

World Toilet Day

November 16, 2022 | 56 upvotes | by OppositeBeautiful601

Archived from theredarchive.com

Comments

YesAmAThrowaway • 9 points • 17 November, 2022 12:42 AM

While I do appreciate having a day to highlight the importance of access to proper plumbing facilities, gender equality is still lacking here.

sokra3 • 9 points • 16 November, 2022 09:23 PM

Damn, I was confused what was wrong with toilets until I saw the second picture

DouglasMilnes • 7 points • 17 November, 2022 04:35 AM

International Men's Day had been around for years before the feminist UN decided to stamp on the day.

RainbowPope1899 • 8 points • 17 November, 2022 12:24 AM

Is it a coincidence that the man on the toilet is looking towards India. (Joking BTW)

But seriously, while the day they chose is annoying, the toilet is a very important invention. That said, I think world sanitation day would be more meaningful.

AndyBrown65 • 2 points • 17 November, 2022 08:39 AM

It's actually quite ironic that femnazis deride this day and praise toilet day.

Without proper sanitation, drinking water and power supply they would be sicker and living in caves. Who do women have to thank for lifting their living standards? Why men of course

SebTheMenace • 1 point • 17 November, 2022 11:11 AM

I'am sorry but i dont understand, men and toilets day is the same day ?

OppositeBeautiful601[S] • 2 points • 17 November, 2022 04:00 PM

While UN recognizes International Women's Day, they do not recognize International Men's Day. Instead, on International Men's Day, they recognize World Toilet Day. Coincidence? I'll let you decide :)