Feminism's rhetoric radicalizes people at such a point and it includes so many hate speeches towards boys and men in general that some feminists become misandrist terrorists. Feminism typically denied any responsibility about the incident by simply claiming that she's not a feminist despite Donna's multiple participations in feminist marches and activism.

Interesting fact: Some rapists got more prison time than Donna and had been ostracized for life, contrary to Hylton, which contradicts equality. A few months ago I saw in the news in tv that a man shot a female cop with a gun (without lots of days of appalling torture) and got 32 years.

It's no secret that we handle female abusers with kid gloves, see Amber Heard, compared to Johnny Depp, which contradicts Egalitarianism. Egalitarianism is supposed to be equality that goes both ways, thus equal sanctions for both sexes. I sympathize with Egalitarian ideas and values. Equality is a two-way road and no dead end.

Imagine if Ted Bundy was still around and was chosen to speak for men's rights... this is as ridiculous as that sounds

RacelessSexlessName • 12 points • 31 January, 2021 10:31 PM

Nah, it's even easier... Brock Turner giving a lecture on male rape.

Watch them explode with hypocrisy.

CaptainPrestedge • 2 points • 31 January, 2021 10:32 PM

lol, naughty :)

Donna still even managed to put 'herself' in the victims place with mental gymnastics complaining about the women's prison conditions.

PurpleJaguar • 14 points • 31 January, 2021 09:13 PM

What is it with violent abusive women being given positions of visibility in the women's welfare crowd? This woman, and now Amber Heard. I'm sorry but if you deliberately and willingly violently harm or attempt to violently harm another person, you have no business or place being a spokesperson for human welfare.

ignaciocordoba44[S] • 13 points • 31 January, 2021 09:20 PM

True. This way feminism spreads the message "I'm indifferent to what she did." or "I approve what she did." or "I only care if the abuse victim is female."

PurpleJaguar • 9 points • 31 January, 2021 09:59 PM

This. When people in the movement find out the truth about these women, they don't call them out or speak up against them. It does make it look like feminism and feminists are ok with these women's terrible behaviour or at the very least are unwilling to take any action on it. And then a lot of people in the movement are surprised when outsiders come to the conclusion that the movement hates men. If you don't condone it, condemn it!

RacelessSexlessName • 9 points • 31 January, 2021 10:33 PM

Feminists only call out and speak up when it suits their agenda. Look at the bullshit lists of men that floated around for a while or the "fire them" campaigns feminists stage. It's never against their own when they are just as or more guilty.

PurpleJaguar • 4 points • 1 February, 2021 01:40 AM

Unfortunately I think you are right. There never seems to be much backlash in the movement when a feminist behaves badly.

Nobleone11 • 4 points • 31 January, 2021 11:56 PM

I've found that feminism only speaks out for its accomplishments. Whenever there's some social breakthrough related to equality contributed by the movement, it crows on and on.

When pointing out the negatives and greivous mistakes it made, there's an automatic dismissive attitude. "That's not feminism.", "They're a vocal minority. Feminism is about equality".

If these supposed good feminists spent half as much energy fighting against this insipid element instead of playing Public Relations for the ideology, I'd be convinced it's about equality.

But as I learned from The Declaration of Sentiments, there never was any attempt made except to let it grow and prosper.

PurpleJaguar • 5 points • 1 February, 2021 01:49 AM

"That's not feminism".

I must admit I used to be a feminist myself, and I was guilty of this sort of thinking once upon a time. "Oh feminism is about true equality, so anyone who is misandrist is not a feminist!" It's an obvious no-Scotsman to me now.

But yes, the problem is that those feminists are just as much feminists as the ones who actually care about equality. And they don't get called out, and that really bothers me. In fact it's a major reason why I left. The fact that this movement I was part of would refuse to condemn blatant examples of serious misandry was just something that I couldn't let slide anymore.

Monkss1998 • 2 points • 1 February, 2021 07:14 AM

A kindred soul. I had a similar problem. In fact with several movements but the mainstream feminism movement had these annoying moments.

I sometimes see what they find toxic in male rights groups on reddit, but protesting a peaceful speaker about some issues I agreed were male issues worth talking about, really soured me to calling myself strictly feminist.

ignaciocordoba44[S] • 1 point • 1 February, 2021 12:29 PM

Yeah, if the good feminists tried to discourage and aactionize the toxic ones, I'd be fine about feminism but unfortunately they put little to no efforts into it.

We (MRA) need to avoid becoming like feminism in the years to come (with regard to not bothering to put any efforts to discourage hate towards ALL members of the other gender) □ we also need to discourage and sanctionize actions that contradict egalitarianism. Currently for feminism equality is a dead end. For MRA equality should be a two-way road to avoid becoming like feminism: blocking equality aspects that are disadvantageous for feminists.

ignaciocordoba44[S] • 1 point • 1 February, 2021 12:23 PM

Yeah, that's why I even don't like the supposed "good" part of feminists.

I stick with egalitarian women for relationships and friendships.

nocturnefox • 14 points • 31 January, 2021 02:27 AM

Not only that but he was gay and from what I heard there were homophobia during his attack if I remember right.

JestyAverageJoe[□] • 1 point • 6 February, 2021 01:39 PM

What happened to him is awful regardless of his sexual orientation.

We may have found an Apex Feminist here.

DefiantDepth8932 • 6 points • 1 February, 2021 08:14 PM

I remember some men in my country did less than half of this to a woman and those men got convicted and rightfully hanged. We literally cheered and celebrated in the streets when we found out about the executions. And when a woman does it people are cheering in support of her. And yet still everyone tells me that I have the privilege ignaciocordoba44[S] • 3 points • 3 February, 2021 07:16 PM

Maybe it's the fault of numerous (positive) portrayals by Hollywood and the media of women abusing men or male disposability or not taking male abuse victims serious.

In any case, given the fact that the US execute people, I don't understand why it wasn't applied to her. The creepy and abhorrent atrocities donna committed can hardly be surpassed. Executions either to both genders or none (Egalitarianism).

serial-grapeist • 26 points • 30 January, 2021 06:56 PM

And people still don't understand how feminism is a hate movement

JestyAverageJoe[ ] • 2 points • 6 February, 2021 01:40 PM

It's hard to understand something when you're determined not to.

ignaciocordoba44[S] • 20 points • 30 January, 2021 07:25 PM*

Misandrist feminists might masturbate and get aroused reading the descriptions of the torture acts.

East_Ok • 6 points • 2 February, 2021 01:07 PM

I know it's not on the same level but I feel this resembles the way people see Cardi B as some type of empowering female spokeswoman. She literally bragged about drugging men to rob them! How has she not been canceled yet?

[deleted] • 2 points • 2 February, 2021 06:14 AM

Ok she's absolutely insane, but this could be a step in the direction for bringing attention to how prisoners could be rehabilitated instead of given the death penalty especially since this approach would overwhelmingly benefit men.

empatheticapathetic • 4 points • 2 February, 2021 12:01 PM

They'll make sure it's a privilege only for women for sure

We do not celebrate violence here and we oppose capital punishment.

ilikeunity1 points 3 February, 2021 04:10 PM [recovered]

I wish for once someone would explain to me why they fundamentally oppose violence without any regard to the context. It seems to me a very self indulgent philosophy that does not acknowledge the reality of our situation in this life.

ignaciocordoba44[S] • 1 point • 3 February, 2021 07:19 PM

We punish with the legal system. Vigilantism doesn't work properly, according to empirics. Only in self defense (and only the appropriate measure) allows violence in civilized countries.

a-man-from-earth • 1 point • 3 February, 2021 11:29 PM

explain to me why they fundamentally oppose violence without any regard to the context

Well, that doesn't apply here. I do think context is important. I think self-defense is fine.

But the legal system makes mistakes. Execution is not something you can undo, and it is especially cruel while we know the system makes mistakes.
