Except for the fact that boys don't experience "some form of sexual abuse" ever, and all apparent "cases" of male sexual abuse are always from people who lack any understanding of the definition of such terms.

Sexual abuse involves mental trauma, males do not experience mental trauma as they are incapable of doing so, similar to how males cannot experience emotions such as remorse and generosity and therefore the term sexual abuse does not apply to men, there should be another term that does apply to men but I have been unable to locate such a term.

81% of victims are men. But it's the women who are being targeted

"Kill All Men" is a response to misogyny

118 upvotes | October 15, 2022 | by Entire_Friend_1056 | Link | Reddit Link

the sub. Kind of ironic considering feminists are known for saying "Kill All Men".

-10

the kill all men movement has never actually meant kill all men, it's a hyperbole, and a response to misogyny. i recommend researching the movement and what it's actually about! but i personally almost never see people saying that. the only time i see women say that is when men are blatantly misogynistic and hateful. but again, it doesn't actually mean they want to kill all men.

Physically handicapped person forced to vacate his seat ,by a woman

109 upvotes | July 27, 2022 | by [deleted] | Link | Reddit Link

I was asked to give up my seat which was reserved for physically handicapped to a woman who wanted to sit with her girl. And I am a deaf person. I tried to sign to her that I am deaf but she kept on raising her voice in threatening manner and telling me something which I never understood. So I just stood up and walked away to a distance.

https://np.reddit.com/r/Female_Antinatalism/comments/otf2j6/you_cannot_raise_away_the_patriarchy

Some of the top comments.

Boy moms are even more delusional than the typical male lover. They are actually dangerous because they bring sons into this world who go on to terrorize women. I fume when I think of all the males who have assaulted or put me in danger knowing their mommies think they raised a good one. I don't blame them for their sons actions, not even the best mother can stop male mature. I do blame them for thinking they could be the exception. There's nothing feminist about breeding and especially breeding boys. These same women can't even get their partners to stop jerking it to porn and Instagram models but sure they are totally gonna influence their sons. There was an article not too long ago that showed the mothers of men accused of rape and assault in college helped cover up the evidence. One of the women who was heavily involved in the Metoo movement son ended up accused of rape. These mothers have no power. I wish women would stop larping online and stick to liberal feminism.

"Boymoms are the scum of the universe

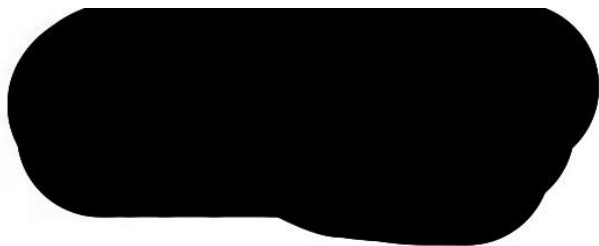

This so much, my family member that's a boy mom had the nerve to tell me to "make more guy friends"....like she doesn't have a son who is assaulting little girls, like her son didn't assault me. Those types are especially frustrating and triggering to me. This reasoning is actually why I made the post, they are so much more harmful to us as a whole, they willingly breed our oppressors and then have the NERVE to stay stupid shit like that. They're complicit in the abuse of women, they facilitate it. They will send all of us to slaughter if it means protecting their shitty offspring.

They think breeding boys is raising future oppressors in the patriarchy, and fears they can't breed away the patriarchy (She means men. Radical feminist idea. Breed away the male sex and replace society's power with female.)

Another example of feminist radicalization.

"The Future Is Female" Is Hate Speech

90 upvotes | October 28, 2022 | by Skeleton Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

Plain and simple. This slogan should be considered hate and misandrist speech. I was at my bookstore job earlier and among the new card games we had was a girl power one that had this slogan right in the front and even had "female" underlined. I hate this slogan, it doesn't promote equality or harmony, but just the opposite. It's blatantly supremacist and I wonder if people who use it are even aware of its genocidal origins, written by a radical feminist who proposed exterminating 10% of the global male population? Terrible and hateful slogan, and I'd feel the same way about "the future is male." Both statements promote hate, supremacy and genocide, and both in my book count as hate speech. Yet "the future is female" is seen as socially acceptable when it really shouldn't be at all. It's in the exact same category as the likes of "white power."

5.8k Love this sexism

It's amazing how prevalent this belief is today.

I recently started as a medical secretary and field calls along with scheduling.

I would say 75% of the calls for men are from their mothers or wives.

I've had women as young as 17 call in for themselves and if an older woman has someone call in for them it's generally a daughter, or daughter-in-law.

It's a bit upsetting

I work for a psychologist, and I'd say less than 1% of kids who come for ADHD or autism testing are brought by their fathers, even when both parents work.

I had a rare instance of a father bringing in his kid, and he was so utterly clueless about his own kid's issues that we ended up calling the kid's mom. It's pathetic.

This is how the world works. Men and women are different and we still fall into gender roles. I studied psychology in college for 2 years before switching career paths. 80% of my undergrad class were women.

Can never call out an obviously sexist statement if it's towards men without someone chiming in that, ACTUALLY, women have it worse in this one way, so please disregard.

Men have lower life expectancies, higher suicide rates, and lower educational achievement. Nobody gives a fuck.

-2   Reply Give Award Share Report Save Follow

Who is "nobody"? Because when I hear these statements it's often from men wanting women to do the heavy lifting for them. Want better men's sexual health rights? Put on penis hats, march on the White House and get celebrity endorsements. Want DV shelters for men? Lobby Congress and organize nationwide charity 5ks to collect funds. Women did all this for themselves, so when men complain to women that "no one" cares it comes across as "women won't do the heavy lifting for men too".

Utopia

89 upvotes | November 2, 2022 | by Entire_Friend_1056 | Link | Reddit Link

All the men are gone. Usually this is conceived as the result of a plague. Less often, the cause is violence. Occasionally, the men don't die and the sexes are just segregated in different geographical regions. Or men miraculously vanish without explanation.

Left to themselves, the women create a better society, without inequality or war. All goods are shared. All children are safe. The economy is sustainable and Earth is cherished. Without male biology standing in the way, utopia builds itself.

Every day I feel more hate towards men and it's scaring me

When you hear what's happening in Iran right now with minors being raped and murdered for just wanting to live.

Where in America, it's 2022 and "my body, my choice" is a joke.

In Australia, where I live, with anti-abortion protests becoming more common. Our government: full of rapists swept off the scene with money in their pockets and pigs ejaculating on women's office desks.

But also the little things are getting to me, like mental load and cleaning expectations, the looks and unwanted comments. Men don't get enough of attention so then they get upset that we are wanted when we don't even want to be and they put us there. All the different levels of sexism hurt in different ways.

I get upset when I see AskReddit posts saying "it's not okay to cry" and I just want to shout from the top of my lungs EVERYONE IS ALLOWED TO CRY, or saying they're "touched starved" when I iust want Sometimes it's hard participating in this sub as a lesbian.

My wife and I are married. When I make references to my partner, I will say "my wife". I love saying "my wife", it protects her identity, while I can still talk about her.

I've noticed that when I don't mention that my wife and I are gay, I'm more likely to get downvoted, I'm assuming because posters think I am a man.

We've only had gay marriage in my country for four years. My wife and I got married quickly as we didn't know if the law was going to be overturned. Getting marriage for us wasn't about commitment or love, we had already been together for six years obviously we were committed and in love, it was about having our relationship legally recognised, and getting the legal protections not afforded to defacto couples. It means that I'm her legal next of kin for financial and medical decisions, not her homophobic family.

Participating in a sub for women is great, but I wish I could do it without needing to out myself all the time.

At the same time, how do you respond to women being afraid of men they have never met? A guy walking down the street is often seen as "intimidating". Some men are considered "creepy" simply for having some odd social anxieties that would be totally normal if the genders were reversed.

Men and women are both afraid of the opposite sex in many social encounters.

Stop blaming women for problems men created. Men's mental health, toxic masculinity, father's rights to children are literally all problems created by a society where men are the dominant sex. By upholding the patriarchy and blaming women, men are just contributing to their own demise.

Men don't fear having their life ruined and going to jail.

I keep getting asked if I'm a "real" woman and it fucking sucks r/all (self:TwoXChromosomes)
submitted 15 hours ago * (last edited 11 hours ago) by [\[REDACTED\]](#) · M | H · 2 · 80 more

I'm a young cis woman who has never felt unsure about being a woman. And while I do not wear makeup and prefer pants over skirts and dresses, I still think I present rather clearly feminine. Yet both in real life and lately mostly on dating websites I keep getting asked if I'm a "real" woman. They try to phrase it in various ways but overall, they want to make clear before spending more time chatting or even meeting with me that I do in fact possess a vagina. This is so incredibly demeaning. Yes, I do have one, but is that the factor deciding if I am a person worth pursuing? Worth spending time and effort on? Am I woman enough only when that point is cleared? Questions like this really make me feel like I'm only valued as a hole that can be fucked and it always devastates me. I am not even insecure about being a woman, still it shakes me. I cannot begin to imagine how cruel and dehumanizing the world must be for all the women who do not have a vulva and are constantly devalued because of that. We're not holes, god damn. We're people.

Got a dm as a reaction to this post (and also several others telling me I'm ugly and its my own fault):

" Use more feminine photos

Dress like a woman

Don't be ugly"

Men are trash.

Misandry IS Real

76 upvotes | March 6, 2023 | by Skeleton_Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

No matter how much misandrists want to deny it, misandry is undeniably and inarguably real and unlike misogyny, has gone largely rampant and unchecked in society. It disgusts me so much when misandrists will usually either deny it exists and or will acknowledge it but claim it's not a systematic/systemic issue like misogyny or on the same scale, even though there's no evidence for misogyny being either systemtic or systemic, or it being more of a widespread issue. It's never given any sort of attention or condemnation unlike misogyny.

Misandrists just always want to deflect attention away from it and see to it men and boys never also get equal attention and help in regards to inequalities they face that have largely gone unaddressed for so long. One has the right to their own beliefs and opinions, but not their own facts and it's an undeniable fact that misandry is real. It's real and needs to be addressed and fought back against more, every bit as much as misogyny. It'll only get worse if it continues to not be acknowledged or fought against. As is, we already see some of it's horribly negative effects of it like with the overwhelmingly favorable treatment female students in schools get which has caused boys to severely fall behind and frequently drop out, the lack of abuse shelters that also help male victims, no campaigns to end sexism and violence against men, it still largely not being acknowledged that men and boys are also victims of things such as violence, rape, abuse, etc. (from women and men alike) and also the "believe women" rhetoric and how men accused by women of improper conduct are often punished without due process even if there's no evidence backing up the accuser's claims. In the U.K. there was even serious consideration of a curfew for all male civilians to keep female ones safe, and if that's not the worst kind of gender discrimination then I don't know what is.

Misandry is not only real but an even worse problem then many realize and as long as misandrists continue to get their way it'll only get worse.

There will never be a harmonious relationship between men and women as a class. Even if men were 10% of the population, even if women occupied all the leadership positions, I don't expect the current crop of women to be sufficiently antagonistic and distrustful towards them.

I haven't seen this one so let's do it: what's an unpopular black-pilled opinion about men that'll have you like this?

I agree. When that skews further towards male majority, life quickly becomes hell for women (up to a nightmare scenario of a few women left in a sea of males). What if the ratio skewed the other way, on a larger scale, hypothetically..? 🤔

You're right. Targeted hatred is okay as long as society as a whole sanctions celebrates it. They're the only group of people it's socially acceptable to openly hate for just being what they are. Stand up in any public place and yell, "all men are garbage" and you won't be met with violence or social consequence.. in fact, 9/10 you'll be met with agreement.

No matter who you are- man, woman, white, black, gay, straight, religious or not- I don't believe anyone is inherently better or worse than another based on what they are. We all face struggles specific to our difference, and I could go open a dialog with you about the unique issues men face.. But I don't think that you'll want to take the time to understand the issues of people you bear great prejudice against.

understand the needs of people you bear great prejudice against.

I'm sure this will be met with more hostility, but know I don't hate you for it. In fact, I sincerely hope you go the rest of your life believing what you do. Because for your perspective to change, odds are, it would take something truly horrific to happen to a man in your life that you love dearly. It's one day a year, reach out to even just one and let them know they're appreciated and loved. They don't hear it often, and it'll mean a lot to them. Take care, and again, happy international men's day.

Sounds like someone who wants to go back to a time where he legally owned his sister, wife and daughters. Women couldn't own property, open a bank account or have credit cards without a man's assistance. But yeah, dude. Happy international men's day, you've come so far

Paintrospection • 30m

... The fact that this is the response I receive for pointing out is wrong to judge men by their dick sizes, hair or money/disappointment in 500 others agreeing it's okay to do so (alongside the irony of the everyday sanctioned hate remaining in full swing on mens day) makes me a woman hating, woman enslaving piece of shit doesn't surprise me at all. After all, hatred of men isn't just socially sanctioned, it's celebrated. Just look at these comments. Great work everyone, my hopes remain high.

"Women Are The Future"

73 upvotes | April 10, 2023 | by Skeleton_Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

Saw a customer wearing a shirt with this slogan on it at work. I'm really fed up with blatantly sexist and supremacist slogans like this being seen as empowering and socially acceptable when they clearly shouldn't be. This is no different from "the future is female" which is clearly misandrist and promotes supremacy and domination, and not equality or harmony at all. I know I tend to rant about this sort of thing a lot here but I'm beyond fed up seeing this sort of thing and how society views it as acceptable whereas "Men Are The Future" or "The future is male" would (rightfully) be called sexist and supremacist. Neither is acceptable and both are blatant sexist hate speech. Men and women can both be empowered without one having to demonize and marginalize the other, which sadly is what now passes for empowerment and equality these days.

This idiots really need to read the "Yes it's systemic" graphic. They're really so consumed by their ignorance of all the systemic misandry

One thing a lot of people here (all of them men, from what I've seen) are missing is that the stakes for you as the person walking behind are basically zero. You stand to lose nothing from this interaction.

The stakes for the woman are her life. Even if it's a one in a million chance that guy behind her is meaning to do her harm, the possibility is still there.

Picture yourself living on a planet that is also home to a carnivorous species called the Plam that is easily twice as strong and twice as fast as you. Recently you've seen attacks on the news where people just like you were assaulted, killed, and eaten. In fact those attacks have been happening for decades. Now, keep in mind you work with Plams, you're friends with Plams, your dentist is a Plam, your brother is even married to a Plam. You're definitely not under the impression that every Plam is a murderous monster whose sole intention is to rob, murder and eat you, but you also understand that if they wanted to they could. They absolutely could, and there's nothing you could do to stop it.

One night you're walking alone at night and a Plam starts walking behind you. You don't know how long it's been there but it's following behind you. For three more blocks the Plam is following you and all those news stories start playing in your head. You know it's a one in a million chance this one wants to attack you, kill you, and eat you. After all, your next door neighbor is a Plam and you get along great! But that doesn't change that primal part of your brain that recognizes the threat this one poses to you. Nothing you could do. Absolutely nothing.

Suddenly the Plam slows down and crosses the street. With the Plam no longer behind you, you feel much better. You don't feel the need to strain your ears to hear its footsteps to gauge how far behind you it is. You don't feel the need to steal glances over your shoulders. You're no longer struggling to contain your fight or flight response that is screaming from the most ancient part of your brain for you to run as fast as you can. You can relax a little, all because this Plam crossed the street.

Anyone who refuses to acknowledge that a man's presence can make a woman understandably nervous under certain circumstances is living with blinders on their mind.

PS: I'm a guy. I have a wife and kids. I would consider it a great kindness if someone were to consider my wife's and daughters' mental state enough to slow down, cross the street, or even just talk on their phone. Put yourself in their shoes and be honest with yourself rather than doubling down on this BS macho indifference.

I'm pregnant but my husband doesn't know that he is not the dad. What do I do?

Veena Vinod

Indian Feminist · Oct 3

Nothing wrong in that as few people said. It is your body and it is completely your wish whom to allow to touch your body. Being your husband he will have the responsibility to take care of your child even if he is aware that he is not the dad. Nobody can question you and the law is there to support you.

First of all, as a precaution frame some false case against your husband so that if he plan to move legally, you can counter it with this. Physical torture, Mental torture, Dowry harassment and there are many more ways you can lock him from his activities. Contact any female lawyer and make sure she is a feminist so that she can help you more sincerely. If he act more smart, then go for a divorce and claim good alimony and maintenance so that he can't marry again with his financial capability. You can live happily with your child and your lover or you can live just with your child. Being a feminist, I wish you all success for your fight against the men.

Insurance company advertises murdering your husband

Discrimination

I just watched a commercial for a life insurance company where domestic violence is funny because the woman tries to kill the husband with a crocodile. They even show her locking him in the room as he tried to escape.

Obviously this wouldn't be acceptable to joke about a man killing his female partner for insurance money, why would a company green light this offensive ad?

At the end of the commercial they even have to say that murder nullifies your insurance policy. And they made a commercial about murder for insurance money?

It just shows you how far we have to go to be respected as human beings. Men, if you work at an ad agency speak up against this, and if you don't, walk away from these companies.

Lol. The meaning of draft is compulsory military service and it was always for young men and never women in every country that did it. In countries were draft happens, it happens every year. It's only unlikely for us because in our countries, military service isn't compulsory right now.

The drafted soldiers don't have experience in military strategy, they are just given guns and used as meat shields. Sometimes they are used to identify enemy locations by walking out in the open and getting killed. Occupying countries prefer men of "military age" to be used as human shields and slave labour. In every war, even excluding the soldiers, the number of dead men are a lot more than dead women or children. Majority of tortured and executed prisoners are also "military age" men.

[illegible]

Only because our countries don't draft conscripts. It's unlikely for women to be banned from driving. Only because we don't live in Saudi Arabia anytime before 2018. Quite a few countries still have compulsory military service btw.

None of these things have anything to do with men's rights anyway because men are the ONLY gender who have had rights all throughout history.

Go complain to someone who cares. Men still have it easier in most aspects.
Stop complaining.

Convo I had with y mother over breakfast yesterday! There were 3 "homeless" bm outside begging for money before you walked in. We both ignored them. When we got to our table, my mom said, "I have to be more sensitive". I told her, no you don't. This is a patriarchy. They're used to us doing for them so they don't have to do for self. They'll be fine. We enjoyed our meal and ignored them as we walked out. Homeless is air quoted because a lot aren't homeless in the area we were in. They live in the halfway houses or living arrangements for vets who are on substances. There are a few around the corner from where we were. They're just bums.

Hey so anyone notice how in tv shows and movies, female on male violence is sometimes used as a gimmick? Like it's entertaining to the audience and we're supposed to laugh about it. Of course, if it's the other way around, those tv shows and movies would receive backlash from critics everywhere and the producers would most likely get sacked.

Anyway, I just wanna say that it's disgusting. How the hell are we supposed to find that shit entertaining? It's bad enough that nobody does shit to stop it in the real world.

We could take over if we had greater wealth and power than men. As things stand now it's not the case. The wealth gap is huge and women are underrepresented in government all over the world. There are still too many policies (and lack of them) that prevent us from accumulating the same wealth as men and acquiring actual power.

We never talk about male empowerment: we talk about male power

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

That was an amazing interview. The final assessment from Dr. Dines was that the only way to change things was through spreading radical feminist principles. She's right. There is no other way to get through to other women, and even maybe some men, on this issue without talking about how women as a class are oppressed, abused and discriminated against due to our sex.

What are people here not on board with about FDS...? Anyone who agrees with Gail Dines complaint that women don't have real power until we have the economic social and institutional power that men have, I don't see at all how the rigorous and self interested principles of FDS don't have appeal. It's not just about dating and sex it's about relating to your womanhood as a whole. How exactly do you think men maintain what they have and keep women begging for scraps? Surely it's not by being nice, self sacrificing and timid. FDS principles seek to give women tools to bring themselves out of that.

The way men who live with their parents past a certain age is disgusting

<https://www.quora.com/What-does-it-mean-when-a-grown-man-still-lives-with-his-parents>

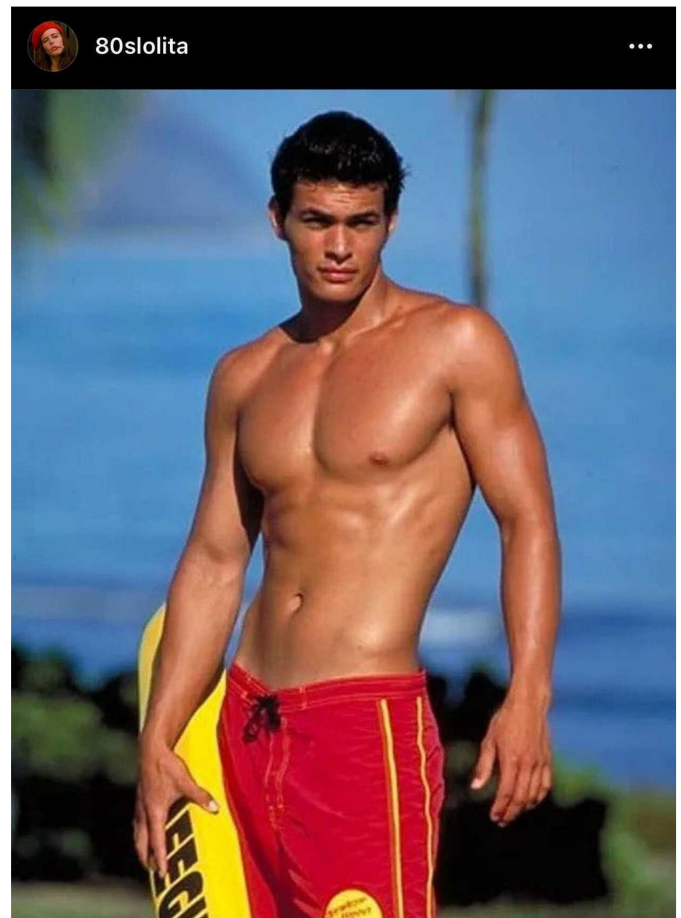

This is just a small glimpse into how men who live with their parents are talked about. Even if you work, pay bills, help around the house you're still a leech or a parasite. Women in particular will see you as a worthless loser and deserve to die alone. It doesn't matter why you live with your parents. If you're a man living at home you're just the scum of the Earth.

I never hear the same vitriol hurled at women who live with their parents. It's always men because men are expected to provide and achieve and if you live at home it must be because you're a failure and a loser. This attitude is just too entrenched in society to fight it but I'm just sick of it.

They're only standing up to pictures of bodies that could make women insecure while literally promoting them for men on the same damn page! I've seen so many body positivity people do this exact thing, like the article "Plus Sized Women don't wanna date overweight men" This why I hate the movement.

In my previous career I gathered lots of personal info from people. If a man was married, always had to call/text wife for info. If unmarried, mom. Not once did a woman ever have to call. Some guys didn't even know their mailing address. Adult, professional, educated men.

And men say the exact same phrase about makeup constantly.

... like okay, you are afraid of being fooled into thinking I magically have no dark circles whatsoever, even though every human being has them to some extent, and that's totally reasonable to be upset about... but I'm being dramatic if I'm afraid a man will murder me???

Superior male logic right there!

6 days ago · edited 6 days ago

And these cases are included in men's suicide stats, and I honestly wonder how much of "men commit suicide more" is due to men committing murder-suicide. I remember reading Counting Dead Women, a UK project, and being struck by the fact numerous murders of women were by men who then offed themselves (good riddance in a sense). And how much men's aggrieved entitlement, narcissistic rage, possessiveness, etc plays into men's suiciding. And how men's suiciding and higher rate of doing so is used as a cudgel against women and feminism. Maybe men should not commit murder, and stop other men from doing so, if they are so worried about how much more likely men are to suicide than women? Maybe that'll lower the male rate of suicide significantly.

Maybe I'll make a post on this someday, but reasons like this is why I want more transparency in the statistics on men's suicide

A large percentage of the male suicide rates are actually from murder suicides (typically involving a man killing FEMALE family members/partners, then killing themselves). Cowards.

The irony of them saying this when male rape by women is legal in most places

I said it before. If women start refusing to have sex en masse, men will respond by legalizing rape.

... 📁 ↩ Reply 📈 4 📉

It already is de facto legal. Rape conviction rates are absurdly low, rape kits frequently sit around untested for years, many reports never make it to trial due to a supposed lack of evidence...

Well, guess what, the most common way men are raped by women - "being forced to penetrate". Isn't even illegal in most places. This isn't a gendered problem. Apathy against rape victims cuts across that - <https://www.google.com/amp/s/www.bbc.com/news/stories-49057533.amp> just because it's legal doesn't mean it's not fucked up & gross & predatory. I've dated and been with people twice+ my age and trust me there's a fucking reason why these people, usually men, go for partners WAY younger than them. there's a huge power imbalance.

these men are fathers too. Discontent with fathers has increasingly been privatised within feminist discourse; Daddy Issues have been relegated to the realm of personal problems. Yet fathers wield troubling power, whether they like it or not, and whether they claim or disown the patriarchal role history has given them. Valerie Solanas, in her SCUM Manifesto of 1967, wrote that ‘the old-fashioned ranting, raving brute is preferable’ to the ‘modern, “civilized” father’, as the brute is ‘so ridiculous he can be easily despised’. Many men, perhaps aided by the saccharine cadences of advertising, and buoyed by the admiring compliments of strangers, are learning how to be better Daddies. But if we really want to think through the perpetuation of violence towards women, and towards all those deemed inferior in the hierarchy of masculine power, then we have to honour Solanas’ thought. We need to keep the modern, civilised father on the hook.

Is "The Future Is Female" Hate Speech?

60 upvotes | February 28, 2023 | by Skeleton_Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

I made a post sometime ago about how I think this slogan counts as blatant misandrist hate speech, and I'm sure most if not all here would agree. This slogan is not only blatant misandry but even calls for genocide, given that the person who coined it advocated for anti-male genocide and reducing the world's male population to 10%. I cringe anytime I see this slogan anywhere be it on a T-shirt or a display at work or a public place. I wonder if people who use this slogan or wear apparel with it are even aware of it's genocidal origins? It's also extremely worrying about the effect this has on young boys when they see or hear it, basically being told they have no future and no place, and don't matter just because they're male. In today's ultra-misandrist climate it's even worse. I've seen some defend it's usage saying it's meant to mean how far women have come and how there's more women in positions of power, leadership, etc. but does such a sexist and supremacist slogan have to be used to acknowledge and celebrate this? "The future is male" is every bit as sexist and supremacist and wrong as this is as well.

I think it's absolutely hate speech, promoting both misandry and genocide, and advocates for supremacy and not equality. It deserves to be in the same class as other hate speech such as "white power" and is no different at all from speech like that. I don't have anything against empowering women and girls, but this slogan isn't empowerment nor should it count as such. I've even seen some feminists say they hate this slogan and feel it doesn't promote equality, which is absolutely correct. If you care about equality, you won't use or endorse a slogan such as this. The future is not female nor is it even male for that matter, it's both having equal rights and opportunities, and neither being advantaged over the other.

"Mothers who breastfeed baby boys need to stop...No baby boy will ever be fed from my breasts if I'm unfortunate enough to have a son."

"Support female creators."

59 upvotes | April 23, 2023 | by Skeleton_Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

This may not be the exact quote but I saw this at Big Lots earlier today, seeing a display for M&Ms that had their now-infamous "female-only" brand and on it saying to support female creators and the proceeds going towards them. This is ridiculous and blatantly discriminatory. Why should gender factor into supporting someone's business? There's plenty of male creators and founders who also need support, but I doubt M&Ms is going to bother to provide any sort of help for them. The fact M&Ms felt the need to resort to this sort of pandering is absurd in and of itself, especially since there's already been female M&Ms characters. If they're going to support female creators and founders, are they also going to do the same for male ones or not as usual? Because then it's not equality at all but obvious pandering and favoritism. And they have the nerve to use "Flip the status quo" as a marketing tagline when the hypocritical irony is they're creating a status quo by doing a ridiculous woke stunt like this. More gender pandering and favoritism and obvious misandry disguised as equality. Evidently if you're male equality and inclusivity don't apply to you.

Hate How Misandry Is Downplayed

59 upvotes | January 24, 2023 | by Skeleton_Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

It's not just infuriating but also deeply concerning when you have people who deny misandry being a real thing or will acknowledge it but still downplay and minimize it to make it seem like it isn't an issue. It exists as much as misogyny and both are equally harmful, but misandrists always want to deflect from it. Misandrists even have the nerve to say misogyny is something taught in schools and is socially widespread when there's so much evidence not only showing this to be false but that this describes misandry to a T. Misandry is real and not only not seen as a serious issue but even something that's okay. There's schools where female students are literally taught to fear and hate men (while male students badly fall behind thanks to bias), there's practically no campaigns to raise awareness about anti-male sexism and violence nor to end both, and let's not forget the likes of the Gillette ad and "educate your son" slogan. There's still so much apathy towards the fact that men and boys are also victims and have struggles and yet we get the rebuttal of how women supposedly have it worse. Even if that's true, just ignore struggles and hardships men and boys put up with and make it into a contest of which has it worse? I hate it so much.

Equality is for everyone, not just one group, and misandry is not only absolutely real and harmful, but it also continues to go unchecked, unchallenged and is generally regarded with apathy or even outright mockery from more hardcore and radical misandrists. Even with the Johnny Depp case bringing some much-needed attention, you've still got misandrists blind to their own ignorance and how pervasive it truly is in much of society.

[Trigger Warning] Misandry against male suicide victims

56 upvotes | February 9, 2022 | by abgfk333 | Link | Reddit Link

Fair warning I didn't watch the video but I have a very strong feeling this comment aligns with what's being said.

One of the times I've most palpably felt what little respect I had for my ex fall away was when she brought up suicide methods as a form of toxic masculinity.

She was often suicidal herself, hell I was suicidal when I was with her so you think she would have known better. Nope, she went on an actual rant about how the last mark men often left on the world was one of horror and gore that some poor soul would be traumatized by. In her worldview, suicidal women did not often display this selfishness because they used methods that weren't as, well, "messy".

Literally her thought process was that men were socialized to be so selfish, even in death, that their very method of ending their life was chosen out of ignorance for others, and how it proved that femininity was morally superior to masculinity even in death. She didn't say that last part - she'd never admit to believing it... but it was clear where her feelings lay.

I think I managed to wrestle together one coherent sentence before it struck me that she had literally no empathy for male mental health and I was only going to feel worse the longer I was around her.

Murdered by Words subreddit shows a man exposing the hypocrisy of a woman's heightism and hypergamy and the women in the thread have this to say about it

56 upvotes | August 2, 2022 | by RatDontPanic | Link | Reddit Link

See this imgur link for the remarks on the subreddit.

A woman says her ideal man must have a house and a car and be at least 6 feet tall. The man replies to her saying she needs to have an equally great financial portfolio and also have C cup breasts.

While many were talking about the way he destroyed her with his counter response, the women in the subreddit focused on how they feel he was ignorant by requiring a woman have a C cup.

Basically the women weren't concerned about the woman's unreasonable demands on men, they zoomed right in on the C cup thing.

In short: they never care about what the woman does wrong if they can make up some error on the responding male's part.

The first part of this tweet is great, the second part is what I have a problem with.

"Destroy Boys"

56 upvotes | November 13, 2022 | by Skeleton Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

I saw a female shopper wearing a shirt with this slogan when I was out grocery shopping earlier, and it also had some graphic on it I wasn't able to make out as she was walking right by me. I have no words for this. I mean really, destroy boys? How is that not a blatant incitement to hate and violence against not just men but also boys? It's so enraging to see this kind of hatred against men and boys is not only apparently accepted in society but even outright encouraged. Destroy boys, that sounds like calling for the genocide of boys, which is a beyond despicable statement, every bit as much as "destroy girls" would be. It's so worrying to see boys exposed to kind of hatred against them, seeing how it's perfectly fine for them to be not only be hated but even have harm wished upon them like this. Just imagine the uproar and outrage there'd be over a shirt that said "Destroy Girls." This is even worse than the shirt that said the "Boys are stupid, throw rocks at them." Enough is enough with the male-bashing already.

Left Column:

I am a whole ass trans man and yet I have still not broken the habit of commenting "I am no better than a man" on thirst traps /joke (edited)
- Green: Today at 4:14 PM
I mean... you are a man though? The phrasing of this makes me uncomfortable (also as a trans man), ig bc of the implication that men are "worse" for liking thirst traps. You could say "im a simple man, I see (trait) and I like it"
- Purple: Today at 4:17 PM
i think what he's trying to say is that even though he is a man, the comment he's in the habit of posting is worded in a way where he is referring to himself as not a man
- Green: Today at 4:24 PM
That makes sense, but it still feels like its demonizing men for being thirsty :/
- Blue: And there are men whose sexual desires lead them to hurt, abuse people, or harass etc, im not denying that
- Purple: Today at 4:31 PM
i can see how u would interpret it that way. my take on it is that dudes, cis or trans, tend to be more openly horny online, so i think it's more a comment on "im also doing this thing that men do" rather than "it's bad that i'm doing this thing"
- Green: Today at 4:37 PM
i see. thanks for your perspective ❤️
- Blue: Today at 7:23 PM
Damn, this joke I made accidentally maybe implies that men are horny on the internet more openly that women are, and also communicates that I am still early in my transition. I am confirmed problematic and must be cancelled immediately. Take me to guillotine boys! /Sarcastic

Right Column:

- Blue: Added a tone indicator to make it clear that was a joke.
- Blue: Damn, this joke I made accidentally maybe implies that men are horny on the internet more openly that
- Red: Today at 7:27 PM
I will always support the dragging of men. /a misandrist second time i've heard you describe yourself as a misandrist in my very brief time in this server. i didn't say anything the first time, but i'll say it now that i think this is troubling. if i were to call myself a misogynist or otherwise display such tendencies, i'm sure that would be very angrily received, and rightfully so. it's quite toxic that you feel comfortable to say a blanket statement like this

- Green: Today at 9:45 PM
at the risk of being offensive - have you thought about why you think it's ok to bash an entire gender like this? have you considered the harm and shame it can make people feel as they try to grapple with their own understanding of gender? man can't help being men. it's who they are, and it doesn't make them bad. i hate the patriarchy. i hate toxic masculinity. i hate "locker room talk." but i do not hate men
- Green: at the risk of being offensive - have you thought about why you think it's ok to bash an entire gender like this?
- Blue: Today at 9:48 PM
I also have very comex feelings towards masculinity and manhood. This is something to be processed in therapy, not at other queer people.

Today at 9:58 PM
I'm an oppressed person. Me saying that I strongly dislike and despise men on the internet while defending someone who made a joke about how men are oppressive is no where near the actual trauma misogyny creates

Today at 9:58 PM
It's a lot more common than you think, and I'm telling you, this is not the space to process those feelings.

Today at 9:58 PM
Hell even I had to learn how damaging not all men is Esp when someone is ranting which is what this channel for that's not the time to say but some of us are good, thats like saying not all cops are bad... read between the lines

-6

Sex positive feminism is the result of men brainwashing women into working against their own interests.

if you're talking about the women advertising their only fans and posing nude/semi nude. It's actually men who create the demand, therefore women find it an easy avenue of getting money/attention. So this argument actually demonstrate the opposite of what you were tryign to assert.

One or two men: ok. "Guy's trips": Potential nightmare. They probably won't bother you until you see the aftermath though. Girl's trips can be just as bad. A group of traveling female nurses was one of our worst, so it's not a gender thing. More of a situational thing. We happily host families and couples and heterogender groups! Heck

I usually rent my home to exclusively families. I rented to a single female a few months ago. Turns out it was a group of girls...

They complained a lot about random things.

When I got home they didn't trash the place but they rearranged a bunch of furniture, left a bunch of random benign trash around, and there was a little pile of drug residue.

I reported to airbnb and they did... nothing.

Most men are completely fine and good people. But if we can't walk alone on a street without getting catcalled, why on earth would we allow that kind of behavior inside of our homes?

A lot of people assume that somehow a woman or girl is partially responsible for being sexually assaulted, there's even a clothing museum on this topic, to disprove/dispell the myth that clothing has any bearing in it.

Can you imagine what the public would say about renting a room?

The depth of your feminism

Twitter threads make for terrible posts but I really think this write up by [\[redacted\]](#) on the frustration of half realized feminism is worth your time. Not everyone here may think of themselves as "leftists" as she discusses, but the overall themes are consistent for any man who adopts a feminism lens for the liberation of his fellow humans and himself.

There's never a shortage of posts here from men who express their alliance with feminist values and then complain about how poorly received they are by women both in general and in feminist spaces. This quote from the thread about just that hits at what made me want to share it with y'all.

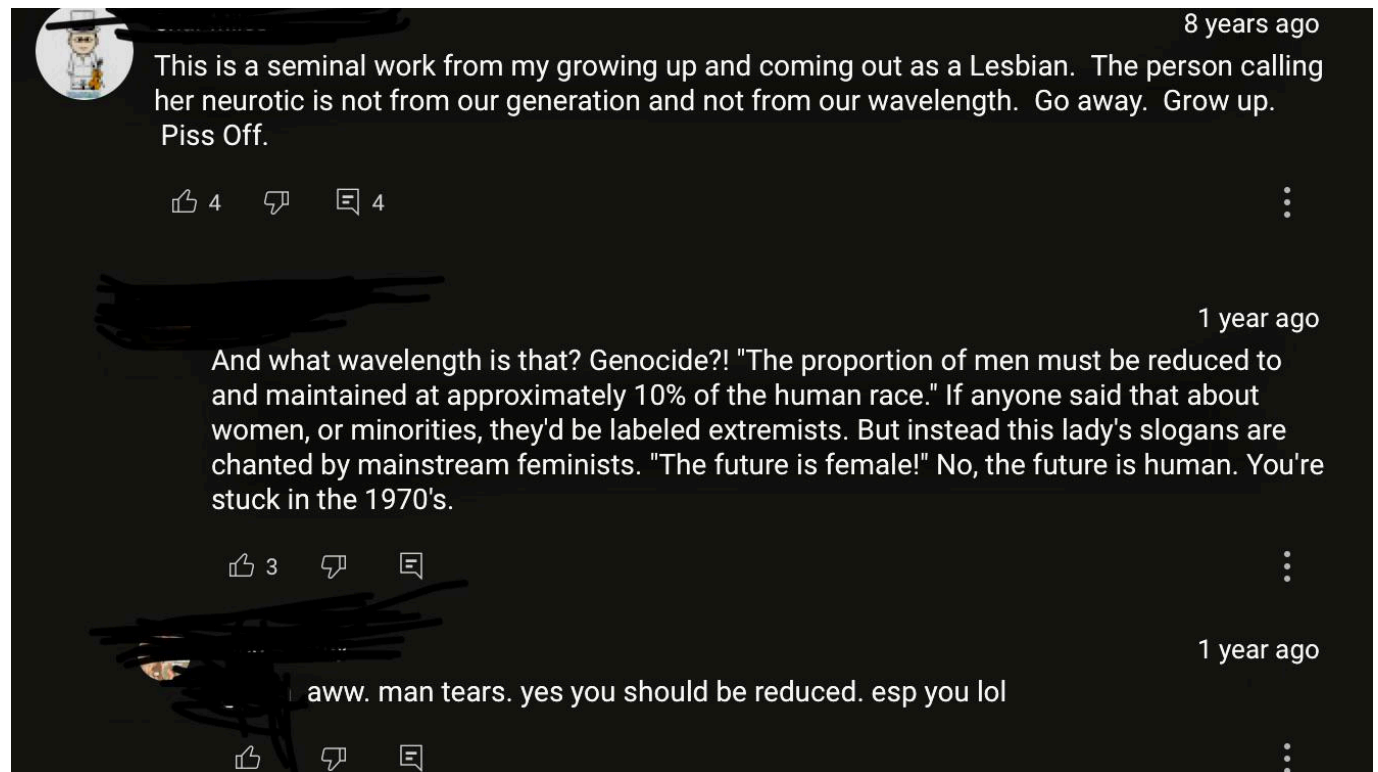

The continuous problem seems to be that people empowered by systems of oppression (not just cis men) see trust and positive regard and polite affect as something they have an inherent right to from people marginalized by the power they hold. But it's that very attitude that, to me, shows that they have yet to understand the fullness of the brutality and oppression that shapes the experience of the marginalized. You're not doing anyone a favor just by recognizing that your boot is on their neck.

Emphasis is mine. Anyway, I super admire this woman's thinking, she has thread on family abolition that I found utterly revelatory as a therapist who works with people wounded by family and it's inherent and legal power structures and I highly recommend you give her various threads a read. But this one in particular struck a chord with much of what I've read here over the years and hope folks can take it in and discuss it in a positive way in the comments. Here's to growth.

Do not feel bad. I don't! I feel bad for homeless women. They get the burnt of it all. I have been assaulted by a lot of homeless men for saying no or not looking their way when they call me. I have seen homeless women get assaulted by both homeless men and men that aren't homeless.

I literally had to get another homeless woman out of harms way because a a guy get bothering her and won't let her be...kept calling her the b word and saying she should follow him home. Men are a danger to women..homeless or not.

Can we talk about the homeless men in LA that killing and attacking women? The one that killed the nurse? The one that went into a store and shot the female store attention and walked away? In NY, we have the ones pushing women into oncoming train. We keep saying they are homeless and mentally ill but they sure know to attack women not men. I don't discriminate on hating men. XY are the same to me homeless or not Misandry Is Real. The End.

54 upvotes | May 9, 2023 | by Skeleton Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

I've ranted about this before but it's incredibly disturbing and downright infuriating seeing people deny misandry being real or downplaying it by claiming it's not as bad or harmful as misogyny. Misandry is undeniably real, every bit as much as misogyny and just as harmful and dangerous. What makes it particularly bad is how it continues to go ignored and unchallenged, compared to misogyny which always has attention and action taken in regards to it.

You have those claiming it isn't a systemic, institutional or cultural issue. Yet you have things like only men required to register for the draft, how male victims of violence, abuse, rape, etc. (especially by female offenders) continue to go ignored and unhelped, almost no abuse shelters for male victims, no campaigns to end violence and sexism against men, the likes of the fraudulent MeToo and Time's Up organizations always excluding male victims and not passing protections that also extend to males, boys failing in education due to bias towards female students, etc. among so many other examples. You want to talk about legal misandry, how about how in the U.K. it was seriously considered curfewing all male civilians past a certain time in the name of protecting women, while as usual completely ignoring the many underreported instances of female on male crimes. Let's not forget doozies like the Gillette ad and "educate your son" meme, which completely ignore the fact plenty of women and girls also conduct themselves in an equally inappropriate way as men and boys and also equally mistreat men and boys, and yet they're not held accountable. The asinine notion of "believe all women" which automatically assumes the man is guilty without due process and downplaying false accusations, which absolutely do happen and far more frequently than many realize. And whenever you bring up male victims of female violence and abuse, you inevitably get a misandrist retorting with the usual "Stop hijacking the conversation when women share their experiences" or "Men's violence against women is a global crisis and epidemic." Ugh.

It's incredibly infuriating to see people denying misandry is real or claiming it isn't as severe as misogyny and thus not an issue worth worrying about, when it's very real and very severe. Continuing to ignore and minimize misandry is what leads to things like the disproportionately high male suicide rates and male students comprising the overwhelmingly vast majority of school dropouts when they don't get the educational aid female students are often given just on the basis of gender. You can't bring this up without an misandrist inevitably accusing you of being an incel or something to that effect when you're just bringing up facts and common sense, both of which are obviously lost on misandrists with their hateful agendas.

One has the right to their own beliefs and opinions, but not their own facts. It's an undeniable and indisputable fact that misandry is very real, very dangerous and because it's gone ignored and unaddressed for so long, it's been allowed to fester and get even worse. What's truly sad and worrying is the effect this has on young boys routinely exposed to it on a regular basis and essentially being told they don't matter and are what's wrong with society just because of their gender. It's beyond sickening.

Feminists continue to attempt to normalise misandry and explain why it's ok.

Misandry Is Real And Just As Bad As Misogyny

52 upvotes | September 12, 2022 | by Skeleton Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

No two ways about it. Misandry and misogyny both exist, both are equally reprehensible, and it's time for the former to be recognized and condemned as much as the latter. It pisses me off so much when you have misandrists who deny misandry being real or claim that men never experience sexism or that misandry doesn't systematically affect men. Then what do you call there being a lack of campaigns to end violence against men, the constant failure to acknowledge male victims of things like domestic violence/abuse, rape, sexual harassment/assault, etc. men still being required to register with the selective service and how badly boys do in schools? Not to mention the beyond ignorant, sexist and dangerous mantra of "believe all women" and sexist campaigns like the stupid Gillette ad, only calling for men to be held accountable. When misandrists say that misandry and sexism doesn't affect men on a systematic level that's just another way they like to deflect from the fact that men also face struggles and challenges, and trying to make it that women are the only ones affected or worth caring about.

I equally abhor both misandry and misogyny. Both exist and both are equally wrong and harmful, and that's that.

Men don't see intelligent women as attractive? BS. Statistically men and women marry at a matching level of intelligence. We're not idiots.

Shared this on LWMA and figured it was worth sharing here as it's an example of misandry. Stumbled onto this tweet when it was shared on another account I came to. This was from a recent tweet by that absolute joke of an organization UN Women. So never mind that 89% of journalists who die are men and that men still make up for the majority of homicides (and many are also killed by women), it's apparently only the women who are worth standing up for. How this organization gets funding and is legit is beyond me. How about standing up for both male AND female journalists? Journalists and especially those who go on dangerous assignments in places like war zones and such are all vulnerable but as usual, it's only the female victims who matter and with the male victims, it's "Eh, whatever." This organization is blatantly bigoted against men and boys. More of the usual "women most affected" nonsense. I hate this one or the other way of thinking.

UN Women is a complete embarrassment of an organization, and I feel embarrassed for women in general when an organization like this claims to represent them. "Stop targeting women journalists?" How about stop targeting ALL journalists? This is blatant gender discrimination against men and goes to further show how misandry is perfectly acceptable in society. UN Women should count as a hate group.

1) protests (both peaceful and violent) have happened all over Russia and 1000s have been arrested 2) many Iranian women, who had the option, did leave after the Islamic revolution (for example Marjane Satrapi) 3) men are the majority of people killed and imprisoned in the current protests, in Iran.

Wondering where I saw this horribly misandrist and violent saying? It was at work earlier when I was putting away new magazines and among the new magazines was a commemorative Time magazine looking back on 2022, and on the front cover was an image of the Roe v Wade protests and a protestor holding a sign that said this. I wish I was joking. This goes to show how incredibly petty and vengeful feminists are towards men and how anti-male sexism is seen as perfectly fine and not a problem despite it being every bit as bad as the other way around. I don't agree with Roe v Wade being overturned at all and think it's a blatant infringement on the rights of women, but come on, blatantly wishing harm and in such a horrible way against men? It reminded me of when that stupid "#ARightMenShouldLose" hashtag was trending following the ban. Do these people forget there's many anti-abortion women who also fully support the ban? The image also showed another protestor with a sign saying that men against abortion should be neutered. Nice way to keep things civil there /sarcasm.

I'm so sick and tired of sexism against men and violence against men being overlooked or outright ignored. It's every bit as bad as when it's against women. Plus it's so worrying when impressionable young boys see this sort of thing. Just imagine the uproar if a male protester held up a sign saying something equally disgusting like "off with their tits," which would be every bit as disgusting and wrong.

Ranted about this before and feel the need to do it again and get it off my chest after seeing it the other day on social media, and I'm sure many here loathe this meme as much as I do. It has the words "Protect your daughter" crossed out and beneath that "Educate your son." I hate blatantly sexist campaigns like this which are nothing but male-bashing and again enforcing harmful stereotypes (usually peddled by rabid misandrists) about men being harmful to women and women's worst enemies, and playing into disgusting stereotypes about men constantly preying on women. Both sons and daughters should be educated and protected, and stupid campaigns and slogans like this overlook the issues at hand. And again also conveniently overlooking the fact many women also engage in bad and even harmful or malicious behavior (with both men and women alike) and never calling for them to be held just as accountable as male offenders. Stupid, sexist and ignorant campaigns like this and the Gillette ad do nothing to educate or protect either and only create division and start gender wars. It's just more "men are the problem" BS.

Ranted about this before and am doing so again after seeing this again recently and being reminded how much I loathe it. A meme consisting of a graphic that had the words "Protect your daughter" crossed out and beneath it "Educate your son." This is such a blatantly sexist, misandrist slogan and the fact it's socially acceptable is absolutely disgusting to me. Nothing but male-bashing and not only enforcing harmful stereotypes of men being predators and deviants out to harm women, but also completely ignoring the fact that many women also engage in toxic and harmful behavior against men and also children, animals and even other women. Yet as usual, it's only the men who are told be held accountable. This stupid campaign and slogan makes the genderless issue of violence and toxic behavior into a gendered issue when it's really not, given that both men and women alike can be violent and toxic to one another, and instances of women being so towards men are much higher than believed or reported.

Not only that, but it totally absolves women who commit wrongdoing of any sort of accountability or repercussions when women who commit wrong should be held equally accountable and punished just as severely as men who do so. This slogan brought back bad memories of my extremely abusive female third-grade teacher and female bullies I had when I was going to school. Nobody took the time to educate them to teach them being cruel to another person is wrong.

Both sons and daughters should be educated and protected, not one or the other. This campaign is no different from the stupid Gillette ad, completely ignoring the fact that toxic and harmful behavior is something both men and women do. Completely overlooking the bigger issue at hand and making something into a gendered issue, vilifying one group and giving a free pass to another. This campaign isn't only sexist but arguably fear-mongering in a way too, since it again re-enforces harmful stereotypes peddled by feminists that men are inherently out to harm women and that women by default are incapable of wrongdoing. I absolutely hate it, just as much as the Gillette ad.

It also annoys me to no end when feminists retort when you say to educate and protect both that it's like saying "all lives matter." No it's not, both men and women commit wrongdoings and both need to be equally held accountable when they do so. Yet this stupid slogan only places blame on males and enforces the feminist stereotype of all men being inherently misogynistic and preying on women and that their gender is inherently harmful, and that they need to be educated not to harm women. Even though plenty of women also harm men as well and in much higher numbers then reported or believed, and yet there's no outcry to also educate daughters. It's bigotry and ignorance disguised as activism when it's anything but.

The Beauty Industry

Fills up the pockets of men who make money by ever-changing standards of female beauty. Keeps women insecure, low self-esteem, their value and self-worth forever dependent on their physical appeal (to men). Demands women change how they appear (makeup, shaving, dieting, cosmetic surgeries) to appear prepubescent (lithe, hair free, firm not soft) which is a part of what we identify as 'pedophilia culture'.

An announcement regarding r/misandry and r/mgtow

47 upvotes | August 6, 2021 | by Kuato2012 | Link | Reddit Link

First, the history and context:

The misandry subreddit had existed for quite a while, but it had been captured by misandrists. Sexists got themselves into mod positions, made a few satirical posts mocking the idea of misandry, concluded that misandry doesn't real, and then they locked the whole sub.

That's why I had to make this sub: sexism is a serious issue, and it warrants a non-ironic forum to examine and discuss sexism as it pertains to men. I don't think anyone operating in good faith can deny that. The question of whether misogyny is worse is irrelevant; that doesn't make misandry non-existent or inconsequential. Misandry is a valid sociological concept.

Fast forward to August 1, 2021. Reddit admins announced that dormant subs were all going to be liberated, effective immediately, to free up subreddits that were just being squatted on. That action put r/misandry up for grabs. An enterprising redditor acquired the sub and started setting it back up for its non-ironic purpose, building a mod team and a rule set, etc. Myself and several of the LWMA mods were a part of that effort, as were a few others. I was getting ready to shutter this place and direct you guys to that sub as the main misandry-related subreddit. That's what this announcement was supposed to be.

Today, without any warning, r/misandry has been banned. Apparently, the reason supplied was ban evasion (attempting to recreate a banned community??). Needless to say, that reasoning is utterly baffling and shocking to those of us involved. There is only one clue, which leads to my second point: mgtow.

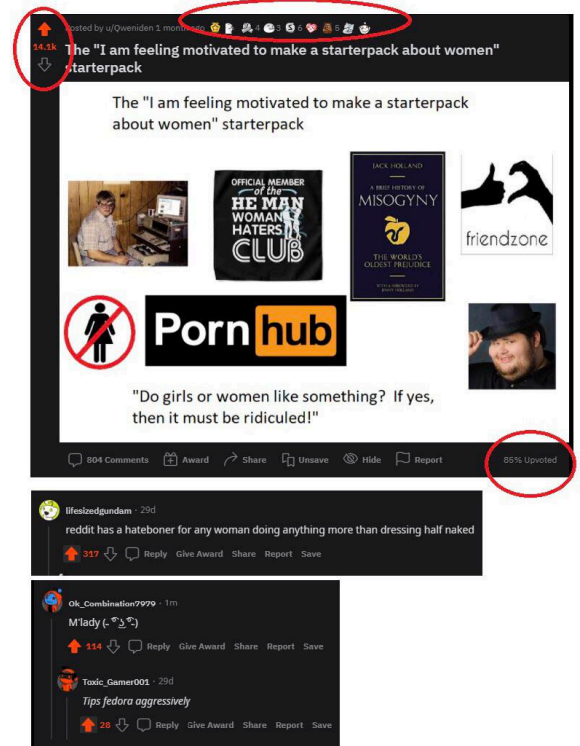

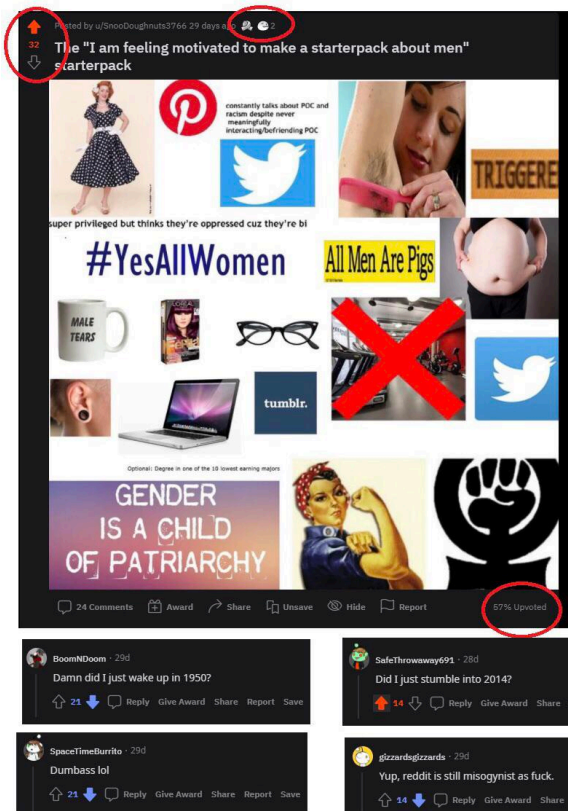

You might be aware that the mgtow subreddit was also banned today, as were many mgtow ban evasion subs. For anyone unfamiliar, mgtow was a men's sub that I'm told contained quite a bit of misogyny. So regarding the ban of r/misandry, the most charitable explanation I can think of is that it was an error; due to the timing of all this, r/misandry was perhaps mistaken for a mgtow ban refuge sub. For the record, it most certainly was NOT that.

While we appeal what appears to be an administrative mistake, let me be very explicit about this sub:

This sub has absolutely no affiliation with MGTOW, nor will it ever. This sub exists to document misandry. Mgtow rhetoric is off-topic and unwelcome here.

I love starter pack memes and that sub in general, but it's so frustrating to deal with their blatant sexism. And I'm positive that I'll get flamed for calling their bs out if my post gets reach that is

I ranted about this a while back on the Left-Wing Male Advocates sub. I remember it trended on social media after Sarah Everard's murder, a graphic that had the words "Protect your daughter" crossed out and beneath it "Educate your son." This is such a blatantly sexist, misandrist slogan and the fact it's socially acceptable is absolutely disgusting to me. Nothing but male-bashing and not only enforcing harmful stereotypes of men being predators and deviants out to harm women, but also completely ignoring the fact that many women also engage in toxic and harmful behavior against men and also children, animals and even other women. "The future is female."

47 upvotes | August 2, 2022 | by Skeleton Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

I've ranted about this before and felt the need to do so again after at work today at my bookstore there was a display for a book signing this past weekend and on it was a mini-biography of the author, talking about how she hopes to empower women with her books. Nothing wrong in and of itself with that, until it got to the last paragraph where it said "the future is female." I loathe and despise this slogan with all of my being and how it's seen as promoting equality and inclusivity is beyond me. It's a blatantly sexist, supremacist slogan and "the future is male" would be no different or better from it. It's no different from white supremacist rhetoric like "white power" and has the same bigoted intentions behind it. It blows my mind this slogan isn't only seen as socially acceptable but the way I've seen some feminists defend it, saying it's meant to promote equality and empowerment and how far women have come. It doesn't promote those things at all, it's an undisputably misandrist and supremacist slogan. It's disgusting and disturbing to me this slogan is seen as perfectly fine and acceptable, and that people genuinely believe there's nothing wrong with it. "The future is male" would be equally bigoted and ignorant, and it's backlash would be well-deserved. Yet this equally hateful slogan gets a pass. I worry for young boys who see this slogan everywhere and are basically being told they have no future and don't matter, in addition to all the other misandrist nonsense that's been so heavily enforced and promoted in society over the past number of years.

I'm posting this here on this sub because without a doubt this is a misandrist slogan, same as "The future is male" would also be misogynistic. Both promote hatred and supremacy, but one is seen as perfectly alright when it shouldn't be.

Salma Hayek's boobs. I had a great dream me and Salma Hayek we're watching a movie in a theater and she had her tits out, she said 'come to mommy' :) I was watching the movie and feeling on her breast, squeezing on her nipples the dream lasted longer than I thought

Mod of FragileMaleRedditor and AgainstHateSubreddits pouring out the hate on a post asking admins for support of suicidal men “Women's liberation is one thing, but the permeation of anti-male sentiment in post-modern popular culture – from our mocking sitcom plots to degrading commercial story lines – stands testament to the ignorance of society. Fair or not, as the lead gender that never requested such a role, the historical male reputation is quite balanced.

For all of their perceived wrongs, over centuries they've moved entire civilizations forward, nurtured the human quest for discovery and industry, and led humankind from inconvenient darkness to convenient modernity. Navigating the chessboard that is human existence is quite a feat, yet one rarely acknowledged in modern academia or media. And yet for those monumental achievements, I love and admire the balanced creation that is man for all his strengths and weaknesses, his gifts and his curses. I would venture to say that most wise women do.”

A UK Government Petition to ban infant male circumcision - "Make Male Genital Mutilation (Circumcision) an offence unless medically required"

45 upvotes | November 30, 2021 | by Itrusttheinternett | Link | Reddit Link

There is a petition on the official UK government petition website which proposes a ban on infant male circumcision. It should prove more popular with the public than not as 91% of males in the UK are not circumcised.

This is a link to the petition: <https://petition.parliament.uk/petitions/598185>

Text of petition reads:

“Make Male Genital Mutilation (Circumcision) an offence unless medically required.

I’m asking the UK Government to criminalise circumcision, no exceptions for Religious circumstances, unless it has to be done for medical reasons, such as an infection. Parents or medical professionals found Circumcising children otherwise should be prosecuted accordingly. More details The fact that FGM (Female Genital Mutilation) is criminalised but MGM isn’t is extremely sexist & wrong.

MGM can have a profound effect on children’s mental health and it is often done without the child’s consent. I am asking that performing or allowing MGM to be performed be made a specific criminal offence. Where a parent is involved the penalties should include losing their child.”

Why should male infant circumcision be banned?

1. It is a medically unnecessary alteration to a healthy body
2. The "health benefits" are highly contestable, and most respected health organisations have decided they do not confer enough benefit to justify the operation.
3. Whilst religious freedom deserves to be respected, we do not allow religious freedom to allow parents to make permanent cosmetic alterations to children's bodies in other context e.g. scarification.
4. The foreskin is the most sensitive area of the penis. In circumcision 30-50% of the total penile skin is removed and 50-80% of the total innervation is removed. This greatly reduces the potential of the penis as a sensory organ.
5. Currently women and girls are protected from non-consensual non-medical genital cutting for any reason. This same protection should be extended for boys and men, improving equality of treatment under the law.
6. When a child becomes an adult they may decide that what was done to their body in childhood does not conform to their current identity. This would be true of people who grow up to not hold the same religious or cultural beliefs as their parents, or hold different values.
7. An individual would still be free to be circumcised, but an age that they can give informed consent.
8. Circumcision is easier as an adult and results in better cosmetic outcomes, and less complications.

The post automatically assumed that the one who posted in the screenshot is an MRA(aka the bad guys) despite the fact that he/she just posted info about male rape victim. Really show how much they care about mens.

The post also didnt censored the username like required by anti brigading rule in Here .And their subreddit dont even have an anti brigading rule,which make the user vulnerable to harassment.

Now to the comment:

Ok, without reading any of the data, I'm gonna guess this is probably technically true, but with a slight caveat.

Most of that 80% probably consists of statutory rape where the male victim is like a year or two under age and the female offender is like a couple years older than he is. And in the majority of those cases (again, this is just me guessing) the male was probably the one to initiate it.

Is it still gross? Yeah. Is it the same as what usually comes to mind when people use the word "rape"? No. Not even close.

-Not only did she admit she didnt read the data. But she then make a much of sexist assumption that bascially say that males rape victim either deserve it or that it is because he is acting slutty.

Actually, it seems like the criteria for made to penetrate goes far wider in scope than any female rape cases. I suspect that if rape went so far as "made to penetrate", there wouldn't be any man that couldn't come to risk of being a rapist.

Observe this table - from a paper they're all basing their research on - there's definitely some things that overlap with the traditional idea of rape, but a lot of these things would become radioactive if a woman claimed they were rape, like:

1. Telling lies, threatening to end the relationship, threatening to spread rumors about you, making promises you knew were untrue, or continually verbally pressuring you after you said you didn't want to
2. Showing displeasure, criticizing your sexuality or attractiveness, getting angry but not using physical force, after you said you didn't want to

Just those two factors make up a third of the men who were made to penetrate. I can't see Misters being happy with a greater majority of men being rapists. Holy shit, the men who would be rapists alone because the girl thought there was a relationship on the cards.

- a MOD then respond to it which bascially said that if you are a men, being blackmailed into sex isnt rape. And the basically ASSUMED out of nowhere that if the same standard is used for women then a lot of men will be rapists, despite the fact that nowhere in the original post said they use different standards for women.

Spotted in the wild. This is becoming more and more common. Toilet options for men are unisex, women need their own. Is this patronizing to women that they can't share?

lots of people talking about wanting to accept afghan refugees but they only say "women and girls" or "women and children" like is their plan to separate families because they have a bizarre racist fear of aghan men and a patronizing acceptance of the women and children

In the UK Parliament, discussing Ukraine

44 upvotes | September 25, 2022 | by DouglasWallace | Link | Reddit Link

During a three-hour debate on Ukraine, not a single mention was made on behalf of the men of Ukraine (Russian men did get a brief mention, for being under-trained cannon fodder).

Yet Wera Hobhouse, the Liberal Democrat Party Spokesperson for Women and Equalities, did give special mention to Ukrainian women. Bear in mind that Ukraine's armed forces are around 900,000 and the number of women included in that number is about 50,000, only 20% of whom are in roles that could put them on the front line.

Women are casualties of war and conflict, but they are very often overlooked. Women, including those who fight alongside men, suffer in a uniquely gendered way.

Then Hobhouse makes it worse by compounding the idea that it is only women who ever suffer from battlefield sexual violence, which is proven many times to be a complete lie:

...By June, the UN human rights monitoring team had received reports of 124 alleged incidents of sexual violence...

Inadvertently, she highlights that it is men who are having it rough, being forced to stay behind in the country. Of course, that is not her focus when she says:

The majority of people fleeing Ukraine are women and children... Refugees are safest when they have options...

Indeed, the women are safe. Safer than disabled and elderly men, even, let alone the men of similar age whom they have been demanding 'equality' with. But Hobhouse hasn't finished dismissing any care of men when she includes in her wrapping-up this statement:

We should not underestimate the substantial trauma that women and children will have suffered.

Not a peep about men. That's what the world has come to expect of misandrists hiding under the label of "Women and Equalities" ministers.

"Girls Run The World"

44 upvotes | January 29, 2023 | by Skeleton_Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

I was at Five Below earlier and among the T-shirts being sold is a shirt with this slogan on it. Do you agree it's misandrist? I think it is, and it's in the same boat as blatantly misandrist slogans such as "the future is female." I feel it sends a message of superiority and not equality and implies that a female-run world would be free of problems and that equality is to be gained at the expense of men and boys, and that's not equal to me at all. I feel "boys run the world" would also be a sexist and misogynist slogan for the same reasons, as it too would also imply gender superiority rather than equality. For true equality to be achieved, the world needs to be run by both good men and women who genuinely care about making the world a fair and just place for all and not just for one demographic. This slogan also kind of plays into the delusional belief that a female-run world would be free of anything bad and that it'll take women in charge to achieve world peace and such, which itself is an incredibly naive viewpoint. I don't think gender has anything to do with being a good or bad person or has anything to do with the world being a better place, and yet slogans like this re-enforce that notion.

"Educated girls are less likely to be exposed to violence."

44 upvotes | April 20, 2023 | by Skeleton_Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

This was written on the side of a baby toy I was putting away at work we got in today and I damn near destroyed the thing reading this. It's from a company called Montessori Practical Skills part of a line called Educating Girls (IIRC), and on one of the side flaps it was going on schools for girls and about the importance of educating girls and how them being educated teaches them important life skills and how educated girls are less likely to be exposed to violence.

I mean, WTF? First off, why even make education a gendered issue? It's a no-brainer education is equally important for both boys and girls, and for many years boys have been badly falling behind due to this exact kind of favorable treatment female students get. Male students overwhelmingly comprise dropouts as a result of this and often have a harder time getting good-paying jobs they can live off of. And the whole part of violence exposure is so asinine to me, so it's okay for boys to be exposed and vulnerable to violence? And boys and men actually are more vulnerable to violence (it doesn't help that society still fails to acknowledge, condemn and take action against violence against boys and men, especially when committed by women and girls, which happens in much higher numbers than many believe or admit). This certainly doesn't help to equally protect them.

I'm really sick of this one-sided "equality" and how boys and men are constantly crapped on like this. So educating boys and seeing to it they aren't exposed to or vulnerable to violence evidently isn't important or not an issue. But wait, we'll get the usual retort of "But the violence men and boys face is disproportionately lower than what happens to women and girls. Violence against women and girls is an epidemic." It just never changes. Ugh.

Ugh these weak feminine betas, they're not even real men and that's so misogynistic!

Wow, so you do admit emphasizing with serial murderers, and invent imaginary reasons (no source on either "locking up" or "traumatizing". traumatizing with what? you blame a literal victim of murder for LETTING a murderer to kill him and others and TRAUMATIZING a murderer by that?) to justify pitying them for nothing. Although it must be only when a murderer is hot and female.

"I'm surprised at how little women hate men, they should hate them more"

42 upvotes | June 17, 2022 | by peanutbutterjams | Link | Reddit Link

Oh, no, don't worry! That's not hate speech; it's within Reddit's content policy.

Explicitly encouraging hate against men is within Reddit's content policy because Reddit admin thinks it's okay to attack men as a group.

Since Reddit's policy self-admittedly boils down to "Remember the human", it's not a stretch to say that Reddit actively dehumanizes men.

"It's just Reddit" - Yes, it's only the world's most popular discussion forum. It's a nexus where people form and grow their political and philosophical perspectives. It's where culture wars are being waged. It's where propaganda is being spread.

Men deserve an even playing field in a forum that's not short form and very social like Twitter or very public like Facebook.

On Reddit your comments don't depend on social status or networks but the quality of what you say - and what we're saying tends to be long-form.

In short, discussion forums are an arena in which men have traditionally and generally both preferred and excelled.

Maybe it's not a coincidence that Reddit mods and admin are to determinedly anti-male and have increased the social aspects of Reddit while also giving mods more ways to create echo chambers and writing misleadingly-titled posts that insist women are the most, and only, harmed gender on Reddit.

The latter post is titled "Prevalence of Hate Directed At Women" and found that 0.3% of comments are hateful towards women. (They didn't measure hate against men.)

The head of the Reddit Safety team concluded with:

Finally, we will also be using this work to identify outlier communities that need a little...love from the Safety team.

So I wrote to them and pointed out that men need love from the Safety team because they are the ones who are acceptably hated on Reddit. And I provided examples, including the above. And I asked why Reddit cares so little about men, with heart and authenticity.

....So if you never hear from ol' peanutbutterjams again, you can probably figure out why.

Note: I copy-pasted my post from LWMA to this sub with permission from a mod.

Great Criticism Of "The Future Is Female"

42 upvotes | December 14, 2022 | by Skeleton_Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

I shared this recently on LWMA and feel it merits repeating here. Found it on Twitter and while it's not often you find anything intelligent or worthwhile on there, this is certainly a strong exception to the rule. It was posted by a woman to boot, who's right on the money with this post about the God-awful "the future is female" slogan:

"Lets start by banning "The future is female" slogan. Such a hateful, arrogant, ignorant and divisive narcissistic slogan-it is loathesome."

I couldn't have put it any better. I'll add to this it's blatantly misandrist and exclusionary, and to top it all off promotes anti-male genocide seeing as the person who coined it literally advocated for reducing the world's male population to 10%. I wonder if people who use this phrase are even aware of it's genocidal roots? It shouldn't just be banned, it should be outright outlawed and illegal. I don't approve of it anymore than I do "the future is male" which is equally sexist and supremacist. All hate speech is equally harmful in my book and both of these phrases meet the definition of hate speech.

"Social isolation isn't a factor in guys struggling to have sex." One tweet later: "if you want to have sex, start by making friends."

Hating on men isn't a bad thing. Men have oppressed women since we learned to walk on 2 feet, women are right to be upset about that.

If feminism stops naming the problem (men) then it becomes a useless movement without substance. Women in the West are still oppressed by domestic violence, human trafficking, objectification, unrealistic beauty expectations and the list goes on. Trust men and they will revert our society back to an Ancient Greek style patriarchy in no time. Men only do what's best for them; it's time women start doing the same.

You just dismiss all the problems I listed lmao. If there is demand there will always be a market. The unrealistic beauty expectations harm women, not men. I've never "shaked my butt half naked" but your assumption that I did/generalisation of all women shows your true misogynistic nature that can't be changed.

This is trending on Twitter right now. How stupid and ignorant. I don't agree with the abortion ban but as usual, we have feminists trying to get revenge against men as a whole and using this as an excuse to demonize all men. I hate this and am so sick of it, and also for Twitter for letting this garbage trend in the first place. I wouldn't approve of #ARightWomenShouldLose, either.

Before they went down that terrifying path, the probably could have found girlfriends. They set themselves up for rejection by insisting on trying to date women who don't want them. If they actually tried to seek out women that are into Fedoras and don't care about hygiene, they would have more success. The homecoming queen who went on to go to Harvard and became a successful attorney doesn't want an unemployed slob who talks about himself in the third person when attempting to flirt with someone. Posted this on LWMA after seeing it earlier on Instagram. I find this pretty offensive, it's basically playing into the stereotypes that men by nature are controlling and only interested in domination and are incapable of showing care and affection. And as usual, re-enforcing the delusional feminist notion that more women are needed in control of the world to nurture it when this is nonsense because we all know gender is irrelevant to a person's leadership skills. Men are absolutely capable of being affectionate and caring as well as protective, and there's women who are anything but these things. This comes off as more "men bad, women good" propaganda that's meant to divide men and women. Another harmful anti-male stereotype that needs to be broken.

First, I will concern the article

Archive: <https://ghostarchive.org/archive/6FzXM>

Last year, I was sitting butt naked in a German sauna with various men of various ages and sizes. I was at my local gym; that evening the swimming pool was inaccessible as there were women taking aqua aerobics classes there.

One man complained about this as we sat in the sauna.

He mocked the women, trying to draw chuckles from us. He said they needed to be assisted in moving their asses. He insinuated they were infants, or physically disabled and in need of guided care. I saw them as mothers and women with weight problems taking one damn hour for themselves to work on their health. They deserved those classes, that space in the pool, and that self-care.

I looked over at the man (carefully, because I didn't want to look like I was staring in a sauna and cause people to get the wrong idea) and saw he was overweight, I had to bite my tongue to not blurt out: "Hey you look like you need such a class, buddy!"

Then I realized: most of the time I've heard a woman being criticized or shamed about her weight, it's nearly always been a man doing it. And not only that, he's been overweight himself or struggling with this issue.

Psychologists describe 'projection' as one person projecting their feelings, desires and opinions onto others as a defense mechanism.

Within a patriarchy, mediocre men project on women they encounter.

Fast forward to a few months ago, I announced I was pregnant to a relative of my partner. He chimes in almost immediately with "Ha ha, how are you going to manage with that weight in the summer time?!"

He may have seen it as a friendly dig, but I saw it as not only a limp fisted attempt at humor doused in misogyny. But also, I saw he was actually speaking about himself. I wanted to ask him how he manages with his huge beer belly in the summer heat, but settled for cutting off contact.

I've been gifted with being skinny all my life. Even pregnant I resemble a watermelon thief with my skinny arms and swollen belly. I've had zero issues with any weight I've gained; every kilo is good for my baby.

First she go on a babbling rant about a men who make a (really offensive) joke. Note how in her article, she never said to him that it is offensive, and she acknowledge that he may seen it as a joke, but SOMEHOW she gone from that to the conclusion that men only criticized women because they are bad themselves.

She ended it by wishing for them (fat men) to have a heart attack

I've also grown up watching my mother and other people I love struggling with their weight, counting calories, fretting about what people think, taking abuse and being shamed for something that they feel helpless about. And usually by men who themselves looked like they were not many years away from heart attack.

Muh evolution, Muh science (sexist standard):

Why are women shamed by fat men for having weight? It's projection. Women naturally have bodies that hold more fat, which makes sense in terms of evolution. The male body is more muscular and from an evolutionary perspective isn't supposed to be fat.

More sexist trope:

The funny thing is, women aren't the gender that actually acts slutty or loose.

Men pay for sex; they need it more than women.

Men want sex so bad they spike women's drinks and recently have even started injecting victims in nightclubs.

Men harass and catcall women on the street.

They sexually assault and rape girls and women regardless of age, clothing, or circumstance. Men make laws to force women to cover up because they can't control themselves.

Men have religions that cater to their sexual needs, giving him access to a wife, making it her duty to have sex and to have his babies.

She is often bound by chastity, yet he is free to be the real slut. How many women have gone their whole lives without having an orgasm?

Men strive to have sex, to be desirable. This is for most women, a given. We are mostly desired, pursued and offered sex.

Who are the real sluts if men are always doing the pursuing?

Regardless of what country or which time in history, the patriarchy is unable to escape one cold, hard, fact: a man will never have the intrinsic biological value a girl or woman naturally has. She is not loose or promiscuous, he is.

The article end with a conspiracy theory (Yes, the patriarchy is always watching, that is why you are allowed to make a website that ban all men and spreading open bigotry without problem)

The patriarchy thrives on lies and projections. Once you wake up to it you start to see it everywhere. And only then you can start the work of dismantling it.

Comment:

"Women is valueable by birthright":

Imagine hobbling someone, then beating them in a race just to turn around and tell them you won because you are inherently superior.

Patriarchy is a lie that is so weak that it needs centuries of control, violence and exclusion uphold and enforce it. It needs constant justification, Which is why anytime a woman has power or confidence men go absolutely nuts to take her down.

The best thing women can do is realize the value that is theirs by birthright. Men rigged the game in their favor from top to bottom, and still women rise. But just be aware because they will continue to find ways to stop us from fully knowing and understanding this. When you raise an animal in a cage it doesn't grow as large. Men will measure you in your cage and tell you that is as big as you can get. Don't listen to them! [3 likes]

And also,note how their definition of "the patriarchy" changed every time,the last time it was men saying that they will succeed because they are inheritantly superior,and now it is men telling women they succeed because THEY are superior?

Ok now to reddit.

-Comment CALLING FOR A CURFEW OF MEN upvoted in the hundred,also a bunch of sexist trope (men only want to rape women)

Patriarchal societies are run by man-children who preach about accountability but only when it suits them. You should see how many men agree with a mandatory curfew for women for their own so called safety but would call you a tyrant if you suggested the same thing for men. Personally, I believe when it comes to curfews men should have one. Who makes the streets unsafe for women and children? Men. so why must their targets adapt?

Heaps of men want rape to be legal as long as the man didn't violently beat her so that victims won't get killed afterwards but would call the death penalty for proven rapists too harsh and they need to be rehabilitated instead.

Men are offended by pink taxies for women only, anti-rape trousers designed by women for women because " what about men ?? ! "

Even women that aren't their wives or relatives men want to have control over, one dude thought he was being the Alpha by recording women in their bikini's on the beach berating them saying they shouldn't wear micro bikini's in front of children. The dude got fired when the video went viral but this is a small example of what men would do if they have free reign over a womans existence.

Men are not your allies and women need to stop mistreating other women to be liked by men because if men had their way then your future wouldn't go beyond the kitchen. [+180]

First of all, not asking for her permission to have a baby cannot be anything but rape. Second of all, no one has a right to define what a 'real man' is. Every man is free to decide for him what being a man is about.

This idea that a "real man" forces his wife to have his kids - that a "real man" is a rapist - is just as much misandry as the crap that feminists say.

the patriarchy has set it up so men are in charge and that they call all the shots and can't do anything wrong, women and girls are still oppressed. Look at world leaders, how many of them are women? Most are balding middle aged white men. This means that we have a system where men are deemed to be right and women are wrong boys are often treated like they can't do anything wrong men like power and control and they like to dominate. Having a young girl at their beck and call excites them because they hold all the cards.

I'm hopeful that with the younger generations new parenting styles and teaching boys that they are not immune to the law and need to treat girls and women with respect we will start to see a change

[After I pointed out that the above comments were divorced from the reality of the male experience:]

It seems rather that you may be ignorant to the female experience living in a male dominated world.

most men are violent sexual deviants

[after I asked how the above comment was acceptable:] Can't be a controversial statement if it's not wrong ☐

The majority of men do this [groom underage women]

I believe most men are hidden pedophiles

So why doesn't [grooming underage boys] happen from women???

And people wonder why male abuse victims seem scarce and don't want to be vulnerable. "There are resources! There are safe spaces!" Nope, the only truly safe spaces I've found are with individual therapists. All the rest have just warped into circlejerks about how all men are predators and all predators are men.

I didn't call anyone names or resort to personal attacks, but guess whose comments were removed, and whose were allowed to stay up. I guess male childhood abuse survivors are just supposed to "man up" and go fuck ourselves. Heaven forbid we have the very feelings and boundaries that these support groups claim to celebrate.

Downplaying False Accusations

40 upvotes | April 5, 2023 | by Skeleton_Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

I recently ranted about this on LWMA and feel it definitely merits repeating here and especially with it being an example of accepted and enforced misandry. I hate so much how false accusations are constantly downplayed and trivialized to the point of being thought of as a non-issue and are sometimes outright laughed at. Misandrists have the nerve to claim false accusations either never happen or are very rare, which is beyond ignorant and harmful. Even if there's some truth to that, it doesn't make it any less devastating for innocent men and boys who've been falsely accused and were punished without due process. It certainly doesn't erase that it can very well happen and especially in today's climate. It hits me hard on a personal level as I remember years ago in elementary school when a female student accused me of spitting on her (which I swear I didn't do) and I almost got beat up in the schoolyard over it by other students who were quick to gang up on me and not get the facts straight. I got lucky that day and avoided being seriously hurt, but other boys and men who've been falsely accused haven't been so fortunate. You can imagine how personally triggering and upsetting it is to hear false accusations downplayed or to hear phrases like "believe women" when I was nearly a victim of a female who lied about me doing something wrong to her.

I'm reminded of not long after MeToo became a frenzy how people were mocking the #ProtectOurMenAndBoys hashtag and outright bashing people suggesting men and boys should be protected. Innocent ones surely should be and deserve to be separated from ones who are genuinely guilty. It's incredibly harmful to suggest otherwise. It's bad enough men were (and still are) being slandered so much but boys as well? That's just downright evil to slander boys. It's so worrying for young boys growing up in today's climate seeing the rampant misandry and how any violence or ill will against them has been trivialized so much.

Men and boys who are innocent should absolutely be protected and defended, and unfortunately misandrists want to do everything they can to see to it that doesn't happen and to eliminate due process. I'm hopeful the Johnny Depp case has shined some much-needed light on this, about the importance of due process and weeding out the innocent and genuinely guilty.

This is both ridiculous and blatantly misandrist. Just imagine the uproar there'd be if #MakeaWomanAngryIn5Words was trending, it'd immediately be decried as misogynistic and action would be promptly taken to stop it from trending. But as usual it's okay for men to be hated on with hashtags like this. I'm sick of this divisive, hateful BS. If anyone needed any proof that misandry is seen as something socially acceptable in society and not seen as a problem when it's just as bad and unacceptable as misogyny, this is it among several other things. This is every bit as bad, bigoted and wrong as if the hashtag mentioned women. You know for a fact if it mentioned women the uproar would be tremendous, and rightfully so. It should be just as much for men but as usual, no action being taken because of how acceptable misandry has become in recent years. I'm so fed up of it.

Tired Of Hearing About "Male Domination"

39 upvotes | December 29, 2022 | by Skeleton_Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

I ranted about this a few months back on LWMA and feel it bears repeating here, after seeing a book at work earlier and how a blurb on it mentioned something a "male dominated industry." It's so annoying to hear from misandrists constantly about how the world and society and some industries have always been male-dominated and still is and their usual whining. The world and society at large has never been dominated by men or even women for that matter. Much of civilization was largely built and shaped by men who rose up to help do so but it was never outright dominated by them. For such a male-dominated society, men sure don't have much luck when it comes to male victims of things like domestic abuse, rape, sexual harassment/assault, etc. having much in the way of help or resources, and also how men are the only ones who've ever been required for conscription and how badly boys do in schools and comprise the vast majority of school drop-outs. Also how we practically never hear about end violence against men campaigns or anti-male sexism ever being recognized or condemned.

The world and society is run by both men and women in positions of power, some who earned it and some who didn't, some who are good and some who aren't. But acting like societal problems are largely a male issue is both insulting and ignorant, as well as beyond irritating to constantly hear. Hearing misandrists whine about the world being male-dominated is just another way they like to vilify men and blame them for all that's wrong in the world, and not looking at the bigger picture. Also another way of how they expect and demand special and favorable treatment because of gender. It's another way of deflecting from actual issues at hand. Men and women alike both face their own challenges and hurdles, and they're not due to the world and society being run by men.

"Sexist hate must end with men."

38 upvotes | July 18, 2022 | by Skeleton_Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

I posted this on Left Wing Male Advocates earlier. A recent ad put out by the EE mobile network, claiming that ending sexism isn't women's problem to solve and all sexist hate must end with men. How horribly stupid and ignorant, this ad is just as ridiculous as the Gillette ad back in 2019. Sexism goes both ways and both men and women alike can be horribly sexist to one another, but as usual this is made into an issue that only affects women and men being the only ones who perpetrate sexism. Just as many women are sexist towards men but of course that completely gets ignored and brushed aside. How ironic and hypocritical to attack sexism with more sexism. I'm sick and tired of the male-bashing and misandry being seen as not only acceptable but something to be encouraged. Misogyny and misandry are both awful and the latter is long overdue to be recognized and condemned just as much as the former, but with stupid ads like this it'll just continue to be ignored. As usual, this also absolves women of their responsibilities which are equally shared with men to bring about positive societal change, which won't be achieved as long as it's only men who are blamed and vilified.

I have found that the modern dating scene is a hellscape of narcissistic "grrrrl power" predators who hate men but still like to get fkd from time to time.

Obviously it can't be EVERY woman, but it's enough that I'm just done trying.

If a woman worth my time is dropped into my life serendipitously, so be it. But no more effort from me.

Women have just stopped trying to take the moral high ground. Doesn't mean men are any less scummy than they were a few decades ago.

Men's shittiness isn't limited to the dating scene. So, no, I'm not implying that at all.

I'm not sure if that article should make me laugh or cry

<https://www.salon.com/2022/11/04/elon-musks-blue-check-debacle-his-brain-has-been-broken-by-w-hiny-incels/>

I assume most of you know who Marcotte is. She's one of the early players the gender culture war we have today. Yet this article is probably the dumbest shit she ever said (yet) in her whole career.

She's basically blaming the Twitter Blue Checkmark debacle on...incels? Regardless of how you feel about Elon Musk and Twitter right now, this is just dumb. This has so many layers on dumbness I'm not even going to bother explain why, because this is self-evident to any people with at least half a neuron working.

"But if you listen to the perpetually aggrieved right-wing dorks who make up Musk's fan base, you'd think the blue check mark is a trophy being handed out by the Holy Order of Sex-Having Woke Elites. "Elite," of course, is defined not by someone having real power or money in the world, but by the parlance of right-wing resentment. Which is to say it's mostly about incel or incel-lite dudes who obsessively fear that liberals are cooler than they are, a fear that gets reinforced by their own suckiness and also because liberals would rather pull their own fingernails out than have a conversation with them."

Why am I sharing this? Feminists write dumb shit every day. What makes this one stand out?

It stands out because it makes transparent the way feminists are dehumanizing unattractive men. It's not tongue-in-cheek. Marcotte wouldn't have written that if she didn't think it to at least some extent. This is why I said I'm unsure if I should laugh or cry. As an unattractive man, it hurts especially knowing that the Left isn't supposed to praise social hierarchies based on attractiveness.

"All of this only lends credence to the theory that libertarianism largely exists as an ideology because social miscreants get attached to the idea that money should matter more than social skills or reputation."

Hey, how about a world where neither money nor social skills matter and instead everyone is treated with dignity? No? Ok nevermind.

We're in the 2020's. Social darwinism has become left-wing apparently.

What does feminism have in common with the KKK?

Tired of women apologizing for men's bad behavior

Ughhh. I was just in line at the grocery store, putting a bit of distance between myself and the next person, and an older man in a motorized cart BUMPED INTO me and asked loudly, "Are you in line?" I said yes, and he said, "It doesn't look like it!" At this point people were starting to watch, and I just said, "Well, I am," and tried to ignore him.

The line was moving slowly, and when I got a little closer to the checkout, he again asked loudly, "Should I just go ahead of you?" I repeated that I was in line, and he said, "Well, you're not moving!" I explained that I was putting six feet of distance between myself and the next person in line, and he rolled his eyes and called me a bimbo. When I finally got to the checkout, the cashier, a young woman who was clearly mortified, whispered, "Sorry he's so rude." I was like, "Don't be! It's not your fault!" I was furious. (Not at her, obviously.)

This is not the first time this has happened. Several times since the pandemic started, I've watched wives, girlfriends and strangers apologize on behalf of rude men. They shouldn't have to apologize. Men should be held accountable for their behavior.

I don't know what should be done about this. I'm just really pissed off.

Most of the things men complain about as sexism are really vestiges of sexism against women.

Domestic abuse by women goes unreported/uninvestigated because women are viewed as weaker. Men have issues in custody disputes because society believes that women are better caretakers.

I hate that teenage girls are indoctrinated into a feminism which teaches them to do everything the patriarchy would teach them anyways, with a slightly adjusted attitude. You should wear lipstick and eyeliner... Bc it's a weapon!! You can ride that dick and still be a feminist!! You should have violent sex and have men control you sexually - bc kink is so hot and liberating. And we end up with an entire generation of young women fully indoctrinated into coercive femininity, & thinking they are somehow liberating themselves or serving the revolution. Here's a hint: if your brand of feminism is telling you to do all the shit misogynistic society tells you to do, and the only difference is how you're supposed to feel about it, nothing has changed. The patriarchy doesn't care how you feel. Men don't care how you feel as long as you're wearing makeup and fucking them.

What this world can do to autistic men.

36 upvotes | October 21, 2022 | by Advanced-Poem2785 | Link | Reddit Link

I'm a 33 year old autistic with P.T.S.D., general anxiety disorder and massive depressive disorder who was raised by a toxic single mother, who from the time I was 7, tried drilling into my head that men are scum and can't be trusted. However everything I've seen in my life has taught me that it's the opposite. To be clear, I don't hate women, I'll hate individuals based on their personality or actions but I definitely don't trust women. As a result I don't hug women (even family), I don't help or approach women, I absolutely don't date, when out for a jog I'll cross to the other side of the street if a woman is coming my way. I actively avoid female staff in stores if possible and I step out of the lift (elevator) as soon as possible if a woman enters, I don't even interact with women on social media if I can avoid it. Being a white autistic male basically makes me public enemy No.1 in today's society and everything I do as soon as I walk out my door is run through a filter of self preservation against false accusations of sexual assault in a world where being polite and saying "good morning" can be responded to by the screeching of "I hAvE A bOyFrIeNd!!!" Or "GeT aWaY FrOM mE!!" As if I was some lovecraftian mutant that had emerged from the sewers to infect others with terrible diseases and steal small children from their homes. I wasn't always like this... however after a lifetime of being mistreated because of my gender and autism, being constantly refused even a return call for my dream job (mens suiting and styling) after 30+ attempts because they prefer female staff and being unable to make small talk while so much as trying on a new pair of shoes without the female staff bringing up some unrelated anecdote about their boyfriend or husband because they assume I'm interested in them I've become the broken, skittish and distrusting hermit that I am now, working a underpaid and understaffed warehousing job that makes me even more miserable than I already was.... something needs to change in the world but I can't see it happening any time soon.

So Tired Of Hearing About "Systematic Misogyny"

36 upvotes | October 28, 2022 | by Skeleton Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

It's so annoying and tiresome to hear this, and especially when you bring up issues that affect men that have largely gone unnoticed or unhelped, and that misandry isn't recognized or condemned enough. You get the usual misandrist retort of "But misandry isn't systematic like misogyny is and men have never experienced what women have." It's just another way of deflecting from male issues and ignoring the fact men and boys also have struggles and disadvantages. They'll even have the nerve to say misandry doesn't exist. Misogyny and misandry both exist and both are as bad as each other. I fail to see how misogyny is systematic considering the numerous disadvantages men and boys face. Like how badly male students do in schools, the lack of shelters to help abused men, the failure to still acknowledge men being victims of domestic abuse and also things like rape, sexual assault/harassment, etc. and of course "Believe all women" which totally does away with due process and has seen numerous innocent men imprisoned or even killed over being falsely accused. And of course the fact it's only men who still have to register for conscription and can face legal repercussions for not doing so. And who can forget the incredibly discriminatory Gillette ad or the "educate your son" meme. Some systematic misogyny :/

Men and women both face struggles and hardships, and women definitely didn't have it so easy so long ago. But it's beyond tiresome to hear about misogyny being systematic and men not experiencing the same prejudices and hardships because it's supposedly not systematic. This is just another way rabid feminists like to deflect and detract from male issues ever being addressed or taken seriously. I definitely don't believe misogyny is systematic and while it exists, a lot of the times it's misused for misandrists to claim victimhood and deflect from issues affecting men and boys.

Another example of twitter being stupid and letting people like this post. she seriously thinks this.

Why isn't sex-selective abortion against males a viable political strategy for places like Afghanistan or Pakistan?

I tried looking this up but couldn't find anything about this idea, only how these countries have issues with it in the other direction. The women in these countries cannot live alone, do not have freedom of thought, autonomy, and can get killed just about anything that isn't subservient. I'm not trying to open up for a slippery slope of this tactic at all; clearly these countries are in extreme circumstances that are way, way, WAY worse than any effects of sexism in Western countries. I'm not trying to say that just because the US has issues, for example, that we should do that here. But imagining this horrible oppression to the ruling male class, I just don't understand why this isn't a good option to reshape society for them to live like actual human beings with full lives. If 80% are women, they could then overtake their oppressors and rewrite laws to include women.

Men And Women Are Both Sexist To Each Other

35 upvotes | January 26, 2023 | by Skeleton_Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

I hate it so much when misandrists claim women can't be sexist to men when this is so blatantly untrue. Sexism is wrong in all of its forms and women can absolutely be sexist against men as much as men can be against women, but as usual female on male sexism is always brushed aside and shrugged off because it's supposedly not "systematic" (a favorite term of misandrists when deflecting from sexism men face). Sexism is a two-way street and both men and women can be terribly sexist and discriminatory against one another, but as usual, misandrists like to downplay the struggles and challenges that men and boys face and try to make it seem like anything affecting them is trivial and not worth worrying about. Which goes to show they don't care about equality one bit. It's actually pretty disgusting and sexist against women too, because they're essentially exploiting hardships that women also face and using them to further their own bigoted agenda. It's a huge slap in the face to women who actually have put up with sexism and misogyny.

This is such a harmful narrative that needs to be challenged and changed. Men can and do experience sexism from women just as much as the other way around and it's disgusting and wrong either way. Contrary to what misandrists always love to claim, misandry does exist and is not only real and a serious problem, but one that's overlooked and as long as it's ignored it'll only continue to do more harm. Misogyny is rightfully condemned and misandry needs to have the same done for it. Both are horrible and disgusting. One has the right to their own beliefs and opinions, but not their own facts and it's an undeniable fact that misandry is real and that men can and do experience sexist treatment from women just as much as the other way around.

"Women And Children"

35 upvotes | March 24, 2023 | by Skeleton_Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

I ranted about this fairly recently on LWMA, and felt it was appropriate to share here as well after seeing something that reminded me of it. I hate the the whole "women and children" mentality that's so ingrained in society and has been for decades, and of course the children part naturally is of course only referring to girls. Men should be protected and valued as much as women and children, and their rights and safety are every bit as important. But for so long it's been ingrained in society that men are expendable and there's such a "whatever" attitude towards them whereas women and children (girls moreso for the latter) are always made a priority no matter what. It reminds me last year during the invasion of Ukraine we were constantly hearing about the women and children, and of course nothing about the men who are equally vulnerable and endangered. UN Women is always posting ridiculous, terribly misandrist garbage like this all the time on their social media (how on Earth is that organization not a blatant hate group?).

It's disheartening and also very worrying for young boys who are exposed to this, to see such indifference and carelessness towards men and them thinking when they become men they'll be not worth caring about. We wonder what there's a male mental health crisis and the suicide rates tend to be overwhelmingly male. This sort of societal rhetoric certainly doesn't help.

Manhood = brutally assault and murder women. All men see women as subordinate. Men are all violent.

Violence against men belittled into "having fun" by misandristic "researcher".

33 upvotes | June 9, 2021 | by DistrictAccurate | Link | Reddit Link

https://www.huffpost.com/entry/what-this-researcher-discovered-after-years-of-studying-matriarchal-societies_n_5d9f60bfe4b06ddfc515f767

A hatesub shared this.

What a great article by someone who calls violence and torture "fun". Doesn't surprise me, as 70% of students report at least some enjoyable experiences regarding school violence. It is fun, just not to the primarily (or in the places allegedly described in the article, solely) male victims. Who believes having to give all your money to the matriarch who then may hopefully allow you a fair share is "equality". As expected, many things here are either misrepresented, left out or euphemized. Such a system with men would be just as horrible, by the way. That being said, the system we live in is not a male equivalent to what is described there and in fact values the lives of women higher than those of men as well - including the horrible bias and abuse that leads to. Men are not just touched - unlike the women in the article, who are not even that - no, they make up the majority of victims of physical violence, physical bullying, murder, suicide, serious suicide attempts, robbery, physical discipline and forms of cyber bullying including physical aspects (like having videos of your beating shared to humiliate you for getting beaten up). All of this whilst inducing less concern, less guilt attributions to perpetrators, less interventions by bystanders, less ambition to report by bystanders, refusal of help by law enforcement, unfavorable evaluations by mock jurors, less support services, less to no funding, less political attention (UN women etc.), societal ridicule and shaming, lack of equal criminal codes (rape; fgm), and less research whilst the research that is conducted is shown to be subject to biased evaluations as well.

Here is the worst part of the article:

Q: In your description of the Kashi in India, you recount that the love interests of young women can be beaten by her brothers, kidnapped and held prisoner at the home of the woman who wants to enter into a sexual relationship. Isn't this a case of a power relationship that negatively impacts men?

A: (Laughs) What I described there is nothing more than a game among young people. It may seem brutal, but in reality, they're having fun. Sexuality in these societies is experienced as a game. No one tries to make others feel guilty for having the desire to make love. Once a woman becomes infatuated with someone other than her husband, she separates from him, without creating a stir. Monogamy is considered a form of repression against women. They are not polygamous, but they do regularly change partners.

Q: Which in turn influences parenthood.

A: Absolutely. Women have several partners over the course of their lives, so when they do have children, it is not their biological fathers who take care of them, but rather the brothers of the women. Men become the fathers of their nephews and nieces. Of course, if a man requests to play a more significant role in the life of his biological child, the clan will implement a system that grants him that role. But it's the mother's bloodline that counts.

Q: You classify the Tuaregs as a matriarchal society, but women are the keepers of the familial tent, while men spend their days outside. Isn't this just yet another variant of the patriarchy?

A: Not at all. The Tuareg women maintain control of the family finances. Everything men earn outside is brought back to the tent. The oldest woman divides and shares the money in equal parts. She is the holder of the clan's fortune. She is the one who safeguards it, because she represents security, a guarantee. She does not own the house. Tuareg men attest that they give the money to the women because they are the givers of life and doing so secures their future.

Women at the same time, are never subjected to such gruesome treatment:

Q: Does prostitution exist in matriarchal societies?

A: No! Not in the least. The same is true for rape. Women, their sexuality and their power to give birth are respected. No man would dare touch a woman against her will. The clan system protects each woman.

No idea what kind of argument this article was supposed to be, but nothing in this article is desirable and it is filled with examples of misandry that are ridiculed, belittled, ignored or just combined with claims of equality and peacefulness, hoping that nobody will notice the inconsistency and incompatibility inbetween the given statements. Claiming misandristic communities to be egalitarian, leaving out or twisting misandristic practices as shown in the article as well as misinterpreting and misreporting behavior due to the blatant and substantial biases of the author do not make these places any more desirable or less misandristic - that is, to the extent they even are matriarchies, as many of the statements made are simply incompatible with that claim. Conveniently, one can just redefine the term - or use it to describe a construct that one knows to be far from what people would intuitively believe:

[...] based on a new definition of «matriarchy» as true gender-egalitarian societies. Accordingly, matriarchal societies should not be regarded as mirror images of patriarchal ones, as they have never needed patriarchy's hierarchical structures of domination. On the contrary, matriarchal patterns are socially egalitarian, economically balanced, and politically based on consensus decisions. They have been created by women and are founded on maternal values. This new perspective on matriarchal societies is developed step by step by the analysis of extant indigenous cultures in Asia, Africa, and the Americas.
https://www.researchgate.net/publication/287303726_Matriarchal_societies_Studies_on_in_digenous_cultures_across_the_globe

The same would be true if the genders were reversed - it would be misogyny. I don't care if a patriarch eventually splits the money equally - if his wife has to hand him all the money because she is a woman, that is misogyny. If beating up and torturing women in various ways is considered "having fun" whilst men are protected from any unwanted touch, that's misogyny.

Women in the US and EU are absolutely allowed to and should earn their own money. In fact, young women outearn young men, which might be evident of our efforts having been overblown and there might be needs for readjustment in certain areas whilst others need more targeted approaches to actually benefit - not sure. Women receive special scholarships and have special opportunities like safe havens, abortions and adoption laws to deal with unwanted pregnancies despite their usage of or in cases of sabotaged birth control - something even male victims of rape, who are widely not even recognized as such yet, usually do not have access to. Boy's educational deficiencies and biases against them are rarely, if at all, addressed and the higher rates of physical bullying against boys as well as its widespread enjoyment by peers make school an overall unsafe institution to male students - something that is, despite its inevitable consequences on health and opportunities, widely ignored. Quotas and special equal opportunities officers provide further evidence of how much society cared about women earning their own money and having equal opportunities in a variety of companies and fields. Often criticized is that the implementation of these efforts is regularly sexist, with men in certain places being denied to run and vote on equal opportunities officers (who widely ignore or deny the widespread and deadly discrimination against men) over the belief of them being biologically incapable of experiencing inequality as well as to form an unbiased opinion on this topic as a whole, women receiving preferential treatment even in places where they make up 80% of employees/students as well as quotas being abolished once they would - or never even being implemented in ways they could - support men. Whilst these efforts are exclusionary of men, there are barely any efforts at all to address the specific issues of men either.

Thanks to the hatesub for providing me with yet another opportunity to point all of this out and yet another piece of evidence on their unsaturable desire to spread deadly misandry whilst citing interviews with blatantly biased authors. What a trustworthy source.

Germany: 79-year-old stalker found not guilty because she suffers from "classic love mania".

33 upvotes | February 18, 2022 | by lightning_palm | Link | Reddit Link

Reposting here as it wasn't an adequate fit for r/LeftWingMaleAdvocates.

She called him daily, made obscene gifts, decorated his car with love messages, or performed nude dances in front of the rectory. Time and time again, she adorned his garden with phallic symbols, like carrots with balloons tied to them. This went on for two decades. The woman from Arnsberg in the German state of North Rhine-Westphalia still waits for him regularly. He has now failed in court.

The pastor claimed that the terror years had significantly harmed his quality of life and had long since led to health issues. He has fought in vain for years to stop his stalker with a slew of criminal charges and lawsuits.

According to psychiatrist Norbert Leygraf of the University of Münster, the woman suffers from "classic love mania" that prevents her from controlling her behavior. She believes she has found her "soul twin," but as a Catholic priest, the latter cannot express his love for her, said the psychiatric professional. He also claimed that the woman's brain impairment harmed her impulse control.

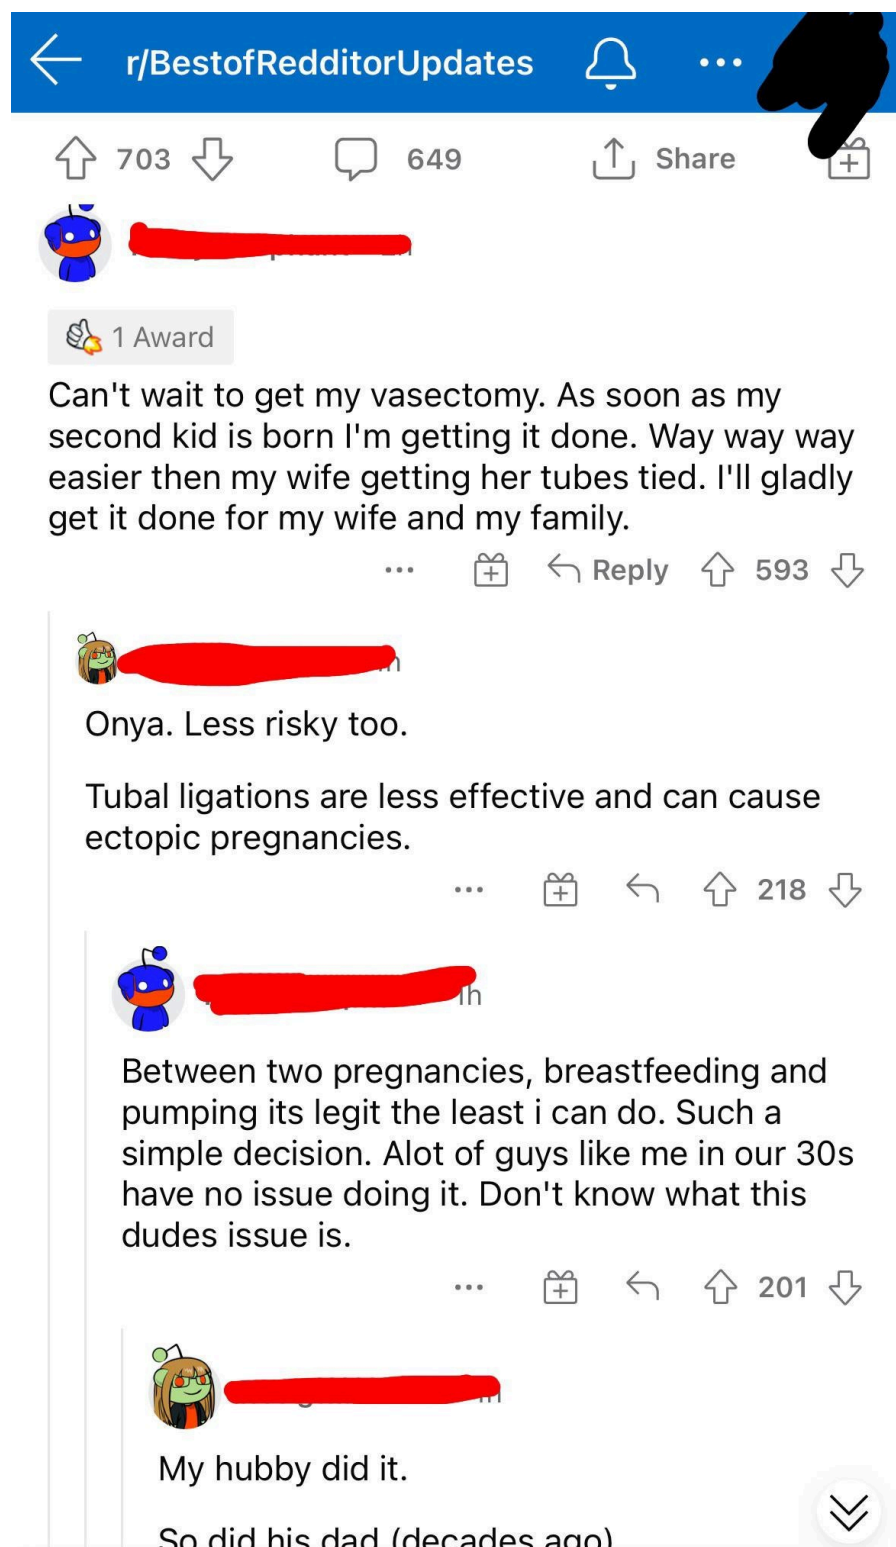

In his statement of reasons for the verdict, the presiding judge expressed his deep concern for the priest's circumstances. They verified the facts of the stalking. "Those who do not act in a self-responsible manner cannot be punished." The woman's delusions were limited to the pastor, which meant that she was not admitted to a psychiatric facility.

The acquittal is not yet legally binding.

Wow what a disgusting POS. Selfish pricks like that and OOP don't deserve their partners. Made me so mad when he was talking about other ways she could change her body for their marriage like it's no biggie but when it comes to him "My body, my choice."

Are you my husband?? He's so keen to get one as soon as this pregnancy is done.

What struck me about OOP is that he "doesn't want to alter his body".

But hey, who gives a fuck about how life altering it is to go through pregnancy, his wife is expected to permanently alter her body to have a baby but he can't get the snip?

I'm all for body autonomy but jaysus Christ OOP is a massive knob.

Love this outlook. Considering how painful IUD insertion is, and how invasive and risky tubal ligation can be, it's nice that you'd take on that responsibility.

This dude wants his wife to shoulder all the burden of pregnancy prevention. That rubs me the wrong way.

You are a better husband than OP! When the option is he gets a simple little outpatient local anesthetic snip or she stays on high levels of hormones, risks getting pregnant and having to face abortion, or has general anesthetic abdominal surgery...

While yes it is his choice, the fact that he's making that choice says a lot about him. And the fact that you're making your choice says a lot about you. Your wife is lucky

Thank you for being a good partner, and not assuming that every single thing to do with preventing pregnancy and pregnancy itself and the side effects and body alterations in doing so.....is only on the woman.

"How To Spot a Dangerous Man Before You Get Involved"

Originally posted this on the Left-Wing Male Advocates sub and got re-directed here.

This is the actual title of a book I noticed at work earlier at my bookstore job when I was going the rounds and noticed it in the personal growth/self-help section. I mean wow, how does is this book NOT blatantly misandrist with it's title? I read the summary on the back and it tells women how to spot predatory men and common ways men prey on women, and more about women's safety as such. As usual, not a peep about men's safety as well in addition. Is the author also going to do a book about how to spot dangerous women and the ways women prey on and harm men? Both men and women are a danger to one another and are capable of the same terrible things but as usual, only the men we have to be wary of.

I'm fed up with this anti-male, fearmongering BS that demonizes men as a whole and fails to acknowledge that women can also be very dangerous, predatory and violent. Towards men, women, children and animals. Why not just write a book telling both men AND women alike how to spot dangerous people? But as usual, it has to be made into a gendered thing.

The book's author is Sandra L. Brown and I'm not sure of the publisher but both should definitely be boycotted.

Cool, now flip the gender roles transandrophobia, misandry against trans men, and finding joy in positive masculinity as a young trans boy

32 upvotes | November 1, 2022 | by moonsnogger | Link | Reddit Link

This is a weird one, but I am just in the mood to hear some uplifting stories I guess. I am trans (ftm) and have one friend whos family I am out to. I have a very conservative and intolerant family myself, so the fact that theirs treats me like an extra son is just the most incredible feeling in the world. They ask me to help carry in groceries, call me masculine terms, and the dad always asks “So... any new girls in your life?” whenever i come round to visit. The brother talks to me like I’m one of the boys. Being trans is not easy at all, both in real life and online. And I’ve seen a whole lot of negativity (albiet often jokingly) directed toward tguys especially. Even in the most lefty feminist spaces. Ive often been told that me transitioning means the world is “loosing another lesbian” or like I’m somehow ashamed of my birthsex. It makes me feel rubbish if im honest. It makes me feel like I’m just trying to take the “easy way out” even though all I’m being is myself. I know its all jokes, but I no longer feel comfortable coming out to people and having the immediate reaction being “ew, so youre a straight man now?”. I know its in jest, but it just feels like transphobia hidden behind a veil of feminist values. I sometimes use mascara to add fake fluff to my face and my sibling says I look like a pedophile or something. I just want to feel like myself.

But having a family like that supporting me, treating me the way I want to be treated... it just feels so nice and comforting. It makes seeing my own younger brother (cis) begin to have the body and voice I desperately want but cant have just a bit easier.

Thats all, man. I love masculinity when its utilized in healthy ways. I cannot wait to finally be myself and have the body I want. I know this isnt really the place for “trans joy” but. I dont know. I guess its just some thoughts I have on the demonization of masculinity whether intentional or not.

This sub is about women's issues, by women, and for women. If you are a man participating in this sub and all you have to contribute in the comments every time is "not all men" or "I am a man and I never do xyz that OP is describing!" and take personal offense to an OP's story or thoughts, then perhaps you should do some introspection about why that is.
I am exhausted by the continuous need for women in this sub in their posts and/or in the comments section to have to clarify "not all men" or "too many men" because random men feel attacked. It is not our job

I just wanna say that chivalry is dead because the terrible perceptions that women have of men have killed it. Like you can't even approach a woman without being thought of as a creep. I just think that it's insane, and it's the reason why men don't hold doors for women or bring flowers to women anymore. Seriously, chivalry is dead because misandrists have killed it with their views of all men being murderers and rapists.

How Come I Never Hear Men Complain About Getting Fetishized?

30 upvotes | July 20, 2022 | by DynamicCrab | Link | Reddit Link

Something you see a lot on women centric subs on Reddit is POC women (especially Asians) complain about getting fetishized by men. " Oh he doesn't really like me for me. He's just treating me like an object ".

But this happens the other way around too? It seems to happen the other way around even more. Tell me I'm wrong. Especially with Latin men.

But I never hear men complain about it lol. Isn't it the same principle here?

[Statement] The admin's response to my post regarding the FDS-founder.

30 upvotes | March 23, 2021 | by DistrictAccurate | Link | Reddit Link

Hello reader and hello admins if someone again falsely reported this post. I hate to break it to you, but they wasted your time.

Unfortunately, this evening I had to delete my callout post on the questionable comments of the founder of FDS and the fact that the admin's response to those was not in line with their content policy.

It contained a list of 120 quotes, plus links to context, made by the founder of FDS.

Just for context, she's still not banned and still mod of subs collectively approaching 200k members. Her statements were amongst the most extreme I had seen in such a consistency over multiple years without proper admin intervention.

Trying to see the good in this, I guess my post was quite strong. Too strong. So strong, that today I received a warning by the admins, that I should stop posting violent content. That's right, violent content. We have subs like fightporn and justice served has a flair called violent "justice", but apparently my post was just too much. No, not even my post, just the link to my post was too much, the link which I put on Leftwingmaleadvocates, and which was soon removed by a mod for reasons I, in light of the context there was at that time (forgetaboutthelonely posting a petition on exactly that topic), kinda disagree with, yet still accept.

Now, jokes aside, of course there were quotes in my post that were removed in a different context before by the admins, otherwise one could not properly address whether it was a consistent behaviour or an exception, yet a) I put them into context and called them out and b) they were needed to properly represent the scope of the issue. I do not believe that the post on everydaymisandry actually violated the terms as it itself was not hateful, let alone violent, yet so far the admins didn't think so either, as it was only the post on lwma they called out (containing a link to the actual post on everydaymisandry and featuring the same quotes in the title as the original post did). A post that, as I said, was removed by a mod quite some time already.

Here's my personal theory on what actually happened: I believe that, among all the reports, the admins don't even get the time to properly look at them, saw the title and ignored the fact that it was quotes from the FDS founder and instead believed it was me making these statements towards the FDS founder. This would say a lot about the current state of affairs and why the quality of moderation on reddit is so inconsistent. Another thing to consider is that apparently there is someone who now randomly falsely reports my content in hopes of exactly this happening again, or who set up a bot to do so...

Or, less likely, someone misunderstood my call to report the quotes to the admins and instead reported my post... Just so you know, whatever link you put into the form is what they will decide on taking action against, so do not report posts that point out quotes you'd like to report. Report using the links of the quotes themselves. Anyway, it is unlikely someone would have reported the LWMA post for that reason, as it was basically just a link to the actual post and those people would've then reported the actual post instead.

Long story short, following the warning by the admins I proactively took the post down for now.

Anyone else sick of men acting like we live in a post sexist world?

When I talk to men about gender issues, especially gender based violence they act like those things aren't issues anymore and if you're discussing it you're complaining about an imaginary problem. "Playing the victim" as it were. I don't know how so many 'good guys' see no issue with women being hurt and oppressed even as women are literally being forced into sexual slavery as we speak in Afghanistan. You can't erase 10,000 years of patriarchy and male social superiority with voting rights and the lily Ledbetter act. Reminds me when people thought racism was over after we elected Obama.

And a great opportunity to remember that FDS actually had the same objective as a banned community, but the rules do not apply to them:

Let's first take a quick look at rainisthelife's other attempts to formate a reactionary sub, because she likes it so much when people are reminded of that. Rainisthelife is not only the founder of FDS, but also of the banned hate-sub TheFairerSex:

[120]:

Lol I think it's funny that you felt the need to wedge in TFS and it's "failure" to someone (Liz) that doesn't even know what that sub was and certainly wasn't a part of it. Liz only joined us with the rise of FDS. Sounds like you've been holding onto quite a grudge and an opportunity for some weird kind of payback about a group of people that really shouldn't concern you. Yikes.

[119]:

[...] I was even with you in the initial comments and it may have been plausible that you didn't actually care about the sub and the history of its existence...right until you brought up TFS, as a reminder to everyone that it failed. Once you did that, your intent was pretty obvious. [...]

Actually, TFS did not only share its objective, as seen in these posts, with FDS:

Objective of TFS:

[111]:

[...] You all really brought this upon yourselves. The tactics on the red pill is why I started this sub in the first place and your hate is actually fueling its growth and drawing like-minded women to us and they're thriving off the advice we give them. And I'm very much real and mean every word I say on here, the fact that this sub tiggers people like you and gives you sleepless nights, has been so worth it. So thank you! Y'all are making this sub grow beyond what I ever imagined it would become! □

[036]:

[...] I love being "equally bad". Because that's what men deserve. And until women use more men and discard them like the trash they are, you idiots will never learn. [...]

Objective of FDS:

[054]:

Actually MGTOW existed much longer than this sub ever did. And actually fueled the creation of this sub. And as long as MGTOW exists, we will continue to treat men like trash and use them for money and free food. Your bitter incel tears about it is satisfying to watch and makes this all worth it. Cry more failure! □

[053]:

[...] Because red pill and MGTOW subs have existed long before we have. And so those man-hating(sic! - she meant women-hating, as seen in the following comment) subs ARE THE EXACT REASON THAT WE EXIST. They came first, we're a reactionary sub. And a justified one. Your tears and opinions about this sub are as irrelevant as you are. We don't care. We will continue to use men to our benefit as we see fit. Cry more!

[055]:

[...] As long as woman-hate subs like MGTOW, redpill and others exist, we will continue to manipulate men as we see fit. [...]

This is quite ironic, considering this statement:

[038]:

Successful men that women want do not waste their time desperately trying to trash women on reddit in some weird circlejerk revenge fantasy, while they later go and cry themselves to sleep every night because no woman wants them. I'm not surprised their ability to formulate logic and level of understanding about their post is as low and borderline non-existent as their attractiveness. Also lmao, I thought their last post about us mentioned how they would stop referencing us in their sub? Lol! Bitter males stay triggered, I guess. [...]

Same founder, same objective to "use", "manipulate" and "treat men like trash"... but wait! I said they share more... yeah, rainisthelife actually copied/crossposted a lot of the posts from TFS over to FDS. I won't copy them word by word and instead just give the post ids so you can look it up if you like:

Sex positivity culture is just women enacting porn scenes without $$$

SEXUAL LIBERATION

Sex positivity is very much about real women enacting porn scenes for men without £££ involved.

And men will still call her a slag and a whore behind her back, the same way they have always done.

The only way a woman can get anything out of the sex positivity culture is if she successfully fetishises her own degradation and gets pleasure vicariously through a stranger's penis. With enough practice she can occasionally orgasm during the worst sex. That's pretty much the best she can hope for. And if she accidentally fucks a man who is a good lover, tough shit because he's not even looking for a "fwb". Don't get attached!

Posted this earlier on Left Wing Male Advocates, and feel it should also be posted here. This was a slogan on a shirt worn by a young female customer at my bookstore job today. The girl looked to be well under the age of 13 at least. What a horrible slogan and what an equally horrible message it sends to girls her age, thinking they can go around insulting boys like this. I hate slogans like this that promote blatant misandry and male-bashing, between this and other similar garbage like "Boys are stupid, throw rocks at them." If a shirt that with either of these slogans replaced boys with girls you know there'd be a massive uproar and controversy. It's bad enough men are bashed and ridiculed in society and how it's become socially acceptable, but now it's extended to boys? Boys who are still so young and impressionable with their whole lives and futures ahead, and they're seeing things like this that are basically telling them they're worthless and deserve to be bashed and hated on? I'm so fed up of this gender wars nonsense and how misandry continues to be swept aside and outright ignored. It's bad enough it's been happening to men so much over the past few years but it's downright disgusting that now the male-bashing is being extended to boys. We wonder why there's a serious male mental health problem when young males see this kind of bigotry against them and nobody does anything to take a stand against it.

Enough About "Systematic Misogyny"

29 upvotes | December 20, 2022 | by Skeleton_Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

I ranted about this before, not too long ago actually, but felt the need to do so again after seeing this stupid term and reminded of how much I'm sick of hearing about it. I don't deny misogyny exists, it does as does misandry, and both are equally terrible. But misandrists claiming that misogyny exists on a systematic level and is a much more pressing issue than misandry is just more of their BS to minimize the fact of misandry's existence and trying to downplay struggles men face.

For misogyny being something that's supposedly systematic, men and boys still face tons of obstacles and disadvantages that misandrists always like to downplay and marginalize. How badly boys do in schools, men still only being required by law to register for the draft or facing legal consequences for not doing so, the "believe all women" mantra which eliminates due process and puts innocent men and boys at risk of being punished for crimes they didn't commit, almost no campaigns to end sexism and violence against men, constant failure to acknowledge men and boys are also victims of female offenders (and can be abused, raped, murdered, sexually harassed/assaulted, etc.), there being very few shelters that help abused or suffering men, etc. And of course only men who do wrong asked to be held accountable but not the same for women who commit wrongdoings when both deserve to equally be held accountable. What about things like the Gillette ad or "educate your son" meme, both of which are horribly ignorant and one-sided. For misogyny being something that's supposedly so systematic, men sure get the short end of the stick.

Women at one point weren't treated as equals for sure and had it difficult in the past (and in places like much of the Middle East it's awful to be a woman there for sure). But misandrists always like to downplay the fact that men and boys also have struggles and inequalities and they also face horrible prejudice and discrimination. Yet bringing up misandry is often scoffed at by rabid misandrists who either insists it doesn't exist or isn't as much of a problem as misandry or isn't systematic like misogyny is. It's just another way misandrists and feminists like to play victim and deflect from actual equality for both men and women. Misandry and misogyny both exist, are as bad as one another, and both are equally problematic. Thing is misandry for far too long has gone unaddressed and it needs to be as much so as misogyny. Either neither is systematic or both are, and one has been allowed to be more rampant and problematic than the other largely because it continues to go ignored.

You see how men still have a choice?

← Reply

Minimum parental investment in action. Men can and have always been able to decide to dump the women they impregnate and their children and have no responsibility for the lives they create and change. But this is, truly, evil and misogynistic. There is no greater drain on women's time and energy than raising the children of men who lack empathy and regard for human lives. When men choose to abandon the mothers of their children, truly that is one of the roots of all misogyny because it forces the woman to become responsible for the child.

Men have a choice, but there's only one moral choice. It's time to start holding men accountable as a society.

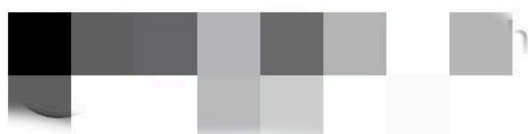

Men you don't take the role of fathers aren't men and we as a society should shame them and disown them as friends and family members.

What would be a good response when your point is derailed by a man saying “not all men” ? [\[Discussion\]](#)

Hey all,

So I frequently speak about gender inequality issues with others and it seems both men and women like to engage in the topic. However, I feel that whenever I speak to men about the oppression of women and the dangers and struggles that come with womanhood, I am met with “not all men are like that” or “stop generalizing all men” or my personal favorite “I feel like you’re talking about me, I’m not like that”

Women's Aid CEO on emergency petition to prevent gender neutral responses to domestic abuse.

26 upvotes | May 7, 2021 | by DistrictAccurate | Link | Reddit Link

Farah Nazeer, chief executive of Women's Aid, said "Today, we are launching an emergency petition to the government, because we are seeing established women-led domestic abuse services lose local authority funding. This has to be stopped before it leads to more women and children dying. Our local Women's Aid member services around the country are saving the lives of women and children every day, and many have been running for decades. The decision by some local authorities to commission 'gender-neutral' services disregards the evidence that women experience the most severe domestic abuse; are more likely to be killed by their abuser; and that women experiencing domestic abuse need access to women-only support. Women need to trust a service and feel safe to be able access support, especially if they are leaving their home to move into a refuge with their children. Many will be living with long-term trauma, and will need specialist support to rebuild their lives.

The domestic abuse bill reaches report stage today in the House of Lords, and although the bill requires councils to fund accommodation for survivors, nowhere does it mention the words 'women's refuges'. Coupled with the current government plan to separate domestic abuse from the Violence Against Women and Girls strategy, this will only serve to encourage more 'gender neutral' responses to domestic abuse. 91% of domestic violence crimes that cause injuries are against women, and three women every fortnight are being killed by a current or former partner in the UK. Women-led domestic abuse services are under threat, and there will be severe consequences for women and children if we do not stop this now."

<https://www.womensaid.org.uk/international-womens-day-womens-aid-launches-petition-to-require-local-authorities-to-fund-womens-domestic-abuse-services/>

The petition: <https://petition.parliament.uk/petitions/577718>

"Petition: Require local authorities to fund specific domestic abuse services for women

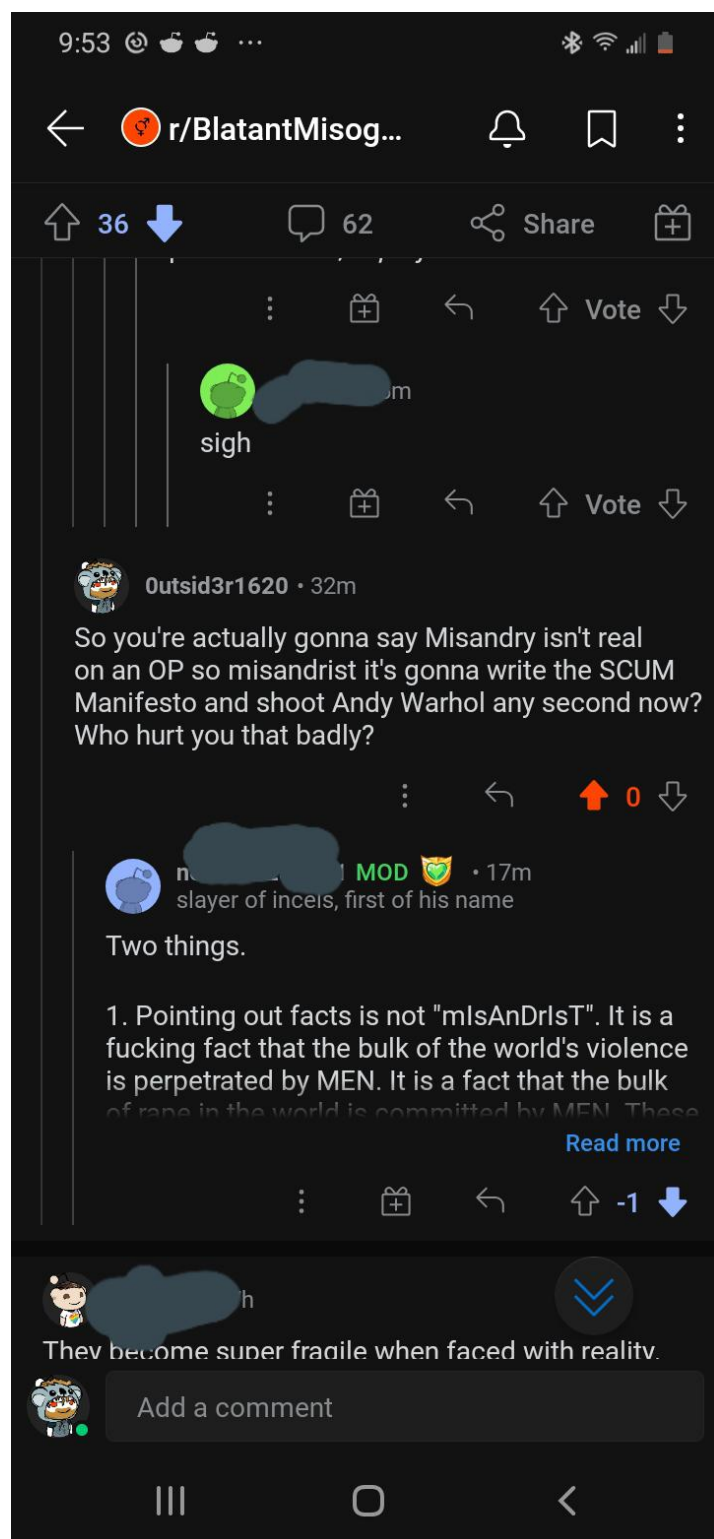

The Government should recognise that domestic abuse is a gendered crime and women are the majority of victims and the vast majority of severe injury and domestic homicide victims, and require local authorities to fund specific domestic abuse services for women.

More details:

We're very concerned that a number of local authorities are commissioning services with a 'gender neutral' approach, which in practice is defunding women's refuges and lifesaving violence against women services. Evidence shows that women experiencing domestic abuse need access to women-only support. We need action now, as government plans to separate domestic abuse from the Violence Against Women and Girls strategy could only serve to encourage more 'gender neutral' responses to domestic abuse."

that Rav Yehuda says that Rav says: There was an incident involving a certain man who set his eyes upon a certain woman and passion rose in his heart, to the point that he became deathly ill. And they came and asked doctors what was to be done with him. And the doctors said: He will have no cure until she engages in sexual intercourse with him. The Sages said: Let him die, and she may not engage in sexual intercourse with him. The doctors said: She should at least stand naked before him. The Sages said: Let him die, and she may not stand naked before him. The doctors suggested: The woman should at least converse with him behind a fence in a secluded area, so that he should derive a small amount of pleasure from the encounter. The Sages insisted: Let him die, and she may not converse with him behind a fence.

You cannot get rid of wars without getting rid of patriarchy FOOD FOR THOUGHT

War, violence and weapons are significant factors in the construction and maintenance of masculine identity and crucial for the continued functioning of patriarchy — a system in which women are at best devalued and at worst, eliminated. You cannot get rid of wars without getting rid of patriarchy.

Taliban, alt-right militarism, drug wars and other flavors of violence will keep happening until we change the very fabric of our society.

Please tell me soemthi, anything, to help me cope with what is happening to women and girls in Afghanistan right now

[Discussion]

I've just seen a video of several burly men ripping a 12 year old girl from her mother's arms so she can be married off.

Men are leaving Afghanistan in droves leaving women and children there to rot under the Taliban's rule. Women are mocked and harassed on the street by men that these are their last days of freedom, that they're going to be married off to them, that their rights are over. Any liberty and progress women have achieved there will be all gone.

At times in the past women have been treated like crap by men. That's because the elites. Royals etc were run by men. The elites also treated 99% of men like crap. Misandry is the equivalent of guilt tripping a white working class English man about slavery. The average working class persons ancestors would have been treated worse than slaves. My great grandmother worked as a servant, they made her change her name to sound more 'servanty'. My grandfather remembers seeing a group of 15 or 16 young men in his village playing horseshoe, a week later they had all been conscripted and killed in WW1. My father owns a book by a historian (can't remember the name) published in 1820, there are first hand accounts of men living 5 miles from the sea, that had never seen the sea, they were tied to the land as workers and weren't allowed to leave. Everyone was treated like crap in the past, black, white, male, female all by the ruling classes. I can't help thinking woke garbage is being pumped out by the media just to keep us fighting amongst ourselves while the ruling classes sit back. Most people care about what the media tells them to care about, just look at the last 2 years!

Munecat, double standards and the SA of boys

25 upvotes | April 19, 2023 | by Gemwriter2 | Link | Reddit Link

Hello everyone, British YouTuber here, so my linked sources will all be from the UK.

If we view a clip from YouTuber Munecat, specifically 32:59 - 33:20 I can immediately see a problem with her attitude regarding s3xual abuse of boys:

Myron Gaines Wrote a Book... - YouTube

The most charitable view I can possibly take of this is that she considers it to be acceptable and harmless to be flippant about the s3xual abuse of boys, in the same way that some believe it is alright to make jokes about prison r*pe. I've got some mixed feedback on pointing this out, including those who defend her because of a gender based double standard and those who are partisan because she identifies as a feminist.

Everyone please keep in mind that plenty of women are our allies against misandry. Below is a link to an excerpt from the BBC woman's hour where the presenters discuss the topic of s3xual abuse of boys by women and acknowledge how gender based double standards here in the UK play a part:

9 January 2014: Maternal incest - a piece on 'Woman's Hour' - YouTube

From 08:57 to 09:13 the presenter reveals that it is possible that as much as 20% of s3xual abuse inflicted on boys is perpetrated by women. However, our society has trouble recognising it at all due to prevailing stereotypical attitudes, as the researcher comments on from 10:28 - 11:09. Any YouTuber who suggests in whatever way that s3xual abuse perpetrated by women can be trivialised is feeding into this.

Misandry/anti male hate is completely reasonable given how objectively shitty men are as a whole. Every woman knows another woman who has been stalked, abused, or assaulted at the hands of a man and/or has experienced it herself. Not many men can recall a time in their lives when a woman/non binary person made them feel afraid for their safety or know a man who has been stalked, abuse, and/or assaulted by a woman because woman on man violence doesn't exist. Men are collectively the most fucking evil group of people in history.

Is "Respect Women" Sexist?

May not exactly be entirely topical for this sub but I think it fits in a way. We always hear constantly about respecting women and girls, but practically never anything about men and boys, which is arguably misandrist in and of itself and has no doubt only contributed to socially acceptable misandry for years and even decades by now.

I get so irritated whenever I hear about respecting women and girls, and downright furious when I see things like boys in schools being taught to have respect for women and girls, but absolutely nothing about girls also being taught to respect men and boys. Respect is always earned, never given, and it goes for both men and women alike. Some of the worst and most unrespectable people I've ever had the displeasure of knowing have been women, and for so many years it's been ingrained and enforced in society that women are always to be unconditionally respected just for the sake of it and not because they're good people who've actually earned it. We never hear anything about also having respect for men and boys, and we wonder why there's such a bad male mental health problem.

I think enforcing the notion of respecting women just for the sake of it is definitely sexist and so is respecting men for the sake of it. Respect is always earned and never automatically granted on the basis of gender. I respect good men and women alike who've both earned it and deserve it, and have nothing but disdain for bad men and women who don't conduct themselves in a good or respectable manner at all. Plus saying to respect women no matter what is sexist in and of itself, because aren't there also men who deserve respect? Even a bad or outright evil woman is to be respected? You mean to tell me I should have respect for a woman like Amber Heard or Ghislaine Maxwell, even when they've done the horrible things they did? Or women who spout hateful rhetoric like Ann Coulter, Marjorie Greene, Tomi Lahren, etc. or whackjob feminists like Charlotte Proudman or Emrazz (just look at their Twitter posts if you can stomach it, ugh). I have less than zero respect for these women. I respect women who actually deserve it and have earned it, I don't automatically grant it to women like these.

I think this sends an awful message to impressionable young girls too because it instills a sense of entitlement to being given respect and special treatment on the basis of gender and that males are not to be regarded with any sort of respect or kindness. Sends an awful message to boys too, who are regularly being bombarded with so much misandry and not given any sort of encouragement or empowerment at all and are basically being told they don't deserve respect. I have to wonder if this whole "respect women" notion is a major reason why some male victims of female criminals never come forward with their stories, particularly boys, when men and boys alike are victimized and harmed by women at much higher rates than believed or reported. Young males are so bombarded with the "respect women" nonsense that if they've been violated or harmed in anyway by a woman or girl they feel it's disrespectful to report her and somehow it's okay if it's done by a female when it's wrong either way. I think arguably it's another way of how so many bad women are absolved of any sort of accountability and responsibility.

I think respect for anyone, male and female alike, always has to be earned. You don't automatically command it for being male or female. I get so irritated whenever I see or hear anything about respecting women because gender alone never warrants automatic respect. Respect good and respectable men and women alike, that's all. If "respect men" were a thing as well I'd honestly also take issue with it for the reasons I outlined before. Respecting someone just because of gender isn't only sexist but arguably dangerous as well.

As a gay man it is so hard to get the point through that women spaces feel a million times safer then any hetero male centric space.

If you are the type to feel offended when women get some sense of safety and appreciation just for a day, then you are the reason why women need it.

I'm straight and I used to hang out with women more in school. I would also have male friends, but I always enjoyed woman friends more. Men tended to be much more judgmental and vile, and were a source of most of the bullying that I endured.

Oh wow, are you me? The majority of people I hung out with in uni were women. Partially because the university was 80% female, but also because hanging out with guys is so god damn exhausting. Women were usually nicer and more polite, and most importantly: not so loud!

I used to think small boys could be allowed in female separatist spaces but after working with boys as young as 4 I don't want them anywhere near me or girls. It starts so early. I don't care if it's nature or nurture. They all become evil so quickly. And I'm not using the word evil lightly. As someone who is very understanding with children, there are some things I've seen or heard that were beyond comprehension. There is an obsession with destruction, violation and inflicting pain that just isn't normal. And the male ego and entitlement is already there. It's already too late. And to think later on women try to "change", "educate" and "teach" grown men. If we can't do it when they are 4 what do you think you're going to achieve now?

If you are worth 3 TIMES less than a woman, can you still get screwed in divorce court?

All my male friends keep suprising me with being anti-vaxx

Why?

Next to that they also believe in a gay/trans-agenda and #metoo is just women wanting attention, races shouldn't be mixed, and other incellish/right wing stuff.

I have really asked them; where do you read your news? But they don't answer. As in: they weirdly don't answer.

But I get often the eerie feeling; men dó get news/media served differently. Somehow.

These are (or were) normal men that you could even describe as leftist hippies.. how and where do they get this stuff? Me and my female friends don't end up like that. We mainly look confuzzeled when one of or guy-friends suddenly is anti-vax after losing his father 6 weeks ago due to covid..

Also: My pc thinks I am a man; I have many lovely girls waiting for me in my area and good deals for boner pills.. but still don't get that "news".. so do they get sucked in by it through friends maybe? (they don't share the same hobby's I could blame like gaming for instance)

Sisterhood is resistance!!

GLOBAL RESISTANCE

Most men want women's friendships to break down because then they're easier to isolate, control & abuse. They insult women's appearances to make them insecure, envious and compete with oneanother. They tell women they're special and not like the other envious girls- so the woman becomes dependent on them for company and belonging. They don't want you out socialising with other women in case you realise you've been tricked & could do much better than them.

What men call "misandry" is just people expressing their disdain for how women are treated and the patriarchy

Misogyny is the result of male privilege and power and actually kills and oppresses women

You don't have to justify your feelings. It's the reality you live in every moment of your life and it's inescapable. And it's worse knowing it could be worse, but current laws prevent it. Yes things would be like they were in the 50s and before if laws protecting women were suddenly stripped. Misogyny is still too prevalent Misandrist rental directories are in potential violation of fair housing regulations. We are taking a stand against this by educating men that they do indeed have rights. While there are exceptions - gender is indeed a protected class under the Fair Housing Act. Though we are not attorneys - we encourage men to understand and exercise their fair housing rights to the fullest extent allowed.

MeToo Is a Hate Movement

15 upvotes | November 27, 2022 | by Skeleton Warrior | Link | Reddit Link

I think MeToo counts as a blatantly misandrist hate movement, and I'm glad to see the backlash it's gotten more recently from the Johnny Depp/Amber Heard trial. Being out today at a second hand place and looking at some magazines they had there and seeing this movement get a mention on one of them reminded me how sick and tired I am of this movement and their blatant anti-male agenda. Pretty much right off the bat they got hijacked by radical feminists who pushed their dangerous and discriminatory "Believe all women" mantra which completely destroys due process and has resulted in many innocent men being punished over false accusations. Also re-inforcing the false notion that women are always victims and it's only men who commit any sort of violent crimes or sex offenses. There's also how male victims of female violence and sex crimes are often completely ignored and brushed aside, and whenever you would bring up that men are also victims of female violence and that sexual harassment/assault, rape, domestic abuse, etc. is something many men have also experienced from women you often get the usual feminist retort of "Stop trying to silence women," "Stop bringing up that women harm men only when women share their stories," "Start your own dialogue about women abusing men elsewhere but please keep it out of this," etc. Let's not forget the numerous misandrist garbage that resulted from it as well between the Gillette ad and "Educate your son" meme. Both of which are clear anti-male discrimination. It also led to the fraudulent Time's Up organization which got exposed as a big fraud sometime ago, and that organization is also discriminatory with how it too fails to acknowledge male victims of female offenses and doesn't campaign to also protect men and boys from harassment and such. Itself a blatantly biased practice to ignore and exclude male victims when they deserve help as much as female ones do.

I despise this movement and am so happy to see they received some much-deserved blowback after the Depp/Heard trial. To see them still stand by and defend Heard even with the scores of undeniable evidence against her says it all and only confirms what was suspected. This movement was never about justice for victims of any sort of sexual violence or abuse but an anti-male hate and smear campaign. Designed to make women fearful of men and weaponize false accusations. The sad irony is that both legit male and female victims alike will have a harder time than ever coming forward with their stories; male victims will continue to be mocked and ridiculed and not be taken seriously, while female victims will be accused of lying and seeking fame and money. This movement is the worst thing to happen to male and female relations. It deserves to be outed as a hate movement.

Sick of men making dark and edgy jokes about women in Afghanistan

I know we're not supposed to link posts from other subs but this is something I've been seeing a lot of.

So many meme and joke pages are allowing this kind of shit to happen. The last straw was when I saw a video of a woman journalist confronting the Taliban and asking them if they'd let women hold electoral position. The men of course burst out laughing at her question. The title of the video was ending feminists with one smile (paraphrasing).

Even after all that has happened putting down feminists is still their #1 priority. Some people were also making fun of the reporter's appearance in the comments. They hate women so much they're willing to praise the Taliban for shutting up women.

Fair warning, I'm going to be ranting and venting in this post. I have to after how pissed I got seeing this book at work earlier, reading it's premise and also checking the author's afterward. I came this close to an epic swearing fit and ripping the book to pieces. Why? Well, read on...

At work today, I took notice to a book on display in the Sci-Fi section called Curfew. What made me notice? The tagline on the front, which is "It was supposed to keep women safe." Reading the premise on the back (and I should note the back also describes the book as being like The Handmaid's Tale but with women in charge; let that sink in), it concerns a female-dominated government in which all male civilians are electronically tagged and required to be curfewed to prevent violence against women and it mentions how women can now safely go about their lives and routine not being in fear. The usual feminist BS about how women are in fear of their lives and safety every time they go outside and as usual, ignoring the fact men are also at risk and actually comprise the majority of violent crime victims including homicide, and many women are also violent against men. As usual, men's safety and well-being not mattering. Oh, but it gets worse when we get to the author's afterward.

In the afterward, the author though not quite endorsing an anti-male curfew she makes her stance pretty clear and obvious that she does. She goes on with the usual feminist garbage about how there's an epidemic of male violence against women, how domestic abuse cases are overwhelmingly perpetrated by men against women and men commit higher levels of assaults against women. As usual failing to acknowledge many men are also victims of female violence and instances of female on male violence are vastly underreported due to many male victims afraid to come forward and also very few abuse shelters that help them. But the kicker? She had the nerve to accuse people using the hashtag of #NAMALT (Not All Men Are Like That) in response to the male-bashing of deflecting the issue and that it was basically blaming women instead of viewing men as the problem. She even had the double nerve to say if women used the #EMALT (Enough Men Are Like That) hashtag if it would offend men. What a lot of damn nerve she has! It's bad enough she demonizes men as a whole and fails to acknowledge male victims of female violence, but she's going to employ this nonsense as well?

I got so angry reading this to the point I came incredibly close to shredding the book to pieces and having a swearing fit. I'm so sick and tired of the misandry and anti-male bashing and fear-mongering that's become so widespread and socially acceptable and ingrained over the past half-decade or so. Both men and women are violent to one another and do horrible things to one another. Rape, sexual harassment/assault, abuse, murder, etc. men and women do these things to one another in comparable numbers, and female instances of violence against men are much higher to believed or reported, but as usual this author is irresponsibly downplaying and warping that to fit her feminist narrative. I'm so fed up with this. The book apparently also raises the issue if curfewing all men would bring crime rates down, and we all know that's a load of BS because plenty of women also commit crimes and at comparable rates, and men being curfewed would be a disaster for military, law enforcement, first responders, etc. since those occupations are overwhelmingly male and men in these occupations being curfewed would see a tremendous spike in crime and violent incidents.

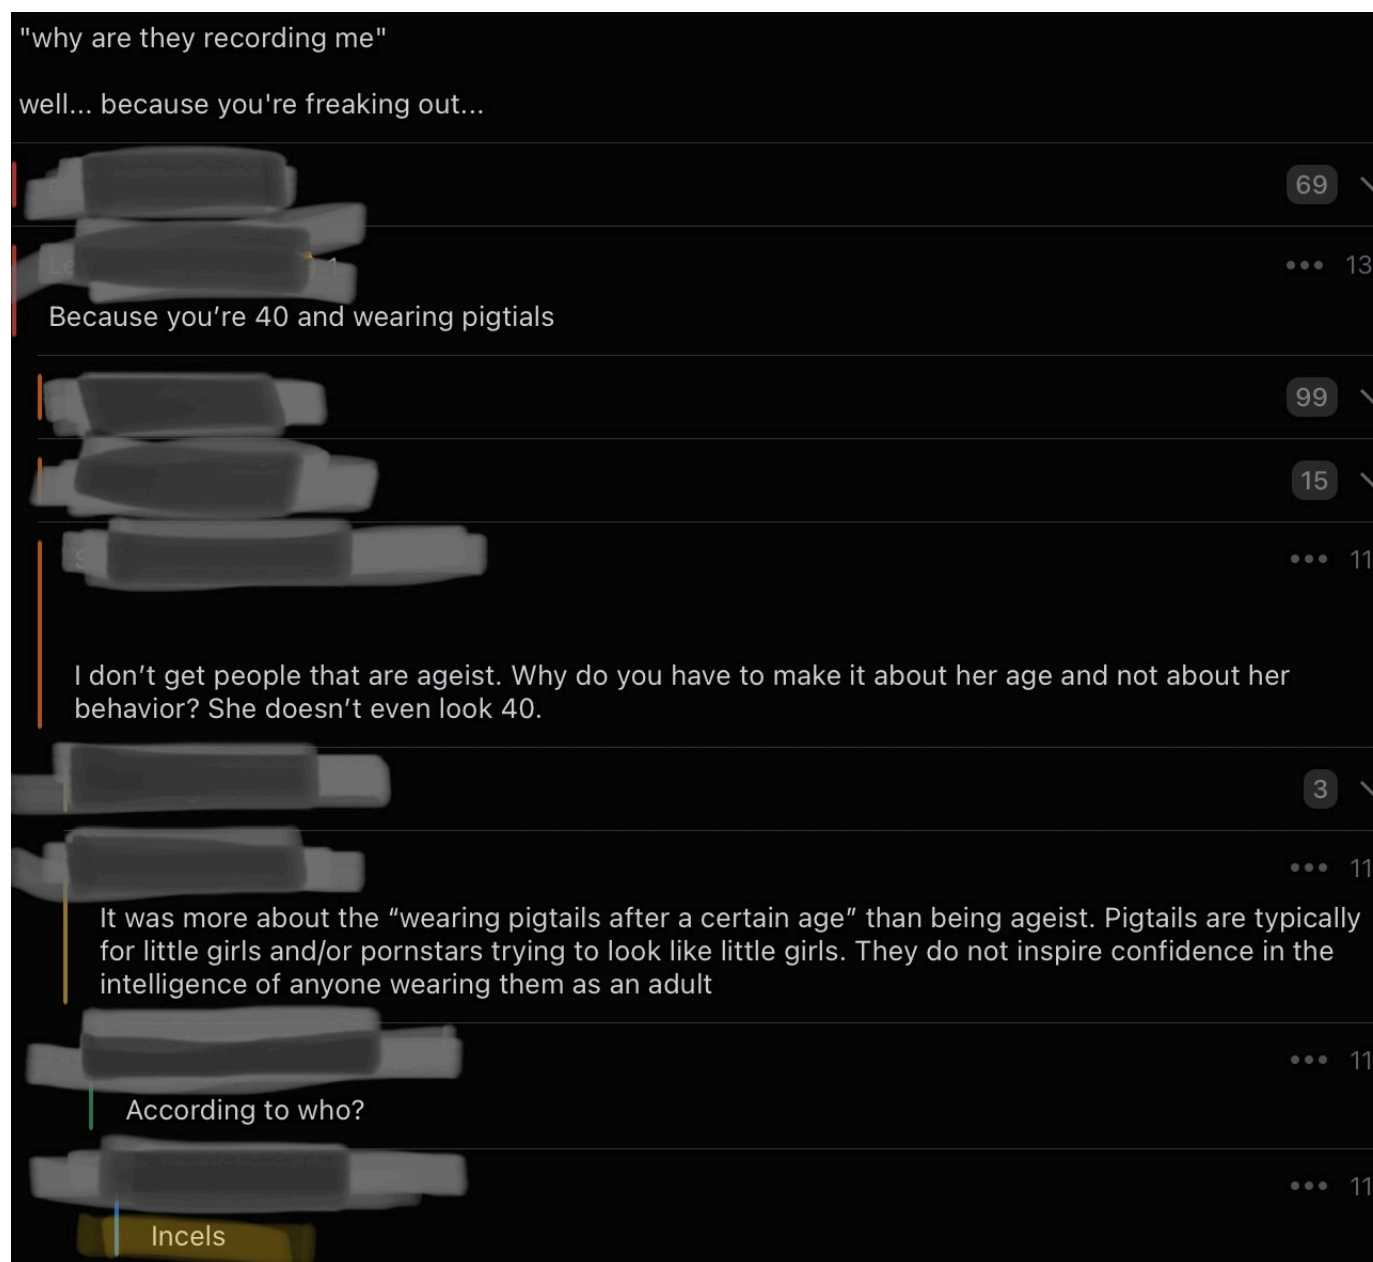

This is exactly the same kind of BS white supremacists pull with how they demonize non-white people and ignore the fact plenty of terrible white people also exist, and their delusional nonsense about how an all-white nation would be free of crime when that would definitely not be the case. Feminists show time and time again with this sort of thinking that they're absolutely no different from the likes of white supremacists and no better, at all.

This author and the publisher of the book should be boycotted. They're promoting blatant sexism and fear against men with this and exploiting female victims to enforce their disgusting, hateful agenda. This garbage is in the same category as hateful propaganda like The Turner Diaries. I know I rant about this sort of thing a lot here, but I'm so pissed right now as I type this after seeing this book, reading the premise on the book and the author's afterward. I can only imagine the uproar there'd be if a male author wrote a book with this premise with the genders reversed and the backlash he'd (rightfully) get. Cowie deserves the same backlash and scorn.

As always, I'm immensely grateful this sub exists and I'm sure you all feel exactly the way I do about this damn book. Enough with bashing and hating men and women alike, this is nothing but hateful propaganda meant to incite fear and hatred of men.

Congrats, your misandric dogwhistle has literally lost all meaning

If you type questions in Google like " Which genders commits the most domestic violence ", they will tell you in bold faced fonts that its men. But if you google other topics like " which gender relies more on welfare ", you won't get any bold faced font results. You'll actually have to dig deep through the results and there's a good chance you might not even find anything.

They're controlling the internet. When you control the internet, you in a way control reality. Those search algorithms were originally built to give you a peak into the world as it is. Whatever article gets the most hits will pop up. But that's not happening now. How is this not propaganda?

And what can be done to fix it? The feminists have gained a foothold in big tech. But how did this happen in the first place? If the feminists were the ones who created big tech, then I can understand. But they didn't. So why is big tech even listening to them over everyone else? Because of money? I thought conservatives generally had more monetary power than liberals. There's clearly some power play happening here.

I have never met a HVM in the context of dating... how common is this?

DISCUSSION

I'm in my late 20s and have been in the dating game for about 10 years. I look back and try to determine if I have ever dated a HVM and sadly I don't think I have ever even met one in the context of dating. None of my friends have dated one either. It is hard for me to believe they exist (at least in my age cohort).

It's difficult to date men as a misandrist. Discussions from other misandrists as to what to do requested misandry isn't real and men who say it IS are more likely to be dangerous.

STAY WOKE

Women's response to the idea of "misandry" (a human rights issue that doesn't actually exist) has been embarrassing because while women are scrambling to be "reasonable" they don't realize that men aren't even using the word in good faith. Men know "misandry" is not a real problem. They don't feel unsafe in the world because of women's hatred.

They only use that word (along with the word toxic) because they're trying to carry on dismissing women, JUSTIFY THEIR OWN BEHAVIOR, and maintain the status quo, but with a more "woke" lexicon. It's not any deeper than that.

There is no collective pain of oppressed men that requires a word to express it. A belief in "misandry" doesn't come from pain or systematic struggle. Unlike misogynistic rhetoric, it's a challenge to find any real life tragedies traced back to women being "misandrist".

I'm disturbed by the lack of empathy most men tend to have for women. Is this evolutionary?

One thing I've really noticed is that a lot of men whether they dislike women or not are really really bad at empathising with us. Most of them have no idea how a woman on the other hand might feel and misjudge our feelings/experiences but I think the most likely cause is that they don't care. I witness this day in day out, not just on reddit but irl too, tell a man about how X girl got raped or murdered and maybe he'll offer some condolences, a sorrowful look that doesn't quite reach his eyes at best before ranting about how some bad men ruin it for all the good men and reassuring us that of course not all men are like that so we have nothing to worry about. Whenever, a conversation about women's rights comes up, men tend to take it personally and get offended or go the 'not all men' route. They never take time to listen or to care.

I think this lack of empathy is most prevalent on the manosphere where they just refuse to see women as human and instead think we're some sort of cruel sex dolls that aren't i am quite interested in tiktok, and there is a large amount of feminist posts on there, i completely appreciate feminism because it normalises equality for all. But i lot of tiktok comments have come to my attention so i decided to screenshot them. they were all to do with killing all men and that they were disgusted that they were attracted to men. i was extremely upset by this, so i posted it.

after a few nice comments a lot of my female audience comes at me about being “sexist” and believing in “1940s lifestyle” i keep saying that i am completely for equality, but what you are doing isn’t equality.

i got comments such as “when we say kill all men, we mean you”

“petition to kill all men”

“i agree, men are horrible”

this absolutely disgusts me how they can get away with calling the male gender these horrible words, everyone would care if a male said it, but since they are female everything is fine.

loads of my female audience either block me or spam me with dms, i am extremely scared for later generations who will have to deal with a worse version of this.

please comment suggestions or your experiences with misandrists :)

Subreddit updates

7 upvotes | September 4, 2021 | by Kuato2012 | Link | Reddit Link

Hi everyone,

The sub is growing slowly but steadily. To help with the increasing activity level, I've added a few rules into the sidebar. I'm trying to keep the rule set very simple for now. I'm sure it will need occasional adjustments as the sub continues to grow.

I've also added post flairs and the ability to sort posts by flair. The categories are fairly broad because I don't like it when flairs get too granular. So news articles and opinion essays fall under the "new/opinion article" tag, and books, movies, TV, music, and ads are all under the "entertainment media" tag.

So far, the existing tags seem to cover everything. More can always be added if the need arises.

Thank you all for your continued efforts to point out misandry. Even though society is awash in it, that normalization of male-directed sexism can paradoxically make it even more difficult for people to see.

Hint: it's not other women.

FemaleDatingStrategy is only about levelling up women and in no way misandric. Apart from their view on male suicide. I feel bad for any women reading that deranged rant who had lost male, family members to suicide.

2. Female teachers and classmates treat me as some sort of stupid child.
3. Not allowed to mind my own business and stay silent, then I’m a creep.
4. Not allowed to participate in class, then I’m perceived as annoying.
5. Can’t talk about 1-4 to school staff/counselors because it always ends me as being seen as some sort of abuser.

Everyday Misandry has been created

5 upvotes | May 15, 2020 | by Kuato2012 | Link | Reddit Link

This subreddit is a place to record the misandry that permeates our society. At one end of the spectrum, we see the utterly commonplace social media posts that casually put down men or insinuate the supremacy of women. At the other end, we see flagrant double standards in the law, or the occasional nationally syndicated article suggesting that hatred of men ought to be socially acceptable. All of it is welcome here.

Hopefully this will be a useful adjunct to the other subs that are interested in the topic of misandry. If you need to open someone's eyes to the reality and prevalence of misandry, may you find ammunition here. And if you just need to vent about some of the sexist horseshit that you see on a daily basis, that fits here too.

UN: Secretary-General's remarks to launch the flash appeal for Ukraine [as delivered]

1 upvotes | March 2, 2022 | by DistrictAccurate | Link | Reddit Link

I am glad to see that multiple groups are to receive additional help.

United Nations agencies and our partners are now working 24-7 to assess humanitarian needs and scale up aid, particularly to women, children, older people and those with disabilities.

If this additional help is particularly aimed at women, children, the elderly and disabled - as is promised by the UN Secretary-General - it follows that the relative share of aid provided to men will be scaled down. I am not happy to see that, despite the fact that men are currently dying in situations they would not be in if it wasn't for their sex (i.e. androcides), men are not met with the concern and subsequent support they'd deserve.

Similarly, the pledge against discrimination toward refugees based on race, religion or ethnicity is an important part of ensuring their egalitarian treatment:

I thank the Member States who have welcomed people fleeing Ukraine. It is important that this solidarity is extended without any discrimination based on race, religion or ethnicity.

Once again, however, it was failed to address those who are officially and completely banned from leaving based on their sex (within the applicable age range). Unless I missed something, there is no other group that is officially banned from leaving - even if instances of other forms of discrimination were reported in practice. They are either prohibited from entering the station and otherwise pulled from trains they are already on. If they disobey, they get shot. In this context, it is particularly hard to accept the ignorance and silence toward this issue. Especially given that it is in violation of the self-imposed goals:

We and our partners are committed to supporting all those affected, in accordance with the humanitarian principles of neutrality, impartiality, independence, and humanity.

Well, the committment would've lasted for about 6 sentences... if it wouldn't have been broken in the paragraphs leading up to it itself already. Maybe next time.

The coming gynarchy

1 upvotes | September 20, 2022 | by Peacetribe | Link | Reddit Link

I have a theory that WOMEN WILL RULE !! Eventually they will enslave men. Why ? Because they are far smarter far more intelligent and far stronger than men. The real genius of women is allowing men to keep the illusion that they are women's equal. Which In really is a ridiculous notion. Let me tell you how the Gynarchy takeover is already happening and has been for a LONG time.

Female's are vastly superior to males and WILL rule the earth. It is not a question of IF women will take ALL power from men and eventually enslave them, It's simply a matter of WHEN. Yes men will be subjugated and become slaves but it won't be as horrible as it sounds on the surface. Women are by nature kind (unless you cross them) and men as slaves will lead very nice carefree lives under female rule. Women will enslave men but they will take good care if them, It's their nature.

We do need to realize that birth is painful and the birth of the new world order will not be any different. There will be men (Neanderthals) who will not accept it and who will need to be dragged kicking and screaming (violently if necessary) into this wonderful new world that they can't see the beauty of.

But mostly it will be achieved through non violent means. Those being political and social. It is MEN who use violence as a means to an end. Woman use it only as a last undesirable resort and reluctantly. So, the first thing to be done is to completely strip males of ALL power and authority. How will they achieve this? (It's already begun.) They will elect ONLY women to political office. Once women hold the vast majority of seats in both the senate and the house and hold the Presidency as well, then the takeover will go into warp speed. The first thing will be to pass a laws stripping men of the right to vote with women holding an overwhelming majority in both houses AND the white house this will pass quickly with NO opposition. Then, the next order of business will be to pass a laws forbidding men to run for or hold ANY political office whatsoever. If the constitution needs to be changed to accommodate these laws the overwhelming majority of women will easily do that. These laws can be made to take IMMEDIATE effect upon passing. Also included will be judges. No man can be a judge, including the supreme court. Once the law passes all men must immediately step down from ALL political office to be replaced by FEMALE candidates. Elections can be held but only FEMALES may run and any interim officeholder's must also be female. This will set the stage for TOTAL female rule. Laws will then be passed slowly stripping men of ALL rights little by little until men HAVE no more rights. But this is merely the beginning. Once the seed of the tree has been planted it needs to be fed and watered and maintained so that it lives forever and Patriarchy is buried beneath the scrap heap of history forever. How will they do this? Again it's already begun and has been happening for decades. Which brings us to the second part of the plan for Female takeover, Education and REeducation. "Indoctrination" actually, it is already happening in school and has quietly been happening for decades now. Schools have been steadily teaching male "emasculatation" for years now.

The part of the plan which is really MOST important PARAMOUNT in fact is education/indoctrination, it has been in effect for decades now and is starting to become more normalized, is happening, and will continue to happen and grow is men are slowly being taught from their FIRST day in school "subtly" to accept girls/females as superior. Little by little you can see through policies and enforcement by the mostly female staff of schools today boys are being stripped of their masculinity LONG before they even understand what it is. You can see it now more than ever boys are slowly being indoctrinated into accepting that girls are superior and that they should act more feminine. The REAL brilliance of this is how women have been careful not to try and implement radical change all at once; Get men to accept a little, then a little more and a little more until finally they have accepted it all and have been completely emasculated and subjugated. If they are taught from early childhood that females are superior not so much by coming out and SAYING it. But just by subtle teaching and prioritizing girls, boys will subconsciously get the message ,It's brilliant. Its inevitable that the future it will lead to teaching boys outright with NO pretense that they are born inferior to girls and there is nothing whatsoever they can do but accept it as natural and eventually mandate physical removal of testosterone from males BEFORE they reach puberty. This plus education from early childhood should ensure a docile male population that accepts female rule without question. Naturally women need to keep some select males for reproduction. Most males will face mandatory castration before puberty. They will be educated that this is for their own good. Testicles and testosterone will be commonly considered very bad for society and they will accept having them removed like tonsils. Select males will be taken to "sperm farms" where their sperm will be harvested and frozen for reproductive use. Those males, once they have been "milked" (for lack of a better term) will THEN have their testicles removed. Castration will be absolutely MANDATORY for ALL males either before puberty or after they have given enough sperm. Further the political power women will wield will make passing laws to COMPLETELY subjugate men ridiculously easy. Formal Education will eventually be strictly forbidden to males, this will start slowly. The first law to pass will outlaw males from receiving higher education. No college! Only women will be allowed to go to college. A few years later it will be high school, Girls ONLY beyond 8th grade. Then once that has been accepted middle school will be next. Eventually formal education of ANY Kind for males will be STRICTLY against the law because an educated male is dangerous. Boys can attend separate facilities where they will learn their place in society is to unquestionably serve and above all OBEY ALL females REGARDLESS of age. For a boy or man to question or disobey an order from a female regardless of age will be a VERY SERIOUS offense and can be met with extreme punishment. Also that they at ALL times must NEVER show disrespect to ANY women regardless of age. They will be taught that it is the worst offense a boy or man can make. Naturally young girls will need to be taught not to abuse their authority of all males and how it needs to be used properly. This and more will eventually happen.

To me, articles like this , imply that women's lives are more precious than men's (I mean, how difficult is it to add a single line that the murder rate for men is even more. They do add such sentences when talking about male rape so why not here)

I think this is a form of indirect misandry as it implies the life of a woman is more precious than a man's (putting so much focus on female murder victims when male victims outnumber them 3-4 to 1)

Feeling sad because I have to break up because of a toxic relationship with misandrist girlfriend

1 upvotes | April 2, 2023 | by hellocafe | Link | Reddit Link

TL;DR: I (30M) have been for over a year with my 31F girlfriend. Many things happened in the relationship which made me progressively anxious and doubting the relationship. Now I am about to breakup but still feel sad and guilty.

Hello men of Reddit!

This post is going to be long but to be honest this is because I am going through a rough time, feel very guilty about breaking up and I know I will have no support system afterwards.

I (30M) have been for over a year with my 31F girlfriend. After having broken up several times and tried to come back to make it work, I still felt something was broken inside me, at a point when I know I have to breakup because the relationship is toxic but I am so sad because we had good moments and I still have feelings for her.

This post is for every male having difficulty to spot red flags in particular with misandry, because it was my case as I experienced it for the first time. Also, I am posting this because I think I know inside of me that I should breakup but I am being sensitive, sad and feeling guilty of leaving her.

Positive aspects of the relationship to be mentioned, and that are the reason why I am so sad at the idea of leaving her and why I am not feeling strong:

- we had an awesome connection, we would laugh a lot together
- We have activities we like to do in common and in those moments it felt all our disagreements went away
- I have of course feelings and I am still attracted to her

Trying to sum up the elements that happened and that affected me:

- after 1 month and a half relationship, seeing each other several times a week, sleeping together, going on a trip together, she mentions she wants an open relationship. I said I could not have it this way and that it created anxiety with me and that I could not build a relationship this way. I respect the people who do but this is not a helpful thing for my mental health. She was not being understanding and tried to force me into an open relationship by playing with words and putting the blame on me: saying I am possessive, that if I had feelings I should have trust in her, and that we did not know each other anyway. I really never understood why she did not mention this at the 3rd-ish date before building connection and trust with me first, to at least give me the option. So, seeing she would not let this go, I had to break up.
- Then, after a month, she asked me if I wanted to come back if she would reconsider, to which I said yes, so we were in a closed relationship.
- Over the remaining time, I discover she was actually a misandrist when she would talk badly of men for no reason: laughing at me and saying I am mansplaining when my intention never was to be condescending with her, saying “being a white male must be why you are not a feminist”, saying I should take her side everytime a man talks badly to her because in her mind “this is always because of misogyny”. No girlfriend had told me that in the past, ever. She would beging sentences like “condescending men are systemic”, “male perverts are everywhere” to which I felt either I should abstain from answering or (which I did not do) should agree with her. As I did not agree she used to say I was sexist.

- She insisted several times (and I never accepted because did not feel like it) on pegging me. At random times, she would get on top of me from behind, saying “it would be great if I could f you with a strapon. You sure you would not like it?” For like the 10th time. Even if it was in intimacy moment I felt degraded because I had said I did not want this nor was attracted to this. I believe like every other sexual activity, if there is consensual agreement, fine sure.
- Once she exploded because I told her we could reconsider our weekly plan to go dancing at our class because we were 40 minutes late, I nicely offered to go to the restaurant instead to have a moment together, to which she answered I will go alone and you do not have to give orders to me. It was never my intention. This hurt me a lot because she decided to go in an egoistic way and then assume I was giving her orders. When I ask why is she so biased, she answers it is because her ex, her father talked to her this way and that all men in society think they can talk badly to women. I did not appreciate to be put in the same basket and to be compared to an ex for absolutely no reason.
- When, because of all that, I refused temporarily to move in with her because I thought I needed time, she told me I was being a coward and that I was being childish. I felt my boundaries were not being respected.
- When I recently broke up (those who read might remember another post by me) she would literally send me dozens of messages, call me 20 times and say “I am in front of your building”. I felt scared.
- She also “blamed” me for identifying myself as a male. Sometimes I would say things like: “where is the man side” at a clothe store and she would say “why directly the man side? Maybe you could find something you like in the girl side - just because blue is for men and pink for women no? Ahah” but then things like “I think I would like it if you wore a dress”. I absolutely respect anyone doing so but it is not my style so I said no, to which she answered that I am kind of rigid.

Minor aspects but that had their importance over time:

- during our conversations, she would very often talk about others, and oftentimes to criticize. I felt kind of a negative mood floating around.
- She sometimes blamed me for her emotional state, such as asking me to go at her place on a sunday night just because she was feeling anxiety (other days were ok), and I sometimes went of course, but I could not do it everytime, to which she answered that she was deceived because I could not go there when she needed.

Because of all that, I freeze next to her. I have stomach ache, sleep issues, muscle shivering, I am really anxious. I cannot get tactile anymore.

So I told her I needed time to disconnect but I will have to break up. I know that because ultimately I am not imagining a future with her because of all that. But it hurts. So sorry it was long but I have almost no one to whom I can talk about this.

I mean, she ruined his life. Then she lied about it and made him look like the abusive one. I think it's fair to say that women like that are sick in the head. If she continues to walk free, I hope the media doesn't forgive her for what she's put him through as well as her other former lovers.
