

Someone in r/seduction wakes the fuck up. These two subreddits need to talk.

What did the guy say? The original text content has since been deleted.

I would love to know as well.

so the mod of a subreddit all about superficiality, casual sex, seduction and manipulation somehow thinks he/she has the moral highground over a subreddit about the rights of a particular population subgroup?

That perception of r/seduction is just as inaccurate as his perception of r/mensrights.

r/seduction is about how to be more attractive and develop social skills.

No, certainly not.

I think, however, that he is afraid that if r/mensrights and r/seduction start cross-pollinating, this will be ammunition for those who call sedditors "misogynists".

Me, I don't think it's a very good idea to react to what others might say about you.

But there's no point in arguing with someone who deletes before discussing.

Wow, would have been great if it hadn't been deleted.
