

Why do girls match on tinder if they're not gonna bother responding to messages? And why do guys bother with apps when they are purely crap?

As we all know, female profiles are outweighed between 10 to 20 by male profiles on the app. So if a guy gets a match it happens infrequently, so when it does happen he is going to feel a little excited "oh yeah haven't had a match in days". Then he drops a message to see what she's like....and she doesn't even bother replying.

I've heard reasons such as "your opener is too generic" or "you just say hi, how's it going and that's not good enough, we want to feel special" etc, basically it always seems to evolve around a lack of effort in the opener. Well, I dunno....coz even when guys do crack jokes or write a mini essay then most of the time they still don't respond.....so really what's the point in wasting time reading her profile, commenting on it, asking about the dog in her photos etc when most of the recipients aren't gonna bother their asses to reply anyway?

Honestly, drop the excuses ladies, don't match with someone if you're not prepared to respond, it's a massive pain in the butt hole and makes the online dating experience tiresome and gruelling.

While I'm at it, anyone who uses a dating app are to promote your IG and swiping right on every guy or uses a dating app with no intention of dating but just to get lots of messages telling you you're pretty, there's something a bit twisted about that.

For the record, I don't use apps, my past experience plus 99% of testimonies from men confirm it's a waste of time.....message for the guys, especially the younger ones.....apps are not a surrogate for getting up off your ass and meeting girls, it's infinitely easier to meet girls IRL than it is online, no matter what your anxiety tells you, no matter what crap you read in men's groups about women not wanting to meet men IRL, it's all crap, the dawn of Internet taking over social has left an infinite number of women craving to meet a man the normal and old fashioned organic way. Pick up balls and stop relying on a video game that is rigged against you and most of the opponents don't care to play anyway.

The gals I have asked out in person have consistently given me rejections like they're engaged or they're not interested.

The gals I have had the opportunity to talk to online have provided days/weeks/months worth conversations before fading away or after I send a picture of myself (for those I met through an app with no profile pictures).

It's a combination of hope and too much perceived choice.

For women, swiping is like putting in a penny into a slot machine over and over and hoping to hit the jackpot.

For men, it's like being a zombie roaming the streets of Walking Dead. When he sees a woman, he slowly moans and groans towards her hoping she doesn't run away and thinks he's a real human.
