

YouDislikeMyOpinion ARCHIVE

compiled by /u/dream-hunter
May 15, 2023

www.TheRedArchive.com

Table of Contents

We are growing fast. We are now the 4400.	5
Relationships based purely on sexual attraction and the goal of sexual stimulation. What do you think of them?	6
For those women that don't believe that attraction is like a drug.	7
In this video: Girls who don't like their boyfriend hanging out with other girls 1 on 1, can't explain why they hang out with other guys 1 on 1, even when they know their boyfriend doesn't like it.	8
From /r/relationships: Girlfriend goes out "dancing" with other guys. OP: "I just have never been comfortable with it. She dances very slutty. It's fine when it's just for me". "When I asked her how she was dancing with the other guy, she said "You know how I dance"".	9
My thoughts on the economics of relationships. Part 1	10
Poll: how many of us have exited or remain in the LTR (3+ year relationship) dating market?	11
I guess this would be our version of /r/cringe.	12
I've noticed a trend in TRP that a lot of guys in an LTR/Marriage and their partner/wife are open to adding another girl into the mix. Who here is Alpha/TRP that is in an LTR or marriage (3+ years), and is not open to adding another person into their bedroom?	13
Female Ethnic Facial Composites. Which One Are You Most Attracted To?	14
Your description of a girl worth keeping.	15
Reddit deems consensual sex as rape in comments of /r/videos	16
Girl in /r/sex confirms that being alpha leads to getting laid, being beta leads to getting played.	17
How many of us smoke? [Poll] - Additional discussion about smoking, how it affects life, and sexual strategy inside.	19
Woman that "loves her husband more than anything" cheats on him with her coworker. Wants him to forgive her and look past it. She finds out he cheated on her too, suddenly she sees that the marriage was "a big mistake".	20
Is it immoral to have sex with a married woman or a women in a long term relationship?	21
Do you definitively know even one attractive girl that has never physically cheated in her entire life?	22
A prime example of blue pill logic. • Why women and white knights see game as coercion • Why women and white knights see gaming a girl as rape AND MORE!	23
A prime example of blue pill logic. • Why women and white knights see game as coercion • Why women and white knights see gaming a girl as rape AND MORE!	24
Men with a high sexual partner count that prefer women with a low sexual partner count	25
How far will women go? Here is what happens. Reason #345 to maintain frame.	26
Go One Level Deeper	27
Older women will NEVER be able to compete with younger girls on youthful looks	31
No one gives a shit about you.	32
Hey RP Women! My friend asked: What value can women add to a man's life?	33

Why Women Can't Give Dating Advice to Men --- Find something wrong with the logic of this post.	34
A shout-out to feminism.	36
Girl: "Part of me says: 'You're young, pretty, and can find a guy who will satisfy your needs within minutes of walking into a bar/club/show'"	37
Alpha fucks, beta bucks. From the Norwegian nature vs. nurture documentary.	38
Hamsters are off the rails. Porn star relationship problems galore. Monogamy = having a partner and sucking extra dick on the side. & MORE	39
Update to the guy who's wife fucked 25 other guys.	42
Discussion question: How much longer is the general population going to keep denying that women are attracted to men with alpha qualities?	43
Doing it right vs. doing it wrong.	44
Strategy: Switching the relationship dynamic to having your needs met. The "Last Resort Strategy"	45
Power and Violence. Violence is Golden.	46
The [Musician/Actor/XYZ] Standard	47
My favorite video on raw lust/desire. Woman interviews bodybuilder James (flex) Lewis. She can barely hold herself together. Watch the daydreaming, watch the lip bite. Oh, that girl in the pink, that's James' wife.	49
Required Reading: Lessons from a psychopath: Understanding the reality behind how people work, the extent to which people can be manipulated, and the amount of power one can hold over others.	50
Stanley the psychopath. Excerpts and analysis by Chateau Heartiste from The Mask of Sanity, a book written by American psychiatrist Hervey M. Cleckley, first published in 1941.	51
Let's talk about implied social contracts, rules, obligations, responsibilities, and duties.	52
An amazing compilation of red pill / self-development books created by the users of the /r/AlreadyRed community. I would also like to invite those of you who are already red to /r/AlreadyRed	55
Central hub of MGTOW shuts down. We were right (surprise).	56
Why don't MGTOW just use reddit instead of forums?	58
A tale of the drug that is alpha dick.	59
Question for Blue: What's the problem with this strategy?	61
What is your dark triad score	62
Let's compile a list of cons to circumcision that we can later make into an info-graphic so that we have something easy to spread around to other men/parents considering the operation for themselves/their kids.	63
The restaurant analogy.	64
[Serious] Discussion on how to identify feminists, social justice warriors, and other high risk individuals around us.	66
Thoughts on that recent "tinder study", aesthetics, and female rational	67
Why give power to your partner?	69
What is your definition of Misogyny?	70
Retards, Retards Everywhere. This is the world we live in.	71
What exactly does "objectifying" mean?	76
My take on the spreadsheet husband	77

New Sub. /r/DebateRedPill	81
New Sub. /r/DebateRedPill	82
Discussion: Women's love is inferior to men's love	83
Let's talk about the next chapter in the Sexodus series in regards to meaningful lifelong commitments with women and the impacts on men that will occur in the next few years. ...	85
Investment in Women	86
The current state of affairs and a taste of what is to come. Single mother parenting.	88
Why it is important to add value to this community	91
Click "top", sort by "all time", and read.	92
Those of you in a relationship. Why are you in one? What do you get from being in a relationship?	93
Question for BP. Should the men that women cheat on their partners with feel bad about it? Assume the parties involved are not part of the same social circle, and assume that the girl is the one pushing for it.	94
What previous disagreed upon topics have been debated to a point of agreement between all pills?	95
Describe where you think the line is in terms of what makes something manipulative and give examples if you have any.	96
What are the biggest points of disagreement between the pills?	97
Do you think men are more violent than women in relationships?	98
Partner screening questions.	99
Is nervousness an emotion that creates attraction?	100
Do you think TRP can be used ethically?	101
Warning: Some women want to create a Fast Track to Prison program™ for young men. Teens as young as 18 could be thrown in prison in the future for failing to comply to ever changing consent laws and law interpretations.	102
Things that some people on TRP complain about, which actually make sense, making the complaint null	103
Quite a simple question: Is the core foundation of a monogamous relationship, sex?	104

We are growing fast. We are now the 4400.

0 upvotes | April 24, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Relationships based purely on sexual attraction and the goal of sexual stimulation. What do you think of them?

0 upvotes | May 17, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

This would involve the man and woman going about their lives normally, except for when they are together. At that point, he/she/they would do everything to sexually stimulate each other and/or themselves.

An easy way to rationalize this is just to think of a girl that you like, and everything that you would do to get her in bed and nail her there repeatedly. In this type of relationship, you would use the most effective approach to seducing her at all times.

To imagine a typical problem/solution, just imagine a situation where a girl starts to "act up" in any way, shape, or form. Your response would have to be to seduce her by any means necessary (using alpha seduction).

If anyone's got a better way to sum up what I'm trying to say, it would be much appreciated.

Cheers.

For those women that don't believe that attraction is like a drug.

0 upvotes | May 19, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

In this video: Girls who don't like their boyfriend hanging out with other girls 1 on 1, can't explain why they hang out with other guys 1 on 1, even when they know their boyfriend doesn't like it.

40 upvotes | May 19, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

From /r/relationships: Girlfriend goes out "dancing" with other guys. OP: "I just have never been comfortable with it. She dances very slutty. It's fine when it's just for me". "When I asked her how she was dancing with the other guy, she said "You know how I dance"".

4 upvotes | May 20, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

My thoughts on the economics of relationships. Part 1

5 upvotes | May 20, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

I don't see why people have such a hard time understanding the way attraction, love, and relationships work in principle. It's simple economics. Let's say that you are a guy and you have a goal, getting laid, so now you optimize your actions to get to that goal. This exact thought process is what companies use to expand into new markets.

You are now an organization. You'll need a product (you), marketing (your image), finances (your financial stability), R&D (learning), operations (your activities), public relations (the people you have in your life), and executive strategy (your overall plan), to name a few.

And finally, you'll need management (your brain), to create and oversee the execution of the overall strategy and subsequent departments that will manipulate the variables of the product and organization to achieve the most effective results as efficiently as possible.

Every once in a while, the board of directors has to gather independent of management to examine and ensure that management is utilizing the best overall strategy possible to achieve the organizational goal (you have to use metacognition to see whether or not your thinking is really the best thinking that you can do, because everything that you do in the future is dependent on the way you think)

The girl wants the product and the investment. So she will want the product to be of the highest quality with the largest set of features while also wanting the financial stability and management to be top-notch (keep in mind that different girls are different investors and may have different preferences).

The problem is a simple one that is the basis for economics as a whole, scarcity. There simply isn't enough to go around.

Poll: how many of us have exited or remain in the LTR (3+ year relationship) dating market?

3 upvotes | May 31, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Please specify whether you have exited or remain in the LTR dating market or if you are indifferent to LTRs. Feel free to follow up with why you have chosen to exit or stay, or offer any additional input.

I guess this would be our version of /r/cringe.

1 upvotes | May 31, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

http://www.youtube.com/watch?feature=player_embedded&v=JEuwjQ2AgD8

I've noticed a trend in TRP that a lot of guys in an LTR/Marriage and their partner/wife are open to adding another girl into the mix. Who here is Alpha/TRP that is in an LTR or marriage (3+ years), and is not open to adding another person into their bedroom?

6 upvotes | June 1, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Female Ethnic Facial Composites. Which One Are You Most Attracted To?

3 upvotes | June 1, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Your description of a girl worth keeping.

0 upvotes | June 14, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Let's hear your description!

Reddit deems consensual sex as rape in comments of /r/videos

8 upvotes | June 21, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-2ZDt17-L7s&feature=youtu.be>

This is the video. It starts out normally. At the 0:50 mark it turns to satire, and the genders get reversed for comedy. So the girl is acting like a guy and the guy is acting like a girl.

Watch it till the end.

Of course, what happens is deemed "rape" by beddit.

beta + reddit = beddit.

These are the comments:

http://www.reddit.com/r/videos/comments/1gr2j7/my_friend_made_this_short_sketch_about_spoonin_g_i/

Girl in /r/sex confirms that being alpha leads to getting laid, being beta leads to getting played.

44 upvotes | July 6, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Comment by /u/grittex:

np.reddit.com/r/sex/comments/1hquqc/why_would_a_girl_do_more_to_a_guy_she_just_wants/cawy_yzy

Perhaps she's tried a bunch of things and decided she didn't like them.

Why on earth would you want her to do those with you now? If she doesn't want to, for whatever reason, you pushing the matter will be pressuring her into something she does not want to do.

You can't 'change' it at all. The best you can hope for is that she will eventually trust you enough to want to either try new things with you, or retry old things that she didn't dislike. But at this point you sound like an entitled, disrespectful brat so I wouldn't really bank on that happening without a major attitude shift.

Looking through her posting history, she posts a lot of comments on /r/ladyboners in response to hot muscular guys that post their picture. Some of her responses:

I'd suicide bomb for 60 virgins like this guy. (Or however many the reward is!)

You have fantastic facial hair. Nice coverage, good length.. and those abs..

You are stunning. Please stay.

I would like to dress you back down.

Fucking gorgeous.

Now, the comment that I linked to was posted in a /r/sex, in a thread about a guy that says this: "I will and have done anything for her. I have changed my life greatly since meeting her simply for her. I'll do anything she asks and I will break my back just to please her.". His words. He has a problem. He wants kinkier sex, and his gf won't do kinkier sex with. The same kinky sex that she did with her alpha fwb.

You just have to read /u/grittex's comment and understand it; she lays it out pretty easy to digest.

If she doesn't want to, for whatever reason, you pushing the matter will be pressuring her into something she does not want to do.

Don't beg, you fucking whining beta. She doesn't want your beta cock. Get over it.

You can't 'change' it at all. The best you can hope for is that she will eventually trust you enough to want to either try new things with you, or retry old things that she didn't dislike. But at this point you sound like an entitled, disrespectful brat so I wouldn't really bank on

| that happening without a major attitude shift.

You can either be a patient little beta and pray that your female god will bestow unto you the privilege of doing something that most guys in an fwb get without even asking. You are a loser beta that's "disrespectful", and a "brat", so unless you suddenly change into an alpha or get much hotter like the guys that I like on /r/ladyboners, you ain't getting shit.

There you have it folks. This is what men get for giving away all of their valuable commitment. Girl: oh, you want some simple sexual positions added into our sex life for making major changes in your life and "doing anything I like just to please me", hahaha get real.

How many of us smoke? [Poll] - Additional discussion about smoking, how it affects life, and sexual strategy inside.

0 upvotes | July 7, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Description	Past	Present
You'll know if you're a regular	Regular	Regular
More than rarely but not regularly	Occasional	Occasional
Less than 5 cigarettes per year	Rarely	Rarely
Less than 10 cigarettes in your entire life	Never	Never

Just choose from (Regular / Occasional / Rarely / Never) for the past and the present. The results will be tallied up in the following table:

Smoking	Past	Present
Regular	10	5
Occasional	3	4
Rarely	1	3
Never	11	11

Feel free to drop off a paragraph or two about your smoking, how it affected your life, and/or sexual strategy.

Woman that "loves her husband more than anything" cheats on him with her coworker. Wants him to forgive her and look past it. She finds out he cheated on her too, suddenly she sees that the marriage was "a big mistake".

45 upvotes | July 15, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Is it immoral to have sex with a married woman or a women in a long term relationship?

9 upvotes | July 15, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Assume both parties consent.

Do you definitively know even one attractive girl that has never physically cheated in her entire life?

0 upvotes | July 25, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

EDIT: Seems like my question has been answered. The overwhelming response is that no, guys definitively know of no girls that have not cheated. I can confidently say that I know a couple of guys that have definitely not cheated.

Let the definition of physical cheating mean anything physical, e.g. kissing, sex, etc.

Please also add the age of the girl to your post.

If the girl has not kissed, had sex, or etc. with another guy, please state if she has done anything of the following, even though it was not allowed during one of her relationships.

- Grinded another guy
- Held hands with another guy
- Anything similar to these (you know what I'm talking about).

The purpose of this post is to find out how much of a statistical outlier these types of girls are. I have always held a NAWALT view on girls that cheat. Today I realized that I actually am yet to meet even one girl that I can definitively vouch for, that she has not cheated.

If you have anything else at all that you see fit to add, please do!

A prime example of blue pill logic. • Why women and white knights see game as coercion • Why women and white knights see gaming a girl as rape AND MORE!

1 upvotes | October 14, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

http://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/1odnig/in_my_bed_but_nothing_happened_did_i_just_swallow/ccragmw

A prime example of blue pill logic. • Why women and white knights see game as coercion • Why women and white knights see gaming a girl as rape AND MORE!

66 upvotes | October 14, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

<http://redditlog.com/snapshot/22995/28969#>

To get the comment chain hit Ctrl+F and type "shaneford" and press enter.

Men with a high sexual partner count that prefer women with a low sexual partner count

3 upvotes | November 16, 2013 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

This all stems from this thread on askmen:

http://www.reddit.com/r/AskMen/comments/1qpx0i/i_find_the_sex_positive_movement_to_be_quite/

Here were some arguments from a number of people simplified:

Argument 1

- Men with a high sexual partner count that want a woman with a low sexual partner count are hypocrites.

& opposite

- Men with a high sexual partner count that want a woman with a low sexual partner count are not hypocrites.

Argument 2

- Women that had a high sexual partner count are not less likely to be monogamous than women with a low sexual partner count.

& opposite

- Women that had a high sexual partner count are less likely to be monogamous than women with a low sexual partner count.

Let's discuss where we all stand.

How far will women go? Here is what happens. Reason #345 to maintain frame.

53 upvotes | November 24, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Go One Level Deeper

35 upvotes | December 18, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

If you're going to read this post, read it as a whole. It's structured in a way where the idea I am trying to convey is inside the entire post.

1. Create and build comfort

It all depends on the situation and how you use your game, but for most situations you must build comfort before you go further. Spending a few minutes talking to a girl before telling her you want to take her to the movies gives her the opportunity to assess you. If you simply come up to a girl and tell her you want to go out with her, she has to make a fight or flight response. Fight being that she will go for it, and flight meaning she won't. I personally believe the way women actually make this decision mentally is very similar to the human fight or flight response. So this is why good looks, style, a nice car, and all of this type of stuff matter so much when you give her little to work with. She has to make a judgement on you based off of what limited information she has of you. It's going to be instinctual on her part.

Think about how many people you've had a flight response to in your life, and were forced to converse with them. Then after talking to them for a couple of minutes, you really liked them. Talking is a huge way of building comfort.

2. Create and build attraction

I can't count how many guys I have known that do not understand this one concept. You can create attraction. This is what game is, this is what seduction is.

It's like Bill Burr said in one of his comedy specials: "the men in this room are programmed to fuck 85% of the women here.", and it's true. When you're at work or school, you're programmed to fuck most girls there. Take a moment to think about why you only like some of these girls to a high degree. Why don't you like that hot girl as much as you do some of the other girls? I can tell you why. You're either not comfortable enough or you're not attracted enough. Both very changeable. Maybe she's really hot and guys ask her out all the time, and she's also pretty confident. Maybe the source is that you feel she's realistically unattainable. Go one level deeper. You don't feel as comfortable with her as you do with the other girls. Why? Because of very changeable variables. All she has to do is change what she does and you're going to start to like her. You're going to tell me that a girl that you are sexually attracted to can't come up to you, get to know you, really show you who she is, do nice things, accentuate her femininity, appear vulnerable, and etc, cannot get you to like her? Unless you tell me why you won't like her, or why you'll disqualify her, you and I both know that you're going to start to like her a lot.

Now there is the creation and building of attraction. It's really an art form. Take a few moments to read this story:

The Musician.

You are a professional musician that plays the harp. You play your harp in a famous music building where all of the people are musically inclined. Where you play your harp is up to you. You could play your harp in one of the busiest parts of the building while people walk by or you can choose to play your harp in a private room where people may pop their head in to see how you play. You put yourself in the shoes of one of the people in the building. You can see yourself walking around and finding someone playing the harp like Yo-Yo Ma plays the cello. It would stop you dead in your tracks, and all you would want to do is listen.

So you play your harp in the lobby as people walk by. You play a piece that you think everyone would like. It's pleasant. People love to walk by to that tune. Sometimes you get the quick listener for a couple of minutes until they have to leave to go on with their day.

So you start getting better at playing the harp. You find some musical pieces that others vouch for as being more pleasant than the ones most people play. Sure enough when you try it the next day, some more people stop to listen to your playing. But not much changes. You're still the same musician that you were before, you just changed what you're playing. That's now what a real musician is. That's just a player of tunes.

So you start to think: what would a real musician do? You go home and come back the next day to play again. You start to try to understand how people are. You incorporate the musical pieces that you played the day before and you read how people react to it. Some pieces work for some people, not for others. For those people that liked a piece you played, they stay to here a little bit more, but you don't have more of that piece to play. So you play another piece that others vouched as being more pleasant than average, but the people leave. Maybe the two pieces are too different for the person listening. Maybe they connected with the first piece but not the second. You go home to sleep on what you learned.

The next morning you start playing a piece that worked well for you the day before, and when you finish that piece, you don't just switch to another piece. You try to see what that person that stopped to listen likes. You see that they like the early renaissance harp music, so you don't switch it to Celtic. What you do is you improvise some early renaissance. What you originally played was a piece that was vouched for by others as being above average in pleasantness, so you obviously didn't improvise at that level. Your improvisation was below average. But what happened was an improvement from the day before, you kept the person interested for longer. You played what they wanted to hear and they liked it, but they still left because the playing itself was below average.

Confident with what you now learned, you continue to play day in and day out trying to learn what types of music certain people like, learning more pieces that others vouch for as being really pleasant, and really connecting with the people that you're playing the music for.

This is no easy process, you spend weeks and months building your skills and knowledge, and slowly becoming a real musician.

Some time later, you're playing in the lobby, but you are no tune player. You are now a musician. You gracefully slide your fingers over the strings. You know your strings. You feel every one of them, and you know how to play it. You understand the pure beauty of music. You see a girl coming in the distance. You've known and played for many like her. She's a sweet girl, lightly dressed, light sense of humor, kind of the way you like them. You carefully place your fingers on the strings and you begin to play. You know your trade, your music is beautiful. As she walks by she just stops, she's heard this type of harp music before, she loves it. She looks at you and you look at her. You can see right through her. She doesn't even have to know what she wants, just you do, you know what she wants, you just get her. When you play, you masterfully play those pleasant musical pieces you played when you started out. And your transitions between them are flawless, you know just what to play to elicit an emotional response in her with each piece. She's still standing there, and you know she's not going anywhere.

You continue to play for her, but you're not a player of tunes, you're a musician. You know that's where your value lies, you cannot fake being a true musician. You see in her something that you feel she would love to hear but you don't have the notes for it, you don't need the notes. You know what she loves to hear, you don't need to ask. You begin to play. Each string you strike has a response in her. But you are not a simple man, you are a musician. You play the notes in a certain way, each note being significant, and each pattern of notes being intricate, leading up to a beautiful composition of your own harp piece. You have true talent. She's still there getting goosebumps from your playing. She can count on her hand the number of times someone has played for her like that.

You gracefully finish your piece to some applause around you from some people that stopped to listen, as you look over to another musician playing in the distance. You see and hear him playing the same pleasant tunes that you have played when you started out. You know him, you were him. You know his talent, he is but a tune player, he cannot give her what she truly musically desires.

You look over at the girl that you played for. You can see how much she emotionally connected with what you played. You see the fragility in her face, the feeling of what she just experienced. You watch as she slowly approaches you and tells you how beautiful what you played was. She lifts her purse, takes out her wallet and says "I want to buy your cd".

That was the story, I hope you enjoyed it.

Going forward with the post, most guys pay attention to what they/the girl/society think that the girl wants. Go one level deeper. Find out what she really wants. I read today a post where a guy described himself in his past like this: "I would spend 3 to 4 months developing a non romantic relationship with women before I would ask them out."

Think about this. Is this actually what the girl wants? She wants to love, to feel, to enjoy life. She wants to be happy. This is what she wants. Throughout your life you have learned what you think girls want. Go one level deeper. Really begin to understand what the girl actually wants and desires. The true inner workings.

When you modify your life to work like that, everything becomes much easier. Everything sets into place. What do you put in your resume? You put what the other person wants to see. You don't use a template, or common sentences. You custom tailor it to that exact person that will be hiring you, and this will increase your chances. When you talk to a girl, you're paying attention to the words, but what you're paying even more attention to is who she really is. Really understanding and mapping her mentality. Really connecting with her. You're going to say something sort of mean and she's going to be shocked at the sight of that. White knights around you will look at you like you killed someone, and they will vow to never displease a woman like that. But they don't understand. You know her and you get her, she knows you and she gets you. It's you two vs. the world. You knew how she would emotionally respond to your little mean joke. She didn't think of it as mean, she thought of it as playful, and she reciprocated by laughing after her "fake" shocked face.

There is no topping this. This is end-game. Red Pill is end game. There is no one up. Red Pill is the true understanding of of women and who they really are.

Older women will NEVER be able to compete with younger girls on youthful looks

9 upvotes | December 23, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Girls will never be as youthful as they were when they were 18-23. Tick, tock.

Sure they can be hot in other aspects. But youth fades, and there's NOTHING that will get them their youth back. All those creams, serums, powders, make them look good for their age. For their age.

As girls age:

- Skin starts to lose its tightness. The breasts sag, are less firm, less perky. The skin on the neck sags as well creating turkey neck.
- Hair gets duller and thinner. Did you see those grays yet?
- Skin gets more spotted on the hands. Brown skin spots from sun damage.
- Veins, they start being very visible, swollen veins, prominent veins, and spider veins.
- Sore feet. Bunions. Cracked heels. Calluses.
- Wrinkled knees and elbows
- Oh, there's more, this isn't even everything

Now look at these young beauties.

<http://i.imgur.com/Mo80NXd.jpg>

<http://i.imgur.com/ePAh6hq.jpg>

<http://i.imgur.com/MPI8L.jpg>

<http://i.imgur.com/KQyOhX2.jpg>

<http://i.imgur.com/2Pgi4.jpg>

<http://i.imgur.com/UA5GXJV.jpg>

<http://i.imgur.com/1yYp5in.jpg>

<http://i.imgur.com/iJjG2W9.jpg>

NSFW

Soft, tight skin. Almost no blemishes, scars, wrinkles. Barely visible veins.

Full, vibrant, shiny, resilient hair. Nails that aren't brittle.

Soft feet and hands. So soft they don't crack.

Everything is perky, no sagging.

And so slim. How hard is it to stay that slim with age.

Women can still be hot as they age, but they will never be young again. As guys, the young girls offer us their youth, something older girls will never have again, and never be able to offer us.

No one gives a shit about you.

162 upvotes | December 27, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Forget about your friends. Forget about your family. Forget about the people around you that you already know. Concentrate on strangers.

Strangers, they don't give a shit about you. Girls you don't know don't give a shit about you.

These girls ONLY respond to the value that you add to their lives. They don't give a shit about you. They give a shit about the value that you add, or will add, or etc.

Women are by nature hypergamous and solipsistic. I have not met one woman that is not hypergamous and solipsistic. Not one. And it is because of hypergamy and solipsism that women will only respond to something that adds value to their life. Because of solipsism, she cares only about herself. Because of hypergamy, she will try to get what maximizes the value addition to her life, while living her life as she pleases. She doesn't give a shit about you.

This logic can be applied to all situations. What is the best approach you can take to attain your desired result? Simply the approach that adds enough value to her life to attain your desired result, because girls only respond to the value that you add to their life. This is where game comes in. Understanding what women respond to. Game is understanding how to add value to a woman's life so that you attain your desired result.

So my question to you is this: Why do you set the bar for the amount of value a woman needs to add to your life for her to achieve her desired result so low? Why do you sacrifice so much of what you want to set the bar lower for women?

This whole reality is hard to accept. Part of accepting this reality is that you will see that there is no reason for you to set the bar low for yourself. We have been programmed to set the bar low. It will be painful for you to let go of this. It will be painful for you to accept that on the bottom line, she doesn't care about you, she cares about what you can do for her. It will be painful for you to accept that the methods you were equipped with for attaining your desired result with women are not anywhere near the best methods.

This brings me to my next point. You add value to a girl. She adds value back to you. By improving yourself, you will increase the value that you add to a girl. By setting the bar high for yourself you will increase the value that you receive, if a girl is ready to give that value to you. The final step is to maximize the value that you receive from women.

The acceptance that you need to maximize your own value will bring you the most pain. You will need to sacrifice her needs for your own.

Now that you understand the concept, think about how it changes if it's not a stranger. If it's a friend, family member, or significant other. Do you think that the concept disappears as you add closeness? No, it just evolves. What changes is what adds value to your and her life. The formula is still valid.

What have we been programmed to do? To set the bar low for women. To give them value for nothing in return. To not maximize our own value. The evidence is all around you. Red Pill opens you up to your true value.

Hey RP Women! My friend asked: What value can women add to a man's life?

19 upvotes | December 27, 2013 | /r/RedPillWomen | Link | Reddit Link

http://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/1tsw92/no_one_gives_a_shit_about_you/cebalwf

Agree 100 percent. Just one question though

You add value to a girl. She adds value back to you.

What value do women have that can be added back to you?

Who better to ask this question than to you RP women?

Why Women Can't Give Dating Advice to Men --- Find something wrong with the logic of this post.

10 upvotes | January 7, 2014 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

http://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/1ukv9w/why_women_cant_give_dating_advice_to_men/

All credit of this post goes to /u/DownvoteToDisagree

I came across a thread on /r/AskWomen asking why almost all "pick up guides" are written by men. The author implied that women should be the experts on women, and want to encourage men generally to make the right moves. She says:

Like, if I was hosting an art competition where I choose which piece I want to buy, I would try to help people out so they have the best shot at winning, since we both benefit.

TRP veterans know why this assumption is false, and I think many would agree with putting it this way: Would you ask a car salesman or a car buyer on how to make sales?

There is a problem of perspective with the women who are offended by this wisdom. There are things they do not know, and they are not even aware that they lack knowledge. In feminist-speak, this is normally called PRIVILEGE: i.e., "because of your limited experiences, there are unknown-unknowns at play in the world that you are oblivious to and, thus, failing to account for."

This is entirely hubristic to presume knowledge of something that you have never done before. If you believe that men and women are biologically and socially distinct (problem #1 for feminists), then you will understand that men and women have different preferences and expectations in dating.

Many men held pre-concieved notions about dating women, given to them by mainstream society, that were shattered upon contact with reality. Men who thought that politeness, pedestalization, spending money on buying her dinner and flowers, playing therapist to her feelings while she ~~fuels~~ ~~other guys~~ finds herself, etc., would win the affection of the women they try to date are hit with trouble when these women inevitably never see them as more than friends. In their frustration, some of these men will look for answers, and even fewer still will arrive at Red Pill realizations. They become players and, in turn, dispense Red Pill, male-centric advice to their male friends on how to seduce women. This advice will be field tested, based on a mosaic of real world experiences with actual women.

Unfortunately, the vast majority of women will never be smacked with the reality of the difficulties and complications of arousing female attraction. I'll even give some of these women the benefit of the doubt, too--some of them might dispense advice that would honestly attract her in particular, but she is dealing with unknown unknowns when it comes to the general behavior of the female half of the human race behind closed doors. Girls naturally downplay their slutty behavior, particularly in front of their ~~sexual-competitors~~ peers.

When I started to use game and develop my Red Pill perspective, I was initially in disbelief what girls would allow me to do on dates while completely disregarding the mainstream advice that I used to take at face value. Good, smart girls would have sex with me in the back seat of my car after a couple dates at a bar.

Do you think they told their girl friends the details of what happened? No. Do you think the reality of what happened factored into their dating advice in the future? Hell no. Therefore, even honest women trying to give dating advice will be advising you based on incomplete knowledge... and, even worse, without knowing that her knowledge is incomplete.

A shout-out to feminism.

88 upvotes | January 14, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

I could not have asked for a better influence that systematically enables women to be sluts.

All club/top10 music is tailored to girls enjoying their time and indulging in their urges to get fucked by men. When I can walk around a family oriented store and hear music lyrics encouraging girls to let go and enjoy having sex with men being heard by 16/17 year old girls, it really is music to my ears.

Societal acceptance is through the roof and we are served this on a silver platter.

To everyone here browsing this subreddit, embrace it, and enjoy its fruits.

Girl: "Part of me says: 'You're young, pretty, and can find a guy who will satisfy your needs within minutes of walking into a bar/club/show'"

88 upvotes | January 21, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

From: <http://redditlog.com/snapshots/148737>

This should erase any doubt from anyone's mind that this is the reality of how easy it is for women to get sex.

Most female initial attraction/dating strategy is:

1. Being pretty (putting on makeup, wearing nice clothes, perfume, etc.)
2. Going out.
3. Waiting for guys to naturally be attracted to them. It's a passive strategy.

Alpha fucks, beta bucks. From the Norwegian nature vs. nurture documentary.

26 upvotes | January 23, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

<http://vimeo.com/19921928#t=19m38s>

First you hear from Anna Campbell, a Professor of Psychology at Durham University. Her research interests concern gender differences in aggression and evolutionary psychology. - from wikipedia

Then hear from girls going out to party regarding what they want from a one night stand and a relationship.

For a one night stand (ONS), one girl wants a good looking guy, another wants a bad boy, and another wants someone good in bed

For a relationship, one girl says she'll have to search little deeper (answered bad boy to the ONS question), a group of girls say that personality starts to matter, and another girl says the guy has to be very considerate.

Anna Campbell - "they choose the male that they think is the best they can find"

Anna Campbell - "women in a sense are the choosers, they retain as it were, that power"

Anna Campbell is the author of this famous study on gender differences in perception of one night stands: <http://link.springer.com/article/10.1007%2Fs12110-008-9036-2>

Another quote from her: "Basic emotions guide us down pathways that have been advantageous for our ancestors"

I just couldn't resist throwing this one in as well from David M. Buss, a professor of psychology at the University of Texas at Austin, known for his evolutionary psychology research on human sex differences in mate selection. - wikipedia

"The best predictor of sexual infidelity is number of sex partners prior to marriage"

<http://vimeo.com/19921928#t=26m08s>

Hamsters are off the rails. Porn star relationship problems galore. Monogamy = having a partner and sucking extra dick on the side. & MORE

94 upvotes | January 27, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

This is the craziest shit that I have read in a long time and it's going to take you for a ride.

Title: Porn Star Shae Snow: My Dating Life's a Failure. Why Won't Men Love Me?

<http://cannibal.la/2013/12/18/shae-snow-porn-star-love/>

She's 22. Moved to LA. 3 guys dated her within a years time; all of them booked it out of there.

| She also has the kind of smile that makes you smile back. She dresses like she's permanently late for class. She talks about love with this twinkly Disney-hearted reverence. And she's a pro in the sack. Literally.

Ok, I'm going to be honest with you, and I've watched a lot of porn. A lot of the sex that I have personally had was on par with what I've seen in porn and better. All it took was a girl that was willing to take my guidance and embrace her inner slut. There was nothing special that she had to do; it doesn't take a scientist to be a slut. So where they are getting this entire "pro in the sack" thing from is rubbish. They literally ran out of good things to say about her, and had to use that. Just think about it, most of the time in porn, the girl is getting fucked and just needs to assume a position and take guidance from the director.

| No matter how many guys she meets through friends or at bars, she hasn't been able to find a single man willing to stick around once he finds out about her profession.

Reality strikes again.

| Considering most men should, at least in theory, fall head-over-heels for a gorgeous girl who knows how to fuck. But not so.

Once again, it's this stupid argument.

| Shae has now turned to apps and online dating websites like Tinder and OkCupid to find love because real-life dating isn't cutting it.

At least she's trying other ways of finding a guy that will love her, unlike this woman:

<http://www.dailymail.co.uk/femail/article-2545706/Im-desperate-love-I-spent-nine-years-alone.html> who hit the wall at 32 after riding the cock carousel for 9 years, and couldn't find a guy for a couple of years, who had this to say:

| I do not want to get into internet dating, it just isn't me at all.

Back to our sex-pro porn star.

| Before me sat a sweet girl, maybe a virgin, who timidly agreed to meet me for a coffee.

No comment.

| I asked Shae how she got here. How does one go from limp-dick catalog modeling in Minnesota to getting her anus licked on camera? For Shae, the immediate answer was a boy. Specifically, a bad break up.

"I'm very monogamous," she said. "I'm a total sucker for love and all that romance stuff. I wish I wasn't."

I don't really know what to say, kind of speechless.

Reading this far into the story, they mentioned she only did 2 scenes with a guy. Still, you don't need to be a scientist to have good lesbian sex.

This tends to eliminate random hookups from Shae's repertoire. To her, giving away sex to random people outside of work would be like handing a bottle of Dom Perignon to a 13-year-old. Kid would obviously love getting drunk, but he wouldn't know what the hell he's drinking. Shae just wants to be appreciated.

"The only quality that I really have is being able to suck dick, fuck, and have lesbian sex, so why don't you dedicate and invest your time in resources to me while I don't suck your dick and fuck you."

What fucking qualities does she possess other than being able to suck dick? Fucking honestly!

That's not to say she never experimented with sleeping around while growing up. I asked Shae what her number is and she shrugged. "I stopped counting around forty," she said. "And that was a while ago." In the last year, however, she's only slept with about five guys.

I'm just going to comment on the last part of that, "only five".

But after time passed, he gradually withdrew. Shae confronted him about it, and he confessed that his friends had begun to tease him relentlessly about dating a porn star. They even forced him to watch one of her boy-girl scenes. Now he couldn't get it out of his head. The relationship was over.

It's good to have friends like that. Good for that guy.

More recently, since about October, Shae started dating some UFC fighter she met on Tinder.

Well fucking call me surprised that hypergamy exists. No, it's not a 22 year old computer programmer that's finishing a degree, it's a good looking, ripped, UFC fighter. Whodathunkit!

When I asked if she'd liked him, like actually liked him, she nodded sadly in this adorable way.

Looks like those gina tingles just come whether she likes it or not.

More recently, since about October, Shae started dating some UFC fighter she met on Tinder. When I asked if she'd liked him, like actually liked him, she nodded sadly in this adorable way. But things, again, had fallen apart.

"I'm good friend's with this former Playboy model," she said. "It was her husband's birthday. He's 50-something. And she asked me if I'd give him a blowjob as a gift." Shae said all this without batting an eye, like it's normal.

“She’s a good friend,” she added. “So I was like sure. It’s just a blowjob.”

Of course, being the good girlfriend she was, Shae told her man about the arrangement. “I wanted to make sure he was okay with it, even though it meant nothing. And he said no problem. He gave me permission. So I did it. But then he started acting weird.”

Shae said he suddenly stopped returning her texts, and when she asked him why, he caved. The blowjob thing — not exactly for work, sure, but let’s call it a networking move — was too much for him. It was too weird and he couldn’t handle it. So that was that was that.

This just gets better and better doesn't it?

And this is typical. Shae says guys — without exception — are always excited to hear she’s a porn star at first, but when they’re eventually forced to face the reality that their girlfriend is paid to have sexual contact with strangers on camera, it’s overwhelming. The allure evaporates. The jealousy is too great. Their sense of entitlement, their possessiveness, ultimately win out in the battle against the fantasy of dating a sex icon.

How the fuck is it monogamy when you're sucking your friend's husband's dick on the side for a birthday present?

Shae says she’s not doing porn much longer — she wants out in a few months to pursue music — so maybe this problem is only temporary, but the slut shame concept isn’t new. Even for non-porn stars.

Watch how fast the music industry kicks her ass to the curb. An industry where her pussy pass holds minimal value.

TL;DR: 22 year old girl, sleeps with over 40 guys before moving to LA to pursue a porn career, motivated by the heartbreak of an alpha pumping and dumping her. Within a year after moving, fucks 2 guys, dates and fucks 3 other guys, all of which bail. Has extremely valuable skills to offer like being able to suck dick, fuck, and have lesbian sex. Dates a UFC fighter while crusading about wanting any guy that will love her, even one with a micropenis. Oh, cherry on the cake: "she wants love and a fulfilling monogamous relationship with a normal guy" while also giving her playboy model friend's husband a blowjob because she was asked to do it for his birthday.

I swear this article has to be a troll, it can't be real.

FYI, I commented as I read the article. My commenting goes from classic TRP to Mad hamsters spinning to Wtf to This has to be a fucking joke.

Update to the guy who's wife fucked 25 other guys.

34 upvotes | January 27, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Link to first TRP discussion on original post: <http://redditlog.com/snapshots/161905>

Link to current update from the guy: <http://redditlog.com/snapshots/161901>

Guy's wife lied about the abuse. Who's surprised.

Discussion question: How much longer is the general population going to keep denying that women are attracted to men with alpha qualities?

6 upvotes | January 28, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

.

Doing it right vs. doing it wrong.

16 upvotes | February 2, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Doing it right: <http://redditlog.com/snapshots/186485>

Doing it wrong: <http://redditlog.com/snapshots/183249>

Be like the guy doing it right.

Also, find someone that is sexually normal. Don't get someone that's broken or needs therapy.

Strategy: Switching the relationship dynamic to having your needs met. The "Last Resort Strategy"

13 upvotes | February 3, 2014 | /r/AlreadyRed | Link | Reddit Link

Why choose this method?

- It gives the girl a chance to change. Can be ideal for marriages / long term relationships.
- Definite solution. Either your needs are met or you begin the process of leaving or outright leave.
- Very socially acceptable.

Requirements:

- Being able to be a rock. Standing up and not caving.

Steps

1. Understand what you need from the girl.
2. Set a date and time for a meeting where you will talk with her and outline your needs that you need met.
3. Survive until the meeting.
4. Optional step of building your hand.
5. Set up of the talk.
6. The talk.

Power and Violence. Violence is Golden.

17 upvotes | February 3, 2014 | /r/AlreadyRed | Link | Reddit Link

<http://www.jack-donovan.com/axis/2011/03/violence-is-golden/>

The [Musician/Actor/XYZ] Standard

52 upvotes | February 4, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

This is where it gets RP:

10 months ago, /u/2StandardDeviations wrote a post called The Musical Standard. I implore you to go and read it. It's short and sweet. This thread won't make sense unless you do.

As you saw from recent events. Drug user and abuser Philip Seymour Hoffman recently died from an overdose of heroin. Here's a quote from him:

In 2006, during the lead up to his Best Actor Oscar win for Capote, he told CBS News' 60 Minutes about his past drug problems.

"It was all that [drugs and alcohol], yeah. It was anything I could get my hands on...I liked it all,"

And as you saw from what followed the news of his death, people respected this person and mourned his death. He joined the likes of Kurt Cobain, Mitch Hedberg, and many others that are sincerely missed and loved.

Understand the importance of how this dynamic works. You want to be the person people respect and mourn in spite of something such as drug use and abuse. This is why context matters. This is why who you are matters.

This is why you should introspectively understand the extent to which something matters. That something being someone's opinion, or some constraint placed upon you by society, or some duty placed upon you by your social group. A great way to benchmark how something matters would be to imagine yourself being a musician or an actor or a whatever, and draw a conclusion through that understanding.

- You didn't let a girl use you as a shoulder to cry on about her alpha fuck-buddy problems, and your social group took offense to that. Well, would you have been Leonardo Dicaprio, the girl wouldn't be crying on your shoulder, rather moaning on your shoulder. And if you didn't let a girl use you as a shoulder to cry in, they would look past it in an instant, and fawn over your handsomeness.
- You aren't supposed to walk up to girls, make things awkward and coerce them into sleeping with you. Well, if you were Daniel Craig, it wouldn't be coercion, it would be him taking a girl on a magical journey. And even if it was seen as coercion, everyone would brush it off and think someone's crazy for resisting him.
- You're supposed to act nice and care about a girl's feelings, and you completely ignored that, teased her, and did what you wanted. Well, if you're George Clooney, this girl would have been happy to have the opportunity to have spent what little of your precious time you gave to her. And even if you didn't care about her, ignored her, teased, her and generally did what you wanted, people would brush it off and still love you, and see your next movie.

<http://www.popcrunch.com/15-most-notorious-hollywood-womanizers/>

This is where it gets core RP:

This is the core, hard truth. A girl can cheat with every one of her partners, and still look like an angel for her next partner; karma won't bite her in the ass if she plays her cards right. She can live a happy™ life with money, and a husband that does her bidding.

In the same way, you don't have to be nice to people, or have integrity. You can fuck people over left and right, move up career-wise, use every girl to your advantage, and you'll still look like an angel to the next girl you meet; karma won't bite you in the ass if you play your cards right and the information that she knows is limited. You can live a happy life with a woman / multiple women and enjoy life's fruits.

My favorite video on raw lust/desire. Woman interviews bodybuilder James (flex) Lewis. She can barely hold herself together. Watch the daydreaming, watch the lip bite. Oh, that girl in the pink, that's James' wife.

25 upvotes | February 4, 2014 | /r/AlreadyRed | Link | Reddit Link

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1WhQ-AEZovE>

Required Reading: Lessons from a psychopath: Understanding the reality behind how people work, the extent to which people can be manipulated, and the amount of power one can hold over others.

55 upvotes | February 5, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Stanley the psychopath. Excerpts and analysis by Chateau Heartiste from The Mask of Sanity, a book written by American psychiatrist Hervey M. Cleckley, first published in 1941.

8 upvotes | February 5, 2014 | /r/AlreadyRed | Link | Reddit Link

<http://heartiste.wordpress.com/2014/02/04/psychopath-game/>

The raw power that Stanley had, it's exhilarating.

Another great post about psychopathy can be found here by our own /u/illimitableman : it offers a great and simple thought pattern to understand who a psychopath is. So if you want to get someone into this line of thinking, I'd recommend sending them that link.

<http://illimitablemen.com/2013/12/28/utilising-the-dark-triad-psychopathy/>

I'm thinking of writing a series on psychopathy and sociopathy. If you know any good articles or resources, throw them in a reply.

Let's talk about implied social contracts, rules, obligations, responsibilities, and duties.

15 upvotes | February 8, 2014 | /r/AlreadyRed | Link | Reddit Link

I was originally going to throw this in as a comment reply, and have this thread be a bunch of replies to the title, but I ended up rambling for a page straight, and it's interesting, so I'm leaving it here. So feel free to reply to my comment or the thread title. Let's just talk about this stuff.

I'm going to start off by talking about redditors. A common redditor's thoughts are of what actions they can take to lessen any (supposed) negative events/reactions/outcomes and increase the (supposed) positive ones.

Time and time again I have seen these redditors asking about how they can make someone's life easier, what they can do to avoid someone feeling awkward, what series of actions they can take to make someone feel as "good" as they can.

These guys will think of and do everything in their power to be accommodating, nice, courteous, and etc., to everyone (read: girls).

Too bad that they achieve the antithesis of what they were striving to. To be frank, they actually don't try to achieve anything in reality, because they place the immediate goal of someone "feeling good" to be the main priority. This is useless and completely promotes stagnation of the human species.

This is the wrong way to live.

You don't gain any increase in social ability by living this way. The other person also doesn't gain social ability by having that in their life. It's a circlejerk of stagnation.

Contrast that with other people that don't think it's the end of the world to not exert 50% of their passive thinking and general actions towards maintaining this continuously-catering environment.

When you don't try out new things, you don't progress socially. You continually live to serve everyone else's non-existent needs, and you are actually running counter-productive to people's and society's social improvement.

Anyone with half a non-corrupt brain should understand that socially trying things out will expand all of their social skills. You can't do that without making a girl feel awkward or [insert feeling here], it's a self-defeating prophecy.

One of us had this to say about natural players:

theyll say "just treat them(girls) like people and be nice" then i watch as they tease and kino and amog and bunch of other nerdy seduction terms without knowing those things exist.

The only reason these players instinctively know and understand the intricacies of these situations is because throughout their life, they have been thrown/throw themselves into situations where this knowledge was built in a compounding fashion based on some sort of trial-error analysis.

Girls aren't used to feeling certain feelings like surprise, awkwardness, stunning, etc.

Bitches naturally train themselves to be able to execute their solipsistic and hypergamistic tendencies to the best of their abilities or a high degree, in a myriad of normalized social situations.

Their strength is their weakness. Girls are good at girl game when everything runs normal, it's easy for them to identify the most desirable candidates. Say you go out and make 300 girls feel awkward and you take a psychopathic approach (A psychopathic approach is when you completely repress your emotions and solely run off analytical and result-oriented thinking and strategy) to understanding the intricacies of girls when they feel awkward, you become a master in that field. Not only do you have the ability to now understand how to mold social interactions stemming from awkwardness, but you have full advantage of a naturally occurring hole in girl game. The girls didn't learn how to successfully run their passive selection game in those kinds of situations, because they lack experience.

My understanding of attraction is that a big part of attraction is that people develop feelings for other people naturally, and what negates this are things that literally stop the feelings from developing. Natural strategies / defense mechanisms aimed at goals (selection strategy). I think a huge component of our evolutionary development stems from learning what is bad for us. To get what's best, we have to rate things as good, but that doesn't help. The easiest way to make things simpler is to eliminate bad variables.

Maybe this fundamental reason is why Stanley the psychopath gained such success in manipulating women. It's pretty clear for me that none of the situations that Stanley was in were "normal" by any means. He became a master at his own game in his own field.

I will quote /u/TRPsubmitter's comment from another thread:

I've always viewed psychopathy as kind of man's true nature. Maybe the "final form" or Plato's "form" of mankind, instead of true nature. Not everyone has it inside him, but it's kind of a final evolution.

Only fear and the implied "social contract" (which does have evolutionary benefits for survival) keeps it in check. It's like if you bred the ultimate man (as dogs are bred), you would get personality traits reflecting psychopathy. All those small thoughts & tendencies that most men ignore or inhibit due to societal expectations would be forced out.

The attitude of "let's see what happens if I...". I can tell you that from the time that I adopted this attitude, I have become some form of psychopath, wherein(fuck yeah, another word off the bucketlist to use before I die) I retract my emotions and simply play with people like specimens. I can tell you that it has become a big part of my game. I know exactly where and what to prod to elicit certain deep emotions in someone. Furthermore, I know exactly what questions to ask / statements to say that open someone up to me like a book so that I can prod deeper.

And I can tell you from my perspective that Stanley the psychopath partly used this exact strategy to get the fuck into people's brains and do as he pleased. But as was stated in that thread debating naturals vs. theorists/keyboard-jockeys, while naturals get far, they have holes in their game. And that's exactly what Stanley had, and is exactly the same phenomenon I struggle with in my own escapades. You just don't know why the fuck it's working, and testing it out more doesn't help. It really does take a theoretical and/or emotional analysis to understand some intricacy that make everything click in place.

These social constructs like obligation, duty, adherence to implied rules and etc., only serve to preserve normality, while increasing women's a mate-selection ability on the side.

I think psychopath game is end game, but only a part of end game. You get all of the results from pure outcome analysis devoid of any emotional essence. This is why I think the 2nd part of end game is emotional analysis.

An amazing compilation of red pill / self-development books created by the users of the /r/AlreadyRed community. I would also like to invite those of you who are already red to /r/AlreadyRed

9 upvotes | February 10, 2014 | /r/RedPillBooks | Link | Reddit Link

☐

http://www.reddit.com/r/AlreadyRed/comments/1xcueo/my_reading_list/

☐

☐

/r/AlreadyRed, a community where everyone is Red.

☐

Our continuous focus is to have content and discussion that is interesting, stimulating, and attractive to people who are already red.

☐

For that reason, we promote less content, but higher quality, less active members, but higher member quality, and etc.

☐

Quality > Quantity

☐

/r/AlreadyRed

☐

Central hub of MGTOW shuts down. We were right (surprise).

21 upvotes | February 11, 2014 | /r/AlreadyRed | Link | Reddit Link

<http://www.mgtowforums.com/>

You can read the full letter addressing the shut down on the website.

Here's what the main guy had to say about why he shut it down:

However, MGTOW seems to be a successful concept for incels and psychos so that is where I'm going to leave it.

We were right or we were right? I posted about this exact thing months ago. And we agreed about it in unison.

It's just too easy and nice for these incels and depressed men to adopt fucked up MGTOW dynamics.

Title of my old post: Incels. Depressed Men. The MGTOW disease.

I'm seriously thinking of writing a critique on what is commonly thought of as MGTOW. I originally thought of MGTOW as a movement of men that truly go their own way. These MGTOW remove the constraints placed upon them, and do what they truly desire. The concept is gold. The interpretation of the concept is polluted.

You can read the following link from the mgtow website describing the 4 levels disengagement from society (apparently disengagement from society = mgtow, according to the author)

<http://www.mgtow.com/four-levels-of-mgtow.php#.UscK8fRDvuQ>

What you end up with is people that make comments like this: (I found this on /r/theredpill with 3 upvotes 0 downvotes)

And that is why I don't enjoy threesomes. Its kinda cool but it takes way to much effort and you still come the same way as if it was only 1 girl.

Another MGTOW has this to say: (3 upvotes 1 downvote)

If your idea of 'success' or what kind of man you are comes from validation from women, I'm afraid that's not red pill. No amount of knowledge on "kino techniques" will change that.

As I've said before, incels "opting" out of having sex holds as much weight as me opting out of high level political decision making. I can opt out of it, but I never had it to begin with, so what value or weight does me opting out hold?

MABTW was mentioned so I searched it up and I found this extremely amusing:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=T0xoKiH8JJM&feature=player_detailpage#t=153

I also find it funny that advertisers find it lucrative to post singles ads on the MGTOW site. It's no coincidence.

Why don't MGTOW just use reddit instead of forums?

1 upvotes | February 11, 2014 | /r/MGTOW | Link | Reddit Link

Serious question.

A tale of the drug that is alpha dick.

126 upvotes | February 11, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Links for proof: <http://redditlog.com/snapshots/209873> <http://redditlog.com/snapshots/209849>

I'm going to sugarcoat this red pill for all you betas, pussies, and newbies. This man is going to show you how it's done. For the rest, enjoy the read.

Girl meets guy at party and they "click" (it just happens right? There's no way that they click because he has experience and knows how to make it so that they click, blasphemy). "we really made each other laugh" (it's magic).

"He's a loud mouthed floppy haired singer". In other words he's a high value, doesn't give a shit about some run of the mill girl, high SMV kind of guy.

| I was amazed such a good looking man would find me attractive

Such a surprise right? Get your ass to the gym YOU.

I have condensed her following hamstering as best as possible.

The two date for a short time, he ends it by saying he needs to stop having "casual sex with people" (meaning with her) implying that they were never dating to begin with. This flies right over the girls head and she doesn't notice. Guy logic = she's a plate, girl logic = she's dating.

Guy offers her a room in his flat as normal roommates. Girl moves in. They get along really well. This guy tells her that he sleeps with everyone. She says she finds it unattractive, yet that doesn't fucking matter at all because she throws that right the fuck out the window later on, wait for it.

The guy tells her he is spinning 5 plates. She calls it gross but still gets tingles and a waterfall down there for him as you're about to learn.

They both go out on new years, he doesn't come home with anyone and decides to fuck her, so he runs his game and they fuck (girl logic: it just happened, it's magic). He keeps running his game during the next couple of days, gets lazy and decides to keep shagging her until something better comes along. This bitch is all over his gross unattractive dick that recently had 5 plates spinning.

Guy is getting so much poon from this girl while they live together that he's being lazy with his plates. A plate is about to fall so he goes and satisfies the plate. Of course the girl doesn't dare fucking protest, she's only slightly grossed out now according to her. Can't risk losing that alpha.

This guy is running some form of vulnerability game which is working perfectly on this bitch. He's also getting so much sex from the plate that he doesn't want to fuck the uggo (in comparison) at home.

He tells her that he doesn't care about his plates and she believes him because he tells her all the time, yet he's there fucking the plates instead of her, so he clearly doesn't care about them right. Fucking women logic, use it to your advantage. You can run this same fucking game if you get experience and put your mind to it

The bitch tries to run some jealousy game on him,

She's 25 years old. Did you read that clearly? That means you can run this type of game for girls all the way up to that age. Fuck that's like music to my ears. Hoes are duuumb.

So he keeps fucking 2 plates, and finds a dime or something. Dime turns him down. Uggo pretends like she doesn't care but is secretly rainbows and sunshine happy. He games the dime into going out. Uggo starts getting tingles and wants the alpha dick, terrified of alpha going to another woman even though she's not fucking him anymore. Those resonating tingles. Uggo goes to meet his dime date and boosts his SMV, thanks Uggo, looks like you're useful after all.

Guy comes back without any closes and uggo is really happy. Guy prepares to go to another plate's house for sex.

Motherfucker swallow the pill already, this is how shit works. How much proof do you need?

I've saved the best for last. After all this shit, she still feels for him. Bitches will hamster away all their bullshit to get that alpha cock. You can be a conniving asshole of a player and they will still WANT you. You tell me this chick doesn't want to settle down with him at the snap of his fingers.

Betas, pussies, newbies, and blue pillers, this is the fucking reality. Guys like me and other red pillers have prime pussy ready to settle down with us on speed dial. I'm a fucking selfish prick and I can have a girl here in an hour if I wanted to. Fuck all of your bullshit underpinnings about how things work. The reality is that tingles = bitch does what you want. Learn that shit.

This bitch tells the guy his feelings. He tells her he doesn't feel the same way. She pushes it and he flat out tells her she's too ugly for him.

The bitch proceeds to hamster about some random shit for a paragraph, unimportant. Reality is that she can't control her natural urges for alpha cock. So she's going to go to japan for 3 months to "figure everything out".

Heads up TokyoPickup, one incoming.

Now go read it from her perspective if you want, links at top.

Question for Blue: What's the problem with this strategy?

3 upvotes | February 11, 2014 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

We are looking at the comment chain that I permalinked to. This is /u/nicethingyoucanthave's comment, the response to him, and /u/nicethingyoucanthave's response to that comment. WE ARE NOT LOOKING AT THE OP.

As of right now, 50% of the replies have been about the OP when I clearly stated that it is not about the OP in the last paragraph of this post. I threw that in after the first response here replied to the OP instead of the permalinked comment, so it's been up since pretty much right after the beginning.

Read this:

http://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/1xm0ln/dread_game_instant_tingles/cfcmkff and read the first level child comment and the 2nd level child comment.

I can't see any way that this guy is fucking the girl over. Please find something wrong with this strategy. Some point of contention, or immorality, or something you don't like.

Just to make it unequivocally clear. We are looking at the comment that I permalinked to. This is /u/nicethingyoucanthave's comment, the response to him, and /u/nicethingyoucanthave's response to that comment.

What is your dark triad score

7 upvotes | February 12, 2014 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

<http://personality-testing.info/tests/SD3.php>

Let's compile a list of cons to circumcision that we can later make into an info-graphic so that we have something easy to spread around to other men/parents considering the operation for themselves/their kids.

7 upvotes | February 14, 2014 | /r/MensRights | Link | Reddit Link

I'm trying to find good links right now, but it's more difficult than I anticipated.

I will continuously update the OP with the compilation of cons as I find them, and as people submit them.

Let's get the ball rolling on this.

The restaurant analogy.

30 upvotes | March 14, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

What makes a good restaurant? Good food? A good atmosphere? A hot waitresses that slips you her phone number in the bill?

Think about some of the restaurants that you like, what do they have in common? They are probably in a convenient location, clean, have good food, a nice ambiance, and a waitress/hostess with an average sized rack that uses her tight ass to guide you to your table.

What else? The answer is people. Of all the places that I can think of being great restaurants, nearly all of them have always had a steady number of customers. Why is this? Well, because of the reasons stated above.

Why is that restaurant good? Because it has a lot of people in it on a regular day. If it had shit food, people wouldn't come back which would decrease the number of people in it on a regular day. If the ambiance was shitty, same thing. Good things add customers. Bad things reduce the number of customers.

What is a good indicator that a restaurant is good? It's packed.

What about that other place across the street? It seats 50 and yet only 6 people are dining.

People are smart enough to assess the cues from different restaurants to make a judgement call. It's the elephant in the room that's acknowledged whether or not the elephant's existence is validated or not.

Going to the packed place is a much safer bet than the place across the street that has enough empty space to fit 4 football teams.

"Is the food not good there?"

"It's probably not clean, that's why there is no one there."

"I bet you the food is old because they don't have many customers."

These are just the things that someone can think of. There are other things that will affect you regardless of if you think about them.

Things to do with the experience a restaurant provides. Think about the excitement generated by going to a restaurant that you know has a high chance of having good food, customer service, a very nice ambiance, and many people to share the experience with around you. Think of how a girl feels about it. She can relax, she knows what you expect, and her experience will come within 10% margin or error of what she'd expect. She would expect a great night at a nice restaurant. And she would hate having a shitty night, but hey, she can relax, because she's not going to get a shitty night because she's going to this place, where it will be good.

Let's just assume that on the same night, another girl is going to the place across the street where they will play the same music and serve the same food. Think about the excitement generated by going to that restaurant. She would know that the last time she saw the place, roughly 90% of the seats were empty. What are her expectations? The expectations are lower, even if the future would hold the exact same experience, because she can only go by what she has seen so far. She will also not be completely relaxed about the night as the girl going to the other restaurant.

So she takes a chance and walks in to the place and 12/50 seats are taken; that's going to affect her thinking. "Why are there only 12 people here?". But if the place is packed, all of that instantly goes out the window, and the girl can relax. "I'm not the only one that likes this place, look at all these other people that like it as well, I feel safe because of that" - will be her thinking.

As you can see, the simple fact that other people like the place is a quality of the place itself and it actually provides a benefit to the girl in the example.

You can switch out restaurants for men in the examples above and it should become readily apparent if it wasn't glaringly clear before in terms of how important pre-selection is.

[Serious] Discussion on how to identify feminists, social justice warriors, and other high risk individuals around us.

47 upvotes | April 13, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Let's limit our discussion to serious points because this is a topic that has real implications in our lives.

We have all seen the shit-storms caused by feminists and other crazy people. Their bat-shit crazy antics pose unnecessary risks to most people in most situations. Here are some examples of those situations:

- Dealing with HR or being fired over
 - Sexual harassment complaints.
 - Sexism complaints.
 - Complaints of the "it makes me uncomfortable" variety.
- Accused of rape / sexual harassment criminally
 - I had a boyfriend and I will accuse him of rape to cover it up.
 - He didn't call me back, and because I don't want to be ostracized by my social group as a slut I will press charges on him.
 - I feel I didn't consent the morning after because there's no way that I would have consented to him.
- Social group issues
 - Upset at you for whatever reason and decides to spread nasty rumors about you.
 - Creates unnecessary drama that affects you negatively.

The goal of this discussion is for us to understand how to identify these women and individuals that create these unnecessary risks that pose a threat to certain aspects of our lives.

We can identify certain traits and characteristics through generalizations that can serve as probable indicators of high risk individuals.

Things like physical characteristics, thought patterns, mental disorders, living situation, field of employment, current employment, etc.

Thoughts on that recent "tinder study", aesthetics, and female rational

263 upvotes | April 20, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

There's a whole lot more at play to that study than Good Looking, Average, and Ugly. There are a bunch of other factors that say a lot about the people.

I made this into a separate topic because it would be interesting to discuss these concepts in greater detail.

Here are my thoughts:

First we will be dealing with the average guy: <http://i.imgur.com/HjVGuVD.jpg>

Night time, shitty lighting, flash directly to face, horrible background.

Do not take pictures like that. I'm not gonna write a tutorial on how to take good pictures when this topic has been dissected by professional photographers to an extraordinary level.

This guy needs to tame his eyebrows, especially near his nose: <http://imgur.com/ASF4sll>

Look at the average guy's collar. It's all curled on one side and flat with a big crease on the other; looks like shit. His shirt also has way too many folds, he needs to reduce that like so:

<http://imgur.com/T9Py7ti> and preferably get something like this: <http://imgur.com/yQwYAXg>
<http://imgur.com/taZvj16>. Look at the collars on those shirts too, those are nice. People, especially women, pay attention to this stuff.

His undershirt also looks discolored, old, and you can see a minor rip in it. He needs a nice new undershirt like this: <http://imgur.com/GwfBnFS>

Looking your best.

You may be ugly, but there's a stark difference between an ugly guy that looks like crap and an ugly guy that actually looks the best that he can look.

Let's take a look at the ugly guy: <http://i.imgur.com/bWv7tvS.jpg>

What's with the wide neck shirt? Did he shave his neck-beard or did he not? $3 sweater from goodwill, /r/whatcouldgowrong? Collar down, no up, no down, fuck it, it will be down in the front and up at the back. Hairstyle that accentuates already enormously large forehead, sure why not. Pale skin color with pronounced zits on face, check. Worst choice of glasses, check.

All of these things give signals. "I don't give a fuck about clothes", "I get my sweaters from goodwill", "I have no aesthetic upkeep whatsoever", "I love wearing pedophile glasses".

On a side note I can shed light on why girls think these kinds of guys are creepy, here is a girl's thinking:

He doesn't care about clothes, he really doesn't know what looks attractive on him and probably doesn't care. I care about clothes and I know what looks attractive on me, why doesn't he? That's weird to me. He doesn't take care of his neckbeard, zits, and his hairstyle doesn't fit him at all. His glasses look really unattractive and that makes me think that he doesn't care what other people think of him (subconsciously the girl will think that he doesn't get a lot of girls because she's turned off from him, and assumes that other girls will be too, at which point her mind will transition into thinking he is weird, lonely and etc.).

(All of these factors will make him look "creepy" to her.). I can't trust him or like him because I don't understand him at all (I care about clothes, he doesn't, etc.) and I am physically repulsed by this.

Fix the zits, shave neckbeard, get nice shirt, get better hairstyle, tan just a little bit to not look albino, and what do we get?

<http://imgur.com/xzQgRQp>

Nearly the same face shape. Both have protruding monkey-type ears. Both lips are smaller and slant downwards (with Jonah's being more "full"). This is what "looking your best" is.

Going back to that side note about how girls see guys, here's what a girl would say for Jonah if he was a random guy and not an actor.

He cares about how he looks, I love that, I care about how I look too. I think he did great on his hairstyle and his skin looks great. What a nice boy, I could even date him, let's see if he can turn me on. I get him because him and I understand the same things "looking good is important" "looking your best is something you should try to look". I feel safe because I can connect and relate with him, he is not a creep.

Now let's look at the good looking guy: <http://i.imgur.com/HvO1Qpf.jpg>

Nice background ✓

Eyebrows plucked (or naturally good like that) ✓

Hairstyle works well, recently cut ✓

Face skin looking nice ✓

Collar looking good, polo material quality very high, nice brand, nice red and blue hue ✓ ✓ ✓ ✓

Photo likely taken in early morning (best time for photos because light outside is white in color (noon time it is more yellow) ✓

Wrist bands indicating free spirit, etc ✓

Non-lifeless death stare and facial expression ✓

Also take into consideration that Jonah Hill and the good looking guy care about their looks and appearance so they have a very high chance of being very clean people. Girls like clean guys (showered, smelling nice, etc.). The ugly guy has a low chance of being clean based on face value assessment, which will make the girls uncomfortable.

Why give power to your partner?

2 upvotes | May 19, 2014 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

This is a question for anyone that considers themselves blue pill, purple pill, or anything other than red pill.

What we are first going to do is deconstruct what power is. What is really meant by power in this situation is leverage.

Leverage - The power to influence a person or situation.

The question is then "Why give leverage to your partner?"

Before we go further, we must deal with the inevitable complications that are inherent to this question.

Anything in a relationship can be defined as an economical interaction. The equation to an economical interaction from your perspective is $[\text{What they give you}] - [\text{What you give them}] = X$

X is simply the outcome. Either a net benefit or a net loss.

You can of course plug in anything to this equation. You are nice to them, they are nice to you. They give you everything while you give them nothing. You plan a spontaneous trip, they moan and groan about it.

What needs to be understood at this point in time is that you end up deriving some sort of benefit from your actions when you fulfill your part of the equation which is $[\text{What you give them}]$. In essence, you are not really donating $[\text{What you give them}]$, you are trading $[\text{What you give them}]$ for $[\text{What they give you}]$.

This is a very important subtlety which is critical to this question.

What I am asking is "Why would you donate leverage to your partner?"

This is the question that needs answering. Once you have answered that, there can be discussion about the following type scenarios.

If you have a big bank account, and you serve to derive an incrementally marginal benefit from giving your partner access to your bank account, why would you do it?

(Assuming you make more money than your SO): If your life with your partner is great and your relationship would not be solidified very much by tying the knot (on top of how solid it already is), what purpose does donating the leverage that your SO can take half your stuff upon divorce serve? Or what purpose does

What is your definition of Misogyny?

8 upvotes | June 8, 2014 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

Be as detailed in your definition as you can.

Retards, Retards Everywhere. This is the world we live in.

175 upvotes | June 9, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Read this whole thing: <http://redditlog.com/snapshots/700365>

Allow me to explain her situation.

This girl is extremely immature and naive. She has no idea about what it takes to have a healthy and happy relationship. She failed to mention almost every single important thing about her relationship. She is not looking for any solutions, she is just looking to talk about it. This part of her personality was apparent in the content of her writing, and was further solidified by the fact that it is very clear that she is not looking for any solutions in her post.

She made no mention of their sex life, the emotional fulfillment or satisfaction of her man. She made no mention of the kid that she already has and how the kid / father impacts her and her man's life.

Can you imagine dealing with this girl? Look at the words that she uses, it will give you a glimpse of what it's like to deal with her.

"I fucked up last year and failed a class and lost funding for school. It was apparently that day I disappointed him"

"Finally I just couldn't sit there and pretend to be so happy. Yesterday in the hotel room I just broke down, and everything after is just a blur."

"And I'm beautiful, and smart. I could have anyone. And still I love him."

She barely glosses over the fact that they started fighting more and he's been frustrated with her a lot this year. Makes absolutely no mention of what they were fighting about or why he was frustrated with her this year.

Literally complete aversion to discussing any real issues through a solution oriented, constructive criticism oriented discussion.

Responses to that post:

Top Response:

| You didn't do anything wrong just sometimes these things don't work out.

It's not possible that she did anything wrong, or did not measure up in any regard.

Response to Top Response:

| Totally sucks now, but you will look back on this one day and thank God you didn't marry this dweeb.

And if the reality is that this "dweeb" really did try to have a good life with her but she failed the relationship from her side. Wouldn't she look back on it understanding where she was wrong and how she will avoid making those mistakes for the future? Not possible, she can do no wrong, she will look back on that day and thank god she didn't marry him, because she did everything perfectly, and he is the one who is a dweeb.

2nd response:

| Even though it feels like you are dying right now from a broken heart I can tell you that it will get better. You need to know that you deserve that same level of love too.

| It hurts that he couldn't return your love but that doesn't mean that you are any less deserving of it

TL;DR: she deserved everything.

6th response:

| If I have this right, he fell in love with the girl who worked hard at her education and was then disappointed when you failed?

Yeah, you should be happy she failed!

Another response:

| If you are not getting 100 percent from him then he doesn't deserve you.

Or maybe you don't deserve his 100 percent? Nope, not possible, pussy deserves 100% at all times.

| For better or for worse, if he can't take this then who knows what he wouldn't be able to take in a marriage.

Yeah, all the fighting and frustration this year was enough for him, he wouldn't be able to take the dead bedroom + fighting + infidelity in a marriage.

| You are beautiful and you didn't do anything wrong

Absolutely nothing wrong. Literally nothing wrong in 3 years of time has been done wrong by her. No mistakes, errors in judgement, under-performances, etc. Literally a unicorn.

| You WILL find someone who cares 100 percent.

Right? And so will that beta that keeps getting friendzoned. One day He'll find someone who sees him for what he's worth.

Another response:

| Him using your ADHD against you (cabinets, trouble focusing in school, etc) is totally dick.

She didn't even mention that he used her ADHD against her in any way shape or form, and of course it's implied that the man who didn't want to marry her is a dick and probably did use it against her.

Another response:

| You fail one class and dude isn't in love with you anymore?

Of course right? Because it was clearly apparent in her post that the dude literally stopped loving her after she failed a class and only because she failed a class.

Another response:

| He's a douche. I know you love him, but you sound like a great fun person and he seems weirdly critical.

Yeah, he wants you to do well in school and manage your ADHD using strategies to ensure that you can live normally. What a wierdo.

| It's going to suck for a while, but one day you'll feel better and you'll find a guy that respects and loves you for you.

Looks like she's going to have to drop that hypergamy drive a little bit for that. Who am I kidding, she's going to have to drop that shit to the ground. Her man was well paid, tall, dark, handsome. What a fucking weirdo, he probably wanted someone that he doesn't fight with for an entire year, and is frustrated with.

Another response:

| You are the victim here and don't let anybody else convince you otherwise.

Again, literally impossible to be wrong or not be a victim. Honestly, I laugh about this, but it's actually very sad in reality. This girl is suffering real consequences from this type of mentality. The victim-hood is bullshit, but the consequences are real and painful. All these people that are telling her that she isn't at fault for anything are just perpetuating this lifestyle that she just has to be herself and everything will come to her. It will only bring her more of the pain that she has now.

Another response:

| Well by the way you explained the situation you are perfect and did nothing wrong (except fail a class)

It's like no one has the ability to actually look into the dynamics of her relationship and understand that there is A LOT that she could have done wrong.

Another response:

| You need to know THIS IS NOT YOUR FAULT. YOU DID NOT DO ANYTHING TO MAKE HIM LEAVE YOU. Whether he was an asshole, manipulative, or simply got cold feet and used you as an excuse - you can't blame yourself.

Another response:

| When he met me, I was a student. A single mom going to school, playing pool on the weekends I didn't have my son.

Hello? Here's where your relationship failed and most likely no woman here will be able or willing to tell you. Something to think about for you and other women in similar situations.

Single women with kids are always on probation To put it brutally a single mother is a liability until proven otherwise. There's something paradoxical that a single father is very often seen as good husband material but a single mother raises all kinds of red flag in a man's mind. There's really no logical explanation to this. Brain wiring?

No logical explanation to it. Could it be that it implies that the woman failed to keep herself from having a child at an early age, or failed to keep a man, or failed to keep herself from having a kid with someone that would leave her, or a myriad of other reasons? What about the fact that it means that being a step-father is a huge responsibility, what about dealing with the father in the relationship, split custody, ? Are none of these logical?

The rest of this person's response was actually decent:

| Men are very wary of women who might want to drag them into relationships with baggage. Everything until the marriage is a test to see who was responsible for the failure of the previous one because the consequence is having a kid (and therefore another man) in your life that's not yours. Women feel badly about getting involved in such situations. Men are paranoid about them. Call it evolutionary instinct of self-preservation. Men are not very much aware of it most of the time. But I guarantee you that this was a factor far more than your ADHD or trouble at school. If you didn't have a kid you would have a much bigger chance of working it out.

You might be hurting now but you have to realize that this was never meant to be an easy relationship. I don't know if it helps here but it didn't stand a very big chance of working out to begin with. Three years of engagement is a pretty good run if you ask me. Consider what I wrote if you don't want to fail your next one. It's as much strategy and planning as love and other things...

Cry a lot but don't worry. This too shall pass.

EDIT: I wonder if anyone in this subreddit is actually a grown up. Everyone seems to behave like teenage girls. No like what hear? Downvote tantrum! A self-perpetuating circle of crippling self-denial.

Just wow.

Of course it gets deleted.

Here's another good response. One of the first times her son has actually been mentioned. Obviously it's near the bottom of the page.

I think the real victim in this whole scenario is your son that's just lost another father. This guy has been a part of your young sons life for at least 3 years and at no point do you mention the impact your fiancée's abandonment will have on him.

But instead of thinking about that you talk about how blindly hurt you are. You don't even know why he's not happy or why he's ending the relationship.

Have you had any positive male relationships in your life? Abusive father, absent or drug addicted brother and the father of your child is presumably not in the picture.

I'm not sure if your even aware of what a healthy relationship looks like as you fall in love on a first date when your both still objectively strangers to one another. Your also shocked when you go to NYC and see real healthy relationships which forces reflection back on to your relationship.

Even after that you still want to go forward with a marriage even with all the dysfunction laid bare. No the real damage and pain has been dealt to your son.

Edit: I'm not saying any of this to be mean but rather much like with the NYC couples my comment forces you look to outside of yourself. How does the relationship ending at this point affect your son? I raise this concern merely because at no point is he mentioned except

| in how he relates to you with "I'm a single mom."

Another response:

| He sounds like a piece of shit.

What exactly does "objectifying" mean?

2 upvotes | June 15, 2014 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

This is a Question for blue pillers. What is your definition of objectifying?

My take on the spreadsheet husband

582 upvotes | July 18, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

<http://redditlog.com/snapshots/873525>

7 weeks of having sex less than once every two weeks, and the wife leaves for a 10 day work trip. Husband sends email basically stating that he won't miss his wife for the next 10 days (wife's words) and attaches spreadsheet to wife's work email (to ensure she got it) of every time he has initiated sex in the past 7 weeks, whether sex was had, and if it wasn't, what the reason for it not happening from the woman's side was.

The first thing the wife says is that this is a side of her husband that she has never seen before. She describes him as being bitter, immature, and full of hatred.

Our sex life HAS tapered in the last few months, but isn't that allowed?

We are adults leading busy, stressful lives. I cook for him, I do his laundry, I keep our house clean and tidy. It's not like our sex life was going to be this way FOREVER

This is where we are at with women, folks.

The first reply to the thread is by a prominent female user of /r/relationships. This user has been on /r/relationships for an extremely long time, always having highly upvoted posts. Her reply is the most upvoted reply with 150 points.

If someone had constructed a spreadsheet of reasons why I wouldn't have sex with them, it would make me instantly want to pounce on their cock and worship them like the god of sex they clearly are. No wait - it would make me feel nauseous and like I didn't want them anywhere near me. That's beyond pathetic.

I'm not exaggerating when I say that anyone with a semblance of and understanding of how relationships work would know that the husband in the situation isn't after sex anymore. He's clearly taking a nuclear option. How far he will go down that path is unknown. But it's clear that his goal isn't to convince his wife to fuck him by sending her a spreadsheet. This is something that /u/LittleMissP seemed to overlook, and similarly something that /r/relationship users upvoted. This says a lot about that community.

I'm going to take a detour and talk about the whole situation this guy finds himself in, and people's perception of him.

The red pill truth is that he is a beta. He is already unattractive because he is unable to get sex from his wife. People aren't stupid. Women especially. Even more so women that have been with lots of men.

They connect the dots. Regardless of if they are thinking about it at the forefront of their mind, or subconsciously.

The fact that he cannot get sex from his wife often implies many things. Selection bias comes in to play. On top of that, women are biologically constructed machines aimed at surviving and producing offspring. They will smell his SMV from a mile away.

Take a look at how they described him. His wife described the email that he wrote as a sarcastic diatribe, and described him as bitter, immature, and full of hatred. /u/LittleMissP described him as beyond pathetic.

For what? He bought a house with her, he has a job, he doesn't hit her, he doesn't call her names, he doesn't abuse her. How do we know that? Oh, you can bet that those are true or else the professional victim OP would have been all over them in her post.

Realistically that husband, or someone else in his position would try to take the correct channel in fixing a problem. Specifically the blue pill strategy that they think is correct. Being nice to their wife, not stepping on her toes, legitimately asking for sex. And then when the sex wouldn't happen, he would try to fix what's stopping it. If his wife is tired, he would let her sleep so that they could have sex after, only for her to wake up with another excuse. She's full, but after she's better, she wants to watch a FRIENDS rerun. This blue pill man more or less took this path, and the next logical step in the correct approach path. Every time one excuse was solved, another would pop up. He detailed all of the excuses and sent it to her to show her that he can't solve all of her excuses. He is looking for her to give him an opening of the next thing that he could solve to get sex. He sees sex as a reward and knows that he must do something to attain it.

What was /u/LittleMissP's advice?

And that would be the point to have a clothes on conversation about your concerns. Not construct a spreadsheet that you email as she leaves the country for 10 days.

Let me ask this. What would be the point of having a clothed conversation? Wife agrees to sex with husband 3 times in 7 weeks. Wife rejects husband's advances 24 times. She doesn't re-initiate sex. Actually, she never initiates sex. She isn't concerned with satisfying her husband before leaving for a 10 day work trip. She is unconcerned about his emotional well being and never mentioned once how he feels.

LittleMissP followed up with:

If he is so hurt and damaged by her rejecting him so much (which isn't me being snarky - being rejected constantly is pretty hard on the self esteem) then he should have told her how awful he was feeling

Yes, apparently the wife is too stupid to tell that he is hurt and damaged by being rejected 24 times in the span of 7 weeks. He needs to tell her. There is no way that she could use 10 brain cells to figure that out on her own.

Be very careful with these people that subscribe to the ideology of verbal communication for everything. Non-verbal communication is just that, non-verbal communication. The wife has communicated that she really couldn't give a flying fuck about her husband's sexual satisfaction.

The supposed solution to this problem would be to talk to her about it verbally with something like what a user in that thread posted:

Babe, I've been keeping count, it's been 3 times in the past 2 months. I'm getting shot down 9 times out of 10. The lack of any sort of intimacy is way more of a problem than you seem to understand

First of all, he wouldn't have the strength to stomach it all and call her babe. Frankly, I think that anyone that stomachs this kind of stuff is a doormat. I think that the reason why I and a lot of red pill men consistently get what we want is because we don't stomach anything and we demand what we want; scratch that, we attain what we desire. I don't demand respect, I instill it. I don't ask for sex, I make her crave it. That is the difference between trying to be nice to get something, and actually going and getting it.

Well, with that response that the user suggested, he would still get ostracized for "counting". And what would she reply with? "I can't believe how wrong I was, what have I done?". Of course not. All that he would achieve would be to simply bring it up.

He knew about it, she knew about it. Great, you have now verbally pointed out that there is an elephant in the room, that you both knew was there the whole time. Guess what, the elephant didn't leave the room just because you pointed him out. The core problem will persist.

And this is where blue pill strategizing will lead you. Not only did you stomach getting rejected 24 times in 7 weeks while trying to do the right thing, not pressuring her into sex, trying to fix what was stopping the sex, but you actively tried 24 times, failing each time.

God forbid that you feel a little bitter that your whole life you were told that love triumphs all. That something like this could never happen if you had a job, got a house with your wife, didn't abuse her or anything like that. You did nothing wrong, you did everything according to the way society told you that you should do it, and now you're in a sexless marriage.

This is actually the man's first step into dark territory. This is the first time that he has stepped out and done something against what society told him was the right thing to do. This is the first step that he took into potentially leading a red pill life. He knew the societal repercussions and he still took that step.

What did his wife say before?

Our sex life HAS tapered in the last few months, but isn't that allowed?

We are adults leading busy, stressful lives. I cook for him, I do his laundry, I keep our house clean and tidy. It's not like our sex life was going to be this way FOREVER

This is where we are at folks. As the red pill has been preaching for some time now, you can clearly see this sentiment unequivocally being expressed by a married woman. During a marriage, women are allowed to turn down the sex. Let this be a warning for you. I want you to remember this along with all of the other things that Red Pill preaches years from now when you are thinking of getting married. And then cup your balls and have a good feel, because those won't be there once you sign the marriage contract.

I will be posting a sort of follow up to this when I have time, stay tuned for that

To anyone reading this that is living in a similar situation.

You don't have to keep living life that way. There is another way. I have a girl right now that is literally begging me to suck me off and cum on her face. You don't have to live a life where you have to ask for sex only to be rejected. Come live life with me on my side where you will enjoy it, and women will actually enjoy and crave your company. Can you remember the last time your wife craved you? There are lots of girls that I have slept with in the past, after which I proceeded to go AWOL; I still get snapchats from them. I didn't keep them around for one reason or another because I wanted to enjoy my life as much as I could. And while I enjoyed my life with them, I moved on to other girls and things that I enjoyed even more. Whereas you are living a life now with someone that you do not enjoy, I am cherry picking what I enjoy the most. You don't have to live life the way you do now.

And to end things on a bright note, some people over at /r/relationships did know what they were talking about to an extent. Here was my favorite response:

OP, your husband doesn't give a shit about the house being clean or tidy. He'd rather get a blowjob.

If you don't believe me, go spend some time at /r/deadbedrooms

Seriously if you are being honest about being "too busy cleaning" to have sex, stop. fucking. cleaning. You are fucking up your marriage.

New Sub. /r/DebateRedPill

1 upvotes | September 21, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

[removed]

New Sub. /r/DebateRedPill

7 upvotes | September 21, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Discussion: Women's love is inferior to men's love

11 upvotes | November 19, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

I live my life constantly evaluating and reevaluating my understanding of what I find to be "true" as well as the decisions I make based on my understandings. Living an RP lifestyle as I do, you come to a point where it is critical to reevaluate the validity of RP. As with any business decision, it's important to consider that you are wrong. Maybe the foundations of which I base my life on are wrong.

The key to a stronger foundation is to constantly subject it to disturbance. Should it stay standing, then it is solid and life should be lived on that foundation. Should part of it fall, then that part needs to be rebuilt with true understanding of the way things are.

And so I saw fit to test my own foundations and dove head first into the blue pill world. I can sit here and pander about the specifics of what happened, though it is much more critical to give you the exact information that you need.

The first time I tried BP (first BP gf) I put in 110% effort and love and assumed that it would succeed. It did, to a point. BP definitely has its upsides. For one, I don't see a way to make a deep bond without utilizing BP. At least I don't see a way to do that living life the way I do. Where it all fell apart was on RP principles. I learned first hand what they were, I saw them and felt them, there was no denying them. There were no other explanation for them, they existed, they worked, and they were needed. RP is extremely important.

This time I tried BP again. I made an assumption that I didn't find the "right gurl" the first time around. And one specific new girl hit me like a brick. We clicked on a level that people don't usually click on, great chemistry from the start, great dynamic, great personality combination, etc. If you ask me what would make the start more "perfect" I would not have an answer because I saw that everything was there.

At that point I realized that this person has real value to me. I could plate her, but there was something better. Going back to me constantly reevaluating my life to make sure I'm doing everything right, I decided that there was no better person on which to test my life foundation. I changed my mindset into a heavily BP one for a while to be fully immersed into actually giving something a real chance again. I definitely learned some things from this experience. One of which is the level of game I can reach by tapping into combination RP-BP strategies, creating some of the biggest push-pulls that I have ever made, among other newly learned strategies.

This project took a few weeks of my time. Here are the results. Attraction is based on game. Whether or not the man realizes that he is gaming, the reality is that he is gaming. This same game works on all the women that I have done things with. The conclusion of attraction being based on the ability of a man to create certain brain signaling in the female gives credence to the foundational concept that on the base level, attraction really is a simple biological construct, nothing more. Sure it can grow and feel as if it is insane, but it is limited, predictable.

And so this brings me to my main points. The amount of life experience and evidence that I have siding with RP keeps mounting. So far, this girl has come the closest to shaking the foundations of RP that I live on. Of course the foundations were left standing solid, which in turn makes them stronger. This was the whole original point of doing this.

This brings me to my final point and topic of this discussion, women's love is inferior to men's love. I now have a heightened appreciation for the biological aspect of women's attraction over the appreciation for the mental side. I see it being much more biological at its core than mental. And here's where I present my main opinion. Women's love is limited by more biological constraints than men's love. There are simply too many things that a girl has to deal with on a biological and mental level in terms of true attraction over that of what a man has to deal with. For myself it's a simple process at heart. Do I like the girl? Does she attract me? Do we get along? Do I see a future with her? Am I willing to actually try this with the girl? After those 5 general questions, the only one left is if I'm content with keeping it like that for the rest of my life, and that is a question that should be answered for the duration of life. At the core level, that is all I really require. The only thing that changes with my value going up is I can turn up the "how good she is" setting.

But for women, it is not that easy at all. They just can't do it. Even when presented with real value that is the best option, it's still not enough, they need to be gamed. I can go into great depth in this area, but I'll keep it short. They realize the value of what they lost after they try to go back to their regular lives without it, a true connection. It just doesn't feel the same with other guys. They lost their little drug and they need it back more than ever. Then they call you back and become your little slave doing anything you want just to get you back and keep you. I have girls that to this day would drop anything to be with me, that's how fucking deep it goes. How do I know? I called one last week to break it off permanently (because she was still holding out for me, it's been years) to give the new girl a chance. She was going to say yes to engagement with another guy, she said that she would drop everything in a heartbeat to be with me, anything and everything. That's the problem, they realize only after the fact.

I'm going to cut this short right here. If you're particularly interested in what I am going to do in my life now, it's very simple. Every girl that I make a real connection with comes crawling back, it's a matter of time, maybe a little longer with this one cause she is damn hot. Just like all the rest did, she'll come crawling back, and I'll be able to do whatever I want with her and fuck her bdsm style (plate - obviously). The rest is just making money, self-improvement, having a good time, the regular.

If you have anything you would like to share on how women's love is or isn't inferior to men's, or how women's and men's love is supposed to compliment each other, or whatever else, please do.

Let's talk about the next chapter in the Sexodus series in regards to meaningful lifelong commitments with women and the impacts on men that will occur in the next few years.

49 upvotes | December 7, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

For reference: Sexodus Part 1

Investment in Women

129 upvotes | January 12, 2015 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

This thread is meant as a general topic about investment (emotional, time, money, etc) in women and relevant theory analysis behind it. Here's my take on it

Earlier today I saw this tinder chat failure screenshot: <http://i.imgur.com/oel1deW.jpg>[1]

After looking at it, I had the realization that some men won't see this as a chat fail, and some men will know it's a lost opportunity but don't yet understand one big element of why.

This guy is running his game on her. This is his game. He thinks he will get the girl by wearing his white armor and playing this classic tactic. I have news that it's not so rare. She's probably seen it before, and most likely from a very beta guy, whereas this guy in the chat could just be slipping up for a month or two, but he would be thrown in the beta category in her mind.

He's already investing a lot into her. Why do that? He's showing all his cards. She already knows he likes her (possibly for more than a quick fuck). And he's throwing the ball completely in her court.

I can tell you that men that I know who bed the most women are very selective in who they bed. They have enough girls to the point that it's a problem in their schedule. I also found that when I was on my lifetime high streak I was very selective as well. It's like being in a gelato/icecream place, they're all good, but you have your preferences and you only have enough room for 3-5.

This means that every girl is on the chopping block and they get dropped often because of the new coming in. It's like Game of Thrones. You never know who's going to die, and all the girls are trying to stay alive. Add preselection to the equation and girls are seeing other girls literally falling over themselves for you. You get the Hollywood effect. It's perfectly normal for every woman to like Leonardo Di Caprio. With so many girls liking you, it becomes normal to like you. I've seen this in action in extended social circles.

A man like that, his value is high. The tides even turn a bit and now girls are chasing him. They will invest in him without him doing anything. She'll text him, she'll ask to go out, she'll start cute talking, she'll say goodmorning/goodnight.

You can't be that man while also investing a lot into every woman you meet. A great analogy would be you being a client manager or a business owner and investing way too much time and effort into every small or low profit client. You're screwing yourself because you're minimizing your potential profits, you could be investing your time into a bigger client that will generate more revenue for you. By definition you would not be a good client manager / focused business owner. And in the world of women, they will see you as a non-abundant man, "why is he investing so much into me?".

Women have seen so much from men that they see through a lot of who you are as a person. They've been around men their whole lives. The same way we can tell a slut from a dating material girl, they can tell that you are career focused, or driven, or trustworthy, or one night stand fuckable.

So why throw the ball in her court? Hold your investment, let her earn it. Push, pull. Don't text her on time every on every message. Why should you. You're probably busy doing something good. So you lose a few doing this. But you gain a few that go into your frame. There's less drama, they like you more, sex is better, you don't have to try hard for shit. I remember a thread on trp where one guy said all he has to do is text his girl to come over and fuck him. No drama, she comes over, fucks well, completely in his frame. Is that not better than having to strive for a girl?

Assuming the girl wouldn't be a chat bot, she's done nothing for him and he shows that he likes her quite a bit. When did she throw that out there that she likes him? A lot of the time, tinder matches don't lead to sex. She hasn't promised anything to him, texted him twice. Where's the challenge in that. She's not going to feel like she's getting a prize. Who remembers that line from old pua game "don't touch the merchandise"? There's a reason that it works. It's a bit of push/pull and challenge. Fuck her, she will touch you when you allow it in your frame, not hers. You become the captain. You're not just going to give it to her.

Assuming the girl wouldn't be a chat bot, the conversation from the screenshot I originally linked goes from "Hello" to "hello" to "Essay". Did she write you an essay? No. So why would you get her to write one? If you've seen successful tinder scripts, look at what they do, they make the girl invest in the man.

[http://redditlog.com/snapshots/1463829\[2\]](http://redditlog.com/snapshots/1463829[2])

That is an example of a tinder script. Show me one point where the guy drops an entire essay on someone. He sends small texts, she doesn't have to judge his character or anything deep like that. It's very simple for her, she just has to talk to him as he gives her opportunities to like him. Then he gives her the close line and she either wants to go out with him or not. He didn't promise her anything or invest anything in her other than a corny pick up line that she thinks he knows off the top of his head and a copy paste funny message. In the 6/8 of part 3 he is actively getting her to invest in him. Everything is still on the table for when they meetup. She doesn't know what's going to happen, it's interesting and fun for her.

Investment is a subtle nuance that is present in all interactions and I think it has a huge influence on your game, which is why it's important to understand it and use it properly.

Think about the female imperative, nice guys, and you begin to see that a huge mistake that men make is to invest into a girl. The female imperative parrots that this is a good thing to do. The lack of pussy for nice guys shows otherwise.

The current state of affairs and a taste of what is to come.

Single mother parenting.

54 upvotes | September 2, 2015 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Whoever is downvoting this, be a man, share your thoughts below.

Thread summary: My quick thoughts on single mother parenting and an example from the relationships subreddit. I hope that some of us here on TRP can chime in and discuss this topic in the comments.

I am a 42 year old single mom of my 15-year-old son, Tyler (names changed, of course). His father is not a part of our lives (he left shortly after I became pregnant unexpectedly), and I have no plans for remarrying any time soon, nor do I have any other children.

Now, on to the real issue. Lately, I have noticed Tyler spending a lot of time in his bedroom. This normally isn't too concerning, but the other day I was putting laundry in his drawers, and I stumbled up on what seemed to be, well, homemade sex toys. A lot of things that have gone missing in the couple of month were all in there. I won't go into detail, but it seems like they were made for insertion.

What should I do, if anything? I don't want to seem like a snooping mother, but I'm mostly concerned with his health. Could he hurt himself? I discussed the issue with my sister (which was mortifying enough), and her suggestion was to take him to a sex shop. Is that a good idea, or would that make things worse?

I have never discussed anything like his with my son, so any suggestions or help would be appreciated. Thanks in advance.

tl;dr: I [42f] found homemade sex toys in my son's [15M] room. I'm worried about his health. Should I have a talk with him?

Where do I start.

She got knocked up when she was 26-27. The father left after he found out she was pregnant. She didn't have an abortion, and had a son.

The son is now 15. She is still single. Consider the fact that she was unable to find a ~~ideal~~ decent mate for 15 years. She actively made the decision for her son that he did not need a father figure in his upbringing. She goes on to say that she does not have upcoming plans to get remarried or have other children. First of all, she's single. She has to find someone, get along with them, and make them want to commit to her. Even if she did want to get married soon, the odds are stacked against a 42 year old woman.

Moving on.

the other day I was putting laundry in his drawers, and I stumbled up on what seemed to be, well, homemade sex toys

| What should I do, if anything? I don't want to seem like a snooping mother

Before I even get into the brunt of things, I have to address this idiotic thing. She wasn't snooping, she was putting clothes away into his drawer and found his stash. There literally is no problem. Is she afraid to parent?

Her sister gave her the suggestion of taking her son to a sex shop.

Let's take a look at the update:

| First of all, I'd like to thank all of you for your advice! It made me do a lot of thinking and considering on the topic. Though a lot of individuals told me not to bring it up with Tyler, some PMs with horror stories definitely pushed me towards the side of having a conversation!

So, I did what a lot of you suggested and wrote a letter. I told him that I care about him, which is why I don't want him to hurt himself (or others, for that matter). I explained to him that what he had in his drawers could get him put into a hospital, and that was my biggest concern. I also made sure to mention that what he was doing was completely normal / natural; he just needed to be more health-conscious about it. I included a lot of links to educational resources (including Savage Love, which many of you raved about). I also bought him an Amazon gift card for $100.

When my son got home from school on Monday, I gave him both the letter and the gift card and told him to read it in his room. A few minutes later, I could hear him crying, so I knocked on the door and asked if he wanted to talk. He said yes, so we sat down and had a lengthy conversation. Poor Tyler was so embarrassed at first, but then he admitted that he was afraid that he already had hurt himself, but was too anxious to bring it up to me.

Thankfully, after a trip to the doctor with one terrified teenager, it was just a false alarm. Either way, Tyler thanked me for the letter and the gift card, and promised that he would be much more careful next time (as the doctor's visit was not a fun experience). I then told him that he better be, because he is putting his own laundry away from now on!

Thanks again for all your help, Reddit. The two of us feel closer now, and I think that Tyler will feel much more comfortable coming to me with any issues like this in the future. With any luck, I'll never have to worry about what my son is doing with his bottom again!

| tl;dr: I gave a letter and gift card to my son. Nervous son wanted to see a doctor, but it turns out that he's fine. It's been a bonding experience.

This kid was building an assortment of insertable objects to stick up his ass that the mother thinks could land him in a hospital. I'm assuming there are levels to this fetish going from just a finger to a sharpie, big sharpie, and an arsenal of objects custom built.

The kid was afraid he had already hurt himself which led to his mom taking him to the hospital.

For those of you wondering why men stay in marriages and cheat, this is one of the major reasons.

This is what happens when you leave your child to be cared for by your ex wife.

Maybe I have my own views on parenting, but there is so much that I find wrong with this mother. She's putting away his laundry for him. Why? He's 15, she should be teaching him how to be independent and self-sustaining. Not only should he be folding and putting away his own laundry, but he should be helping his mother do the laundry. Teaching the son the meaning of responsibility.

Did the mother call her own mother or father and ask for advice? No, she asked her sister. Her sister suggests they go to a sex shop. Also, where is the whole "see a therapist thing" the relationships subreddit loves so much. They love to dole out that advice for any stupid relationship problem, but not for this?

Where is a mans input in all of this? It seems that the mom, her sister, and the collective female readership of the relationship subreddit are making this parenting decision. Surely if we are dealing with a sexual issue that a boy faces, it would be good to get input from someone who has grown up as a boy and can more directly relate to what exactly is happening.

What this mother is doing is what I consider to be politically correct parenting. The right thing to do is what is considered politically correct. This is an absolute and you can clearly see the support that she is getting from making this PC decision.

Let me ask you, how many women have you slept with that would have been fine with you pulling out a dildo and sticking it up your ass? Forget about that, how many women would have been fine with the thought of knowing that you like that? This is something that she should explain to her son.

This is TRP, we know a decent amount about how women operate. We have seen time and time again that women say one thing and do another. Women don't even have a firm grasp on understanding themselves let alone understanding a boy's sexuality. They are not going to be there teaching their son about the real world. They will hold their son's hand and make PC decisions and let the world deal with the aftermath.

The father figure is missing and this is the primary topic of this post. This is just one example of single mother parenting. Looking at how things are going, this is what we will be seeing a lot of in the future.

Here's what's going to happen. Sons and daughters will not be properly prepared for this world. When a lot of these kids grow up, they will get depressed, some will even commit suicide. These are the big things that will happen that we can observe. What about all of the little things that we can't observe that will impact them? How will they impact the children's lives. Here's one you can probably relate to "be blue pill and girls will love you". How much has that impacted your life?

Why it is important to add value to this community

71 upvotes | October 1, 2015 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

The manosphere is a network of blogs, websites, and internet commentators that focus on issues relating to men and masculinity.

The Red Pill itself is a symbol representing the choice of embracing the truth of reality.

The Red Pill within the manosphere is the group's collective experience and understanding of today's truth of reality.

This Red Pill subreddit is the dynamic embodiment of the combined understanding of reality of this community's men.

This subreddit's focus is to facilitate this knowledge exchange.

If you are a lurker, you are here to receive knowledge. If you are also commenting to ask questions in the appropriate place after performing the due diligence of looking through years of valuable information contained in the archives, then you are here to receive knowledge and discuss it to an extent.

If you are here to make general comments, then you are participating in this community's dynamic discussion of The Red Pill. You are now a part of the signal to noise ratio. You are now putting information into the machine. Your comment should add to the signal.

This community is only as good as the men who contribute to it. And if you want to maximize the value that you receive from this community, it is in your best interest to have noise banned, general signal increased, and high signal retained.

You are extremely lucky to have high-signal individuals who take time out of their day to post for you. These are men that have one bitch, or two bitches, or three, or more. A full time job, family, friends, career progression, you get the picture. And they're juggling all of these things with 24hours in a day. They're not learning anything new by making a post. They are literally writing a short-long essay post to pass knowledge on to you using their limited free time.

Click "top", sort by "all time", and read.

402 upvotes | October 14, 2015 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

There is a vast wealth of knowledge beneath your fingertips. You just need to tap it.

For most, that resource is sitting untouched.

Have we made progressive strides as a community? Yes. Has the big picture changed? No.

Biology hasn't changed in the last few years. Men's current experiences mirror the ones from years ago.

The advice hasn't changed. What exactly has changed? We've grown.

The advice given years ago is just as valid as advice given today. Previous discussions were just as eye-opening as current ones.

There is no reason for you not click "top", sort by "all time", and read.

Top posts of TheRedPill sorted by month: <https://archive.is/gooeY>

Those of you in a relationship. Why are you in one? What do you get from being in a relationship?

10 upvotes | October 17, 2015 | /r/askTRP | Link | Reddit Link

Question for BP. Should the men that women cheat on their partners with feel bad about it? Assume the parties involved are not part of the same social circle, and assume that the girl is the one pushing for it.

2 upvotes | December 3, 2015 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

I can understand that if a man fucks his friend's girlfriend, it is a completely different situation than if a man fucks a girl who is not part of his social circle, who has a boyfriend that the man does not know at all.

Furthermore, the girl is the one initiating and pushing for it.

The question is really: what part does the man play in all of this, and should he feel bad about his part?

What previous disagreed upon topics have been debated to a point of agreement between all pills?

3 upvotes | May 4, 2016 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

Describe where you think the line is in terms of what makes something manipulative and give examples if you have any.

6 upvotes | May 10, 2016 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

The recent manipulation post didn't really get to the meat of the matter. I think the way this question is phrased will help illuminate where exactly the point of contention is.

We can further explore this topic if after writing about your example, you add to it what you think is the smallest thing that could be changed about it to make it non-manipulative.

What are the biggest points of disagreement between the pills?

8 upvotes | May 11, 2016 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

Do you think men are more violent than women in relationships?

1 upvotes | October 1, 2016 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

Partner screening questions.

1 upvotes | April 10, 2017 | /r/askTRP | Link | Reddit Link

Assuming that the choice has been made to pursue a committed relationship.

What are some good questions to ask the girl to screen her.

Is nervousness an emotion that creates attraction?

5 upvotes | May 12, 2017 | /r/askTRP | Link | Reddit Link

I think that at the core, one of the emotions that creates attraction is nervousness. It seems to be present in a lot of situations that generally tend to create attraction.

To be straightforward, this is not the "does he have a knife" nervousness. This is simple nervousness from a person you are interacting with who is doing nothing wrong or bad.

Do you think TRP can be used ethically?

7 upvotes | July 3, 2017 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

Based on responses: It looks like everyone here agrees that TRP can be used ethically.

Warning: Some women want to create a Fast Track to Prison program™ for young men. Teens as young as 18 could be thrown in prison in the future for failing to comply to ever changing consent laws and law interpretations.

12 upvotes | February 21, 2018 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

You may see this in the wild soon.

That thing you (maybe) did when you were learning to have sex, could land future young men in jail if the girl in the situation wants to prosecute.

Should young men get blindsided for something they were not trying to do and the girl wants her justice, they may be on the wrong side of a prison sentence.

Stay away from the crazies. There are plenty of girls who will suck dick and do sexual things in bed, craving it. Those seem like a better option.

Best option: Knowing what you're doing and filtering out what's bad for you.

Things that some people on TRP complain about, which actually make sense, making the complaint null

8 upvotes | May 30, 2018 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

Feel free to respond in any way you want.

Here are a couple I can think of off the top of my head

Issue: Guy/girl wants a girl/guy who will stay with them through all their troubles. Chosen example: being a guy who is depressed and wants his girlfriend to support him emotionally through all his trials and tribulations.

Thoughts: I personally think it takes a lot of fucking work to be happy in life and live well. It's enough to carry your own burdens on your shoulders let alone someone else's. It's quite obvious to me why couples split up if one person is constantly depressed. Abstract analogy: Imagine that you live a party lifestyle and go partying multiple times a week, and there's a party pooper who just shits on the evening every time you go out. How long will it be before you want to avoid the party pooper, dream of one fun party that's actually fun for you, or just ditch the shit that is making your life worse.

Issue: Unbalanced - love me for who I am and I will love you for who you are Thoughts: It takes a lot of fucking work as well to be a person worth their weight. Chosen example: Person puts in a ton of effort into themselves and are now desired because of their inherent value, they find a partner who hasn't done the work and that partner wants them to just love each other. Imagine a 22yo girl who just finished college, still doesn't know the ropes to life, lacks good communication skills, [insert some other thing here]. Does anyone think it's normal for this 22yo girl to just reach for the stars, land a 28yo established guy who has no issues in his life as he worked his ass off to be a better person to just drop everything and love her for exactly the person she is right now. Same thing as a fugly sperg expecting a devoted HB 8.

Bonus random thought: AWALT = ability of propensity -> proclivity

Quite a simple question: Is the core foundation of a monogamous relationship, sex?

1 upvotes | June 2, 2018 | /r/PurplePillDebate | Link | Reddit Link

Feel free to answer this question in any way you want, I have some kind of example below.

Assuming at least one partner has a high sex drive, and in the following example, assuming that person is you:

If there is a person you really jive with, but the sex isn't there, wouldn't it make more sense to keep that person as a lifelong friend and enjoy the non-sexual benefits of having them in your life. Then also going out and finding someone who satisfies your higher sex drive and brings with them decent non-sexual benefits as well. Would that get you to a point where you are having the best of both worlds?