Happy Men's Day!

21 upvotes | November 19, 2022 | by UnHope20 | Link | Reddit Link

---

Happy International Men's Day! As 50% of the human population men have been among humanities greatest inventors, artists, athletes and researchers.

Yet it is because of the hard work, generosity and integrity of everyday men that we are able to enjoy the benefits of living in the 21st century.

We are thankful for the Salk that gave us the polio vaccine, and but we are also very grateful for the thousands of men who ship and manufacture the parts that make it possible to get medicines to millions of people.

We deeply appreciate Bartholomew for giving us modern roads and sidewalks. Yet we are truly fortunate for the millions of men who drive the trucks down those roads and deliver our food, clothing and basically everything that we use.

We want to also encourage everyone to find it in themselves to value the men who are unemployed, homeless or underemployed. The men suffering with life-long illnesses, the men who are on their deathbed, the men with mental illness, autism, mental retardation and brain injury.

We ask you to value the men in wheel-chairs, the men who aren't physically attractive, or are in poor physical shape or are short stature or are not a member of whichever ideal race/ethnic group in a given society.

Please value the men who have made mistakes, said stupid things, been incarcerated. Please value the men who have failed to be the best parents, lovers or friends.

We ask this because Men's day is about valuing men.

More critical than valuing the "exceptional" men is valuing the "mediocre" men or (Dare I say) the "bad" men. Everyone loves the "Winner" in society, but what about every other man? Doesn't their life have value?

Men are human and their lives matter, not for what they can contribute to the advancement of other peoples goals but because they're people with their own ideas and aspirations.

So this Men's Day, remember the "Awesome" guys, but try and see the value in ALL men.

Happy Men's Day!

The Mod Team

Happy International Men's Day.

20 upvotes | November 19, 2021 | by UnHope20 | Link | Reddit Link

The mod team would like to wish you all a happy men's day! Find the men in your life and let them know that they matter.

In keeping with this subs traditions its important that we stop and recognize the men whose ideas have had tremendous positive impact on humanity.

People such as the discoverer(s) of calculus Gottfried Leibniz

and Sir Issac Newton who also discover calculus.

Calculus has fundamentally altered the technological trajectory of the human race and has contributed to just about every piece of technology that we use today. The monitor or smart phone that you're looking at to read this post would not be possible were calculus not discovered.

Consider the artists who have enriched our lives from the impressionism of Claude Monet to the amazing (And sometimes difficult to comprehend) films of Christopher Nolan

There are great heros such as Oskar Shindler who saved thousands of lives from the WWII genocide campaigns of the Nazi party or the brave heroes of the American Civil Rights Movement such as Martin Luther King Jr.

Consider the great religious thinkers who gave us every major religion from Jesus Christ to Buddha

All of these men had friends, family and neighbors who influenced their ideas, taught them new skills and supported them.

All of that being said, be sure to recognize the everyday heroes that are often unacknowledged.

The men who build our houses, roads skyscrapers.

The men who work on dangerous power lines to ensure that we have working electricity.

The men who work in sewers, empty septic tanks and the plumbers come to fix our toilets.

The men who run into the line of gunfire and the ones who run into burning buildings to save lives.

The men who work in sanitation that keep our streets clean or EMTs who save lives in the back of speeding trucks.

The farmers who grow our food, the truckers who deliver it and grocery store stocker who puts it on shelves.

These men live next door to you. They are your friends, co-workers classmates and family.

Find the men in your life who could use some encouragement and support. Learn their story. Learn what their manhood means to them. This is the essence of what Male Studies is as a field.

Today (11th of July) is Gender Empathy Gap Day!

19 upvotes | July 11, 2022 | by lightning\_palm | Link | Reddit Link

Today, July 11th, is Gender Empathy Gap Day. In short, the gender empathy gap is the empirically supported claim (and new research continues to emerge) that our perception of pain and suffering differs between the sexes, and that we perceive a man or boy going through the same situation as a woman or girl as suffering less, even when real-world data indicates that the former is suffering more.

The origins of this day are MANNdat, a German association founded in 2004 and based in Stuttgart which sees itself as an independent, non-partisan interest group for male citizens with the goal of eliminating legal disadvantages and public discrimination against men.

As such, today and tomorrow users are encouraged to post articles focusing on disparities in society's allocation of compassion toward men and boys.

A few topics that fall under this category are the following: - Male Disposability - In-group Bias (or relative lack thereof) - "Women are Wonderful"-effect - Male Gender Blindness - Gamma Bias - Moral Typecasting - Perceptual distortions like increased threat sensitivity and decreased sympathy caused by male-typical facial morphology, body stature and voice - Helping Behavior

Michele Leiby, Angela L. Bos & Matthew Krain (2021) Gendered framing in human rights campaigns, Journal of Human Rights, 20:3, 263-281, DOI: 10.1080/14754835.2021.1882837
<https://doi.org/10.1080/14754835.2021.1882837>

Abstract:

Human Rights Organizations (HROs) often rely on gender stereotypes in their advocacy campaigns. Yet, we know little about the effects of such essentializing stereotypes on the success of HRO campaigns. Using a survey experiment, we examine how human rights campaigns emphasizing sex and gender roles of the victims affect individuals' attitudes on the campaign issue and their willingness to take direct action. Although we find no direct effect of gendered personal frames in an HRO campaign on levels of consensus or action mobilization, there are indirect effects. When victims are portrayed as holding stereotypically feminine roles, respondents are more likely to identify them as innocent and vulnerable. These evaluations lead respondents to identify the violence described as a fundamental human rights violation, and to participate in direct action to end the abuse. However, as these effects are indirect and often substantively trivial, we recommend HROs avoid using such problematic messaging strategies.

An extended quote from the article:

"Gendered personal frames that rely on stereotypes construct essentialist monoliths of women and men: an innocent, vulnerable woman in need of (male) protection and a man with agency over his own life, presumed to be not at risk and therefore not in need of protection (Dolan 2018). Essentializing narratives are often empirically false and affect when and where humanitarian intervention occurs, and on behalf of whom (Carpenter 2003; Kinsella 2005; Sandvik 2008; Cousens 2015; Charsley and Wray 2015). For example, in Canada in 2015, the federal government's Syrian refugee resettlement program was limited to "women, children, and families" (CBC 2015). Underscoring the significance of gendered social roles, men in family roles were assumed to be nonthreatening and were thus included, whereas unaccompanied men were explicitly excluded due to security concerns (CBC 2015)" p.275-276

Abstract: The rate of suicide amongst Inuit boys and men in Nunavik has risen since the 1980s. Despite this, little is known about the strengths and protective factors, and the unique risks, that contribute to suicidality amongst Inuit males. This article presents the findings of a qualitative interview study conducted with Inuit health and wellness workers in Nunavik to better understand the gendered nature of suicide for young Inuit males. Discussed within a critical masculinities framework, findings highlight the need to consider the gendered nature of intergenerational trauma, the changing nature of the Northern economy and its impact on gender dynamics, and the inequities that some men face within institutional structures. Also offered are culturally meaningful and strength-based strategies for attracting and engaging young males to mental health services. Findings provide important insights into the social determinants of Inuit males' mental health, and advocate for targeted suicide prevention programs for Inuit boys and young men.

Abstract: Prior work suggests that modern gender bias might have historical roots but has not been able to demonstrate long-term persistence of this bias due to a lack of historical data. We follow archaeological research and employ skeletal records of women's and men's health from 139 archaeological sites in Europe dating back, on average, to about 1200 AD to construct a site-level indicator of historical bias in favor of one gender over the other using dental linear enamel hypoplasias. This historical measure of gender bias significantly predicts contemporary gender attitudes, despite the monumental socioeconomic and political changes that have taken place since. We also show that this persistence is most likely due to the intergenerational transmission of gender norms, which can be disrupted by significant population replacement. Our results demonstrate the resilience of gender norms and highlight the importance of cultural legacies in sustaining and perpetuating gender (in)equality today.

Hi Everyone,

February is Black history month in the U.S.

In observance of this period, community members are encouraged (NOT required) to share any interesting articles they have about men of African Ancestry.

This group includes men from African nations and those who are a part of the African Diaspora such as African-Americans, Afro-Brazilians, Afro-Caribbeans and Afro-Latinos.

There are black men of many ethnicities and we are happy learn about as many as we can. So please share if you have anything.

Having said that, we are not limiting ourselves to posts about Black males only. Instead, we're using this period to encourage the sharing of information about Black men.

So, if you have something interesting that you want to share that isn't specifically about Black men please post anyway. We would love to have it as well. :)

We appreciate our Asian brothers, our Black brothers, our Indigenous brothers, our Pacific Island brothers and our White brothers.

Happy Black History Month!

Subjective Interpretation of “Objective” Video Evidence: Perceptions of Male Versus Female Police Officers’ Use-of-Force

Crosspost "Subjective Interpretation of “Objective” Video Evidence: Perceptions of Male Versus Female Police Officers’ Use-of-Force" from /r/LeftWingMaleAdvocates:

---

This study from April 2020 (<https://content.apa.org/fulltext/2020-17958-001.html>) looked at how participants perceived one and the same video of police force depending on what gender they believed the officer to be. They also had another group watch a segment containing no force. Remember that you are currently on reddit. The link to the full article is provided above - this post will only present parts of and is not meant to replace it.

The journal:

This journal is a publication of APA Division 41 (American Psychology-Law Society)
<https://www.apa.org/pubs/journals/lhb/>

As such, it is peer-reviewed:

Like other scientific journals, APA journals utilize a peer review process to guide manuscript selection and publication decisions.
<https://www.apa.org/pubs/journals/resources/peer-review>

Measured variables:

- Trust in the officer,
- Perceived officer effectiveness and
- internal (the officer’s emotional reactivity, being a violent person, aggressiveness) vs. external (e.g., the dangerousness of the situation, the suspect’s behavior) attributions.

Participants and sample size:

We recruited a total of 637 MTurk workers, but excluded 185 (29%) participants for failing (a) manipulation checks of officer gender (n = 45, 7%); (b) officer race (n = 113, 18%); and/or (c) attention checks (n = 81, 13%). The remaining 452 participants were 53% female and 80% White, 7% Hispanic/Latino, 6% African American, and 7% other (Mage = 37.6 years, SD = 11.44).

The video:

We told participants that they would see a brief video of an interaction between a police officer and civilian and then complete a series of questions about the impressions they formed about the encounter and the officer involved. After reading a description of the incident, we showed participants a photograph and told them it was the officer that they would be seeing in a video of the incident, who had 7 years of experience. They viewed the police–civilian interaction video and completed dependent measures in the order listed below. Participants viewed the video a second time halfway through the measures and we presented the photo of the officer before each set of measures. [...] All participants saw a segment of video from the same interaction involving an officer responding to a call about a person acting disorderly. We found the video online; to our knowledge, the video is not from a famous case. We asked participants if they recognized the officer and none of the participants did. Participants were randomly assigned to see a segment depicting the officer either (a) talking to the suspect without using force (58 s); or (b) talking to the suspect and then throwing the suspect to the ground and wrestling with him (60 s). The video contained no sound. The low-resolution video was far enough away that the lack of detail makes the race and gender of the officer unclear, but the use-of-force and motion was obvious. The suspect’s gender was relatively more visible than the officer’s because the suspect was wearing shorts and light clothing, which made his body form and size relatively more visible than the officer, who wore dark pants and long sleeves against a dark background. At the end of the study we asked participants to guess the suspect’s gender and race. The race of the suspect was unclear (47% said White, 32% said African American, 3% said Hispanic, 18% said they could not remember), but it was much more clear that the suspect was male (98% said male). Because both videos are different segments of the same interaction, the setting and individuals were constant across conditions.

Significant findings:

Trust in officer:

no force	force	participant gender
"As predicted, when officers did not use force, the officers' gender did not affect how much participants trusted them."	"However, when officers did use force, participants trusted female officers significantly more than male officers. The race and intersectional effects were not significant."	"The analysis demonstrated that the Officer Gender × Force interaction did not depend on participant gender (i.e., the three-way interaction was not significant). Further, the Officer Gender × Force interaction reported above ( to the left in this table ) remained significant in this analysis that controlled for participant gender."
participant gender	both force conditions
female participants	"There was a significant two-way interaction between participant gender and officer gender (regardless of whether the officer used force). More specifically, female participants trusted female officers (M = 4.85, SD = .13) significantly more than male officers (M = 4.37, SD = .14);"
male participants	"whereas male participants trusted female (M = 4.28, SD = .15) and male (M = 4.48, SD = .14) officers to a similar degree."

Perceived effectiveness:

no force	force	participant gender
"When officers did not use force, participants thought that male and female officers were similarly effective."	"In contrast, when the officers used force, participants perceived female officers to be significantly more effective police officers than male officers. The race and intersectional effects were not significant."	"We again conducted an additional ANOVA that included officer gender, use-of-force, and participant gender (see Supplemental Table 1 for detailed statistics), which demonstrated that this two-way interaction again did not depend on participant gender (i.e., the three-way interaction was not significant). Further, the Force × Officer Gender interaction reported above ( to the left in this table ) remained significant in this analysis that controlled for participant gender."
participant gender	both force conditions
female participants	"There was again a two-way interaction between participant gender and officer gender (regardless of whether the officer used force). Female participants perceived female officers (M = 4.97, SD = .12) to be significantly more effective than male officers (M = 4.64, SD = .12); "
male participants	"whereas male participants perceived female (M = 4.45, SD = .13) and male (M = 4.66, SD = .12) officers to be similarly effective."

Attribution of force:

Effects & Mediators	Force
Attributions and trust	"More specifically, when a male (compared with a female) officer used force, participants thought his behavior was driven less by the situation and more by something internal to him. In turn, both of these factors were significantly associated with participants trusting him less than a female officer (see Figure 3)."
Attributions and effectiveness	"When a male (compared with a female) officer used force, participants thought his behavior was driven less by the situation and more by something internal to him. In turn, both of these factors were significantly associated with participants perceiving him to be less effective than a female officer."
Mediators -> perception	"More specifically, the effect of officer gender affected trust in and perceptions of the officer through all four of the mediators: Participants perceived male (vs. female) officers who use force as more driven by internal factors, more emotionally reactive, more aggressive, and less driven by the situation and, in turn, all of these factors explained unique variance in trust in and perceptions of the officer."

Although we believe that the order of psychological processes that we tested in these models are intuitive and supported by decades of theoretical support for attribution theory (Fiske & Taylor, 1991; Weiner, 1986, 2006), we cannot infer that different attributions cause changes in trust in and perceptions of the officer given that both our mediators and outcomes were measured. Thus, we conducted additional models that reversed the order of our outcomes and mediators. (It is important to note that we could not run truly parallel models because we originally ran a dual-mediator model, whereas we had to run two separate single-mediator models to test the impact of each outcome on each of the two mediators.)

Effects & Mediators

Force

Perception -> mediators "We found that our indirect effects were also significant when we reversed the order of the mediators and outcomes (see Supplemental Table S5). That is, we found that when a male (vs. female) officer exerted force, the degree to which participants endorsed internal and external explanations for that force operated through their trust in the officer and their perceptions of the officer. For example, participants trusted male (vs.) female officers less, and in turn that decreased trust was associated with making more internal and less external attributions. We found similar patterns for perceptions of the officer as a mediator."

Inconsistency with role congruity theory:

Women who engaged in a traditionally masculine behavior (exerting physical force) were trusted more and perceived to be more effective than a man engaging in the same behavior. This is particularly surprising, given that role congruity theory predicts that the more masculine the domain, the greater the backlash would be—pointing out the military as an example (Eagly & Karau, 2002).

Naïve Realism:

The assumption that video provides objective evidence that will eliminate diverging opinions about whether the force was excessive represents a theorized “naïve realism.” More specifically, it represents the perception that photographic evidence is a direct representation of reality containing objective truth that everyone would agree on if they saw it with their own eyes (Feigenson & Spiesel, 2009). Yet, personal biases can pull interpretation of a videotaped event into alignment with one’s worldview.

The justice system:

The study also has bearing on our justice system, Salerno said. “We hope that everyone will be treated the same, but if jurors were looking at the video of the police using force it would seem that male officers might be punished more harshly than female officers. They’re all watching the same incident, but they might judge that person more harshly because they make different assumptions about what drives a male versus female officer’s aggressive behavior. It’s an example of how gender stereotypes can potentially lead to different outcomes.”

<https://news.asu.edu/20200320-discoveries-female-police-officers-use-force-seen-more-justified>

The authors making questionable statements:

The authors claim:

Instead, our findings are consistent with a smaller number of studies demonstrating a gender contrast effect, which finds that in some circumstances people rate women who violate gender stereotypes more favorably than men. Although rare, these studies that show a gender contrast effect are important to document to try to determine what circumstances lead to women being able to demonstrate valued behaviors that are traditionally considered masculine without backlash for violating prescriptive gender stereotypes.

Valued behaviours you say?

Given the extensive press coverage of police officers' use of lethal force, it is perhaps not surprising that people had much more negative reactions to officers who used force relative to those who did not. Female officers were buffered somewhat, however, against this backlash relative to male officers. Despite having seen the exact same video, people trusted the officer who used force more and thought the officer was more effective when they thought the officer was a woman relative to when they thought the officer was a man.

That is not valued.

This is the place to ask other users or mods for research/data on all things male and manhood related.

If you want to know if a study was conducted on a particular thing, chances are it has been and someone knows where to find it or at least where to look for it.

So ask away. No misandry, androphobia, trans-androphobia or racist content (No matter the target race). Finally, no racist misandry.

Let's get some research passed around! :)

EDIT: Please be as specific as possible with your requests. Depending on what you are interested in there could be thousands of research articles, surveys or datasets.

June Observances

10 upvotes | June 2, 2022 | by UnHope20 | Link | Reddit Link

---

Welcome to June! One of the most beautiful months of the year and home to great holidays such as Fathers Day (US) and Juneteenth.

But there are also a ton of great Monthly observances as well. We are taking the time to observe the following:

Pride Month

In honor of Pride Month, we will strive to share more articles on men in BGTQ+ community.

National Safety Month

In observance National Safety Month we will make an effort to share research on men's relationship to work and safety.

National Caribbean American Heritage Month

We don't have many articles about men from the West Indies but we will do our best to increase the output of work on men from these nations in recognition of National Caribbean-American Heritage Month

World Infertility Month

Infertility has become an increasing public health concern over the past few decades effecting millions of men worldwide every year. We will try to do our part to acknowledge World Infertility Month by providing you with relevant research on all things male fertility related.

International Men's Health Month

International Men's Health Month is perhaps the single most underappreciated observance today. Men the majority victims of death by unnatural causes and there isn't a place on earth where the average male lifespan exceeds that of his female counterpart. Users can count on a substantial increase in the amount of health related articles during the entire month.

Cancer from the Sun Month

In observance of Cancer from the Sun Month we will continue to share health related articles on this devastating disease and its effect on men's lives.

Users are encouraged to post anything that relates to any of topics recognized during June. Whether its sharing research about BGTQ+ Men's lives for Pride Month or the experiences of victims of workplace injury for National safety month. All are welcome.

NOTE: Users are encouraged to submit whatever they have on these subjects. But as always no one is expected to be limited to just the topics above. Share whatever you like... Within the rules of course ;)

Sexual coercion context and psychosocial correlates among diverse males.

10 upvotes | July 17, 2021 | by Jaffacakes-and-Jesus | Link | Reddit Link

Sexual coercion is a pervasive problem but rarely examined in men. This study examined sexual coercion and psychosocial correlates among 284 diverse adolescent and emerging adult males in high school and college. Over 4 in 10 participants (43%) experienced sexual coercion: more specifically, the participants reported: verbal coercion (31%, n = 86), seduction coercion (26%, n = 73), physical coercion (18% n = 52), and substance coercion (7%, n = 19). Rates were comparable across high school and college students. Racial differences were found such that Asian participants reported significantly lower rates of sexual coercion than Black, White, and Latino participants. Ninety-five percent of the respondents reported women as the perpetrators; participants also described internal obligation, seductive, and peer pressure tactics in descriptions of coercion experiences. Sexual coercion tactic (i.e., verbal, substance, seduction, physical) and resulting sexual activity (i.e., fondling/attempted intercourse, completed intercourse) were associated with psychosocial outcomes. Specifically, sexual coercion that resulted in sexual intercourse was associated with greater sexual risk-taking and alcohol use. Verbal and substance coercion were associated with psychological distress, and substance coercion was also associated with sexual risk-taking. Considerations for future research and practice implications are discussed. (PsycInfo Database Record (c) 2021 APA, all rights reserved)

Mod Announcement: New anti-brigading rule

9 upvotes | February 28, 2022 | by lightning\_palm | Link | Reddit Link

To combat brigades from this subreddit into other subreddits, Rule 13. No trolling/Brigading – will be expanded (only the bold part is new):

Trolls belong in fairy tails, not r/Male\_Studies. If you are found to be trolling then you will be banned for 30 days. If you troll following your ban, you will be permanently banned.

All suspected downvote brigades will be permanently banned.

Please contact the mods if you believe that your ban is inappropriate and we will reconsider if a sufficient argument is put forth.

To avoid outgoing brigades, linking to posts/comments from other subreddits may only be done through non-participation links; please replace the "www" part of the URL with "np". Likewise, calling out specific users from other subreddits in a way that could potentially encourage brigades or animosity towards that user is prohibited.

Exceptions to this anti-brigading rule (but not the name calling rule) are the following subreddits: r/MalePsychology, r/PoliPsy\_Studies, r/FemaleStudies, r/BMJA, r/BlackMaleAdvocates

We will consider adding additional exceptions to this rule in the future.

New Rules Added. Please Read!!!

8 upvotes | July 17, 2021 | by UnHope20 | Link | Reddit Link

Hi good people of r/Male\_Studies. In order to ensure that you have access to the highest quality intellectual experience possible, new rules have been added.

Some of them are fairly intuitive and we have been doing them by default albeit in the absence of a direct mandate.

Others have been added to ensure that we keep in the spirit of the sub while still keeping a free and inclusive environment.

New Rules

Rule 11: Posts must be about males, men or masculinity.

All posts must be about a study, survey or poll that feature males/masculinity/men as a subject of inquiry.

This can be hard to figure out. So to help you to figure what likely meets this criteria, please remember to T.A.B.

T - Title: Does it suggest that the researchers studied masculinity, male biology or men in general? Key words to look for are Boy(s), male(s), men, androgen(s), dihydrotestosterone, testosterone, gender and sex. The title doesn't necessarily have to feature these words but they are a good indicator of who the subjects might be.

If the title contains words like 'Female' 'Women', 'Woman', 'Girl(s)', 'Tween(s)', or 'femininity' without a masculine equivalent (i.e., Men, males, masculinity etc) or assignee (i.e., 'feminine men') it will likely be removed.

A - Abstract: If the title seems unclear, read the Abstract to the article or survey. Is it clear that the researchers were interested in learning about male biology, men or masculinity from the abstract? If the focus isn't at least in part males or men then it probably didn't study them.

B - Body: Read the Body of the article or survey. After you've read the article, can it reasonably be said that males, men or masculinity were the subject of study? A great way to do this quickly would be to check out the introduction followed by the materials and method section of the paper. If you don't see males or men mentioned as subjects then it's fairly reasonable to assume that the study is not a male study.

NOTE: Exceptions can be made (At mod's discretion) for studies which do not have male subjects if the findings of the study are arguably applicable to our understanding of boys, boyhood, males, manhood or masculinity.

In particular if:

A.) It's work in psychoneuroendocrinology concerned with the effects of androgenic hormones in-general but utilized female subjects as a part of the research paradigm.

B.) It is research that is focused on the trans-community, people who are intersex or people who are eunuchs

Rule 12: Subjects should be human or at least hominin.

Male_Studies is about sharing research on human men. However, we will accept studies about other [Male] hominid if the findings can reasonably be considered applicable to our understanding of human males.

Rule 13: No trolling.

Up to this point we have been very respectful and engaged to great conversation. But as we continue to grow as a sub, there are bound to be people who will try to troll us.

As a result, we are now going to hand out bans to trolls who harrass our members. Any attempt to troll people will be met with single warning. If the behavior persists, it will be met with a 30 day ban. If the trolling continues following the ban, the troll will be permanently banned.

Rule 14: Pre-published, unpublished or retracted works must be indicated as such.

Research that is in pre-publishing, unpublished or retracted MUST be indicated by adding the status of the article in [brackets] following the article title.

For example, if I have a study on Egg style preferences of boys that has been accepted but not published I would title the post Egg Cooking Style Preferences of boys aged 3-15 [Pre-publish]

No changes are required for regular published articles which have not been retracted. Since regular published works constitute 99.7% of what is posted here, I don't foresee this rule becoming terribly cumbersome.

Hopefully, these descriptions are clear. But if you want clarification, feel free to ask.

September Observations

7 upvotes | September 12, 2022 | by AutoModerator | Link | Reddit Link

Welcome to the 9th month!!! It's hard to believe that this year is moving so fast.

Here are the observations for the month of September:

Prostate Cancer Awareness

September is Prostate Cancer Awareness Month. Community members are encouraged (NOT required), to post any research that they have on prostate cancer and its effects on men. There is a growing body of literature in this area so there is always something new to learn and share with others. This disease is one of the most common forms of cancer and one of the deadliest.

According to the Prostate Cancer Foundation

Prostate cancer is the most commonly diagnosed type of cancer in the US (excluding skin cancer), and the second leading cause of cancer in men worldwide. 1 in 8 US men will be diagnosed with prostate cancer at some point in their lives.

Amidst so much optimism and progress in the last 10 years, it's important to keep in mind that prostate cancer is still a deadly disease for some men, and it is the second leading cause of cancer death among men in the US, with 94 men dying from it every day.

These numbers only capture a fraction of the devastation this disease leaves in its wake as the financial burden, and psychological effects associated with this diagnosis and accompanying health decline remain salient in the lives of those living with this deadly disease. Please share anything that you have on this topic.

Hispanic Heritage Month (US)

Hispanic Heritage Month is celebrated Sep 15 to Oct 15 in the US to recognize the achievements and unique contributions that our Hispanic brothers and sisters have made. Though this is a US observation, users are welcome (and encouraged) to post articles about the experiences of Hispanic males from anywhere in the world and at any point in history. Please post away- all is welcome!

National Suicide Prevention Week

September 4 - September 10 is National Suicide Prevention Week. Suicide remains one of the number one killers of males in the world with self-harm consistently appearing in the top-five killers of males between the ages of 14-50 in most industrialized democracies and many autocracies as well. Given the high rate of early deaths among males due to other factors such as homicide, drug use and accidental death, it is astounding to consider that this cause of death ranks so high. Everyone is encouraged to share whatever they have on suicide, its prevalence, the causal factors underlying suicide attempts and its effects on surviving men.

Labor Day (Sep 5)

In honor of Labor Day (US) we encourage community members to post articles that they have about the labor performed by men and their relationship to it as well as the health effects and social implications of the labor market on men's wellbeing and self-concept.

It's great to have you all here with us and we are happy to be in community with you all for another great month.

Sincerely,
Mod Team

Hi everyone,

The purpose of this thread is to be a place where users can request articles about specific topics related to masculinity, males, men and boys.

Users can simply create a comment requesting an article about their topic of choice and everyone who is able will share articles with them on that topic.

Please follow ground rules:

1. Requests must comply with the community rules.
2. Requests are not limited to the mods.
  1. Only 1 topic per request. Users may make up to 5 different requests per day.

Questions to ask yourself:

- Is my request as specific as possible?
- Is my language easy to understand?
- Can I find what I need in the general forum?
- Can I answer someone else's request?

May Observations

Hi everyone, May has four observances:

May

Asian Pacific American Heritage Month. This is a great opportunity to go out and learn something about men of Asian and/or Pacific American Heritage. Users are encouraged to consider positing research findings about the men from these awesome communities.

Haitian Heritage Month Please please whatever you have on Haitian men/masculinity. I'd love to learn more about these men. Bonus points if you can find any work on the religious experiences of Haitian men.

Jewish American Heritage Month This is one group that users are especially encouraged to share research on. I haven't seen much work on Jewish men so if anyone has anything, please share it.

National Masturbation Month Given the stigma, shame and attacks that have traditionally been associated with masturbation in males, it remains essential for the health and wellbeing of boys and men everywhere that we continue to highlight the importance of this month in our community and our commitment to increasing the public's understanding of this topic.

Please share whatever you have on this topic.

Hi Everyone, January is Slavery and Human Trafficking Prevention month.

In honor of this month we encourage users to post anything that they have on the male victims of slavery and human trafficking.

NOTE: This is NOT mandatory.

If you don't have any articles on slavery or human trafficking, post whatever you have.

If you have an article about human trafficking but want to post something else about men on a different subject, then post that instead.

Post whatever you like. As long as it follows the rules we are happy to have it. :)

If you are interested in posting something for Slavery and Human Trafficking Prevention month but can't decide what to post here are some ideas.

- Male prostitution (Child & Adult)
- Forced marriage (Child & Adult)
- Child soldiers
- Forced labor (Domestic & commercial)
- Historical examples of slavery
- Organ Trafficking
- Sexual Slavery

Looking forward to some of the interesting posts that are coming. □

ABSTRACT This paper takes its cue from those given at the conference Psychotherapy and Healthy Masculinity. These prompted the author to reflect on how he experienced masculinity as a psychotherapist working with families within NHS England's CAMHS. The difficulties in children leading to their referral demonstrated a problematic parenting in which the diminished role of the father was causal. Beliefs about masculinity held within the family matrix were largely ones that functioned to fill epistemic lacunae. Such filling represents a double injustice. Not only is there very little empirically based thinking about fathers in our western culture for families to draw upon to make sense of their experiences. Instead, this dearth is often falsely compensated through ideologically derived pejorative concepts, that invariably do not relate to experience. The paper discusses the perniciousness of relying upon ideological perceptions of masculinity through focusing upon how easily they are acquired and work against the mental health of children and their families.

[Academic] [Survey] Do bilingual speakers process gender stereotypes differently in their respective languages?

6 upvotes | July 23, 2022 | by mrcn00094 | Link | Reddit Link

As a bilingual person, I've always been fascinated by the way bilinguals process information in their native and second languages. Many of you have probably noticed that swearing in our second language is not as 'emotionally heavy' as in our native language, which researchers link to weaker emotional sensitivity in our second language.

As a young psycholinguist, I am also curious about how bilingual brains process gender stereotypes. Together with my colleagues at AMU, we've attempted to answer this question by investigating bilingual speakers' brain activity while reading gender stereotype-related sentences. I'm curious about your experiences, though. Have you ever felt any differences in how you perceive gender stereotypes in your native and second languages? Do you think there are any differences similar to those in how bilinguals process emotional content?

If you're a native speaker of English and would like to support our research, you can fill in a 10-minute survey of how (in)congruent with gender stereotypes the sentences prepared for our EEG experiment are. We'd much appreciate your help!

Hi everyone,

The purpose of this thread is to be a place where users can request articles about specific topics related to masculinity, males, men and boys.

Users can simply create a comment requesting an article about their topic of choice and everyone who is able will share articles with them on that topic.

Please follow ground rules:

1. Requests must comply with the community rules.
2. Requests are not limited to the mods.
  1. Only 1 topic per request. Users may make up to 5 different requests per day.

Questions to ask yourself:

- Is my request as specific as possible?
- Is my language easy to understand?
- Can I find what I need in the general forum?
- Can I answer someone else's request?

Minimization of Male Suffering: Social Perception of Victims and Perpetrators of Opposite-Sex Sexual Coercion

6 upvotes | July 17, 2021 | by Jaffacakes-and-Jesus | Link | Reddit Link

Studies show equal impact of sexual harassment (SH) on men and women, whereas lay perceptions are that women suffer more. We identify the phenomenon of minimization of male suffering (MMS), which occurs when people assume that SH has less effect on men's well-being and which results in the perpetrators of SH on men being evaluated less harshly. To verify whether these effects occur, we conducted two studies in which we presented stories describing acts of sexual coercion (SC, study 1) and SC or financial coercion (FC, study 2) and measured the perceived suffering of victims and the perception of the perpetrators. Both studies showed that female victims were perceived to suffer more from SC and FC and that perpetrators of both acts on women were evaluated more negatively. The results support our hypothesis that the suffering of male victims is minimized as they are perceived to suffer less than women.

The Relationship Between Heteronormative Beliefs and Verbal Sexual Coercion in College Students

Heteronormative standards for sex and romance situate men and women in a hierarchical relationship that characterizes masculinity as active and persistent and femininity as passive and responsive to male sexuality. Individuals who endorse heteronormative beliefs, such as the belief that men should dominate women sexually or that men are always ready for sex, may therefore be more approving of and experienced with behaviors that involve one partner exerting sexual pressure on the other. In the present study, we investigated the relationship between the endorsement of heteronormative beliefs and men's and women's approval of and experience with verbal sexual coercion (both as a perpetrator and as a victim). We first established a gender-neutral higher-order construct representing heteronormative beliefs consisting of multiple measures of gender norms for sexuality and relationships in a sample of 555 heterosexual college students (292 women, 263 men) primarily of Hispanic origin. We next found that endorsement of heteronormative beliefs was positively correlated with personal acceptance of verbal sexual coercion strategies and personal experience as the victim and perpetrator of verbal sexual coercion for both men and women. While men reported more overall support for heteronormative beliefs and more experience as a victim and perpetrator of verbal sexual coercion, there were minimal gender differences in how heteronormative beliefs related to verbal sexual coercion variables. The positive association found between heteronormative beliefs and sexual coercion in young men's and women's relationships represents an important step towards better understanding the antecedents and consequences of intimate partner violence.[PUBLICATION ABSTRACT]

Scholarship opportunity

MATES in Construction Australia has recently launched the 2021 application round for the Allison Milner Memorial PhD Scholarship. Applications are open until October 15.

The scholarship has been established to honour the legacy of Associate Professor Allison Milner, who served as the MATES National Academic Director from 2013 until her untimely passing in 2019. Allison was passionate about addressing the high suicide rate among workers – predominantly men – in blue collar industries. In light of this, the scholarship supports PhD research that addresses suicide prevention initiatives in male-dominated, blue collar industries within Australia.

Applications can be made by those currently engaged in Honours or Masters-by-research programs, who intend to enroll in a PhD. Please note that existing PhD candidates are also eligible to apply for the scholarship – see the application guide below for more details.

If interested students have any queries about the process, they are welcome to contact Laura Cox on [lcox@mates.org.au](mailto:lcox@mates.org.au)

Male participant request 18+ years

I am in final year of my Psychology degree and would like to request for participants to take part in my dissertation.

My research focuses on how Social Media can increase the levels of SOCIAL ANXIETY in people with EATING DISORDERS.

I would like to examine why there is stigma attached to gender on these disorders. Is it same across cultures?

why are these conditions only associated with females? hence I would like to prove anyone could be a victims of these disorders too.

To take part: a Diagnosis of Eating Disorders is not necessary, as long as you feel you have disordered eating habits, and experience social anxiety then You are eligible for participation.

Ethics for this study have been approved by The University of Bolton and the study is completely ANONYMOUS

I would really appreciate you time and effort in completing my survey, the link is below:

Hi Everyone,

Glad we've all made it to November. It's surprising how quickly the year has gone by and the mod team is genuinely excited for the future of this community. November has only three observations but they are no less awesome.

**Movember****

While June is men's health awareness month. The month of November is also a very important observation period known as Movember . During this period, users are encouraged to share any posts about men's health research.

**Native American Alaskan Heritage Month****

In solidarity with our brothers of Native American and Alaskan heritage, we will strive to share more articles about the boys and men in this communities and we encourage you others to do the same.

**Thanksgiving****

We will be hosting a thanksgiving thread from 11/20 - 11/30 where users will have the opportunity to share which articles they are thankful for having found/read. More details to come.

Last thing, as always no one is expected to limit their posts to only these two topics. If you other research to share please do.... We are happy to have whatever articles you want to share. Please do :)

Cheers,

The Mod Team

Sexual coercion in men and women: Similar behaviors, different predictors.

5 upvotes | July 17, 2021 | by Jaffacakes-and-Jesus | Link | Reddit Link

A growing body of literature supports the contention that both women and men employ various seductive, manipulative, intoxication, and even forceful tactics of sexual coercion to obtain sexual contact from unwilling partners. Although the self-reported coercive behavior of men and women may appear similar in many respects, predictors of such behavior seem to vary in important ways across gender. In addition to examining the prevalence of coercive behaviors reported across gender, the present study examined the extent to which four variables found in models of male sexual coercion predicted self-reported use of sexual coercion in a sample ( $n = 186$ ) of college men and women: prior sexual abuse, sexual dominance, sociosexuality, and sexual compulsivity. Although prior sexual abuse seemed to be part of a cycle of sexual coercion among both men and women, key predictors of sexual coercion among men were sexual dominance and sociosexuality, whereas the key predictor of sexual coercion among women was sexual compulsivity. These findings support the notion that whereas men may behave coercively to obtain or maintain an impersonal sense of power and control, women may behave coercively to achieve some level of interpersonal connection when feeling out of control. (PsycInfo Database Record (c) 2021 APA, all rights reserved)

Predictors of Sexually Coercive Behavior in a Nationally Representative Sample of Adolescent Males

---

Data from male participants in the National Longitudinal Study of Adolescent Health are used to examine childhood predictors of late adolescent and early adulthood sexually coercive behavior and adolescent mediators of these relationships. A path analysis shows that experiencing sexual abuse as a child has a direct effect on perpetrating subsequent coercion that is partially mediated by early sexual initiation. Involvement in delinquent activities in adolescence was the only additional significant predictor of sexually coercive behavior and completely mediated the relationship between physical abuse in childhood and later sexual coercion. Of note, more than half of men reporting sexually aggressive acts had no history of childhood victimization, so pathways to sexually coercive behavior for this group remain unidentified. In addition to the universal prevention approaches currently in use in the field, these findings suggest that targeted prevention programs need to be formulated for youth with histories of childhood sexual or physical abuse.

Men and women as perpetrators and victims of sexual aggression in heterosexual and same-sex encounters: A study of first-year college students in Germany

This study examined the prevalence of sexual aggression and victimization in a large convenience sample of  $N = 2,149$  first-year college students from different universities in Germany. Participants were asked about both victimization by, and perpetration of, sexual aggression since the age of 14. Both same-sex and heterosexual victim–perpetrator constellations were examined. Prevalence rates were established for different victim–perpetrator relationships (partners, acquaintances, strangers) and for incidents involving alcohol consumption by one or both partners. The overall perpetration rate was 13.2%, for men and 7.6% for women. The overall victimization rate was 35.9% for women and 19.4% for men. A disparity between victimization and perpetration reports was found for both men and women. Perpetration and victimization rates were highest among participants who had sexual contacts with both opposite-sex and same-sex partners. Sexual aggression and victimization rates were higher between current or former partners and acquaintances than between strangers. Alcohol consumption by one or both partners was involved in almost 75% of all victimization and almost 70% of all perpetration incidents. The findings portray a comprehensive picture of the scale of sexual aggression and victimization in college students with different sexual lifestyles. *Aggr. How Men Experience Family Dispute Resolution Mediation by Nurit Zubery

Abstract

Abstract Family mediation is mandatory in New Zealand since 2014 for disputes between separating parents regarding contact and day-to-day care of their children. This study aims to examine the experiences of fathers at family-mediation in an open, non-directive way. The study used qualitative, semi-structured interviews with 13 fathers who attended family mediation. The interviews revealed a highly challenging post-separation period for fathers as they battle through severe grief combined with confusing societal messages about fatherhood. The devaluation of fatherhood surfaced as a pervasive theme prevalent with mothers and mediators, as well as with fathers themselves. The most prominent experience that transpired in the interviews was gender-based bias and a strong feeling of powerlessness as fathers perceive mothers as holding absolute power in the mediation. Most fathers could see the potential in mediation and appreciated working together as parents to maximise the wellbeing of their children. Yet, the full potential of mediation has not been fulfilled for most. Implications for mediators include the need to understand and respect fathers, as well as the need for reflective practice, especially around gender-bias and gender-power issues. Mediators can contribute to the improvement of family-mediation by supporting the new fatherhood model thus enabling the full potential of family-mediation through more engagement of fathers

Hi everyone,

The purpose of this thread is to be a place where users can request articles about specific topics related to masculinity, males, men and boys.

Users can simply create a comment requesting an article about their topic of choice and everyone who is able will share articles with them on that topic.

Please follow ground rules:

1. Requests must comply with the community rules.
2. Requests are not limited to the mods.
  1. Only 1 topic per request. Users may make up to 5 different requests per day.

Questions to ask yourself:

- Is my request as specific as possible?
- Is my language easy to understand?
- Can I find what I need in the general forum?
- Can I answer someone else's request?

April Observations!

Happy April!

This month has a lot of observations and we encourage community members to post any research that they have about men as they relate to the topics below.

Arab American Heritage Month

Great time to post any research about Arab men.

Cancer Control Month

Any articles or reports about cancer prevention and treatment among men is welcome. Please post them if you have them.

National Child Abuse Prevention Month

Millions of men have been the victims of child abuse and millions of boys are abused every year. Any research would be greatly appreciated.

Second Chance Month

Perhaps the least talked about awareness month. We need more research on the stories of formally incarcerated individuals.

Sexual Assault Awareness Month

An issue that gets nowhere near the attention that it deserves. Research on sexual assault against men is finally starting to blossom into its own topic of study. A big part of awareness is bringing this issue to light through research and I for one and always glad to see more posts on this topic.

Testicular Cancer Awareness Month

There are quite a few insightful articles written on this topic and users are STRONGLY encouraged to post whatever articles that they have on it.

As always, users are not required to limit their posts to any of the above topics. We will take whatever conforms to community rules and enriches us intellectually. :)

New Rule!

4 upvotes | October 30, 2021 | by UnHope20 | Link | Reddit Link

ATTENTION! We ask that you read this entire post from beginning to end and contact us with any questions.

The following rule change does not necessarily reflect the personal opinions of the moderator team on the ethics of the issue in question.

There is a significant amount of intellectual/ideological diversity on this team and while we don't always personally agree on what is good for society at large, we all strive to do what is best for this community.

Having said this we have added the following new sub rule:

15. No pirated/illegal material. Do not post links to any pirated material, do not use the threads in this community to tell anyone how to access pirated material. Links to piracy sites will be removed and mods give one warning prior to bans. Links to specific articles which have been pirated will result in a ban.

We recognize that everyone has his own opinion on the issue of pirating copyrighted materials.

But regardless of an individual's motive(s), that person will be banned if he posts a link to pirated articles or websites which illegally distribute research articles.

The Reddit user agreement prohibits users from violating the intellectual property rights of others. For more details see the Reddit User Agreement.

Further, Reddit Inc is headquartered in a nation (U.S.) where it is illegal to redistribute copyrighted works without prior approval from the legal owner of the intellectual property in question. Further, theft is against the law in the vast majority of nations.

As a result of these things, users may not link to websites that engage in the unlawful acquisition and/or redistribution of works.

Examples of these include BookFi, Libgen and SciHub.

Anyone who links to websites which engage in illegal activity (Piracy notwithstanding) will face a 30-day ban.

Anyone who encourages breaking the law will be permanently banned, no exceptions.

Anyone who uses posts or comments in this sub to teach others how to engage in piracy will be banned, no exceptions.

Please see Reddit's policy on copyright infringement here for more information.

Having said this,

We have absolutely no way of knowing whether a pdf, word document, or spreadsheet that you post has been pirated or if it was acquired through legal means.

Further, we cannot (Nor care to) stop people from trading links to pirated material outside of this sub. So, we are asking in good faith that our users do the right thing and do not use this community to engage in illegal activity.

Sexual Coercion within Mixed-Sex Couples: The Roles of Sexual Motives, Revictimization, and Reperpetration

4 upvotes | July 17, 2021 | by Jaffacakes-and-Jesus | Link | Reddit Link

Research suggests that a history of childhood sexual abuse, and previous experiences of sexual coercion, may predict sexual coercion victimization and perpetration. More recently, sexual motivation has been found to correlate with both consensual and non-consensual sexual activity. However, sexual motivation has not been examined in association with previous experiences of abuse and sexual coercion. The aim of this study was to investigate childhood sexual abuse, previous sexual coercion experiences, and sexual motives of both partners as possible risk factors for current sexual coercion victimization and perpetration within a sample of 209 mixed-sex couples. This study examined whether power, stress relief, partner pressure, and imposition motives contributed unique variance to the prediction of sexual coercion beyond that accounted for by past childhood sexual abuse and sexual coercion events. Using hierarchical logistic regressions, four predictive models were examined for both male and female sexual coercion perpetration and victimization. Results show that childhood sexual abuse was only a significant predictor of female sexual coercion perpetration, whereas male sexual coercion victimization and perpetration were predicted by sexual coercion victimization and perpetration in previous relationships. Power motives were also significant predictors of sexual coercion perpetration, and imposition was a significant predictor of sexual coercion victimization for both genders.

Have a specific request? Make it here!

3 upvotes | March 7, 2023 | by UnHope20 | Link | Reddit Link

Hi everyone,

The purpose of this thread is to be a place where users can request articles about specific topics related to masculinity, males, men and boys.

Users can simply create a comment requesting an article about their topic of choice and everyone who is able will share articles with them on that topic.

Please follow ground rules:

1. Requests must comply with the community rules.
2. Requests are not limited to the mods.
  1. Only 1 topic per request. Users may make up to 5 different requests per day.

Questions to ask yourself:

- Is my request as specific as possible?
- Is my language easy to understand?
- Can I find what I need in the general forum?
- Can I find what I need in the article archive?
- Can I answer someone elses request?
- Have I allowed enough time for the community to give me what I need?

These are just a few of the guidelines that can improve your search.

Monthly Observations and Holiday's

3 upvotes | January 17, 2023 | by UnHope20 | Link | Reddit Link

Hi everyone.

It is time once again to give us your recommendations for monthly observations or holidays.

During a month-long observation, community members can expect to see increases in the rate of posts with studies covering topics about issues related to the observations in-question. This doesn't effect the normal posting schedule and is somewhat independent of the content in other posts.

This means that community members who are not interested in studies relating to a particular monthly theme can still expect to enjoy the same types of posts that they do year-round.

So what monthly observations would you like to propose for 2023?

Please indicate the name, month and nationality of the observation as well as the meaning of the observation if you would like to have it considered for addition to our monthly observations.

Womb envy: The cause of misogyny and even male achievement?

Please note that there is no empirical evidence for any of these claims, hence the flair Philosophy. Also note that the author of this study is likely ideologically motivated (noticeable in their research about Gender Pedagogy in Swedish preschools). However, I still think she raises valid points, which is why I posted this article.

The concept of womb envy can explain many different phenomena like the inflexibility of male gender roles, the mechanism behind the propensity of males towards high achievement (womb envy as both an enabler and a result of hypergamy), the cultural tendency to assume male hyper-agency and female hypo-agency, the female-male / private-public gender dichotomy, the practice of circumcision, and even men's tendency for self-flagellation and the acceptance of the concept of "male privilege" and "female oppression" (Gamma Bias hypothesis). In my comments, I will quote a few excerpts which I found salient.

Experience of sexual coercion and risky sexual behavior among Ugandan university students

Background

Growing worldwide evidence shows that the experience of sexual coercion is fairly prevalent among young people and is associated with risky sexual behavior thereafter. The causal mechanisms behind this are unclear but may be dependent on specific contextual determinants. Little is known about factors that could buffer the negative effects of coercion. The aim of this study was to assess the association between the experience of sexual coercion and risky sexual behavior among university students of both sexes in Uganda.

Methods

In 2005, 980 (80%) out of a total of 1,220 students enrolled in Mbarara University of Science and Technology in Uganda participated in a self-administered questionnaire covering socio-demographic and religious factors, social capital, mental health, alcohol use, and sexual behavior. A validated scale of six items was used to assess the experience of sexual coercion. Logistic regression analyses were applied to control for confounders. Potential buffering factors were analyzed by testing for effect modification.

Results

Fifty-nine percent of those who responded had previously had sexual intercourse. Among the male students 29.0%, and among the female students 33.1% reported having had some experience of sexual coercion. After controlling for age, gender, and educational level of household of origin, role of religion and trust in others sexual coercion was found to be statistically significantly associated with previously had sex (OR 1.6, 95% CI; 1.1-2.3), early sexual debut (OR 2.4, 95% CI; 1.5-3.7), as well as with having had a great number of sexual partners (OR 1.9, 95% CI; 1.2-3.0), but not with inconsistent condom use.

Scoring low on an assessment of mental health problems, reporting high trust in others, or stating that religion played a major role in one's family of origin seemed to buffer the negative effect that the experience of sexual coercion had on the likelihood of having many sexual partners.

Conclusion

The findings of this study suggest that the experience of sexual coercion is common among youth/young adults in Uganda and is subsequently associated with risky sexual behavior in both sexes. The existence of individual and contextual factors that buffer the effects mentioned was also demonstrated. In the Ugandan context, this has implications for policy formulation and the implementation of preventive strategies for combating HIV/AIDS.

Sociosexuality as predictor of sexual harassment and coercion in female and male high school students

Sexual harassment and coercion have mainly been considered from a sex difference perspective. While traditional social science theories have explained harassment as male dominance of females, the evolutionary perspective has suggested that sex differences in the desire for sex are a better explanation. This study attempts to address individual differences associated with harassment from an evolutionary perspective. Considering previous research that has found links between sociosexual orientation inventory (SOI) and harassment, we consider whether this association can be replicated in a large, representative sample of high school students ( $N=1199$ ) from a highly egalitarian culture. Expanding the previous studies which mainly focused on male perpetrators and female victims, we also examine females and males as both perpetrators and as victims. We believe that unrestricted sociosexuality motivates people to test whether others are interested in short-term sexual relations in ways that sometimes might be defined as harassment. Furthermore, unrestricted individuals signal their sociosexual orientation, and while they do not desire all individuals that react to these signals with sexual advances, they attract much more sexual advances than individuals with restricted sociosexual orientations, especially from other unrestricted members of the opposite sex. This more or less unconscious signaling thus makes them exploitable, i.e., harassable. We find that SOI is a predictor for sexual harassment and coercion among high school students. The paper concludes that, as expected, unrestricted sociosexuality predicts being both a perpetrator and a victim of both same-sex and opposite-sex harassment.

How to know if your study should be posted.

It can be difficult to know if your study belongs here or not. So here are some simple questions to ask yourself which may help to distinguish what we count as a "Male study".

What are your intentions for posting the study?

Are you trying to help boys and men or do you have another agenda? We are not going to tolerate any anti-male/sexist content. We are also not going to tolerate any homophobic, racist transphobic content.

If we have any reason to believe that a post was created with malicious intent, we will remove the post and inform you of why it was removed.

Who or what is the study about?

The easiest way to identify a male study is to identify whether or not males or manhood is a subject of the study. Is your survey or study examining something about men? If males are not a primary subject of the study then it's NOT a male study.

Who made the study/survey?

While all data is valuable, some sources of data are more reliable than others. Who are the people that conducted your study/survey? Do they have training on the subject matter? Were their research methods reliable? Is their instrumentation valid?

Who funded the research?

Even if an expert on the subject matter conducted your study, you need to consider where the research funding came from. A private corporation, political organisation or religious institution may have something to gain from specific research findings. Please consider sharing the names of anyone involved in this study that may have had a conflict of interest.

Posts from groups that have a history of anti-male activity will be removed.

In general most things are acceptable in terms of the discipline or subject matter. Please add a flair to your post. If you are not sure of how to tag your post, you can contact the mods for recommendations. Otherwise, add the flair "Multidisciplinary" for studies that encompass several fields of study.

Finally, if you feel like it belongs here then chances are your study belongs here. So please post it. We are more welcoming than skeptical of research. :)

In observance of Arab American Heritage month in the U.S. we encourage people to post research findings, polls and surveys about our Arab brothers.

What if you don't have any data about Arab boys/men? Post whatever you do have!

As always, we value all of our brothers equally and want to see any research on males that you may have regardless of heritage.

Though we are going to be making an additional effort to post data on our Arab boys and men, this doesn't mean that work on other ethnic groups or races is unwelcome.

We just want to promote more knowledge about the billions of Arab boys and men who continue to enrich this planet each and every day.

Much love to my Arab brothers!

In honor of the US observance of Black History month we encourage you to post studies and surveys that talk about black men.

That being said, we'd love to have information about men of ALL colors. So if all you've got is a study on Asian men, then post about Asian men, if all you've got is a survey of White men, then post about White men.

ALL races of men are welcome and we want to hear about how all men are doing.
We've got love for all of you!!!

A Descriptive Analysis of College Students' Experiences of Female-Perpetrated Sexual Assault

https://www.researchgate.net/publication/342535689\_A\_Descriptive\_Analysis\_of\_College\_Students'\_Experiences\_of\_Female-Perpetrated\_Sexual\_Assault

The current study sought to explore the experiences of college students who have experienced female-perpetrated sexual assault, and to compare their experiences to those of students assaulted by male perpetrators. A total of 11,165 college students across 11 years completed an online, anonymous survey measuring self-reports of sexual violence, context surrounding their victimization, help-seeking, and well-being. Of the students surveyed, 531 students reported experiencing sexual assault and identified both their own gender and the gender of their perpetrator, and 14% reported having experienced female-perpetrated sexual assault. Victims of female perpetrators were more likely to report their perpetrator being an (ex)intimate partner and less likely to be a stranger. Victims of female perpetrators were also more likely to report that their victimization involved their own drug use. Overall, victims of female-perpetrated sexual assault were less likely to tell anyone about their victimization, or to report to on- or off-campus resources. Finally, our findings suggest that victims of female perpetrators have comparable well-being to victims of male perpetrators. These finding contribute to the overall understanding of female-perpetrated sexual assault.

Predictors of Sexual Coercion Against Women and Men: A Multilevel, Multinational Study of University Students

Several explanations have been forwarded to account for sexual coercion in romantic relationships. Feminist theory states that sexual coercion is the result of male dominance over women and the need to maintain that dominance; however, studies showing that women sexually coerce men point towards weaknesses in that theory. Some researchers have, therefore, suggested that it is the extent to which people view the other gender as hostile that influences these rates. Furthermore, much research suggests that a history of childhood sexual abuse is a strong risk factor for later sexual victimization in relationships. Few researchers have empirically evaluated the first two explanations and little is known about whether sexual revictimization operates for men or across cultures. In this study, hierarchical linear modeling was used to investigate whether the status of women and adversarial sexual beliefs predicted differences in sexual coercion across 38 sites from around the world, and whether sexual revictimization operated across genders and cultures. Participants included 7,667 university students from 38 sites. Results showed that the relative status of women at each site predicted significant differences in levels of sexual victimization for men, in that the greater the status of women, the higher the level of forced sex against men. In addition, differences in adversarial sexual beliefs across sites significantly predicted both forced and verbal sexual coercion for both genders, such that greater levels of hostility towards women at a site predicted higher levels of forced and verbal coercion against women and greater levels of hostility towards men at a site predicted higher levels of forced and verbal coercion against men. Finally, sexual revictimization occurred for both genders and across all sites, suggesting that sexual revictimization is a cross-gender, cross-cultural phenomenon. Results are discussed in terms of their contributions to the literature, limitations of the current study, and suggestions for future research.

The criminal justice system plays a pivotal role in addressing the safety of victims of intimate partner abuse (IPA). Over the past 40 years, most changes in the criminal justice response to IPA have been made with the intention of improving support to abused women and their children. However, a growing body of research shows there are many men who are victims of IPA. This qualitative study explored the help-seeking experiences of 38 abused men within the criminal justice system in Australia, Canada, the United Kingdom, and the United States. Twelve online focus groups (three in each country) were conducted and themes were identified inductively at a semantic level. Thematic analysis identified that most of their experiences were negative and reflected the gender paradigm embedded in the criminal justice response. This study offers insights into the relevance of a gender-inclusive criminal justice response in addressing IPA.

Happy International Women's Day!

Happy International Women's day! Though we are dedicated to studies about boys and men that doesn't mean that we don't value the billions of women.

If you haven't already done so, go learn something new about women. Doesn't matter which women, just learn something new.

There are Asian women, Black women, Middle Eastern women, Native American, Pacific Islander women, White women, mixed women. There are women who are Hispanic and women who are not.

There are straight women, lesbian women, bisexual women, asexual women, demi-sexual women.

There are cis-women, trans-women and a bunch of other identities.

There are Agnostic women, Atheist women, Buddhist women, Christian women, Hindu women, Jain women, Jewish women, Muslim women, Sikh women and more...

There are wealthy women, middle class women, working class women, homeless women and many more....

There are women on every continent, in every nation, province city and town. They speak every language and occupy every culture.

I could go on and on. But the point is that there are many different types of women to learn about. Pick some to learn about. Cheers.
