memory that becomes less and less important to her by the day.

This is why you need to strike while the iron is hot.

Get her on a phone call with you right away and make her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again.

The more you can make her laugh and feel good on the call, the more open she will become to meeting up with you in person because she will know that things would most likely feel good between you and her in person.

When you meet up in person, you can then fully reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings and get her back.

Another reason why you should call your ex girlfriend if she hasn't called you, is that

3. Many women hate it when guys play the No Contact game after a break up. So, they decide to play mind games with him in return

[image: No contact often causes a woman to play mind games with her ex, before rejecting him once again]

If a woman searches online to find out why an ex boyfriend would avoid contacting his girlfriend after she dumped him, she will eventually stumble across the No Contact Rule.

The No Contact Rule is essentially where you wait 30, 60 or 90 days in the hope that your ex will go crazy missing you and wondering why you aren't contacting them.

Then, the ex will contact you and you can get them back.

Yayyy!

If only it were that simple.

The reality is that even if a woman does contact her ex boyfriend (who she dumped) out of curiosity, she will usually only do so to confirm that he is still missing her and wanting her back.

That's all she wants to know.

When she finds that out, she can then stop feeling bad about him not contacting her and move on in peace without him.

As a result, he doesn't get his ex back via No Contact.

This is why most guys who try to use No Contact will either say that their ex girlfriend never contacted them, or she did send a couple of texts, but then went cold.

Yet, so many guys hold onto the hope that if they just keep waiting and waiting, their ex girlfriend will eventually come running back.

The reality that the No Contact Rule rarely works for men who want to get back with a woman who dumped them.

So, I highly recommend that you have the balls to call her and re-attract her instead of waiting around and hoping that your ex girlfriend, who willingly dumped you, will suddenly come running back for some reason.

Not only because it works, but because most women are aware of the No Contact Rule these days.

If you try to use it on your ex girlfriend and she knows that you want her back badly, then she will feel turned off by your lack of balls/courage and will want to distance herself from you even further.

Additionally, she might even decide to hurt you by playing mind games with you in return.

For example: She might initially show some interest via text and give you some hope that you and her might get back together.

Then, if she sees that you are totally keen and most likely have been all along, she will then change her mind and say that it's best that you and her just remain broken up.

This might then result in you trying to change her mind, convince her to give you another chance and so on.

All of that will be fuel for her confidence as she moves on without you, knowing full well that you want her back and always have.

As a result, she doesn't have to feel rejected or hurt by you not contacting her.

Instead, it empowers her and makes her more confident, happy and at peace as she moves on without you.

So, don't let that happen to you.

I highly recommend that you stop ignoring your ex girlfriend and get her on a phone call with you right away.

On a phone call, you can instantly begin to re-attract her and make you want you back.

Yet, if you wait for her to call, then she will probably take your silence as a sign that youâ€¢re playing mind games with her, or simply donâ€¢t have the balls to call her.

As a result, she will feel determined to move on, or play mind games with you (initially show some interest via text to confirm that you are still interested) while moving on behind your back.

Then, you will probably get a message like this from her sometime soon, â€¢Iâ€¢ve got something to tell you.â€¢

She then tells you that she has met someone else, has been dating him, is happy and wants to stop communicating with you out of respect to him and the new relationship.

So, you got dumped, cut off contact and waited, she contacted you to confirm you were still interested, got your hopes up and then rejected you again.

Not a nice experience.

If you want to avoid that, youâ€¢ve got to make a move and call her.

Another reason why you should call your ex girlfriend if she hasnâ€¢t called you, isâ€¢!

4. Some women still love and miss their ex boyfriend after breaking up with him

[image: Some women still love and miss their ex boyfriend after breaking up with him]

Sometimes woman will break up with a guy, even though she still has strong feelings for him.

She wants to break up though becauseâ€¢!

- Sheâ€¢s tired of fighting about the same things over and over again (e.g. how she doesnâ€¢t give him enough attention because she spends most of her time on her phone, how he gets jealous about how much time and attention her friends get compared to him).
- She has been waiting too long for him to commit to her and she feels the need to move on, so she can find a more secure relationship.
- Sheâ€¢s tired of him promising to change and then he doesnâ€¢t (e.g. he said he would stop being so angry and irritable, but it hasnâ€¢t ever changed).
- She hopes that by breaking up with him, it will shock him into wanting to improve now, so they can get back into a relationship that is better than before.
- Sheâ€¢s tired of being taken for granted by him (e.g. he spends a lot of time playing video games on weekends and essentially ignores her, he showed her love and affection at the start, but just expects her to stick around and put up with being in the background of his life now, he gets into heated arguments with her and shows his lack of respect, love and patience when it comes to her).

Sheâ€¢s unhappy in the relationship and doesnâ€¢t know what else to do to fix it.

Despite all that, she still might be secretly hoping that her ex boyfriend doesnâ€¢t give up on their love and instead, mans up and takes the action needed to get her back.

If he does that, they can then get back together and experience a new relationship that is more evolved, meaningful and enjoyable for both of them.

Yet, if he just sits around waiting for her to call him, she will almost certainly reach a point where she realizes that it's hopeless to keep waiting for him any longer.

She may even start thinking things like, â€œWell, I guess he didn't love me as much as I thought. I can't believe he hasn't even tried to call me once, even to check if I'm okay. It was so easy for him to just move on and forget about me, while I've been sitting here like a fool missing him and wishing we could work things out. No more! I'm done with waiting. I'm going to put myself first from now on and focus on moving on by finding myself a new man who deserves me.â€

She then makes herself available to meeting, hooking up with and dating other guys, so she can get over her ex boyfriend and move on.

In the meantime, he's still waiting around wondering whether or not he should call her.

Then, if he eventually decides to call her, he may be disappointed to discover that she has a new boyfriend.

So, don't waste another day.

Call her.

She's probably waiting for you.

If she's not waiting for you, then you can reawaken her feelings and make her want you back.

You have nothing to lose and everything to gain if you just take action.

Get her back.

Another reason why you should call your ex girlfriend if she hasn't called you, is that

5. You can easily attract her on a phone call and then get her to meet up with you in person

Some of the ways you can attract her on a phone call include:

- Making her laugh, smile and feel good to be talking to you again.
- Showing her your confidence, especially if she's trying to make you feel nervous or insecure about yourself by saying things like, â€œWhy are you calling me? I told you when we broke up I never want to talk to you or see you againâ€ or, â€œI'm really happy now and I don't want you to ruin thatâ€ or, â€œI don't know why you are calling me after all this time. I'm over us now. I'm enjoying being singleâ€ and so on.
- Having the balls to joke with her as though she still likes you, or as you would have when you and her were boyfriend and girlfriend. For example: Start off the call by jokingly saying something like, â€œHey ex girlfriendâ€ or â€œhow you been?â€ rather than being too reserved or polite, â€œOh, hi Sarah. How have you been?â€ Calling her your ex girlfriend in a playful way is a form of flirting because you're showing some interest, but only in a playful way. Additionally, it's also attractive because it takes balls to say something like that to her, where you are assuming that she is still cool with you joking with her like you used to when you and her were together.
- Letting her feel and sense that she can't dominate you with her confident, strong personality in the way she used to. This is a huge turn on for women who find that most men are intimidated by them. If she can sense that you have manned up and can now be the more powerful, dominant one while still being a good man, then she will feel attracted to you like a magnet. Women know how difficult it is to find an emotionally strong man these days, who doesn't crumble under a woman's pressure.

When you make your ex girlfriend feel attracted in new and interesting ways, she instantly becomes curious and intrigued about her new feelings for you and wants to explore them.

She begins to worry that if she cuts you off and doesn't give you another chance, she will regret it later and maybe even for the rest of your life.

As a result, she becomes open to meeting up with you in person.

Then, when you see her in person, you just need to be prepared to build on her newfound feelings and then guide her back into a relationship with you.

Another reason why you should call your ex girlfriend if she hasn't called you, is that

6. For some women, a phone call shows that you actually do care and the relationship is worth saving

[image: For some women, a phone call shows that you actually do care and that the relationship is worth saving]

Sometimes a woman will break up with a boyfriend because she feels as though he doesn't love her as much as she loves him.

Throughout the relationship, she feels as though it was her who put in most of the effort to make the relationship work (e.g. she cooked for him, she bought him gifts, she did sweet things for him, she always forgave him when he stuffed up, she let things slide to avoid getting into arguments, she spent less time with friends or family and spent more and more time with him to hopefully keep him happy, she did a lot more for him than he ever did for her, she tried hard to make him happy).

Yet, despite all of her efforts, she ended up feeling like he was just using her (e.g. for sex, to have someone to hang out and have fun with, to go places and do things together as a couple that he couldn't do alone, so he didn't have to be single, so he wouldn't feel lonely).

So, an ex boyfriend like that doesn't call her, she may begin to think something like, He hasn't even called me. Why did I ever waste my time with him? He clearly doesn't care. Well, at least now I know where I stand with him. It's time to put myself first by finding a man who will love me and appreciate me.

Little does she know, her ex boyfriend is missing her and searching things like, Should I call my ex girlfriend if she hasn't called me?

Yes, you should call her.

Call her, re-attract her on the call, get her to meet up with you, attract her at the meet up and get her back.

You can do it.

Another reason why you should call your ex girlfriend if she hasn't called you is that

7. For many women, a phone call shows how manly you really are [image: For many women, a phone call shows how manly you really are]

One of the qualities that women feel most attracted to about a man, is his ability to be fearless, regardless of how challenging a situation might be.

In other words, he has balls.

So, when you take the initiative and call your ex girlfriend even though she's not calling you, it says a lot about your character to her.

Unlike other guys, you're not afraid of taking the risk to call your ex girlfriend, even though she might reject you.

You have balls, so you're not afraid of a potential rejection.

You're also not afraid of a possible awkward first 1-2 minutes of a phone conversation, before things feel good between you and her again.

You're an emotionally strong, emotionally courageous man.

That is attractive to her.

As a result of the attractiveness of your emotional strength, she starts to feel drawn to you again, even though she might not want to openly admit it.

Of course, the phone call is the first step in getting her back.

You also need to be able to re-attract her on the call, get her to meet up with you, attract her at the meet up and make her want to get back with you.

You can do that, but just make sure that you are prepared to do it.

If you don't feel confident in your ability to re-attract her, be sure to watch the videos I've added in on this page for you.

Additionally, if you're still worried about calling her, make sure that you're not holding yourself back with the following negative assumptions.

4 Negative Assumptions That Can Hold You Back From Calling Her and Getting Her Back

[image: Negative assumptions to avoid]

1. Assuming that not contacting a woman after a break up always causes her to come back

It can work if the woman is still in love with her ex, or attracted to him enough where she just wants to hug, kiss and have sex with him again.

Yet, in almost all cases where a man needs help to get a woman back, she simply isn't feeling that way about him.

So, when he doesn't contact her, she doesn't come back.

The reality is that when a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy (enough to dump him), she usually won't chase after him just because he's not contacting her.

Instead, she will be able to move on easier because her ex isn't seducing her back into a relationship.

He could call her, re-attract her on the call and arrange a meet up, where he could then attract her and seduce her back into a relationship.

Yet, he is just waiting around for her to call her.

Days, weeks and then months can pass by.

Eventually, the woman realizes that her ex isn't going to try to get her back and she then starts hooking up with new men to make herself feel better.

So, if you're assuming that waiting for your ex girlfriend to call is the best way to get her back, you may end up regretting it later on.

If you don't act now, she might decide to start moving on and may end up finding a man who she feels more attracted to.

If that happens, then you've just made the process of getting her back more difficult than it needs to be.

Getting an ex girlfriend back is usually an easy process, as long as you go through the steps needed to make it happen.

If you don't take any steps and just wait around for an ex girlfriend to come back, she will usually just remain an ex to you.

Another negative assumption that may be holding you back is

2. Assuming that you will look desperate if you call

You will only look desperate if you behave in a desperate way (e.g. begging and pleading for another chance, crying to her, promising her that you will do absolutely anything she wants if she will change her mind).

You're not going to behave like that, so don't worry.

You are going to be confident, calm and in control as you talk to her on the phone, which is going to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

She is going to realize what a great catch of a man you really are because you are one of the rare men who can remain calm, confident and in control when under pressure.

Additionally, she is going to enjoy talking to you because you're going to flirt with her and use humor to get her smiling, laughing, feeling attracted and feeling good on the call.

As a result, her guard is going to come down and she is going to open up to meeting up with you in person.

Then, when you meet up with her in person, you're going to get her back.

Another negative assumption that may be holding you back is

3. Assuming that you will be handing over your power to her if you call

Real men go after what they want in life.

Lesser men hide behind the fear of being rejected, or looking like a failure if they try something and fail.

Yet, because lesser men rarely try to go after what they really want, they rarely succeed and end up settling for second, third, fourth or even last place in life.

Real men succeed because they go after what they want in life without fear.

You are a real man.

You are confident, brave, courageous and go after what you want in life.

As a result, you are not handing over any power to her by calling her and instead, you are giving yourself more power by taking control of the situation.

It doesn't matter if she dumped you and you then call her.

That is not weak.

It takes a lot of emotional strength to call and not be afraid at all.

On the other hand, hiding away from calling because you hope that she builds up the courage to call you is a weak move.

With women, weak moves are rarely rewarded.

Another negative assumption that might be holding you back is that

4. Forgetting that women almost always wait for men to make the first move

This principle applies to approaching a woman for the first time, exchanging contact details, calling to set up a date and so on.

Almost all women wait to be approached, wait for a guy to ask for their number, wait for a man to ask them out on a date and so on.

It's just the way it works.

So, don't waste another minute and risk losing her to another man who has the balls to make a move.

My Girlfriend Wants to Be a Part of My Life, But Not as My Girlfriend

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why:

1. She wants to keep you around while she moves on behind your back

[image: She wants to keep you around, while she moves on behind your back]

Sometimes, a womanâs ego canât stand the idea of her ex moving on before she does, especially if sheâs the one who dumped him.

In her mind, she might see him finding a replacement woman before she finds a new man as a sign that heâs actually more desirable than her and her confidence canât take that kind of knock.

So, rather than risk that happening, she might keep him interested by saying that she wants to be part of his life, but not as his girlfriend.

This will hopefully make him think things like, âIf I stick around long enough, she could realize her mistake and come back to me.â

Then, while heâs hanging around being a nice, useful, reliable friend to her (e.g. he makes himself available to her when she needs him, he helps her out when she needs a favor, runs errands for her, is her plus one to parties or weddings when she doesnât have a date), she secretly focuses on finding herself a new man.

When she finally does, she will then be able to fully drop her ex, because she no longer needs him hanging around her.

She will then likely say something along the lines of, âLook, I know I said that I want to be part of your life, but I donât think I can do that anymore. Iâve met someone else and it wouldnât be fair to him if I hung out with you like Iâve been doing up to now. I will always care for you, but maybe itâs time we went our separate ways now.â

She can then move on, knowing that she wasnât the one left behind.

Donât let that happen to you.

If you accept your girlfriendâs request to be part of your life but not as your girlfriend, make sure you use interactions with her to spark her feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be around you, showing her that youâve changed and improved in some of the ways that are important to her, by changing your approach to attraction with her).

The more respect and attraction you make her feel for you again, the less motivated she will feel to move on with another guy.

Instead, she will slowly change her mind about not wanting to be your girlfriend anymore and realize that losing you will be a big mistake.

So, donât play it safe.

If you do, donât be surprised if she eventually does move on with another guy.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend wants to be a part of your life but not as your girlfriend

isâ□|

2. She loves you and appreciates you as a person, but just doesnâ□□t feel sexually and romantically attracted to you at the moment

[image: She loves you and appreciates you as a person, but doesn't feel sexually attracted to you at the moment]

Sometimes, a womanâ□□s feelings for her guy will begin to change and she will go from being in love with him and feeling sexually attracted to him, to no longer wanting to be in a committed, romantic relationship with him.

For example: Some of the reasons why that might happen areâ□|

- He stops treating her like a sexy, desirable woman and instead treats her more like a buddy or a roommate.
- He doesnâ□□t have much of a purpose and direction in life so she no longer feels safe in the relationship with him.
- He doesnâ□□t lead in the relationship and instead expects her to call the shots and make all the decisions for the both of them, which she doesnâ□□t want.
- The sex has become boring or has even dried up altogether.
- Heâ□□s too nice to her (even when sheâ□□s behaving badly) so she feels like she has power over him.

So, to get out of the relationship without really having to get into long discussions with her guy about how she no longer feels attracted to him (i.e. in case he tries to talk her out of her decision), a woman might just say something along the lines of, *Â â□□I want to be part of your life, just not as your girlfriend.*â□□

This may leave a guy feeling confused and wondering things like, *â□□What does she mean by that? Does she just want some space? Will she change her mind and want to get back with me if we take a break?*â□□

Yet, hereâ□□s the thingâ□|

A woman will rarely get back with a boyfriend who she no longer has sexual feelings for.

Instead, she will usually stick to being friends (in some cases, text friends only), while she actively focuses on finding herself a replacement guy to move on with.

So, if you want to prevent that kind of thing from happening, you need to take control of the situation.

Hereâ□□s howâ□|

Firstly, accept her decision to break up and tell her you can just be friends.

However, donâ□□t act like a neutral friend who isnâ□□t sexually and romantically interested in her anymore.

Instead, use a new approach with her from now on, over the phone and especially in person, to re-spark her feelings for you.

You need to make her smile, laugh and feel good to be around you, so that when youâ□□re apart, she canâ□□t stop thinking about you and wanting you back.

That is what works on women.

The more you make her feel sexually attracted and aroused by your new approach to conversations and interactions, the more she will want to be your girlfriend again.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend wants to be a part of your life but not as your girlfriend isâ€¦

3. She is afraid that if she opened up to be your girlfriend, the relationship would be the same as before

[image: She is afraid that if she opened up to be your girlfriend, the relationship would be the same as before]

Sometimes, a woman might still care for her guy, but she may also feel that she just can't live with certain aspects of his thinking and behavior.

For example: Some of the things that can cause a woman to feel that being in a relationship with a guy is impossible for her, even though she does still care for him areâ€¦

- He's too submissive around her so she feels like she has power over him.
- He's clingy and needy.
- He takes her for granted.
- He's not affectionate enough.
- He doesn't make her feel appreciated.
- He has no focus or direction in life and is just drifting along. In her eyes, he is being irresponsible.
- He doesn't make her feel like a desirable, sexy woman and instead, makes her feel like more a good friend.
- He doesn't put much or any effort into the relationship anymore.
- He is emotionally closed off from her.
- He expects way too much of her, without giving much in return.

So, if a woman breaks up with her guy because of some of these reasons, she's naturally going to be afraid of the same thing happening again if she gives him another chance.

If he then tries to get her back, she might say something like, â€œSorry. I really do want to be part of your life, but just not as your girlfriend.â€

Essentially, what she's not saying is, â€œYour approach to the relationship no longer makes me feel the way I want to feel. I do care for you, but I can't risk getting back with you and finding that nothing has really changed. I'd probably be better off trying to get over you and finding myself another guy who will give me the attraction experience I really want, rather than hoping you will change.â€

So, if you want to convince your ex girlfriend to give you another chance, you need to change your approach to one that will convince her that things will be different this time around.

How can you do that?

Firstly, by taking the pressure off her to commit to a relationship again.

Then, just focus on making her have feelings for you again.

Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€¦!

Making interactions between you and her fun and enjoyable, rather than tense and stressful.

Using humor to take away the awkwardness and make her feel relaxed and open, rather than being too serious or trying too hard to convince her youâ€¦ve changed and causing her to put up her guard even more.

Maintaining your confidence around her, even if sheâ€¦s insisting that she doesnâ€¦t want to be your girlfriend anymore, rather than becoming despondent and giving up at the first sign of resistance from her.

Believing in yourself and in your value to her, rather than feeling like youâ€¦re no longer good enough for her.

Flirting with her and create some sexual tension between you, rather acting neutral or like just a friend.

Showing her via your attitude, actions, behavior and conversation style that youâ€¦re now a new and improved man that she can truly look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, rather than continuing to make the same old attraction mistakes as before.

When she can see for herself that you really are different now, she naturally lowers her guard and opens herself up to the idea of trusting you again.

She then easily and naturally begins to change her mind about not wanting to be your girlfriend anymore, because she can see that things really are different now.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend wants to be a part of your life but not as your girlfriend isâ€¦!

4. She currently believes that it will be easy for her to find another guy who will be better for her

[image: She currently believes that it will be easy for her to find another guy who will be better for her]

Sometimes, a woman feels pretty confident in herself and in her attractiveness to men.

That is why, after a break up, she doesnâ€¦t feel too worried that sheâ€¦s going to struggle to find herself a replacement guy almost immediately to move on with.

Additionally, because she no longer has strong feelings of respect, attraction and love for her ex, she doesnâ€¦t want him holding her back from moving on, by constantly trying to convince her to give him another chance.

So, to avoid that, she says something along the lines of, *â€¦I want to be part of your life, but not as your girlfriend.*â€¦

In that way, she doesnâ€¦t completely cut him off, in case she does end up struggling to find a new man, then she has him as a backup.

At the same time, she has the freedom to move on, meet, hook up with and date new guys, without ever having to worry that her ex still thinks thereâ€¦s a chance of getting her back.

Of course, if things donâ€¦t work out as she wants them to (i.e. she doesnâ€¦t find herself a new man right away), she can always go back to her ex, who is likely waiting in the wings anyway.

Then, if another guy comes along and sparks her sexual and romantic feelings for him, she will dump him again and quickly move on.

So, don't let that happen to you.

Don't let your ex use you as a backup plan while she moves on without you.

So, go ahead and accept her offer to be "friends" from now on rather than a couple.

Then, use every interaction you have with her to reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

The more drawn to you she feels, the less she will feel motivated to replace you with another man.

Suddenly, she will start to feel as though she already has the man she wants and that it would be a mistake to let you go.

You may then notice that she begins talking about being part of your life as more than just a platonic friend.

It's then up to you if you want to fully re-spark her feelings for you and get her back, or stick to what she said she wants (i.e. for her not to be your girlfriend anymore).

The choice is yours.

Another possible reason why your girlfriend wants to be a part of your life but not as your girlfriend is

5. She wants to let you down lightly, to avoid you getting angry or making the break up more dramatic than it needs to be

[image: She wants to let you down lightly to avoid you getting angry]

Even if a guy is a really good man who would never do anything to hurt his ex, a woman has a natural instinct to protect herself from a potentially tense or even explosive situation when breaking up with a guy.

Essentially, she doesn't want him losing control of his emotions and trying to stop her from leaving him (e.g. by getting angry and threatening to hurt her, breaking down and begging, pleading and crying as a way of making her change her mind, refusing to let her go unless she promises to stay with him).

So, rather than saying, "Look, it's over. I'm leaving and I want you to accept that and leave me alone. I don't want you anymore," she instead lets him down easy by saying something like, "I want to be part of your life, but not as your girlfriend, okay?"

Basically, she's likely hoping that by saying that to him, it will lessen the chance of him causing a scene and making things uncomfortable, or even scary for her.

Additionally, saying that to him might give him a bit of hope that she's at least sticking around and that he might be able to get her back.

This belief can cause him to back off for a little while, giving her the time she needs to find a replacement guy and move on.

Then, by the time her ex realizes that she was just looking for the easy way out of the relationship, she will have moved on and has possibly even fallen in love with a new man.

Here's the thing though

You can still turn the situation around if you want to.

Start by accepting her offer to be a part of your life and then use every interaction you have with her (especially over the phone and in person) to reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

The more you do that, the more she will want to be your girl again.

5 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Want her to Be Your Girlfriend Again

You can change how she feels if you want to.

However, it can't be about begging, pleading or offering her things that she doesn't want.

Instead, it needs to be about making her have strong feelings of respect, attraction and love for you again.

That's why, your approach to attraction from this point onwards is very important.

It will either be turning her on and making her want you back, or pushing her away even more.

So, make sure you're not turning her off by making the following mistakes:

1. Accepting her terms of just being friends and then acting like just a friend

Sometimes a guy will hand all of his power over to his ex woman by allowing her to call the shots (e.g. he accepts her decision to only stay friends and doesn't do anything to reactivate her feelings for him and get her back).

Essentially, he's being a good little boy who follows her orders in the hope that she will eventually change her mind and give him another chance.

Yet, that's not how it works.

If you just accept your ex's decision to be friends and then act like just a friend, not only are you handing your power over to her, you're also losing more of her respect in the process (i.e. because a woman struggles to respect a man she feels more emotionally dominant to).

Of course, if she can't respect you, she won't be able to feel sexually attracted to you and without those two all-important feelings, the chances of her wanting to be your girlfriend again simply fade away.

So, if you want to get her back, make sure that you maintain your position of power as the man, rather than thinking she will be impressed if you follow her orders (i.e. accept a friendship with her without making any effort to get her back).

In other words, be her friend if you want to, just make sure you're not pretending to be an innocent friend who isn't interested in her in a sexual or romantic way.

If you act like just a friend, you will end up in the friend zone.

So, make the feelings sexual, initiate a kiss and then enjoy the great times ahead with her.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Pretending that you just want to be part of her life as a friend, when you really want to be in a sexual, romantic relationship again

When a woman says she wants to be part of a guy's life but not as his girlfriend, he might begin thinking things like, "Well, at least she's not cutting me out completely. Hopefully, if I stick around and act like a good guy and I don't push her for a relationship, she will relax around me. Then over time, when she notices that I'm always there for her and I do whatever she asks, she will realize that I really love her and that no other guy is as good to her as I am and she will then change her mind and want to be my girl again."

He will then use interactions with her as a way of convincing her that he's only interested in being her neutral friend (e.g. he talks in a nice, polite way to her, he doesn't flirt to build up sexual tension, he only uses polite humor, rather than using ballsy humor to make her feel attracted), even though what he really wants is to be her boyfriend.

Naturally, this has the opposite effect to the one he's hoping for.

Essentially, because he's pretending that he's not interested in her in a sexual and romantic way, she remains closed off because there's no sexual spark between them.

At the same time, she will likely be opening up to another guy who is actively sparking her feelings for him.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, you can't sit around pretending that all you want is to be her nice, sweet, neutral friend.

Be her friend if you want to, but also make sure you use every interaction you have with her to make her experience strong, sexual feelings for you.

The more you do that, the more she will start wanting to be a part of your life as your girlfriend again.

On the other hand, continue pretending you only want to be her friend and chances are high, that's the only thing you'll be to her from now on.

Another mistake to avoid making is!

3. Letting her see that you don't have any other options with women, in the hope that she is impressed by how loyal you are Sometimes, a guy will deliberately avoid dating, or even just hanging out with other women after a break up, because he doesn't want his ex girlfriend to think that he's over her, when what he really wants is to get her back.

The thinking behind this approach is that by showing her how loyal he's being to her, even though they've broken up, she will feel flattered by his devotion and she will then change her mind and give him another chance.

Yet, here's the thing!

Avoiding other women can actually turn a woman off a guy, rather than make her want to be his girl again. Why?

Essentially because, almost all women (even if they won't admit it to your face) want to be with the type of man that other women feel attracted to and want.

Women love the thrill of the chase and competing with other women to win a man's affection is part of that chase.

So, if your ex girlfriend gets the sense that sheâs the best you can do and that no other women are interested in you, she is going to be quite happy to stick to just being your friend.

This is why, itâs important that you make your ex feel as though sheâs going to lose you if she doesnât open back up to being your girl again pretty quickly.

Sheâs going to let a man who is a real ‘catch’ get away (i.e. you) and sheâs likely going to regret it later on.

Of course that doesnât mean you have to go out and hook up with or date other women to make her feel that way.

You also shouldnât pretend youâre dating other women when youâre not.

Instead, you need to show her via your actions, behavior and attitude that youâre now the type of guy that other women want.

She will then naturally start to feel worried that she made a mistake by breaking up with you.

Then getting her back becomes easy, because she wants it too.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ|

4. Remaining a part of her life, but only via texts, social media messages or emails

Thereâs nothing wrong with staying in contact with your ex via text, social media and email, but that cannot be your main form of communication with her. Why?

Firstly, itâs a lot harder to make a woman feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction when she canât hear the tonality of your voice or see your body language.

Secondly, she might be texting and messaging back and forth with you, while all the while opening herself up to being seduced by guys who she gets to see and interact with personally every day.

Think about it this wayâ|

If you have a choice between being with a photo of a hot woman or an actual, real life hot woman, which one would you pick?

Itâs pretty obvious that youâd most likely pick the real life woman over the photo any day.

In the same way, if a woman has a choice between a bunch of words written by a guy on a screen and real guy who is in front of her and is making her laugh, smile and feel good to be around him, sheâs almost certainly going to go for the real guy.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend to become your girlfriend again, you need to be the real guy who is making her feel attracted over the phone and in person.

Donât hide behind texts, social media or emails.

If you do, donât get surprised if she eventually tells you sheâs in a new relationship.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ|

5. Not realizing that you can change her mind very quickly by attracting her in new ways

Right now, your girlfriend only wants to be a part of your life, but not as your girlfriend, because sheâs likely not feeling sexually and romantically attracted to you anymore.

However, if you change your approach and begin sparking her feelings for you in new and exciting ways (e.g. you make her feel like a desirable woman around you rather than a neutral friend, rather than being Mt. Nice Guy with her all the time youâre now a bit more of a challenge so she feels as though she needs to work hard to impress you), sheâs almost certainly going to change her mind.

Sheâs going to feel attracted, sheâs going to feel respectful and sheâs going to want to explore her new feelings for you, rather than let you go and potentially regret it later on.

So, donât waste another minute pretending that youâre okay with being just a friend to her.

Make her feel attracted to you in new and interesting ways, so she feels compelled to at least hook up with you sexually to see how she feels after that.

Then, once she experiences the new you for herself, there will be no turning back for her.

She will want to be your girl again because it feels so good.

My Girlfriend Said That I'm Too Good For Her and Deserve Better, So She Broke Up With Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Many women use that as an excuse to break up with a good guy who hasn't really done anything wrong in the relationship.

She can't really complain about him, except for one, little thing.

A lack of attraction.

On the surface, he seems like a great catch and she feels like she should be happy with him, but she's not.

This is because the lack of attraction causes a relationship dynamic where there isn't much of a spark.

Of course, he feels the spark and he is definitely attracted to her, but it's not mutual.

In most cases, it's because he's too nice to her, too giving or predictable.

For her to be happy with him, he needs to be a bit more ballsy, challenging and masculine at times, so she can feel attracted to him in the ways that matter most to her (I'll explain those ways in this article).

So, if your girlfriend has said that you're too good for her and deserve better, you have a perfect opportunity to re-attract her and make her want you back more than ever.

Here are 5 ways you can do it...

1. Use her comments as a way to attract her back with humor

[image: Use her comments as a way to attract her back with humor]

Humor always makes women feel attracted to a man, as long as he is being confident and masculine when using it.

It's not about being overly silly, constantly cracking jokes with her or being her personal comedian.

Instead, it's simply about being confident, masculine and a bit ballsy and as a result, making her feel girly in comparison to you and therefore, attracted to you.

So, the next time your girlfriend says something along the lines of, "Look, you're too good for me and you deserve better. I can't be the woman you want or deserve. So, stop making this harder for me than it already is. You need to just accept the break up and let me go. You deserve a better woman than me" you need to shock her (in a good way) and diffuse the situation by using confident, ballsy humor (while still being a good guy, of course).

Remember: She will probably be expecting you to get upset and respond with something along the lines of, "No, please don't say that. You are perfect for me. I don't want any other woman. I only want you! You are more than good enough for me. Please, don't do this. Just give us another chance."

Don't say something like that though.

Instead, when she says that she's not good enough for you, respond by saying something like, â€œYes, you're right. I am way too good for you, aren't I? I always thought that,â€ and have a laugh with her about that.

Note: Don't text that line to her.

Why?

When a woman can't see your body language and facial expressions (e.g. see that you are smiling, you look calm and relaxed) or hear the tonality of your voice (e.g. you sound confident, she can hear you laughing, she can tell you're only joking), then can easily take what you're saying the wrong way.

Even if you do add some smiley face emojis, she might still misinterpret your joke, especially if she feels really insecure about herself and her value to you.

Then, rather than have the desired effect (i.e. get her to relax and start feeling drawn to you again in a good way), she may end up closing herself off even more, which will make it difficult for you to re-attract her and get her back.

This is why you need to say it to her on a phone call (audio or video), in a voice text (in a chat app for example), or in person, rather than via text.

When you say it on a call, in a voice text or in person, she can sense that you're only joking and as a result, she can then feel attracted to your confidence and ability to make her laugh when in a pressured situation.

As a result, she can then start thinking things like, â€œHmmâ€¦ I thought he'd get upset and tell me that what I was saying isn't true, or tell me how amazing I am. Instead, he has the balls to joke around with me like that. I like it. Yet, now I feel so confused. This other side to him is attractive to me. I want to see if it's real. Could he really break out of his Mr. Nice Guy mode and be a bit more ballsy with me at times? Maybe breaking up with him was a mistake. Maybe I should just give him another chance.â€

Another thing you can do to get your girlfriend back isâ€¦

2. Accept the break up, wish her the best, but get her to agree to remain â€œjust friendsâ€

[image: Accept the break up, wish her the best and agree to be just friends]

Remaining â€œjust friendsâ€ means that you can keep the lines of communication open and then use that to re-attract her.

It also makes a woman feel like she is losing your romantic interest, which can then cause her to want to show you interest to get you showing romantic interest again.

In the process of doing that, it can cause her to really want to be with you again, or at least hook up with you to see how she feels afterwards.

So, don't worry about accepting the break up, wishing her all the best and then getting her to agree to be â€œjust friendsâ€ from now on.

It works.

On the other hand, if you try to debate her about her belief that she is too good for you, then she will know that you simply don't understand what she really means (i.e. you're too nice to her. She needs you to have more balls. That's why she is really breaking up with you).

As a result, she will end up saying something like, "Please just accept that it's over. You need to take care of yourself and stop worrying about me. You will find yourself a better woman than me. Good bye. I wish you all the best."

So, to avoid going down the path where she pushes you away, be smart about this and accept her decision.

For example: Say something along the lines of, "Hey, if that's how you feel, then I accept it. We are broken up and will never get back together. That's okay. All I would ask is that we are mature enough to at least be friends."

She might accept that right away and then, you simply keep the lines of communication open and use it to re-attract her and make her want you back.

However, if she says something like, "I'm not sure that's a good idea. I think it's better if we don't talk to each other anymore" or, "I don't know. I don't think I can be just friends with you. It would be too difficult for me," don't just accept it and walk away defeated and rejected.

Instead, just maintain your confidence and say in a relaxed, light-hearted way, "Hey, you don't need to be so serious about it. We can be friends. It's not difficult to do that. It's simply being able to say hello to each other as a friend from time to time. Our relationship is over and I accept that. I'm sure you accept it too. So, now we can do the mature thing and just be friends."

At that point, she will most likely agree (e.g. because she doesn't want to come across as being too stubborn or seem like the immature one, or because she really does still have feelings for you and doesn't want to completely cut you out of her life).

Whatever the case, you can then use the friendship to attract her in new ways that she's never experienced with you before.

For example: If a guy has been dumped by his girlfriend, who used the old excuse of, "You're too good for me. You deserve better" then he needs to:

Realizing that she isn't breaking up with him because he's too good for her. She's breaking up with him because he's probably too nice, too generous (e.g. gifts, financial assistance, paying for everything) and has allowed her to control him in the relationship. She likes him, but she just doesn't want that type of relationship dynamic with a man.

Being more of a challenge to her, so she feels the need to impress him, rather than being so nice and accommodating with her all the time.

Having the balls to stand up to her by being a bit more assertive at times, while still being a good man to her.

- Laughing at her (in a loving way) when she tests his confidence and masculinity by pretending to be moody, or take what he is saying the wrong way. He still treats her well and is good to her, but he stops taking her fake drama so seriously. This makes her feel the kind of respect and attraction that she is truly seeking from a relationship experience, but will rarely, if ever admit to a man; especially a man that she is dumping with the reason of, "You're too good for me" when she really means, "You don't have enough balls for a woman like me."

Youâre too soft. You take what I say too seriously. You are too accommodating to me. I need a man who doesnât put up with my BS, but is still a good man to me.

- Not trying to discuss his way back into a relationship with her (e.g. by giving her a list of reasons why she is good enough for him). Instead, he needs to focus on making her feel attracted to him in the ways that have actually been missing (e.g. making her feel the desire to impress him and do good things for him, rather than him being the one who is putting in most of, or all of the work in the relationship).
- Not trying to be her counsellor in life and help her heal from the baggage she is carrying from previous relationships, or her childhood. When a woman doesnât know how to break up with a good guy, she will often use the excuse of saying that she has issues and as a result, doesnât deserve a great guy like him. She will say that she needs time to sort herself out. Yet, the real reason she is breaking up with him is that she just doesnât feel enough attraction based on his nice guy, or âsave the messed up girlâ approach to the relationship. She doesnât need to be rescued. She needs to feel the kind of attraction she is searching for in a relationship. That can only happen with a guy who isnât trying to save her, or who doesnât jump through all of her hoops to hopefully impress her.

Your girlfriend isnât going to tell you the kind of things that Iâve just outlined above.

Additionally, what you probably donât realize is that your girlfriend has dumped previous boyfriend(s) for the same reasons.

She doesnât need to be saved or rescued by a guy.

Instead, she wants to be with a good man, who makes her feel the desire to impress him, be good to him, to do good things for him and maintain his interest.

If you can give her that relationship dynamic, she is yours.

If you canât, then you will continue to get excuses from her as to why she doesnât want to give you another chance (e.g. âSorry, I canât be the woman you want. You deserve someone better than meâ and so on).

Itâs just her way of trying to be nice and not hurt your feelings by telling you the truth (e.g. âSorry, I donât want to get back with you because you still donât understand how to make me feel attracted. Youâre too nice, you give me way too much, you allow me to walk all over you and thatâs not what I want to experience in a relationship with a manâ).

So, rather than trying to convince her that she is good enough for you, just get her to agree to just be âfriendsâ for now and use that as a way to remain in contact with her to re-attract her.

To re-attract her and make her want you back, focus on attracting her in the ways that she really wants, but will probably never tell you about.

Another thing you can do to get your girlfriend back isâ

3. Let her see you hanging out with women via your social media profiles

[image: Let her see you hanging out with woman via your social media profiles]

Even though women rarely admit it, they are so much more attracted to men who have other women around them, compared to men who are just on their own.

I know this from personal experience in my life, from coaching guys and helping them get ex girlfriends back and from scientific studies done on the topic.

For example: A study in the Journal of Experimental Social Psychology, found that 90% of women found a guy attractive if they were told that he was already in a relationship with a woman, compared to 59% being interested if they were told he was single.

There is also a large body of evidence in mating psychology that suggests women engage in what is known as mate choice copying.

This is where women feel more attracted to men who other women are attracted to, or who other women are with.

One of the reasons a woman's attraction works that way, is that the majority of what makes a woman feel attracted to a man is based on his personality traits and behavior and how that relates to how others will respect him and what he will be able to achieve in life.

On the other hand, a man can decide to want to have sex with a woman instantly based on how she looks and can then fall in love with her based on her looks.

If she also has a nice, friendly personality, then great, but he would still want to at least have sex with her at least once.

Yet, for women, they see men and think, What kind of guy is he? Is he confident around others? Do others respect him? and so on.

In most cases, women need to find out what kind of guy he is, before they can truly decide if they would have sex with him.

This comes from the fact that, despite women participating in the workforce and being protected by police and the court system into today's civilized society, women still feel like they need to rely on a man for protection and to provide for them if they were to get pregnant.

One of the fastest ways for a woman to find out if a man has what other women are really looking for, is to check whether or not other women like him and want to be with him, or he already has an attractive woman as a girlfriend or wife.

If other women like him or if he has an attractive girlfriend or wife, then she doesn't need to waste time trying to figure out whether or not he is attractive.

Other women have already confirmed it for her.

This is why, you should never, ever be afraid to let your girlfriend see you enjoying life without her, even if that includes having women in some of the photos that you post to social media.

If women are in some of your photos, make sure that you look confident and that the women seem very happy to be in the photo with you.

If they look distant, or if the photo looks staged (e.g. you ask a couple of random women to take a photo with you and they don't seem to like you, or want to be close to you), your girlfriend will pick up on that and it will turn her off.

Yet, if you post up photos and some of them include you around other women who are clearly enjoying spending time with you and really want to be close to you, it will absolutely, without a doubt, make your girlfriend feel more attracted to you.

Additionally, letting your ex see you around other women also serves another very important purpose.

That being, it shows her that you're not lonely and sitting around at home feeling sad and depressed because she has broken up with you.

Instead, you are confident, you believe in yourself and are moving forward in life without her.

That is attractive to her.

Of course, she probably won't admit that and might even get annoyed and say something like, â Well, obviously you don't care about me anymore. Fine! I can't believe you've moved on already. I guess I was right to break up with you. You clearly didn't love me as much as I loved you. You just screwed up your chances with me. Goodbye!

Yet, here's the thing!

Getting annoyed is a woman's way of hiding her deeper feelings (e.g. she feels jealous and is worried that you've already replaced her, she's angry that she no longer has control or as much power over you as she once thought she did).

She also doesn't want to admit that seeing you with other women makes her feel attracted (i.e. because it proves to her that you're the kind of man other women feel attracted to in other words, a catch).

She doesn't want you to know that (i.e. because it will mean that her defenses are down and she's more vulnerable to being seduced back into a relationship with you), so she hides behind anger and hurt feelings.

Additionally, a woman will also get annoyed or pretend to be angry to see if your photos were fake.

In other words, can she act so angry that you then say, â Please, I only want to be with you. I didn't even like those women and as a result, she can then relax and know that she still has the same power over you as she always had?

If so, then the photos instantly lose their most of their effect.

So, if she reacts badly (most women don't BTW. I'm just preparing you for the worst, so you don't make a mistake), don't get sucked into her fake drama and start defending yourself.

Remain calm, confident and in control and just know that she is feeling attracted to you, even if she doesn't want to be.

Based on the attraction that she is feeling for you, it will drive her mad thinking about you potentially sleeping with another woman.

She will literally lose sleep over it and before you know it, you will be getting texts or calls from her. You can then use that to get her to meet up with you in person and then hook up with her sexually to get the relationship back together.

Of course, not all women react badly to seeing photos of their ex looking confident, happy, included and loved.

Most women simply react by texting or calling their ex and hoping that he has the balls to make a move by arranging a catch up in person, so she can then get him back, or at least hook up with him again to see how she feels afterwards.

So, if you want to spark your ex girlfriend's feelings again, don't be afraid to make her jealous via social media.

Remember the science.

It works.

I know it from my personal experience with women (I lived a player lifestyle for over 10 years, having multiple girlfriends at once and then settled down with my perfect girl and am now married), from helping guys from all over the world to get women back and from the science that I have studied on the topic.

You might be worried about doing it, but please don't be.

If you are worried about hurting her feelings, then you're just going to be continuing on with the Mr. Nice Guy approach that got you dumped in the first place.

She wants to feel the pain of potentially losing you.

So, you need to have the courage to make her feel that pain and then prepare for any fake anger she might display to test your newfound confidence and ability to attract her.

Put it this way, if you see her get angry, then it means she cares, so don't ever worry.

Just make her feel the pain of potentially losing you and then make her feel positive emotions (i.e. a renewed sense of respect, attraction and desire for you) when you talk to her.

If you do that, she simply won't be able to stop herself from missing you and wanting to see you.

You will be on her mind all the time.

Another thing you can do to get your girlfriend back isâ

4. Get her to catch up with you as a friend, re-attract her sexually and then walk away without trying to get her back

[image: Catch up as friends, re-attract her and then walk away without trying to get her back]

This is very powerful, especially with women who have used the old, âYou're too good for me excuse for a break up, when they really mean, âI don't feel enough attraction for you because you're not enough of a challenge for me.

So, when you have interacted with her on a phone call (audio or video) and she is feeling attracted to the new you, suggest catching up as friends to say hi.

Let her know that you accept the break up and know that you and her aren't ever going to get back together, but that it would be good to catch up and say hi as friends, even if it's the last time you ever see each other.

You can suggest it as a mature goodbye as friends, to leave things in a good note as you both move on with your life.

She might immediately say âYes, to that, in which case you just go ahead and make arrangements.

However, if she tries to wriggle out of catching up, just tell her that it's totally fine to catch up and say hi as friends and it's the mature thing to do, given the circumstances (i.e. you do still like each other, but you are going to break up and never get back together. So, the least you could both do is catch up and say hi once last time before you move on with your life).

The important thing is to not just give up if she is initially being a bit resistant about catching up.

Of course, that doesn't mean to whine, sulk or beg.

Instead, just maintain your confidence, maintain your cool and be a bit assertive as you suggest just catching up to say hi, or to say goodbye and part as friends as you both then move on with your life.

Make sure to add in the â€œmatureâ€ word too.

After more than a decade of testing while helping men get women back, Iâ€™ve found that ex women respond well to the â€œmatureâ€ word.

The woman doesnâ€™t want to seem like the immature one of the two and will then agree to catch up.

Itâ€™s those kind of subtle secrets to getting an ex woman back that make all the difference.

Sometimes, a guy is so close to getting his ex girlfriend back, but he then says or does the wrong thing, which causes her to say, â€œNoâ€ or to keep her guard up.

So, make sure that you are aware of what you need to do to ensure that this break up between you and her is reversed.

One of the ways you can reverse the break up with her is to make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you (in person) and then not try to get her back.

Suddenly, she is feeling so attracted and open to you again, but youâ€™re not trying to get the relationship back together.

She always wanted to feel the desire to impress you more, make you want her more and now she is feeling it.

She knows that she wants you, she wants to impress you, but you now seem like you have really accepted the break up.

This then causes most women like that to say something like, â€œIâ€™ve decided that I want to give us another chanceâ€ or at the very least, to keep in contact with the man to hopefully show him that she is still interested.

So, if she says that she wants to give you and her another chance, you can then accept that and get back into a relationship with her.

If she doesnâ€™t say something directly and just keeps texting you after catching up with you, then you can take that as a sign that she is still interested.

Then, after a couple of days of texting, she will either make it obvious that she wants to see you again, or wants you back.

Yet, if she doesnâ€™t, just call her, make her laugh and feel attracted on the phone and arrange another catch up.

Then, when you catch up, continue making her feel attracted and she will naturally want to get back together.

Before you know it, you will be hugging, kissing, having sex again and will almost certainly get back into a relationship after that.

Of course, she might play hard to get after that and use her old tricks on you by saying, â€œIâ€™m still not sure.â€

If thatâ€™s the case, donâ€™t be afraid to make her feel attracted with some ballsy or challenging humor.

For example: You might react by saying, â€œYeah, me too. Maybe I am too good for youâ€ and have a laugh with her about that, rather than believing her fake drama and taking it all so seriously.

Only a man who can do that will truly win her heart.

She doesn't want a guy who sits when she says sit, or rolls over when she says roll over, or essentially does whatever she says all the time.

She wants a guy who knows how to handle her fake drama and tests of his confidence.

If you can do that, she is yours.

Why?

She knows how difficult it is to find a man like that.

Another thing you can do to get your girlfriend back is

5. Stop doing the things that turned her off and made her feel like she could take you for granted

[image: Stop doing the things that turned her off and made her feel like she could take you for granted]

In most cases, a guy will be aware of some of the thing he did to turn his ex girlfriend off, but he won't know everything.

Her true reasons for breaking up with him will remain a mystery to him, often for the rest of his life.

He may think, She said I was too good for her and that I deserved better. Don't women want an amazing guy? If I was so perfect for her and was an amazing guy, then how could she break up with me? Why didn't she hold on to me instead of push me away? Why do women break up with good men? Do they want bad men? I don't get it.

Some guys may eventually figure it out the truth (i.e. it wasn't that he was too good for her. Instead, she simply didn't like the relationship dynamic of him trying to buy her love or try hard to win her over all the time. She had too much power and he was too giving. She wanted a man who is more of a challenge), but many don't.

In fact, I hear from new men all the time and sometimes a guy is making that mistake when he is 18 years old with his first girlfriend, 30 years old after having a few failed relationships, or when he is 50+, has experienced 2 failed marriages and is still making the same old mistakes with women.

Some men simply never learn that women want to feel like they have to impress you and win you over, while also seeing that you are a good man to them.

Essentially, women want a good man who is a challenge, not a nice man who will do everything for her regardless of how she treats him.

How about you though?

What are some of things that you think your girlfriend was turned off by, based on your approach to her and the relationship?

If you're unsure, here are some questions for you:

- Were you always nice and sweet to your girlfriend, regardless of how badly she was behaving (e.g. sulking, throwing tantrums, being in a bad mood all the time) or how horribly she treated you?
- Did you often downplay your strengths and achievements around her to make her feel better about herself (e.g. if she was insecure about your intelligence vs. hers, you often acted goofy or pretended not to know as much as you do to hopefully make her happy)?

- Were you always putting your needs in second place to hers, as a way of keeping her happy in the relationship?
- Did she mostly get her way in the relationship, even if you really didn't agree with her?
- Did she feel as though she could simply throw a tantrum, threaten you with a break up or act like she was losing interest and you would then panic, apologize over and over and try hard to impress her?
- Did you make her feel like you were always trying to fix her issues (i.e. the trauma she experienced from being with a bad ex boyfriend, or how she was treated as a child)? Do you now realize that a woman like her doesn't want to be saved by a nice guy? If she was attracted to bad guys in the past (because they didn't put up with her fake drama), she almost certainly won't settle down with a nice guy who saves her. If she does settle down with a nice guy, she will cheat on him or divorce him. What a woman like her wants is to be with a good man who doesn't take her fake drama and moods seriously. That isn't a bad man. It's a smart man who understands how to handle a woman like her. So, were you trying to fix her issues and save her from her past?

If you answered â€œYes,â€ to any of the above questions, you were turning your ex girlfriend off in ways that she will probably never tell you about.

Here's the thing:

Even though a woman may seem like she wants a guy who is always nice to her, agrees with everything she says, gives her whatever she wants and tries hard to always make her happy, the truth is, she doesn't actually want a guy like that.

Why?

When a man hands over his power to a woman in a sexual, romantic relationship (especially if he thinks it will make her happy, or because she has been threatening to break up with him), she simply won't be able to respect him anymore.

She will see him as a guy who can't even stand up to a woman and get his way with her.

It doesn't matter how successful the guy is in life, or if he is the manager of 100 people in an office.

When he comes home to her, or when they meet up, if he can't even keep her in line and make her feel the desire to impress him and be a good girl to him, then she just won't be able to respect him.

[image: You need to make her feel the need to impress you]

If a woman can't respect you, then she won't be able to feel sexually attracted to you and without those emotions in a relationship, she will look for any excuse (e.g. that you're too good for her and deserve better, she needs time to figure out what she wants, she isn't ready for a relationship because of her issues) to get out of the relationship.

So, if you want to get your girlfriend back, don't let her control your behavior by listening to her sob story about not being good enough for you.

Don't bend over backwards to convince her that it's not true by saying, â€œNo. You are good enough for me. You're better me. I am the one who is lucky to have you. Please, don't do this. I love you. You are perfect for me. I am so lucky to have youâ€ and so on.

If sheâs had previous boyfriends who were nice guys or who tried to save her from her past, then they will have reacted in the same way.

3 Mistakes to Avoid When Getting an Ex Girlfriend Back Who Said That Youâre Too Good For Her and Deserve Better

1. Trying to get her to change her mind by expressing your undying love for her in an email, or in a series of texts or messages

In some cases, a woman really does think that a guy is just too good for her (e.g. heâs too good looking, too wealthy, comes from a great family, lives in a rich neighborhood, hangs around intelligent, successful people and so on).

She just doesnât feel like she is good enough for him.

She looks at him as being so high status that she canât help but feel insecure and worry about him cheating on her and leaving her down the road.

If thatâs the case and he then keeps emailing, texting or messaging her to declare his undying love for her, it can end up making her wonder if maybe sheâs the one who is too good for him.

She may think, âWhy does he want to be with me so badly? Is it because he struggles to get himself a girlfriend? Do other women not like him? I know that he has been dumped by other women in the past. Maybe those women knew something about him that I didnât. Maybe he isnât such a great guy after all. If he was, then heâd have plenty of high quality women wanting to be with him and heâd choose one of them. Yet, Iâve never seen high quality women hitting on him. Maybe thatâs why he is so desperate to get me back. Maybe I am high quality and Iâm the best woman heâs ever gotten because other women donât want him. Maybe thatâs why he was trying to win me over so much.â

Remember what I said earlier in the article about the science of attraction?

Women are more attracted to men that other women want, or are actually in a relationship or marriage with.

On the same note, women are turned off by men who are desperate for women.

Women also feel less attracted to the exact same man, when they are told that he is single vs. when they are told that he is already in a relationship with a woman.

In other words, women arenât attracted to desperate, needy or unwanted men.

So pouring your heart out to your girlfriend and declaring your undying love isnât going to make her want you back.

Instead, it may end up causing her see you as desperate, which will turn her off even further.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ!

2. Never having the courage to attract her in any new ways, losing her and then potentially experiencing the kind of break up with another great woman months or years later

If you never make an attempt to change your approach to attraction with your ex girlfriend (e.g. by becoming more of a challenge, laughing at her in a loving way when she creates drama about not being good enough for you, making her feel the desire to impress you), she's probably not going to feel motivated enough to get back with you.

So, you will lose her.

Then, you might eventually find another great woman and get into a relationship with her.

Yet, you may end up making the same old mistakes as before (e.g. being too nice, always putting yourself in second place to please her, letting her take you for granted) and get dumped once again, or get cheated on or divorced.

I've heard from so many men over the years who've settled down with a woman they couldn't handle, only to then get cheated on and divorced by her, where he/she took half of everything he owned.

The man thought he had her when they got married because she seemed happy enough.

Yet, if a man doesn't know how to make a woman like that feel the desire to impress him and maintain his interest, she will never be happy with him.

It doesn't matter what he buys her, how many good things he does for her or how successful he is in his career.

She will cheat on him, dump him or divorce him because a woman like that simply cannot be happy with a guy who doesn't know how to put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way.

So, if you honestly want to get her back and have a happy, successful relationship, then you need to have the courage to try a new approach to attraction.

If you don't, then you may end up experiencing a pretty darn crappy life with women, where they take advantage of you, never appreciate you and dump you even though you're a good man.

Right now, you have the perfect opportunity to turn your life around and be respected, loved and appreciated by her.

Alternatively, you can continue on making her feel like she doesn't need to appreciate you because you will just keep blindly offering yourself and everything you can to her, never understanding the real reasons why she is feeling turned off.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Trying to convince her that she is good enough for you and shouldn't be putting herself down like that

After working on countless ex back cases over the years, I can tell you that she is almost certainly saying, "You're too good for me" as an excuse to break up with you due to not feeling attracted, or not enjoying the relationship dynamic (i.e. you're too giving, accommodating, she can easily control you with her tantrums or moods and she doesn't like that. She wants a guy with more balls and composure, not a guy who crumbles under feminine pressure).

So, it won't matter if you spend the next 6 months telling her why she is good enough for you.

She already knows that she is good enough for you.

What is missing is that feeling a woman gets when she is with a man who makes her want to impress him, maintain his interest and be a good woman for him.

If you can't give her that feeling, she will continue to move on without you.

If you can, then she will feel magnetically attracted to you and get back with you in a heartbeat.

Ex Girlfriend Texts Me Late at Night

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

4 possible reasons why she does that:

1. She wants to check and see if youâre still missing her, so she can sleep better at night

[image: She wants to check if you are still missing her, so she can sleep better at night]

After breaking up with a guy, a woman will sometimes worry that her ex will fully move on before she does.

Essentially, she doesnât want to end up feeling like the one who has been left behind, if she sees him happy with a new girl before she has met a new guy.

So, she will check her exâs social media pages for clues about whether or not he is dating other women yet.

She might also ask mutual friends about what heâs up to.

Additionally, in your case, she will text you late at night and assess how you respond.

She will look at how youâre texting her and if she can tell that you havenât moved on yet and are still interested in her, then she can rest easy, knowing that she still has more time to move on before you do.

That might sound a bit selfish on her part, but itâs just what happens.

What matters most is what youâre going to do about it.

When a guy is in your situation (i.e. his ex girl is still texting him), he has a perfect opportunity to flirt with her, re-attract and get her back.

Yet, so many guys mess up their opportunity to get their ex girlfriend back by just continuing to text her in a friendly and hoping that she eventually says something like, âI miss you. I want to see you.â

Unfortunately, the message a guy usually receives goes something like this, âDonât be mad okay? Iâve met someone else recently and weâve dating. I really like him. He doesnât want me texting with you anymore, so I need you to respect that. Iâm sure you will find someone too. So, I wish you all the best. Goodbye.â

Alternatively, his ex girlfriend simply gets bored of texting with him and eventually goes cold, or she blocks him as a way of trying to help herself move on without him.

So, if your ex girlfriend is texting you late at night at the moment, you need to use that opportunity to get the ex back process moving along (i.e. flirt with her via text, get to an audio or video phone call, get to a meet up, hug her, kiss her, have sex with her, get the relationship back together).

Donât just get stuck at the stage of texting.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend texts you late at night isâ|

2. She genuinely misses you and wants you back

[image: She genuinely misses you and wants you back]

Even if a woman regrets breaking up with her boyfriend, she usually won't directly say that to him.

Instead, she will either wait for him to get her back on his own, or if she notices that he's not doing it, she give him a nudge by opening the lines of communication with him (e.g. she texts him, likes his posts on social media).

So, if you ex girlfriend is texting you late at night, it might be her way of trying to let you know that she misses you and wants you back.

However, don't expect her to do more than that, because she probably won't.

It's like just when women go out to bars and clubs to meet men.

Women stand around waiting to be approached by men.

The same applies when a woman likes a guy and want to date him.

She almost always waits for the guy to ask her out on a date.

Generally speaking, it is the man's role to pursue in a confident, calm manner and get things moving along between himself and a woman.

So, your ex will probably just keep texting you for a while in the hope that you make a move (i.e. arrange a meet up in person, hook up with her, get the relationship back together).

If you just keep texting and don't arrange a meet up in person, she might take it as a sign that you're not interested in a sexual, romantic way anymore.

Then, you might find yourself searching for articles titled, Why did my ex girlfriend stop texting me?

You will probably find an article by me and I'll be telling you that you texted her for too long and should have made a move.

So, do it now.

Take control of the ex back process.

Be a man about it and get things moving along with her.

You can do it.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend texts you late at night is

3. She's confused about whether or not she wants you back

[image: She is confused about whether or not she wants you back]

Sometimes, a woman will be confused about the mixed feelings she has for her ex.

In some moments, she finds herself missing him and wondering if she made a mistake by breaking up the relationship.

In other moments, she will remember why she stopped feeling respect, attraction and love for him (e.g. he was too insecure, he couldn't handle arguments with her, he took her for granted and stopped caring about her, he was too nice to her and gave her too much power in the relationship) and feel happy about her decision to end the relationship.

Yet, because she is still feeling positive emotions about him and missing him, it is difficult for her to just let him go.

Something inside of her is saying, “Just give him another chance” and she is hoping that he can build on her feelings and make her really want to do that.

So, if your ex girlfriend has been texting you late at night, it might be more about her checking to see if there is still a strong enough spark between you, or if she should continue moving on.

Don't let this amazing opportunity go to waste.

Make sure that the next time she texts, you are fully ready to re-attract her in new and exciting ways, so she feels compelled to give you another chance.

You can even be the one who texts her first, rather than waiting.

Then, when you've flirted with her a little via text, get her on an audio or video phone call at a time you think will suite her (i.e. when she's home and relaxing vs. when she's at work/university, driving or likely to be busy with something else).

Then, begin reawakening her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you on the call.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by:

- Making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you again, rather than being too serious or neutral with her (i.e. like just a friend). If you are too serious or neutral, she will probably feel a bit flat after the call ends, thereby convincing her that you and her may not have enough of a spark anymore.
- Maintaining your confidence with her regardless of whether she sounds open and happy to be talking to you, or cold and aloof. If you can maintain your confidence no matter what, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you, which will draw her to you.
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension, rather than pretending you just want to talk as friends and that you're not really interested in getting back with her. If she senses that you only see her as a friend now, she may pretend to only see you as a friend, which can confuse you and make you lose confidence. Yet, when you have the balls to flirt with her and she senses your sexual and romantic interest, she will feel more confident and willing to flirt back with you and show some sexual and romantic interest too.
- Believing in yourself and in your value to her, rather than letting doubts about yourself come through in the tonality of your voice and the way you respond to her. Women aren't attracted to emotional weakness and insecurity. If you want to be successful with women, you have to believe in yourself no matter what.
- Being a good man, but also being confident and assertive while talking to her, so she doesn't feel more dominant than you during conversations. Women aren't sexually attracted to men who are afraid of them. You've got to let her sense that you are confident and in control by being assertive, while also being a good man to her. That is a big turn on for women.

The more ways you can reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings, the less confused she will feel and the more she will want to get back with you.

When she's feeling that attracted, you can easily get her to agree to meet up with you in person.

In person, you can build up her sexual and romantic feelings as you talk to her and then progress to giving her a hug, a kiss and then hooking up with her sexually.

When that happens, she will know for sure that youâ€¦re a man worth holding on to and then, getting back into a relationship will be something she really wants to do.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend texts you late at night isâ€¦|

4. When sheâ€¦s alone with her thoughts, you are always there in her mind

[image: When she is alone with her thoughts, you are always on her mind]

Some women secretly struggle to get over an ex boyfriend, while putting on a brave face to others and acting totally fine when interacting with him.

Yet, no matter how much a woman like that acts like she is okay, the feelings she has in the background always remain.

Essentially, because she still feels drawn to him, she regularly thinks about all the good times they shared together and the positive things she misses about him.

Yet, because they are broken up, theyâ€¦re no longer talking.

So, she texts him to experience more of the exciting, warm, positive feelings that come from interacting with him.

At that point, her ex can get her back quite easily.

Yet, so many guys unfortunately mess it up by just texting and texting and texting until she eventually gets bored, or until she loses interest based on how he is responding to her.

Donâ€¦t put yourself in that position.

If you want her back, seize the opportunity by moving things forward to an in person meet up, hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

For example: The next time your ex girlfriend texts you, rather than texting back and forth things like, *â€¦How are you? How was your day? What have you been up to? What are you doing this weekend?*â€¦ just transition to a phone call with her before she goes to sleep.

For example:

Her: So, how was your day?

You: Crazy.

Her: What happened?

You: Iâ€¦ll call you and tell you.

You: (Call her).

Then, when you have her on the line with you, use some humor to get her smiling and laughing right away.

For instance, she might ask, *â€¦So, tell meâ€¦|what happened?*â€¦

You might then say something like, *â€¦Well, okay, are you ready for this? I woke up this morning and my coffee machine was broken. Then, on the way to work, I stopped at that little cafÃ© round the corner from my house for a coffee, but apparently their coffee machine was broken as well. Then, when I got to work, the coffee machine there was also busted.*â€¦

She will most likely be laughing and wondering what the heck happened to all those coffee machines, or if youâre only joking.

You can then say, *âThenâI woke up. It was a nightmare!*â and have a laugh with her.

You can then continue by saying something like, âSo, I got out of bed, went straight to my coffee machine and I was like, ahhh, yesâcoffee. Everything is fineâ and have a laugh with her.

You can then jokingly ask her, *âAnyway, nightmares asideâhow was your day?*â

Then, have a little chat with her, have a laugh together and arrange to catch up in person.

In person, you can then fully reawaken her feelings for you and get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

Donât Let Her Late Night Texts Go to Waste. Get Her Back by Avoiding These 5 Mistakes

[image: Texting mistakes to avoid with ex girlfriend]

Your ex girlfriend is literally giving you a chance to re-attract her and get her back right now.

If you want her back, donât waste it by making one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Being her texting buddy, but never taking it to the next level

Sometimes a guy will wait for an obvious sign from his ex girlfriend that she wants him to call her.

If she doesnât seem to be mentioning wanting to talk on the phone, or meet in person, he might make the mistake of thinking that sheâs ânot readyâ for that.

So, rather than going through the ex back process with her (i.e. getting to a meet up, hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship), he ends up texting back and forth for days, weeks or even months.

Eventually, his ex girlfriend begins to think things like, *âWell I guess nothing is going to happen between us after all. I gave him an opening by texting him, but heâs not really taking things any further than that. Maybe heâs not interested in getting back together, or doesnât have the balls to meet up with me and get me back.*â

Rather than continuing to waste her time texting an ex who probably isnât interested, or doesnât have the balls to take action and get her back, a woman will then often stop responding and go silent.

If her ex keeps texting her and she sees nothing different, she might even block him so she can try to move on without him bothering her.

If you donât want that to happen between you and your ex girlfriend, just stop texting her and get her on a call.

On the call, you can then re-attract her and get her to meet up with you in person.

Why a phone call?

On a phone call, itâs just so much easier for her to experience the new you (e.g. via the tonality of your voice, the way you respond to what she says, your overall vibe, the way you approach the conversation, the way you say things, the confidence in your voice).

As she listens to you talk and notices that you are remaining confident no matter what she says and are able to her smile and laugh, she realizes that her feelings for you are still very real.

As a result, she allows her wall to come down and opens up to seeing you in person to explore her new feelings for you.

When you meet up in person, you can then show her that you really are a new man and more importantly, she really does feel more attracted to you than ever before.

When she feels that, she will naturally want to get back with you, or at least hook up with you sexually to see how she feels afterwards.

Yet, if you just become her texting buddy, she will almost certainly get bored of texting you, assume youâre not interested and start dating other men to make herself feel better.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

2. Always replying quickly because you worry that she will stop texting if you take your time

Quickly replying to your ex girlfriend every time she sends you a text late at night, is one of the fastest ways to give her an, âI donât have a life anymore and Iâm just sitting around waiting for you to text meâ vibe.

Obviously that isnât attractive to women.

Women are attracted to men who are confident, emotionally independent (i.e. not needy) and are able to enjoy life with or without their girlfriend around.

So, if you give your ex girlfriend the impression that youâre desperately waiting around for her texts to come in every day or night, then sheâs naturally going to lose attraction for you.

Then, the thing youâve been trying to avoid (i.e. she stops texting you) actually happens because she feels turned off by you.

This is why, no matter how badly you want to instantly or quickly respond to everything your ex texts you, just donât do it.

After all, if sheâs texting you late at night, youâre allowed to already be sleeping, out partying with your friends, talking to a friend on the phone, watching something on TV, or even busy entertaining someone (maybe another woman) at your place.

The point is, you have a life of your own and shouldnât be afraid to let your ex girlfriend imagine you being happy without her.

That doesnât mean you should ignore her for days and then brag about what you were doing in an attempt to make her jealous.

No.

That isnât cool.

Instead, if you are actually busy, then donât drop everything to reply to her right away.

Just take your time to reply when you are genuinely busy (e.g. in the shower, already dozing off, busy with a personal project, talking to a friend, playing a video game, watching TV, out partying with friends) and if you are available, reply quickly or fairly soon after she texts, as long as itâs not all the time.

In other words, even if you arenât busy and really are just sitting around at home waiting for her texts, then at least give her the impression that youâ€™re not sitting around at home waiting for her texts.

So, reply to some of her texts right away, but leave gaps of time (5, 10, 15, 30 minutes and even up to an hour) in some cases.

Donâ€™t overdo it though, or not reply in the middle of a conversation because that would be weird. Instead, for it to feel natural, donâ€™t immediately reply to some of the new texts she sends you when she starts a new conversation.

If she asks where you were, you can tell her what you were doing (e.g. â€œI was watching something on Netflixâ€) and if you want to make her feel attracted by using some confident humor and flirting you can add it, â€œSorry, it was more interesting that your texts :Pâ€) and have a laugh with her.

That is so much more attractive to a woman than a guy who always replies to everything right away, or quickly, because he is worried that she will lose interest in texting him.

Always remember: Women are attracted to emotionally independent men (i.e. not needy) and repelled by emotionally dependent men (i.e. needy).

Neediness wonâ€™t make you successful with women, or successful in getting your ex back, so donâ€™t let her sense that from you.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

3. Ignoring her texts to seem like you donâ€™t care, but she then assumes that youâ€™re not interested and she starts moving on

While responding to an ex instantly is a big turn off to a woman, not responding to her at all is just as bad.

The fact is, for most women, texting an ex is a big risk, because he might not be interested in her and she will then end up being rejected.

So, if your ex has made the effort to reach out to you, donâ€™t blow it by ignoring her because youâ€™re trying not to come across as needy.

If you want her back, ignoring her isnâ€™t going to achieve that for you.

Instead, she will likely feel that youâ€™re not interested in her anymore and she will then focus on quickly getting over you, usually by hooking up with another man or men, so that she can move on too.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

4. Trying to have long conversations with her via text, rather than calling her

[image: Trying to have long conversations with her via text]

Long, ongoing, in-depth conversations via text can be time consuming, frustrating and full of misunderstanding that then need to be explained away with more long, in-depth texts.

When it comes to texting an ex girlfriend, she will usually only have a certain level of patience and enthusiasm about texting with her ex boyfriend.

So, if you get caught up in long, ongoing discussions via text, it can eventually lead to your ex thinking, â€œHhhhâ€|this is so annoying. He just keeps texting. He doesnâ€™t understand what Iâ€™m trying to say. Hhhh.â€

Yet, if you shortcut the process and just call her, you can cut through all the exhausting effort it takes to explain yourselves via text.

Heck, if you are too afraid to get on a call, or if you really believe that she wonâ€™t answer your calls no matter what, then at least send her an audio message rather than trying to get everything across via text.

If you noticed, I also have videos on this page.

Why do you think that is?

Thereâ€™s only so much you can convey via text.

By adding some of my helpful ex back videos on the page, you can instantly get a sense of who I am and how sincere I am about helping you.

You can also see how confident I am, how experienced I am with helping men get women back and how much sense my advice makes.

If I only included articles, you wouldnâ€™t know all that about me and I would have to rely on trying to help you and hope that you read every word of the article.

Yet, I know that many people scan read articles online (i.e. quickly scan through, reading parts they want).

To truly help you, Iâ€™ve got to get your attention and get the advice across to you and thatâ€™s why I also include videos.

So, when it comes to your ex girlfriend, donâ€™t just stick to text.

Texts arenâ€™t the ultimate solution to everything when it comes to women.

At some point, you need to talk to her on a phone call and meet up with her in person.

Yet, if you try to do everything via text (including having long, in-depth, detailed and emotional conversations), then she will almost certainly close up and lose interest.

So, while itâ€™s totally fine to respond to your ex girlfriendâ€™s late night texts, just donâ€™t get stuck at that level of communication.

Based on all of my experience helping new men get women back, I can tell you that just sticking to text ensures she will only ever be your ex.

If you want her back, make a move.

Call her, arrange a catch up and get her back.

5. Reading too much into what she is texting, rather than just moving through the ex back process to get her back for real

If you spend a lot of time trying to figure out what your ex means by what she is texting, then youâ€™ll end up driving yourself crazy.

For example: One minute youâ€™re convinced that sheâ€™s hinting about getting back together and the next, youâ€™re feeling sad, rejected and disappointed because she seems to saying that she is happy without you.

Youâ€™ve got to understand that most women do not directly say that they are interested, even if they really are.

Your ex is most likely missing you right now and wants to get back with you.

So, don't spend your time looking over her texts for clues.

Instead, just call her on the phone, make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction and get her to a meet up with you in person.

Then, make her feel attracted to you in person and get her back.

My Ex Thought I Was Boring

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

5 possible reasons why she felt that way:

1. You weren't enough of a challenge for her

[image: You weren't enough of a challenge for her]

Women love it when they feel love and appreciated by you, but they also feel the need to love you, appreciate you and impress you.

You can make a woman feel that way by being a challenge to impress, while also treating her well.

When your girlfriend feels the need to impress you and maintain your interest, but she also feels loved, then it becomes a never-ending source of attraction between you and her.

She tries hard to look good for you, do nice things for you and make you love her more and you occasionally let her see that her efforts are working.

She then tries harder to get more and more of your positive reactions and in the process of doing that, it becomes one of the many reasons why she falls madly in love with you, is excited by the relationship and never wants to leave you.

Unfortunately, many guys simply aren't aware of how to build on a woman's feelings of respect, attraction and love over time in a relationship.

As a result, a guy's girlfriend will usually fall out of love with him and eventually dump him.

Things may have been good at the start, but she eventually gets bored of him and wants out of the relationship, even though he is still in love with her and wants the relationship to continue.

That horrible experience can happen to a guy repeatedly throughout life, without him truly ever figuring out where he is going wrong, or what he could do differently to avoid an eventual break up.

So, once again, he meets a new woman, really likes her and manages to get a relationship going, but she eventually loses interest and dumps him.

He looks on and sees other men who are able to maintain a happy, loving, passionate relationship with a woman, but he doesn't know how the man is able to maintain her respect, attraction and love like that over time.

Why doesn't he know?

In some cases, it can be because:

- He never had an effective male role model while growing up (e.g. his father didn't teach him about women, his parents weren't very happy in their relationship, so his father wasn't someone he could look up to regarding relationships, he was raised by a single mother who taught him to be a nice guy, his father was emotionally distant).
- He has unknowingly gotten a lot of his ideas about how to behave in a relationship with a woman via TV, movies or music videos, which are all based on a fantasy version of reality, rather than how life actually works.
- He has never taken the time to learn how to maintain a happy, in love relationship with a woman.

- The only people who have given him advice about relationships are those who are being politically correct (i.e. articles written by women or wimpy men, teachers from school or university).
- The only people who have given him advice about relationships are his friends, who also struggle to keep relationships together.

He doesn't think that there is anything to know about relationships that could help him.

As a result, he might grow up thinking that you just have to get lucky and there is no way to keep a relationship happy, in love and passionate for life.

Without ever really knowing where he has been going wrong, he might also mistakenly assume that he is already being a great boyfriend (fiancé or husband) to his woman.

Yet, just like he has experienced in the past, another girlfriend dumps him (e.g. because he was boring, the relationship didn't have enough of a spark, he took her presence in his life for granted).

In many cases, this can come down to him simply not being enough of a challenge for his girlfriend (i.e. she doesn't really feel much or any need to impress him, she rarely feels excited when she interacts with him).

He doesn't understand that just being a nice boyfriend and â€œgetting along with herâ€ is not the secret recipe for lifelong love, attraction and enjoyment in a relationship.

Why?

That approach to a relationship is boring and causes a couple to end up feeling more like friends, roommates or housemates.

That's not what a woman wants to feel in a romantic relationship.

So, if your ex thought you were boring, you can actually get her back quite easily by using a new and improved approach to attraction.

When you interact with your ex again and she suddenly feels new sparks of respect and attraction based on your new approach to her, she will naturally feel drawn to you.

She will feel as though you really have changed and aren't the boring guy she left behind, which will make her begin to imagine what it would be like to be with you again.

If she likes what she imagines, that is when feelings of FOMO (Fear of Missing Out) will kick in for her.

She will fear that if she doesn't give you another chance, she will end up regretting it later on.

She will also fear that other women will find the new, more attractive version of you appealing and you might end up falling in love with a new woman and not wanting her back.

So, this can be one of the reasons why an ex will just open up and give you another chance.

Of course, there are more ways that you can attract her and I will explain that throughout this article.

For now, another possible reason why your ex may have thought you were boring isâ€

2. Your behavior was too predictable for her

[image: Your behavior was too predictable for her]

Some guys like to stick to certain routines in life (e.g. he likes to have the same kind of breakfast every day, do the same kinds of things on weekends, go to bed/shower/eat at a specific time every day).

That's fine.

Yet, if a guy also doesn't add in much or any romance or spontaneity into a relationship (e.g. breaking out of his routine to do something different that feels special for him and her), a woman can get pretty bored with the relationship over time.

Many women will put up with it, but they will feel bored.

It won't necessarily be her main reason for breaking up with him, but she will start to question why she is sticking with a relationship that seems like it's on repeat 24/7, 365 days per year.

In another example, some guys think that they are being romantic or spontaneous, but the woman finds it predictable and boring over time.

For example: A guy might

- Always buy his woman flowers and chocolates for her birthday, Valentine's Day or their anniversary, because that's what he thinks he needs to do.
- Take her to the same restaurant for all of their romantic dinners, because it's where they went on their first date and she used to tell him that she enjoyed it.
- Call or text her every day because he feels that that is what a good boyfriend should do.
- Approach sex in the same kind of way with her, to the point where she can predict what position he will want to do and for how long.

Yet, here's the thing

Even though he's being a good guy and doing everything 'right' (i.e. he's taking her out for romantic dinners, buying her flowers or chocolates, having fairly regular sex with her), what he isn't doing is sparking her feelings of excitement and anticipation.

Women love to spend time feeling excited and wondering about something that a man might do in the future, rather than always knowing exactly what he will do, or pretty much what he will do.

When a woman can predict her boyfriend's every move or most of them, it becomes boring to her.

Why?

One of the main reasons why is that most women want to feel consumed by their love for a man, to the point where he essentially becomes what her life is all about.

She wants to think about him most of the time and try to win over more and more of her love.

This is why you will have seen some women asking their man, "What are you thinking?" but you might not have realized how excited she is by the thought of not knowing and how much it turns her on.

If the man doesn't tell her exactly what he is thinking, it's so much more exciting for her.

He can tell her something, but not give her the full answer, or he can give her a humorous answer, "I was thinking about pizza" to let her see that she can't access all of his thoughts.

He isn't an open book to her.

He is a mystery that she is constantly trying to solve, but can never quite figure out.

A woman can enjoy experiencing that in a relationship for LIFE and it can be one of the main reasons she will never want to let him go.

Yet, a lot of men don't understand it.

Additionally, they assume that it would be too much work to be unpredictable around a woman in a relationship.

Yet, the reality is that it is 100x times easier and more enjoyable to be in the position where the woman is constantly thinking about you, fantasizing about you and wanting to win over more of your love, compared to being in a position of being 50/50 equals with a woman in a boring relationship.

If you create a 50/50 relationship dynamic where you and her feel more like friends, then it might last a few months or even a few years, but she will get bored.

Additionally, if she notices that her friends, coworkers, or family members are happy, excited and in love in their relationships, she may begin thinking, "Why can't I have that? I want to be in love like that. I want to be with a man who keeps me off balance because he isn't predictable. I want a man who can surprise me with his behavior, words or actions, rather than being with a guy where I can pretty much predict how he will react, what he will do and what he will say. I want to feel that excitement of being with a man who I actually remain in love with."

If the relationship doesn't ever really improve and continues to feel boring and predictable for her, she might eventually decide to break up with him and try to find a new man who is less predictable.

She might not hate you or feel like she could never get back with you, but she will most likely look at you as just a friend now.

This is why, if you want to get your ex back, you need to let her see that you are no longer the boring, predictable guy she used to see you as.

You need to be able to attract her in new ways, so she no longer looks at you as just an ex who is just like a friend to her.

Instead, she feels drawn to you based on the new, more exciting approach you now take when interacting with her.

An approach that causes her to naturally feel sparks of respect, attraction and love with you.

Another possible reason why your ex may have thought you were boring, is that

3. She didn't understand your approach to life

Sometimes, a guy might not be a boring guy at all.

Yet, his woman will see him as being boring because he doesn't live his life in the way that she thinks a guy should (e.g. partying a lot, doing lots of adventurous things, having loads of friends that he catches up with all the time, holding parties).

As far as he is concerned, it's not boring to stay at home most of the time and not socialize a lot.

He only has a handful of friends that he interacts with in person and he doesn't see them very often.

He rarely posts things on social media (or doesn't use social media) and the only time he interacts with his friends is via phone call, in person or when playing video games online.

He might also spend a lot of time doing things by himself (e.g. reading, meditating, gardening, watching TV).

When there's a party, wedding or a get-together that his girlfriend wants to go to, he might usually prefer to stay at home instead.

As a result, she ends up going alone or she doesn't go at all.

A woman might put up with that for a few months or years, but she will usually get to the point where she feels bored with him and sees him as holding her back from experiencing fun things in life.

If she is a bit of an extrovert who loves to be around people, she might begin to complain to him about the way he lives his life and say that he is boring.

Yet, here's the thing!

Just because he doesn't live life in the way his woman thinks it should be lived, it doesn't make him boring.

The same might be true for you and your ex.

Maybe she just didn't understand your approach to life and as a result, she naively expected you to be more like her.

Of course, just because you're not really a boring guy and she might have just been a bit shallow in the way she looked at you and life, it doesn't mean that you shouldn't care about her wants and needs.

If you want her back, you're going to need to adapt to her ways a little bit more.

That doesn't mean you have to change who you are, be like her and then end up resenting her for turning you into someone you're not.

Instead, it's about doing some of the things that she likes to do from time to time, so she feels like you and her have more in common and that her life with you isn't boring.

Of course, she is your ex right now, so you might be wondering how you can let her see that?

Well, one of the easiest ways is via social media where you post up photos and videos of yourself enjoying life with others and looking confident, happy, loved and included.

If you don't want to post anything on social media, then you can let her see the changes in you by interacting with her on a phone call (audio or video) or in person and letting her sense how differently you are approaching life now.

When she can see that you are now living life in a way that is appealing to her, she will begin to doubt her decision to break up with you.

You can then build on her attraction for the new and improved you and get her back into a relationship that feels better for the both of you.

On the other hand, if you don't want to adjust to your ex's way of living even a little bit, then maybe you'd be better off moving on and finding yourself a new woman who gets you just the way you are.

Another possible reason why your ex may have thought you were boring, is!

4. You held back from expressing your raw masculinity around her

[image: You held back from expressing your raw masculinity around her]

Some guys make the mistake of thinking that in order for a woman to be happy in a relationship, he needs to just get along with her by being more like her.

He might initially be a confident, masculine guy, but when she picks on him or gets annoyed at him for being masculine (a test of his masculinity), he takes it seriously and thinks that he needs to tone down his masculinity around her.

That is a huge mistake and something I explain in this video!

Some guys never find out what you're learning now and as a result, they never, ever get to maintain a woman's attraction in a relationship.

The woman always loses interest in him over time, even though he could have easily maintained and built on her interest over time.

The relationship could have worked, but he failed her tests of his masculinity and became too soft, neutral or "friend like" to her, which simply doesn't make a woman feel attracted and in love.

Additionally, some guys end up being so afraid of their woman's reaction, or so tired of dealing with her tantrums (which are fake by the way and are simply a test of his emotional strength) that they just give in and let her call most or all of the shots in the relationship.

For example: When there's a decision to be made about what to eat, where to go or what to get for the house (e.g. new furniture) rather than giving his input, he says something like, "I don't mind. You choose. I'm happy with whatever you decide."

When there's a problem that needs to be solved (e.g. where to get the money to pay an unexpected bill, whether to employ a helper in the home or not, where to invest their savings), he leaves it up to her to sort it out.

In his mind, he feels like he is being a good boyfriend because she is getting to do what she wants.

This can happen when a guy regularly sees women being in charge in relationships on TV, acting like a boss in music videos or complaining about men in online articles (usually written by unattractive women who can't get a man to love them, or man-hating feminists who have issues about men that stem from their childhood experiences).

By not being able to see through all the noise on TV, in music videos and in online articles written by messed up women, a guy might eventually develop the belief that women want to be in charge, all men are assholes and men need to be very nice to women at all times.

Yet, when a man approaches women in that way, they simply do not love him.

They feel bored, restless, unsatisfied and even angry at the man for being such a pussy.

Of course, there are some women who like to dominate their man in a relationship, boss him around and make all the decisions, but those women are usually unattractive or have issues.

The reality is that the majority of women do not want to find themselves in a relationship with a man who suppresses his masculinity around her out of fear.

The majority of women want BALLS.

They love BALLS.

Hereâs the thingâ!

Even though many modern women feel independent and might even go around saying that they can do anything that a man can do, they are still instinctively attracted to and respect a man who isnât afraid to express his masculinity around them (i.e. have balls).

It doesnât mean that a man should be overly domineering towards a woman, or try to control her, boss her around and make all of the decisions.

Instead, itâs simply about being the emotionally stronger one (i.e. the one with more balls) who has the courage and emotional strength to take on the role of leading the way to a better life for both of them.

That doesnât mean that a man needs to do everything.

Instead, a woman wants to contribute and help build a better future together with her man, as long as she can see that for the most part, he is leading the way for them.

This allows her to fully relax into thinking, feeling, behaving and taking action like a feminine woman (i.e. free to be emotional, illogical and silly at times, change her mind like the weather).

If a man is able to remain strong, centered and focused on moving forward in the direction that he wants (regardless of the fact that she changes her mind like the weather), then she will stick to him like glue and follow him for life.

Yet, if he canât handle her femininity and she has to tone it down completely and be more like a man, then she isnât going to be happy.

She isnât going to be able to look up to him, respect him and be in love with him.

Some men think women are crazy for being like that, but let me put it into perspective for you.

Imagine that a woman wanted you to be like a woman, instead of a man.

She wanted you to be emotionally sensitive, illogical and change your mind all the time like a girl.

She wanted you to cry over random things, feel scared when watching a movie, scream like a girl and gossip all day long.

Youâd probably laugh at her and tell her that she is nuts.

Women feel the same way about men who want them to think, feel, behave and act more like a man.

If you want to be successful with women for life and never get dumped again, you need to understand and accept that men and women are completely different.

Donât ever suppress your masculinity around a woman because you think itâs what she wants you to do, or what will make her happy.

What a woman really wants is for you to maintain your balls around her, no matter what she says or does.

If you can do that, she will never, ever see you as being boring.

Of course, she might test the strength of your balls by saying that you are boring when youâre not, but you have to be ready for that.

You canât ever expect women to be like a man, who says what he means and does what he says.

Women regularly say things they donât mean (e.g. *âYouâre boring. I hate you!*â) and donât always do what they say (e.g. âI just want a nice guyâ and she then lusts after guys who arenât nice to her).

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't be afraid to interact with her and let her experience your raw masculinity.

That doesn't mean you need to interact with her and be an asshole or a jerk, but you need to have more balls.

Let her feel turned on by the fact that you have leveled up and become so much more of a man since she last spoke to you.

Another possible reason why your ex might have thought you were boring, is that

5. You were too nice or too neutral

Sometimes a guy will get most of his information about attracting a woman from his mother, sister or another woman like an aunt or grandmother, who tells him things like, Be nice to women. Be a perfect gentleman.

Yet, what a lot of guys don't know is that there is a BIG difference between what women SAY and DO when it comes to men.

While it's true that women do want a good guy, they simply do not feel turned on and excited by nice guys or neutral guys.

Unfortunately, many guys never realize that and end up messing up relationship after relationship with women by being too nice or neutral.

For example: If a guy is a nice guy, he will aim to be polite, sweet and nice regardless of how badly a woman is treating him.

He will assume that he is being the perfect boyfriend (fiancé or husband) because he gives her more than she gives him, puts her needs in front of his own, sacrifices everything for her and only wants the best for her.

On the surface, he seems like an amazing guy and that she should feel so lucky to have him.

Yet, rather than feeling lucky, she feels bored by his unrelenting niceness.

As a result, she may begin behaving badly (e.g. being selfish, going out with her friends and not inviting him, spending his money recklessly, throwing regular tantrums, being disrespectful towards him), in the hope of getting a reaction out of him.

If he continues to be nice and sweet to her regardless of how she behaves, she will lose respect for him for not having the balls to stand up to her.

When that happens, she will also stop feeling attracted to him and without those two emotions in place, she will also fall out of love with him.

Then, staying in a relationship with him will seem pointless to her.

Alternatively, in some cases, the nice guy will bottle up his emotions for so long and feel so angry inside that he eventually explodes with anger and hurts her physically, or shows her a nasty side of himself that he has been hiding all along.

Then, the woman sees that his niceness was always just an act and in reality, he's actually quite an angry and potentially violent man.

Seeing that can make her want to dump him because she feels as though he has been lying to her all along by putting on an act of being Mr. Nice Guy.

He might then feel furious at her for dumping him, especially after all he has done for her. He had treated her so well, put up with so much crap from her and in the end, she dumped him. As a result, he might then assume that being good to a woman is a mistake and he needs to become more of an asshole instead.

Hereâs the thing thoughâ!

There is nothing wrong with being a good man when in a relationship with a woman. Yet, what you need to understand is that there is a big difference between a good man who is a challenge vs. a nice guy who puts up with whatever a woman gives him, just so he can be with her. The good man who makes her feel like she needs to impress him too (i.e. he has a challenge) wonât ever have to worry about a woman seeing him as boring.

On the other hand, a nice guy who essentially puts up with whatever a woman wants, or however badly she treats him, just so he hopefully doesnât lose her, will end up losing her because she wonât be able to fully respect him, feel attracted to him or be in love with him as a result.

This is why, if your ex broke up with you because you were too nice or too neutral (i.e. just like a friend, roommate or housemate) with her, then you need to change the way you talk to her and interact with her from now on.

When you make her feel attracted in new and exciting ways (which is easy to do by the way), she will naturally feel curious and will want to interact with you more.

If you are able to maintain your new approach to her, she will feel compelled to give you another chance, or at least hook up with you to see how she feels afterwards.

4 Mistakes to Avoid if You Want to Successfully Re-attract Her and Get Her Back

1. Promising to change and be more spontaneous and fun if she just gives you another chance

For most women, promises from men about changing are just empty words because she will have heard it before from previous boyfriends.

Only a small percentage of men have the intelligence and follow through to actually change and level up as a man.

These men not only succeed with women, but they also succeed in life.

Itâs about approaching your life in a way where you are always leveling up, even if itâs just a little bit.

Men who always approach their life in that way, are able to quickly and easily make continuous improvements that, over time, turn them into the kind of man that other men respect and that women feel sexually and romantically attracted to.

Yet, men who approach their life in a way where they only occasionally make some improvements, will find that they get left behind by more successful friends and by women who once loved them, but eventually got bored of being with them.

So, if you want to convince your ex that you really have changed man (e.g. you are more fun and spontaneous now, rather than being what she sees as boring or predictable), then youâre going to have to prove it to her via your actions, rather than your words.

When your ex can see that youâre no longer the same guy she broke up with, she will naturally feel drawn to you again, even if itâs just out of curiosity initially.

She will want to interact with you and find out why you are being so fun, interesting and spontaneous now.

Whatever you do though, do not tell her that youâre doing it to impress her, or because she said to do it.

Always do things because you want to do them, not because a woman is telling you to do it.

Women do not want to be with a guy who essentially follows her orders, or lives life the way she wants to live it, to then hopefully be accepted by her.

So, if she asks you why youâre being more spontaneous these days, just say something like, âI just felt like doing new things. I love my life so much more now. Itâs greatâ and subtly let her feel like she is missing out.

She might not admit it right away, but she will begin to feel like you are leaving her behind and she is missing out on being with a more interesting, appealing and attractive version of you.

In some cases, that alone can cause a woman to want to get back with you just so she can stop feeling like she is being left behind.

Then, if the relationship really does feel better and you are able to attract her in new ways, she wonât be able to stop herself from wanting to continue to see you.

Yet, if you just promise to change and be more fun if she gives you another chance, she will almost certainly keep rejecting you and attempting to move on without you.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

2. Not realizing that the real source of boredom was the lack of sexual and romantic attraction

At the beginning of a relationship when everything is new and exciting, itâs easy for a woman to overlook certain things about a guy that turn her off (e.g. he is a bit clingy, he lacks confidence in social situations, his struggles to make a decision without her approval, he is too nice, he seems a bit emotionally sensitive or insecure).

She is willing to overlook things based on the sexual and romantic attraction she is feeling.

Attraction is a powerful force and it causes both men and women to want to avoid thinking about the negatives, just so they can enjoy it.

Yet, if a woman finds herself in a relationship where the spark dies out and the guy has no idea how to get it back, she will naturally start to focus on the negatives about him.

If she decides to put up with them for a while, she might try to make the relationship more exciting by suggesting they go on holiday, or going out to party or be around other people.

However, if nothing she does gets the spark back, then she will gradually start to feel bored and restless in the relationship.

Eventually, she will dump her boyfriend and if he asks, she might even admit that she thought he was kind of boring.

So, if you want to get her back, you really have to understand what creates a spark in a relationship between a man and a woman.

Additionally, youâve got to be able to create that spark when you interact with her, so she feels attracted and then opens herself up to being seduced by you again.

If you just try to get her back by talking to her as a friend, or texting with her, then sheâs almost certainly not going to feel the spark and will simply continue moving on without you.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

3. Feeling like it would be impossible to get her back

Every day, all over the world, women go back to their ex boyfriend to give the relationship another chance, even if it was a bad break up, or if it seemed like she would never change her mind.

Women do change their mind and go back to ex boyfriends and even ex husbands.

You can be one of those men who get another chance with the woman you love.

Just because your ex said that you were boring, it doesnât mean that you canât make her see you as being interesting, appealing, exciting and attractive now.

You can.

In fact, when you interact with her and she experiences the new you for herself, she wonât be able to stop herself from feeling curious about what it would be like to be with the new, improved version of you.

When that happens, she automatically stops thinking of you as being boring because she is feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

On the other hand, if go through your life from now on assuming that it would be impossible to get her back, then she will almost certainly continue moving on without you.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

4. Turning into a boring guy because you assume thatâs who you are and will always be

When a woman says that a guy is boring, it can cause him to think, *âWell, maybe she has a point. Maybe I am a boring guy. Maybe Iâm doomed to be single, or to experience failed relationships for life because of how boring I am. I should just accept it and give up.*â

Yet, thinking like that only makes a guy seem unattractive to his ex and to other women as well.

Why?

Women are instinctively attracted to the emotional strength in men (e.g. high self-esteem, self-assuredness) and turned off by the emotional weakness (e.g. low self-esteem, self-doubt).

So, when a guy lacks confidence and assumes that women couldnât possibly find him interesting, he might end up coming across as boring because he surpasses his personality.

He holds back because he believes that heâs just not going to be good enough.

As a result, his ex rejects him and attractive women donât find him appealing, which then confirms his belief that heâs boring and attractive women donât want him.

Don't let that life of misery happen to you.

Just because your ex said she thought you were boring, it doesn't mean that it's your fate or destiny to be a boring guy who always has women lose interest in him.

Does My Wife Really Want a Divorce?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends.

Sometimes threatening divorce is just a ploy to get you to treat her better, or to gain some power over you in the relationship.

Other times, itâs a way to hopefully get you off her back about her bad behavior, so she doesn't have to change anything.

Yet, sometimes it is serious and she is honestly planning on going through with a divorce at this stage.

So, here are 6 ways to know if she is being serious:

1. She has threatened you with divorce many times before and is now trying to get the process started for real

[image: She has threatened divorce before and is now trying to get it to happen]

Most relationships go through ups and downs and arguments may sometimes seem very serious (e.g. a wife goes to stay with friends or family for a weekend, she moves out of the master bedroom into a spare room for a little while, she gets so angry that she says sheâs had enough, she threatens to get a divorce, etc).

Yet, in most cases, these difficulties get worked out and the relationship becomes even more solid than before if the man approaches it correctly.

If the man approaches it correctly and is able to make the relationship better than before, then her threat of divorce becomes a distant and sometimes even forgotten memory.

As far as she is concerned, they simply went through a bad patch, fixed things up and are now happy, more in love and more connected to each other than ever before.

Yet, for other couples, the arguments and disagreements donât ever get resolved properly.

Instead, after every quarrel or argument, the woman becomes more and more distant and withdrawn.

She loves her husband and wants to be with him, but she feels increasingly open to the idea of divorcing him, so she doesnât have to put up with all the stress and arguments anymore.

As a result, she starts trying to get the divorce process happening.

For example:

- She begins to divide things that theyâve usually handled together (e.g. she splits the bills, gets a separate bank account).
- She starts cleaning out her closets, putting things into bags and eventually some of her things seem to be disappearing (i.e. she has moved them to a friendâs house, to her parentâs place, into storage).
- She makes plans for future events without including him (e.g. going to a school event with the children, attending a friendâs wedding/birthday party).
- She starts talking about them as though they are no longer married.

- She brings up quotes she has read about divorce, information she has found out or references articles about divorce when talking to her husband.
- She has an initial consultation with a lawyer, or reaches out for help with a local counseling service that helps women go through the divorce process.
- She begins talking about how to handle life after divorced (e.g. visiting the children, selling your home, splitting any additional assets).

If your wife has been behaving in any of those ways or something similar, then it's highly likely that she really does want a divorce this time.

Yet, that doesn't mean she will go through with it.

You can still change how she feels.

You can change how she feels by reactivating her feelings of respect, attraction and love and then building on it.

When you change her feelings for you, her thoughts about getting a divorce automatically begin to change as well.

Suddenly, the idea of a divorce seems too drastic and unnecessary, especially since things are going well between you and her again.

Another sign that your wife really wants a divorce this time is

2. She no longer feels like she would be embarrassed to admit to family, friends and coworkers that you and her are divorcing

[image: She no longer feels embarrassed to become a divorcee]

Even though divorce is quite common these days, many women still feel embarrassed to become a divorcee.

In most cases, a woman had her family and friends at the wedding and you and her seemed so in love.

So, she most likely doesn't want to ruin that perception for her family and friends by getting divorced.

She will want to maintain an image that things are fine, or at least okay between you and her, rather than seeming like a failure to her friends and family.

This is why, if your wife has been telling her family and friends that she wants to divorce you, then it's a strong sign that she is serious about it this time.

Of course, nothing is set in stone until the divorce papers are signed.

This means you still have plenty of time to change her mind and make her want to make the marriage work.

Another sign that your wife really wants a divorce is

3. She has somewhere else to live and is making plans to move there

An unhappy wife can talk about getting a divorce for years and years, without ever following through on it.

I know that from seeing my parent's marriage, where my mother has been unhappy and complaining about my father for over a decade.

She has never left him though.

In my marriage to my beautiful wife, I don't experience that because I've know how to have a happy, in love relationship that is full of mutual respect, attraction and love.

Yet, I've seen my mother complain about my father for so long and she has even talked to me about wanting to get a divorce from him.

One of the main reasons she hasn't done it is that she doesn't have a job, doesn't have a license and has essentially relied on my father do take care of everything the entire marriage.

So, even though feels stuck and unhappy, I doubt that she would ever leave him.

How about your marriage though?

Do you think your wife is capable of leaving you?

If your wife begins to pack up her stuff or is making plans to move out, it's definitely is a strong sign that she's serious about the divorce this time.

What you need to do is maintain your composure and avoid saying and doing things that you will regret later on (e.g. begging and pleading with her to change her mind, insulting her, accusing her of cheating on you, saying things like, "If you leave now, don't ever come back!" or "A" crying to her).

Instead, just accept her decision, so she feels like she is losing you now.

For example: You can say something along the lines of, "Even though I don't want you to go, I won't make this any more difficult for you than it already is. So, if you want to move out, then I accept your decision. If you want to go through with a divorce, then I will have to accept that as well. However, all I ask is for you to maintain an open mind and not rush into anything right away."

By handling her decision to leave in such an emotionally strong and mature way, you will automatically spark new feelings of respect for you.

When a woman feels respect for, she can then feel attracted to you so much more easily.

So, when she feels sparks of respect and attraction, she will naturally begin to doubt her decision to leave.

As a result, she may begin thinking things like, "Well, maybe we can make our marriage work after all. Maybe divorce is just too drastic. There's no harm in giving him another chance."

From that point, you just need to focus on using interactions that you have with her to fully reawaken her feelings for you, so she falls back in love with you and no longer wants a divorce.

Another sign that your wife really wants a divorce this time is a|

4. She no longer wants to be married because she just wants to be free to do whatever she wants

[image: She no longer wants to be a married woman and wants to be free to do whatever she wants]

Sometimes a woman will get married fairly young, or she marry her first love and initially feel happy about it.

At the time, she might feel 100% certain that she has made the right decision to marry and have no desire to get out there and live the single life (i.e. hooking up with random men, have fun, sexual relationships that last weeks or months, crushing on a guy and getting him to fall for her, experiencing the drama and excitement of dating multiple men at once).

Yet, if her marriage stops living up to her expectations and gradually becomes boring and stale, her 100% certainty might change to 50% and then less.

As a result, she may begin to think, â€œMaybe I settled down too early. I never got to experience enough of my life on my own. Iâ€™ve always just followed my husband, but I donâ€™t respect him anymore to follow him. I want to do things that I want. I want to be free to be myself and make my own decisions.â€

In some cases, a wife might then begin to behave in a more selfish manner (e.g. she goes out to bars or parties with her friends even though she knows her husband doesnâ€™t approve of it, she accepts a promotion at work that involves a lot of traveling without discussing it with him first, she takes up a new hobby that requires her to meet new people).

She doesnâ€™t care how it makes her husband feel because she is already beginning to move on without him and is happy about it.

If her husband then tries to stop her by saying things like, â€œWhy are you behaving like this? Weâ€™re married, or have you forgotten? This is not how a good wife behavesâ€ she might feel a bit guilty about it.

Yet, if she has lost too much respect, attraction and love for him to really care anymore, or if she has been having a great time without him and feels more alive than ever before, she might decide to ignore his attempts to control her and start moving towards a divorce, so she can enjoy her freedom without him.

Another sign that your wife really wants a divorce this time isâ€¦!

5. She hasnâ€™t been in love with you for a long time and has fallen in love with another man

When a woman is happily married and in love with her husband, she wonâ€™t want to ruin that by cheating on her husband, or leaving him for another man.

It doesnâ€™t matter how many men try to hit on her; she will simply reject them or ignore them because she has no interest in pursuing another relationship, when she is already so happy and content in the relationship she has with her husband.

Yet, if a woman falls out of love with her husband, then she might decide to open herself up to being seduced by another man, or falling in love with another man and pursuing a relationship with him instead.

So, if she then happens to meet a new man who makes her feel the way she wants to feel (e.g. attracted, in love, excited, respected, appreciated), she will naturally feel drawn to him.

She might then begin to seriously consider divorcing her husband and starting a new relationship with the new man.

Of course, if her husband reacts quickly and begins giving her the attraction experience she wanted all along, she wonâ€™t want to risk ruining her marriage for a relationship that might not even work out.

So, if you donâ€™t want to lose your wife and go through the horrors of a divorce, I recommend that you focus on allowing her to experience a new type of attraction with you.

Understand the parts of the attraction experience that have been missing and which she has most likely been seeking or wanting to experience with a new man.

When you understand what has been missing, begin letting her experience it with you.

Donâ€¢t tell her all about it.

Just do it.

Women donâ€¢t like it when a man says, â€¢m going to try to attract you in this way or, â€¢ve been learning about attraction and Iâ€¢ve realized that Iâ€¢ve been too soft with you and so on.

Instead, women love it when a man figures out what he needs to do to attract her and then does it, without having to get into a discussion about it.

If he discusses it all with her, his efforts can seem forced or fake, which takes the romance out of it.

Yet, if he suddenly changes and is able to make her feel new sparks of attraction, she feels amazed and excited about the new dynamic between them.

As a result, the new man that she has been opening herself up to emotionally suddenly feels like an imposter in your marriage and she wants to distance herself from him.

When she feels that way, she turns back to you and you can then guide both of you into deeper feelings of respect, attraction and love that keep you together for life.

As her feelings come back to life and deepen, the thought of being with another man feels wrong to her.

It feels like she would be losing out because she knows that thereâ€¢s no guarantee the new man would be able to make her feel the way you do.

Another sign that your wife really wants a divorce this time isâ€¢!

6. She is speaking to lawyers about it

[image: She is speaking to lawyers about it]

If your wife has been speaking to lawyers, or if you have received a lawyerâ€¢s letter stating her intent to divorce you, then sheâ€¢s probably serious about following through with it.

Of course, that doesnâ€¢t mean she will completely go through with it because everyone knows how expensive and emotionally stressful a divorce can be.

So, just because she is currently talking to lawyers, it doesnâ€¢t mean that you should give up on saving your marriage.

You can still change her mind.

Feelings change all the time.

Think about itâ€¢!

There was a time when you were a complete stranger to her and she felt nothing for you because she didnâ€¢t know you.

Then, when you start dating, she was thinking things like, *â€¢I think Iâ€¢m falling for him. I wonder if heâ€¢s the one. Maybe we'll get married one day.*â€¢

As your relationship progressed, she then got to the point where she wanted to be your wife, start a family and spend the rest of her life with you.

Then, there were times where you and her had a serious argument and she disconnected from her feelings of love for you, only to then forgive you and love you again.

As you can see, your wife's feelings have always changed for better or worse and back again, which means they can change once again.

The fact is, when you reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction for you, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

Even if she tries to resist the feeling or hide it from you, it will be there in the background of her mind.

If you continue to make her new sparks of respect, attraction and love, something inside of her will switch back on.

She will realize that the relationship between you and her isn't over.

As a result, her heart will open back up to you.

Then, the idea of divorcing you and losing you forever will be something that scares her and fills her with feelings of regret, rather than something she's looking forward to.

Avoid These Mistakes While Trying to Change Her Mind About the Divorce

1. Panicking and beginning to promise the world to her if she changes her mind

When a man suddenly realizes that his wife is on the verge of leaving him, he might start promising her all sorts of things in a desperate attempt to make her change her mind.

For example: He might

- Promise that she can get her way and he will do whatever she wants without argument from now on.
- Promise to spend more time at home with her and stop pursuing his goals and ambitions.
- Offer to take on more chores around the house so she can relax or go hang out with her friends.
- Offer to work longer hours to earn extra money, so that they don't always have to feel like they're living from paycheck to paycheck.
- Promise to be more available to drive the children to school or to drive them to their hobby classes, or extracurricular learning.
- Offer to take her on regular romantic vacations and weekends away, even if they can't really afford it.

Although a wife might be surprised to see how willing her husband is to save the marriage, his actions will almost certainly seem desperate, which will cause her to lose respect and attraction for him.

Here's the thing

A wife doesn't want her husband saying things he doesn't really mean and promising to do things he doesn't really want to do, just so she stays married to him.

That seems fake, forced and desperate, which isn't attractive to a woman.

Instead, what a wife wants to see is that her husband understands the real problems in the relationship and is calmly, confidently and genuinely making adjustments and improvements because he cares.

She doesn't want to see him offering her the world because he's feeling desperate, or being willing to hand over all of his power to her to make her stay.

So, rather than making big promises to your wife about things that probably don't matter much to her (e.g. promising to take her out more or take her on regular vacations, when what she actually wants is for you to just genuinely appreciate her), focus on making her feel differently based on how you interact with her.

For example: Rather than getting frustrated when she isn't seeing things your way, try to ask more questions so you can understand her point of view first.

Then, talk about some of the things you agree with regarding her point of view, so she feels understood.

Then, ask her what she understands about your point of view and praise her when she is on the right track, rather than just pointing out what she doesn't understand about your point of view.

When you approach interactions in a way that causes her to feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she naturally starts to feel like a divorce is unnecessary.

Yet, if you panic and offer her the world so she will hopefully stay, it will make her lose respect and attraction for you due to most likely appearing a bit desperate.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Crying and pleading with her to not go through with it

Even though divorce is common in today's world, it's still a horrible thing for a couple to go through personally.

It can be extremely stressful, emotionally draining, embarrassing and soul destroying to say the least.

So, it's understandable that if a wife threatens her husband with divorce, he might feel a bit emotional about it.

Yet, if he wants to maintain what is left of her respect and attraction for him and build some more of it back, then he needs to maintain control of his emotions like a real man.

That doesn't mean he can't or shouldn't feel anything.

That's impossible and it's unnecessary, of course.

Instead, maintaining control of your emotions like a real man, means feeling the emotions, but not breaking down into tears like a woman does.

Although it's politically correct these days to say, Oh, it's okay for men to cry. Men should be able to cry like women do, the fact is that women do not feel attracted to men who break down and cry when under pressure.

So, if a husband breaks down, cries and begs and pleads with his wife to change her mind, rather than make her think, Wow! He must really love me if he's crying! I can't leave him now. I have to make our marriage work now, she will instinctively feel turned off by him.

She might be nice to him and give him a hug, but secretly she will be feeling turned off.

Why?

A woman's attraction to a guy is based mostly on his ability to make her feel as though she can look up to him and respect him.

Breaking down into tears and begging and pleading simply doesn't make a woman look up to a man.

Instead, she looks down on him and in many cases, feels deeply disappointed with the man she married.

Women yearn to feel safe and protected by a man who doesn't crumble under pressure and if a woman's husband can't offer her that feeling, it's more of a turn off that most men will ever realize.

So, when a husband is pleading, crying and being emotionally weak and needy, he isn't going to accomplish his goal of making her love him and never want to leave him.

Instead, she will feel compelled to try to go through with the divorce, so she can set herself free from the weak man that he has become.

It may seem harsh, especially after all he has done for her and all they have been through, but attraction is attraction.

Women simply aren't attracted to emotional weakness and if a woman is on the verge of wanting a divorce, crying to her and pleading with her simply makes her feel more motivated to want to go through with it.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Trying to make her feel guilty about how it will affect your children or extended family

[image: Trying to make her feel guilty about how the divorce will affect your children or extended family]

Sometimes, when a man doesn't know how else to convince his wife not to divorce him, he might try to guilt trip her into staying.

For example: He might say something like, "What will we say to our family? You know how much my parents love you. You will break their heart. Do you really want to put them through a divorce? Think about them. It's not fair to them."

If they also happen to have children, he might say, "What will happen to our children? Do you really want them being forced to grow up in a broken home? They're still so young and they need both of their parents. Do you want to be responsible for tearing us all apart like that?"

Yet, regardless of whether or not his arguments are valid, a modern woman doesn't want to feel like she's being forced into sticking with a man out of a sense of duty to others.

She has seen way too many examples on TV of women divorcing men and being happy afterwards, or has heard from coworkers who've gone through it and they have still managed to continue on in life without their husband.

So, if you don't want your wife to go through with a divorce, don't try to make her feel bad

(i.e. guilty, selfish, careless) about it all.

Instead, focus on making her feel good again (i.e. happy, attracted, in love), so she naturally wants to forget all about the divorce and just stick with you.

Only when her feelings change will she happily change her mind, because itâs something that she wants to do, rather a favor that she is doing for you, or a duty that she is being guilt-tripped into feeling like she needs to uphold.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ

4. Not changing your approach to attraction, but then expecting her to feel sexual and romantic love for you

If your recent approach to making your wife want to stay married to you hasnât been working, donât keep doing it.

Try something new.

Something that has been proven to work by men all over the world who have found themselves in a situation like yours.

If you keep using the same old approach with her and expecting her to suddenly like it, sheâs just going to feel determined to go through with the divorce.

You can make her fall in love with you again and never want to even talk about divorce again, but you have to be willing to give her a new attraction experience.

Let her see that if she lost you, she would lose the love of her life and may never find another man quite like you again.

Of course, donât tell her that.

Make her feel it.

That is what works.

6 Examples of What Not to Do During a Break Up With a Woman

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The way that you approach a break up with a woman can either make it easy, or difficult for you to get her back.

If you approach it in the right way, she will change her mind, open up to you and want to give you another chance pretty much right away.

Yet, if you approach it in the wrong way, she will feel determined to stick to her decision, remain closed off you and begin moving on without you.

Now, the first example below isn't a HUGE mistake, but it is a subtle mistake that can turn some women off and make her want to stick with her decision to remain broken up.

So, here is the first example of what not to do during a break up with a woman...

1. Don't ask her if there is anything you can do to change her mind

[image: Don't ask if there's anything you can do to change her mind]

If your girlfriend (or wife) really does love you and still wants to be with you, then asking her, "Is there anything I can do to change your mind?" can and does often work.

In cases like that, she will be totally open to telling you how you can change her mind.

She'll stop the break up, explain where you've been going wrong and give you a chance to fix things.

Great.

Yet, if you're looking for advice on what not to do during a break up with a woman, then you're probably going through a break up with a woman who isn't in love with you anymore.

In fact, she is over it and no longer feels enough respect, attraction and love to warrant being in a relationship with you again.

As a result, she won't feel motivated to give you answers on how you can fix things with her.

Additionally, she'll likely be annoyed that you're asking her for tips on how to change her mind, when she has probably been hinting at her unhappiness in the relationship for quite some time.

If she has been hinting, or directly telling you what to change and you haven't followed through on that, she will doubt that you could change if she gave you another chance.

This is why, rather than trying to discuss how you could change her mind, you simply begin making her feel a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for you so she naturally changes her mind and opens back up to you again.

When you focus on making her feel a renewed sense of respect for you, then she will naturally open back to feeling attracted to you again.

When that happens, she will naturally and automatically reconnect with her love for you and as a result, you and her will be able to get back together so much more easily.

Yet, if you're just asking if there's anything you can do to change her mind, you might end up getting vague answers from her like, â€œI donâ€™t know. I just donâ€™t feel the same way anymore. Iâ€™m sorry, but itâ€™s overâ€ or, â€œI donâ€™t think thereâ€™s anything you can do to change my mind. I was thinking about breaking up with you for a long time, but I never did it. I just canâ€™t do this anymore though. Itâ€™s over.â€

This is why, itâ€™s best to just understand what makes a woman feel respect, attraction and love for a man and then immediately start doing that when you interact with her.

When you change how she feels, she naturally changes her mind.

Yet, when you ask how you can change her mind, it doesnâ€™t make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

Instead, in many cases, a woman will feel annoyed that you just donâ€™t understand how to make her feel the way she wants to feel.

As a result, she can see that as yet another reason to remain broken up with you.

2. Donâ€™t act like a neutral friend and expect her to feel sexual and romantic attraction for you

[image: Don't act like a friend and expect her to feel attraction for you]

If your ex is still open to being â€œfriendsâ€ with you, then make sure that you use the opportunity to re-attract her (by flirting with her, making her feel girly in comparison to your masculine approach, remaining confident no matter what), rather than putting yourself in the friend zone (by being extra nice, feeling unworthy of flirting with her, losing confidence in your attractiveness to her).

Where a lot of guys go wrong during a break up with a woman, is to suddenly become a nice, helpful friend who just wants to â€œbe thereâ€ for her.

As you may know, guys who behave like that when trying to get laid or get a girlfriend usually get rejected or placed in the friend zone.

Why?

Women arenâ€™t turned on by wimpy, fearful behavior from men.

Women are turned on by balls, confidence and masculinity.

So, if your girlfriend is open to being â€œfriendsâ€ after the break up, then accept that, but donâ€™t act like a nice, innocent friend who just wants to be there for her, support her and ensure that she is okay.

Of course, if you just want to be friends with her, then use that approach.

Yet, if you want her back, then make sure that you interact with her in a way that causes her to feel attracted, turned on and full of desire for you.

When she feels that way, she wonâ€™t be able to stop thinking about you and will want to change her mind about the break up and get back together.

Unfortunately, so many guys donâ€™t realize that when going through a break up with a woman and as a result, they end up losing her.

For example: A guy might think something like, â€œIâ€™m lucky that she still wants to be my friend. I donâ€™t want to jeopardize that by giving her the impression that I want her back â€œ even though I do. Instead, I need to play it cool and be a good friend to her and hopefully over time, she'll realize that I've been a perfect gentleman with her since our break up. Then, she won't be able to stop herself falling back in love with me. Yet, if I flirt with her, she might think that I'm out of line. The, she might get angry with me and cut me out of her life. Then, I'll never be able to get her back. So, I'd better just be a nice friend to her.

Yet, being the "nice guy" is the worst thing you can do if you actually want your ex back.

It's an almost definite way to put yourself in the friend zone with an ex!

If you aren't making your ex feel sexually attracted and turned on, then she will almost certainly begin to open herself up to meeting, hooking up with, dating and falling in love with other guys.

So, while you're hanging around and thinking that everything is going great between you and her (e.g. because she sometimes texts to say hi as a friend), she's busy moving on with someone else.

Then, you have to feel rejected all over again and possibly feel betrayed by her as well.

That's not a nice feeling and often causes men to lose a lot of confidence in themselves and in their ability to attract and keep a woman in a relationship.

If you want to avoid going down that road, then simply understand that what makes a woman want to get back with a man is not only a renewed sense of respect for him, but also sexual and romantic attraction.

Sexual and romantic attraction is something that you can spark up inside of her immediately when you use an attractive approach (i.e. flirting with her, being very masculine in your behavior, conversation style and vibe so she can feel girly and feminine in comparison to you, remaining confident no matter what she says or does to make you doubt yourself).

Yet, if you ONLY use a "just a friend" approach (i.e. being very nice, helpful, generous, kind, thoughtful), she will almost certainly just be feeling neutral towards you and she will then direct her desire for a man towards other men instead.

I say ONLY because it is great to be a good man and to be thoughtful and kind with a woman, but on it's own, it's not what makes her wet.

Being good to her can make her feel some respect for you, but it isn't going to turn her on.

The reality is that women only feel romantically attracted to niceness when it comes from a man that they feel sexually attracted to.

This is why women reject romantic gestures from men that they're not attracted to and go weak at the knees or swoon at romantic gestures from men they are attracted to.

The romantic gesture offered by the guy can be the exact same thing, but it will feel completely different to a woman based on whether or not she feels sexual attraction for him.

Attraction changes everything.

So, don't be afraid to flirt with her to attract her and build up some sexual tension between you both.

When you build up sexual tension (it can be achieved in minutes, hours or days), she naturally begins to feel like she wants to release the built up tension with hugging, kissing and sex.

As a result, she stops wanting to completely end things with you and opens up to being with you sexually, even if she only wants to open up to that to see how she feels afterwards.

If you are able to continue making her feel attracted leading up to, during and after you hook up again, then she will feel drawn to you and compelled to keep seeing you.

Yet, if youâ€”re just being a nice friend, then she almost certainly wonâ€”t be feeling drawn to you in a sexual and romantic way.

Instead, when she naturally starts to feel horny (like a normal person does) and realizes that she doesnâ€”t want to do it with you, she will direct that natural, persistent feeling (of being horny) towards other men.

Then, if she meets a new man who is interested in her and who she feels more attracted to than you, she will naturally begin to close herself off to you and open herself up to him.

3. Donâ€”t cry to her, or tell her that youâ€”ve cried

[image: Don't cry to her, or tell her that you've cried]

Anyone is allowed to cry if they want to.

Yet, if you want to get a woman back when going through a break up, or after a break up, then donâ€”t cry to her or tell her that you have been crying.

Although politically correct media and people will say that itâ€”s fine for men to cry and men should be sensitive like women, the reality is that women just donâ€”t find it attractive.

Iâ€”ve heard from so many men over the years who have told me how their girlfriend or wife reacted to them crying and Iâ€”ve also heard it from female friends who have gone through a break up.

[image: Women lose respect for men who cry when being broken up with]

In a nutshell, the most common phrases from men are that the â€”woman lost respect for himâ€” and said that she â€”could no longer look at him the same way.â€”

Why?

A woman will lose respect for the fact that her guy fell apart and cried due to the break up, rather than being a man about it by maintaining control of his emotions.

Maintaining controls of your emotions as a man doesnâ€”t mean not feeling anything at all.

Instead, it means feeling the sadness, the rejection, the betrayal or the overall hurt that comes from a break up, but not breaking down and crying about it like a woman does.

Of course, these days there are so many emotionally weak guys who cry on TV shows these days and you might even know a few guys who have cried about little things, rather than being manly about it.

Yet, just because a bunch of weak, lost and confused guys have been crying, it doesnâ€”t suddenly make it attractive to women.

Women are not attracted to emotionally weak and sensitive guys who cry and break down when life throws them challenges (e.g. they lose their job, they go through a break up).

As devastating as it may feel to be going through your break up right now, crying about it to her (or telling her that youâ€”ve been crying) is simply not something you should do.

If you cry to her, or tell her that you have been crying, she might be nice to you about it, but I can absolutely guarantee you that she will lose respect and attraction for you as a result.

For example: She might say, â€”Iâ€”m sorryâ€” and cry with you and even hug you, but secretly she thinking, *â€œOh my godâ€¦ what a pussy. I didnâ€™t know he was like this. Iâ€™ve got to go through with this break up and not look back. I didnâ€™t know he was such a fragile guy. Iâ€™ve got to get away from him and find myself a real man. He has shown me his true colors now. He is fragile. I canâ€™t rely on him to be the man I need in this life.*â€œ

So many guys have told me that they had a â€œgood cryâ€œ with their ex and she seemed really sad, but now she doesnâ€™t want to get back together.

They donâ€™t understand it.

She seemed sad.

Yes, she was sad and was genuinely crying, but she was also feeling deeply turned off by his lack of masculinity in that situation.

Of course, if she were to be asked, she would almost certainly be politically correct about it (e.g. â€œItâ€™s okay for men to cry tooâ€œ), or say something nice to avoid hurting his feelings (e.g. â€œIt showed how much he caredâ€œ), but secretly, she will feel turned off by it.

The reality is that what a woman really wants to see is that, no matter what challenges you are faced with in life, you are always able to remain strong and maintain control of your emotions like a real man.

That doesnâ€™t mean you donâ€™t show any love towards her, or let her see that you are sad about the break up.

You can show her emotions, but keep it together.

Put it this wayâ€¦

Have a think about the men in this world who you look up to and respect the most.

Are they the wimpy men who cry when life throws them a challenge, or are they the men who feel emotions, but are able to maintain control of those emotions like a real man?

The reality is that guys all over the world respect men who are able to maintain control of their emotions (e.g. confident, leader-type males) and women feel respect, sexual attraction and love for them.

The world needs strong men and everyone knows that instinctively, but due to political correctness and the need to make everyone feel included, many people lie and say that men should be sensitive and cry just like women do.

Yet, all you have to do is think about the most respected men in the world and you will realize that they arenâ€™t pussies.

Likewise, look at the men who women lust after and in most cases, you will see that the guy is confident and is able to maintain control of his emotions under pressure better than most guys can.

So, when a guy starts crying to his women during a break up and saying things like, â€œWhy are you doing this to me? Canâ€™t you see that I would be lost without you? Please donâ€™t leave me. I need you! Pleaseâ€œ it automatically causes her to lose respect and attraction for him.

She might be nice to him, hug him and cry with him, but she will secretly be feeling turned off at an instinctive level.

This is why, when going through a break up with a woman, you should man up and hold back the tears.

If you cry in private, then fine, but just don't tell her about it.

Always remember that women are attracted to emotionally strong men, not emotionally weak and sensitive men.

It's not politically correct to say that, but it's the truth.

4. Don't promise to change whatever she wants if she'll just give you another chance

[image: Don't promise to change whatever she wants if she will give you another chance]

Although promising to change whatever she wants might seem like the right thing to say during a break up (i.e. because you're being sincere, you're showing her how determined you are to make her happy), in almost all cases, it doesn't have the desired effect on a woman.

Why?

When a guy is saying things like "I will do anything for you. Just tell me what you want me to do and I'll do it," it suggests to her that he doesn't understand how to attract her and needs her to become his teacher on the subject.

He probably also needs her to guide him through the ex back process, so he can get another chance with her.

A woman can end up seeing that as being all about him and his needs (i.e. help him get her back, so he can feel better about himself).

Yet, when a woman is breaking up with a guy, she almost never wants to take on the responsibility of helping him get her back.

She doesn't feel motivated to help him because she has already decided to break up with him, so it just doesn't feel right to her to be helping him get her back.

Additionally, in some cases, a woman doesn't want to tell her ex what to do and then see him comply with her instructions like a good, little boy.

A woman wants to be with a man who is his own man, not a guy who is being bossed around by her and is on his best behavior like a good, little boy.

If a woman feels more like his teacher or big sister, rather than his woman, then it makes her look down on him.

As a result, it takes the romance (or the "spark") out of the relationship, which then causes her to not want to have sex with him anymore.

If she doesn't feel any sexual desire or draw to him, it helps convince her that breaking up with him is the right decision for her.

A woman will then begin to realize that there are so many men out there who already know how to be the man in a relationship and make a woman feel girly and in love.

Yet, her boyfriend (or husband) is asking her for instructions and is willing to follow her instructions to hopefully please her.

From his perspective, he's not doing anything wrong.

He's just being an honest, good man who wants to treat his woman right.

That's true.

Yet, asking a woman for instructions on how to attract her simply isn't attractive to her.

It puts her in a position that she doesn't want to be in (i.e. big sister, teacher, mentor) and makes her feel turned off because she is no longer able to look up to you and respect you as her man.

So, rather than making the mistake of promising your ex that you will do whatever she wants if she will just give you another chance, just focus on figuring out her real, secret reasons for losing her feelings for you.

Of course, don't ask her what those reasons are.

Instead, you have to figure them out for yourself, or simply learn from me.

For example: Here are some questions that will help begin to understand what some of her real reasons for breaking up with you are.

- Did you start out being confident and self-assured, but end up becoming insecure, needy and clingy later on in the relationship?
- Did she look up to you and respect you all the way, or did she gradually start looking down on you based on how you behaved, treated her or treated yourself?
- Did you make her feel feminine and desirable in your presence, or did she end up feeling more like a friend around you?
- Were you focused on achieving your big goals and ambitions outside of the relationship with her, or did you essentially make your life about her, thereby causing her to feel a bit smothered by your dependence on her and turned off by your lack of ambition?
- Did she feel loved and appreciated, or did she feel taken for granted?
- Did you make her feel loved and appreciated, but then allow her to get away with treating you badly and being unloving towards you, thereby causing her to lose respect for you lack of balls in the relationship?
- Did you become too aggressive, selfish or mean towards her, thereby causing her to feel unloved, afraid and disappointed with who you turned out to be?
- Were you supportive and encouraging of her dreams and goals in life, or did you put her down and discourage her from going after what she really wanted so she wouldn't spend time away from you?
- Did you continue to flirt with her and keep the spark alive, or did you expect that she'd stick around for life just because things were good at the start?
- Did you and her make a lot of progress as a couple (e.g. rent a nice house together, get promoted at work, go on holidays, put a deposit on your own home, get engaged) and become the envy of some of her friends, or did she end up feeling embarrassed about the lack of progress that you and her were making?
- Did you initially make her feel beautiful and wanted, but eventually start picking on her physical appearance to the point where she no longer feel attractive around you and therefore, wanted to flirt with other men to make herself feel better?
- Did you initially spend a lot of quality time with her, but eventually ignored her by overworking, playing video games all the time, hanging out with friends more than her, or doing anything that allowed you to get away from her?
- Did she initially feel like you and her were a good match, but you eventually made her feel like she was more valuable than you and as a result, she felt like she was trading down by being with a guy like you?

- Were you able to maintain your manliness in the relationship all the way, or did you end up becoming a bit too insecure and weak in your approach to her and the relationship?
- By going through those questions, you will have most likely been imagining different scenarios that you experienced with her.

As a result, you will now have more of an idea of what to change and improve to regain her respect, attraction and love.

When it becomes clear to you, don't wait too long to change and then interact with her.

Get the job done.

If you wait too long, she will almost certainly begin to move on.

5. Don't tell her that she means everything to you and you will be lost without her

[image: Don't tell her that she means everything to you and you'd be lost without her]

Sometimes a guy might try to persuade his woman to change her mind about the break up by saying something along the lines of, â€œYou mean the world to me. Everything I've ever done is to try and make you happy. Can't you see that? Please baby, I need you so much. You're the most important thing in my life and without you, my life just wouldn't be worth living.â€

He hopes that she will realize how important she is to him and then change her mind.

Yet, it almost never works out that way.

Why?

Although a woman appreciates it when a guy is devoted to her, loves and respects her as his woman, she doesn't want to take on the role of being his sole purpose in life, or his main reason for living.

So, when a guy is saying that he needs her and would be lost without her, rather than feel flattered by his neediness, she feels turned off by it.

The reality is that a woman wants to be with a man who is happy, confident and forward moving in his life, with or without her support, approval or guidance.

She doesn't want to feel as though he would fall apart without her.

So, if a woman gets a sense that she needs to support a guy emotionally by always being reassuring, she can never fully relax and be a feminine woman (i.e. emotionally unpredictable, occasionally illogical, throw a tantrum to test his confidence, change her mind like the weather) around him.

If she has to be like a masculine man (i.e. emotionally stable and strong, reassuring, logical, certain), she will feel unhappy to her core and that's not how she wants to feel when in a relationship with a man.

So, if a guy says that she means everything to him and he'd be lost without her, she naturally pulls away from him even more.

This is why, if you want her to be your girl again, you need to genuinely feel happy about your life without her today.

When you interact with her and she senses that you are confident and happy without her, it makes her feel like she doesn't have to keep her guard up around you.

Yet, if you come across in a way that suggests you are lost, lonely and sad without her, she will sense that you need her back to feel better about yourself.

As a result, she will put her guard up around you and remain closed off to you.

6. Don't promise to wait as long as it takes for her to change her mind

[image: Don't promise to wait as long as it takes for her to change her mind]

That's something a character will say in a movie and it's nice for a movie, because you will see the couple go through all sorts of challenges while apart from each other and then get back together at the end of the movie.

How sweet.

Yet, in real life, promising to wait as long as it takes for your ex to change her mind doesn't make her come running back to you at the end of the movie.

Why?

If your woman has broken up with you, then it's almost certainly because she no longer feels enough respect, attraction and love to be with you anymore.

Time away from her isn't going to change that either, especially when she can easily meet a new man who will make her feel the kind of respect, attraction and love she is looking for.

Here's the thing!

When it comes to getting an ex back, action is what works.

You've got to take action and guide her through the ex back process, rather than waiting around for an ex (who no longer has enough feelings for you) to come running back.

Additional Mistakes That Can Turn Her Off During and After the Break Up

1. Bombarding her with texts after the break up

[image: Bombarding her with texts after the break up]

Sometimes a guy assumes that if he stays on his ex's mind with regular texts, she will be less likely to forget about him and move on.

Yet, in most cases, his constant or regular texting annoys her.

If it annoys her enough, she might block his number on her phone and even unfriend him on social media, which then makes it difficult for him to get her back.

So, what should you do?

While it's fine to send some texts after a break up, the best way to make her enjoy interacting with you is on a phone call or in person.

That might feel like it's too much to ask of her after a break up, but it's what works.

2. Sending her soppy, romantic texts about your feelings after the break up

Although that kind of approach might work in some movies, in real life, it just makes a guy look needy, wimpy and desperate.

As a result, it turns a woman off and makes her feel as though he has lost a lot of the confidence and emotional masculinity that she originally fell in love with.

So, if you pour your heart out to your ex in an overly sentimental way, rather than making her think, “Wow! This is sooooo romantic! I always wanted him to be lovey-dovey with me,” she’s simply going to wonder why you’ve become so desperate and needy all of a sudden.

Since women aren’t attracted to neediness and desperation in men, the soppy romantic texts will turn her off and make her feel happy about her decision to break up with you.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Appearing to be sad, lonely or dejected in social media posts

Sometimes a guy will use social media (e.g. Facebook, Instagram or Snapchat) as a way of letting his ex see how sad he’s been since the break up.

Secretly, he hopes that when his ex sees how sad he’s been feeling without her, she will feel sorry for him and come running back to him to make him feel better.

That can work if a woman is still in love with her ex, has been missing him and wants to get back with him.

Yet, in almost all cases, a woman has lost her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her ex, so seeing him looking sad, lonely and desperate just turns her off even more.

It also helps convince her that she’s probably better off without him because he’s clearly not an emotionally strong man who can handle himself under pressure.

Instead, he’s a needy guy who seeks pity from friends, family and potentially from her on social media.

That’s not attractive to a woman.

So, if you want your ex back, make sure you don’t turn her off by appearing sad, lonely and helpless without her in anyway on social media or in person.

Instead, if you intend using social media to get her attention, do it in a positive way.

Post up photos of yourself having fun with other people where you look confident, happy and included.

That makes women feel respect and attraction for a guy because women know that it takes a lot of emotional strength to immediately bounce back after a break up and live a happy, confident life.

4. Completely cutting off contact and just waiting and hoping that she changes her mind

That can sometimes work if a woman is still in love with her ex and secretly wants him back.

He doesn’t contact her, she worries about losing him and then contacts him and tries to get the relationship back together.

Great.

Yet, in almost all ex back cases where a guy needs help to get his ex woman back, she isn't still in love with him and secretly hoping to get back with him.

Instead, she has lost so much respect, attraction and love for him that she wants to break up and try to move on without him.

So, waiting for weeks, months and in some cases even years for your ex to change her mind rarely works.

Here's the reality!

If you're not actively doing anything to change her feelings for you, then she's probably not going to suddenly start wishing that you and her could get back together just because you've been ignoring her.

Instead, she will begin to forget about you, move on and fall in love with a new man.

Then, by the time you build up the courage to contact her, rather than being happy to hear from you, she might say something along the lines of, "Why are you contacting me now? We've been broken up for a long time. I'm in a new relationship, I'm happy again and that's the way I want to keep it. So, please stay out of my life and don't call me again. Goodbye."

I feel sorry for guys who get that type of reaction from their ex woman, after using a no contact approach on her.

It simply doesn't work on the majority of women.

So, if you want your ex to be your girl again, don't take the risk of ignoring her for weeks or months.

If you do that, she will probably move on and not want to get back with you again.

If you want her back now or within the next week, call her on the phone and then arrange to meet up with her in person, so you can fully reawaken her feelings for you.

When she is feeling new sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you, she will naturally want to change her mind and open up to you to see where things go.

Yet, if you just cut off communication and wait, she probably won't take the risk of contacting you (in case you reject her) and will likely try to make herself feel better by hooking up with a new guy.

How to Deal With an Evasive Ex Girlfriend

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here 5 things you can do to change your ex girlfriend's evasive behavior and get her to be more open and willing to give you another chance.

1. Stop giving her the impression that you're chasing a relationship

[image: Stop giving her the impression that you're chasing a relationship]

Chasing a relationship is the #1 thing that will cause an ex girl to be evasive, cagey or unclear when interacting with you.

Evasive (adjective): Tending to avoid commitment. Answering questions in a way that is not direct or clear, especially because the person does not want to give an honest answer.

From her perspective, she has broken up with you and most likely wants to remain broken up.

As a result, if you're asking whether or not she will give you another chance, or if you're pushing for a committed relationship, then she might decide to be evasive with her answers rather than telling you the truth.

The reality is that you CAN make her regret her decision to break up with you and then want you back, but you won't achieve that by seeming to only be interested in getting her to commit to a relationship with you.

If you are pushing for a relationship before you make her want you back, then she will almost certainly continue to be evasive with you.

Unfortunately, when gets dumped by a girlfriend that he is still in love with, he will usually feel a lot of emotional pain and want to get her back right away to make himself feel better.

He might also begin to worry about her opening herself up to new guys (dating, kissing, having sex), which can cause him to panic and try to rush the process of getting her back into a committed relationship with him.

So will text, email, call or attempt to see her in person to discuss the relationship and try to work things out.

From her perspective the relationship is over, so there's nothing left to discuss.

Yet, from his perspective, he is still in love with her, still wants a relationship, knows that he can change or fix whatever she wants and therefore, there are many things that still need to be discussed.

As a result, he might say to her, "Why won't you just talk about what happened so we can work things out?" or, "I'm prepared to do whatever it takes to make things right between us again" or, "Just give me a chance to talk to you. I want to work things out. We can make this work."

Yet, rather than making her think, "Wow! He's clearly ready to fix things so that we can get back together. Okay, well I will discuss everything with him so we can get back together" she pulls away and tries to avoid him (i.e. she becomes evasive, hard to reach).

So, while her ex is trying hard to get her to commit to giving the relationship another chance, she may be thinking things like, “Why is he trying to pressure me into doing something that I don’t want right now? Doesn’t he get it that I have broken up with him?”

She may even begin to feel annoyed that he hasn’t yet realized that if he wants her back, he has to be able to make her feel a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for him, rather than trying to push for a relationship because he wants it, or because he is sorry and is promising that he’ll do better.

Always remember: When getting a woman back, you need to focus on making her feel new sparks of respect, attraction and love for you.

In other words, it’s about her feelings, not yours.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys never realize that until it’s too late, so they keep pushing for a relationship when the woman just isn’t feeling enough respect, attraction and love for him to want it.

Without those feelings, she remains guarded and behaves in an evasive way towards her ex.

So, the way to deal with your evasive ex girlfriend is to first make sure that you’re not putting any pressure on her to commit to the idea of a relationship.

Next, you need to change your approach so that every time you interact with her on the phone or in person, you are sparking new feelings of sexual and romantic attraction inside of her.

You can do that by flirting with her, remaining confident no matter how difficult she is being to make you lose confidence, making her laugh and smile when she talks to you, being masculine in your vibe, energy, conversation style and behavior so she feels feminine and girly in comparison to you and so on.

On that note!

2. Start using humor to get her enjoying interactions with you, rather than making her dread interactions or avoid them altogether

[image: Start using humor to get her enjoying interactions with you]

Imagine this!

Every time a guy interacts with his ex girlfriend, he tries to get into a deep discussion about the relationship to hopefully patch things up between them.

This becomes exhausting for the woman and she then begins to dread interacting with him, or she starts trying to avoid him or ignore him.

Alternatively, imagine that a guy always asks his ex girlfriend what she’s been doing and who she’s been hanging out with since they broke up.

He might also regularly ask her if she’s seeing anyone else.

As a result, she may begin to feel like he is jealous, insecure or trying to control her, which will cause her to resent him and feel turned off by him.

She might then think something like, “It’s none of his business how I choose to live my life now. I’m not his girlfriend anymore, so why should I have to explain myself and tell him everything I’ve been doing and who I’ve been doing it with? It’s starting to get annoying.”

If he keeps asking, she might eventually snap at him and tell him to mind his own business, which can then lead to accusations of cheating or an argument, which will then push them further apart. This is why, you need to make sure that your interactions with your are fun and enjoyable, so she naturally feels motivated to talk to you and see you.

For example: If a guy called his ex girlfriend and she rudely said, â€œWhat do you want?â€ he could laugh and say (in a joking manner), â€œFor you to come over and make me a sandwich. Iâ€™m hungryâ€ and then have a laugh with her.

She might initially feel a bit pissed off (she was already pissed off at the start of the call), but since he had the balls to make a joke in a moment like that while still being a good man about it (i.e. he said it in a light-hearted, easy-going, joking manner), she will naturally feel some respect and attraction for him, even if she doesnâ€™t openly admit it.

When it comes to interacting with women, you always have to remember that they love balls.

Women canâ€™t go around openly admitting it, because it would result in men being too ballsy to the point of possibly being very arrogant, but just have a look at the men who women lust after the most and you will notice that the guy has balls (i.e. he isnâ€™t afraid of women, he remains confident and masculine regardless of what people say or do around him).

As I explain in the video above, if you fear a womanâ€™s reaction, she wonâ€™t feel attraction.

So, donâ€™t ever be afraid to joke with a woman, especially when she is pissed off to begin with.

For example: If a guy called his ex girlfriend and she rudely said, â€œWhat do you want?â€ he could laugh and say (in a joking manner), â€œFor you to come over and make me a sandwich. Iâ€™m hungryâ€ and then have a laugh with her.

She might then say, â€œUmm, we are broken up. Iâ€™m not making you a sandwichâ€ and he can then laugh and say, â€œI know, but you canâ€™t blame a man for trying, especially when you make such great sandwiches. If you canâ€™t make me a sandwich, how about a coffee?â€

Obviously, he would say that in a light-hearted, easy-going and playful manner, while also being serious about it at the same time.

He could add, â€œWe should catch up just as friend to say hi. Iâ€™m sure weâ€™re mature enough to do that, right? You can handle it. Letâ€™s catch up sometime this week for a coffee. Iâ€™m going to be busy on Monday and Wednesday, but Iâ€™m got time available on Tuesday and Thursday. Which of those days are best for you? Weâ€™ll catch up for a quick coffee to say hi.â€

If she reacts in an evasive way and says, â€œI donâ€™t knowâ€ then he can say, â€œWell look, letâ€™s say 7pm on Tuesday. If you canâ€™t make it, I wonâ€™t be mad. Itâ€™s fine, but I think it would be good to catch up as friends to say hi.â€

If she says, â€œNoâ€ he can always use the line that Iâ€™ve had many clients test over the years, which almost always gets a meet up locked in, even with the most stubborn of ex girlfriends.

That is, â€œOkay, I tell you what. Letâ€™s catch up for a coffee as friends to say hi. If you decide that you never want to speak to me again after that, then I promise and you have my word that Iâ€™ll never contact you again. So, if you like, it can be a chance to say goodbye as friends in a mature way and then never speak to each other again. Letâ€™s catch up for a quick coffee on Tuesday, alright?â€

Almost all women say yes to that and then, at the meet up, you re-attract her, seduce her and make her want to see you again.

Therefore, you don't have to never contact her again because she actually wants to be in contact with you and see you again.

3. Make sure that you're not trying to achieve everything via text

[image: Make sure that you're not trying to achieve everything via text]

In today's world, the vast majority of interactions between people happen digitally (e.g. via text, email, social media).

So, when it comes to getting an ex girlfriend back after a break up, a guy might assume that he can achieve most of it via text.

Yet, here's the thing!

When a woman is in love with her boyfriend and is happy in a relationship, she will enjoy hearing from him via text, even if it's just a quick text to say Hi, or a text about something random.

Yet, when a woman dumps her boyfriend, she will usually disconnect from her positive feelings for him (e.g. love, attraction) and focus on the negative ones (e.g. disappointed in him for becoming so insecure near the end of the relationship, annoyed at how he treated her during the relationship, turned off by how he behaved leading up the break up, during it and afterwards, angry that she wasted her time with him).

As a result, she won't really be very happy to be texting back and forth with him all the time.

Additionally, if he keeps texting, she may begin to close up and become suspicious of his motives (e.g. if he says that he doesn't want her back, but then texts her every day, or if he tries to be there for her after the break up by being a good friend).

If she senses that his actual intentions are to hopefully get her back, she will naturally start to close up and keep her guard up when interacting with him.

She may even get to the point where she starts ignoring him, or in some cases, blocks him for a while so she can move on with a new guy first, before unblocking him.

So, although texting an ex girlfriend is perfectly fine, trying to go from being broken up to back together again without including phone conversations or face-to-face meet ups is not a good idea.

If you only text, it can make an ex girlfriend feel as though you're not serious enough about getting her back, you're just texting to make yourself feel better, or that you don't have the balls to call her, or suggest catching up with you in person, which will make her feel turned off.

Additionally, she can easily misinterpret your texts as being needy, insecure or rude, even if you're actually being confident, relaxed, or sincere and easy-going when you send them.

Since she can't look you in the eye, assess your body language, or at least hear the tonality of your voice, then she will almost certainly think the worst (i.e. you're desperate for her, you're trying to manipulate her, you're just acting like a friend and hoping that she eventually says she wants you back, you don't have the balls to call her).

This is why, if you want your ex girlfriend to stop being so evasive, you should aim to complete the majority of the ex back process on a phone call and then in person.

On a phone call, she can sense your confidence (via your tonality, the way you respond, the pace at which you speak, what you are comfortable talking about) and in person, she can see it and experience it right in front of her.

When you re-attract your ex on a call (audio or video) or in person, she naturally starts to feel drawn to you again and open to interacting with you further.

When that happens, she automatically stops wanting to avoid you and starts to want to interact with you more to see how she feels.

You can then fully reactivate her feelings and get her back.

Yet, if you just text, she will almost certainly get bored or annoyed with it and end up ignoring you or temporarily blocking you so she can have space to move on with new guys.

Remember: Texting is fine if you want to open the lines of communication with your ex (especially if she's being evasive and won't take your calls or agree to meet up with you right away), but it's not the solution to fix everything and get her back.

At some point (sooner than later), you need to take things to the next level and get her on a call and then to a meet up, so you can fully reactivate her feelings for you.

So, if you haven't already done so, stop texting your ex and

4. Attract her on a phone call or in person and then don't contact her again for a week

[image: Attract her on a phone call and then don't contact her again for a week]

Since your ex girlfriend has become evasive, the best approach to use is to re-attract her (so she wants you back) and don't contact her for a week, so she misses you.

If she contacts you during that time, then answer, respond and get to another catch up.

Yet, if she doesn't contact you, just leave her and let her miss you and really hope that you contact her again.

Then, when you contact her, she will be happy to hear from you and keen to meet up.

Of course, not all women are the same and sometimes, if you don't contact a woman for a week, she won't immediately answer your texts or calls.

Don't give up if that happens.

Just understand that sometimes, a woman doesn't want to appear to desperate or keen, so she will pretend to be busy.

Alternatively, sometimes a woman will want to see that her ex boyfriend is willing to contact her again if she doesn't answer, so she can see that he is serious enough about getting her back.

However, don't be afraid to re-attract her, make her want you back and then not contact her for a week so she is missing you and wanting you back.

When she can't really sleep at night because she's thinking about you and missing you, a woman will almost always give in and contact you.

If she doesn't, you can bet that she will smile and be happy and excited when you do contact her.

Important: Make sure that you interact with her, re-attract her and make her feel desire for you before you stop contacting her for a week.

If you just suddenly stop contacting her when she isn't attracted and wanting you, then she's almost certainly not going to care.

Some of the many ways that you can re-attract your ex girlfriend during interactions are by:

- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you, rather than acting just a friend.
- Being prepared for when she tests your confidence (e.g. by being cold, bitchy, acting bored with you), so you don't begin doubting yourself and reacting in an insecure way. When she can see that you are able to remain confident no matter what she says or does, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you, even if she doesn't openly admit it.
- Making sure that you feel worthy of her, rather than beginning to act like a rejected guy who isn't good enough for her.
- Using playfully challenging humor, so she feels excited, challenged and turned on, rather than just using nice, polite, sweet or cute humor. An example of playfully challenging humor is if she texts you, â€œDo you miss me?â€ and you then reply, â€œHang on. Who's this? What's your name again?â€ or, â€œOnly as much as you've missed meâ€ or, â€œI miss your cooking, but I don't miss youâ€ and with that last one, add a smiley face with the tongue sticking out, or a laughing emoji.
- Showing her via your attitude, conversation style, behavior and the way you respond to what she says and does, that you're now a new and improved man that she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love again, rather than continuing to make the same old attraction mistakes as you did before, which lead to her losing interest and wanting to break up.

Once you've reawakened her feelings and she seems relaxed, interested and happy to be talking to you again, you can say something along the lines of, â€œAnyway, I've got to go now, but it was good talking to you/seeing you again. Maybe we can do it again sometime,â€ and then end the text chat, hang up the phone, or get up to leave if you're seeing her in person (obviously after you and her have both said goodbye of course).

From there, cut off contact with her for a week to give her time to really miss you and regret not trying to arrange to see you again.

During that time, she might text to see if you respond, or call you and hope that you answer.

Alternatively, she might just wait for you to contact her again.

Many women do wait because they're worried that their ex boyfriend will reject them and if that happens, she is then the one being dumped and left behind.

So, regardless of what happens (i.e. she contacts you or not), after a week is up, you need to call her again, make her feel sparks of attraction and then arrange to see her in person so that you can get her back for real.

If you ignore her for longer than a week, you run the risk of making her think that you're not interested in her anymore, or that you don't know what else to do to get her back.

In most cases, a woman will then try to move on by hooking up with new men to make herself feel better.

So, don't leave it longer than a week.

When you do contact her again, make sure that you

5. Let her sense that youâ€¢re not trying to get anything from her (i.e. youâ€¢re not pushing for a relationship) and are fine without her

[image: Let her sense that you're not trying to push for a relationship]

This is important to do with an ex girlfriend who has been evasive to you in the past.

Itâ€¢s not about saying to her, â€¢Hey, Iâ€¢m fine without youâ€¢ or, â€¢I donâ€¢t need you,â€¢ but just letting her sense that based on the fact that you donâ€¢t seem insecure, tense, needy or worried when talking to her.

If she can get that sense from you, then she will be more relaxed and open when talking with you, which will result in a more natural, flowing and fun conversation.

She will feel more comfortable show some interest in you because you're not pushing for a relationship.

[image: She starts showing some interest because you're not pushing for a relationship]

Then, in the process of showing some interest in you, she will be investing herself in the process of getting you back, which then makes it easier for you.

On the other hand, if a woman senses that her ex is struggling in life without her (e.g. he feels lost, lonely, sad, depressed), then she will almost certainly pull away from him more.

Hereâ€¢s the thingâ€¢!

Even though a woman does appreciate it when a guy wants her, she also wants him to be his own man at the same time (i.e. be emotionally independent).

Being emotionally independent means that he can be and is confident, happy and forward moving with or without her in his life.

This is attractive to all types of women, even those who donâ€¢t admit it.

On the other hand, if a woman senses that her ex boyfriend (who she dumped and doesnâ€¢t really want to be with anymore) is lost, depressed and insecure without her (i.e. he is emotionally dependent on her), then she will naturally feel turned off by him.

First and foremost, women arenâ€¢t attracted to emotional weakness and dependence in men.

Secondly, women know that if they get back with a boyfriend who became lost and depressed without her, he will almost certainly become clingy, needy and maybe even controlling in the long run if she got back with him.

So, rather than having to deal with all that, she will be evasive when her ex tries to talk to her to hopefully get her back.

Essentially, she will try to distance herself from him in the hope that he will eventually give up and leave her alone.

In the meantime, she will try to quickly move on by opening herself to dating new men.

This is why, if you want to get your evasive ex girlfriend back, you must show her that even though you still care about her and want her back, you donâ€¢t actually need her back to then be able to live a happy and productive life again.

Of course, as I mentioned, you shouldnâ€¢t tell her that you donâ€¢t need her.

Instead, show her during interactions (via your attitude and the way you talk and behave) that youâre confident, have been living a happy life without her and have making progress on your goals and ambitions.

[image: Let her experience your newfound level of confidence and emotional independence, so she can feel attracted to the new you]

Additionally, let her experience your newfound level confidence and emotional independence, so she can feel attracted to the new and improved you.

One of the ways to let her experience that is by talking to her in a light-hearted, easy-going way that shows youâre not trying to get anything from her.

Of course, it doesnât mean that you donât want her back.

You do want her back and that is fine.

You will get her back as well.

However, with an evasive girlfriend, what she needs to see is that you donât need her to feel confident, happy or to live a productive, forward moving life.

When she senses your non-neediness (i.e. your emotional independence), she will naturally relax her guard and open up to you further, which then allows you to fully re-attract her and get her back.

5 Mistakes to Avoid Making With an Evasive Ex Girlfriend

So, now that Iâve taught you what to do, hereâs what not to do if you want to get your ex girlfriend back.

1. Asking her why she is being so evasive

Sometimes a guy will feel as though he has a right to know why his ex girlfriend is being evasive.

Hereâs the reality thoughâ

A man or a woman does not have to say or do anything in a relationship, or when broken up.

Everything that a man or a woman does is a choice.

For example: A guy can choose to be a good guy, treat his girlfriend well and surprise her sometimes on her birthday.

Yet, he doesnât have to.

Likewise, a woman can love her boyfriend, be loyal to him and always treat him well.

Yet, she doesnât have to.

The same applies to break ups.

A woman can tell her boyfriend why she is being evasive, or she can decide not to.

Itâs totally up to her.

The ex boyfriend doesnât have a right to know.

Instead, it would be good if she told him, but she simply doesnât have to.

So, if an ex boyfriend keeps asking her, âWhy are you being like this?â and so on, his girlfriend may end up feeling very annoyed and pissed off with him.

She might think something like, âHow dare he ask me why Iâm being evasive. Does he think that he owns me or something? Itâ€™s so typical of him to act like a victim and try to make me feel as though Iâ€™m the one who is being a bad person for not opening up to him. Weâ€™ve broken up. Doesnâ€™t he get that? I donâ€™t have to tell him anything. I donâ€™t owe him any explanation other than what Iâ€™ve told him. I can now do what I want now. Itâ€™s my life. He doesnâ€™t own me.â€

As a result, she might then become even more evasive when talking to him, just to prove her point that she can do whatever she wants now.

At the same time, she may be focusing on finding herself a replacement guy as quickly as possible, so she can move on and rub that in her exâ€™s face.

So, if you donâ€™t want to push your ex girlfriend further away than she already is, donâ€™t make the mistake of asking her why she is being evasive, sneaky, cagey, deceptive, vague or ambiguous.

Essentially, donâ€™t go to her with questions like, â€Why are you being like this? Why canâ€™t you just talk straight with me? Letâ€™s clear this up. I want to talk, but youâ€™re avoiding me. Just talk to me.â€

Instead, use interactions that you have with her to make her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you, rather than making her feel like youâ€™re trying to pressure her into getting back with you.

The less pressured she feels when interacting with you, the less evasive she will be.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€|

2. Seeming to be annoyed at her for how long she takes to reply, or at the short replies she gives you via text

Always remember: A man or a woman donâ€™t have to do anything at all in a relationship.

Everything is a choice.

Itâ€™s not mandatory for to reply to you at all.

She can reply quickly, slowly, rarely or never at all.

Itâ€™s totally up to her.

Yet, if you want her to reply faster and want to see you in person, then make sure that your texts make her feel attracted and drawn to you.

Additionally, when you think she is feeling enough attraction and is open to you, proceed to a phone call (audio or video) and attract her further on the call (i.e. flirt with her, make her laugh and smile, let her experience your new and improved confidence).

Then, arrange to catch up in person, so you can then fully re-attract her and get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

So, donâ€™t get annoyed at her texting style, or the speed at which she texts.

Additionally, donâ€™t feel like she owes you anything.

The way to get an ex woman back is to make her feel like she will regret it if she doesnâ€™t give you another chance.

The way to do that is to re-attract her.

Re-attract her, make her want you and then get her back, or re-attract her, make her want you, give her a week of space, contact her again, attract her, arrange a meet up and get her back.

Don't make the mistake of trying to get her back via text and only text.

Most women will get bored of texting their ex boyfriend and either start ignoring him, or will eventually block him.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Using an approach that isn't working and then continuing to do it because you don't know what else to do

[image: Continuing to use an approach that doesn't work]

If a guy continues using the same approach with his ex girlfriend (e.g. being extra nice to her in the hope that she will be more open, acting like he just wants to be there for her as a friend, sucking up to her, trying to discuss his way back into a relationship), he will keep getting the same results, or his results will get worse (i.e. she will ignore him or block him).

This is why, if your current approach to your ex girlfriend hasn't been working, you need to try something new.

You need to level up your ability to attract her, so you can give what I call a Next Level Attraction Experience.

Watch the video below (from 6 minutes, 41 seconds into the video) for some examples!

4. Assuming that she has to be available to you because she's your ex

Sometimes, a guy might think, "After all we've been through together, she owes it to me to at least discuss the relationship. I did so much for her and was always there for her and now she's just turning her back on me. That's just not right. She owes it to me to talk to me."

It seems like he is right, but unfortunately, there is no law that says that woman must talk to her ex boyfriend and discuss the relationship.

The same applies to men who break up with women.

No further explanations are needed from the guy, unless he wants to give them.

This is because you don't ever own your girlfriend and she doesn't own you.

You are both individuals.

You and her were individuals before getting into the relationship, during it and now after it as well.

There is no mandatory obligation to discuss anything.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys who are hurting from a break up tend to forget about that and end up complaining to their ex girl and sometimes even demanding that she discuss the relationship with him

Yet, she doesn't feel like she owes him anything and, she doesn't want to have to explain everything in case he then says, "Okay, I get it. I will change. I will fix all of those things. Please give me another chance. I promise you that I will change."

If she opens herself up to that, he might be able to get her back without having to change and he might then end up dumping her.

So, to avoid all of that, a woman will try to move on, unless she can clearly see that her ex has already changed.

The way to show her that is to interact with her and let her experience the changes in you (e.g. you are so much more confident than before, you are able to flirt with her and create a sexual vibe between you and her to bring the spark back to life, you are more mature and manly in the way you think, feel, talk and behave now).

When she experiences that, she naturally stops being so evasive and begins to open back up to you again.

You can then get her back.

Yet, if you assume that she should make herself available to you just because you and her had a relationship (or because you treated her so well during it), she will feel like you're out of line and will want to show you that you no longer have any control over her.

The next mistake to avoid is!

5. Giving up on her when she eventually goes cold, or you get tired of trying to get a decent response from her

If you're serious about getting your ex girlfriend back, don't just give up because she's not making it easy for you at the moment.

Most women don't initially make it easy to get them back.

Instead, a woman will usually be evasive, stubborn or vague, until her ex can reawaken her feelings for him.

If he can do that, she will feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

Then, she naturally opens back up to him and he can get her back.

So, don't give up and end up missing out on an opportunity to be with the love of your life again.

It's actually a lot easier than you might think.

She Loves Me, But Loves Someone Else More

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 ways to change how she feels about you, so she ends up loving you more and wanting to be with you:

1. Adjust your approach to attraction immediately

[image: Adjust your approach to attraction immediately]

If your approach to attraction hasn't worked in getting her to choose you over another guy, then don't keep using that approach on her.

Change it.

You can't use the same old approach to attraction that you used in the past and expect her to be excited about it.

She's not going to be.

Your approach might have worked when you first met her, but things have changed.

There's someone else in her life who is making her feel a more powerful type of respect, attraction and love for him.

You need to beat that by offering her the type of attraction experience she really wants, but will never tell you about.

When you adjust and upgrade your approach to attraction, she will feel more attracted to you than she ever has before.

So, don't make the mistake of using your old approach to attraction and hoping that it will work.

For example: Imagine a guy who uses an outdated, nice guy approach to attraction.

*This is probably not what you did of course, but it's a good example to help you realize where other guys go wrong with a woman when trying to make her love them.

So, he tries to re-attract his girlfriend and make her love him more, by buying her gifts.

He thinks something like, "That's how I got her to fall in love with me in the first place, so it has to work now. I'll show her how much she means to me by buying her things and she will realize that I care way more about her than the other guy does. Then, she will fall in love with me again. She will know that no other guy will treat her the way I do."

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that while he's trying to impress her with gifts, the other guy is making her feel like a sexy, desirable woman in his presence by attracting her in ways that actually matter to her the most (e.g. he is making her feel girly in comparison to his masculine vibe, using playfully challenging humor to make her feel excited around him, flirting with her with build up sexual tension that she then wants to release with kissing and sex).

So, from one guy she gets a bunch of flowers that make her feel appreciated, but the other guy makes her feel turned on, excited and attracted.

For the nice, sweet guy, she may feel a friendly type of love, but for the guy who knows how to turn her on (and who is most likely being a good guy to her), she feels sexual and romantic love for him.

As a result, she's more likely to choose the other guy to be in a relationship with, than to stick with a guy she perceives as being a boring and predictable.

This is why, if you want your woman to love you and want you more, then you've got to try something new in terms of your approach to attraction.

If you're not sure what you could possibly change about your approach to attraction, ask yourself, When I'm interacting with her

- Do I make her feel respect and attraction for me by maintaining my confidence around her regardless of what she says or does to make me doubt myself, or do I turn her off by being insecure and unsure of myself?
- Do I make her feel feminine and girly by being emotionally masculine around her, or does she feel like the more dominant one because I let her lead the dynamic between us?
- Do I make her laugh, smile and feel relaxed around me, or does she feel tense, annoyed or bored?
- Do I make her feel the need to impress me and maintain my interest (what a woman really wants), or do I put in most of the effort to impress her and maintain her interest (not what a woman really wants)?
- Do I make her look up to me and feel proud to call me her man, or do I act and behave in ways that make her look down on me or feel embarrassed to be associated to me?
- Do I flirt with her to build up sexual tension between us, or do I normally talk to her like a friend?
- Do I laugh at her (in a loving way) when she brings up my past mistakes and blames me for the break up, or do I put myself down and feel unworthy of her?

If you are behaving in an attractive way, she is naturally going to feel attracted to you and drawn to you.

Yet, if the majority of your subtle behaviors are turning her off, or dulling her attraction for you, then she's not going to feel like she is in love with you.

She may love you as a friend, or as an ex boyfriend, but she won't be in love with you to the point where she wants to be with you and only you.

If you want to change her mind, then you need to change how she feels.

[image: Adjust your approach to attraction immediately]

From now on, focus on adjusting your approach to attraction, so you are able to make her feel the way she really wants to feel when with a man.

If you do that, then she will naturally want to be with you and only you.

However, if you keep doing what you've done before, then she will naturally love the other guy more if he is able to give her the kind of attraction experience she really wants.

Another way to change how she feels about you and about him is to

2. Shock her by attracting her in new and exciting ways

[image: Shock her by attracting her in new and exciting ways]

For example:

- If you have become insecure, needy and clingy, then start being more confident and emotionally strong all of a sudden. Regardless of what happens or what she says or does when you interact with her, just maintain your composure and show her that youâ€”re now the kind of man she can rely on to be a man no matter what. This will shock her and surprise her in a positive way.
- If youâ€”ve been treating her like just a friend lately, then start making her feel like a feminine woman around you (i.e. be a lot more masculine in the way you talk, think, feel, behave and act). Women are naturally attracted to masculinity, so donâ€”t hide it. If you are just neutral with her because youâ€”re afraid to be masculine, then she wonâ€”t feel like a feminine woman when interacting with you. If the other guy makes her feel more feminine, she will naturally love him more.
- If youâ€”ve allowed her to walk all over you and call the shots, start taking the lead and be more manly and in charge around her from now on. Itâ€”s not about being overly domineering or demanding or anything like that. Instead, itâ€”s about embracing your role as the man (i.e. the one who is more dominant). You donâ€”t have to get your way all the time. Instead, you need to start taking the lead and getting her to do some of the things you want her to do.
- If youâ€”ve been taking her for granted up to now, start pulling your weight and show her that you love and appreciate her. Donâ€”t make the mistake of going overboard though and being super nice, to the point where she sees you as being desperate. Just be more loving, appreciative and warm with her.
- If youâ€”ve been unmotivated about your future, set yourself some big goals and start making progress towards achieving them. You donâ€”t have to achieve everything or anything. Just start making progress. Let her see that you are now a more driven, ambitious man and are actually starting to make progress in the direction of your biggest dreams, goals and ambitions.

When she can see that youâ€”re now the kind of man she can look up to, respect and feel attracted to, she will naturally begin doubting her overall feelings for the other guy.

This can result in her thinking something like, *â€”I never realized what an amazing guy he really is. Yes, he made some mistakes, but lately I see that he is everything I really want in a man. I thought I couldnâ€”t love him like this, but I do. I just want to be with him.*â€”

She then opens up to you with a warm, excited, loving heart and just wants to explore her new feelings with you.

As long as you know how to maintain and build on her attraction, she will be yours for life.

Yet, Iâ€”m not done with helping you yet.

Hereâ€”s another way to change how she feels about you and himâ€”!

3. Stop trying to discuss her feelings

[image: Stop trying to discuss her feelings]

You canâ€”t discuss a woman into loving you more than another guy, so donâ€”t do it.

Of course, many guys donâ€”t realize that.

So, if a guyâ€”s woman says that she loves him, but loves someone else more, he will naturally want to discuss it with her to find out why.

Yet, hereâ€¦s the thingâ€¦!

Asking a woman about her feelings when she says she loves you but loves someone else more, is putting her in a difficult position.

To begin with, she might not know why she loves the other guy more.

She just knows that she feels more respect, excitement and attraction when sheâ€¦s with him compared to you.

She canâ€¦t put her finger on it, or explain it in words.

Itâ€¦s just a feeling to her.

Additionally, when you ask a woman if she still feels attracted to you or loves you, she will feel turned off if she senses that youâ€¦re feeling insecure or rejected.

Watch thisâ€¦!

This is why you should always believe in yourself no matter what a woman says or does, because at least then, you are displaying the type of confidence that women naturally find attractive in men (i.e. what I call Independent Confidence. This is where you feel confident no matter what people say or do around you).

Another part of this is that a woman doesnâ€¦t want to explain why she feels the way she does about the other guy, in case you start behaving more like him to hopefully make her want you.

If you do that, she may see your behavior as fake, forced or manipulative, which will then turn her off and cause her to put her guard up with you.

Essentially, she just wants you to understand how to attract her, without having to ask her all about it, so she can see that the changes in you are genuine, real and something that you are naturally doing because you are growing into your masculinity as a man.

This isnâ€¦t something you should tell her though.

Donâ€¦t tell her something like, â€¦Iâ€™m really trying toÂ change. Itâ€™s a journey for me and I will become the kind of man you want. Just give me a chance and I will show you.â€¦

A woman doesnâ€¦t want to hear that.

She just wants you to do it and not say anything about it because she doesnâ€¦t want you desperately changing for her.

A woman wants to see you naturally developing as a man, without having to discuss it all with her.

If you can do that, she will automatically feel drawn to you and attracted to you in new and exciting ways.

She can then begin to think things like, â€¦Wowâ€¦I really thought I was more in love with someone else, but now Iâ€™m not so sure anymore. Maybe I made a mistake because I now know that I love him. I donâ€™t want to lose him.â€¦

She then opens herself up to you and wants to explore her newfound feelings of love for you and the other guy gets pushed into the background, or in some cases, completely dumped and left behind.

This is why you shouldnâ€¦t try to discuss her feelings in the hope of discussing your way into a committed relationship with her.

It wonâ€¦t work.

Instead, you need to every interaction that you have with her from now on, to make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you, so she can then naturally feel like she is more in love with you than him.

Another way to change how she feels about you and him is to

4. Don't see the other guy as being better than you in any way

[image: Don't see the other guy as being better than you in any way]

One of the fastest ways to make a woman lose respect and attraction for you is to see the other guy as being more attractive or valuable than you.

By doubting your value and attractiveness, you literally push her into his arms because he seems like the more confident one, which is what women want.

So, never, ever doubt yourself.

Ever.

Always see yourself as being better than other guys, no matter what.

It's not something that you need to say out aloud, because if you do, people will put you down and call you arrogant.

Instead, it's something you should feel.

When you feel that way about yourself, you naturally think, talk, behave and act in the way that women find most attractive (i.e. you have Independent Confidence).

You have an air about that essentially says, I know you want me, but I don't need to make it obvious because it's already obvious. You love me.

You may have seen guys who have the type of air about them and noticed how the prettiest, sexiest women gravitate towards him like a magnet.

It's not something that women will openly admit or talk about, but just pay attention and you will see that guys who have that type of confidence are chick magnets.

So, if you make the mistake of seeing the other guy as being better than you (e.g. because he has bigger muscles than you, has more money, is more successful than you, is taller, has cooler friends, lives in a better neighborhood), then it will naturally start to show in your conversation, vibe, actions and behavior.

She will sense it and it will turn her off to the core.

As a result, you'll simply end up pushing her into the other guy's arms and causing her to love him more than you.

The reality is that women are turned off when a guy feels inferior to other guys in terms of attractiveness.

Women don't want guys going around saying, I'm the best. Women love me but they want a guy to feel like that about himself.

So, don't make the mistake of sitting around thinking about the other guy as being better than you.

Being insecure like that is not going to help you re-attract her and make her fall more in love with you.

You've got to be confident and know that you are better than him, regardless of what good qualities he has in comparison to you, or how positively she speaks of him.

You've got to realize that you are a great man in your own right, regardless of what the other guy is like.

No, you're not perfect, but neither is he.

When you accept and believe that you are more than good enough to be her man, then the idea of her currently loving him more won't bother you anymore.

You will realize that you can easily make her choose you over him based on who you are as a man from now on (e.g. confident, emotionally strong, emotionally masculine, determined, loving and attentive).

So, don't worry about him, because he is nothing compared to you and who you will become in the following days and weeks ahead.

You will win.

She will be yours and he will be history.

Another way to change how she feels about you and him, is to

5. Don't give her the impression that you are in a competition for her love with the other guy

[image: Stop giving her the impression that you are in a competition for her love]

To display the right type of confidence that will attract her and make her love you more, you need to behave as though you have already won.

That's how champions behave and it's how you should always behave with women.

Don't try to win women over.

Believe that you have already won a woman over and then act in accordance with that belief (i.e. talk to her in a confident way, flirt with her, move things forward without fearing rejection).

When you believe that you have already won a woman over, you will naturally exude the type of confidence that women find irresistibly attractive.

Of course, women don't go around telling men that secret because they don't want guys acting arrogant.

Yet, the guys who have that type of confidence are always the most attractive to women, as long as the guy doesn't go around saying that he thinks all women like him.

Instead, he just has that confidence in himself and as a result, women are irresistibly attracted to him.

Unfortunately, most guys don't know about this secret of attraction.

So, when a woman tells her ex guy that she loves him, but loves someone else more, he might feel like he has to compete for her love and hopefully try to beat the other guy.

He won't automatically think that he is better because he's not thinking like a champion.

He doesn't know that remaining confident in himself no matter what, will automatically make her feel respect and attraction for him.

As a result, he might:

- Send her a series of texts expressing his love for her and telling her how important she is to him.
- Tell her that no guy will ever love her as much as he does.
- Send her flowers, gifts or cards as a way of expressing his love for her and making her feel that he's more loving and attentive compared to the other guy.
- Make himself available to her 24/7 and runs errands for her to appear more indispensable than the other guy.
- Her her out financially (e.g. by paying her bills, giving her money for rent, buying things for her that she can't afford), to make her see him as being a better provider than the other guy.

Here's the thing though!

Rather than making a woman feel as though he is the right man for her, it just gives her power over her ex that she doesn't really want.

Yet, since he is putting her in the position of power, a woman will sometimes take it on and begin playing him against the other guy, to get what she wants out of both of them (e.g. bills paid by her ex, sex and good times with the new guy, or compliments and expressions of undying love from her ex and exciting love with the new guy who makes her feel the need to impress him too).

If her ex keeps being nice, being there for her, doing things for her and holding onto her even though she isn't being faithful to him, she will naturally begin to lose respect for him.

She will see his behavior as being desperate and wonder if he's just holding on because he has no clue how to attract new quality women to replace her with.

She might then think things like, "I never realized it before, but my ex is an emotionally wimpy and needy guy. I see now that he's not man enough for me at this point in his life. He doesn't know what women really. I know who I love now and I can move on with him, without worrying whether I'm making a mistake by not choosing my ex."

She may then decide to cut things off completely with her ex by saying something like, "I'm sorry, but even though I do love you, I love him more and I have to follow my heart. I think it will be better for all of us if you and I don't talk or see each other anymore. Please don't try to get in touch with me again, because I won't answer anymore. It's for the best. Take care. Goodbye."

Her ex is then left feeling rejected once again and may end up losing a lot of confidence in himself as a result.

He could have caused her to doubt her love for the new guy if he used an attractive approach, but he didn't.

Maybe he thought that it would be rude or arrogant to believe in himself.

Maybe he thought that she would take pity on him.

Maybe he thought that she was the one in the power position and there was nothing he could do about it.

And so on.

Here's the thing!

In a relationship, if you hand your power over to a woman, she just won't be able to respect you anymore.

If a woman can't respect you, then she will struggle to feel sexually attracted to you and without those two things in place, she won't feel like she is in love with you.

If the other guy is making her feel respect and attraction for him, then she will naturally find it easier to be in love with him compared to you and as a result, will say something like, â€œI love you, but I love him more. Iâ€™m sorry.â€

So, don't make the mistake of telling your ex or giving her the impression that you believe you need to fight for her love and hopefully beat the other guy.

Assume that you are already the winner and then, allow the confidence that comes from that to influence how you think, talk, feel, behave and act from now on.

If you do, she will naturally feel more respect and attraction for you, which will cause her to feel more love you.

If she starts feeling more love for you, communicates that to the other guy and he then becomes insecure in any way, then you will suddenly seem like the more attractive and appealing one to her.

5 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Want to Her to Love You More Than Him

Just because she is currently saying that she loves him more, it doesn't mean you can't change that and get her back into a committed relationship with you.

You can.

However, you have to approach the ex back process correctly from now on.

To do that, make sure that you avoid making the following mistakes:

1. Asking her how much she loves him

[image: Asking her how much she loves him]

When a guy is losing his woman to another man that she also loves, he might then ask her how much she loves the other man compared to him.

It seems like a legitimate question, but it's just not something you should ask a woman because it makes you seem insecure about the other guy, which automatically makes him seem more attractive than you.

Additionally, by asking a question like that, it can cause a guy to begin behaving in unattractive ways.

For example: He might suddenly find that he can't stop himself from being clingy or needy (e.g. he bombards her with texts or social media messages to stay on her mind, he keeps coming up with excuses to call her or even see her, he asks her loads of questions about the new guy, he seeks pity from her by letting her see how sad, lost and dejected he now feels).

As a result, she will feel turned off by his behavior, which will naturally make her feel more attracted and in love with the other guy.

What you always need to remember is that insecurity, clinginess and neediness are not qualities that women find attractive in men.

Some women accept it and put up with it for a while, but theyâ€¢re not attracted to it.

Women are always attracted to confidence, emotional independence and emotional strength in men.

So, if you want her to see you as a better option than the other guy, show her by the way you now talk, act, think, behave and interact with her that you really are the better man.

Of course, donâ€¢t give her the impression that youâ€¢re trying hard to compete.

Instead, just know that you are the better man and allow that to naturally influence the way you now talk, act, think, behave and interact with her.

When she experiences the new, more attractive version of you for herself, she will automatically begin feeling drawn to you in new and interesting ways.

Suddenly, the other guy wonâ€¢t seem as interesting and exciting as he used to be and she will feel compelled to see you and hook up with you to assess how she feels afterwards.

2. Asking her why she finds him more attractive, or why she loves him more

[image: Asking her why she finds him more attractive]

Although a guyâ€¢s intentions might be good (e.g. heâ€¢s honestly looking for ways to improve himself, so he can be more attractive to her), a woman is unlikely to view his questions in a positive light.

Instead, she will almost certainly assume that heâ€¢s secretly jealous and feeling inferior compared to the other guy.

As a result, she will lose more respect and attraction for him.

This will automatically cause her to feel more drawn to the other man than she previously was.

So, donâ€¢t put yourself in that situation.

Just relax, maintain your confidence and know that you are a better man than him.

Then, use that confidence to interact with her in a way that makes her feel increasingly attracted to you.

When you do that, she will naturally reconnect with her romantic love for you and want to be with you.

3. Showing her how sad and dejected you feel now

Itâ€¢s totally understandable that a guy might feel unhappy, sad and dejected when he finds out that his woman loves some other guy more than him.

Itâ€¢s understandable, but itâ€¢s not something he should ever show to her.

What a woman wants to see is that a man is able to remain confident and believe in himself no matter what she says or does.

That is irresistibly attractive to women, but itâ€¢s not something they will go around saying because they donâ€¢t want guys overdoing it and acting arrogant.

So, what women do is that they just gravitate towards the most confident guy they can find.

This is why you shouldnâ€¢t show her that youâ€¢re crushed by what she is saying and have been losing a lot of confidence lately.

Showing her your emotional pain will not help you at all.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

4. Trying to get her to make a decision between you and the other guy

[image: Trying to get her to make a decision between you and the other guy]

Even though you might be tempted to say something along the lines of, â€œYou need to make up your mind. Itâ€™s him or me. Who do you choose?â€ donâ€™t do it.

Why?

If you put her in an uncomfortable position like that, she might simply decide to pick him over you because currently, she loves him more than you.

If she chooses him and you then react badly, she might decide to cut off contact with you, which will make it difficult for you to be able to re-attract her and get her back.

This is why, the best approach is for you to use interactions with her to spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile, flirting with her to create sexual tension, showing her that youâ€™re at a different level as a man than you were before), rather than trying to discuss her back into a relationship.

When she feels a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she will feel more love for you.

As a result, she will begin to realize that she actually loves you more than ever before, which will be confusing for her.

Additionally, since youâ€™re not trying to push her into a relationship, she doesnâ€™t have her guard up and isnâ€™t trying to push you away.

So, all she is left with is feeling drawn to you and wanting to see you, which is what she want to do.

Then, when you have sex again, she will experience it at a whole new level because of how much love she feels for you now.

5. Making her feel like she is more valuable than you

Donâ€™t give your ex the impression that you would feel so lucky and honored if she chose you over the other guy.

She doesnâ€™t want that kind of power over you.

Women arenâ€™t attracted to guys who hand over their power, especially when another guy is in the picture.

So, if you want her to be yours and only yours, you need to start looking at yourself as being more than good enough for her.

You are her number one option, but she just doesnâ€™t realize it yet.

She will realize it in the next few days when you interact with her and attract her in new and exciting ways.

Until then, make sure that you believe in yourself no matter what.

Believe that you are the right man for her and the other guy she currently loves, just doesnâ€™t compare to you at all.

Thatâ€™s how you need to think about yourself.

Believe it and then, based on that belief, you will naturally exude the type of confidence that women simply cannot resist.

She will suddenly realize that her feelings for you are back and the other guy isn't as appealing to her as she once thought.

4 Examples of What to Say When Your Ex Says it's Over

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

What you say to an ex when she says, It's over can either push her away further, or draw her to you.

Here are 4 examples of what to say that will make her feel drawn to you in different ways

[image: Example 1: Accept her decision to remain friends]

Example #1

Cool, I accept your decision. We're never getting back together and I have no problem with that. All I ask is that we be mature about this and remain friends.

By saying something like that to her, you ease the tension and anxiety that she may be feeling at the moment.

For example: Right now, she might be expecting you to resist her and possibly even cause a scene (e.g. get angry, beg and plead with her to change her mind, promise her you'll do anything to make it up to her if she'll just give your relationship one more chance).

So, when you say you accept the break up and then suggest being friends, she will be relieved that things went so smoothly between you and her.

As a result, she is more than likely to agree to being friends.

Important: When you get her to accept being 'friends' with her, don't act like a friend.

Instead, use the so called 'friendship' as a way to keep the lines of communication open, so you can then re-attract her.

If you're not sure what to focus on to re-attract her, watch the video above for some examples.

Whatever you do, don't just act like a neutral friend with her.

Behave in a way that causes her to feel attracted and see you in a sexual and romantic way.

Where guys go wrong, is that they try to be a nice friend to their ex girl in the hope that she takes pity on him and gives him another chance.

Some guys even go as far as helping their ex girl financially (e.g. paying some or all of her rent or bills) in the hope that she feels like she needs him in her life and has to get back with him because of it.

Yet, in many cases, the girl just accepts the help and moves on with other guys behind his back.

Here's the thing!

If you want to get your ex back, you can't just sit around being Mr. Nice Guy or Mr. Helpful towards her.

You have to actively make her have sexual and romantic feelings for you again by at least flirting with her to build up some sexual tension.

After all, sexual attraction is the main difference between a sexual relationship and a friendship between a man and a woman.

So, by all means be her 'friend' to keep the lines of communication open between you and her, but donâ€™t be a platonic, non sexual friend who pretends that heâ€™s not interested in getting her back.

Actively make her experience new feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you again, by using every interaction you have with her over the phone and in person, to flirt with her and make her smile, laugh and feel excited to be interacting with you.

Thatâ€™s what really works to get a woman back, even if she started out saying that it was over.

[image: Example 2: Joke about finally being free after being trapped in a relationship with her]

Example #2

â€œFinally. I get to be single again. I was trapped in our relationship and now Iâ€™m free.â€œ

Say that to her in a joking way, of course.

Joking with her like that is a great way to show her that youâ€™re not emotionally dependent on her (i.e. you donâ€™t need to get her back to feel confident again, or to feel good about yourself).

When she senses youâ€™re emotional independence, she naturally feels respect and attraction for you, even if she doesnâ€™t want to admit it.

Attraction is an automatic reaction that happens in response to attractive traits being displayed.

Itâ€™s not something that can be switched off.

Many women pretend to not be feeling attracted, to gain power over a guy, but they are actually feeling attracted.

If a guy knows that, then he will remain confident and she will feel even more attracted to him.

If a guy doesnâ€™t know what you just learned above, he will usually doubt himself when a woman isnâ€™t making it obvious that she is feeling attracted.

When she notices that he is doubting himself, she loses attraction for him because he is so emotionally dependent on her behaving in a certain way.

Women are always attracted to emotional independence, so be sure to have the balls to let your ex see that and she will feel some attraction for you.

When she feels some attraction, she naturally feels drawn to you.

Unfortunately, the majority of guys out there just donâ€™t know that.

As a result, when a woman tells her boyfriend that itâ€™s over, a guy might then say something like, â€œNo! Please donâ€™t say that! Donâ€™t you know that you are my life? You are everything to me. I wonâ€™t be able to cope without you. I need you in my life. I love you more than anything. Iâ€™ve never loved a woman the way I love you. Please, donâ€™t do this. Give me a chance.â€œ

Essentially, heâ€™s hoping that she will say something along the lines of, â€œOhh! I never realized how much you loved me and needed me. Well, that changes everything then. Of course I wonâ€™t break up with you. Letâ€™s get back together.â€œ

Yet, obviously thatâ€™s not how it works.

Why?

Women arenâ€™t attracted to neediness, desperation and high levels of emotional dependence from men.

For a woman to truly feel respect and attraction for a man in a relationship, she wants to see that he is capable of being happy, confident and forward moving in his life, with or without her support, approval or attention.

She doesn't want to feel as though he will fall apart without her.

So, by saying that you're happy to be single again (even if it's only in a joking way), you are showing your ex that you're not going to be sitting around feeling sad, lonely and lost without her.

Instead, you feel confident, you feel good about yourself and it seems like you are capable of enjoying your life without her.

Of course, that doesn't mean you don't want her back.

Instead, it means that you're not going to fall apart without her.

She will feel attracted to that, even if she doesn't openly admit it.

Then, if you and her don't end up getting back together right away, her attraction for you will cause her to think about you, miss you and wonder if she's made the right decision to leave you.

She may then begin to think things like, "Why am I suddenly feeling sad about the break up? Why am I missing him? I don't know if I made the right decision. Could I still be in love with him? Maybe I should hook up with him again to see how I feel afterwards. I'm confused, but I know I miss him. Maybe I should give him a chance."

She then becomes open to interacting with you more over the phone and in person and you can then fully reactivate her feelings for you, hook up with her and get her back.

Another example of what to say when your ex says it's over is:

[image: Example 3: Suggest a friends with benefits relationship]

Example #3

"So, when you say it's over, do you mean we're now friends with benefits?"

Then, have a laugh with her about that.

For those who aren't entirely sure, friends with benefits means that you will remain friends, won't get back together completely, but will continue to sleep with each other for a while.

Many couples do that when breaking up and it often leads to them getting back together; especially when they can't find anyone better to replace their ex.

This is why it's always a good idea to jokingly bring up the idea of being friends with benefits.

"So, when you say it's over, do you mean we're now friends with benefits?"

Saying something like that allows her see that you're being a confident, emotionally strong man about the break up.

You're not reacting in all the classic, unattractive ways like other guys (e.g. begging and pleading with her to change her mind, promising her to change if she gives you another chance, asking her what you can do to make her happy, crying to her).

Instead, you have remained confident in yourself and your attractiveness to her and have the balls to suggest being friends with benefits, in a playful, but confident manner.

That is attractive to her.

She might not agree to it right away of course, but because you are making her feel attracted to you based on your behavior as you talk to her, she will go away thinking about it and imagining it in a positive way.

As a result, she will feel sparks of attraction for you and feel drawn to you in new ways.

So, don't be afraid to say something like that to her.

Women always feel attracted to confidence, even though they don't openly admit it.

Guys who don't understand that may think, â What if I make a joke and she gets annoyed with me? What if she then decides she doesn't want to talk to me ever again. Then I won't be able to try and convince her to give me another chance. I have to play it safe and be nice.â

Yet, by playing it safe and being nice, she doesn't feel attracted to him because women aren't attracted to the fear of men.

Women can smell fear in a man a mile away.

It's all over a guy's body language, behavior and the way he speaks to her and reacts to her.

If a guy has the confidence to playfully joke with his woman and make her feel attracted to him because of it, then she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to him.

Yet, if a guy fears his ex woman's reaction, then she will sense it and feel turned off by him.

Why?

It all comes down to why humans feel attracted in the first place.

Women feel attracted to men who can give them a sense of safety, which isn't all about muscles obviously.

Instead, it's about your emotional strength as a man.

Your balls.

Women feel attracted to that because when a man is emotionally strong, it means that he has confidence and high-self esteem.

This can result in him being more self-assured, assertive and determined to go after what he wants in life.

There's no guarantee of him doing that, but emotional strength gives women the sense that he could be one of those guys, which is attractive because it gives her a feeling of safety and security.

It makes her feel like he's not one of those soft, wimpy guys who would be walked all over out there in the world.

Instead, he will stand up for himself, go after what he wants and be able to protect her and provide for her.

Again, a guy doesn't have to have big muscles to give a woman that feeling.

Instead, it's about your emotional muscles.

How strong you are emotionally.

How able you are to handle yourself in the world.

If a woman gets the sense that a guy has emotional strength, she will automatically feel attracted to him, regardless of whether she admits it or not.

On the other hand, if a woman gets the sense that a man is emotionally weak, then she will feel turned off by him, even if she denies it to be nice, or to be politically correct.

When a man is emotionally weak, a woman fears that he will be insecure, self-doubting, have low self-esteem and therefore, lack the strength to follow through and achieve his biggest goals, dreams or ambitions.

She worries that he is the sort of guy who would give up when faced with challenges in his life and therefore, he won't be able to give her that feeling of safety and protection.

So, if you come across insecure and unsure of yourself around your ex, then getting back with you won't feel right to her at all.

Her instincts will be pushing her to continue moving on without you because she will feel like you just can't give her that feeling of safety and protection that all women seek from a relationship with a man.

This is why, joking with her in a way that only a confident guy would (i.e. saying you can be friends with benefits) is a great way to show her that you're not afraid of her and how she might react.

After all, you know that if you say it in a confident way and if continue to behave in a confident way afterwards, she will naturally and automatically be feeling attracted to you, even if she doesn't admit it.

Knowing that causes you to naturally display the type of confident body language and behavior that will make her feel even more attracted to you.

So, it's a positive snowball effect when you get it right.

[image: Tell her that it is only over when you say so and then playfully dump her]

Example #4

â"¢No, it's only over when I say it's over. Okay, it's over – you're dumped. Sorry for dumping you.â"¢

Once again, you say that in a joking way.

Essentially, you're showing her that regardless of how bad things turned out between you and her, you can both still have a laugh together.

This instantly takes a big bite off of any negative feelings that she may be holding towards you.

It makes her see that you and her don't have to be hostile towards each other and can relax and allow the break up to happen in a more positive way.

Of course, that's not the only effect it has on her.

By saying something like that to her, you are taking control of the situation and not allowing her to have power over you, which is attractive to her.

You're not doing it in a mean, controlling, aggressive way or anything like that.

[image: Take control of the situation, but be playful and loving about it]

Instead, you're being confident, playful and taking control of the situation, rather than walking away with your tail between your legs and feeling rejected after she said, â"¢It's over.â"¢

When she sees that you have the balls and the social intelligence to say something like that and still be a good man about it all, she will feel shocked and surprised in a good way.

Additionally, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling feminine and girly in contrast to your masculine approach to the conversation.

As a result, she may begin to wonder something like, â€œHmmmâ€ | why do I feel attracted to him all of a sudden? This is interesting. He is showing me a side to him I really like. Maybe Iâ€™m making a mistake here by breaking up with him. Maybe itâ€™s not too late to give us another chance.

She will then most likely begin to relax her guard and open up to the possibility of hanging out with you as “just friends,” or she might even suggest that there is still a chance for you and her yet.

That then gives you the opportunity to interact with her more often on the phone, or to suggest an in person catch up.

You can then fully reawaken sexual and romantic feelings for you and get her back.

If You Want Her to Change Her Mind, Avoid the Following Mistakes

You actually have a lot of control over what happens between you and your ex from now on.

Essentially, getting her back comes down to you saying and doing the types of things that will make her have strong, sexual and romantic feelings for you again.

When she feels drawn to you in that way, she naturally begins to want you back for her own reasons (e.g. she begins to feel curious about her new feelings for you and wants to explore them, she wants to have sex with you to see how she feels afterwards, she worries that other quality women will find the new and improved you attractive and want to be with you).

As a result, it is a lot easier to get her back because she is open to seeing where things go.

On the other hand, if you say and do things that turn her off and push her away, she is going to want things to remain over.

So, make sure that you maintain your power during the break up, by avoiding making the following mistakes and turning you ex off as a result:

1. Pretending that you just want to be friends and then acting like just a friend

Being friends with your ex is a good thing because it gives you an excuse to call her, text her and see her.

However, don't make the mistake of being her nice, sweet, platonic friend who avoids flirting with her, building up sexual tension and making her want to release the built up sexual tension with kissing and sex.

The difference between a friendship and a romantic, sexual relationship is sexual attraction and sex. Without making her feel sexually attracted and then getting to the point where you and her have sex again, you run the risk of being placed in the friend zone.

So, don't place yourself in the friend zone when you are staying in touch as a friend.

If you do place yourself in the friend zone, she will simply start moving on behind your back and will eventually tell you.

Many guys are shocked to eventually get that dreaded text or phone call, where she essentially says, â€œIâ€™ve met someone new. I really like him and weâ€™re dating now. Please donâ€™t be mad at me. I still want us to be friends.â€

The ex who placed himself in the friend zone, is then left imagining her having sex with the new guy, falling in love with him and moving on.

If you want your ex back, donâ€™t let that scenario happen to you.

Make her feel sparks respect and sexual attraction for you during interactions, rather than pretending that you just want to be her innocent, non-sexual, non-romantic friend.

Of course, itâ€™s totally fine to be friendly towards her, but just make sure that youâ€™re not pretending to be an innocent friend who isnâ€™t interested in her in a sexual or romantic way.

Important: This doesnâ€™t mean, â€œBe her friend, but tell her you want a relationship.â€
No.

It means, â€œBe her friend, but flirt with her and make her feel sexually attracted to you, so she wants to be more than just friends with you.â€

Thatâ€™s how it works.

If youâ€™re just being friendly, she almost certainly wonâ€™t be feeling enough (or any) attraction and as a result, she will seek that feeling elsewhere.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€

2. Asking her if thereâ€™s anything you can do to change her mind

[image: Asking if there's anything you can do to change her mind]

It seems logical that if you want to fix things with your ex, a good approach would be to ask her what you can do to change her mind, right?

That way, youâ€™re less likely to make any mistakes and she will be getting exactly what she wants, right?

Wrong.

Asking a woman what you need to do to make her feel attracted to you again turns her off.

Why?

Most women donâ€™t want to have to teach a guy what he needs to do be the man that she wants.

If she has to tell him how to think, act and behave like a real man, she will feel turned off by his cluelessness about how to attract a woman.

As a result, rather than getting the effect heâ€™s looking for (i.e. her opening up to him again), she pushes him away even more.

She might say something like, â€œI donâ€™t know what to tell you. I canâ€™t explain how I feel. I just donâ€™t feel the way I used to. Itâ€™s over.â€

He might then feel angry and think to himself, â€œWhy canâ€™t she just tell me what to do?

Wouldnâ€™t it make things easier for both of us? She would get what she really wants from a man and I won't be turning her off or annoying her. Why can't she just spell it out for me? She has the answers. Why won't she help me?

In addition to not wanting to be a man's teacher, a woman also doesn't want to have to keep trying to 'make things work' with a guy who doesn't yet understand how to be an attractive man in a relationship with a woman.

Asking her to do that puts pressure on her to be the leader of the relationship, when all she really wants is to just relax and be his woman.

She knows that other men would be able to take on the role of being the man in the relationship, without her having to teach them.

So, she doesn't feel like it's fair that she has to be stuck trying to help her guy 'man up' to create a more enjoyable relationship dynamic.

This is why, if you want to convince your ex to give you another chance, you need to figure out what she wants on your own, without seeking her input or support.

When you figure it out and then make the right adjustments to your approach to her, she will automatically feel a surge of respect and attraction for you.

As a result, she will open up to you and feel drawn to the idea of exploring her new feelings for you.

However, if you ask her what you can do to change her mind, you will almost certainly push her further away and then it will take a lot longer to get her back.

The next mistake to avoid is

3. Being afraid to use humor in case it 'annoys' her

Never forget that women are attracted to BALLS.

It might not be politically correct to say that and it might sound a bit rude or crude to some people, but it's a fact.

Women love balls.

Watch this

So, don't avoid using playfully challenging, or even ballsy humor with your ex out of a fear that she might seem annoyed.

There is a BIG difference between how women react when talking to men and how they actually feel.

For example: A woman will sometimes act annoyed around a man, when secretly, she is feeling turned on, attracted to him and wants him to keep doing what he is doing.

Why do women do that?

Because they love balls.

The only way to find out if you really have balls (i.e. emotional courage, true confidence, masculinity) is to act like they are annoyed and see how you react.

If you react with fear and begin to worry that you've 'stuffed up' for joking around with her, then she sees that you lack balls, which is a turn off.

If you remain confident and don't take her fake annoyance seriously, she may continue to pretend to be annoyed, but secretly, she will respect you and feel attracted to you on a primal level.

That is women for you and it's why so many men are confused by them.

Don't be one of those guys who never gets to truly attract a woman at a primal level.

When you make a woman feel primal attraction, she doesn't want any other guy because she knows how difficult it is to find a man with balls.

In addition to make her feel attracted, light humor is also a great way to create a relaxed, easy-going interaction between you and her, so you feel closer and more open when talking to each other.

If you're afraid to use any humor, then interactions will feel forced, awkward and more importantly, will lack an attractive spark that draws a woman to you.

So, have the confidence to make her laugh and smile when she's interacting with you.

When you do, good things will follow on from there (i.e. her defenses come down, she feels attracted to you, she becomes more open to interacting with you further to see where things go).

Of course, as I mentioned above, she may pretend that she's annoyed with you by saying something like, âHow can you make jokes at a time like this? Why aren't you taking this break up seriously?â

So many guys don't know how to handle that type of reaction from a woman because they're unaware why women behave in that way.

As you would probably know by now after reading this article, a woman essentially wants to see how strong of a man you really are.

If you're strong, she feels attracted, even if she doesn't openly admit it.

If you're weak, she feels turned off and may let you know by saying something like, âLook, this isn't going to work. It's over and you need to accept it and move on.â

So, be prepared for your ex to test your level of confidence and balls to see how you are handling yourself under the pressure of a break up.

If a woman pretends to be annoyed with her ex for making a joke, she will be looking to find the answers to the following type of questions:

- Is he going to crumble under her fake pressure and start apologizing to her for trying to make her laugh?
- Is he going to start doubting his chances with her now, just because she isn't being nice to him?
- Will he change his approach and start being extra nice and sweet to her in the hope that she will be nice to him again?

If he reacts in any of those ways, it will prove to her that he's not really the man she wants to be in a relationship with.

On the other hand, if he just laughs at her in a dominant, but loving way and, in an easy-going, light-hearted manner, he says something like, âHey, there's no need to be so uptight about things. We've broken up, but we're not enemies. We can still have a laugh together,â then she will naturally feel respect and attraction for him, even if she tries to hide it.

He can then build on her feelings and get her back, by continuing to remain confident and using flirting and other attractive behaviors to make her want to be with him.

Some guys are too afraid to do that though, so they decide to 'play it safe' and just be nice, friendly and polite with their ex at all times.

Yet, as you may know, nice guys struggle to get laid or get a girlfriend when dating women because women just don't find that type of behavior a turn on.

So, when a woman has dumped a guy and he then puts on a Mr. Nice Guy act, she isn't going to feel motivated to get back with him.

Of course, it's not about being Mr. Bad Guy and being rude, mean or insulting towards her.

None of that.

Instead, it's about being a good guy with balls.

That's what women really want and what they find most attractive and appealing.

So, don't avoid using humor because you fear it might annoy her.

What will actually annoy her the most is your fear of her.

The reality is that when you fear a woman's reaction, she won't feel attraction.

On the other hand, if you are confident in yourself no matter what, then a woman will feel attracted to you, even if she doesn't openly admit it.

4. Seeming sad, dejected and lost now that she has said something so final like, It's over

When a woman tells her boyfriend that it's over, he might assume that her mind is made up and there's nothing he could ever do to change that.

Naturally, when he thinks like that, he may begin to feel sad, dejected and discouraged.

Yet, that's the worst thing he can do.

Why?

Not only does it keep him stuck in feelings of hopelessness and desperation, it also makes him appear unattractive to his ex (i.e. because women are instinctively turned off by signs of emotional weakness in men. Always remember: Women love balls).

So, don't kill your confidence by thinking that there is nothing you could ever do to change her mind.

You can change her mind, by changing how she feels (i.e. making her feel attracted to you in new ways, making her feel like she would be the one losing out if she doesn't get you back).

When you make her feel that way, she naturally begins to wonder if she has made a mistake by cutting things off with you.

She begins to feel like she will regret it if she doesn't give you and her another chance, because she clearly has feelings for you again.

She will worry that other women will find you so much more attractive now and you may end up meeting a new woman, who you love even more.

If that happens, she will feel like the rejected one and the one being left behind.

As a result, she feels motivated to get back with you, or at least hook up with you again to see how she feels afterwards.

So, don't let her see you appearing to be sad, dejected and lost now that she has said,

It's over.

It's not over.

You are going to get her back.

Should I Ignore Phone Calls From My Ex if I Want Her Back?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

It depends on why she broke up with you and how serious she is about moving on.

For example: Here are 5 possible reactions a woman can have to her ex boyfriend ignoring her callsâ€¦!

1. She will worry that he is over her and then try to get him back to make herself feel better

[image: She will worry that he's over her and then try to get him back to make herself feel better]

In some cases, a woman likes the idea of her ex sitting at home alone, feeling lonely, rejecting and missing her like crazy.

She hopes that he's thinking things like, â€œI want her back so bad. My life feels empty without her. Sheâ€™s probably happy without me. She might even regret ever being with me now. Sheâ€™s probably have sex with some new guy now and enjoying it. Itâ€™s over. I lost her. I donâ€™t know if I will ever find a woman like her again. Hhhhâ€¦I just her back.â€œ

So, if she calls her ex, she expects him to jump at the chance to talk to her again and possibly even say, â€œOh! Itâ€™s you. Iâ€™m happy to hear from youâ€œ and then eventually tell her that he has been missing her and wants her back.

She can then reject him again and walk away feeling good about herself, knowing that her ex is suffering without her.

Yet, if she calls and he doesnâ€™t answer any of her calls, then it can cause her to end up feeling rejected by him.

As a result, she may then begin to wonder things like, â€œWhatâ€™s going on? Why is he ignoring me? Has he met a new girl? Is she prettier than me? Could he possibly be over me already? I thought he loved me.â€œ

It then starts to eat away at her confidence, which can then lead to her doing whatever she can to get him back (e.g. showing up at a place where she knows she will bump into him, arriving unannounced at his house or workplace, sending him a series of texts to spark his interest, liking his posts on social media and leaving positive comments, sending him some photos of him and her back when they were happy).

Now, thatâ€™s a possible good reaction from a woman that will help get her back.

However, it doesnâ€™t always work that way.

For example: Another possible reaction a woman can have to her ex boyfriend ignoring her calls isâ€¦!

2. She will decide to make herself feel better and hopefully get over him by hooking up with a new guy

[image: She will try to make herself feel better by hooking up with a new guy]

As you may know, itâ€™s pretty easy for a woman to get some sex.

All she has to do is get on Tinder, Hinge or some other dating app and hundreds of guys will be willing to go on a date with her right away.

Alternatively, she can go out to a bar or club, have some drinks with friends and openly flirt with other guys.

Hours later, she can be having sex with one of the guys she met at the club.

If she doesn't go for those options, there are always the guys who have a crush on her at work (or university).

In any case, it's easy for a woman to quickly get some sex and help herself to begin getting over her ex.

So, if a woman reaches out to her ex boyfriend by calling him and he never answers, she may decide to make herself feel better by hooking up with a new guy.

She might also think something like, "Well if this is how he wants to be, then that's fine by me. I don't need him anyway. Loads of guys would love to be with me. I'll show him."

She then goes out of her way to get laid and start dating new guys, to remind herself that she is pretty and that she can feel happy with other guys too.

If she happens to meet a guy who makes her feel more attracted and in love than her ex ever did, then she will feel motivated to stick with him.

As a result, her ex will now have a difficult time getting her back.

So, if you don't want your ex hooking up with new guys to get over you, it's always better not to ignore her, or to use what is referred to as the No Contact Rule.

For the record, the No Contact Rule works fairly well for women who want to get a man back because when a man dumps a woman and she doesn't contact him, it can really mess with his ego.

He wants to see if his ex girl is still missing him, so he reaches out to her and if he hasn't been getting laid, he will usually decide to hook up with her for something to do.

As a result, she will kind of get him back, but not really.

On the other hand, when a woman dumps a guy, she won't always care if he is still missing her or not.

Some women do, but many don't.

The majority of women simply move on after dumping a guy and couldn't care less if their ex boyfriend calls them or not.

So, don't make the mistake of thinking that ignoring phone calls from your ex is the magic solution to getting her back.

In most cases, if a woman wants her ex boyfriend back, she will call a few times, but then decide to stop putting herself in a position to be rejected like that.

She will think something like, "Well, I've called him. He knows I've called him. If he wants me back, he'll call me. If he doesn't call me, then I'm going to start moving on."

She then opens herself up to dating new guys, hooking up and moving on.

This is why, you shouldn't just ignore phone calls from her and hope that it will fix everything and get her back.

It many cases it won't.

Here's the thing!

If you actually answer her calls, you then have an opportunity to re-spark her feelings of respect and attraction for you (e.g. by making her smile, laugh and feel good to be talking to you again, flirting with her, letting her sense your confidence and belief in yourself, making her feel girly in comparison to your masculine approach to the conversation), which will then make her want to meet up with you in person.

When you meet up in person, you can then get to a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

On the other hand, if you continue to ignore her, she might simply give up and stop calling you.

She may even decide to ignore your calls from now on too.

It then becomes more difficult to get her back, because you've essentially lost contact with her.

Don't let that happen to you and her.

Answer her calls.

Also, understand that you're actually in a better position than most guys who are trying to get their ex girl back.

She's the one calling you.

She's actually making it very easy for you to re-attract her and get her back.

So, don't waste that chance.

The next time she calls you, make sure that you answer the phone.

On the call, focus on saying and doing the types of things that will make her miss you even more and want to see you again.

For example: Some of the ways you can do that are by!

- Showing her your confidence and emotional strength, especially if she pretends not to be interested in being with you anymore by talking about how happy she is to be single.
- Using humor to ease the awkwardness between you and make her feel calm and relaxed to be talking to you, rather than holding back and being reserved because you think it's not appropriate to joke around with her. Have balls. Women love balls. Don't forget that.
- Flirting with her to create some sexual tension between you, rather than just talking to her like a guy who is no longer interested in having a romantic and sexual relationship with her anymore (i.e. a neutral friend). Don't think that it's not your place anymore to flirt with her. It's always fine to flirt with an ex girlfriend or a girlfriend. Flirting is an innocent way to show sexual interest in each other and to build up sexual tension, so she wants to hook up with you sexually.
- Not giving her too much power over you during conversations or interactions (e.g. by being too nice, doing everything she tells you to do) and instead, letting her see that even though you are being good to her, you still have balls. That makes her feel respect and attraction for you.

The more respect and attraction she feels for you over the phone, the more she will want to experience it in person.

When you meet up with her in person, continue to build on her feelings for you and then, when it feels like the right time, go ahead and hug, kiss, have sex and get back into a relationship with her. You can accomplish all of that within a few days, or sooner if you approach it correctly.

Yet, if you ignore her calls, the ex back process will drag on for weeks and you may end up losing her to another guy.

Another possible reaction a woman can have to her ex boyfriend ignoring her calls isâ□!

3. She will stop calling to avoid making herself look desperate

[image: She will stop calling to avoid looking desperate]

Sometimes, a woman will be missing her ex, thinking about him every day and wondering if she made the right decision by breaking up the relationship.

This can then lead her to build up the courage to call him and see what happens.

If she calls and he doesnâ□□t answer, she may say to herself, â□□Thatâ□□s okay. Heâ□□s probably busy,â□□ or â□□I must have caught him at a bad time. Iâ□□llÂ call again later.â□□

Yet, if she calls him again and again and he never answers, she will almost certainly stop calling because she wonâ□□t want to make herself seem too desperate.

Rather than continue call, a woman will usually wait for her ex to make the next move.

If he has the confidence and courage to call her, re-attract her on the call and then initiate an in person meet up, she will automatically feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for him.

However, if he doesnâ□□t do anything, she might eventually get tired of waiting, block his number and unfriend him on social media so he canâ□□t easily get in contact with her.

She will then open herself up to new guys and try to move on as quickly as she can, so she can get over the pain of the break up.

This is why, itâ□□s very important that you answer the next time she calls you.

Donâ□□t missing out on getting her back by playing too hard to get with her.

Instead, focus on reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you on the call, so you can re-attract her, bring down her defenses, arrange a meet up and get her back.

Itâ□□s a simple, straightforward process and it works.

On the other hand, ignoring her is a complicated, messy process that usually results in a guy missing out on getting his ex girl back.

Another possible reaction a woman can have to her ex boyfriend ignoring her calls isâ□!

4. She will assume that he isnâ□□t interested, respect that and just move on [image: She will assume that he isn't interested, respect that and then move on]

Sometimes a woman will assume that if her ex isnâ□□t answering her calls, then heâ□□s set on moving on without her.

So, she respects that and moves on herself.

For example: If she has tried calling a few times and he hasnâ□□t been responding, she might think something along the lines of, â□□Oh well, I guess I have my answer then. Clearly heâ□□s not interested in getting back together. So, I need to respect that and let him get on with his life. Iâ€™ll find someone new.

She then stops calling him and focuses on getting over him by dating new guys.

Then, if her ex realizes that sheâ€™s no longer calling him and he decides to call her back, he might be shocked to hear her say something like, â€œSorry, but itâ€™s too late now. I tried calling you, but you ignored me so I accepted that you were no longer interested. I then moved on. Iâ€™m with someone else now and Iâ€™m happy. So, you need to respect that now. Goodbye.

Donâ€™t be that guy who loses out on getting his ex girl back because youâ€™re playing mind games with her by ignoring her calls.

If you want her back, make it happen now.

Sheâ€™s making it so easy for you by calling you, so answer her.

On the call, re-attract her, bring her defenses down, arrange a meet up and get back together.

Another possible reaction a woman can have to her ex boyfriend ignoring her calls isâ€¦

5. She will want to seek revenge on him for trying to make her feel rejected

[image: She will seek revenge on him for trying to make her feel rejected]

Most women wonâ€™t call an ex boyfriend after dumping him because they fear being rejected by him.

So, for your ex to call you, sheâ€™s probably feeling like sheâ€™s taking a big risk.

Prior to calling you, she may have even have been thinking things like, â€œWhat if he ignores me, or tells me that heâ€™s moved on with someone else? Maybe I should wait for him to contact me instead. I donâ€™t want to feel like a reject if he doesnâ€™t respond. Then again, if I want him back, maybe I just have to take a chance and call him.

She then took the risk of calling you (possibly several times) and when you didnâ€™t answer, she may have then begun to think that:

- Youâ€™re playing hard to get and trying to make her chase after you.
- Youâ€™re feeling full of yourself and thinking things like, â€œYeah, I knew that she still wants me. She stuffed up by dumping me. Now I can make her grovel to try and get me back. She will have to beg me to give her another chance.
- You have a new woman and the two of you are laughing behind her back at her for contacting you and coming across as desperate.
- Youâ€™re too scared to answer the call because youâ€™re worried that she will tell you that she has moved on.

And so on.

Of course, that might not be what you are thinking at all.

Yet, how is she to know?

She has to think something and in many cases, a woman will think that youâ€™re trying to make her feel rejected by not answering.

As a result, she may decide to get revenge (e.g. block you, ignore your calls, unfriend you on social media, start dating a new guy and post photos of her and him on her profile).

Naturally, you probably don't want to push her into the arms of another man, right?

If you don't that and if your aim is to get her back, then make it happen.

Understand that she took a risk by calling you, so now it's up to you to make the next move.

That means, you need to be man enough to answer her phone calls and then lead the way to a meet up, a hug, kiss, sex and back into a relationship.

4 Mistakes That Slow Down the Ex Back Process and Often Result in You Missing Out on Getting Her Back

So many guys miss out on getting their ex girl back by making one or more of the following mistakes!

1. Assuming that no contact works on all women

Not all women respond the same to No Contact (i.e. ignoring an ex for 30-60 days).

For example: A woman who has disconnected from her feelings for her ex boyfriend and is feeling fine without him, will usually be happy that he's ignoring her and just move on without him.

On the other hand, a woman who still has feelings for her ex might chase after him and try to get him back if he doesn't contact her.

Yet, if he doesn't answer her calls, she may then rejected and force herself to get over him (usually by hooking up with another man), so she can move on.

That means that by ignoring your ex's phone calls, you could either be making her want you more, or pushing her away and into the arms of another man.

Do you want to risk losing her, or do you want her back?

If you want her back, then stop ignoring her phone calls and answer your phone, or better yet, call her yourself.

Then, reactivate her feelings for you and get her back.

2. Missing out on perfect opportunities to re-attract her on the phone

A phone call from your ex is a perfect opportunity to re-spark her sexual and romantic feelings for you, so she then wants to be your girl again for real.

So, don't waste those opportunities.

Instead, use the opportunities she is giving you to make her feel drawn to you again.

Some of the ways you can make her feel drawn to you are by!

- Using humor to make her relax her guard and open back up to you.
- Flirting with her to create a sexual vibe between you and to create built up sexual tension, which she then wants to release by kissing and having sex with you.
- Teasing her in a playful way during conversations, so she feels a fun, interesting and enjoyable spark with you and wants more of it.

Maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what she says to make you feel unsure of yourself.

The more you spark her feeling for you, the more open she'll become to meeting up with you to see where things go.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

3. Assuming that the more of her calls you ignore, the more she will want you

Not answering a woman's calls once in a while is not a bad thing.

In fact, it can potentially show her that you're not lonely and desperately waiting around for her to call.

A guy being independent is attractive and it does make a woman want him more.

Yet, ignoring all, or most of your ex's calls will usually have the opposite effect.

Rather than feel attracted, she will assume that you're playing hard to get with her, or are trying to signal to her that you have no interest in getting back together.

So, rather than continuing to feel rejected, she will simply stop calling.

Here's the thingâ€¦|

Your ex is almost certainly not going to sit around and let you make her feel rejected for much longer.

Instead, she will most likely focus on hooking up with a new guy as quickly as possible to get back at you.

If you truly want her back, don't mess her around by playing unnecessary mind games for too long.

Instead, get on a call or to an in person meet up with her, reawaken her feelings of respect and attraction for you and then guide her back into a relationship.

It's a simple, straightforward process and it works.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦|

4. Ignoring her calls and then sending her texts

Your ex is most likely calling you because she wants to hear the tonality of your voice and assess your real reactions to what she says, to determine whether or not you've changed since the break up.

When she can hear the confidence in your voice and sense some changes in you that are attractive to her, she will naturally feel drawn to you and more open to meeting up with you.

You can then quickly and easily arrange to catch up in person, where you can get her back pretty immediately.

Yet, if you're ignoring her calls and are only texting her, she won't really be able to assess how you actually feel, or if you have changed enough since the break up to warrant getting back together.

Here's the thingâ€¦|

Although texting an ex is fine, it simply leaves too much room for misunderstanding (e.g. she takes something you text her the wrong way and feels insulted, or she assumes you're not interested enough to talk to her over the phone and that's why you're only texting).

So, don't just stick to only texting.

Answer the phone the next time she calls you (or call her instead) and get her back.

Reconcile After Divorce: 5 Best Tips

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 of the best tips to help ensure that you can successfully reconcile with your wife after divorce:

1. Agree to be “friends” and then use the friendship to re-attract her

[image: Agree to be friends, but then don't act like just a friend]

In other words, let her know that you and her are just friends now, but then use any interactions you have with her to flirt with her, so she feels some sexual and romantic sparks with you.

She won't necessarily want to get back with you in one day of course, but if you use this specific approach, you won't get stuck in the friend zone with her and will instead, cause her to feel so attracted to you and so curious about her feelings that she will naturally go with the flow when you initiate a hug, kiss and even sex at some point.

This is why, the most important thing for you to do right now is establish that you and her are friends, so she feels comfortable interacting with you and you can then re-attract her and get her back.

Right now, she might be at a point where she is hoping to get over the divorce and move on without you.

Yet, if you love her and know that the marriage could be better this time around, then you owe it to yourself and to her to get the marriage back together.

Even if she says something like, “Look, I don't want to be friends. The divorce is now final and I need some space,” you don't have to accept it right away and just give up.

After all, a woman doesn't always stick to her decisions.

She decided to marry you, then eventually changed her mind and likewise, she can change her mind back again, if you approach the ex back process correctly.

So, you can say something like this to her, “Hey, I know that the divorce has been difficult for you. It hasn't been a walk in the park for me either. We loved each other and we hoped we could make a life together, but it just didn't work out. I accept the divorce and I'm sure you do too. It's not a nice thing to go through, but it is done. We are divorce and are never going to get back together. However, that doesn't mean we can't at least be friends. If we cared enough about each other once to want to spend the rest of our lives together, I'm sure we can at least be friends.”

When you say something like that to an ex wife, it automatically makes her feel a surge of respect for you for being so emotionally mature about the divorce.

Since you are accepting the divorce, she also feels like she doesn't need to keep her guard up so much with you anymore either.

As a result, she feels less determined to cut you out of her life and opens up to interacting with you as a friend on a more regular basis.

That is the best way to re-attract a wife after a divorce.

Itâ€™s not too late.

The divorce has gone through, but feelings are fluid and they can change.

You can use your friendship with her to reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you, so she naturally wants to get back together again.

Just remember: Itâ€™s totally fine to be her friend, as long as youâ€™re not pretending to be an innocent friend who isnâ€™t interested in her in a sexual or romantic way.

If you act like a friend (i.e. being really nice, talking to her in a neutral way like you would a female coworker, being more polite than you normally are, trying to be extra helpful), you will end up in the friend zone.

If you put yourself in the friend zone, you can get yourself out of it, but I recommend that you donâ€™t act like a friend in the first place.

If you only act like a friend, then she might then move on with another guy who comes along and stirs feelings of romantic and sexual attraction inside of her.

Donâ€™t let that happen.

You need to make her feel sexually and romantically attracted to you during interactions (e.g. by flirting with her to create sexual tension, being more masculine in your behavior than before, making her laugh and smile and feel good to be around you, showing her via your actions and behavior that youâ€™ve transformed yourself into a new man).

Then, when the time is right, kiss her, hook up sexually and get the relationship back together again.

When you do that, it will feel amazing for both you and her.

Itâ€™s not just a good thing for you.

She will feel so much love, respect and attraction for you that it will be one of the best feelings she ever experiences in life.

The next tip to help you reconcile with your wife after divorce isâ€¦

2. Understand what really makes a woman feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction

[image: Understand what really makes a woman feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction]

Getting divorced by a woman you still love is a horrible experience.

It can really shake a man to his core and cause him to feel like a total failure as a man.

As a result, he may begin to wonder things like, â€œWhat did I do wrong? Why wasnâ€™t I good enough for her? I did everything I could to provide for her and be a good husband. I even let her have her way a lot of the time just to make her happy. Why wasnâ€™t it enough? Why did she have to leave me? Sure we had our arguments, but doesnâ€™t every couple have arguments? Why did she leave me? How can I get her to want me back?â€

Not knowing what else to do, a confused man might then assume that, to re-attract her, he needs to improve his physical appearance, do better at work or be even nicer to her than he ever was.

Yet, what a man like that usually doesnâ€™t understand is that a womanâ€™s attraction to a man is mainly based on how he makes her feel when heâ€™s talking to her and interacting with her.

Itâ€™s in his body language, his attitude, his vibe and the way he responds to her and reacts to what she says and does (e.g. he remains calm and uses humor to make her laugh when she is being stubborn or annoying, rather than getting upset at her and starting an argument).

What is most attractive, appealing and desirable to a woman is who a man is when she's interacting with him.

For example, in a marriage:

- Is he confident and self-assured, or has he become a bit insecure and needy?
- Is he emotionally dominant, or has he become wimpy or weak-minded in a number of ways?
- Does he make her feel like a desirable woman, or does she feel like just a friend to him now?
- Does he take the lead during conversation, or is she able to walk all over him with her dominant personality?
- Does he cause her look up to him and respect him because he is so emotionally strong, or does she feel contempt for him because of his emotional weaknesses?
- Does he attract her and turn her on with his masculine presence during interactions, or does he behave more neutral like a friend when interacting with her?
- Does he feel worthy of her sexually and as a result, feel totally confident in his approach to her sexually, or has he lost confidence in himself in the relationship to the point where he behaves like a rejected man in the bedroom?
- Is he interested in experiencing sparks with her, or has he checked out of the relationship and no longer really cares about making her feel what she used to feel for him?
- Does he feel confident around other people in social situations, or has he become a bit too insecure and unsure of himself for her liking?
- Does he make decisions with confidence and then follow through on them, or has he become too indecisive and no longer follows through like he used to?
- Is he able to maintain control of his emotions under pressure like a real man, or does he lose control of his emotions (e.g. become very angry, irritable, annoyed, insecure, upset) too easily?

Those are the types of things that really matter to a woman in terms of her actual feelings of respect, attraction and love for a man.

A lot of men don't realize that, or don't want to accept that because they hope that by going to the gym, doing better at work, or being nicer to her, she will suddenly feel so attracted and in love with him.

Yet, that's just not how a woman's attraction really works.

Attraction is a reaction to how she feels when interacting with you.

If you aren't able to make her feel enough attraction during interactions, she's not going to care so much about you having a better job, adding 1-2cm to your biceps or you being even nicer to her than you already were.

Yet, if you are able to make her feel attracted to you during interactions, then anything else that has improved or is better about you or your approach to her will be appreciated and valued so much more.

After many years of experiencing helping new men get women back after a divorce, I can tell you that approximately 95% of the men who get their wife back do not have to go to the gym for months, get better clothes, improve their job prospects, be extra nice and so on.

Instead, they simply need to be able to create new sparks of respect, attraction and love inside of her when interacting with her.

Always remember: Attraction is a reaction to how she feels when interacting with you.

That's what it's all about.

So, if you're serious about reconciling with your ex wife, you have to improve your ability to make her feel attracted to you during interactions.

From now on, focus on making her feel rushes of sexual and romantic attraction when you interact with her, by thinking, acting and behaving in ways that are attractive to her.

Once you make her feel sparks of attraction, you can then turn it into romantic love by continuing to interact with her and attract her.

The reality is that when you make a woman feel the way she always wanted to feel when she was with you, everything changes.

She suddenly and automatically wants to get back together again.

The next tip to help you reconcile with your wife after divorce is

3. Remember that a woman's main motivation to be with a man comes from her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for him

[image: Don't be put off by the tense atmosphere between you and her]

Sometimes a husband and wife will feel uncomfortable, tense and uncertain when interacting with each other after a divorce.

There will be an air of, Don't even start with any arguments. Don't ask me about my life. Don't try to flirt with me. Don't do anything to piss me off and so on.

It can feel very tense.

As a result, a man might end up avoiding interactions with his ex wife to not experience any of that awkwardness.

Yet, if he actually wants her back, that is the last thing he should be doing.

Why?

The reality is that if you're not actively re-attracting your ex wife and making her feel attracted to you again, sooner or later, another man will make her feel attracted.

If she falls in love with a new man, it can make it difficult to get her back.

Difficult, but not impossible

So, if your wife isn't dating new men yet, or hasn't found a man that she loves and wants to spend the rest of her life with, then focus on getting her back now.

Interact with her (preferably in person, or at the very least, on an audio or video call) and make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction for you again.

[image: A woman's motivation to be with a man comes from her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction for him]

When she feels attracted to the new approach you are using with her, you will then see that there is hope for you and her.

Itâ€™s not over because both of you clearly still have feelings for each other.

That is the point where broken marriages get back together, even after going through all the horror, shame and stress of a divorce.

So, focus on making her feel attracted to the new and improved you.

Some of the ways you can do that are byâ€¦

- Maintaining your confidence regardless of what she says or does to make you feel like getting her back is hopeless, (e.g. if she is being cold towards you, blaming you for the breakdown of the marriage, saying that once itâ€™s over, itâ€™s over, saying that she is the sort of woman who doesnâ€™t change her mind, saying that she is happier without you).
- Showing her via your attitude, actions and behavior that youâ€™ve already transformed yourself into an even better man than you were before, (e.g. if you werenâ€™t responsible enough and you expected her to be the responsible one, let her see that youâ€™re being responsible about your life and future. If you took her for granted before, let her see that you have learned from your mistakes and are now a more loving, attentive man, without being a pushover about it/sucking up to her by being extra nice).
- Reacting differently to situations than you would have in the past, (e.g. if she tries to provoke you by being hurtful or mean, rather than getting upset or losing your temper like you may have in the past, you now remain calm, confident and use some humor to diffuse the situation).
- Being more emotionally dominant and causing her to looking up to you, rather than allowing her to dominate you during conversations because of how much you want her back.
- Being more emotionally masculine around her and making her feel feminine and girly, rather than suppressing your masculinity because you feel like itâ€™s no longer your place to turn her on anymore.

The more you reawaken her all-important feelings of sexual and romantic attraction, the more she feels drawn to the idea of getting back with you.

At the very least, feelings like that cause a woman to want to hook up with her husband again sexually to see how she feels, or to spend time with him just hanging out to see if the spark develops between them.

If any of those things happen, she will naturally want to give the relationship another chance.

If she doesnâ€™t give the relationship another chance, you can bet that it will be on her mind all the time.

She will know that she might end up regretting it later, if she sees that you have moved on and are happy with a new woman; especially if she looks at the woman as being pretty, or worse, even prettier than her (in her opinion).

That fear causes a woman to want to reconcile now, or at least hang out and hook up with her ex husband to see how she feels afterwards.

The next tip to help you reconcile with your wife after divorce isâ€¦

4. Donâ€™t just try to get her back based on the history you have together

Thereâ€™s no doubt that you and your ex wife used to have an amazing connection and have likely been through many intense experiences together, both good and bad.

Yet, although having a unique connection, or going through many ups and downs together can bond a couple and bring them closer when in a relationship, itâ€™s not something that keeps them together after a break up or a divorce.

If the reason why doesnâ€™t seem so obvious, here it isâ€¦!

When a woman has lost touch with her feelings of respect, attraction and love for her husband and has even gone through a divorce with him, being reminded how good things used to be between them usually only highlights to her how badly things turned out between them.

So, itâ€™s more of a disappointing feeling for her, than a regretful feeling.

When her ex husband says things like, â€œThink about how happy we used to be at the beginning of our marriage. We loved each other so much and we really worked well together as a team back then. That was us and it worked. Surely that counts for something, right? Donâ€™t forget about all the good history we have together. Itâ€™s not something that should just be thrown away like thisâ€ his ex wife wonâ€™t always see things the same way.

Instead of regretting going through with the divorce, she will feel disappointed that she wasted so much of her life in a relationship that was going downhill for so long.

She may also realize that her ex husband still doesnâ€™t understand that what matters most, is how she feels when she interacts with him; not how she used to feel in the past.

So, if you want to reconcile with your wife, donâ€™t waste time trying to convince her to give the marriage another chance based on your history together as a couple, or on how good things used to be.

How you make her feel right now and from now on is what really counts.

When your wife is interacting with you, she needs to be able to feel respect and attraction for you based on who you are right now, not who you used to be at the beginning of the marriage, or when things were good between you and her.

When she feels respect and attraction for the new and improved you, she will naturally start to reconnect with some of the romantic love she has for you.

When that happens, she will begin to realize that she doesnâ€™t need to seek love elsewhere because she still has it with you.

The next tip to help you reconcile with your wife after divorce isâ€¦!

5. Avoid long-winded, exhausting conversations about where the relationship went wrong

When a man wants to reconcile with his wife after divorce, he might assume that the best way to go about it is to talk, talk and talk some more about the relationship and where it went wrong.

He hopes that if they can get to the bottom of what caused them to split up, he can fix it and then things will be good again.

Yet, what a guy like that doesnâ€™t realize is that the more he brings up the mistakes of the past, the more likely it is that they will get into arguments about who is to blame for the divorce.

If that happens, they will both end up feeling hurt, misunderstood and disappointed and the chances of a reconciliation will seem less likely.

So, what should you do instead?

Focus on turning interactions into pleasant, enjoyable experiences for both you and your ex wife.

Essentially, you want her to be thinking things like, â€œI canâ€™t believe it, but I feel so happy around him now. Iâ€™m actually smiling and feeling good around him again. Itâ€™s sort of like how we used to be a long time ago. Maybe we could get back together after all weâ€™ve been through. Who cares if we divorced? Weâ€™re allowed to get back together. We love each other. He is my husband. I donâ€™t have to continue walking away.â€

When she is thinking like that, she will naturally feel drawn to you and be opening herself up love you to see where things go.

So, how can you make interactions become a pleasant, enjoyable experience for you and her from now on?

Firstly, donâ€™t try to get into exhausting, in depth discussions about where the marriage went wrong.

Instead, focus instead on using humor to make her laugh and smile and feel good around you.

Of course, that doesnâ€™t mean you need to be constantly cracking jokes every time you talk to her.

Doing that would likely annoy her and make her feel as though youâ€™re pretending that nothing went wrong.

Instead, using some humor is about taking a tense situation (i.e. your divorce) and looking for something positive to laugh about together, rather than always focusing on the negatives and becoming even more disconnected from each other as a result.

For example: The subject of eating dinners without each other comes up and the ex husband says something like, â€œWell, at least I donâ€™t have to eat your horrible cooking anymore. I had to put up with your cooking for years. Throwing up in the bathroom after dinner, but hiding it from youâ€ and smiles at her, or has a bit of a laugh.

She will either know that heâ€™s joking right away, or she will get it when she sees him smiling or laughing.

Of course, if she doesnâ€™t know that heâ€™s joking, he can then say something like, â€œJust kidding. You know I always loved your cooking. I do miss your tasty meals. You always were a great cook.â€

When you are able to make your ex wife smile and laugh, it naturally causes her drop her guard a little and interact with you like she used to when things were good.

When she does that, it becomes difficult for her to move on without you because she starts to miss what you and her used to have.

Speed Up the Reconciliation Process By Avoiding These Mistakes

With the right ex back approach, you and your wife will reconcile, get back together and remain happy.

With the wrong approach, you will remain divorced and she might then move on, leaving you behind.

So, if you want to get her back, it's important that you focus on saying and doing the type of things that will reopen your wife's heart to you again.

Make sure you avoid making the following mistakes that so many men make when in your situation!

1. Being nicer, more polite and reserved than is necessary

Although being on your best behavior around your ex wife might seem like the right thing to do so she will open back up to you, it's actually a very bad idea.

Why?

Women are not attracted to desperation in men.

Additionally, if a woman feels like a man is trying hard to be really nice to hopefully be accepted by her, it gives her a false sense of superiority over him.

As a result, she ends up thinking that she is more valuable than him, even though she isn't.

When a woman feels a lot more valuable than a man she has broken up with, it makes her feel like she made the right decision to break up with him.

The reality is that a woman wants to be with a man that she can look up to and respect, not a guy who submits to her and allows her to walk all over him, just so he can spend time with her.

So, if you want to reconcile after divorce, make sure that your ex wife doesn't perceive you as being desperate, or less valuable than her.

Remind yourself that you and her are equals.

Then, behave like a man who is worthy of her, not like a man who is unworthy and has to try really hard to be nice, in order to be accepted by her.

The next mistake to avoid is!

2. Trying to reconcile via texts or letters

Sending a few text messages, which then lead to a phone call and then to a meet up are totally fine.

Likewise, a couple of emails if she wants to write back and forth a little is also fine in many situations.

However, using text, letters or emails as the main way to reconcile with an ex wife is usually a recipe for disaster.

Why?

It's so easy to misunderstand each other and then have to explain away misunderstandings or frustrations, which can go on and on.

Frustrations can build very easily and can lead to a woman feeling resentful towards her ex husband.

Additionally, even though he is honestly trying his best to communicate with her, she can end up feeling as though he is being selfish and unloving in the way that he is communicating.

This is why, it's always best to just call her or see her in person.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Feeling unworthy of her when the divorce is finalized

When a man feels like he is to blame for the divorce, he might fall into the trap of thinking of his ex wife as being an innocent victim who never really did anything wrong in the marriage.

He may then feel like a failure of a man and see her as being too good for him.

Yet, what he doesn't realize is that feeling unworthy of his wife's love only makes him seem less attractive to her (and to other women).

Why?

A woman wants to be in a relationship with a man who is always confident and believes in himself, no matter what happens.

In other words, he is emotionally strong and gives her a feeling of safety as a result.

The more emotionally strong and stable a man is, the more a woman is able to respect him, feel attracted to him, love him and feel proud to be with him.

So, when an ex husband is feeling sorry for himself and putting himself down, rather than making her feel happy that he feels so unworthy of her love, she feels turned off by his lack of emotional strength under pressure.

The next mistake to avoid is!

4. Spending too much time worrying about her hooking up with other men and not enough time doing what is needed to get her back

If a man spends a lot of time imagining his ex wife kissing and having sex with new men, it can cause him to lose confidence, become insecure and behave in ways that will turn her off.

For example: He might!

- Start stalking her on both social media and in real life to see what she's up to.
- Ask mutual friends and family if she is seeing anyone.
- Leave messages on her phone warning her that other men only want her for sex.
- Regularly ask her if she is dating yet, or even hinting at the subject.
- Talk about STDs and how she needs to protect herself is she's going to start sleeping with men.
- Ask loads of questions about any male friends she has (e.g. a coworker, a friend of a friend) to try to get some clues as to whether she is dating or sleeping with any of them.

Yet, rather than make his ex wife think something like, "Aw, he's really having such a hard time coping with our divorce. That must mean he still loves me so much. Therefore, maybe I should forgive him and give him another chance" she feels turned off by his insecurity.

She sees that, without her, he is lost and is potentially emotionally weaker than ever before.

As a result, she doesn't feel any desire to want to reconcile.

Instead, she feels better off without her ex husband, which makes her want to get over him and move on.

Then, the thing that he fears the most (i.e. her hooking up sexually with other men) will actually happen.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

5. Trying to get her back by using the same old approach to attraction that she became bored of

If your approach to attraction in the relationship was right, then your wife wouldnâ€™t be your ex wife right now.

That might sound harsh, but harsh truths are whatâ€™s needed when getting ready to properly reconcile a marriage after a divorce.

What you may need to come to terms with (if you havenâ€™t already), is that, to get her back, youâ€™re going to need to do something new.

If you use the same old approach to attraction youâ€™ve always used (that she is no longer drawn to), then youâ€™re not going to be able to get her back and have her be in love with you.

The way to get your wife to fall in love with you again and feel excited to be with you, is to use a brand new approach to attraction.

An approach that makes her realize how sad she will be if she doesnâ€™t stop and give you another chance, before you move on with another woman who might steal your heart.

Wife Left Me After Getting Breast Implants

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why that happens:

1. She suddenly got a lot of attention from the type of men who weren't previously interested in her (e.g. a crush at work, men on Tinder)

Most married women don't go seeking sexual attention from other guys because they just want that from their husband.

Yet, when a wife isn't getting the kind of sexual attention from her husband that she wants, it can cause her to feel like she's no longer attractive.

As a result, she may eventually decide to begin flirting with new guys to see if she's still got any sex appeal.

This can lead her to join an app like Tinder, or to even start flirting with men at work.

If she doesn't get much of a reaction from enough men that she finds attractive, she might then start to think about how she could make herself look even more attractive.

This can lead to her deciding to get breast implants.

If she suddenly starts receiving a lot of attention from handsome men or younger men after getting breast implants, it can go to her head.

She may then begin thinking things like, "This is fun. I feel young again. I'm excited. I'm turned on. Maybe I shouldn't be doing this, but at least I'm not cheating physically. I'm only flirting. I mean, why shouldn't I be allowed to flirt with other guys just for fun? I'm not cheating on him. I just want to be noticed, that's all."

Yet, here's the thing!

Once the initial thrill of being noticed by random guys wears off, a woman may then begin to realize that what she has with her husband is deeper and more significant and not worth cheating on him over.

She will then stop and just focus back on her husband.

Of course, in your case, your wife didn't react in that way and has left you after getting the implants. So, what went wrong?

It could have been that...

2. She always planned to get implants and make herself look more attractive, so she could then move on from the marriage quicker and easier than you

[image: She planned it, so she could move on quicker and easier than you]

Sometimes, a woman will fall out of love with her husband and begin planning her exit from the marriage months or years in advance.

In cases like that, a woman might even go the extreme of getting breast implant surgery to prepare herself to look more attractive to other men when she eventually leaves her husband.

Then, once she is ready and feels confident about her chances of moving on quickly with a new man, or least being able to date new men easily, she will just go ahead and leave.

Her husband is then left feeling hurt and betrayed and wondering things like, â€œWhat happened? What went wrong? Why did she leave me after getting breast implants? What if something I did? Something I said? How could she do this to me? Did she plan it? Why did this happen?â€

Generally speaking, the answer this...

In a marriage, a man can create a dynamic that either causes his woman to want to treat him well, be attentive, loving and affectionate, or he can create a dynamic that makes her feel like pulling away, being closed off and treating him with less and less respect over time.

If a man has created and maintained a relationship dynamic where she doesn't really have to put in much, or any effort to impress him and maintain his interest, then she will naturally begin to feel bored and unhappy.

It may even get to the point where she leaves him.

That's the bad news.

The good news is that, in almost all cases, he can get her back if he wants to.

He can do that by using a different approach to attracting her now so that he can regain her respect, attraction and love (e.g. maintaining his confidence around her at all times, rather than letting what she says or does make him feel insecure, unsure of himself or unworthy of her, no longer allowing her to push him around and get away with disrespecting him or behaving badly like he used to).

When she feels a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for him, she will naturally open herself up to the possibility of him and her being together again as a couple, or at least hooking up to see how she feels.

Another possible reason why a woman will leave her husband after getting breast implants isâ€œ

3. SheÂ was bored of having sex with her husband and the implantsÂ didn't make the sex more exciting

[image: She was bored of having sex with her husband and the implants didn't make the sex more exciting]

Sometimes, a married couple might fall in a rut sexually, because other things seem to be more important (e.g. the bills, children, work) than keeping things spicy in the bedroom.

Over time, a woman might then begin to feel bored when she has to have sex with her husband and she may even begin to think things like, â€œOur sex life has become so routine and unexciting. I have to force myself to seem interested. In fact, lately, the only reason I have sex with him is because I feel obligated to do it. Maybe itâ€œs because my boobs are getting saggy. If I get implants and have perkier/bigger breasts, Iâ€œll become sexier and heâ€œll be more turned on by me and he will then make an effort to spice things up between us. At least itâ€œs worth a try. I want to feel like a sexy, desirable woman again, not like his roommate or friend.â€

However, after she gets breast implants, she may discover that her husband still treats her the same way (i.e. like a roommate or friend).

He doesnâ€œt really look at her as being sexy, say that sheâ€œs sexy or make her feel sexy and desirable.

So naturally, the sex doesn't get more exciting either.

She then starts to blame him for her unhappiness and begins to imagine being with a new man who would appreciate her and make her feel sexy.

If she then opens up and begins flirting with men at work, or throughout her everyday life and notices that they find her to be sexy and desirable and many even comment about her being beautiful and how they wish she wasn't married, it might be all the encouragement she needs to leave her husband.

She might then look to hook up with other guys so that she can experience the kind of sexual excitement she's been craving, but not getting, in her marriage.

Here's the thing though!

If you want your wife back, you need to be the one to spark her feelings of sexual desire.

That means, you have to interact with her, over the phone, but more importantly, in person and make her feel like a sexy desirable woman with you.

How can you do that?

One of the best ways is to flirt with her during conversation to build up sexual tension between you.

Make her feel so attracted and drawn to you again that she feels like she just has to have you.

You can then release that tension with a hug, a kiss and then blow her mind with the best sex she's ever had, so she knows that she made a mistake by leaving you.

Another possible reason why a woman will leave her husband after getting breast implants is!

4. Her husband has lost interest in having sex with her and doesn't regain interest when she gets implants

Sometimes, a guy might still love his wife, but because of various personal reasons (e.g. stress, worries, he feels unattractive compared to her), he may stop wanting to have sex with her.

His wife on the other hand will notice that he's avoiding sex with her and she may begin assuming that he's either having an affair, or that he doesn't find her desirable anymore.

She might then decide to get breast implants in the hope that this will spark their sex life again.

However, if her new, impressive breasts don't excite him enough for him to want to have sex again, she might decide to leave him and look to hook up with other guys to prove to herself that she's still attractive and that he's the one with the problem.

Another possible reason why a woman will leave her husband after getting breast implants is!

5. She suddenly feels a type of confidence that she hasn't felt in years or decades and it causes her husband to become insecure

What a lot of guys don't understand is that in most cases, women are very insecure about their physical appearance.

In fact, according to a global study conducted by Dove cosmetics, 96% of women don't consider themselves to be beautiful.

So, if a woman feels unhappy with her appearance and decides to get implants, it's only natural that it will give her a major confidence boost.

As a result, she might also change her hair style, start wearing more makeup and even begin wearing, sexier, more revealing clothes.

Naturally, this can cause her husband to begin feeling jealous and insecure.

From there, fights break out and he begins to accuse her of flirting with men, wanting the attention of other men and possibly thinking about cheating on him.

This may cause her to begin losing respect for him and start thinking things like, “Why is he trying to burst my bubble? Why isn’t he letting me feel good about myself for a while? I feel as though he doesn’t want the best for me and would instead prefer it if I was a frumpy, ugly woman. Well, I’m not like that anymore. I’m sexy and beautiful and I want a man who can appreciate that about me, not put me down and make me feel bad for feeling sexy.”

When a woman loses respect for a guy, she also stops feeling attracted to him.

This may then lead to even more accusations and arguments, because she no longer feels the desire to have sex with him.

Eventually, she will get fed up with all the fighting and she may decide to leave him.

He might then think something like, “I knew it! Those breast implants ruined my marriage. I bet she’s off hooking up with other guys.”

Yet, what he doesn’t realize is that his insecurity and jealousy is what ruined his marriage, not the implants.

Here’s the thing|

A woman doesn’t want to feel as though she needs to make herself seem less attractive in order for her guy to feel confident and secure in the relationship with her.

She wants to feel as though he would be 100% happy, confident and self-assured in the relationship, regardless of how attractive she is.

She wants to be with an emotionally strong man who believes in himself and in his value to her, rather than a guy who is constantly assessing whether or not he is good enough for her and if she is going to cheat or leave.

So, if she notices that her husband is unable to grow up and become the emotionally strong man that she wants and needs him to be, she will almost always lose respect and attraction for him and decide to leave him.

To Re-attract Her and Get Her Back, It’s Important That You Don’t Make Any of These Mistakes

Right now, if you want to get your wife back, you need to focus less on what happened (i.e. she left you after getting breast implants) and more on saying and doing the kind of things that will reactivate her feelings for you so she wants to come back.

That means, you can’t afford to make any of the following mistakes:

1. Trying to make her feel guilty for ruining the marriage, when she is feeling so happy and confident now about her new look

[image: Trying to make her feel guilty for ruining the marriage]

It might be very tempting for a husband to say something like, “How can you do this to me? Do you know how shallow it looks that you left me after you got breast implants? I don’t recognize you anymore. You’re not the same woman I feel in love with and married. Can you honestly tell me that our vows meant nothing to you? I thought we loved each other. I just don’t understand how you can throw our marriage away so easily. Why are you doing this? If you weren’t happy, why didn’t you just tell me, rather than leaving? We could have worked things out.”

Yet, that’s the worst thing he could do.

Why?

Firstly, if his wife is currently feeling happy and confident, she’s going to get defensive about him trying to burst her bubble.

She may then begin thinking things like, “How dare he try to make me feel bad about my new look. He’s just jealous that I’ve changed and improved. In the meantime, he’s still the same as before. Nothing about him has gotten better. He’s stuck at the same level he was at when we got married, yet, he still expects me to respect him, feel attracted to him and love him. I bet he’d prefer it if I was unattractive and frumpy and just acted like his nice, obedient little woman who accepted whatever he wants without question. Well, that’s not me anymore. I’m no longer prepared to settle for being anything other than my best self and that includes not sticking with a man who doesn’t have a clue how to make me feel the way I want to feel.”

Secondly, trying to make a woman feel guilty when she’s feeling confident and happy (possibly for the first time in a long time), usually only makes her feel more determined to move on and find a guy who makes her feel good about herself.

She wants to take care of herself and start trying to move on and find a better future for herself.

What she doesn’t want, is to be manipulated or blackmailed into staying in a relationship that no longer sparks her sexual and romantic needs.

This is why, trying to make your wife feel guilty for leaving you after getting breast implants is not a good idea and will almost certainly push her away even further.

If you want her back, the best approach is to focus on reawakening her feelings of respect and sexual attraction for you, so that interacting with you actually starts to feel good to her.

Then, working on saving the marriage becomes something she wants to do, rather than something that she is being forced to do out of feelings of guilt.

Another mistake to avoid making is

2. Not understanding the other reasons why she lost enough respect and attraction to fall out of love with you

Most women don’t just walk out of their marriage on a whim (i.e. after getting breast implants).

Instead, there are usually other issues that have caused her to lose respect and attraction for her husband over time (e.g. he started off being confident and self-assured but over time became insecure and needy, he seemed focused and driven but he was actually directionless and erratic, initially he made her feel sexy and desirable but eventually he treated her more like a neutral friend).

This is why if you want your wife back, you need to understand her real, secret reasons for leaving.

If you don't, then you might end up trying to get her back by offering her all the wrong things (e.g. promising to change things that don't matter to her, changing your physical appearance by going to the gym or buying new clothes as a way of being more attractive to her).

This will cause her to feel misunderstood and like you just don't get her, and she will likely reject your attempts to get her back and tell you to just leave her alone.

On the other hand, if you figure out her real reasons for leaving you and then make changes and improvements based on that, you can easily re-attract her, seduce her and get her back into a relationship with you.

Another mistake to avoid making is

3. Not changing your approach to attraction and expecting to get her back based on the history you have together

What a lot of guys don't realize is that a modern woman doesn't have to stay with a guy if she doesn't want to, just because they have a shared history together

Instead, she has the freedom and the right to break up with him and take care of her own personal happiness and well being, if she wants to.

So, if you want your wife to come back, you can't use an old approach (e.g. be extra nice and sweet to her, offer to take care of her financially, promise to take her on a luxury vacation) and expect her to feel attracted.

You've got to try something new.

Only when you spark her feelings again in new and exciting ways, will she be willing to drop her guard and open back up to giving you another chance.

Another mistake to avoid making is

4. Losing confidence in yourself and your value to her and therefore, becoming even less attractive to her

If you fall into the bad habit of thinking that you're not good enough for your wife anymore, it will naturally start to eat away at your confidence.

As a result, not only will you be less attractive to her, but you will also find it difficult to attract other high quality women who are looking for a truly confident man.

Don't let that happen to you.

Don't let your wife leaving you after getting breast implants ruin your sense of self-worth.

Instead, just pick yourself up and start moving forward with confidence, knowing that you can re-attract your wife (or other quality women) if you want to.

Another way of saying that is, if you want to get your ex back, you need to believe that you can.

Believing that you can starts filling you up with the kind of confidence that causes you to think, talk, behave and act in ways that are attractive to her.

As a result, she starts regretting her decision to leave you and she becomes open to working things out with you.

Another mistake to avoid making isâ€¦

5. Giving up and assuming that itâ€™s over now and thereâ€™s nothing you can do

Thereâ€™s actually a lot you can do.

You can interact with your wife and reactivate her sexual and romantic feelings for you, so she realizes that leaving you was a big mistake.

No, sheâ€™s probably not going to make it easy for you (i.e. because she will want to make sure that youâ€™ve truly changed and become the man she wants you to be).

However, if you maintain your confidence and continue to say and do things that spark her feelings for you (e.g. make her laugh and smile and feel good to be around you, flirt with her to create sexual tension between you), her guard comes down and she opens back up to you quickly and easily.

So, donâ€™t give up.

You can get your wife back.

My Ex Girlfriend Doesn't Appreciate Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 possible reasons why your girlfriend doesn't appreciate you and all the good you have done for her in the past:

1. You make her feel like she is a lot more valuable than you

[image: You make her feel like she is a lot more valuable than you]

Almost all quality women out there want to feel as though their boyfriend is at least equal value to them, but ideally, is higher value than themselves.

Being higher value means that she looks up to him, respects him, sees him as being a cool guy and knows that he could easily attract other women and so on.

On the other hand, being lower value means that she looks down on him, doesn't fully respect him, sees him as being a bit of a weird guy and knows that he's struggle to attract other high quality women like her.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't understand the importance of making their woman feel like she is the lucky one (i.e. she is with a guy who is higher value than her).

As a result, after a break up, a guy might try to get his ex girlfriend back by making her feel like she'd be doing him a big favor if she gave him another chance.

He might say, "Please. I will do anything. You mean everything to me. I promise to change if you want me to change. You are the most amazing woman I've ever met. I don't want to lose you. I've never loved another woman the way I love you. Please, give me a chance. I know we can make this work. Don't give up on us."

From his perspective, he is being honest and sincere and really does have good intentions, so he doesn't see what he is doing as a mistake.

Yet, he is going against what will actually make her feel attracted to him and want him back.

He's essentially pleading for another chance, which is not what a high value guy would do.

A high value guy, who knows that she is lucky to have a guy like him, will say something like, "Okay, I accept the break up. No problem. I wish you all the best" and have her be the one who is feeling rejected and left behind.

After all, she has stuffed up by dumping him.

She has lost him.

He can attract another quality women easily, so if she's going to be silly like that, then she will be the one regretting it if she doesn't change her mind.

Just don't make the mistake of telling her that you're a high value guy, or quality guy and saying that she will regret it.

That's not something you need to say.

Instead, you make a woman feel it by interacting with her and letting her sense it based on how much respect, attraction and love she feels for you as you interact with her.

When you do that, she will immediately begin to see your worth and will naturally begin to appreciate you as a result.

BTW: If you and your girlfriend haven't broken up yet (i.e. you were searching for My girlfriend doesn't appreciate me), then watch this video!

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend doesn't appreciate you is

2. You allowed her to take you for granted in the relationship and she is now used to treating you that way

[image: You allowed her to take you for granted, so she used to not having to show appreciation]

A relationship will never be happy if one of the people is taking the other for granted.

There will always be resentment and in many cases, it will lead to cheating (i.e. one person will cheat with someone new to make themselves feel loved and appreciated).

To avoid that, you need to ensure that there is a balance between you appreciating her and her appreciating you.

Unfortunately, in a lot of cases, a guy ends up putting in way more effort into the relationship than his woman does, to hopefully get her to love him and treat him well.

Yet, it usually has the opposite effect that he is hoping for in the long run.

In the short term, when the relationship is beginning, a woman might keep things fairly even and show appreciation and love to him, but over time, she just won't feel motivated to show it as much as he does, if he is putting in way more effort than her.

One of the reasons why is that, deep down, a woman wants to be in the position where she feels more of a need to treat her man well and appreciate him.

Of course, she won't tell a man that because he might take it too literally, start behaving like an asshole and expect her to put up with it, because she said that she wanted him to make her feel like she needed to impress him.

Since most women can't communicate their real desires to a man without him taking it too far, they just remain quiet and hope that a man can figure it out himself and start doing it.

She might hint at it, but she will rarely tell him exactly what she wants him to do to make her truly desire him and appreciate him.

So, if her guy doesn't understand how to make her sincerely appreciate him and feel the need to impress him, then she just won't be happy deep down.

She might then begin taking him for granted more and more (e.g. not pulling her weight in the house, always expecting him to drive to see her, letting him pay for everything all the time, being unreasonably bitchy or cold, not being as affectionate as she used to, being selfish).

Secretly, she will usually be hoping that he will put a stop to her bad behavior by changing his approach to her and the relationship.

If he does, she will feel an irresistible sense of respect and attraction for him and will then be motivated to treat him well and be a good woman to him.

However, if he doesn't, a woman will usually end up losing so much respect for her guy that she just breaks up with him.

Naturally, when that happens, itâ€™s unlikely that sheâ€™s going to change the way she treats him from then on (i.e. her ex boyfriend will feel as though she just doesnâ€™t appreciate him, or appreciate everything he has done for her in the past).

To her, he is now her ex and since she doesnâ€™t have strong feelings for him, she just canâ€™t be bothered to treat him well and show him appreciation for the way he still helps her out, or the way heâ€™s still good to her.

So, hereâ€™s the thingâ€¦!

If your ex girlfriend doesnâ€™t appreciate you, it may be because she hasnâ€™t appreciated you long before the break up happened.

[image: Stop allowing her to take you for granted]

Somewhere along the line in your relationship, you will have allowed her to get away with taking you for granted and now that youâ€™re broken up, she just continues to doing.

If you want her behavior to change, you have to stop letting her get away with it.

That doesnâ€™t mean you should treat her badly, accuse her of being selfish, be controlling or cruel to her.

Instead, you need to stop letting her always get her way, or always get what she wants.

For example: If she calls you and youâ€™re busy doing something, thereâ€™s nothing wrong with not answering right away.

Just let it ring and then call her back when youâ€™re free, even if thatâ€™s an hour or two later.

In other words, donâ€™t be available to her 24/7.

Alternatively, if she keeps asking you for money for things, to run errands for her, or to do things that, as her ex, youâ€™re no longer required to do, you need to just say â€œNoâ€ in a kind, but firm way, or say â€œYes,â€ but with some conditions.

For example: If a woman asked her ex, â€œCan you help me pay my rent this month?â€ after he had previously helped her and not seen any improvement in her behavior, he can say (in a light-hearted, easy-going way with a smile in his voice), â€œWell, what do I get out of that? Are you going to cook me dinner?â€

If she agrees, then he will help her, but if she doesnâ€™t, then he wonâ€™t help her.

Of course, he will be light-hearted and easy-going about it, but he will also be firm about it too.

Heâ€™s not just going to do whatever she wants and not be appreciated for it.

Now, with your ex, she might initially be shocked that youâ€™re not being a pushover like you used to be.

However, even if she doesnâ€™t admit it, she will feel a tremendous amount of respect and attraction for you based on being able to man up and stand up to her, but still be a good guy about it.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend doesnâ€™t appreciate you isâ€¦!

3. Youâ€™ve been giving her the impression that youâ€™re chasing a relationship with her

When it comes to sex or a relationship, the more a guy needs it, the less a woman wants to give it to him.

On the other hand, if a man is making a woman feel respect, attraction and love for him and she can see that he doesn't need sex or a relationship with her, she will want it from him.

If he then allows her to have that, she will feel lucky.

She will feel like the chosen one; the lucky girl who scored him out of all the other girls who would love to be with him.

That's the feeling women crave, but most guys just don't know it, or they have no idea how to create it.

If your girlfriend has broken up with you, watch this!

If you're still together and she hasn't left you yet, then watch this!

Now back to getting an ex girlfriend back who doesn't appreciate you!

If a guy keeps talking about how he wants to fix things with his ex girlfriend so they can get back together, something just isn't going to feel right to her.

When she figures it out, she will realize that it's essentially all about him getting her back for his reasons (e.g. he loves her so much, he deserves to be treated better by her, he wants to make the relationship work).

She won't be getting the feeling where she feels like the one who would be losing out if she didn't get back with him.

Instead, he will be making her feel like he needs her back, which just isn't as attractive and appealing as making her feel like she will regret leaving him.

As a result, she will remain guarded and may even act like she doesn't appreciate him and what he did for her in the past doesn't count anymore.

Secretly, she may even hope that if she treats him badly enough, he might start to hate her and then decide he doesn't want her back.

So, she doesn't show him love, even though he could get her to show him undying love and devotion if he used a different approach with her.

How about you?

Have you been pushing your ex girlfriend to give the relationship another chance, based on all of your reasons for wanting her back?

If so, she may be trying to turn you off (by not appreciating you), so you will then leave her alone.

So, what you need to do is change your approach to her.

Make her feel so much new respect, attraction and love for you that she realizes her feelings for you aren't gone.

At the same time, let her sense that even though you are able to make her feel that way, you're not needy for a relationship with her.

When she senses that, she will realize that other quality women will want to be with you, so she'd better give you another chance now before you meet another quality woman and end up forgetting all about your ex.

She knows that if she gets left behind, then it will be her who feels rejected and to avoid that emotional pain, she will get back with you and see how things go.

If you have improved and changed your approach to the relationship and can now make her feel the need to impress you, she won't want to lose you because she will know how difficult it is to have that kind of feeling in a long term relationship.

Another possible reason why your ex girlfriend doesn't appreciate you is

4. She's not a good woman and will treat most other men she meets the same way

This might not apply to your ex girlfriend, but read the following just to be sure

Sometimes a woman is just a bad person who doesn't treat men, especially ex men, with much respect or appreciation.

Instead, she is manipulative, selfish and she doesn't care who she tramples on along the way, as long as she gets what she wants.

Women like that will cheat on guys and not even think anything of it.

She won't feel like she is in the wrong.

Additionally, she will break up with a guy who has done so much for her and not even care.

Until, she meets a man who brings out her good girl side

When a man brings out a woman's good girl side and is able to keep that part of her alive in a relationship, she absolutely adores him and treats him so much better than she has treated any man in the past.

Part of what it means to be a man who brings out a woman's good girl side, is to not put up with her bad behavior, make her feel the kind of attraction she really wants and be a challenge for her to acquire and keep.

This is why, if you really feel that your ex girlfriend is the one for you and you want back, then bring out her good girl side before she meets another man who can.

If she meets a man who brings that side of her out and you're still offering the same old approach to attraction that you offered in the relationship, then you aren't going to be an appealing option to her.

So, from now on, use a new approach that brings out her good girl side.

When you do that, she will begin to realize that losing you would be something she may end up seriously regretting for life, especially if she is never able to meet another man who can bring that side of her out and keep it alive in a relationship.

As a result, she will naturally stop treating you badly and start giving you the respect that you deserve.

You can then get back with her, knowing that she will continue being a good woman to you, as long as you don't let her walk all over you like she did in the past.

Avoid Making These 3 Mistakes if You Want Her to Appreciate You and Want You Back

You can change make her truly appreciate you and not want to lose you.

However, you can also do the opposite and make her feel like she has made the right decision to leave you.

So, if your girlfriend to want you back and appreciate you when back with you, here are some mistakes to avoid making!

1. Assuming that a girlfriend has to appreciate her ex boyfriend because of what he did for her

Based on you reading an article with this kind of title (i.e. My Ex Girlfriend Doesn't Appreciate Me), I can safely say that you're probably a really good guy.

You most likely have a big heart, are fairly generous as a person, have good intentions with women and just want a woman who loves you and appreciates you.

That's great.

It's all good.

However, to get that kind of treatment from a woman, you really have to understand what makes a woman appreciate, feel attracted to and love a man for life.

I can tell you it's not just being good to her, or having good intentions.

Instead, it's about the relationship dynamic that you create and maintain (i.e. where she feels the need to impress you, show appreciation towards you and make sure that you are happy as well).

If you are the one who mostly feels the need to impress her, treat her well and hope that she doesn't leave you, then she won't be happy with that type of dynamic in the long run.

Some women say they want that from a man, but if you pay attention, you will notice that the women who are the happiest, most in love and most attracted to their man, are those in a relationship where they feel the need to impress the man as well.

It's not a one-sided relationship.

She feels like she needs to impress him, make him feel appreciated and show him the respect that he deserves, otherwise she could lose him.

All of that comes down to the dynamic that you create and maintain in a relationship.

You have to get the dynamic right.

If you do, she will naturally appreciate you and feel like it would be her loss if she didn't get you back.

On the other hand, if you give her the impression that she is more valuable than you and doesn't need to impress you, then she will feel like it's your loss and not hers.

Another mistake to avoid making is!

2. Telling her how it upsets you that she doesn't appreciate you

When a guy tells his ex woman how upset he is, he will usually be hoping that she will react by thinking something like, Oh no! I feel so bad now. He doesn't deserve to be upset. How horrible of me. I'm going to start being so much more appreciative of him from now on. After all, he was my boyfriend. So, I owe it to him to treat him well.

Yet, in almost all cases, a woman feels turned off by her ex's emotional weakness and for him seeking pity from her.

Why?

Women simply aren't attracted to emotional weakness and desperation, especially after a break up.

To get an ex woman back, you have to be behaving in ways that attract her, not turn her off.

It's okay to make some mistakes, but overall, you need to be behaving in a way that attracts her to you and makes her feel like losing you would be her loss.

So, if you want to get your ex back, don't bother telling her how upset you feel based on her not appreciating you.

Instead, just use any interaction that you have with her from now on to show her that you're now the kind of man that she always wanted you to be (e.g. you're so much more confident, emotionally strong and emotionally masculine now) to begin reawakening some of her feelings for you.

The more attracted you make her feel, the more she will feel drawn to you and naturally want to give you another chance, or at least hook up with you again sexually to see how she feels afterwards.

On the other hand, if you are continually making subtle mistakes that turn her off, then she will just keep trying to move on without you and may end up feeling less appreciative about everything you did for her in the past because it was from a guy that she is so turned off by now.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Assuming that she should appreciate the fact that you put up with her bad treatment of you and kept being good to her

Wouldn't it be awesome if being a good guy to a woman guaranteed that she would appreciate you and treat you nicely for life?

All a guy would have to do is be nice to a woman and she would respond by giving him her complete devotion, respect and appreciation.

She would never treat him badly, never throw a tantrum and never disrespect him because he is a good guy.

Unfortunately, it doesn't work that way.

The reality is a woman simply cannot appreciate a guy who is always being good to her regardless of how badly she treats him.

That doesn't mean she wants him to be mean to her.

Instead, she wants him to create a relationship dynamic that automatically causes her to be good to him, appreciate him, respect him and love him.

If he does that, he will bring out her good girl side and she will love him so much more as a result. She will love who she is with him.

She will feel happy that she's being a good girl, treating her man well and feeling the love she always wanted to feel with a man.

So, if you want to make your ex appreciate you and feel drawn to you again, don't go complaining to her about that.

Simply change how she feels about you by adjusting the way you approach interactions with her from now on.

Many guys are able to get ex women back immediately using that approach, whereas other guys need a few days to a week or so to get it done.

You can get your ex girlfriend back and make her so much more appreciative of you than she ever has been before.

Best of all, she will love you so much more for bringing that side of her out.

Women are at their happiest when they are in love with their man, appreciative of him and treating him well.

Bring that side of her out and both of you will be so much more in love, appreciative of each other and happier together as a result.

My Ex Likes Me, But is Too Busy to Be in a Relationship

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 reasons why a woman will say that to her ex boyfriend:

1. She is genuinely busy and only wants to have casual sex, rather than having to deal with the pressures and obligations of a committed relationship

[image: She just wants casual sex and not a committed relationship]

After a break up, a woman will usually try keep herself busy (e.g. focus more on her career or studies, party with her single friends, travel, try new things that she couldn't do because of her relationship) as a way of hopefully getting over her ex and moving on.

While doing that, she might realize that even though she likes her ex and misses him, she actually enjoys the freedom of being single again.

Additionally, if she has a lot going on in her life, she may find that she doesn't have the time or energy for a committed relationship right now.

So, if her ex tries to convince her to give him another chance, she says something along the lines of, "I'm sorry, but I can't. Maybe sometime in the future we can get back together again, but for now, I can't handle everything in my life and be a good girlfriend to you as well. You deserve better. I just can't offer you what you want. I'm just too busy to be in a relationship right now."

If her ex can honestly accept that she doesn't want to be in a committed relationship where they see each other all the time, text regularly and so on, then she may open up to having casual sex with him from time to time.

Then, if he approaches the attraction process correctly, he can seduce her back into a relationship with him.

Yet, if he pushes for a committed, boyfriend-girlfriend relationship and seems to only want that, then she will most likely continue rejecting him.

Then, as a way of moving forward without her ex, she will feel motivated to hook up with another guy who isn't interested in being in a relationship and is happy to enjoy the benefits of sex without commitment.

If she happens to really like the new guy, she may even get into a committed relationship with him and then it will be a different ex back case altogether.

So, before your ex moves on, you should start approaching the ex back process in a new way.

Rather than pushing for a relationship, you should use every interaction that you have with her from now on to make her experience new feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

You can't achieve that by using the same approach you've been using.

You have to use a new and different approach to attraction.

An approach that will make her feel like she would be the one who ends up regretting losing you, if she doesn't give you another chance.

The more you are able to attract her in new and interesting ways that she hasn't experienced with you before, the more she will feel like she shouldn't let go of what she has with you.

Based on you being able to easily re-attract her, she will begin to worry that other women will now find you so much more attractive.

The fear of you meeting a new woman who is potentially as pretty or prettier than her, can make her feel compelled to just open back up to you and give the relationship another chance for now, rather than ending up feeling like she got rejected and left behind by you.

However, if you continue pushing for her to commit to a relationship before making her feel that way, then will likely just keep saying that she is too busy for a relationship.

Eventually, she will stop replying to your texts or answering your calls and may even get to the point where she blocks your number for a while, so she can start moving on with new guys.

Don't make that mistake.

Another possible reason why your ex said that she likes you, but is too busy for a relationship, is

2. She doesn't feel enough attraction for you anymore to be motivated to have a relationship

[image: She doesn't feel enough attraction for you anymore, to be motivated to have a relationship]

She may have some feelings for you, but not enough to make her want to get back together.

This often happens when the relationship started out well (e.g. they had an unique connection, he was a good guy to her, the sex was good, they enjoyed a lot of fun and interesting times together), but then, over time, it ended up feeling more like a friendship than a romantic, sexual relationship.

In other words, the attraction was there initially, but it then fizzled out and remained that way for quite a while.

Some women will put up with that kind of relationship dynamic for years (i.e. no spark, no strong desire), whereas some will only put up with it for weeks or months and then leave.

Whatever the case is though, at some point, a woman will begin to wonder things like, â€œWhy don't I feel as attracted to him as I used to? Should I stay in this relationship even though I don't feel like I'm in love now? Would I be better off being single for a while, or trying a new relationship? Will he ever change? Should I wait for him to change? Can he change?â€

If a woman senses that her guy either has no idea how or what to change, or he doesn't seem motivated enough to change, she will usually go ahead and break up with him.

Yet, just because she breaks up with him, it doesn't mean that all of her feelings for him are completely gone.

In many cases, the woman still likes her ex and thinks of him as a great guy.

It's just that she doesn't feel enough attraction and love for him to justify getting back into a sexual relationship.

In other words, she likes him as person, but she doesn't feel those all important sexual and romantic sparks with him.

As a result, she doesn't see the point to getting back into a boyfriend-girlfriend relationship with him.

She could and it would be convenient and easy, but she knows that he probably won't change and as a result, her feelings won't really be any different to before.

So, she feels confused about what to do.

In many cases, to try and work out what she should do, she will open herself up to texting with him, talking on the phone and even meeting in person.

Yet, if he still doesn't know how to give her the kind of attraction experience she wants, she will continue rejecting him and then try to move on with a new guy instead.

Watch this video to learn more about how to give your girlfriend the attraction experience she really wants!

After helping new men get ex women back for many years now, I've found that when a man is in a situation like yours (i.e. your ex likes you, but is too busy to be in a relationship), he can easily change her mind by changing his approach to attraction.

For example: If he was too neutral with her and treated her more like an equal friend, he now starts being more masculine in the way he speaks, thinks, feels and behaves, so she can then feel more feminine in comparison to him.

When a woman feels very feminine in comparison to a man's masculinity, she automatically feels magnetically attracted to him.

It's a primal, instinctive attraction that applies in today's world, regardless of how strong or independent a woman is.

At the end of the day, a woman wants to feel girly and feminine in comparison to her man's masculinity.

She may not be willing to admit that, because she doesn't want a guy to feel too empowered to be manly, but she will react to it with attraction, respect, love and devotion.

Not many guys truly understand how a woman's attraction works and as a result, they struggle to attract new women or keep relationships together their entire life.

Don't let that happen to you with your ex, or with your future relationships.

Now is the best time for you to truly understand attraction and use it to re-attract your ex back into a relationship that is even better than before.

Another possible reason why your ex said that she liked you, but is too busy for a relationship, is this!

3. It's just an excuse to hopefully convince you to give her some space while she moves on behind your back

[image: It is just an excuse to get some space to move on]

When a guy gets broken up with against his will (i.e. his girl wants to break up, but he doesn't), he will naturally feel compelled to get her back to stop the painful emotions he is experiencing.

He might then end up texting, calling, messaging, e-mailing and even showing up unexpectedly at places where he feels he can bump into his ex girl and try and convince her to give him another chance.

As a result, the girl can end up feeling quite pressured and smothered by his approach to getting her back.

So, to hopefully get him to give her some space, a woman might say something along the lines of, â€œLookâ€¦ I like you, but Iâ€™m too busy to be in a relationship at the moment. Youâ€™re a great guy, but I just canâ€™t be in a relationship. Maybe sometime in the future when things have calmed down for me, then okay we can get back together again. For now though, I just need some space. I need you to respect that. I need time to get my life under control. Now is not the time for me to be in a relationship. You need to give me some space.â€

Since she is saying that they can get back together in future, the guy might then back off for a little while, thinking that heâ€™s eventually going to get her back.

In the meantime though, the woman will almost always (Iâ€™d estimate at least 95% based on the 1,000s of ex back cases Iâ€™ve dealt with) use the time apart to quickly find herself a new man.

She will do that to create an additional barrier in between her and her ex getting back together (i.e. she can say that she has a new boyfriend now and he doesnâ€™t want her speaking with her ex), or to hopefully make her ex feel turned off by the idea of another man sleeping with her, which will then make him give up on getting her back.

Itâ€™s a pretty common tactic women use to get out of a relationship and reduce their exâ€™s motivation to get them back.

Yet, on the surface, she is just saying, â€œI donâ€™t have time for a relationship now. Give me some time to get my life under control and after that, we can probably get back together.â€

It seems totally innocent and fine.

Yet, when her ex contacts her after a few weeks or so to ask something like, â€œHey, how are you? Have things settled down in your life, or? Iâ€™ve been missing you. Are you ready to give our relationship another try?â€ she will be able to say something along the lines of, â€œIâ€™m sorry, but I have a new boyfriend now. I really didnâ€™t intend for things to turn out this way, but it just happened. Youâ€™re a great guy and I hate the idea of hurting you, but I met someone else and now Iâ€™m with him. Please accept that and move on.â€

At that point, many guys will feel angry at their ex for leading them on.

Hopefully you wonâ€™t have to go through that horrible experience now that youâ€™ve read about it and know what can happen if you wait too long to get her back.

If you want your ex back, you donâ€™t allow yourself to fall into the trap of giving her too much space in the hope that she will remain single and then some day, she will suddenly be less busy and then want to be with you.

Of course, that doesnâ€™t mean you should chase after her in a needy, desperate way and turn her off in the process.

Instead, simply stick around as her â€œfriendâ€œ so you can use interactions that you have with her (e.g. via text, social media, audio or video phone calls, in person catch ups) to re-attract her.

Make her feel the type of attraction that causes her to feel as though she will be the one losing out if she let you go.

Let her fear that you might be the one that got away for her and that she might end up regretting it and missing you her entire life.

Of course, don't tell her that (that won't work).

You have to make her feel it (that is what works).

Another possible reason why your ex said it is

4. The relationship took up too much of her time because of how much you liked to text, talk on the phone or hang out

[image: The relationship took up too much of her time, due to how often you texted and wanted to see her]

Although it can initially be fun for a woman to text, chat and hang out with a new boyfriend all the time, her instincts will eventually kick in and tell her that something isn't right, if her boyfriend continues to behave in that way.

Why?

A woman's instincts push her to be with a man who has purpose and ambition outside of a relationship with her.

Her instincts also cause her to lose interest when a guy makes his whole life about her and spends so much time with her (or on her via text) that he neglects following through on his true potential as a man outside of the relationship.

She may not be able to explain it clearly to a guy, but she will say things like, I just don't feel the same way anymore even if the relationship was totally amazing initially.

She goes from being completely in love with him and happy, to, I just don't know how I feel anymore.

It's very confusing for guys who don't understand how a woman's attraction really works.

As a result, a guy who is unaware, will often make the mistake of constantly texting his girlfriend, spending all of spare time with her and letting her see that his life has essentially become all about her.

From his point of view, he's being a great boyfriend because he is so committed to her, so in love with her and so connected with her.

Yet, from her perspective, she increasingly begins to feel as though he is a needy, clingy boyfriend who isn't rising through the level of his true potential as a man outside of the relationship with her.

Additionally, his approach to the relationship takes up so much of her time and she instinctively feels as though it's not leading to progress in life.

They're just hanging out and wasting time.

In addition to her instinctive reaction, that approach to a relationship can also cause a woman to feel resentful towards her guy for leading her along a path of essentially wasting time.

As a result, she begins to disconnect for her feelings of respect and attraction for him, which then makes her start to fall out of love with him.

When that happens, a woman will usually then decide to break up with her boyfriend and try to find herself a man who will be more focused on making progress in life.

If her ex then tries to get her back (without even realizing where has been going wrong), she might say, “I really do like you, but I’m just too busy to be in a relationship” to avoid hurting his feelings, or having to explain why she is feeling that way (if she can) and then having to deal with him saying, “Okay, please give me another chance. I will change. I will focus more on my goals, I promise. Just give me a chance.”

Many women don’t want to put their boyfriend in a position where he is desperately offering to change and be what she wants, because that is also unattractive to women.

Women are attracted to men who able to be a man, without needing a woman to help them and guide them (i.e. take on a big sister or mother role, or behave like a mentor or teacher).

So, if you made the mistake of focusing way too much on her and neglecting your progress as a man, then you need to start getting clear on what your biggest goals, dreams and aspirations are as a man.

You don’t have to achieve any of them right now, of course.

You just need to get clear on them and start moving towards them, so the next time you talk to her (hopefully within a few days. Don’t leave it too long or she may move on), she can sense that you have already begun to change and become the sort of man she really wants and she didn’t even have to tell you what to do.

That is such a relief for a woman to see.

It takes all the pressure off her shoulders when she can see that you’ve manned up, without having to turn to her for help (which she won’t want to give anyway).

It shows her that you are the sort of man who will become more of a man over time because you get it now.

Women know how rare it is to find a man like that and when they do, they hold on tight.

When your ex senses this change in you, she will then begin to crave your time and attention and put in the effort to contact you.

So, here’s what you need to do:

- Stop contacting her for a few days (or a week at the most).
- Improve your ability to attract her during interactions.
- Interact with her and re-attract her. Arrange a catch up if you sense she wants it. If not;
- Give her a few more days of space and contact her again. Arrange a catch up.

Another possible reason why a woman will tell her ex that she likes him, but doesn’t have the time or energy for a relationship at the moment is

5. She is studying for a degree that requires a lot of work, or is involved in a demanding career where she works many hours per week

[image: She is studying or has a demanding career]

Sometimes a serious, committed relationship and all of the responsibilities that can go with it (e.g. texting, seeing her boyfriend regularly) can just be too much for a woman who is honestly busy with her life.

That doesn't mean you have to give up on her though.

Instead, simply agree to be friends with her for now and use that friendship (and the occasional interactions that go along with it) to make her miss you and want you back.

In other words, don't be an innocent non-flirtatious friend who wants to be there for her or anything like that.

Instead, be a sexy, appealing who she can't stop thinking about in a sexual way.

The more attracted she feels to you, the less she will want to lose you.

She will then feel motivated to find a way to career (or studies) and her relationship with you.

Mistakes to Avoid When Getting a Busy Woman Back

The reality is that, even if a woman is busy, she will go out of her way to make time for a man who makes her feel the kind of irresistible attraction that every woman tries hard to find in a relationship.

You know the feeling when it comes to women.

Maybe even with your ex.

That unstoppable, never ending desire to just be with her in every way.

You can make your ex feel like that about you, but to do so, it's important that you avoid the following mistakes:

1. Trying to work things out with her via text, which just makes her feel more stressed and overwhelmed with the workload of her life

Trying to work relationship problems out via text is exhausting.

There's just so much that could be discussed and when it does begin to be discussed via text, there are almost always misunderstandings of what the other person actually means.

Then, there more explanations are needed, apologies come in, attempts to recover from the texting mistake come in and so on.

It can turn into a lot of effort, which is something that a busy girl doesn't want to have to put in, especially after breaking up with a guy that she no longer has enough feelings to be with him.

This can result in a girl wanting to block her ex's number or social media profile, so she can try to get on with her life without him.

So, if you want to get your busy ex back, don't try to discuss things with her via text, mend the relationship or even just have ongoing, friendly chats about random things that go on and on.

What should you do instead?

Call her (video or audio call).

A call cuts through all the texting misunderstandings and allows you to instantly begin attracting her based on your confidence, masculinity, humor and so on.

When she can sense (audio call) or see (video call) that she feels comfortable talking to you and also feels attracted to you, then she realizes that catching up in person would most likely feel good too.

As a result, she is so much more likely to agree to catching up in person if you call her (and re-attract her on the call), rather than if you keep texting her and end up making her feel like interacting with you is stressful, time consuming and frustrating.

The reality is that if you hide behind texts, it just adds to her stress levels and then she feels like blocking your number, so she doesn't have to deal with you anymore.

Don't put yourself in that situation.

If you do, then you probably won't be able to talk to her again (or for a long time), which will make it difficult to get her back.

Another mistake is

2. Not realizing that she would most likely be happy with a friends with benefits relationship, if you could just adapt to that for now

[image: Get a friends with benefits relationship going for now]

Having an all or nothing mentality (i.e. she either accepts a committed, boyfriend-girlfriend relationship with you or nothing) with your ex will push her away if she is secretly just interested in a friends with benefits (i.e. casual sex sometimes, no commitment) relationship at the moment.

Don't push away an FWB opportunity with her.

Allow it, so you can then have an excuse to see each other and as result, you then have an opportunity to re-attract her further and make her feel like she doesn't want to lose you.

3. Trying to make her feel sorry for you based on how confused you are by her behavior

Sometimes, a guy makes the mistake of thinking that if he shows his ex woman how much pain and confusion he's feeling based on her reason for leaving the relationship, she will feel so bad about it that she will decide to stick with the relationship.

Yet, it almost never works out that way.

Here's the thing

It's a woman's natural instinct to be more attracted to the kind of guy who has the emotional strength to cope with the problems and challenges that life throw at him, compared to a guy who breaks down emotionally and seeks pity (especially from women).

So, when a guy is looking for pity from his ex woman, she actually feels turned off by him.

She then feels glad that she broke up with him when she did and motivated to find herself a man who doesn't seek, need or want pity from a woman.

Always remember this: A woman doesn't want to be in a relationship with a man out of a sense of pity, or guilt.

A woman wants to be with a man because he makes her feel good.

When a woman is with a man who makes her feel good, she won't want to end a relationship due to being busy because she knows that another quality woman will get with him in a heartbeat.

If that happens, she will be the rejected one who has gotten left behind.

So, to avoid that emotional pain, she will go out of her way to spend enough time with her boyfriend to keep the relationship alive.

On the other hand, if her boyfriend is seeking pity from her due to her leaving him based on being too busy, she will feel turned off and smothered by his neediness.

Another mistake to avoid is

4. Not focusing on using humor to get her enjoying the interactions she has with you

If a woman is busy, she will usually feel stressed and pressured by all the things going on her life.

Instant relief from all of that pressure is laughter.

Real laughter.

If you can approach your interactions with her from now on, with a focus on making her laugh and feel good, she will naturally want to interact with you more and see you in person because you are her relief from all the stress.

On the other hand, if you call or text your ex and annoy her by saying something like, "I don't understand why you are doing this. You said you like me, so why don't you want to be with me? I promise that I won't take up so much of your time anymore. I just want to be with you. Please let's give our relationship another chance," chances are high that she will feel stressed because you are pushing for something she doesn't want right now.

Additionally, if you interact with her and just try to be her friend and "be there for her" or have serious conversations about things, she probably won't feel the all important sparks of sexual and romantic attraction needed for her to want to be with you physically.

Then, if another guy comes along and sparks her sexual and romantic feelings, don't be surprised if she says something along the lines of, "I really wasn't looking for a relationship because I was busy, but he swept me off my feet. I'm sorry, but I think it's better if we stop talking to each other. I wish you all the best."

My Girlfriend Found Out That I Cheated and Then Left Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 different strategies you can use to get a woman back after cheating on her.

Have a read though the following options and choose the one you think would work best for your situation.

Option 1: Let her have some space to start dating and realize how much she misses you

Some guys are okay with this option, whereas others can't stand the idea of their girlfriend being with another man.

It really depends on you and the type of relationship you've had with her.

So, here's how it works.

If you decide to give her some space to start dating again and she then struggles to find a new guy, or doesn't find a guy who makes her feel as attracted as you do, she will naturally start to miss you.

She will realize that, although you did cheat on her, no other guy can make her feel the way you do, so there's no point trying to avoid you and pretend that she doesn't want to be with you.

At that point, she might text you to say âHi to show her interest and hope that you pick up on it and get her back.

Of course, not every woman will text her ex first though, even if she really does miss him.

Many women worry about reaching out to an ex boyfriend, showing interest in him and then finding out that he is happy with a new girl, dating the girl he cheated on her with, or simply doesn't have any intention of getting back with her.

If she gets that type of response from him or senses it, she will feel rejected and left behind.

So, to avoid that kind of emotional pain, most women wait and hope that their ex boyfriend contacts them and tries to get the relationship back together.

This is why, if you decide to give her some space to start dating and realize that she misses you, don't just wait for her to hopefully contact you one day.

Another strategy you can take now that your girlfriend has left you for cheating on her, is

Option 2: Make her want to forgive you and give you another chance

Firstly, if you haven't already done so, you need to sincerely apologize to her for what happened.

Just make sure that you do it over the phone, or even better, in person rather than via text (i.e. because she can easily delete the message without reading it).

Additionally, make sure that you maintain your cool and be confident in yourself, rather than breaking down and crying, or sucking up to her as you apologize to her.

A sincere, direct apology is all that is needed to make your point without coming across as desperate, or making your ex feel like she has a lot of power over you, which she doesn't want.

So, just keep it together, be your normal, cool self and sincerely apologize for cheating on her and hurting her.

For example: You might say something along the lines of, “Look. Before you say anything, I just want to apologize to you for what happened. I know that it would have hurt you to find out that I cheated. So, I'm sorry for what I put you through. You know I love you. Of course, I don't expect you and I to get back together, but I do love you.”

If your ex is still attracted to you and does want to be with you, then saying that will help open her back up, make her want to forgive you and cause her to want to hug you, kiss you, have sex and get back together.

On the other hand, if your ex isn't attracted to you at the moment, then it will reduce some of her negative feelings towards you.

As a result, she will open up to you a little more and you can then begin to make her feel more and more attracted as you interact with her.

When you approach it that, she will want to stop thinking about how you cheated on her and start falling back in love with the man that you are now.

Another strategy you can use now that your girlfriend has left you for cheating on her, is that

Option 3: Move on, start enjoying your life without her and let her see it on social media

One of the easiest ways to re-attract a woman after a break up is to let her see you looking confident, happy and included (i.e. around others) in photos and videos on social media.

It might seem like a cruel thing to do, but it works because women are attracted to men who remain confident, happy and forward moving in life no matter what.

Of course, it's not something that women want to admit because they don't want to encourage an ex guy to do that and then end up feeling hurt and rejected by him.

Yet, it works.

When a woman sees that her ex man is happy and getting on with his life without her, it actually makes her feel drawn to him again.

She can't help it.

It's an instinctive reaction (i.e. because women are naturally attracted to emotionally strong men and turned off by wimpy, insecure men).

Even if a woman feels angry or annoyed when she sees that her ex is happy without her (i.e. because she doesn't have power over him like she thought she did), she will also feel respect and attraction for him for being so emotionally independent and strong without her.

So, be prepared for some fake anger if she does contact you.

She might say, “I see that you don't give a crap about me. You're already moving and enjoying your life. Well, at least now I know that you never cared. You are an asshole. Goodbye.”

Why would she say something like that if she is secretly feeling drawn to you and hurting that youâ€¢re not in her life?

Simple.

She wants to see if you will maintain your confidence, while also being good to her (that is what works), or if you will crumble under the pressure, apologize over and over and tell her that youâ€¢re not happy without her (that doesnâ€¢t work).

By the wayâ€¢

If she has unfriended you on Facebook since the break up or doesnâ€¢t follow you on Instagram or other social media, just set your photos and videos to public so that she can see them from the outside.

Almost all women will check on an ex via social media to see what heâ€¢s up to, even if itâ€¢s only to see if heâ€¢s feeling sad and lost without her so she can feel good about herself.

So, make sure that you update all of your social media profiles to show you looking confident, happy and included (i.e. around others who want to be around you and are having a good time with you).

Donâ€¢t post any sad, lonely photos of yourself, or random memes about irrelevant things that show her that you have nothing important to do and are just passing the time while you sit at home all alone.

When she can see for herself that you are confident, happy and getting on with life without her, she will feel drawn to you again, even if she doesnâ€¢t want to.

You can then get her back and into a relationship where she really does want to be with you again.

Another approach you can use now that your girlfriend has left you for cheating on her isâ€¢

Option 4: Catch up with her just as friends, but then seduce her at the meet up

In some cases, a guy will still be able to call his ex girlfriend after she has broken up with him.

If thatâ€¢s the case for you, then call her and arrange a time to catch up as friends.

Then, seduce her at the meet up.

On the other hand, if your girlfriend isnâ€¢t answering your calls at the moment, then hereâ€¢s what you can do insteadâ€¢

Try to call her at a time when you think sheâ€¢d be able to answer (e.g. donâ€¢t call her when sheâ€¢s at work or university, on a Friday or Saturday night when she might be busy, or pretend to be busy. Try to call when you think sheâ€¢d be chilling out at home by herself).

If she doesnâ€¢t answer your call, follow up by sending her this text: Â€Hey. I was trying to get hold of you to ask you something quick on the phone, but you seem to be busy at the moment. Itâ€¢s nothing serious, but I do need to talk to you on the phone. Iâ€¢ll give you a call tonight at about 6pm to talk to you about it. It will only take a minute or so, I promise.Â€

She might then respond with something along the lines of, Â€I donâ€¢t want to talk to you on the phone. Just tell me what you wantÂ€ or, Â€Iâ€¢m busy tonight. Just tell me now and get it over with.Â€

Regardless of how she responds, don't make the mistake of texting back and forth with her. Instead, just say that you'll tell her when you call her later, or just call her right away and have the conversation.

In most cases, a woman will be curious to find out what you want to talk to her about, so she will answer the phone.

Then, once you've got her on a phone call with her, use some humor to ease the tension and awkwardness between you and her.

Get her smiling and laughing and feeling good to be talking to you.

Now, the thing that you want to talk to her about is catching up to say hi as friends.

So, after getting her smiling and laughing with some initial humor, you can say, "Hey, it's been good talking to you again" and let her say something.

She might then add something like, "Yeah, you too" and you can say, "We should talk again sometime soon" and let her say something.

If she says, "Yes" you can then say, "Well, I'm glad we can be mature about this and talk, especially after all that happened. Look, I think it would be great to catch up as friends and say hi this week. I've got free time on Tuesday and Thursday. Which of those days would be better for you?"

Even if she's initially resistant to the idea, don't lose confidence in yourself.

Encourage her to catch up and let her know that it's just you and her catching up as friends.

At the meet up, actively make her feel attracted to you and drawn to you once again.

Some of the ways you can do that are by

- Flirting with her to create sexual tension between you, rather than just talking to her like a friend.
Believing in yourself and in your value to her, rather than doubting yourself because of what she has said to try to hurt you and make you lose confidence.
- Making her smile and laugh and feel relaxed to be around you again, rather than trying to get into intense, deep discussions about what happened.
Showing her that you're a new and improved man that she can now fully trust, respect, feel attracted to and love, rather than behaving in ways that give her the impression that you might end up cheating on her again.
- Not losing touch with the cool, confident side of yourself that attracted her to you in the first place. In other words, don't turn into a soft, wimpy guy who is trying to suck up to her by being really nice.
- Being masculine in how you talk, behave and act, so she can feel feminine in comparison to you and therefore, feel naturally attracted to you. Don't make the mistake of suppressing your masculinity to be nice.

Once your girlfriend begins to relax and open herself up to you due to feeling attracted, you can progress to giving her a hug, a kiss and then hook up with her sexually to get the relationship back together.

Avoid Making These 3 Mistakes

You can get your ex girlfriend back after cheating on her, but just make sure that you don't make these classic mistakes!

1. Apologizing over and over

In most cases, you do need to apologize to your girlfriend for cheating on her.

Sometimes though, a woman doesn't need an apology because she knew that her boyfriend was a bit of a player and would be sleeping with other women, so it was kind of expected.

In cases like that, the guy just needs to re-attract her, hook up with her again and get her to love him.

In other cases, a woman does need to receive an apology because she loved her boyfriend and honestly thought that he was totally committed to her and truly wanted to be with her.

In cases like that, she will have invested herself heavily into the relationship and he will have been giving her the impression that he only wanted to be with her.

So, giving her an apology in a case like that is needed.

However, apologizing over and over again will not help.

Why?

Apologizing over and over seems weak to her and it begins to give her power over you that she doesn't want.

If a woman starts to feel like she has too much power over her boyfriend and he has essentially lost all confidence and become needy, then she will lose respect and attraction for him.

When that happens, she won't want to get back with him.

So, if you've already sincerely apologized to your girlfriend for cheating on her, then there's no need to keep apologizing to her about it.

Once is enough.

From now on, what is important is that you show her via your attitude, actions and behavior that you do love her and want to be with her, but aren't being needy about it.

When she senses that, she will respect you from maintaining your cool under pressure and as a result, will open up to feeling attracted to you again.

When that happens, she will start feeling love in her heart and will want to be with you.

2. Assuming that she could never forgive you and give you another chance

Most women are able to accept and deal with cheating a lot better than men, because it's actually attractive to a woman when other women want her man.

Not that she will admit that though.

On the other hand, it's much more difficult for most men to deal with the idea of another man sliding his dick into their girlfriend's pussy and mouth.

Just imagining her enjoying sucking another man's dick, or her gladly bending over to get banged by him can stress a guy out and make him feel sick to the stomach.

Yet, women don't have the same kind of reaction to their man having sex with another woman.

Why?

In evolutionary terms, a male who can attract many females is much more desirable than a male who can't attract any.

It's an ancient instinct that still applies to modern women, even if they don't want to openly admit it (i.e. because it would encourage men to be unfaithful).

So, if a guy cheats on his girlfriend, it can and will hurt her and may even cause her to break up with him and try to remain broken up.

However, she will instinctively feel attracted to him because other women find him attractive enough to sleep with him.

So, don't assume that she won't be able to forgive you and give you another chance.

She may never forget that you cheated, but if you make her feel enough attraction for you from now on by using some of the tips from this article, then she will be willing to forgive your mistake so she can get back with you.

3. Not knowing how to turn her pain into pleasure

Feelings change all the time.

She can literally go from feeling the pain of being betrayed by you, to feeling the joy of getting back with you and loving you so much more than before.

So, don't give up.

You can get her back.

You can get rid of the pain she is feeling and turn it into intense pleasure for the both of you.

You can make the relationship better than it ever was.

You can also make her want to stop thinking about the cheating and just focus on you and her.

She Said She Might Be Moving Away, So She Wants to Break Up Now Rather Than Leaving Me Later On

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

These are the 5 most common reasons why a woman will say that to her boyfriend:

1. She doesn't know how else to say that it's over, so she is using a potentially moving away as an excuse to end the relationship

[image: She doesn't know how else to say that it's over]

Sometimes a woman knows that she isn't going to move away, but she uses it as an excuse to end a relationship that she's not happy with.

Some of the reasons why a woman will lie to her boyfriend in that way, include:

- She doesn't want him to try and talk her out of her decision if she explains her real reasons for breaking up with him (e.g. he's too insecure, not manly enough, gives her too much power). If she tells him her real reasons, he can then say, "I promise I can change. Just give me a chance" and she may then feel obligated to give him a chance.
- She's worried that he might lose control of his emotions and start crying, begging and pleading with her to change her mind.
- She is nervous about him potentially getting angry at her (if she tells him her real reasons for the break up) and possibly even reacting violently in some way.
- She is trying to avoid hurting his feelings by using an excuse for the break up, rather than saying something like, "Look, you're just not manly enough, okay? You were a fairly confident guy initially, but you've turned into a sensitive, insecure over time. I don't like it. I'm leaving you. I want a confident man, not an insecure guy."
- She is trying to get him ready for the day when she eventually breaks up with him. Her talking about moving away is just the first step to get him used to the idea of potentially breaking up. She doesn't know what else to say to him to get him to leave her.

As a result, she tries to use the excuse of not wanting to hurt him later on due to her potentially moving away as a way out of the relationship.

If she isn't actually planning on moving away for real and her boyfriend accepts the break up, she will then focus on quickly finding herself a new man behind his back.

She will do that quickly, so she can then have an additional reason why he can't be with her (e.g. she says, "I've met someone else. We are really happy and he doesn't want me talking to you. I don't want to ruin things with him, so please don't contact me. Respect the fact that we've broken up. I wish you all the best").

If her ex boyfriend then says something like, "What? I thought you said you would be moving away. Now I see that you're still here and you've got a new boyfriend. What's going on?"

What really happened?â

She can say, âIâm sorry. I really did have plans to move away, but that all changed. I decided to stay. Then, I met someone else totally by accident and Iâm in love with him. Sorry for hurting you, but I didnât intend to. Things just happened. So, I hope you can respect my new relationship and give us the space we need. I will always have a special place for you in my heart. I wish you all the very best. Goodbye.â

She will then try to get on with her life and hope that her ex will accept the break up and move on as well.

This is why, if your ex is using the old, âIâ might be moving away, so we should break up nowâ excuse on you because she doesnât know how else to break up with you, then you need to change your approach with her to get another chance.

That doesnât mean you should beg, plead, cry or behave in other ways that can turn her off.

Instead, the best way to approach to use is to first accept her decision by saying something along the lines of, âOkay. If thatâs what you want, I accept it. We are broken up and never getting back together. However, until you move away, letâs agree to at least remain friends, okay?â

She will almost certainly agree to that because she wonât want to seem unreasonable and because you have accepted the break up, so she will want to support that behavior.

You can then use the âfriendshipâ to keep the channels of communication open between you and her, which you will then use to re-attract her and make her want you back.

When you reawaken her sexual and romantic feelings for you, everything will automatically begin to change.

If she really isnât planning on moving away, then she will say that she has changed her mind or is thinking of changing her mind.

If she is actually planning on moving away, then she will want to open back up to you for the time being, so she doesnât miss out on the irresistible feelings of sexual and romantic attraction that practically everyone craves.

She might also begin to have second thoughts about moving because of how she feels about you now.

She feels so much attraction for the new and improved you.

So, use the power of attraction to your advantage.

Make her suddenly feel like she doesnât want to miss out on what it feels like to be with you now.

That is what will stop her in her tracks and make her want to remain with you.

Another reason why a woman will say that she wants to break up because she might be moving away, isâ

2. She really does plan on moving and wants to be able to move to the new place feeling happy, free and ready to flirt with other guys

[image: She wants to break up now, so she feels free to meet and flirt with men at her new location]

Imagine thisâ€¦!

A woman has to move to another town, state or even country (due to a change in her job, or university, or for some other reason) while she is still in a relationship with a guy that she truly loves.

She doesnâ€™t want to have to break up with him, but she has to move away no matter what.

She believes that a long distance relationship wouldnâ€™t work between them, so she decides that it would be better to break up.

When she makes that decision, she then begins preparing herself emotionally to become single again.

For example: She imagines flirting with new guys, potentially falling in love or just enjoying casual dating and sex for a while in her new city or town.

She begins to feel excited about the adventures she might have, the new feelings and the freedom she will feel once there.

She will be a single woman.

She will be free to do whatever wants.

It could be fun and she wants to experience it.

As a result, she wants to break up with her boyfriend now, to avoid dragging things on until she leaves and then potentially having him visiting her and trying to get her back in her new location.

So, she tells him that she might be moving away and wants to break up now, rather than having to leave him later on and hurt him or both of them in the process.

She tells him that itâ€™s best for both of them, itâ€™s the mature thing to do and so on.

If he accepts it, she can then have enough time to begin getting over him before the big move.

Then, when she finally does move away, she will be emotionally ready to go out, meet new men and have fun.

She wonâ€™t have to worry about feeling guilty for cheating on her boyfriend, because they will have already broken up a while back.

So, she will officially be single and ready to mingle.

It sucks for her ex boyfriend, but itâ€™s good for her.

Of course, if a guy is in that situation right now, he can change her mind and keep the relationship together for the time being.

Another reason why a woman will say that she wants to break up because she might be moving away, isâ€¦!

3. She wants to be single again and spend time with her girlfriends, so she is using it as an excuse

[image: She's using it as an excuse to become single, so she can pick up new men with her single girlfriends]

Sometimes, a woman will get into a relationship and really love her boyfriend, but then eventually feel like she just isnâ€™t ready to settle down for life yet.

This feeling can be amplified if her single girlfriends are having loads of fun meeting new guys, having sex and enjoying their freedom, while she is stuck in a relationship that no longer makes her feel excited, happy or in love.

As a result, she may use an excuse of having to move away sometime in the future, to break up with her boyfriend.

If he accepts it, she can then enjoy being single again and focus on having the fun that she's been craving, without feeling too guilty about it, or having to resort to cheating while still in a relationship.

Here's the thing!

In today's world, a woman won't stay in a relationship with a guy just because things felt great between them at the start.

Instead, if she notices that the spark between them has fizzled out and her girlfriends who have a boyfriend or husband are happy and in love, then she will begin to feel like she is missing out.

Additionally, if she has single girlfriends who are enjoying an exciting dating life, she might also feel like she is missing out on all the fun that comes with that as well.

When that happens, she might then begin to look for ways to end her relationship, so she can experience something more enjoyable.

It sounds selfish, but men do that to women as well.

It's a pretty common reason why people want to break up (i.e. to have more fun with someone new).

So, if your girl is saying that she might be moving away and wants to break up now rather than leaving you later on, it may be her way of getting out of a relationship that no longer excites her.

That's the bad news.

The good news is that you can change the relationship dynamic and make her never want to leave you...

If you still have the opportunity to interact with her on a daily, or at least regular basis in person, then use the interactions to reawaken her feelings for you.

Get her to experience new and exciting feelings of attraction for you based on you changing and adjusting your approach to her and the relationship.

When she feels more attracted to you than she ever has before because you are now making her feel attracted in new and exciting ways, she loses the desire to want to leave you and meet new guys.

Another reason why a woman will say that she wants to break up because she might be moving away is!

4. She feels like committing to you isn't going to work out in the long run anyway, so she doesn't see the point in staying together anymore

[image: She feels like the relationship won't work in the long run, so she no longer wants to be a part of it]

Sometimes a woman will feel attracted to a guy initially because he displays some of the qualities and traits that she looks for in a man that she wants to be with long-term, or for life.

As a result, she might initially think, â€œWow, I really like him. I think he might be the one.

Heâ€™s cool, confident, funny and he makes me feel so sexy and desirable when Iâ€™m with him.

This could be it.â€œ

Yet, when she then gets into a relationship with him, she discovers that how he was initially behaving is not the real version of him.

For example: Rather than continue to be confident and self-assured, he becomes insecure and self-doubting.

This then causes him to feel needy for her affection, devotion and attention, which turns her off because she wanted a confident guy.

Additionally, he might also be a lot less emotionally masculine (i.e. ballsy, courageous, strong under pressure, determined, resilient) than she first thought.

She thought he had the potential to continue to grow as a man, which would make her feel more and more attracted and in love with him over time, but he has been going backwards (i.e. he has become a bit too timid, fearful, weak under pressure) and becoming less of what she feels a man should be.

As a result, she might then begin to think, â€œWell, I really thought he was different than other guys, but in the end, heâ€™s just like all the other guys I broke up with in the past. He just doesnâ€™t know how to be a real man yet. I was truly hoping we would be together for life, but now I see that itâ€™s just not going to work out between us. I have to get out of this relationship before it gets worse. He clearly doesnâ€™t know how to change and improve and become the man I want, so I canâ€™t just wait around for nothing. I have to leave him.â€œ

She may then use the old, â€œIâ€™m might be moving away, so I want to break up now rather than leaving you later onâ€œ excuse to dump him, as a way of hopefully avoiding him trying to talk her out of her decision.

Another reason why a woman will say that she wants to break up because she might be moving away, isâ€œ|

5. She isn't planning on moving away for real, but is saying it to see if she can get you to treat her better from now on

[image: She is just saying that to get you to treat her better]

Sometimes, a woman will feel as though her guy is taking her for granted (i.e. he expects that she will just stick around for life, even though he isnâ€™t treating her the way she wants to be treated, or making her feel the kind of attraction and love she craves).

So, to gain some power over him, she may decide say that she wants to break up because she might be moving away.

She hopes that it will shock him into appreciating her and trying to be a better man to her.

If he tries to convince her to change her mind (e.g. by begging and pleading, promising to do whatever she wants), she might then say, â€œIf I move away, I will still have to break up with you, because Iâ€™m not prepared to be in a long distance relationship. So, whatâ€™s the point in us remaining together for now?â

The more he begs and pleads with her, the more power she will gain over him.

Yet, if she gains a lot of power over him and notices that he is now sucking up to her, doubting himself and feeling insecure, it will actually make her lose respect and attraction for him.

As a result, she will seriously begin thinking about breaking up with him and will often go through with it, to get revenge for how bad he made her feel (by taking her for granted) throughout the relationship.

So, the guy will go from being in the position of power and having his woman trying hard to impress him and keep him, to losing the position of power, sucking up to her, causing her to lose respect and attraction for him and then getting dumped.

Itâs a horrible thing for a guy to go through and will often be an emotionally devastating experience.

Of course, if something like that happens to you, donât worry.

You can get her back by reversing the damageâ

If a guy doesnât reverse the damage and continues to turn her off, she will feel determined to move on without him.

As a result, he might then be left wondering, âWhy did she leave me? I gave her everything she asked for. I just donât understand.â

The answer is simple.

A woman might give a guy the impression that she wants to be in control, but if he actually falls for it and becomes a puppy dog around her, she will automatically lose respect for him.

When a woman loses respect for a guy, she also stops feeling attracted to him and without those two emotions, her love for him will begin to fade.

So, if you want your woman not to break up with you, make sure that you donât lose even more of her respect by handing over your power over to her and just doing whatever she wants.

Of course, that doesnât mean you should be rude, selfish or controlling in any way.

Instead, you need to stand your ground with her and show her (in a loving, but dominant way) that youâre not going to let her push you around anymore.

In other words, take control of the situation in an assertive manner, but still be a good man about it all.

When you approach it in that way, she will naturally feel drawn to you and will begin to question her thoughts about leaving you now, or moving away without you later.

Be Sure to Avoid the Following Mistakes

Even if she is currently feeling determined to go through with the break up, you can still change her mind.

The way to do it is to spark so much new respect, attraction and love inside of her, that she honestly doesnât want to lose you.

It feels like it would be too much of a loss for her and that she would regret it.

To ensure that you do this right, here are 3 mistakes to avoidâ€¦!

1. Telling her that you will be lost without her and need her to stay

[image: Telling her that you will be lost without her and need her to stay]

Although that is something that works really well in romantic movies, in the real world, women just donâ€™t feel attracted to neediness and desperation in men.

It doesnâ€™t work for them.

Itâ€™s a total turn off.

So, acting like you canâ€™t live without her will simply turn her off further and make her feel more determined to move on.

If you want to convince her to stay, you have to do it by making yourself so irresistible to her that she doesnâ€™t want to lose you.

Part of that means you need to focus on being more emotionally independent from now on and living a happy, fulfilling life without her.

When she sees that you donâ€™t need her in order to feel good about yourself, she will respect you and begin feeling drawn to you again.

Of course, she might test you by saying, â€œSo, I see that you are doing fine. Are you over me already?â€ to see if your confidence and happiness is just an act.

If she senses it is, she will lose respect and attraction for you.

If she can see that it is real, then she will feel drawn to you and feel as though she is losing you.

She will worry that if she goes through with the break up, she will end up feeling like the rejected one, or the one who got left behind.

That alone is enough to make most women (and men) want to get back with someone.

So, donâ€™t be afraid to make her feel that emotional pain.

It might seem cruel, but itâ€™s necessary, especially if she is genuinely considering breaking up with you and then moving away.

You can still save the relationship, but you have to be willing to make her feel what she needs to feel to want to stay.

If you are trying to get her back by telling her that you will be lost and sad without her, it just wonâ€™t work.

She wonâ€™t want to feel as though you are holding her back.

So, donâ€™t make that mistake.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦!

2. Saying that you are willing to move states or even to another country to be with her

Iâ€™ve been helping new men to get women back, or to avoid break ups with women for many years now.

Whenever I hear examples of men who have moved states or across the world to be with a woman, it almost never works out well.

Part of the reason why is that a man will essentially say, â€œIâ€™ll follow you anywhere. Iâ€™ll leave my job. Iâ€™ll leave my friends and family to be with you. I just want to be with you,â€ which sounds like a great scene for a movie, but in real life, if a woman is already turned off by her boyfriend and wanting to leave him, she will feel more turned off when he starts acting desperate like that.

Of course, if a couple are in love and the feelings are mutual, then it usually wonâ€™t be a problem at all.

However, if the love has become one-sided and he is desperately trying to cling onto her, then itâ€™s not attractive and appealing to the woman.

She begins to feel smothered by him and the relationship and wants to get away from him even more.

This is why, the best approach is to remain calm, composed and simply agree with the break up.

Then, suggest that you remain friends, rather than cutting each other off completely.

Then, use your interactions as a â€œfriendâ€ to reawaken her feelings and make her change her mind about leaving, or ask you to go with her.

If you do decide to go with her, make sure that she is totally in love with you and doesnâ€™t want to leave you.

Donâ€™t follow her to another state or country if she isnâ€™t happy in the relationship.

That wonâ€™t work.

The ideal scenario, which you can achieve, is to make her feel so much new respect, attraction and love for you that she doesnâ€™t want to move away anymore and wants to stay with you.

3. Telling her that you will wait for her, no matter how long it takes

It sounds romantic, right?

It works for Hollywood movies and romantic novels, but in real life, women usually move on with new men and forget about their ex that they dumped.

Before her ex knows it, she is engaged, pregnant or married and he is then left feeling disappointed and rejected after waiting for her for so long.

So, donâ€™t tell her that you will wait for her no matter how long it takes.

Some guys do that and hope that their girlfriend will be flattered and deeply touched by his devotion to her.

The guy hopes that she will then come to her senses and change her mind about moving away and breaking up with him.

Yet, thatâ€™s rarely how things work out.

Instead, in most cases, a woman will feel turned off by what she perceives as the guyâ€™s inability to move on by attracting another quality woman like her.

Of course, she might pretend that sheâ€™s happy about him waiting, but she will secretly focus on moving on by finding herself a new man as soon as possible.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

4. Getting angry at her for wanting to break up with you over potentially having to move

It's understandable that you might feel a bit angry, annoyed or betrayed by her move.

Yet, showing angry towards her won't really accomplish anything.

She will just feel threatened and smothered, which will make her want to push you away.

So, if you truly want her to change her mind, the best way to go about it is by showing her what she will be losing out if she doesn't give you another chance.

This essentially comes down to how much new and additional respect, attraction and love you make her feel from now on.

An example of how to make her feel respect, attraction and love is to maintain control of your emotions around her no matter what she decides to do, or what she says to you.

She will see that you're being an emotionally strong and mature man, which will naturally make her respect you.

When a woman respect you, she can then feel attracted to you and if you're making her feel attracted to you in other ways, she will be connecting with her feelings of love with you as well.

Then, she will begin to realize that leaving you behind could be a big mistake that she would end up regretting later on, or for the rest of her life.

As a result, she will feel motivated to try to keep the relationship together and not lose you.

Yet, if you can't control your emotions around her, she will naturally feel turned off and will then become more motivated to move away and leave you behind.

Another mistake to avoid is

5. Not knowing that you can make her change her mind almost immediately

Right now, it might feel as though there is nothing that you can do to make her change her mind.

You can.

When she feels a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for you, her thinking, behavior and actions will automatically begin to change right away.

She will feel drawn you.

She will want to be with you and not lose you.

You can literally make her feel like that today and from now on.

How to Act Mature After a Break up

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 things you can do to behave and act in a mature way after a break up, so your ex woman feels respect, attraction and even love for you:

1. Accept the break up and agree to be friends

[image: Accept the break up and agree to be friends]

Not only is accepting a break up a sign of maturity, but it also ensures that the lines of communication between you and her remain open, so you can then re-attract her and get her back if you want to.

You can start off by saying something like, “If breaking up is what you really want, then I’m not going to try to change your mind. Of course, that doesn’t mean I don’t still care about you, but I accept your decision to break up. At least we can mature enough to remain friends though, right? Friends?”

She might accept right away, or be a little hesitant and say something like, “Well, I don’t know if I can be friends with you now that we’re broken up,” or “I don’t think that’s such a good idea,” or even, “Why keep holding on? We’re broken up for a reason and the longer we stay in each other’s lives, the more difficult it will be for us to move on.”

Regardless of what your ex says, don’t get upset or think, “Oh well, I tried to be mature about the break up, but she’s not interested so that’s that I guess.”

Instead, simply maintain your confidence and in an easy-going, relaxed tone of voice say, “Hey, there’s no need to be so dramatic about all of this. We’re mature enough to be friends. Being friends doesn’t mean that we want to get back together. We are simply being mature enough to say hi and have a chat if we want to, while we move on without each other. So, we’re friends right?”

At that point, she probably won’t want to come across as the immature one and will then likely say something like, “Okay, sure. We can be friends.”

That then allows you to be able to text her, call her and even meet up with her in person, without it coming across as though you’re trying to get her back.

Of course, when you do text her, talk to her over the phone or interact with her face-to-face, don’t make the mistake only behaving like a nice, platonic friend.

If you do that, she will most likely only experience friendly, neutral feelings for you and will feel drawn to other men who actually make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic attraction.

If you don’t want her back, then use that approach. No problem.

Yet, if you do want her back, then make sure that you flirt with her to make her feel sexually attracted to you.

By the way!

Thereâs nothing wrong with flirting with your ex.

Donât make the mistake of feeling like itâs not your place anymore to flirt with her, or that it wouldnât be mature.

You can always flirt with a woman, just like a woman can always flirt with you.

Flirting is an innocent, discreet way to make a woman feel sexually attracted to you, even if you donât intend on getting with her sexually.

Women understand how to flirt, they love it and when you use it, they automatically feel attracted to you.

So, by all means do the mature thing and stay friends with your ex, but if you want her back, make sure youâre not just behaving like a neutral, platonic friend who doesnât have any desire to make her feel sexually attracted.

Remember: Sexual attraction is what brings men and women together into a romantic relationship, or at least just to have sex.

Without sexual attraction, it can only ever be a friendship and nothing else.

An agreed upon “friendship” is a good place to start with an ex and a great way to keep the channels of communication open between you and her, but donât act like just a friend to her.

Use the friendship to make her feel sparks of sexual attraction for you and she will naturally begin to have romantic feelings for you again, or at the very least, become curious about what it would be like to hook up with you again sexually.

After hooking up, both you and her will be mature enough to decide whether or not to stay together, or just remain âfriends.â

Another way that you can behave and act in a mature way after a break up, is toâ!

2. Only speak positively about her to mutual friends, so they donât feel like you want them to take sides and turn against her

[image: Only speak positively about her to mutual friends]

One thing that can make a guy seem immature is when he goes around saying bad things about his ex to mutual friends, colleagues, or family after a break up.

In some cases, a guy will do that in the hope that everyone sees him as the good guy or victim and her as the villain.

In other cases, a guy isnât trying to make people see him in a certain way and instead, just doesnât know how to deal with the situation.

As a result, he will bad mouth his ex to let off some steam and hopefully make himself feel better.

Sometimes it can make a guy feel a bit better, if he is going to bad mouth his ex, he should only do it with a close, trusted friend who is going to understand that heâs just letting off some steam.

Bad mouthing her to other people just adds the risk of them telling her about it at some point, or looking at him as being immature, unreasonable and incapable of handling a break up.

So, rather than siding with him and saying things like, “You’re right. She was a real bitch and you’re better off without her,” many people will think things like, “Wow. No wonder she broke up with him. If this is how he’s behaving now that they’re broken up, he must have been very immature in the relationship with her behind closed doors. I wonder if this is how he talks about me behind my back when we have a disagreement. Did he go and bad mouth about me to her? Is that the kind of guy he is? Maybe he isn’t who I thought he was. Maybe I can’t trust him as much as I thought I could. Maybe I shouldn’t be as close with him as a friend.”

If someone does tell her about what he said, or even hints at what he might have said, his ex can then use that against him if he tries to get her back.

For example: If he calms down and decides he wants her back, she might then say, “Are you kidding me? You tried to turn all of our friends against me and now you want me back. No thanks.”

On the other hand, when a guy remains calm and only says things like, “We just weren’t compatible, but she was an amazing woman and any guy would be lucky to have her as his girl,” when talking about his ex to friends and family, their perception of him will be completely different. They will see that he is mature enough to maintain control of his emotions and treat her like someone he loves.

This shows loyalty and unconditional love, which is a trait of real maturity and a sign of emotional strength.

His friends and family will sense that and also feel relieved that he’s not putting them in the difficult position of choosing sides (i.e. him vs. her).

He’s just accepting the situation, being a good, loving man and not turning into a sore loser who turns against people who once loved him.

Then, if his ex finds out that he’s been saying good things about her, she will respect him for that. When she respects him, she will naturally become open to feeling some attraction for him if they happen to interact on the phone or in person.

As a result, he can more easily reactivate her feelings and get her back.

So, try to only speak positively when talking about your ex.

That is the mature, classy thing to do and if your ex finds out about it, she will respect you for it.

Another way you can act mature after a break up is to

3. Suggest being mature enough to remain social media friends

[image: Suggest being mature enough to remain social media friends]

For example: You might say something along the lines of, “Many couples who break up are so bitter and angry that they end up behaving immaturely and unfriending each other on social media. Surely, we are more mature than that, right? We can remain friends, even if it’s just on social media. So, let’s at least stay friends on social media and feel free to say hi as a friend if we want to.”

In most cases, a woman will likely agree, even if she doesn’t really want to, because she won't want to come across as being the immature one.

What she might not realize at the time, is that by staying connected to you, even if it is via social media, she's giving you the opportunity to re-attract her and get her back.

If you re-attract her and she really wants to get back with you, then she will be thankful that you stayed in contact as a friend initially.

On the other hand, if you don't know how to re-attract her and end up turning her off as a friend, then she might feel annoyed that you are staying in contact with her.

The difference is attraction.

When you make a woman feel sexually and romantically attracted to you, she is open and wants to interact with you.

When you don't, she closes up.

By the way!

Another important reason to remain friends on social media, is so that she can see that you are confident, happy and enjoying life without her.

This makes a woman feel respect and attraction for her ex guy, even if she doesn't openly admit it.

Women know that it takes a lot of emotional strength for a man to immediately get back on his own two feet and start enjoying life without her, after a break up.

More importantly, women are attracted to the emotional strength of men (e.g. confidence, self-assurance, self-esteem, determination) and turned off by emotional weaknesses (e.g. insecure, neediness, low self-esteem, lack of drive and determination).

So, don't be afraid to show her your emotional strength.

She might not admit it to you, but she will be looking to see how you handle yourself after the break up (i.e. do you crumble and go into hiding, or do you rise up and become stronger than ever before?).

An ex woman doesn't necessarily do that just because she wants her ex back though.

In some cases, a woman does still have feelings for her guy, so she checks on social media to see if he's moved on without her.

In other cases, a woman just wants to check on her ex to see if he's feeling sad and lonely without her, so she can then get an ego boost.

In other cases, a woman will check her ex's social media to see if he is moving on faster than she is.

If he is (i.e. he has new friends around him and possibly even some women hanging around), then she can feel like the reject and the one who is being left behind.

That's an emotionally painful experience for a woman, especially if she thought that she had power over her.

In many cases, it leads to a woman contacting her ex and trying to get him back, so she can feel better about herself.

In some cases though, a woman will pretend to be angry and insulted that he has been enjoying himself since the break up.

She will see if she can regain control over him and get him to admit that he still wants her back and has been missing her, so she can then stop feeling like the reject.

So, be prepared for all of those possibilities, but don't be afraid of them.

For example: Some guys are afraid to post photos of themselves looking happy on social media.

They wonder, "Won't her seeing me have fun without her just make her assume that I've moved on and am not interested in her anymore? If she thinks that, she might find another guy and then I'll never be able to get her back."

Yet, what guys like that don't realize is that even though a woman usually won't admit it, she will definitely feel more attraction for a guy who gets on with enjoying his life, compared to a guy who sits around feeling sad, lonely and left out.

Remember: Women are attracted to confidence, self-assuredness and self-reliance, not insecurity and neediness.

So, don't be afraid to get on with your life and let her see that you are happy, confident and enjoying life without her.

Of course, doing that doesn't mean that you don't want her back.

Instead, it just means you don't need her back and that is attractive to women.

Additionally, it's not immature to enjoy your life without her.

Imagine if she start posting up photos of herself looking happy, confident and enjoying life with other people.

Would you think she was immature?

No.

You would most likely miss her even more.

That's what you need to make her feel.

You have to make her miss you and make her feel attracted to your emotional strength.

Part of being a mature man is not being reliant on a woman for your confidence.

It's about having what I call, Independent Confidence.

This means that you are confident regardless of what people say or do around you, what happens in your life and whether or not a certain woman is in your life.

On the flip side, Dependent Confidence is where you can only feel truly confident when people are nice to you, when things are going well in your life and when a certain woman is in your life.

Independent Confidence is irresistibly attractive to women all over the world and is one of the hardest traits for them to find in a man.

When you have it, you literally become significantly more attractive to women than you ever have been before.

So, don't be afraid to let your ex see that you have matured even further and now have even more Independent Confidence than you ever had before.

Another way you can act mature after a break up is to

4. Tell her that it's totally fine if she wants to ever catch up to say hi as friends

[image: Tell her that it's totally fine if she ever wants to catch up and say hi as friends]

Saying that is a great way to keep the door open, so she feels welcome to contact you when she misses you.

When she agrees to that, it also allows you the freedom to contact her and say hi as a friend as well.

When you have that agreement in place, don't be afraid to call her on the phone, spark some of her sexual and romantic feelings for you (e.g. by making her laugh and smile and feel good to be talking to you) and then get her to agree to meet up with you in person.

Why?

Another extremely attractive male trait is a man who knows what he wants and isn't afraid to go and get it.

You may have heard women say that before, but if you haven't, then just know that it's real.

Additionally, most women lack the courage to face a potential rejection from their ex guy if they reach out and show interest.

So, they take on their traditional feminine role of waiting for a man to approach, interact and make something happen.

If you take on the same role as her and just wait and wait for her to hopefully contact you one day, then you might end up feeling very disappointed if you find out that she has moved on with another guy in the meantime.

So, if she doesn't contact you, make sure that take action like a man and make something happen.

For example: You can contact her say something along the lines of, Hey, we should meet up for a quick cup of coffee and say hello as friends. It will be good to catch up. I will have some free time on Tuesday and Thursday. Which of those day suits you best?

Initially, she might feel a bit hesitant and say something like, I'm not sure if we should do that, or, Maybe that's not a very good idea.

If so, you can simply add, Hey, it's no big deal. It's just a cup of coffee between friends. We're mature enough to do that. Mature people can meet up with an ex, rather than suddenly feeling like they can never say hello to each other as friends. It's not like we're getting back together again just because we say hi as friends. It's just a coffee. Anyway, so let's do it. Let's catch up and have an innocent coffee. We'll say hi as friends. Which day suits you best, Tuesday or Thursday?

She will then be much more likely to agree (even if it's because she doesn't want to come across as being the immature one) and you can go ahead and arrange a suitable day and time.

Then, when you meet up, you can let her experience the new and improved you (i.e. more confident, more able to create sparks of attraction inside of her, more mature) and get her back.

Another way you can act mature after a break up is

5. Don't be embarrassed about the break up

[image: Don't be embarrassed about the break up]

The mature way to handle a break up is to admit to yourself that you made some mistakes, while also acknowledging all the things you did well.

You weren't a complete failure.

Yes, you made some mistakes, but many couples experience problems in relationships and it's not always all the man's fault of course.

Additionally, you're not the only man has gone through a break up recently.

For example: According to the Social Science Data Collection department of Stanford University in California, 60% of unmarried relationships break up within 2 months and 70% end within 1 year.

Break ups are very common these days and most people are used to hearing about friends or family members experiencing a break up, separation or divorce.

Of course, it hasn't always been that way.

In recent centuries, it was seen as embarrassing and in some cases, even shameful to break up a relationship (which was almost always a marriage).

Back then, a man and a woman were expected to stay together for life even if they were miserable together.

Today's world is very different.

Couples no longer have to stay in a relationship with each other if they don't want to.

They are free to leave.

In fact, if a man or a woman wants to end a relationship, most people around them (including most family and friends) will be encouraging and supportive of the decision.

As a result of this change in culture, many relationships experience a break up (or several break ups) when one or both of the people aren't happy.

Yet, despite the fact that so many couples break up these days, a lot of guys feel embarrassed or ashamed when their relationship ends, because they feel as though it's only them who is going through a break up.

You are not alone.

A break up sucks and it hurts, but it's completely normal and is nothing to be ashamed of.

Additionally, if you want to get her back, you also need to understand that getting an ex back is also completely normal and common these days.

Men all over the world get ex women back.

It's completely normal and common.

Of course, it's not reported on the news, or spoken about by many people.

Instead, it's just something that men do and are doing in increasing numbers around the world, in response to the high number of break ups that happen in modern relationships.

By the way!

If you think that your case is too different and you just can't get her back because you made this mistake, or that mistake, then think again.

Men all over the world get women back after bad break ups, stressful break ups and complicated break ups.

How?

They re-attract the woman.

Attraction is what draws men and women together into a sexual, romantic relationship.

3 Immature, Post-Break Up Mistakes to Avoid

Now that you have a better idea of how to act mature after a break up, here are 3 mistakes to avoid making with your ex, if you don't want to come across as being immature:

1. Writing her a long letter or email to express your feelings, thank her and wish her the best, when you secretly hope it will get her back

Here's the thing:

If a woman dumped a guy and he immediately accepted it, behaved in a mature way and then didn't beg or plead for another chance, then she will be more inclined to believe a letter or email from him where he wishes her all the best.

Yet, if a guy was clearly devastated by the break up, begged and pleaded for another chance and tried hard to convince her to change her mind, she will be suspicious of a letter or email where he is now wishing her all the best.

She will wonder if he really feels that way, or is just trying to act mature in the hope that it makes her feel respect for him.

If her intuition tells her that he's just saying that to score some points with her, then she will be more inclined to close herself off even more (e.g. she stops replying to him, blocks his number on her phone, unfriends him on social media).

So, rather than writing your ex a letter or sending her a long email, just get to a phone call and in person interaction.

Let her see that you are a new and improved man and allow her to experience a new, more exciting type of attraction for you.

That is what works to get a woman back right away, whereas writing to her to express your feelings, thank her and wish her the best, will usually just result in her feeling suspicious of you and closing herself off even more.

The next mistake is:

2. Thinking that being mature and seeming to be handling the break up well, is the key to getting her back

It's not.

Being mature is great and it does help, but it's not the #1 key to getting her back.

What is?

Reawakening her sexual feelings for you.

Remember: Sexual attraction is what draws men and women together into a romantic relationship.

You can make her feel some respect and sexual attraction for you based on being mature, but itâ€™s not the only way to do it.

There are so many ways that you can make a woman feel sparks of sexual attraction for you as you interact with her.

So, donâ€™t rely on being Mr. Mature and hoping that she will think, â€œHeâ€™s being so mature, so I should get back with him. Maturity is everything.â€

Instead, focus on being Mr. Sexually Appealing, so she has sexual feelings and can think, â€œI just want to kiss him again. I want to hug him. I want to have sex with him.â€

Those feelings are what draw a woman back to a man, regardless of what problems they were experiencing in the past.

In fact, attraction is such a powerful force that both men and women will often totally ignore relationship problems, just to be able to get to the point of kissing, having sex and feeling the love that comes with it.

Of course, itâ€™s not all about sex, but without sexual attraction, itâ€™s just a friendship.

If youâ€™re just a friend to her, then another guy will step in and have a sexual relationship with her by making her feel sexually attracted.

The next mistake isâ€¦!

3. Assuming that cutting off contact and never reaching out will show her how mature you are and it will make her miss you

Unfortunately, if your ex has disconnected from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you (highly likely if she has broken up with you), then cutting off contact probably wonâ€™t make her think something along the lines of, â€œWow, heâ€™s being so mature about our break up by not contacting me! It makes me miss him so much and want him back.â€

Instead, because she didnâ€™t have enough feelings to want to be in a relationship with you anymore, she will most likely feel relieved that youâ€™re staying out of the way, so she can move on without you.

If you wait long enough, she will move on without you.

If you want her back, then donâ€™t let that happen to you.

Use the straightforward, manly and practical approach of interacting with her, reactivating her feelings and then guiding her back into a relationship with you.

My Ex Girlfriend Gained Weight After Our Break Up. Does it Mean Anything?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 6 common reasons why a woman will gain weight after a break up:

1. She has been emotionally damaged by the break up and is now trying to make herself look less attractive to stop men from finding her as appealing

[image: Trying to make herself look less attractive by over-eating]

Sometimes a break up can leave a woman feeling emotionally crushed.

This can happen when a woman is deeply in love with her man and is secretly making long term plans for their future (e.g. moving in together, buying a house, getting married, starting a family).

He, on the other hand, doesn't view the relationship the same way and is only with her for superficial reasons (e.g. she's really attractive and he enjoys the envious looks he gets from other guys when they go out together, the sex with her is amazing, she's fun to hang out with).

He isn't approaching the relationship in a way that is setting them up to get married, start a family and stay together for life.

As a result, he tends to have a wandering eye (i.e. looks at other women, wishes he could be with them), or has possibly even cheated on her at certain points in the relationship.

If his woman finds out that all of her hopes and dreams about a future with him are pointless (i.e. because he doesn't feel the same way about her), then she may decide to break up with him.

Yet, when she does, rather than thinking something like, "I'll break up with him and fall in love with another man. No problem" she allows the break up to make her feel bitter about men and relationships in general.

She goes from being a happy, loving, trusting woman to being a sad, cold, suspicious woman, which then completely changes the way she approaches her love life.

For example: She might start thinking things like, "I will never trust another man again. They are all jerks and the only thing they want from a woman is sex and someone to hang out with. They never want to commit for real. I'm never going to let a guy do that to me again. I'm going to become cold as ice from now on. I'm no longer going to care about guys. They are going to become totally optional in my life and I'll never love one of them ever again."

As a result, she might then begin trying to make herself look less attractive to men by putting on weight.

Somewhere in her mind, she hopes that no guy will ask her out again, so she won't have to risk falling in love with him and then getting hurt.

Basically, it's a way of trying to protect herself from potentially having her heart broken again sometime in the future.

Of course, putting up weight is no guarantee that guys won't chase after her.

There are a lot of guys who will happily pick up an unattractive woman, or an overweight woman for casual sex.

In fact, the majority of guys out there are so scared of attractive women that they never even try to approach and pick them up.

The women who get hit on the most are those who are average looking and below average looking. Yet, because most guys want to be with an attractive woman, they have a hard time feeling motivated to make the relationship work.

So, the relationship falls apart or she gets cheated on if he gets an opportunity with a new woman.

When that happens, a woman like her ends up distrusting men even more.

Of course, that's not what always happens.

In some cases, a woman meets a guy who makes her feel so attracted that she quickly sheds weight and gets back to a slim figure to impress him and maintain his interest.

So, if your ex girlfriend has gained weight after your break up, don't see it as a guaranteed failed move on her part.

There are a lot of desperate men out there who are willing to hook up with any half-decent woman and there are always many guys men who will attract her and cause her to feel motivated to lose weight and look more attractive.

Another common reason why a woman will gain weight after a break up is...

2. She has been missing her ex and has been trying to eat away her pain

[image: Missing her ex and trying to eat away the pain]

Many people turn to food for temporarily feelings of comfort, when they are going through a stressful time.

According to some studies, emotional eating is a way for a person to fill the emptiness they are feeling in life, by filling up their stomach.

Basically, food creates a false feeling of fullness, so for a little while, a woman doesn't have to be overwhelmed by her feelings of loss and loneliness after a break up.

In many cases, a woman who has been missing her ex and turning to food for comfort will also:

- Avoid most social interactions and spend a lot more time at home alone.
- Not engage in her usual activities and hobbies (e.g. if she used to regularly go to the gym or participate in a sport, she now avoids it because she's feeling too sad, or goes much less because she doesn't feel motivated).
- Experience elevated levels of cortisol (i.e. stress hormone).

As a result of her physical inactivity and emotional stress, she can end up gaining weight and feeling more and more miserable.

Essentially, she is temporarily caught in a negative cycle of missing her ex, eating to distract herself from those feelings (or to find some comfort), feeling guilty about eating and then eating some more to find comfort, or to distract herself.

Before she knows it, she has put on 5, 10 or 15 pounds or kilos.

She looks different and it stresses her out, but she just can't seem to find comfort in anything else than food.

So, if your ex girlfriend has gained weight after your break up, it can mean she's missing you and is trying to overcome those feelings by using food.

If you want your ex back, you need to take the lead and snap her out of her destructive cycle.

How?

Interact with her (preferably on a phone call or in person, rather than just text) and begin reactivating her sexual and romantic feelings for you.

You can do that by:

- Making her smile and laugh and feel relaxed to be around you again. The more she enjoys being in your presence, the less she will turn to food to make her feel better because she now has you to make her feel good.
- Flirting with her to make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman again (even though she has gained weight). The more sexual tension and desire she feels with you, the less she will want to eat because she will want to look her best when you have sex again.
- Being a good man, but also being confident and assertive when talking to her, so she can see that you're not going to get caught up in any fake drama she might try to create (e.g. acting bitchy, throwing a tantrum, blaming her weight gain on the way you treated her in the relationship). Women respect men who have the balls to keep a woman in line, while still being a good man. This causes a deep type of attraction that is extremely hard for women to find with other men.
- Letting her see that you are a new and improved man who she can now truly look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, rather than continuing to make the same old attraction mistakes as before. Seeing real changes in you will then cause her to feel motivated to be the best version of herself for you (i.e. slimmer, more loving and attentive) because she won't want to lose you.

The more attracted you make her feel, the faster and easier her walls come down.

When she feels drawn to you, she will almost certainly stop turning to food, quickly try to lose the weight and return to her former sexy self because she will want to be the best woman she can be for you.

You can then get her back into a relationship that now has a solid foundation based on mutual feelings of respect, attraction and love.

Another possible reason why a woman might gain weight after a break up is...

3. She has been partying and going out to eat with friends a lot, which has caused her to gain weight

[image: She has been partying and eating a lot with friends]

After a break up, a woman might start going out a lot with her single friends to party.

Some of her reasons might be that...

- She is excited to be out of an unhappy relationship and now wants to celebrate her freedom.

- She wants to enjoy being single and carefree again after a long time.
- She wants to forget about her ex and move on and hopes that regularly partying with her friends will achieve that.
- She wants to meet new guys and see how she feels.

Of course, if she parties too often, it can lead to her gaining weight.

Here's the thing:

Parties and going out with single friends usually comes with some alcohol consumption.

Other than making a person drunk, alcohol also works as an appetite stimulant (i.e. boosts appetite), so a woman is more likely to eat more after she's been drinking.

While drunk, she is more inclined to make bad food choices (e.g. eat a plate of cheesy nachos, or a burger and fries, rather than a chicken salad).

As a result, she will slowly, but surely gain weight.

Of course, that doesn't mean she's not aware of what's happening, or that she can't do anything about the weight gain.

In most cases, a woman will enjoy herself for a while, heal from her break up and then when she's ready, start dieting and working out and get back in shape pretty quickly.

Some women remain overweight for life, but if your ex girlfriend was slim or in fairly good shape before, then she will almost certainly get back to that (and sometimes even better) to hopefully attract herself a quality man.

So, if you want your ex girlfriend back, don't wait on the sidelines and hope that she doesn't meet a guy that she likes even more than you.

Get her back and make her feel so much attraction that she feels motivated to get back into shape and look as sexy as possible for you.

Another possible reason why a woman might gain weight after a break up is...

4. She no longer feels like she needs to be slim to be attractive and is expecting men to just like her anyway

Initially, a woman may worry about putting on weight and think, "I have to stay slim, or else I won't be able to attract quality guys."

Yet, the reality is that, these days almost all men are too afraid to approach women in person and as a result, they use dating apps to hopefully get matched up with attractive women.

Most dating apps have 6-10 times more men than women, so men end up competing over less and less attractive women, or pretty women who are overweight (possibly like your ex girlfriend) and all of that attention and interest can go to a woman's head.

Since she is getting so much attention, dates and sex via Tinder with good quality guys, she starts to think that she doesn't really have to care about her appearance anymore.

She might even think to herself, "All the effort I used put into looking good and staying slim for my ex was a waste of time. Even though I've gained so much weight since the break up, I'm getting loads of matches from quality men. Men do like me. So, it's probably a myth that quality men only like thin women. Maybe men have changed these days and like women who are"

heavier.â□□

Yet, over time, she willÂ almost certainly find thatÂ quality men donâ□□t stick around after sex because they were only using her for easy sex.

Additionally, the guys who do stick around usually arenâ□□t her type (e.g. they are insecure, willing to accept whatever they can get, give her too much power in the relationship, lack manliness, don't know how to makeÂ her feel attracted and just hope she won't dump them if they are nice to her).

When she eventually figures out that quality guys aren't sticking around because of her weight, she might then try hard to get back into shape, or feel so depressed that she ends upÂ putting on more weight by turning to food for comfort.

Another possible reason why a woman might gain weight after a break up is...

5. She wants to see if she can find a man who will love her for who she is as a person, ratherÂ than how she looks

Even if a woman is pretty and in shape, she wants to feelÂ loved and appreciated for more than just her looks.

She wants a guy to love her for who she is as a person as well.

Of course, there are some women who donâ□□t mind being a trophy wifeÂ for a man who has a lot of money, but even in those cases, the relationship will eventually fall apart (or be miserable for life) if the love is superficial.

The reality is that although women love it when a man is very attracted to their physical appearance, most donâ□□tÂ just want to be loved for their looks.

Instead,Â a woman wants a man to also fall in love with who she is as a person, her values, her behavior, her uniqueness and so on.

She wants him to love her for just being her and to continue loving her, even if her looks change over time.

So,Â if a woman breaks up with a guy who was only with her for her looks, she may say to herself, â□□ This time around, Iâ□□m going to make sure that the next guy IÂ get into a relationship with willÂ love me for who I am as a person and not just for my looks.â□□

She may then intentionally gain some weight, stop wearing as much makeupÂ and generally put less effort into her appearance, as a way of screening guys whoÂ would only like her when she is looking her best.

Another possible reason why a woman might gain weight after a break up is...

6. She was maintaining a slimmer figure for her ex during the relationship, but now canâ□□t be bothered doing it

[image: She can't be bothered staying in shape now]

Staying slim and looking good can take up a lot of a womanâ□□s time and focus.

For example: Did you know?

TheÂ averageÂ womanÂ spendsÂ about 22.5 minutesÂ getting readyÂ every morning.

That's approximately 137 hours in a year.

Another survey conducted on 2,000 adult women and 200 teenage girls over the age of 16, found that 78% of women spend 60 minutes a day on their appearance.

Of course, there are some women who take 5 minutes (i.e. those who don't wear makeup often) to get ready and women who spend hours applying make up and doing their hair to get ready.

So, the numbers are an average.

Yet, the point is that many women put a lot of effort into looking their best.

[image: It can take a lot of effort to always look her best]

It may look natural, but a woman often has to put a lot of effort to stay in shape, keep her skin looking young and healthy, maintain healthy looking hair (especially if she is using hair dyes/colors, which can damage her hair) and so on.

The average woman will also spend anywhere from 45 to 60 minutes working out when she goes to the gym.

Additionally, many women will also try to limit how many calories they take in from food per day, to avoid eating too much and gaining weight as a result.

It can be a real effort in today's society, especially with all the delicious comfort foods available at cafes and take away stores.

Additionally, in most supermarkets/grocery stores, there are usually a number of aisles with fun, comfort goods (e.g. chocolates, sweets, snacks, chips, cookies and so on).

When a woman is trying to stay in shape, she will try to avoid those aisles and get out of the supermarket as quickly as she can, before she gives into her temptations and gets some cookies, cakes or chips.

This is why, when a woman breaks up a serious relationship and is in a bit of emotional pain, she might decide to relax and just enjoy doing some of the things she deprived herself of for so long.

She may then say to herself, "I spent all that time trying to look sexy for him. I couldn't eat the things I love like cheese burgers, cake or cookies and I had to work out like crazy all the time. At least now I can indulge myself without worrying about the consequences. I really can't be bothered staying in shape at the moment."

In the same way, your ex might be enjoying the freedom of not having to put in a lot, or any, effort in to maintaining her shape to impress you.

Additionally, if she is using dating apps, then she is probably getting a lot of attention from men because many guys don't care as long as they get to the point of having sex with a woman.

If she has a pretty face or nice tits, most guys think, "I'd bang her" even if he only plans on doing it once or twice.

Yet, when he's messaging her or on a date with her, he will act like he is really interested, so she opens up to being with him.

It's a pretty standard and effective approach to use with women, but it works less the more attractive a woman is (i.e. very attractive women usually want a man who is a challenge and who make her feel the need to impress him).

Whatever the case is with your ex, you just need to know one thing:

You can get her back if you want to.

Most women are easy to get back when you use the right approach (i.e. you cause her to feel so much attraction for you as you interact with her that she feels like she would be the one losing out if she doesn't get back with you).

That is what works, regardless of whether your ex has lost weight, gained weight or maintained the same weight.

It's the best, most effective and natural approach to get a woman back quickly and easily.

Have You Been Making These 2 Mistakes, Which Can Result in You Losing the Opportunity to Get Her Back?

So many guys could get their ex girlfriend back easily, but they miss their chance based on making classic ex back mistakes.

If you want to get your ex girlfriend back, avoid these classic mistakes:

1. Wanting her back, but being afraid to make a move in case you get rejected

Don't waste time looking for signs that she's still in love with you (e.g. she's gained weight after your break up, so it might mean that she's depressed and missing you) and then wait around hoping that she will contact you and try to get you back.

That can happen, but in almost all cases, women worry about being rejected by the guy they dumped (i.e. because he hasn't been contacting her), so they just start moving on with new guys to make themselves feel better.

For example: A woman who is missing her ex, but hasn't heard from him, may think, "Well, it's obvious that he doesn't care about me. He hasn't even tried to get me back since we last spoke. I actually miss him and would get back with him, but I'm not going to be the one who does it. He has to man up and make it happen. I don't know if he will though. I also don't want him to reject me if I reach out to him and show interest. So, I will hook up with new guys to help me get over my ex. Then, when I feel ready, I will contact him and if he rejects me, I won't feel rejected because I will already have a new guy, or a few new guys in my life."

It's a silly plan, but many women do it.

Then, in the process of following through on that plan, some women end up finding a new guy that they love and want to be with.

As a result, they don't follow through and try to get their ex guy back.

They just move on.

This is why, as a man, it's up to you to take action and begin the ex back process with her.

Don't just sit around hoping that she will do all the work for you, because most women won't, especially after they've dumped a guy.

I hear from new guys all the time who say something like, "Damnit! Why didn't I find your advice earlier? Someone told me to just wait and if it was meant to be, she would come back. Well, she didn't come back. She is in love with a new guy now."

I also hear from guys who say something like, "I took your advice and interacted with her to re- attract her. It worked! We're back together!"

It's up to you which approach you want to take, but from all my years of experience helping men get women back, I recommend that you take action.

Man up, interact with her, re-attract her and seduce her back into a relationship.

That's how it's done all over the world.

It's natural, quick and it works.

On the other hand, waiting around usually results in a woman just moving on.

The next mistake to avoid is

2. Not understanding that she most-likely needs to see that you are still attracted to her

If you have stopped contacting your ex, or if you now only talk to her like a friend, it can cause her to feel as though you're not physically attracted to her anymore because of her weight gain.

Although women will rarely admit it, almost all women do need a man to show his attraction and appreciate her beauty (even if she has put on weight) in order to feel totally confident around him.

So, if you suddenly cut off contact with your ex, she may think, "He's avoiding me all of a sudden. I bet it's because I put on weight and he now finds me repulsive. I'll show him that I'm attractive by getting myself a new guy."

Alternatively, if you're just talking to her like a friend, she may think, "So, he's not interested now that I've fattened up? Okay, fine then. Well, I'm just going to ignore him from now on. If he is attracted to me and wants me back, he will show it to me. If he doesn't, then I will move on."

This is why, if you want her back, then don't cut off contact and wait and don't act like just a friend.

Contact her, flirt with her and get her back.

How to Mend a Broken Relationship

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

The approach you need to take right now depends on whether you and her have completely broken up, or are still together in a broken, troubled relationship.

Still Together?

[image: Still together?]

If you are still together, here's what you need to do to mend the relationship and get things back on track before she breaks up with you:

1. Start setting off positive chain reactions in your relationship

[image: Start setting off positive chain reactions in your relationship]

Setting off positive chain reactions (rather than negative ones) means that you need to turn situations that would normally cause frustration between you and her into something that actually brings you closer.

In other words, rather than creating negative emotions that push you and her further apart, you create negative emotions that draw you and her together and make you feel happy and in love.

Watch the video above for some examples, or read below!

In a relationship, a couple will sometimes encounter situations where they end up having a stressful conversation about something (e.g. they encounter a challenge, are misunderstanding each other about something important).

In one relationship, the man has the ability to steer the conversation back to a more relaxed, easy-going one, whereas in the other relationship, the man usually struggles to gain control of his emotions when under pressure and as a result, he often ends up in stressful arguments or misunderstandings with his woman, which drives them apart.

Positive chain reaction: Stressful conversation > Man remains confident, calm in control > He knows that they don't need to feel increasingly stressed or annoyed during a conversation > He looks for an opportunity in the conversation to make them both laugh and be more relaxed, while still taking the conversation seriously > They both laugh, smile and relax a little as they remember that they are on the same team/in this together and are not enemies > Stress levels reduce > He continues to remain calm, listen and take the conversation seriously, but his emotional strength under pressure and ability to make them laugh in a serious moment gets rid of the stress of the conversation > This brings them closer together as a strong, capable couple who can handle challenges.

Negative chain reaction: Stressful conversation > Man becomes more and more irritated, frustrated and stresses > Becomes way too serious and intense > Both end up feeling more annoyed, stressed, frustrated and tense than they need to be > Potentially start blaming each other, or acting selfishly, which is out of character for them > Pushes them further apart > One or both of them may start to feel as though the relationship just isn't working > May then result in threats to break up > Pushes them further apart.

So, if you want to mend a broken relationship, one of the most important things you need to focus on is to start setting off positive chain reactions while you still can.

If you leave it too late to begin, she will most likely break up with you.

On the other hand, if you begin and then continue to set off positive chain reactions, you and her will fall more in love than ever before and she will realize that she is with right man and needs to stick with him.

Mr. Right for a woman is essentially a good man who understands how to maintain a relationship properly.

It simple stuff once you get it, but if you don't understand it, relationships with women will be frustrating, stressful and heartbreaking for you for life.

You will go through break up after break up, until you learn how to set off positive chain reactions that bring you and her closer together over time.

Another thing you can do to mend a broken relationship if you're still together is

2. Understand the pieces of the attraction experience that have been missing and start including them

When you understand what type of attraction experience she really wants in a relationship, you can then begin allowing her to experience it with you.

When she sees that you now get it and can make her feel the kind of attraction she has been longing for, it automatically begins to mend parts of the relationship (i.e. sexual and romantic desire, understanding of who she really is) that are important to her.

Watch this video for examples of the attraction experience and how important it is in a relationship

Unfortunately, many guys end up losing their girlfriend (fiance or wife) because they never really understand what she wants and how to give it to her.

For example: A guy might find himself in a situation where his woman is complaining that he plays video games too much and doesn't give her enough attention.

So, he naturally assumes that him playing video games is the main thing causing her to feel unhappy, so he begins to play less and spend more time with her.

Yet, rather than her becoming happy and satisfied that he is now gaming less and spending more time with her, she starts to complain about other things.

He might then feel frustrated and think, "What the heck does she want? Why isn't she happy that I'm spending more time with her? I did what she wanted, but she still complains. It's like nothing I do makes any difference. I almost feel like she doesn't want to fix this relationship and I'm the only one trying. It's like she is just trying to be annoying. I don't get it."

Yet, here's the thing

What he doesn't realize is her complaints about him gaming too much are hints to the kind of attraction experience she really wants (i.e. to be with a man who has purpose and ambition, rather than a man who excessively uses distractions to avoid following through and reaching his true potential as a man).

There's nothing wrong with gaming and most women are fine with it, but it's when a man avoids rising through the levels in real life (so he can spend his time rising through the levels in an artificial life) that women start to lose respect and attraction.

If a man is heavily invested into a video game and it isn't changing their life in real life for the better, then a woman will begin to feel unsafe about their future.

She knows that even if he scores well in a video game, it's not going to benefit her or the life of their children (if they have any at that time, or if she wants to have any in future).

So, her survival instincts kick in and she begins to complain.

Then, if he stops gaming as much, but just spends a lot of time with her doing nothing, then she still won't be satisfied.

A woman's instincts always push her to urge her man along to achieve things in the real world, to help ensure their survival and the survival of any offspring they may have.

By the way!

If you don't know what part of the overall attraction experience is missing in the relationship with your woman, ask yourself: "What have I been doing that is making my woman feel unhappy in the relationship with me?"

For example:

- Maybe you are somewhat romantic when it comes to special occasions like birthdays, anniversaries, or Valentine's Day. Yet, the rest of the time, you don't really feel any need to make her feel special and assume that she should be happy that she gets a few special days a year. The relationship then becomes boring, predictable and the displays of romance and affection seem fake, forced or superficial. Some women are okay with that, but most women want to feel like a man's romantic gestures are based on real love and desire for her, not obligation.
- Maybe you're too giving to her and are always doing nice things for her, but you don't ever make her feel the need to do nice things for you. You just accept her lack of effort in the relationship and hope that if you keep giving and giving, she won't leave you. Yet, if she's like most women, she wants the attraction experience of feeling the need to impress her man, be good him, treat him well and maintain his interest as well.
- Maybe you're really nice and sweet to her in public, but when you're alone, you become more critical of her, or possibly even aggressive and controlling. Women don't feel safe with a guy like that and always begin plotting on how they can exit the relationship without getting hurt, or even potentially killed in the process.
- Maybe you spend too much time hanging out with your friends, rather than making progress in life on projects or endeavors that could really improve your life and hers.
- Maybe you do a lot of or even all of the housework for her, to hopefully make her happy. Yet, almost all women don't respect men who take on a traditionally female role. Almost all women want to be able to be the woman in a relationship, which traditionally comes along with being the one who happily does most of the housework. If you get that dynamic wrong, it can turn a woman off to her core and as a result, she will feel restless and will often want to cheat or break up the relationship so she can find the type of attraction experience she really wants deep down.
- Maybe you're very confident and assertive at work, but when you're at home with her you become wimpy and submissive and allow her to walk all over you.

Once you are clear on what is making your woman unhappy, focus on showing her that you've already changed.

When she experiences your new, attractive behavior, she will naturally begin to feel more respect and attraction for you.

As a result, she will be more motivated to mend the relationship and make it work, rather than wanting to give up and move on without you.

Broken Up?

[image: Broken up?]

If you and her have already broken up, here's what you need to do to get her back!

1. Understand what really caused her to break up with you

Some of the things that can cause a woman to fall out of love with a guy and then want to break up with him are!

- He was confident when she met him, but after a while, he started doubting his attractiveness to her, which then caused him to become more needy and clingy. This turned her off because she only wants to be with a guy who believes in himself and in his value to her. She wants to feel like she's lucky to have him, not like she's doing him a favor by being his girl.
- She initially felt drawn to him because he was nice and sweet, but she soon realized that he wasn't manly enough for her. He just allowed her to walk all over him and get away with treating him badly, just so he could be with her. This caused her to lose a lot of respect and attraction for him because she only wants to be with a good man who has the ability to keep her in line (i.e. make her treat him well, put her back in her place in a dominant, but loving way when needed). She doesn't want to be with a guy who sucks up to her all the time in the hope that she won't dump him.
- There was a spark between them initially, but it faded because he behaved more like a good friend to her, rather than as her man. She wants a guy who has the ability to keep the spark alive between them over time (e.g. by maintaining his masculine role no matter what she says or does to test his, by making her feel girly in comparison to his masculine vibe and behavior).
- He put a lot of effort into initially chasing her and getting her to be his girl. It was fun and exciting at the beginning of the relationship, but over time, his approach became very boring and predictable (i.e. he was always trying to win her over, always putting her needs in front of his own, always being very romantic). She wants a guy who is more of a challenge, so she feels the need to impress him too, rather than it being so one-sided.

When you fully understand where you went wrong with your ex, you can then change your approach when interacting with her and get her back.

When your approach is different, her response to you will be different as well.

For example: Rather than feeling turned off, annoyed or indifferent, she feels interested, open and attracted.

You are the same guy, but are simply using an approach that creates attraction rather than dissatisfaction.

When she feels attracted, her guard automatically comes down and she feels drawn to you in a sexual and romantic way.

This renewed feeling allows her to honestly believe that you really are different now and that if she got back with you, things really would be different and better than before.

As a result, she opens up to mending the relationship with you, rather than wanting to move on and finding a new man.

So, right now, you need toâ€¦!

2. Prepare yourself to interact with her and let her experience the changes

If you donâ€¦t prepare yourself to offer her a new and improved attraction experience and instead, just try to get her back with your old approach to attraction, then you will almost certainly get rejected.

Alternatively, if she doesnâ€¦t reject you right away, she will stall and say, â€œIâ€™m not sure yet. Give me more time.â€

That is usually code for, â€œI can see that you still canâ€¦t offer me the attraction experience I want, so give me more time to move on. I will start dating and find myself a replacement guy, so I can then tell you itâ€™s over for real. I will have moved on before you, so you end up being the dumped one and the one left behind. That will be better for me. So, give me more time.â€

A woman doesnâ€¦t want to hint at that though because her ex might get angry, or rush to move on before she does.

So, a woman will usually speak in code and string a guy along, making him feel like he has a chance, when in reality, she knows that he doesnâ€¦t understand what she wants and is planning on moving on without him.

Of course, that doesnâ€¦t mean he is stuffed now and doesnâ€¦t have any options.

He does.

He can stop using his old approach that doesnâ€¦t work and start using an approach that does and will work on her.

When you have properly prepared yourself and know exactly how you will make her feel a lot of attraction for you, then go ahead andâ€¦!

3. Interact with her in person to properly re-attract her

You can make an ex woman feel some attraction via text and a lot of attraction on a phone call, but nothing compares to interacting with her in person.

So make sure that you get to an in person meet up.

When interacting with your ex, if you feel unsure whether or not you are making her feel enough attraction, ask yourself things like:

- Am I turning her on right now (i.e. by being confident, emotionally masculine, charming, funny), or am I turning her off (i.e. by being insecure, unsure of myself, submissive, needy or wimpy)?

- Does she feel relaxed and happy to be talking to me, or does she feel tense, stressed out and like she wants to get away from me as quickly as possible?
- Am I making her feel like a sexy, feminine woman in my presence, or do I make her feel more like a friend now?
- Does she feel strong surges of sexual and romantic attraction for me based on my attitude and on how I now talk, act, behave and respond to her, or does she feel like she could get a better attraction experience from another man?
- If you are approaching attraction correctly, she will naturally start to feel drawn to you again in a way that feels really good to her.

It will feel like a breath of fresh air to her, where you and her are finally able to connect in the way that she wished you always did.

At that point, she may feel worried about getting right back into a relationship with you, but the attraction she is feeling will overpower it.

Attraction makes both men and women want to ignore all possible problems and just proceed to kissing, sex and love.

It's an ancient instinct, force and feeling that influences what both men and women say and do when interacting, dating, having sex and being in a relationship with each other.

With a lot of attraction, the relationship feels fun, it feels right and feels good.

It's extremely hard to ignore.

With a lack of attraction though, the relationship feels boring, wrong and broken.

That is also extremely hard to ignore.

Some women put up with a lack of attraction for months, or even years, but they eventually get tired of it.

So, make sure that when you interact with her in person, you let her feel a strong, renewed sense of attraction for you based on all of the subtle changes you have made to how you now interact with her.

When you do that, she automatically senses the changes without you having to tell her and naturally feels attracted to you.

Then, getting her back becomes easy and practically automatic because it's something she wants to do, rather than you being the only one who wants to mend the relationship and get back together.

By the way!

When you see that she is feeling attracted to you again!

4. Bridge the physical gap between you with a hug, kiss and then sex

[image: Bridge the physical gap with a hug]

If you have been re-attracting her during the interaction, chances are high that she will be open to at least giving you a hug.

So, go ahead and initiate it by saying something along the lines of, "Well, I'm happy that we're getting along again. It doesn't mean that we will get back together, but at least we are getting along now. We deserve a hug for that. Come here and give me a hug. ☐☐

Then, move towards her with your arms open in a relaxed, confident manner.

When hugging her, if she seems open to a kiss (e.g. she stays in your arms longer than necessary, she snuggles into your neck, she looks up at you and smiles), just lean in and give her a kiss.

Then, head to her place or yours and hook up sexually to speed up the process of mending the relationship and getting back together.

Mend the Relationship Faster By Avoiding These 4 Mistakes

Here are some mistakes to avoid when attempting to get her back.

1. Cutting off contact and hoping that she will miss you and want you back, even though you haven't changed anything

Cutting off contact and waiting (for weeks or months) can work sometimes, but in most cases the woman will just move on.

Remember: Most break ups happen because a woman disconnects from her feelings of respect, attraction and love for a guy.

In other words, she no longer has strong feelings for him.

So, if he then disappears from her life, rather than missing him and then chasing after him, she usually feels relieved that he's not contacting her.

She simply uses the time apart to find herself a new man to hook up with, date and fall in love with.

On the other hand, if she does come back as a result of him cutting off contact (very rare, especially if the woman no longer has strong feelings), she will see that nothing has changed and just break up with him again.

So, he won't get her back for real.

He will just get dumped again.

This time around, she will even more determined to start dating and moving on without him.

So, if you want to mend your broken relationship and get your woman back for real, just focus on using interactions that you have with her to re-spark her feelings for you, rather than cutting off contacting, waiting and risking losing her for real.

Another mistake to avoid is

2. Trying to work things out via text

Although texting works well when in a relationship with a woman, it's not a good way to try to get a woman back.

Why?

When a woman has broken up with you and is almost certainly thinking about you in a negative way, she usually won't be looking at your texts in a positive light.

This is why many guys find that their ex girlfriend (or wife) suddenly changes and becomes cold, bitchy and distant.

He can't work out why.

After all, he is a good guy and is honestly trying to fix the relationship.

Additionally, she is a good woman and doesn't usually act like a cold, distant, bitchy type of woman.

Yet, what he fails to realize is that the majority of communication between humans is body language and tonality and when those two things are missing, the person reading the communication has to assume what the writer's body language or tone might be.

For example: Imagine what you'd think of me (the writer of this article) if I didn't include any videos of myself.

You would have to make assumptions on what type of tonality I'd use, how confident I am, what body language I'm using, what kind of person I am and so on.

Of course, your ex knows who you are and has experienced your body language.

However, after a break up, if you only text, then she has to assume what type of mood you are in, how you would say what you are texting her if you spoke in person, how confident or insecure you would seem and so on.

If your ex currently has a negative perception of you (based on how you behaved leading up to the break up, during the break up and after it), she will naturally be looking at your texts in a negative light.

She will be assuming all sorts of negative things about you and as a result, even though you might be feeling very confident when texting, she can be imagining you appearing desperate, lost, confused and insecure, which are all unattractive traits to women.

Women are attracted to confidence and emotional strength in men and when getting an ex woman back, you need to have the balls to at least let her experience that on a phone call (audio or video), or in person, rather than trying to hopefully work everything out via text.

So, even though it's perfectly fine to use some text when getting an ex back, the majority of the ex back process should be done over a phone call and in person.

There is only so much you can achieve via text.

At some point, you need to get on a call with her (audio or video) and then get to an in person meet up.

Don't hide behind texts and end up getting ignored or blocked.

It's such a common mistake these days.

So many guys miss out on getting an ex girl back because they stick to trying to work things out via text.

Another mistake to avoid is

3. Sending her a long email or letter to explain what you have realized, how sorry you are for the mistakes you made and how much she means to you

Just like a woman can ignore your texts, she can also delete your email or throw away your letter without reading it.

She can also scan read it and roll her eyes at it.

The thing is, even if she does read it all, in most cases, she ends up feeling more annoyed and misunderstood by him.

Why?

Heâs writing about himself.

Heâs writing to explain what he has realized, how sorry he is and how much she means to him.

Yet, when a woman has broken up with a guy, she usually stops caring about him and what feels.

She becomes focused on how she feels.

So, the key to getting her back is reactivating her feelings, not talking about your feelings and your struggles to become a better man.

Another mistake to avoid isâ

4. Asking her what she thinks you should do to mend the relationship

Although that might sound like a smart thing to do (e.g. because she is the one who is unhappy and wants you to change certain things), itâs actually a bad idea.

Why?

In most cases, she wonât tell you her secret, deeper reasons for feeling turned off because itâs just not something like to talk about with men.

Many men become sensitive or upset when women say things like, âYouâre not manly enoughâ or, âI donât feel turned on because youâre just too neutral. I want you to be more manly when you touch me. I want to see your masculinity when you talk to me. All I see and experience is a neutral type of guy who feels more like a friend. I want to be with a man, so I can be a woman.â

In some cases though, men donât become upset.

Instead, a man will start saying, âOkay, great I will do that. I promise to be more manly.â

Yet, to most women, that seems forced, fake and weak on the manâs part.

She loses respect for him for not being able to be his own man and instead, being controlled and taught by a woman all the time.

She doesnât want fake masculinity being displayed.

She wants his masculinity to be displayed based on his deep understanding of how to be a man.

She doesnât want it to be an act to shut her up and avoid a break up.

If she gets that sense, itâs just not attractive.

It has to be real and that is why most women will stop themselves from explaining the details.

The reality is that a woman wants you to figure it out on your own, rather than leaning on her for guidance and support.

She just wants to be in love.

So, if you ask her for guidance and support, she will instinctively try to avoid it and will continue trying to move on without you.

This is why you have to figure out how to mend the relationship and re-attract your ex without asking her for instructions.

Be a man without her help and she will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for you.

When she feels that, she opens back up and wants to be with you, rather than losing you.

This is something that you can achieve today, within days or at the latest, within 1-2 weeks.

It doesn't have to take many weeks or months.

Most men are able to get an ex woman back immediately, or very quickly when they use the right approach.

My Ex Told Me Not to Contact Her Anymore

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 common reasons why a woman will say that to her ex boyfriend:

1. He was trying to work things out via text and it ended up becoming too stressful for her

Although thereâs nothing wrong with texting an ex woman, using it as your number one method of getting her back, usually wonât work.

Why?

Relationship problems can be complex and trying to discuss all of it via texts can be very exhausting for a woman, especially when she really isnât motivated to be interacting with her ex anymore.

The thing is, when a woman is in love with a guy and really wants to be with him, she will happily spend time texting back and forth and it usually wonât become a problem.

Yet, when a woman has broken up with a guy and no longer wants to be with him, his ongoing texts can end up feeling annoying, irritating and even unwanted.

A woman may feel as though continuing to communicate with him is a waste of time and energy, because she still doesnât want to get back with him.

So, she will say that she doesnât want him to contact her anymore.

Of course, that doesnât mean he canât get her back.

In almost all cases, he can.

Instead, what it means is that heâs just pushed way too hard via text and sheâs had enough of it.

If he wants her back, then heâs going to need to get to an in person interaction, so he can properly re-attract her and let her see that he has already improved and as a result, the same old relationship problems arenât there anymore.

When she can see that for herself in person, it can cause her to begin having feelings for him again within a minute or two, compared to weeks or months of exhausting texting, which usually ends up with the guy getting blocked, ignored or the woman telling him not to contact her anymore.

So, donât try to get her back and work everything out via text.

You have to get to the next stages of the ex back process, otherwise you simply wonât get her back.

Another reason why a woman will tell her ex boyfriend not to contact her anymore isâ!

2. He was trying to get her to want a relationship before he had reactivated her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction

[image: Trying to get her to commit to a relationship before re-attracting her]

To get a woman back, you have to make her feel a strong, renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, so she naturally wants to get back with you.

If it's just about you wanting her back because you feel so much for her, then she's going to feel annoyed and turned off.

What's most important at this point are her feelings.

You have to make her have real feelings for you again, so she then wants to have a relationship with you, or at least hook up with you again to see how she feels afterwards.

This is why, if a woman's ex guy keeps talking about how he wants to fix things so they can get back together, she will often get to the point where she doesn't want to interact with him anymore because she simply doesn't feel the same way.

Initially, she might try to be gentle with him by saying things like, "I'm not ready for that right now. Please don't push me" or, "Give me more time. I am still processing my feelings" or, "I need space for a while to figure out what I want."

Even if he gives her some space, it won't mean that he will get her back.

What gets a woman back for sure is when you reactivate her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

It's a 3 step process and any guy can do it with any woman in any ex back situation.

I've literally lost count of the amount of guys who've contacted me saying something like, "I didn't think I could get her back because my situation was different other guys. I followed your advice and it worked!"

I hear that all the time.

It simply doesn't matter how different your situation is.

What matters is making her feel a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for you, so she naturally wants to get back together.

She doesn't want to lose you and end up feeling regret as she sees you move on, while she still has feelings for you.

She wants to give the relationship another chance and see how it goes.

Guys all over the world are able to do this with their ex woman and you really can do it too.

So, don't try to get your ex back by pushing for a relationship before she is attracted to you again and even when she is attracted to you again.

Make her feel so attracted to the new and improved you that she wants to be back in a relationship with you and you then allow that.

Don't be the one pushing, pleading and begging for it.

Put yourself in the position of power with her.

It might seem impossible for you right now, but you really can do it.

Another reason why a woman will tell her ex boyfriend not to contact her anymore is!

3. She just doesn't believe that things will work out

[image: She just doesn't believe things will work out]

Sometimes a guy is a really good guy and truly wants to work things out with his ex girl, but she just doesn't feel like he has what it takes to do it.

She tried to get through to him in the relationship and convince him to change, but he was never been able to do it (e.g. he always remained insecure, he was never able to step up and start being more manly around her, he didn't know how to handle her tantrums, he was afraid of reaching for his true potential as a man and hid behind her or other distractions and excuses so he didn't have to take action, he didn't know how to bring out her good girl side and instead brought out a cold, mean side to her that she doesn't want to experience in a relationship).

She loves him and she thinks he's a good guy, but he just doesn't understand women at the level it takes to truly attract her and make her respect him, love him and treat him well for life.

Alternatively, maybe he was the opposite.

Maybe she loves him, but she believes that he's a bit of an asshole.

He's selfish, he took her for granted and expected way too much of her, without giving enough love back to her.

Either way, in a case where a woman is telling her ex boyfriend not to contact her anymore, she has gotten to the point where she is tired of him trying to get her back before changing.

For example: She may think to herself, "I don't think things would really be different if I gave him another chance. He's still unable to make me feel the way I want to feel when I'm with him. Instead of feeling happy, attracted and in love, he makes me feel annoyed, turned off and like I can't get away from him fast enough. That's not how I want to feel about the man in my life. This isn't going to work out, so for my own emotional wellbeing I need to let go of the idea that we'll ever get back together again and get on with my life without him. I've got to start moving on. I will find myself a new man who will love me and make me love him the right way."

This is why, if your ex told you not to contact her anymore, you need to quickly upgrade your ability to attract her and make love flow in interactions between you and her.

To begin with, if you haven't done so already, stop all interactions with her for a few days and just allow for things to calm down.

I don't recommend that you stop contacting her for 30 or 60 days.

Those approaches don't work well for men who want to get a woman back.

They can work well when a woman has been dumped and is trying to get a man to feel rejected, but not the other way around.

In almost all cases, if a man stops contact for 30 or more days, his ex woman will simply move on.

This is why, after years of testing and successful results with clients, I only recommend 3-7 days of space before you start the ex back process and get her back.

Watch this video of mine for more info on what to do!

What's important to understand for your situation, is that at the moment, your ex is probably feeling a bit agitated and annoyed by you.

So, any attempts you make to talk to her and try and convince her to give you another chance are probably going to be met with resistance, frustration and possibly even a bit of anger.

By giving her a few days of space (or up to a week if you feel it's necessary in your situation), you are allowing her enough time to calm down, breathe and see that you aren't chasing her and annoying her.

She can then stop focusing on things about you that she doesn't like and begin missing some of the things she does like (e.g. the way you always treated her so well, how funny, cool or interesting you are, how you really are a good guy and just made some simple relationship mistakes that could have been avoided, that you have a great sense of humor and always know how to make her smile and laugh, that you really do care about her, that you and her used to have good sex and enjoy hanging out, that you aren't that bad after all).

She may still be remembering negatives about you, but giving her 3-7 days allows her time to calm down and start remembering some good things, which opens her back up to interacting with you.

Then, after the 3-7 days, get her on a phone call and let her experience the new you.

If she doesn't answer when you call, simply wait a day and then try again.

If she doesn't answer the next time, simply send a message saying that you are just calling to say goodbye.

Hi Sandra. I accept that it's over between us. I just want to call and say goodbye. I'm sure we're mature enough to do that. So, I will give you a call to say goodbye. No hard feelings.

Then, after a few minutes, give her a call and then let her experience the new and improved you (i.e. be confident, use some humor to lighten up the situation, be masculine in how you talk and interact with her to make her feel girly in comparison to you, be a bit sweeter if you became a bit of an asshole in the relationship, or be a bit playfully challenging if you became too soft in the relationship).

Letting her experience the new you also means that you don't start discussing the relationship and where you went wrong, in detail.

Instead, you use an approach to the interaction that naturally warms her back up to you and makes her want to see you in person.

There are so many ways that you can make an ex woman feel attracted to you and warm back up to you as you talk to her.

The more attracted she feels, the quicker she will change her mind about you not contacting her anymore.

Rather than pushing you away, she will open back up and hope that you have the balls to arrange to catch up in person, re-attract her further and get the relationship back together.

Another reason why a woman will tell her ex to stop contacting her is that

4. He has made her feel way more valuable than him and she doesn't like it

[image: He has made her feel way more valuable than him and she doesn't like it]

In almost all cases, a woman wants to feel as though she is lucky to be with her man, while also seeing that he treats her well and appreciates her.

She doesn't want to feel as though she is way more valuable than him, or feel like she is doing him a favor by being with him because she really could do better.

She wants to see that her man feels more than worthy of her, while still treating her well.

Yet, although some guys understand that instinctively, many find it difficult to act on that knowledge and remain confident around a woman that they see as being high value, or high quality.

For example: Sometimes a guy will date a woman and see her as being too good for him because she is more beautiful than women he has dated in the past, she is more educated than he is, she comes from a good family, has a better career than him and so on.

This can cause him to feel insecure about his value in comparison to her and as a result, he might be nicer than he really is or wants to be, put up with her bad treatment of him, try to buy her love with gifts and financial assistance (e.g. paying her bills) and generally try to suck up to her.

Essentially, he doesn't feel worthy of her and hopes that if he is very nice to her, allows her to get her way and puts up her bad behavior then she won't ever dump him.

Yet, the opposite is true.

The reality is that women don't respect, feel attracted to and truly love guys who let a woman walk all over them.

It's just not attractive to women, especially to pretty women or women who see themselves as being high quality.

A woman who sees herself in that way, will usually have a sense of entitlement to a great relationship, whereas a woman who sees herself as low value will sometimes feel like she can't expect too much from a man.

So, if your ex was a pretty girl, a beautiful woman or a woman who saw herself as being high quality, or high value, then she won't like it if you have been making her feel like she is way better than you.

A woman like her prefers to be with a man who is more of a challenge, where she feels she needs to work hard to impress to keep him interested in her.

She wants a man who will make her friends envious and jealous because he is so confident and sure of himself, but is also a good man.

What she doesn't want, is a guy who is so insecure about his worthiness that he allows her to push him around and treat him badly, without ever standing up for himself, or a guy who is too afraid to be a challenge in case she dumps him.

When a woman can't feel proud of her man, respect him, feel attracted to him, then she just won't feel motivated to stick with him in a relationship.

This is why, if you want your ex back, you need to make her feel like she would be winning by being your girl again, rather than making her feel like she might be settling for second best.

That means you need to show her (not tell her) during every interaction you have with her from now on that youâre a confident, emotionally strong man who believes in himself and in his attractiveness to her.

Donât tell her that.

Instead, just let your confidence come through in how you talk, behave, act and respond when interacting with her from now on.

It is especially important that you remain confident if she tries to make you feel unsure of yourself when youâre interacting with her (e.g. she puts you down, acts uninterested, acts offended or annoyed, blames you of things, says that you wonât be able to win her back).

When your ex can see that you remain confident no matter what, she will naturally feel respect and attraction for you for being so emotionally strong under pressure

If she sees that, she will naturally feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you again.

As a result, she will want to stop saying that she doesnât want you to contact her anymore and instead, will begin to open back up to interacting with you to see where things go.

Another reason why a woman will say that to her ex boyfriend isâ!

5. She can see that he still doesnât understand why she really broke up with him

A woman doesnât want to tell a man how to be the man that she wants.

It might seem unfair, but women have their reasons for it (e.g. she doesnât want to be his teacher, she doesnât want to tell him what to change and then see him change it like a good, little puppy dog, she doesnât want him to pretend to have changed what she has asked for just to get her back and so on).

Apart from giving him some hints along the way during the relationship (e.g. complaining that heâs not manly enough, saying that he has been taking her for granted, telling him that she doesnât feel the same way anymore and might end up breaking up with him if he doesnât change), a woman will want her man to figure things out on his own, so he can be his own man for his own reasons.

This is why, even though certain aspects of a guyâs thinking and behavior might annoy a woman and turn her off, she will rarely tell him about it (in detail).

She may give him hints or get into arguments with him about the relationship, but she will rarely explain her deep, secret reasons for feeling turned off by him.

Instead, she will want him to care enough about himself, her and the relationship to put in the effort required to understand how to be the kind of man that a woman respects, feels attracted to and loves for life when in a relationship.

If he does that, then she will feel a tremendous amount of respect, attraction and love for him and begin being a more loving, attentive, devoted woman to him.

Yet, if he continues to make the same old mistakes, then she will eventually break up with him and try to find a man who can give her what she really wants when in a relationship.

The good news is that, you can still be that man for her.

One of the main reasons why is that most guys she will meet out there will not be able to keep a relationship together for life.

For example: According to Stanford University in California, 60% of unmarried relationships break up within 2 months and 70% end within 1 year.

So, if she tries to move on without you, she has a 70% chance of failing.

On the other hand, if you can level up and be the man that a woman actually wants to be with in a relationship, then you will have an incredibly high chance of being one of the couples who happily remain together in a relationship for life.

A big part of leveling up as a man is understanding where you went wrong with her, so you can make the right adjustments and then interact with her and make her feel a renewed sense of respect, attraction and love for you.

For example: Some of the main reasons why a woman will fall out of love with a guy areâ

- He started off being a confident and self-assured man, but over time he became an insecure, clingy or needy guy.
- He stopped treating her like a sexy, desirable woman and made her feel more like his buddy, big sister or one of the guys.
- He stopped making her feel loved and appreciated because he assumed that she would stick around due to how good things were at the start.
- He allowed her to make most of the decisions and be the boss in the relationship, so she ended up feeling more emotionally dominant than him and as a result, lost respect for him for not being man enough.
- He started out being a good guy, but turned into a bit of an asshole, or became very controlling of her.
- He seemed open and ready for love when she met him, but he never really opened up to her. She tried to get him to be more real, vulnerable or unrestricted in the way he communicated with her, but he pretty much always remained closed up, so she couldn't really connect with him in a meaningful enough way.
- He has so much potential to succeed in life, but he hides from it behind TV, video games, drugs or alcohol, wasting time with his buddies and so on.
- He seemed like a manly type of guy initially, but he turned out to be a softy and ended up acting a bit too feminine in the relationship, which turned her off.

By understanding her real, secret reasons for the break up, you can then make improvements and adjustments that immediately show her you have learned from your mistakes and have already become a better, more attractive man.

When she experiences the new and improved you for herself, she will naturally feel some respect and attraction for you based on you being able to figure out where you were going wrong, fix it and then get on with being a better man.

You didn't need her to help you and you didn't need to tell her about your âjourneyâ to improve yourself, or therapy that you might have gone to.

Instead, you just got on with figuring out where you went wrong, fixing it and then simply being a better, more appealing and attractive man.

That is what works when re-attracting an ex woman.

4 Mistakes to Avoid Making if You Want Her Back

Getting your ex back really comes down to whether or not your approach to her turns her on or off from now on.

So, if you want to turn her on, make sure that you don't make any of the following mistakes:

1. Assuming that it's completely over now and then losing confidence in your attractiveness or appeal to her

Just because your ex is saying that she doesn't want you to contact her anymore, it doesn't mean she will stick to that decision for life.

Feelings can change.

When you interact with her again and make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she naturally feels like opening back up to you, even if it's just temporarily to see how she feels.

You can make her feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction when you

- Make her laugh and smile, especially if she starts off an interaction seeming distant or cold.
- Remain confident, calm and in control no matter what she says and does to make you feel insecure.
- Show her via your actions, behavior and attitude that you've understood her secret reasons for breaking up with you and already improved.
- Flirt with her and create some sexual tension between you.
- Make her feel girly in comparison to your more masculine approach to the interaction (i.e. your vibe, behavior, style of conversation, tone of voice, the way you react to her).
- Be a good, loving man and remain confident if she tests you by temporarily being bitchy towards you, to see if you become angry.

There are so many ways to make her feel respect and attraction as you talk to her.

That is where your power is.

When you make her feel respect and attraction, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good.

Initially, she might try to ignore her feelings and try to convince herself that she doesn't care and wants to continue moving on, but the feelings will remain in the background.

She will literally lose sleep over you.

She will be tossing and turning at night thinking about you.

Then, even though she previously said not to contact her anymore, she will change her mind and become open to communicating with you again.

She will want to explore her new feelings for you and see if they will grow or fade away after you've kissed and had sex again.

As long as you have properly prepared yourself to re-attract her, then you will be successful and get her back.

She will feel more attracted to you than she ever has and it will be so much more meaningful because you will be now attracting her in ways that she wished you had all along.

It will be a totally new and exciting experience for her and for you.

Yet, if you lose confidence in yourself because it seems â€œoverâ€œ now that she is telling you not to contact her, then you will end up going down an insecure path that will lead to more mistakes and less and less of a chance of getting her back.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€œ

2. Not doing anything to make her miss you while you're not communicating with each other

[image: Not doing anything to make her miss you while you're not communicating with each other]

If you don't talk to her over the next few days or a week, it doesn't mean that you can't do anything to get her back.

You.

For example:

- Post up photos on social media of yourself having fun with new people. If she has unfriended you, or isn't following you on social media, simply posts the photos or videos as â€œpublicâ€œ so she can see them from the outside.
- Hang out with mutual friends and let them see that you're confident and happy without her. This might then be passed onto her during conversations or interactions she has with your mutual friends.

If you think that she won't be checking up on your social media, then think again.

Women always check up on their ex via social media now, for various reasons (e.g. Are you moving on faster than her? Are you making the mistake of posting sad, â€œpity meâ€œ type of posts? Do you seem lost and lonely without her? Do you seem to be happy, confident and enjoying life without her? Is there a new woman in your life already?)

When your ex can see that you're not sad, desperate and lonely without her, she will become much more open to interacting with you again so she can find out why you are so confident and happy without her.

You being confident and happy without her makes her feel as though she is being rejected and left behind by you, which makes her want to stop you feeling that way (i.e. she contacts you and asks if you still miss her and if you say, â€œYes, I've been missing you every dayâ€œ she knows that she still has that power over you).

It may seem cruel, but in many cases, to get a woman back, you do need to make her feel some painful emotions, as well as pleasurable emotions.

So, if she asks if you have been missing her, it's best to give her a mix of pleasure and pain, by being playfully challenging.

For example:

Her: Do you miss me?

You: No, of course not.

Her: Huh? Really.

You: [Laugh and say] I'm kidding. I've missed you a bit, but not as much as you've missed me.

Women love being playfully challenged like that.

It keeps things exciting and makes a woman feel attracted to your confidence, social intelligence, balls, ability to create a moment like that and so on.

You don't have to always be playfully challenging, but you do need to have the balls to add that kind of thing in to spice things up and keep things interesting.

The reality is that when it comes to getting an ex back (especially one who has told you not to contact her anymore), if you are too afraid to make her feel any painful emotions (i.e. regret, rejection, feeling of loss, insecurity), then she probably won't feel enough motivation to get back with you.

Don't be afraid of mixing pleasure with pain when interacting with her.

Women love it and it draws them to you like a magnet.

3. Hoping that if you just wait long enough, she will eventually change her mind and contact you

That has to be one of the biggest ex back myths out there.

Just wait and if it's meant to be, she will come back.

It's laughable.

The reality is that, as a man, you have to go after what you want in life and with women.

That doesn't mean chasing women or chasing an ex, but it does mean purposely attracting women to you, so you get what you want with women.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that and assume that just cutting off contact will work.

The reality is that, unless a woman is still in love with her man and secretly wants to get back with him, then she just won't care if he doesn't contact her anymore.

She might be curious about why he isn't contacting her and she may then end up chatting with him via text to confirm that he is still missing her and wants to get back together.

Yet, in most cases, a woman just moves on for many reasons (e.g. she doesn't want to contact her ex and get rejected if the real reason he isn't contacting her is that he over her, or she doesn't feel motivated to contact him because she isn't attracted to him anymore, or she feels like it's the man's role to get a relationship back together and if he doesn't try, then it means he doesn't care and so on).

This is why, you shouldn't just wait around hoping that your ex changes her mind and coming running back to you one day.

If you use that approach, you will probably end up feeling shocked, disappointed and rejected when you find out that she's in love with a new guy.

If you want your ex back, man up and interact with her, reactivate her feelings for you and then get her back.

You are man enough to that.

Believe it.

You have it within you.

You are strong enough to do that.

Donâ€¢t doubt yourself.

Step up to the plate and hit the home run.

You can do it.

Donâ€¢t just wait around hoping that she comes back on her own.

If she didnâ€¢t feel enough attraction for you in the relationship and dumped you because of it, then sheâ€¢s almost certainly not going to feel enough attraction for you if you just wait around doing nothing.

The next mistake to avoid isâ€¢!

4. Not even knowing that you could change her mind today or tomorrow, if you were to use a different approach

Most guys that I hear back from get their ex woman back immediately, within days and within 1-2 weeks.

Those guys re-attract their ex woman and naturally make her want to get back together.

Itâ€¢s a natural, simple process and it works on women all over the world.

Yet, you have to be willing to start making her feel attracted in new and improved ways as you interact with her.

If you just keep using the same approach that hasnâ€¢t been working on her (e.g. promising to change, offering to do anything she wants, trying to make her feel pity for you), then sheâ€¢ll probably continue telling you to stop contacting her.

If you are serious about getting her back, then try something different that will actually work on her.

I Thought We Were Okay, But She Wasn't Happy and Has Now Dumped Me

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 5 of the most common reasons why a break up will happen like that:

1. She gets tired of faking her happiness with the relationship and walks away

[image: She doesn't know how to fix the problem]

Not all women are courageous enough to say what's really bothering them in a relationship (e.g. because she's afraid that her guy might get angry and react violently towards her, she worries that he might become upset and then dump her, she doesn't want to hurt his feelings or get into a big argument with him about it, she doesn't like confrontation and would rather just swallow her annoyance) and sometimes, a woman simply doesn't know why she feels the way she does and what would fix the problem.

As a result, a woman like that will often pretend to be happy in the relationship and hope that he will somehow change some of the things that are annoying her about him, without her having to tell him.

In some instances, a woman might hint at what is bothering her, but she won't just come out and say it.

For example: A guy might be in the habit of always canceling plans with his woman at the last minute, without giving her any notice or taking her feelings into consideration.

However, rather than come and say that his behavior makes her feel unloved, unappreciated and taken for granted, she might instead just say something along the lines of, "I really appreciate it when you let me know you can't make it to our date in advance. It gives me a chance to make other plans with friends rather than staying home alone and missing you."

Secretly, she's likely hoping that he will realize by himself that his behavior is making her unhappy and take steps to improve.

Another example is if a guy is overly possessive and jealous of his woman and constantly keeps tabs on her by monitoring her calls, texts, social media messages and emails.

He might also forbid her to hang out with her friends unless he's with her.

Naturally, this behavior makes her feel smothered and like she's a little child rather than a mature, independent woman.

Yet, once again, rather than come out and say that to her guy and risk getting into a confrontation with him, she might instead try to reassure him by saying things like, "You know that I love you, right?" or, "You're the only guy I want to be with," or "One of the things I love about us is that we're 100% devoted to each other."

[image: She walks away, even though things seemed okay to her man]

Basically, she's hoping that by saying that to him, it will put his mind to rest about losing her and stop being so controlling all the time.

However, if the guy doesn't pick up on his woman's hints and simply continues to think, act and behave like he always has, her unhappiness in the relationship will intensify.

As a result, her feelings of love, respect and attraction will begin to fade away, until she finally decides to break up with him.

In most cases, this will come as a shock to the guy and he may say something along the lines of, âI thought we were okay but she wasn't happy and has now dumped me.â

[image: She was very unhappy, but he just didn't recognize it]

Yet, what he didn't realize is that his girl most-likely gave him a lot of clues of her unhappiness along the way, that he just didn't notice or recognize.

So, to get her back, a guy like that needs to first understand what aspect of his thinking and behavior caused his ex to feel unhappy in the relationship with him and then interact with her to show her that he's not that man anymore.

By making adjustments to how he approaches interactions with her, she automatically feels and experiences the changes, without him even having to say that he has changed.

She then becomes open to giving him another chance.

On the other hand, if he tries to get her back without understanding what made her unhappy in the first place, he will continue making the same attraction mistakes as before and she will remain closed off.

Another reason why a break up can happen like that isâ

2. The guy is just too nice or agreeable and that doesn't excite her

[image: The guy is too nice and agreeable and that doesn't excite her]

Most guys are good guys, so it goes without saying that a lot of them also believe that being nice and agreeable towards a woman is the key to maintaining her love and making her happy.

Unfortunately though, it doesn't actually work that way.

The reality is that although most women appreciate it when a guy is being nice to her and treats her well, it's not what causes her to have ongoing sexual and romantic feelings for him.

She might care about him as a person, but without that extra spark of sexual attraction, she ends up feeling more like his friend or roommate than his girl.

So, when a guy is being nice and sweet to his woman and always lets her have whatever she wants as a way of keeping her happy, he ends up making his miserable instead. Why?

Basically, because there's no sexual spark between them, she secretly feels like something is missing between them.

She might think, âWhy am I being so ungrateful? He's such a nice guy. I should feel lucky to have him. He always treats me like a princess and lets me have whatever I want, but I just don't feel happy with him. What's wrong with me? Why isn't what I have with him good enough for me?â

Yet, no matter how much she tries to convince herself that everything is okay, she can't shake the feeling that there's a man out there who can make her feel the way she wants to feel when she's with him (e.g. sexually attracted, desirable, excited).

If that feeling of dissatisfaction gets too strong inside of her, she may then just dump her guy and try to move on.

So, if you have been a really nice, sweet, agreeable guy to your ex, don't try to get her back by using the same approach.

That doesn't mean you should suddenly be rude, obnoxious or unpleasant towards her.

Instead, you need to be more emotionally masculine with her so that she begins to feel the all-important spark of sexual attraction when she interacts with you (i.e. over the phone and especially in person).

The more you make sparks of excitement surge through her body, the more she will appreciate that you're a good guy too.

She will begin to see you as one of the rare, good men who also knows how to make a woman feel like a real woman (i.e. attractive, desirable, sexy) when she's with him.

As a result, her perspective of you will naturally begin to change and she will feel open to seeing you more often to see what happens.

Another reason why a break up can happen like that is

3. The guy is too neutral and she wants a guy who is her opposite

[image: The guy is too neutral]

Sometimes a guy will think that he is being an ideal boyfriend by being neutral (i.e. treating her like a good friend, not making her feel girly in comparison to his masculinity).

That can work initially, if there is a lot of physical attraction between a couple, but it will gradually become boring over time.

To keep the spark alive in a relationship, the attraction has to come from how you interact with her (i.e. making her feel girly in comparison to your masculinity, being confident and emotionally secure no matter what she says or does around you, flirting with her, looking at her as a sexy woman, rather than your new buddy for life).

Essentially, the amount of attraction that exists in your relationship will come from you not being neutral around her and instead, being the opposite to her (i.e. really being the man, so she can really be your girl).

Unfortunately, a lot of guys think that is "disrespectful" towards women and as a result, they treat their girlfriend like a friend and she then ends up falling out of love with him over time.

Additionally, sometimes a guy will mistakenly believe that he should go along with all of his woman's tastes and preferences and if he does, she will love him, feel so much closer to him, feel attracted to him and want to be with him for life.

Yet, in reality, what that approach, they just end up feeling like two friends, which then slowly kills the attraction between them.

There is no real difference between them (i.e. masculine vs. feminine) and instead, they seem very similar in their energy and approach to interactions.

For example: No matter what she asks him (e.g. What do you want to eat? Where do you want to go? What movie would you like to watch?) he just responds by saying something like, Oh, I don't mind. You decide, or I'm okay with whatever you want.

Yet, that's what a woman talks like when in a relationship.

Women say those things because they want a man to take the lead, so she can feel feminine in comparison to him.

A man doesn't have to make all the decisions, but he needs to be the man.

Here's the thing!

Even though a woman might appreciate it when she gets her way from time to time, she doesn't want to feel like she is the boss, the leader, or the most dominant one in the relationship.

Instead, she wants her man to make her feel as though she needs to do her best to keep him happy and interested in her, rather than feeling like she can do whatever she wants because he will put up with anything just to be with her.

In other words, she wants him to stop being so neutral around her and to be more of the opposite (i.e. someone who will push her into being a better version of herself).

If he can't offer her the challenge she secretly wants in a relationship, then she will naturally begin to feel unhappy in her relationship with him.

When that happens, she will stop feeling respect and attraction for him and without those two feelings, she won't see any reason to stay in a relationship with him.

She will then break up with him (even though he's a good guy and is treating her well) and find herself a man who is her opposite (i.e. more of a challenge).

So, if you want to get your ex back into a relationship with you, you need to change your approach with her from now on.

Instead of always being neutral around her, you need to take the lead and be the man.

That means, you stand up to her when you don't agree with what she's saying, you make some of the decisions for both of you and you make sure that you don't let her get away with bad behavior.

The more she can see that you're now the kind of man she can look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, the more convinced she will become that dumping you was a mistake.

She will then naturally open back up to being your girl again, or at least hooking up with you sexually to see how she feels afterwards.

Another reason why a break up can happen like that is!

4. The woman met a new guy who made her feel a lot more attraction and, since she was unhappy in the relationship for a long time, she decided to pursue something with him

[image: She decided to pursue something with a new guy]

When a woman stops being happy in her relationship with her guy, itâ€™s usually because her wants and desires donâ€™t actually match what sheâ€™s getting.

For example:

She wants a man who is confident, self-assured and emotionally independent, but her guy is just too insecure, needy and clingy.

She wants a man who is more emotionally dominant than her, but her guy tends to be too submissive, passive, easily manipulated and allows her (and other people) to get away with pushing him around and treating him badly.

She wants a guy who is emotionally masculine and makes her feel like a sexy, feminine woman around him, but her man tends to be too nice and neutral and makes her feel more like his friend than his woman.

She wants a man who she can look up to, respect and depend on to be the man all the time, but her guy often acts too childish and immature and makes her almost feel like his parent.

She wants a man who has a definite purpose and direction in life, but he prefers to drift through life and spend most of his time doing pointless things that achieve nothing (e.g. play video games, hang out with his friends and get drunk).

So, if her guy doesnâ€™t live up to her expectations, she will gradually start to lose respect, attraction and love for him over time.

If she then happens to meet another guy (e.g. at work, university, when sheâ€™s out with friends) and he displays some of the behaviors and characteristics that are attractive to her, but lacking in her man, she will automatically feel drawn to him.

Then, the idea of sticking in an unhappy relationship wonâ€™t seem appealing to her anymore, regardless of how nice her guy is.

So, for a guy like that to get his ex back, he needs to change his approach and begin igniting feelings inside of her that no other guy can.

How can he do that?

By showing her via his attitude, thinking, behavior and the way he interacts with her that heâ€™s not the same guy she broke up with (e.g. heâ€™s no longer insecure, boring, submissive, emotionally immature).

When she experiences the new him, her curiosity will almost certainly get the better of her.

She will then want to interact with him more, over the phone and in person, so that she can experience the new and improved him for herself.

She will want to see how it feels to hug him, kiss him and have sex with him now that heâ€™s changed.

If that feels good, her attraction for the other guy will begin to fizzle out and she will naturally and easily open back up to being his girl, because she can see that heâs now the kind of man she always wanted him to be.

Another reason why a break up can happen like that isâ!

5. She never really wanted to commit for life

[image: She never really wanted to commit for life]

Sometimes a woman will see all her friends getting into relationships around her and she might begin feeling left out, so she accepts a relationship with a guy she doesnât feel 100% attracted to or compatible with.

In her mind she may be thinking things like, *âHeâs a nice guy and Iâm sure it will be fun to date him for a while. At least I wonât be single when I go out with my friends anymore and if I get bored with him, I can always move on without feeling sad and broken up about it.*â

She then gets into the relationship with the guy, knowing that she has no intention of staying with him for life.

Of course, if the guy can create a relationship dynamic where he is good to her and makes her feel respectful, attracted and in love with him, she wonât ever want to let him go.

She will then try to be a good, loving and devoted woman to him to make sure he doesnât leave her.

However, if he fails to spark her feelings for him, sheâs unlikely to stick in a relationship that makes her feel unhappy.

Instead, she will break up with him and move on to the next guy, until she can find the man who can make her feel the way she wants to feel when sheâs with him.

When she does, she will quickly commit to him for life.

The good news is, you can still be that guy.

All it takes is for you to make your ex feel attracted in new and exciting ways when sheâs with you.

When she can feel the kind of emotions that she never felt before (e.g. excited, fascinated, turned on), she will automatically drop her guard and open back up to being with you.

Avoid the Making Any of the Following Mistakes if You Want Her Back

If you want to get your ex back, youâre going to have to ensure that whenever you interact with her, what you say and do is turning her on, rather than turning her off.

This is why, itâs very important that you avoid making the following attraction mistakes with her:

1. Not improving your ability to make her feel sparks of sexual and romantic

attraction

You wanting your ex is not enough to get her back, if you continue to use the same old approach to attraction that got you dumped in the first place (e.g. being too nice with her, rather than flirting with her and building up sexual tension, being too submissive and letting her feel more emotionally dominant than you, feeling insecure about yourself and making her feel like she would be doing you a favor by getting back with you).

This is why, if you truly want to get her back, you need to make sure that you improve your ability to properly re-attract her.

If you make her feel attracted to new and interesting ways, she will naturally drop her guard and open back up to being your girl again.

However, if you use the same old approach to attraction that caused her to leave you, then she will almost certainly remain closed off and focus on moving on.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

2. Cutting off contact and just hoping that she changes her mind

That can work if a woman is still in love with her ex and secretly wants to get back with him.

In a case like that, ignoring her can make her panic about losing him and she may then change her mind about the break up.

However, when a woman dumps a guy because she doesnâ€™t feel happy in the relationship with him, chances are pretty high that she no longer feels connected to her feelings of respect, attraction and love for him.

So, if he suddenly stops hearing from him (e.g. for a few weeks or even months), rather than change her mind and run after him, she will likely be relieved.

She may then use the time apart to find herself a new man to start a relationship with.

Then, by the time her ex realizes that sheâ€™s not coming back to him and tries to contact her again, heâ€™s shocked to find out that she has moved on and is happy with someone else.

Donâ€™t let that happen to you.

If you want your ex back, you need to stay in contact with her, so that you can spark her feelings for you.

If you ignore her, she will almost certainly move on and then getting her back will become very difficult for you.

The next mistake to avoid making isâ€¦!

3. Watching on hopelessly from the sidelines as she moves on with a new guy

If a guy doesnâ€™t take action to get his ex back quickly after a break up, itâ€™s inevitable that she will find herself another man to move on with.

Unfortunately, when that happens, a guy like that ends up losing confidence in himself and his ability to keep a woman, which makes him unattractive to other women (i.e. because insecurity and doubt is a turn off).

As a result, the break up becomes even worse for him.

Don't let that guy be you.

Be a man of action and get her back now.

The next mistake to avoid making is!

4. Forgetting that a woman can go from feeling unhappy to happy with a guy in one interaction

Regardless of how convincing it might sound when a woman says something along the lines of, "I'm just not happy with you anymore. It's over between us," it's very important that you don't accept that as her final word. Why?

Right now, your ex is most likely still thinking about the break up and the things that caused her to go through with it in the end.

This then makes her disconnect for her positive feelings for you (e.g. respect, attraction, love) and connect to the more negative ones (e.g. anger, disappointment, resentment).

However, if you change your approach with her and you actively make her feel attracted to you again when you interact with her (e.g. by maintaining your confidence with her regardless of what she says or does to put you off, making her smile and laugh and feel good to be talking to you again, making her feel like a feminine woman by being emotionally masculine around her), her feelings for you will naturally start to change.

She automatically starts to feel some respect and attraction for you again.

As a result, her defenses come down and you can then confidently guide her back into a relationship via hugging, kissing, having sex and falling back in love.

All it takes is one interaction to make her change how she feels.

However, if you just accept what she's saying to you (i.e. that she's unhappy and that it's over), you may lose out on getting her back.

That would be a pity, don't you agree?

So, go ahead and interact with her, re-attract her and get her back.

How to Save My Marriage After Separation

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 4 optional approaches you can use to save your marriage after a separation:

Option 1: Make her miss you and feel worried that youâre moving on without her

[image: Make her miss you and feel worried that you are moving on without her]

If your wife is the one who initiated the separation, she may assume that youâre going to be sitting at home alone, missing her and maybe even feeling lost and hopeless without her.

What she probably wonât be expecting though is for you to be happy and forward-moving in your life without her.

Although it might seem like it would work to sit around and seem lost, lonely and sad without her, what actually makes a woman feel attracted is when a man is emotionally strong and emotionally independent enough to get on with enjoying life with other people.

Women are attracted to the emotional strength of men, not the weakness, so you need to show strength.

This is why, when your wife notices that youâre not behaving in the ways she is expecting you to (e.g. chasing after her and begging her to change her mind, asking her what it will take to make her come home, being sad and desperate without her), she will begin to feel like she is losing you.

Thatâs what you need to make her feel if you want to save your marriage now that youâve separated.

Getting her back is about her feeling drawn to you and not wanting to lose you.

That is what works.

When she begins feeling drawn to you and doesnât want to lose you now, she will naturally begin to think something along the lines of, âThis isnât how it was supposed to be. I thought it would be over. I thought I was done with him. I also thought he would keep trying to make me change my mind. Yet, heâs not doing that. Instead, it looks like heâs getting on with his life without me. He looks happy, he seems confident and in good spirits. Now Iâm the one missing him. Why do I suddenly feel so jealous and protective of him? Why am I worrying about another women finding him attractive now? He could sleep with her and fall in love with her. I donât know if I want that. The idea of losing him for real is freaking me out now. Maybe this separation was a mistake. I want my husband back.â

She then becomes open to the idea of trying to work things out with you, without you ever having to try to convince her.

Instead, you focused on the most important thing of all: Her feelings of attraction and desire for you. That is what saves a marriage and gets a wife back after a separation.

Itâs about her feelings, her wants, her desire and her fear of ending up regretting losing you.

When your wife sees that youâre not being a needy, insecure, emotionally broken man without her, she will automatically begin to feel respect and attraction for you again, even though she might not openly admit it to you.

As a result of feeling a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you, she then feels motivated to work things out because the idea of losing you scares her now.

She worries that she will end up regretting it because, clearly she still has feelings for you.

That is what works.

By the wayâ€¦

Here are a few ways that you can make your wife miss you, feel jealous and feel worried that youâ€™re moving on without her:

a) Go out and have fun with your friends, but try to make sure that there are women around too.

It doesnâ€™t mean that you need to kiss, have sex or start dating any of those women.

Instead, you need to talk to them and have some fun with them (e.g. at a club or party dance with them, at the beach enjoy a group activity like beach volleyball, bowling, Frisbee at a park, hiking, dinner party, drinks).

b) Join a group activity that automatically includes other women (e.g. cooking classes, dancing lessons).

Make sure to take photos so you can show them to your wife when you catch up, or you can send via message or email.

Essentially, you want to say or send something like, â€œHey, I hope youâ€™re doing well. I was always a clumsy dancer, so Iâ€™ve been getting some lessons. Good fun.â€

If you look confident and happy in the photos and if youâ€™re around other women, she will worry that one or more of the women there will find you attractive.

[image: Missing her husband and wanting him back]

Although your wife might never admit it, seeing you like that will make her feel more attracted to you and increase her desire to get back with you.

Of course, like many women, she might act as though she is angry, annoyed, offended and so on.

Yet, you canâ€™t let a womanâ€™s fake anger control you.

If you want to save your marriage and then keep it together, you really have to understand how a womanâ€™s attraction works and then use that to make your wife want you more than ever.

Women are attracted to things about men that they will rarely admit because if they do, other people may negatively judge her, or in a marriage, her husband might judge her for it.

So, women will often say that they just want a man to be nice, sweet, kind, sensitive and so on all the time, but in reality, what attracts a woman to a man is when he is a good man, but has some balls and makes her feel a little challenged.

Additionally, when a woman feels the need to impress her husband, maintain her looks and treat him well, it makes her love him, respect him and feel attracted to him so much more, especially if heâ€™s a good man.

Yet, women canâ€™t go around saying, â€œI want a man to make me feel like I could lose him if I donâ€™t impress him enough.â€

Everyone would tell her, â€œNo girl, he has to impress you all the time. He has to treat you like a princess and so on.â□□

So, she keeps it a secret.

A man who knows how a womanâ□□s attraction really works will easily get laid, get a girlfriend and if he marries, easily maintain his wifeâ□□s attraction for life.

I know this personally because I lived a player lifestyle with women for over a decade and have been with my wife now for almost 8 years as of writing this article.

Even though my wife was incredibly attracted to me initially, she is more attracted now and continually puts in effort to make herself look good and treat me well.

Thatâ□□s how a marriage can be when you truly understand how a womanâ□□s attraction works.

In terms of your wife, make sure that youâ□□re not afraid to show her that you are confident, happy and enjoying life without her.

[image: Missing her husband and wanting him back]

I know it might seem cruel, but itâ□□s what works.

Sometimes a woman needs to feel the emotional pain of potentially losing her husband to another woman, to then feel motivated to give him another chance.

It really depends if you are willing to do what it takes to save your marriage, end the separation and make her feel more attracted and committed to you than she was before.

If you are willing to do what it takes, you might also want to:

c) Join a group travel club for people your age.

There are a lot of single, separated or recently divorced people who join groups who travel or go on adventures together.

It can include domestic or international travel, as well as tours or trips to tourist attractions within your state.

Whatever you do though, make sure that you take lots of photos of yourself having fun with the new people you meet along the way.

Then, make sure that your wife will find out about it, either via mutual friends, via social media, or when you message her or email her and let her know.

For example: You might say, â□□I always wanted to do a bit of travel to [wherever you went]. It has been a lot of fun. Weâ□□re planing on going to [wherever the next trip is to] next. Good stuff. Anyway, I hope youâ□□ve been well.â□□

She will naturally feel a bit sad that you are doing things like that without her.

After all, she is your wife and youâ□□ve been together for so long.

Itâ□□s a tough thing for her to see, but it works.

BTW: Make sure the photos are of you looking confident and having fun with other people.

Donâ□□t take photos of you on your own, you looking self-conscious or you seeming like you arenâ□□t really included in the group.

Only take photos where you look happy, confident and included.

That is what works.

Then, when your wife is aware of the fun youâ□□ve been having, arrange to catch up and say hi in person (if you're not already doing that automatically due to the kids).

When in person, continue to build on her feelings of respect and attraction for you by being confident, emotionally strong, making her feel girly in your presence (very attractive to women) and by having the balls to crack some jokes and flirt with her.

The more attracted to you she feels, the more your wife will want to get back together and make the marriage work.

Another option to save your marriage after separation is Option 2: Give her a week of space and during that time, rapidly improve your ability to attract her. Then, interact with her, re-attract her and get her back

[image: Give her a week of space and then re-attract her with your improved understanding of attraction]

Rather than chasing after your wife and making things worse by trying to convince her to give you another chance, (e.g. begging and pleading with her to change her mind, promising her that you will change anything that she wants if she will just give you one more chance, telling her that you meant it when you vowed to love her "till death do you part", crying to her), just give her a week of space for now.

By giving her a week of space, it allows things to calm down between you and her after the separation.

She can see that you're not being a pain and annoying her with pleading requests to give you another chance.

She's on her own now (or on her own with the kids).

That's not a nice feeling after being married.

So, during the week of space, she has a chance to calm down and possibly even begin to miss you and just want to forgive you, so you and her can get back together.

Yet, be careful

Don't give her too much space before you contact her and re-attract her.

So many men make the mistake of using the one-size-fits-all, No Contact Rule and ignoring their wife for 30 days.

In cases like that, a woman will often feel determined to go through with the divorce because he clearly doesn't care and is just being reckless when it comes to their marriage.

So, don't go overboard with giving her space.

Give her a week and then focus on interacting with her and re-attracting her, so you can get her back, rather than having to go through a costly (both financially and emotionally) divorce.

The fact is, when you reawaken your wife's sexual and romantic feelings for you, she has a reason to want to get back with you that feels good to her.

As a result, she naturally opens herself up to working things out so that you can save your marriage, or at least get back together for a while to see how things go.

To reawaken her feelings, you need to change the approach that you've been using in the marriage.

What you need to change really depends on what mistakes you were making in particular.

For example: Here are some of the changes that your wife might want to see first, to make her feel motivated to get back together:

- You're now a lot more attentive, loving and caring towards her, but you aren't being those things just to get her back. Instead, you really have changed and you enjoy being that way with her now. Additionally, you're not sucking up with her with attentiveness. You're doing it out of genuine love and appreciation of her. You really do feel she deserves it.
- You now maintain your confidence around her at all times, rather than letting what she says or does make you feel insecure, unsure of yourself, angry or jealous.
- You now focus on your own goals, dreams and ambitions in life, rather than making her the centre of your world and causing her to feel smothered and as though she can't make a move without you.
- You're more emotionally dominant than her now, rather than allowing her to push you around or get away with disrespecting you or behaving badly (e.g. throwing too many tantrums, expecting way too much from you, being very unreasonable about things). Of course, you're still a good man and you still treat her well, but you simply don't accept bad treatment from her anymore and know how to put her back in her place in a loving, but dominant way. Women love that when it's done right. It's not about being a bully. It's about being dominant in a loving way. Big difference.
- You are a more emotionally masculine guy now and as a result, she feels more feminine in comparison to you, which makes her feel more attracted to you. She no longer feels like a roommate or someone you share the bills with. She feels like your girl again and it's exciting.
- You now have a clear purpose and direction in life that you're working towards, rather than behaving in an immature or irresponsible way that makes her feel unsafe in the marriage (e.g. spending too much time watching TV or playing video games, hanging out with friends who are a bad influence on you, not making progress in your career).

When you have begun to make some adjustments (i.e. you don't have to be perfect or have achieved everything. Instead, you just need to have begun to make some progress), you are ready to begin re-attracting her and getting her back.

If you can't meet up with her in person, get her on a phone call with you and use some humor to bring down her defenses.

Then, get her to open up to seeing you in person.

In person, she will be able to fully notice the changes in you by observing your body language (e.g. you're calm, confident and relaxed, rather than nervous, tense and insecure) and by seeing your reactions to what she says or does to tick you off.

When she realizes that you really are different now, she won't be able to stop herself from feeling some respect and attraction for you again, even if she initially tries to deny it to herself.

Attraction is an automatic reaction that happens without a man or a woman having to do anything. Additionally, it happens even if you try to fight it or hide it.

Itâs an automatic reaction.

So, when you are interacting with her in a much more attractive way, she will automatically feel some attraction for you.

As a result, her defenses will come down a little and she will then begin to open back up to giving the marriage another chance.

Another option to save your marriage after separation isâ

Option 3: Move on with a new woman and be happy, so she feels like the rejected one. Then, give her another chance if/when she tries to get you back

[image: Move on with a new woman and be happy, so she feels like the rejected one]

This option might feel weird or even cruel to do when youâre still her husband.

After all, you married her and you really want to be back with her, so the thought of being with a new woman might not be appealing to you at the moment.

Yet, if your wife really doesnât want to be with you anymore and is planning on going through with the divorce (i.e. you are losing her), then sometimes, it can be helpful to make her feel like she is losing you.

One of the reasons why, is that in most cases, a woman will start dating new men while she is still separated to help herself move on from her husband, rather than going back to him.

If your wife does that to you, then you will probably feel devastated when you find out.

Not only did she want a separation, but now sheâs dating new men.

Itâs a double rejection and can cause some men to become severely depressed and stressed.

It feels like a huge punch in the guts.

After all you and her went through, she starts dating new men during your separation.

Why would she start dating so quickly though?

One of the reasons women do it is to protect their own emotions from being hurt.

How so?

Many women fear that, while separated, her husband will find a replacement woman and move on before sheâs had a chance to move on first.

She will then feel like she is being rejected and left behind, which will often make her want her husband back.

Of course, she wonât want him to know that because she doesnât want to encourage him to start dating new women.

Yet, she will be checking up on him on social media or talking to mutual friends about him as a way of keeping tabs on him.

This is why, if you want to save your marriage after separation and your gut instinct is telling that she is just going to go through with the divorce and move on, then you might want to begin moving on with a new woman to make your wife jealous.

Not only does it make her jealous, but it also makes her feel more attracted to you, especially if the woman is pretty.

Of course, itâs a big move to make, especially after being married.

Yet, if you donât do it and the separation goes on for months, then she will almost certainly do it. Then you will have to deal with the image of her sleeping with a new man, while you try to get her back.

By the wayâ!

If you decide to use the option of making her jealous by moving on, you need to do it for real, rather than just pretending to.

If you pretend to be moving on just to make your wife jealous, you stand a big chance of getting caught out in a lie.

If she finds out that you were lying, then it will backfire and cause her to lose even more respect and attraction for you.

So, donât lie to your wife about moving on with another woman.

Only tell her about it if youâre actually dating a new woman for real and are genuinely beginning to move on without her.

Then, when she asks you about it, you can honestly say, âYes, itâs true. That doesnât mean I donât still love you of course, or that I donât want our marriage to work, but you donât want to be with me, so Iâm just moving on.â

She then realizes that it was her fault for pushing you away.

She feels like she is losing you.

Even though she may appear to be upset and angry with you at that point, she will secretly feel attracted to you again (women always feel more attracted to men who other women are attracted to. Itâs a natural reaction that women have) and want you back.

By the wayâ!

If you donât like the thought of getting involved with another woman, then focus on just having fun with other people, including other women and letting your wife find out about it (e.g. via social media, through mutual friends).

It will have a similar effect on her, without you needing to get involved with another woman and then having to break up with her when you take your wife back.

Another option to save your marriage after separation isâ!

Option 4: Use your interactions with her to fix the relationship problems and make both of you feel good about starting over again

[image: Use interactions with her to fix the relationship as you go along]

One of the best ways to save your marriage after separation is by showing your wife (not telling her) that you're serious about ironing out your problems with her and making the marriage feel better than it ever has.

However, it's important to understand that there is a big difference between telling a woman that you will change and actually changing and letting her experience it.

One is a maybe type of promise that could end up being a stressful, frustrating experience for her and the other is refreshing, exciting and enjoyable for her.

So, don't promise to change.

Instead, let her see that you are changing and more importantly, let her experience new, more enjoyable emotions in your presence.

Now, if you're going to use this option (I recommend this option the most), make sure that you don't ask her what you need to change, so you can then change it and show it to her.

Why?

A woman doesn't want to be responsible for shaping her ex husband into the man that he needs to become.

So, when a man asks his wife to tell him what she wants him to do to be a better husband, it usually only highlights to her that he doesn't have a clue what he's been doing wrong all along.

As a result, he needs her to hold his hand and teach him how to be the man that she wants him to be.

That's not attractive to her, or to almost every woman on the planet because it makes her feel like she is taking on a mother or big sister role in his life.

That doesn't turn a woman on.

A wife wants to feel like her husband's girl.

Of course, she will rarely admit that, but simply look at the women who are the happiest in their marriages and the woman will be the man's girl.

She will feel girly and feminine around him because he is so emotionally strong, confident, emotionally masculine and clear on his role as the man.

Unfortunately, a lot of men don't ever get taught that growing up, or they do know it, but they lose it over time in a relationship or marriage with a woman as a result, the woman falls out of love with him.

So, rather than explain to her husband why she feels turned off, a woman will usually just decide to continue with the separation and being looking for a man who already knows how to be a man without her help or guidance.

This is why, you need to change your approach when interacting with her from now on, so she can see for herself that you really do understand where you went wrong and have already begun to improve in many, subtle ways that she now finds attractive and appealing.

For example:

- If you were previously emotionally weak and insecure in the relationship, you have now become more emotionally strong and emotionally independent.
- If you were closed off, selfish and aloof in the relationship before and it made her feel taken for granted, you're now more loving and emotionally open. Yet, you haven't turned into a wimp who is sucking up to her. You're still a manly man, but are simply being more loving, affectionate and kind.
- If you fell into the habit of behaving in a less masculine way in the marriage and it made her feel more emotionally dominant than you, you are now more masculine in your attitude, thinking and behavior.
- If you treated her like a friend or roommate for a long time in the marriage, which caused her to lose interest in having sex, you now flirt with her to build up the sexual tension between you and make her feel like a sexy, desirable woman again.

The more your wife can see that if she got back with you, things really would be different this time, the more open she becomes to giving your marriage another chance.

Remember: It's about how she feels when she interacts with you now.

That is what counts.

2 Mistakes to Avoid if You Want to Save Your Marriage and Get Her Back

Although a separation can seem like it's the beginning of the end for your marriage, it really doesn't have to be that way.

Millions of men all over the world separate from their wife and manage to get back together.

You can do it too.

You can get her back.

However, if you make one of these classic mistakes, she might end up moving on and going through with a divorce:

1. Cutting off contact and waiting for her to do all of the work to get you back

Sometimes, a man will put the responsibility of getting back together on the woman's shoulders.

Essentially, he thinks, She's the one who wanted the separation, so I'm going to give her space to make her miss me. She will then come back to me. If she doesn't, then it wasn't mean to be. It's up to her.

He may then cut off contact with her and wait for her to make the next move.

Yet, here's the thing!

Although cutting off contact and waiting can work if a woman feels embarrassed about going through a separation and wants to get her husband back, it can also backfire pretty badly.

For example: If a woman is tired of her marriage and is no longer attracted and in love with her husband, him cutting off contact is usually the confirmation she needs to convince her that the separation was a good idea.

She thinks, â€œWell, he obviously doesnâ€™t give a crap. Heâ€™s not even trying. So, Iâ€™m going to move on in the meantime to make myself feel better.â€

She might then try to move on (e.g. hook up with a coworker who has always had a crush on her, use Tinder to line up dates, tell her friends to introduce her to single men) and begin starting a new life without her husband.

If she meets a new man and falls in love with him, then it can become difficult to get her back.

So, if you want to save your marriage, donâ€™t waste time ignoring your wife.

Instead, interact with her, reawaken her feelings for you and get her back.

Another mistake to avoid isâ€¦

2. Going to marriage counseling

3 main reasons why marriage counseling is usually a bad idea for a husband that wants his wife back after a separation:

In most cases, the counselor takes the womanâ€™s side and ends up making most things sound like the manâ€™s fault.

The recommendations are usually ones that go against what is actually attractive to women (i.e. the man is told to be nicer, more gentle, softer, to listen more, to be more helpful and so on).

The counselor also digs in and finds more relationship problems that the wife probably wasnâ€™t aware of, which makes her more determined to move on.

Of course, that doesnâ€™t mean counseling never works.

It can work for some couples.

Yet, in most cases, it just causes more problems for the man because he doesnâ€™t get any honest advice on how to re-attract his wife.

He just gets told to be nicer, to listen to her more and give her time.

Then, because heâ€™s not behaving in a way that re-attracts her, a wife often decides that she wants to go through with a divorce.

So, be careful about going to counseling.

Instead, focus on what you can do to re-attract her, so she wants to get back with you.

Remember: The most important thing is how she feels when she interacts with you now.

That is what counts when getting a woman back and itâ€™s what has saved countless marriages all over the world.

Re-attract her and get her back.

You can do it.

My Ex Said She Thinks About Me Every Day

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here are 3 ways you can respond to make her feel more attracted and want to be with you again:

1. Say, "Good for you"

[image: Say, "Good for you" in a joking manner]

Say that in a joking way of course.

Let her see that in a moment like that, where she's being open and vulnerable, you don't turn into a soppy romantic guy, or act extra nice and polite.

Instead, you have the balls and the social intelligence to know that women love it when a man uses moments like that to playfully mess with them.

If you have the balls to do that, she then naturally feels more sparks of respect and attraction for you, which opens her up to interacting with you more often, or just meeting up with you so she can get you back.

Another way you can respond is to

2. Say, "Really, I thought about you a couple of times after we broke up, but then forgot about you. What's your name again?"

[image: Say that you forgot about her and then ask her name again]

Once again, you're only joking.

By responding in that way, you are showing her that you're emotionally strong enough to risk making a joke to calm the tension between you and remove any nervousness she may be feeling about opening up to you further.

She can then laugh at your joke and feel like you and her are getting along as though you are boyfriend and girlfriend again, which makes her just want to be with you.

Another way you can respond is to

3. Say, "No you don't. You think about me all day, all night and even when you're in the shower."

[image: Tell her you know that she thinks about all day and night and even in the shower]

Then, have a laugh with her about that.

Side note: Many women masturbate in the shower using soap and imagine having sex. This is why I mentioned the shower, but you don't have to mention masturbation to her. She will think of that herself.

Back to the example...

Approaching the conversation in a joking manner way helps to get rid of any distance between you (as a broken up couple) and brings you back together as though you are a couple again, where it's totally fine to joke around with each other.

That's what works.

Yet, it's not what she will probably be expecting from you.

For example: Sometimes a woman will hope that her ex says, "Yes, I think about you every day too. I've been missing you non stop" when she says that she thinks about him every day.

She hopes that she will get that confirmation, so she can then reveal more of her feelings to him.

There is a problem with that approach though!

The thing is, women feel attracted to men for very subtle reasons and the way that a guy replies, responds or reacts to a woman can completely change the level of attraction she has for him.

For example: Many women say, "I want a nice guy", but then when a man is nice, they feel bored.

What they really mean is, "I want a guy who is challenging in a playful way, so I feel the need to impress him and maintain his interest too. I also want him to have some balls, but still be a good guy."

Yet, they can't go around saying that because people will judge them in a negative way (e.g. friends, family or coworkers might say, "No girl. He needs to impress you. You don't need to do anything. You're a woman. Men need to treat us like a princess at all times").

So, it becomes this big secret that women have to keep from men, from their family, coworkers and some friends.

The reality is that, women will say things like, "Men should be nice at all times. Men should be very sensitive", but when men behave like that, women don't feel attracted to them and instead, place them in the friend zone.

This is why, if your ex has said that she thinks about you every day, it seems like the logical, nice thing to do to then say, "Yes, I think about you every day too."

Yet, that takes the challenge and attraction out of the equation because you are simply satisfying her need right away.

It's like there is suddenly no chase for her now.

So, what a lot of women will do when they get a response like that, is then say, "But, I need more time to think. I don't know if we should get back together. I think we still need time apart."

Then her ex guy is left thinking, "What the heck? She said she was thinking about me every day. Why doesn't she want to get back with me?"

If he then starts chasing her, appearing desperate or appears to have lost confidence in his attractiveness to her, she then loses respect and attraction for him based on him being emotionally weak.

A woman's attraction for a man is a very subtle thing and if you get it wrong, you get friend zoned.

So, I recommend that you replying, respond or react in a way where you are playfully teasing her.

In this way, her attraction and desire to be with you will increased.

Of course, it might not seem that way right away.

For example: If she is a bit of feisty woman, she might act (yes, act) like she is angry or hurt by what you have said, to test your confidence and balls.

She might say something like, “How dare you say something like that to me? I can’t believe I opened up to you and you’re just turning it into a joke. You’re such a jerk!”

Deep down, she will be wondering things like, “Wow. That’s not what I was expecting from him. I thought he would get all emotional with me and begin telling me how much he misses me and how much he wants me back. Instead, he was a little cheeky and I like it. He really seems to have changed a lot since we broke up. It makes me want to see if we can work things out between us after all.”

Yet, on the surface, she might initially pretend to be shocked by what you’re saying.

Don’t ever lose confidence when a woman puts on an act like that, even if it looks serious.

It’s never serious when you’re making a joke.

If you let a woman make it serious, she loses respect and attraction for you for getting walked all over by a woman.

On the other hand, if you simply laugh, remain confident, continue being a good man and get on with talking to her, then her respect and attraction for you will go through the roof.

A lot of guys don’t know how to handle women in that way and as a result, they struggle to attract new women or keep relationships together for their entire life.

So, don’t make the mistake of thinking you have to be nice, sweet and romantic to get your ex back.

Be a good guy, sure, but have some balls and occasionally playfully challenge her as you’re talking to her.

3 Potential Reasons Why an Ex Woman Will Say That She Thinks About You Every Day

Now, up until this point in the post, it has mainly been a case of your ex wanting you back for real and that is the reason why she said that she’s been thinking about you every day.

Great.

Yet, here’s the thing!

Sometimes a woman will tell her ex guy that she thinks about him every day, even though she has NO intention of getting back with him, or isn’t yet sure if she wants to.

For example: In some cases!

1. She is stringing him along until she finds a replacement guy

[image: She is stringing him along until she finds a replacement guy]

Sometimes a woman doesn’t want to completely cut her ex out of her life in case she struggles to find a new man.

She doesn’t want to find herself in a situation where her ex man moves on before she does and seems happy, leaving her feeling like the one who has been rejected and left behind.

So, she will continue to string her ex along by saying things like, “I think about you every day.â

Meanwhile, while heâs sitting at home thinking that she wants him back and that he just has to be patient, she focuses on finding herself a replacement man as quickly as possible.

Then, when she does find a new man, she can tell her ex the news, â¹*Sorry, but I need to tell you something. Iâve met someone and weâre dating. Heâs a really great guy and I like him, so I donât want to mess things up by keeping in touch with my ex boyfriend all the time. You understand, donât you? I do wish you all the best and I hope that you meet someone too. Take care. Bye.*

Her ex is then left feeling confused and wondering how he could have misunderstood her feelings for him so badly.

In many cases, itâs because he has stuck to just texting her and didnât get to an in-person meet up, where they could actually hug, kiss and then potentially have sex and get the relationship back together.

Instead, he was trying to achieve everything via text.

Donât let that happen to you.

Take control of the situation by making her fall back in love with you in person, before she starts moving on with some other guy (in person).

Some of the ways you can begin making her fall back in love with you in person, are byâ

- Maintaining your confidence regardless of what she says or does to make you feel unsure of yourself around her.
- Being a good man, but also being confident and assertive when interacting with her.
- Making her laugh, smile and feel happy to be around you again.
- Believing in yourself and in your value to her, rather than doubting yourself and then making her feel turned off as a result.
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension, rather than acting like just a friend and then losing her to another guy who does make her feel attracted.
- Showing her that youâre a new and improved man who she can now truly look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, rather than repeating the same old mistakes as before.

When you interact with her in person (or at least on a video call or audio call), she can sense that you really have changed and more importantly, she really does feel differently about you now.

She experiences a new kind of respect and attraction for you, which then causes her to want to spend more time with you.

By spending more time with you, she opens back up to you and you get her back, as long as you are building on her feelings and avoiding old mistakes.

Another possible reason why a woman will say that to her ex isâ

2. Sheâs just saying it to be nice

[image: She is just saying it to be nice]

Sometimes, a woman is a nice person and doesnât want to give her ex the impression that as soon as she broke up with him, she forgot all about him.

Instead, she wants to make him feel like, even though theyâre no longer a couple, she still thinks about him every day because she cares about him.

In her eyes, sheâs just being a nice, caring person and is doing her best to make sure that the break up wonât be too hard on him.

Of course, itâs understandable that when a guy hears that his ex girl still thinks about him every day, he might start thinking, âYes! Maybe thatâs her way of telling me that she wants to get back together again. Iâm going to tell her that I feel the same way and try to get another chance.â

Yet, when he asks for it (especially via text), she turns him down and says, âI think itâs best that we have some space for a while. I still need to figure out what I wantâ or some other vague reason women use to maintain distance from an ex and give themselves enough time to find a new man.

He accepts her request for space, continues to miss her every day and builds up his hopes of getting her back, only to then be disappointed when she moves on with someone else.

Donât let that happen to you.

Simply remain in contact with your ex and use the interactions you have with her to reawaken her feelings of sexual attraction for you.

When you do that, she will want you back for real.

Interacting with her means that at some point, you need to call her on the phone and meet up with her in person so you can build on her feelings and get her back.

Donât sit around hoping that everything will happen via text and that she wonât secretly move on behind your back.

Another possible reason why a woman will say that to her ex isâ'

3. She does think about him every day, but isn't sure she wants to get back together

[image: She does think of him, but isn't sure if she wants to get back together]

Sometimes a woman does miss her ex in a way (e.g. the feeling of safety, security and comfort that comes with being in a committed relationship) and that can cause her to think about him every day.

At times, when she is remembering some of the good times they shared, she might even consider getting back together with him.

Yet, if she interacts with her ex and notices that heâs still stuck at the same level he was at when they broke up (e.g. still lacking masculinity in the way he approaches interactions, still too needy, still insecure), she may think something like, âHmmmâ!although I do miss him, I can see that nothing about him really has changed. So, if we got back together again, weâd probably just experience the same problems as before. Then, we will more than likely end up breaking up. I just donât want to put myself through all that again. So, I will have to accept that itâs not going to work between us and focus on trying to get over him so that I can move on.â

A woman will usually then begin going out a lot more with her single friends to places where she knows she will meet other guys, accepting dates from guys who are interested in her, or joining online dating sites or using dating apps like Tinder, Hinge and Bumble to help herself move on.

Before her ex knows it, she will have moved on and he will feel rejected and left behind once again.

This is why, if you want your ex to give you another chance, you need to show her (not tell her) via your attitude, conversation style, behavior and actions that youâve made some changes to yourself and can now attract her in the ways that are important to her.

For example: Some of the changes a woman might want to see in her ex before she gives him another chance areâ!

- He is an emotionally stronger and more emotionally masculine man now, rather than an emotionally sensitive man who makes her feel like she needs to be gentle with him.
- Heâs no longer a pushover like he used to be and now takes the lead in a loving, but assertive way, rather than letting her walk all over him.
- He is now focused on his goals, dreams and ambitions like a real man, rather than being too emotionally dependent on her and being a clingy and needy guy as a result.
- He now makes her feel like a sexy, feminine woman when interacting with her, rather than treating her like a neutral friend.

When you show your ex (not tell her) that youâve learned from your past mistakes and are now a better man, she wonât be able to stop herself from feeling drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her.

She will then naturally drop her guard and open up to giving the relationship another chance, rather than feeling like she would be wasting her time if she did.

Essentially, you need to make her feel as though she would be getting to experience a new type of respect, attraction and love for you and that it really would be different.

When she senses that, she doesnât want to miss out on it and end up looking back with regret.

As a result, she opens up and give you and the relationship another chance.

4 Questions to Ask Your Ex to See if They Still Like You

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Important: Only ask your ex these questions after you have interacted with her and made her laugh, smile and feel a renewed sense of respect and attraction for you.

If you ask her questions like this before doing re-attracting her, then you will get completely different answers because a woman will typically answer questions like these based on how she feels in the moment.

For example: If a guy first doesn't reactivate his ex's feelings of attraction during interactions and instead just asks her something like, "Do you miss me?" she is much more likely to respond with something along the lines of, "No. Why should I? We're broken up, or have you forgotten that?" Because she's not feeling enough attraction to say something like, "Yes, I do."

Attraction is what draws an ex back to you.

Without first reactivating and reawakening her feelings of attraction, you will get completely different answers.

You have to be clear on that.

How much attraction she feels for you (and therefore, how much motivation she feels to get back with you) depends on how you approach interactions with her from now on.

If you do it right, your ex is so much more likely to respond to a question of, "So, do you miss me?" with something like, "Yes, I do miss you sometimes."

So, make sure that you attract your ex first and then ask her things like!

1. So, how much have you missed me?

[image: So, how much have you missed me?]

You might be able to notice that asking the question in that way is a lot different to just asking, "So, do you miss me?"

In this case, you're asking how much she misses you, which then results in a woman feeling much more comfortable saying something like, "A bit" rather than answering, "No" if you ask her, "Do you miss me?"

So, after you have made your ex feel a renewed sense of attraction for you based on how you've been interacting with her (e.g. you've been confident, you've been making her laugh, you've been flirting with her), go ahead and ask her, "So, how much have you missed me?"

She might answer honestly and tell you that she has been missing you a bit, or she might be reluctant to admit how she has been feeling.

In a case like that, she might say, "You're so arrogant! Who says I've missed you?" to see how you react.

If you react by losing confidence, then she won't feel attracted to you.

If you react by maintain your confidence, she will.

For example: You might respond by laughing in a relaxed, easy-going way and saying something along the lines of, â€œOf course youâ€™ve missed me! Come onâ€¦ admit it. On a scale of 1 to 10 how much did you miss me? At least a 5, but maybe even a 6.â€

She might joke back and forth with you a bit by saying, â€œOkay fine, I missed you 1 out of 10,â€ and you can then laugh and say, in a joking way, â€œAha! I knew it. I knew you missed me. I bet itâ€™s 2 or 3 out of 10 though. I missed you 1 out of 10.â€

Then have a laugh with her.

Being able to remain confident and turn whatever she says into something that you and her can laugh about together makes her feel more relaxed and at ease.

As a result, she feels more willing to begin reconnecting with her feelings of respect and attraction for you.

Itâ€™s then up to you to build on those feelings and make her fall back in love with the new you. You can do it.

Men all over the world get ex women back using this method.

Itâ€™s simple, natural, automatic and it works.

Another question to ask your ex to see if she still likes you isâ€¦

2. Hey, so we should catch up for a coffee sometime this week and say hi. Cool? You in?

[image: We should catch up for a coffee this week and say hi]

Once again, even if your ex actually wants to say â€œYes,â€ right away, she probably wonâ€™t do that.

Thatâ€™s women and itâ€™s why, as a man, you always need to remain confident in yourself no matter what a woman says or does around you.

You have to maintain belief in yourself no matter what.

Donâ€™t let a woman kill your confidence with a few words.

You have to be stronger than that.

The reality is that women are universally attracted to men who have what I call, Independent Confidence.

Having Independent Confidence means that you remain confident no matter what people say or do around you.

As a contrast, Dependent Confidence means that you can only feel completely confident if people are being nice, supportive and encouraging towards you.

Having Dependent Confidence makes a woman feel like you would be or are a burden to her.

She doesnâ€™t want to feel that.

She wants to feel safe and protected by you because you are emotionally bulletproof.

Having Independent Confidence not only to your life, but to interactions with women when you first meet them, on a date, in a relationship and when getting an ex back.

So, prepare yourself to remain confident no matter what your ex says to you.

For example: Understand in advance that she might say something along the lines of, â€œI donâ€™t knowâ€ or, â€œIâ€™m not sure if thatâ€™s a good ideaâ€ if you suggest catching up for a coffee sometime this week.

A guy who has Dependent Confidence will think, â€œWell, I guess I have my answer then. Clearly she still doesnâ€™t like me. If she did, she would have agreed to catch up with meâ€ and he will then lose confidence.

Donâ€™t do that.

Instead, you need to understand that most women play a bit hard to get with an ex guy, because they donâ€™t want to come across as being too easy.

Most women do that when it comes to picking them up as well.

Itâ€™s a classic female move, so donâ€™t be surprised by it.

If she doesnâ€™t initially agree to your suggestion of catching up, simply maintain your confidence, laugh and say in a relaxed, easy-going way something like, â€œHey, come on. Itâ€™s no big deal. Itâ€™s not as if having a cup of coffee together means weâ€™re going to get back together. Itâ€™s simply two friends saying hi in person. We mature enough to do that, right? Youâ€™re a grown woman. You can catch up and say hi and have a coffee. Itâ€™s no big deal. Weâ€™re mature enough to catch up and say hi as friends. Itâ€™s all good. So, look – Iâ€™m busy on Tuesday and Wednesday, but free on Monday and Thursday. Which day suits you best? Monday or Thursday?â€

In most cases, a woman wonâ€™t want to seem immature based on not meeting up, so she will agree to catch up.

In other cases of course, she will say, â€œYeah, okayâ€ or, â€œI suppose so. Just as friends thoughâ€ or something along those line.

Just be prepared for any type of response and remember that what will make her feel attracted is if you can maintain your confidence.

She will feel even more attracted if you talk to her in a relaxed, easy-going manner, but also be a bit assertive to get her to meet up with you.

Women like assertiveness from a guy, but itâ€™s not something that they can go around admitting because most people will assume she means that she likes a guy who bosses her around all the time.

Thatâ€™s not what being assertive means.

You donâ€™t need to be totally bossy and order a woman to do whatever you want.

Instead, you just need to have the masculinity (or balls) to be a bit assertive at times, while still being a good guy.

Women love that.

So, get to the point where agrees to meet up and then catch up at a time that suits you both.

Then re-attract her further at the meet up and get to a hug, kiss and sex.

From there, you and her will naturally begin to get back together if she can see that you have changed a lot since the break up and now understand how to attract her in ways you previously couldnâ€™t.

Another question to ask your ex to see if she still likes you isâ€œ

3. So, even though you hate me now, what's one thing you do like about me?

[image: Even though you hate me now, what is one thing you like about me?]

It's a funny way of asking the question and will usually get a woman to laugh say, "No, I don't hate you" which then makes her connect with her positive feelings for you.

Then, since you are asking her to tell you one thing she does like about you, it further helps her to stop focusing on all of the things about you she doesn't like and begin thinking about some things she does.

For example: Some of the things she might be currently overlooking or forgetting about you are that

- You're a good guy who treats her well.
- You're ambitious and hard-working.
- You always treated her family and friends with respect.
- You're honest and reliable.
- You have a great sense of humor and can make her laugh even when she's angry or feeling down.
- You are intelligent and loyal.
- You get along well with others.
- You have great potential for the future if you follow through on your goals.
- She really did love you and feel attracted to you at the start.
- You're a cool guy in your own, unique way.

By getting her to stop and think about at least one thing she likes about you, it can lead to her thinking about multiple things she still likes about you.

This causes her to have to look at you in a more positive light, which then begins to bring her walls down.

She remember that even though you and her did have some problems, you aren't all that bad.

All you then have to do then is to get her to reconnect with her sexual and romantic feelings for you and she will feel drawn to the idea of being in a relationship with you again, or at least hooking up with you to see how she feels afterwards.

Then, if you really have changed, you and her will get back into a relationship that is so much better than before.

Another question to ask your ex to see if she still likes you is

4. I know that we've broken up and are never getting back together, but what's your favorite memory of us together?

[image: I know we are broken up and are never getting back together, but what is your favorite memory of us together?]

By asking her the question in that way, she doesn't have to put her guard up as much and worry that you're trying to get her back.

You're saying that you and her are broken up and aren't ever going to get back together and then asking what her favorite memory of you and her being together was or is.

This helps her to stop focusing on some of the recent, negative memories she has of you (e.g. arguments, fights, disagreements, loss of attraction for you) and instead focus on some of the good times you and her shared.

As a result, she can then begin thinking things like, â€œIf we could have been so happy before, maybe we could be happy again. Who knows? Clearly we do have chemistry. I didnâ€™t feel that much in the end, but maybe we could get back to how it felt at the start.â€

She then becomes more open to letting her newfound feelings for you develop.

By the wayâ€

When she opens up and shares her favorite memory of you and her together, you can then reciprocate by telling her some of the things you remember that made you smile.

Yet, if you want to make sure that she feels attracted to you at that point, then add in what I call, Playfully Challenging Humor.

For example: She says, â€œI used to really enjoy getting pizza with you and watching Netflixâ€ and rather than just being nice and saying, â€œYeah, me tooâ€ you can be playfully challenging and say, â€œYeah, but you did have horrible taste in Netflix showsâ€|thatâ€™s for sure.â€

Then have a laugh with her about that.

Then you can add in, â€œJust kidding. It was good to chill out and do Netflix and pizzas. Those days are over though. At least weâ€™re mature enough to be friends now, right?â€

She will then most likely agree and at the same time, feel a little rejected because she will be feeling attracted to you (i.e. pulled towards you), but you are pushing her away with your words.

That makes her want you more.

In that moment, she starts realizing that she doesnâ€™t just want to be friends.

Heck, maybe she even wants to get some pizza and chill while watching TV, Youtube, Netflix or whatever with you.

When she starts feeling that, she might hint at wanting to do that, or will tell you directly.

If she doesnâ€™t want to show too much interest, she might just accept it and say, â€œYeah, weâ€™re friendsâ€ and then continue talking to you in person or texting you, to subtly show you that she is interested.

BTW: Many women worry about showing too much interest in an ex boyfriend who is making them feel attracted because they fear that he will change his mind, reject her and she will then be the one who got dumped.

This is another reason why you need to have Independent Confidence.

Donâ€™t base your confidence on what she is saying or doing.

Remain confident no matter what she says or does and simply guide her through the ex back process while building on her feelings of respect, attraction and love for you.

By the wayâ€

When you get an ex woman to fall back in love with you after a break up, it is one of the most amazing feelings she will ever experience in her life.

Why?

Due to you improving your ability to attract her and then attracting her in new ways, she ends up feeling more attracted to you than she ever has before.

It becomes an excited attraction, mixed in with reunited love, surprise, passion, closeness and pure joy.

Itâs an amazing feeling.

When a woman feels like that, she naturally then wants to be in a committed relationship because itâs where she feels the best, most fulfilled, most loved and happiest in life.

Itâs with you.

Thatâs what you can achieve if you go through the ex back process correctly.

3 Mistakes to Avoid When Asking Your Ex Questions to See if She Still Likes You

If youâre going to ask your ex questions to see if she still likes you, make sure that you do it in a way that sparks her feelings of attraction.

If youâre not sure how, you might want to reread the section above with the examples and explanations of how to do it.

Whatever you do, make sure that you avoid these mistakes that other guys makeâ!

1. Asking her via text before you have sparked her feelings of sexual and romantic attraction

If your ex feels a lot of attraction for you and secretly wants to be back with you, then asking her, âDo you miss me?â via text isnât a problem at all.

She will likely say, âYesâ or even hint at a yes in a case like that.

Yet, if your ex broke up with you due to not feeling enough respect, attraction and love to want to be with you anymore and you then ask her, âDo you miss me?â she will either ignore your text or let you know that she doesnât miss you.

Texts are helpful in getting an ex back, but you shouldnât try to achieve everything via text, especially if you havenât re-attracted her yet.

The main reason why, is that when a woman canât see your body language expressions or hear your voice and is only getting text messages from you, itâs easier for her to remain closed off.

Yet, when you get on a phone call and have the confidence to make her laugh and flirt with her, she will immediately begin feeling attracted to you and realize that meeting up with you in person would actually be fun.

Then, when you meet up with her in person, you can re-attract her further and get to a hug, kiss and then sex.

Before you know it, you and her will be back together for real.

Yet, if try to achieve everything via text, you will usually end up causing an ex woman to begin responding in a cold, distant or neutral (just like a friend) way and she may even stop replying all together.

For most guys, they will then take that as a sign that their ex woman isn't interested and they should just give up.

What a guy like that often doesn't understand is that it's not her lack of feelings for him that is preventing him from getting her back, but rather his approach.

He's trying to get her back via text, which, for most women, is a wimpy-ass way of trying to get a girl back.

Most women appreciate, respect and feel attracted to a guy who has the balls to call them, create a spark, arrange a meet up and then get the relationship back together in person.

So, what you need to understand is that texts can help when getting your ex back, but you shouldn't use them as your number one way of getting her back.

If you only stick to texts and shy away from giving her a call, then all she has to do is ignore you, block your number or keep saying things like, "I don't know how I feel. I need more time to think about it," and there's nothing you can really do about that via text.

However, on a phone call (where you're making her laugh, flirting with her) or in person, it is a lot more difficult for her to keep her real feelings for you hidden.

It comes through in her body language, her tone of voice, her reactions to you, her laughter, her smile and so on.

So, if you think that your ex is attracted to you and secretly missing you, then feel free to just text back and forth a little and see how that goes.

Yet, if you think that your ex doesn't want to get back with you, then it's okay to start with a text to say hi, but you ultimately need to get to a phone call so you can properly (and quickly) make her feel respect, attraction and love for you again.

Another mistake to avoid making if you want your ex to admit that she still likes you is

2. Asking her in a way that suggests if she says that she likes you, you are immediately going to see that as meaning she wants a relationship again

[image: Asking her in a way that suggests you will push for a relationship if she shows any interest]

Sometimes a woman will avoid responding to a question about her feelings, because she knows that if she says something like, "Yes, I do still care about you," her ex guy might take it as a clear sign that she wants him back.

For example: He might immediately start talking about how much he missed her and how he's going to fix things and be a better boyfriend to her this time around.

If she's not sure if she wants to get back with him yet, his reaction can cause her to close up, go cold, avoid him, ignore him and so on.

He then begins wondering, "Huh? Why is she being like that? I thought she said that she still cares about me, so why is she being so distant and cold now?"

He might then ask her, "Why aren't you replying? Is it something I said? If so, I am sorry. I love you and want to work this out."

Once again, she then feels like it's too much, too soon.

So, what should you do instead?

Don't immediately push for a relationship.

Instead, make her feel attracted to you and want to be with you so much that she is hoping it becomes a relationship again.

Another mistake to avoid making if you want your ex to admit that she still likes you is

3. Remaining stuck in early parts of the ex back process and never getting to the point where she is back with you for real

Sometimes a guy will spend a lot of time trying to get his ex to admit that she still likes him, before he eventually feels confident enough to make a move to get her back.

Then, after many weeks of trying to get her back (usually via text), he is shocked when she eventually says something along the lines of, "I think it's best if we don't talk or see each other again" because she has met a new guy and is dating him now.

Here's the thing

If you want your ex back, you need to have the courage to move things forward with her.

Don't get stuck in early steps of the ex back process and then find out that she has happily moved on without you.

Get her back while you still can.

Should I Show My Ex That I'm Sad Without Her?

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Absolutely not.

Here are 5 of the most common reactions women have when an ex man tries to show how sad he is about the break up:

1. She loses respect for him for being so emotionally dependent on her and the relationship

[image: She loses respect for him for being so emotionally dependent on her and the relationship]

Sometimes a guy makes the mistake of thinking that if his ex sees that he's sad and struggling to cope without her, she will feel flattered and possibly even think something along the lines of, "I never realized I meant so much to him. He must really love me. Maybe I was too impulsive when I broke up with him. I feel sorry for him too. He's clearly hurting. The poor guy. Maybe I should give him another chance."

Yet, here's the thing!

Even though a woman does like the idea of a guy who is loving, caring and committed to her, she also needs him to be his own man (i.e. emotionally independent, forward moving in his life regardless of whether she is with him or not).

So, if a woman gets a sense that her ex is sad and needs her back to feel happy and fulfilled in life, rather than feeling pleased by his emotional dependence on her, she feels more turned off by him. Why?

A woman doesn't want to be a man's main purpose and be responsible for making him feel happy, confident and stable in life.

She wants him to maintain those things on his own and to do them for his own reasons, rather than needing her in his life to be able to feel that way.

In other words, women don't want a needy guy, especially after dumping him.

Women want a guy who can be happy, confident and forward moving in life with or without her.

That is what is attractive to an ex woman.

So, showing your ex that you're sad without her will almost certainly just turn her off.

Of course, there's nothing wrong with feeling sad.

You're allowed to feel sad.

You just shouldn't show it to her.

Additionally, if she asks if you are sad, you can simply say, "I was a bit sad initially of course, but I then accepted the break up and now it's totally fine. You and I are finished as a couple, but we can still be friends though. We're mature enough to do that, right?"

She then feels as though she is being rejected because you aren't holding on anymore.

She feels like she has lost that power over you.

As a result, in almost all cases, a woman will then want to reel her ex guy back in by saying something like, â€œWell, I don't know about you, I still feel a bit sad at timesâ€ or, â€œSo, you don't miss me?â€

To the first comment, you can jokingly say something like, â€œThat's because you're a softyâ€ and to the question, â€œOf course I don't miss you. Heck, I don't even remember your nameâ€ and then laugh.

Of course, you are only joking in both of those cases.

What does joking with her and having the confidence to joke with her do in a moment like that?

It makes her feel attracted to you.

When a woman feels attracted to you, her guard comes down and you can then begin the quick and easy process of seducing her back into a relationship, or at least getting her to meet up with you and hook up with you one last time.

That's how men get their ex women back all over the world.

It's fast, natural and it works, but you have to have the balls to do it and then follow through on it until she is back in your bed, hugging you, kissing you and wanting to be close with you.

So, don't show your sadness.

Show things that will make her feel attracted to you.

Another thing that can happen when an ex guy tries to show how sad he is about the break up isâ€¦

2. Guys who have more confidence or higher self esteem than him, suddenly seem very attractive and appealing to her

[image: She feels more attracted to other guys who have more confidence and self-esteem than her ex]

Imagine thisâ€¦

A woman has broken up with a guy and every time she interacts with him (e.g. over the phone or in person), he gives off a â€œpity meâ€ kind of vibe.

In other words, he's sad, dejected and melancholy, acts like his world has ended now that they are no longer together and is hoping that she takes pity on him and then gives him another chance because of it.

Yet, feeling pity for a sad, rejected man doesn't make a woman feel attracted to him.

Women are attracted to confidence and emotional strength in men.

So, when she interacts with new men who are more confident than her ex, they naturally seem way more attractive to her than he does.

She can then begin to think, â€œAt times, I've been doubting if I made the right decision to break up with him, but now I see now that I've made the right decision. I don't want a wimp, I want a man. My ex is just not the kind of man I want to be with, especially now that I see there are so many guys out there who I find so much more confident than him. I'm not going back to him now. I've got to move on.â€

She will then try to distance herself from him even further (e.g. she stops responding to his texts, unfriended him on social media, stops meeting up with him).

At the same time, she will open herself up to meeting, hooking up with, dating and even falling in love with a new man who displays the kind of confidence that women universally find attractive (i.e. what I call Independent Confidence, where a man is confident regardless of what people say or do around him, or what is happening in his life. This is in contrast to Dependent Confidence, where a man can only feel confident if people are being nice to him or if things are going his way in life).

So, hereâs the thingâ!

Feeling sad without your ex is understandable, but you canât let that show up in your behavior, conversation style, body language or vibe in any way.

If you let her sense that youâre feeling lost without her, you will literally be doing the opposite of what a man needs to do to get an ex woman back (i.e. get her respect back, make her feel attracted again, cause her to fall back in love with him).

She will then feel more attracted to other men, which can make it difficult for you to get her back.

On the other hand, when you are able to display and let her experience your newfound level of confidence, most other guys seem less attractive in comparison to you.

She then begins to worry that she may have made a huge mistake in breaking up with you, because itâs going to be very difficult for her to find a man who has the level of confidence that you now have.

At the very least, she will be curious to see if your newfound confidence is real and will want to interact with you.

If it is, then she will suddenly feel a tremendous amount of respect and attraction for you, even if she doesnât want to.

Attraction is something that happens automatically.

Itâs an automatic reaction to attractive traits.

So, let her sense and experience your confidence, not your sadness or weakness.

Another common reaction that a woman might have when an ex guy tries to show how sad he is about the break up isâ!

3. She feels stronger than him emotionally, which turns her off even more

[image: She feels stronger than him emotionally, which then turns her off even more]

When in a relationship, a woman wants to feel safe and protected by her man, based on his emotional strength.

So, if a woman senses that she is emotionally stronger than her boyfriend (fiance or husband), it will turn her off at a deep level.

Additionally, if she was already emotionally stronger during the relationship, dumped him and then notices that he had become even weaker emotionally, then she will be doubly turned off.

So, if you show your ex that youâre sad without her, rather than making her regret breaking up with you and want to give you another chance, you will simply turn her off.

Remember: Attraction is an automatic reaction.

Itâs not a conscious thing where she thinks something like, *âHeâs sad without me and that is unattractive to me, so therefore I will lose attraction for him now.*â

Instead, she simply feels turned off and it happens without her having to do anything about it.

So, if you begin projecting a more confident, emotionally independent energy from now on, she will naturally begin to feel sparks of respect for you again, even if she doesn't want to feel it.

Secretly, she will be impressed that you are being an emotionally strong, independent man who is handling the break up in such a mature way (i.e. you're not showing her that you're sad and lost without her).

As a result, she will automatically begin thinking about you in a more positive way, which will cause her to open up to feeling a newfound respect for you.

When she starts respecting you again, she will also start to feel some sexual attraction and that is the opening you need to begin getting her back for real.

Why?

Without sexual attraction, there is no boyfriend-girlfriend relationship.

It's the core of everything.

Without sexual attraction, there can be no romantic love.

Romantic love comes from sexual attraction and is then built on with respect and connection.

Without sexual attraction, she might feel some love for you as a friend, or have nice feelings for you as a nice ex, but that won't get her back.

If you want her back, you have to approach this in a way that causes her to have sexual and romantic feelings for you.

Another common reaction that a woman might have when an ex guy tries to show how sad he is about the break up is

4. She worries that if she did get back with him, she would have to continually put in loads of effort to make him feel emotionally secure

[image: She worries that he has become softer, weaker and more sensitive]

That is exhausting for a woman.

She just doesn't want to take on the task of becoming a guy's cheerleader to make him stronger, especially after she has dumped him.

For a woman to feel respect and sexual attraction for a man, she has to feel as though he is the man and she is his girl.

The masculine-feminine dynamic is an ancient dynamic that still applies in today's modern, civilized world.

It doesn't matter how independent or successful the woman is.

At the end of the day, she wants to be with a man who has the emotional strength to make her feel like a girl in comparison to him.

This is why, if her ex guy appears sad without her, rather than thinking, "Wow, I never realized it before, but he really does love me and need me! That's all I want a need in a man. That's it! It's so obvious to me now because I see the effect our break up is having on him. He's just so sad without me. I feel so touched. Maybe I should give him another chance. After all, what if I never find another guy who will love me as much as he does? I want to be loved and appreciated and clearly I will get that from him," she instead perceives him as being emotionally weaker than her and feels turned off.

She knows that if she gave him another chance, she would have to constantly be aware of taking care of his sensitive emotional state.

This will cause her to see him more as a child in comparison to her, rather than a man she can look up to, respect and submit to sexually.

As a result, her sexual attraction will switch off and she will stop thinking, acting and behaving like the feminine woman she wants to be in a relationship and instead, start wearing the pants in the relationship like a man.

Yet, thatâs not what she wants.

Regardless of how independent or successful she is in her life and even, regardless of what she says (i.e. She says that he needs to listen to her and do what she wants or else), the reality is that she doesnât want to be the boss in her relationship with a man.

Of course, there are some women who like being more emotionally dominant than their man (usually very unattractive women, or average looking women who are secretly terrified of being in a relationship with a guy who might dump them, so they get into a relationship with a man who needs them), but most women donât want that at all.

Most women want to be with an emotionally strong man who takes the lead in the relationship (emotionally, physically) and allows her to relax into thinking, acting and behaving like a feminine woman.

In other words, she gets to be his girl.

Thatâs what women really want, but they will rarely openly admit it because they donât want people looking down on them, judging them and so on.

Yet, if you look at the women who are the happiest and most in love with their man in a relationship, you will notice that the dynamic is balanced in a way where he is the man and she is his girl.

They love and respect each other equally, but when it comes to dominance, he is the more dominant one.

So, if you show your ex how sad you are without her, you may end up making her feel that if she got back with you, she would have to hold your hand and guide you through life like youâre a hurt, little boy.

Of course, youâre not a hurt, little boy.

Youâre a man.

Yet, if you show her sadness and emotional weakness, she wonât look at you as a man.

She might be nice to you and show you some fake pity, but secretly she will be thinking something like, *â What a pussy. I need a real man and he isnât it. Iâve got to move on. Donât get back with him. Move on!*â

She then tries hard to meet new guys, opens herself up to them and quickly begins dating and falling and love.

She does her absolute best to create as much emotional distance between her and her ex as possible.

On the other hand, when you focus on re-attracting her, she does her absolute best to hint at, suggest or even ask to meet up with you so she can experience more of you.

When youâ€™re re-attracting in her person, you are then just one move away from hugging and then kissing, having sex and getting back together, or at least just seeing each other for a while to see how things go from there.

Another common reaction that a woman might have when an ex guy tries to show how sad he is about the break up isâ€”!

5. She feels turned off that he canâ€™t attract new women and is lost without her

[image: She feels turned off that he can't attract new women and is lost without her]

Women donâ€™t go around openly admitting this, but they do feel attracted to men that can easily attract other women.

For men, it doesnâ€™t work the same way.

A man will feel attracted to a woman instantly based on her physical appearance and wonâ€™t care at all if other men want her.

He will want her.

Yet, because most of a womanâ€™s attraction for a man is based on things other than physical appearance (i.e. confidence, social intelligence, charisma, masculine energy, charm), women do care if other women find a guy attractive.

To a woman, if other women (especially other attractive women) find a guy attractive, it means that those women have interacted with him and discovered that he does have the kind of qualities that women look for.

The traits that make a guy attractive are mostly things you canâ€™t see with the naked eye.

A woman has to interact with a guy and discover those qualities to then feel truly attracted to him.

This is why, if you show your ex that youâ€™re sad without her, it causes her to lose attraction for you based on not being able to easily attract new women and as a result, feeling totally dependent on her.

Most women donâ€™t admit that, but itâ€™s what they secretly think and feel.

After all, why would they admit it?

Imagine a woman saying, â€œYeah, I like a guy who could easily attract other women, so I then feel special that he has chosen me.â€

People would say to her, â€œNo, donâ€™t think that of yourself. He should feel lucky to have you because youâ€™re amazing.â€

As a result, women just donâ€™t go around admitting what really makes them feel attracted because they would be judged for it.

As a man, you have to understand what really attracts a woman and then display that, otherwise women just wonâ€™t feel it for you.

Being able to attract other women doesnâ€™t mean that you have to begin dating.

Instead, it means that you shouldnâ€™t be showing her that youâ€™re lost, lonely or sad without her because that will automatically switch her attraction off.

After a break up, a woman wants to see if you will become more attractive to her and therefore cause her to want you back, or if you will become less attractive to her and therefore cause her to feel as though she has made the right decision to break up with you.

This is why, when a woman breaks up with a guy, she will keep tabs on him (e.g. via social media or through mutual friends) to see how he's coping without her and if he's moving on.

A lot of guys actually hope their ex woman checks their social media or asks friends, so she can then find out how sad and hopeless he is feeling without her.

Yet, that is a huge mistake.

What works is when a woman sees that you are confident, happy and enjoying life without her.

3 Mistakes to Avoid if You Want Her Back

There is an easy way to get her back without showing how sad you are without her.

The easy way is to focus on attraction.

It's simple, natural, automatic and it works.

Unfortunately, many guys don't understand how to get their ex woman back, so they end up making one or more of the following mistakes:

1. Posting up lonely status updates on social media

A guy appearing or even possibly seeming to be lonely is not attractive to women and is especially not attractive to an ex woman.

In terms of photos, this includes photos of yourself alone, landscapes, your pet, food you're eating and so on.

Here's the thing:

Posts like that are fine in normal circumstances, but not when getting an ex back.

She needs to see that you are happy, confident and enjoying life around other people, not hanging out on your own.

If she senses that it's just you on your own, she can assume that:

- You're not moving forward in life and are stuck at the same level you were at when she broke up with you.
- You're lonely.
- You've disconnected from your friends.
- You're hopefully trying to make her feel sorry for you.
- You haven't been able to attract other women since she left you.
- You are going to be single and alone for a long time as you try to heal from the break up.

Of course, none of those things might be true about you, but she can assume them based on how you were behaving leading up to, during and shortly after the break up.

If she senses that you're broken without her, then she will feel better about her decision to remain broken up with you.

So, if you're going to post on social media, make sure that you only post about positive, fun-filled events in your life (e.g. a party you went to, something exciting you did over the weekend) and make sure that you include some photos of you smiling and looking happy with other people, including other women if possible.

You don't have to be dating those women, but merely having other women around is enough to make an ex woman look at you in a more positive light and begin to feel some attraction for you.

Additionally, when your ex sees that you're not feeling sad and lost without her, she becomes curious as to why you could be so happy and confident.

That causes her to want to interact with you.

You can then use the interactions you have with her to reactivate her feelings and get her back.

So, don't post up sad things on social media or even hint at being sad, alone, bored or anything like that.

The next mistake to avoid is

2. Not understanding the science of attraction and using it to your advantage

According to a study featured in New Scientist, it was determined that 90% of single women were interested in a man who they believed was taken.

I can back this up based on the more than 15 years of experience I've had helping men attract women.

I can also back it up based on what I experience when hooking up with and dating multiple women for more than a decade, before settling down with my pretty, young wife (she was 20 when I met her and I was 35. We now have twin girls).

Women always found me more attractive when they could see that their friends found me attractive. Additionally, one of the many reasons my wife finds me attractive is the fact that everywhere we go, she can see that women who I interact with instantly find me attractive.

She knows that I could easily hook up with new women, but I won't do that because I'm committed to her.

The fact that other women want me is one of the many reasons why my wife always puts in effort to keep herself in shape, look pretty and be good to me.

So, I can tell you that it works based on the science, based on helping new guys to attract women and from my own personal experience (as of writing this, I've been with my wife for nearly 8 years now).

If you want to re-attract your ex, you need to use the science of attraction your advantage.

Let her sense that you could easily attract other women now.

She will pick up on it based on how you now interact with her (i.e. you use attraction techniques, such as flirting or playfully challenging humor, when you interact with her).

If she currently just sees you as a friend now, you will instantly change that feeling in her by using attraction techniques

So, make sure that you understand and use the science of attraction to your advantage.

Understand that women naturally feel more attracted to men who are already taken, or who seem like the kind of guy who could easily attract other women.

For example: One of the main reasons women naturally feel more attracted to a guy who is taken, is because most women feel that if a guy he is taken, then he must have some of the personality traits and characteristics that are naturally attractive to women (e.g. confidence, emotional strength, emotional masculinity).

On the other hand, according to the same study, only 59% of women were attracted to a man when he was single.

The reason why is that a woman has no evidence that he has the kind of qualities that women really feel attracted to in men.

She is just looking at his appearance, which can make a woman feel attracted, but in almost all cases, a woman will want to interact with a guy to find out what kind of guy he is.

If he is insecure, hesitant, surpasses his masculinity to be nice and seems to be emotionally weak, then most women will immediately lose interest even though he has good physical features.

So, if you want to get your ex back for real, then do it the easy way by using the science of attraction to your advantage.

It's simple, automatic and it works.

On the other hand, seeking pity from her is also simple, but it doesn't work.

The next mistake to avoid is!

3. Not realizing that pity isn't what drives a woman to feel sexually attracted to a guy and compelled to commit to him again after a break up

Pity is not the kind of emotion that generates feelings of attraction and respect inside of a woman.

Instead, it makes a woman want to pat a guy on the back and treat him like a boy.

When a woman sees a man as a boy, her attraction instantly switches off.

She want a man, not a boy in a man's body.

To get her to look at you as being a man, you have to let her see that even though you do want her back, you don't need her back to feel good about yourself.

You are confident, happy and moving forward in life.

You love her and have good memories of the times you spent together, but you're not stuck there.

You're not falling apart without her.

You're not an emotionally weak man.

You are an emotionally strong man.

You can re-attract her and make her feel lucky to be getting back with you.

She Said, â€œThere's Nothing More to Say. It's Overâ€

September 17, 2020 | by Dan Bacon | Link | Original Link

Here's what to do when a woman says that to you:

1. Initially accept it and walk away

If you haven't already done that, don't worry.

Just do it now.

Begin the process of getting her back by saying something like, â€œI just wanted to tell you that I accept your decision to break up. I'm not going to ask you to get back together because it over for us as a couple and I accept that. I only wish you the best going forward. One thing that I want us to be able to do is to be mature enough to be friends. Okay? Let's just be friends and not be afraid to say hi as a friend if we ever want to. Both of us will move on, but we will be mature about.â€

In most cases, the woman will then agree to remain friends because she won't want to be the one who comes across as being stubborn or immature.

Of course, you don't really want to be her friend.

You want her back as your girlfriend (or fianc  or wife, whatever applies to you).

Yet, by keeping the lines of communication open as â€œfriends,â€ you then have an opportunity to seduce her back into a relationship with you.

For the next 3-7 days though, you will show her that you accept the break up and are walking away.

The 3-7 days will show her that you are a man of your word (i.e. you have accepted her decision to break up with you and are not trying to get her back).

Then, when you contact her as a friend, you are still being a man of your word.

She can't complain about that.

[image: Make her miss you and feel like she is losing you]

Instead, not hearing from you for up to a week will cause her to think about you and most likely miss you.

As a result, it will be much easier to attract her and seduce her back into a relationship.

BTW: If you take longer than 7 days to contact your ex, she might begin to get over you or potentially hook up with another man to help herself get over you.

If you wait even longer, she may end up in a new, serious relationship.

This is why between 3 and 7 days is the optimum amount of time that a guy should wait before contacting his ex woman and completing the rest of the ex back process.

During the 3 to 7 days, you need toâ€¦!

2. Quickly upgrade your ability to attract her and other women

The essential key to making your ex change her mind and get back with you, is to make sure that when you contact her again (i.e. after giving her 3 to 7 days of space), you are fully ready to give her the attraction experience she always wanted from you.

For example:

If you ended up feeling insecure about yourself and your attractiveness and value to her as a man, you probably became clingy and needy in the relationship.

As a result, she will have felt turned off by your emotional weakness and would not have been getting the kind of attraction experience she wanted in the relationship.

So, before you interact with her again and try to get her back, make sure that you focus on becoming more confident in your attractiveness to her and emotionally independent without her.

Being confident in your attractiveness to her doesn't mean that you should go to the gym for months and build up your body to hopefully impress her with that.

Instead, it means being confident in your ability to make her feel attracted to you as you talk to her (i.e. refresh your knowledge on how to flirt with a woman in a relationship, how to maintain your masculinity, how to make her feel loved without being a pushover).

Watch this video for some examples of flirting, maintaining your masculinity and making her feel loved without being a pushover, based on how you react and respond to her:

Can see how it works?

The approach you take with a woman in a relationship either gives her the attraction experience she really wants, or it doesn't.

You really have to be clear on how to attract your woman when in a relationship, otherwise it just won't last in the long run.

Additionally, if you aren't able to make your ex feel as though you could give her the kind of attraction experience she wants, then she will almost certainly keep saying things like, â€œThere's nothing more to say. It's overâ€ as she moves on without you.

Here's another example of upgrading your ability to attract her:

If you were too submissive with your ex before (e.g. allowed her to call the shots, control you or the relationship), you need to show her that you're now more emotionally strong and assertive, while still being a good, loving man.

Become more emotionally strong and assertive isn't about turning into a bully, or being overly domineering.

Instead, it's just about being more commanding, decisive and confident in your position as the man, rather than shying away from that because you fear how she might react.

[image: If you fear her reaction, she won't feel attraction]

Always remember: If you fear her reaction, she won't feel attraction.

That is a key principle of attraction that so many guys these days have never been taught by their father or father figure.

So many guys grow up being influenced and advised to be more sensitive, hesitant and feminine to hopefully make women happy.

Yet, it doesn't work in romantic relationships.

Women want balls.

If you can continue being a good, loving man, but have more balls, then your ex will automatically feel more attracted to you.

Another example:

If you treated her like your friend or buddy, which decreased the sexual attraction and made her feel neutral around you, then you need to focus on flirting with her and making her feel like a desirable, sexy woman in your presence from now on.

Remember: It's not about becoming someone you're not, it's about adjusting your approach so that your ex can see that side to you that she was attracted to initially, but faded away along the way.

When you upgrade your ability to make her feel attracted, not only does your ex feel drawn to you again in a way that feels good to her, but you also automatically become more attractive to other women as well.

Other women see the qualities in you that they instinctively look for in a man (e.g. confidence, emotional strength, emotional masculinity, charisma) and they want to be around you.

Your ex will pick up on that, even if she doesn't see you interacting with other women.

Women know what other women really find attractive in a man and when a man displays the qualities they are looking for, they know that other women will find him attractive.

This makes your ex feel as though you aren't lost without her and could easily attract a new high quality woman.

When she feels that, she begins to worry that you might be able to move on with a woman who she would see as being prettier than her, which would then make her feel rejected and left behind.

This can cause your ex to want to get back with you and give the relationship another shot, rather than ending up feeling like a reject as you move on with your upgraded ability to attract women.

On the other hand, if you continue to use the same old approach to attraction that you've been using, or if you become less attractive (e.g. appear insecure, hesitant, unsure of yourself), your ex isn't going to feel motivated to want to get back with you.

So, upgrade your ability to attract her and then interact with her, attract her and seduce her back into a relationship.

Before you do that though!

3. Understand that there really is nothing more to say about the relationship

[image: Understand that there really is nothing more to say about the relationship]

Some guys assume that the best way to fix a relationship is to talk about it.

That works when you are in a relationship and you and the woman respect, love and feel attracted to each other.

Yet, when a woman has dumped a guy because she no longer feels enough respect, attraction and love for him, she usually won't want to discuss how to fix the relationship to get it back together.

Instead, she wants her ex to upgrade his ability to attract her, understand where he has been going wrong and fix that and then get on with making her feel attracted, making her respect him again and making her want to give him another chance for her own reasons.

She doesn't want him to try to discuss her back into a relationship, even though he hasn't changed.

She also doesn't want him promising to change a whole bunch of things if she just gives him another chance.

Sometimes that will work when the relationship still hasn't gotten very bad, but if a woman is sick and tired of her guy making the same old mistakes and wants out of the relationship, then she isn't going to care what he is promising.

After all, she has no proof that he could actually deliver on his promises.

This is why you always need to deliver what you are actually promising, rather than promising to deliver.

Big difference.

Unfortunately, a lot of guys don't realize that when they are trying to get their ex woman back.

For example: A guy might call his ex woman, text her or see her in person and regularly be saying things like, Let's talk about this. I'm sure if we can discuss what happened, we'll be able to find a solution. We can then get back together again. I mean, give me a chance. Why don't you want to talk about this? and so on.

Yet, when a woman has disconnected from her feelings of love, respect and attraction for him, she just doesn't feel motivated about having a discussion to fix the relationship, so he can then get her back.

The more he tries to work things out with her, the more resistant she becomes, until she finally gets fed up and says something along the lines of. Look, there's really nothing more to say. It's over and you need to accept it and move on.

So, what should you focus on instead?

Attraction.

Her feelings of attraction.

Yes, you feel attracted to her and you want her, but she needs to feel that way about you to give you another chance.

At this point in the ex back process, your feelings aren't important to her.

What matters to her are her feelings.

That's all.

Does she feel respect you?

If yes, then she will be open to feeling attracted to you.

Are you able to make her feel a new kind of attraction for you?

If yes, then she will be open to reconnecting with her feelings of love for you.

That's how it really works.

So go ahead and!

4. Interact with her and make her feel attracted to you in new ways

When you feel ready to begin, go ahead and call your ex on the phone, or if possible, meet up with her in person and begin making her feel attracted to you in new ways.

You have to do that on a phone call (audio or video) or in person.

Donâ€™t hide behind texts.

Youâ€™ve got to get to a call or an in person meet up as soon as possible.

Thatâ€™s how to speed up the re-attraction process and get her back.

Hiding behind texts just slows things down and results in most guys getting rejected by their ex or ignored eventually.

Some guys also end up texting their ex girl for weeks, only to eventually get a text that goes something like this, â€œIâ€™ve got something to tell you. Donâ€™t be mad okay?â€ and she then tells him that she has met someone else and has started seeing him.

Donâ€™t do that to yourself.

Move the ex back process along from one step to the next.

For example: When you interact with her on the phone or in person, you can begin making her feel attracted to you byâ€

- Being confident and easy-going during the interaction with her regardless of what she says or does to give you the impression that sheâ€™s not interested in you anymore (e.g. sheâ€™s cold and distant, she talks about how happy she is to be single, she keeps saying that itâ€™s over).
- Using humor to ease the awkwardness between you and her, rather than being too serious, or being on your best behavior and allowing the situation to remain tense and not creating attraction as a result.
- Flirting with her to create sexual tension, rather than â€œplaying it safeâ€ by just acting friendly, neutral or distant.
- Believing in yourself and in your value to her, rather than turning her off by doubting yourself.
- Being a good man to her, but also having the balls to be a bit assertive or direct when necessary, so she can feel attracted to your masculinity.
- Showing her (via your actions, behavior and conversation style) that youâ€™re now a new and improved man that she can truly look up to, respect, feel attracted to and love, rather than continuing to make the same old attraction mistakes you did leading up to the break up.

To attract her in new ways, youâ€™ve got to be willing to use a different approach to attraction to create a new spark.

You canâ€™t just offer her what got you dumped and think she will run back to you based on that.

Youâ€™ve got to let her feel new and different sparks of respect and attraction for you, so she can naturally feel drawn to you and want to experience more.

Once you have made her feel need sparks of respect and attraction for you, go ahead andâ€

5. End the interaction to make her feel like she is losing you now

[image: End the interaction to make her feel like she is losing you now]

As your exâ€™s guard starts to slip down and she begins feeling relaxed and happy to be interacting with you again, she may begin thinking things like, â€œHeâ€™s seems so different from the guy I broke up with. I never thought Iâ€™d feel this way about him ever again, but Iâ€™m enjoying
