

Women should be hyper vigilant of all men, including gay men, who _could_ be a straight man in disguise trying to bed you

These women are so sexist and they don't even realise

I wonder what kind of social circles some feminists like these are in since they've all seemingly only have such shitty encounters with men. If you ask me, these women need to be hypervigilant of their poor ability to judge whether or not the men they surround themselves with are good or bad. If you only attract bad men who wanna deceive you.. Than perhaps that should tell you something about your own poor judgement when it comes to picking men for relationships and friendships..

All men aren't bad, but some people's judgements regarding men definitely are.

Not all people are bad, some are, gender is not a guide. There again, there's a brick wall over there, I may as well go and bang my head against it for all of the difference it'll make to the, imho, hysterical feminist movement.

All men are dangerous, don't let your guard down.
