This man doesn't deserve to be betrayed by society like this. Someone should've saved him and the lady should've gotten restrained.

No man who values his freedom is going to try and restrain her

She's living in a unique crossover point where (some) men are still too polite to hit back. When women achieve the "true equality" they seek, she'll be heading for the ER.

I knew a guy who was attacked savagely by his own girlfriend in a bar. She used to hit him every day and he showed me all kinds of scars he had. He never fought back but at that night in the bar after she jumped on his back with her knees and he fell on the ground with her on him, he got back up and slapped her. All of his friends were watching. He woke up in the hospital and the doctors told him they didn't know if he would make it. After he slapped her every guy in the bar turned around and attacked him. They were literally stomping on his head and he showed me all his broken teeth. This happened in Spain

I wouldn't recommend fighting back especially in public. Even in private she can twist it and rape you in the criminal justice system.

There is a video of this happening in India. It's called how can she slap. That shows you that men internalised a lot of self hatred and will enforce sexist double standards against ourselves in a violent way.

I'd never surrender to that kind of bigotry. I'd die fighting if I had to, and I'd make sure I was close to something I could weaponize.

Equality is only one aspect of desirability. Not only the treatment of male victims but also that of male perpetrators is monstrous and not part of a desirable future, even if that treatment was applied equally. It depends on the case, but according to my subjective evaluation of severity, men have been beaten and tortured to death for far, far less than what this video shows. And in far too many cases, even genuine, proportionate self-defense by a male victim against a female perpetrator will be affected by this to a life-threatening degree.

The goal should be to achieve equality in proportionate intervention without resorting to self-justice or revenge. That is, in addition to the seemingly infinite amount of associated variables that are currently skewed by misandry and as such shape the occurrence, observation, and experience of violence against men (e.g. bystander reactions, bystander cognitions, bystander emotions, law enforcement intervention urgency, law enforcement...). In a perfect world, no perpetrator of any gender would need to sustain any injuries in this situation, given that there are more than enough bystanders to restrain her whilst waiting for law enforcement to show up.

As it stands, however, misandristic atrocities like the empathy gap and other manifestations of misandry, like the sadistic enjoyment of male distress and suffering on top of a mere lack of empathy, result in conditions that do not allow for this.

I especially like yhe fact that she gets a hug afterwards. She definitely deserves and need it.

Joke aside, what is the context. I won't excuse her of ther horrible behavior, but do you know what caused this?

thatscucktastic • 23 points • 27 November, 2022 10:58 PM

do you know what caused this?

Nothing that pre-empted this justifies this and therefore doesn't matter.

Vughfufu[S] • 7 points • 27 November, 2022 07:21 PM

Nah, I have no clue what caused it. Most probably nothing serious for her to hit him. Both were drunk af and he probably said or did something that offended her.

hikikomorisama • 11 points • 28 November, 2022 01:53 AM

Society says they are allowed to do that. No one wants to interfere because we might hurt her since we aren't allowed to attack them without being called misogynistic.

grump63 • 5 points • 28 November, 2022 10:49 AM

Honestly don't know what I would do if I was in that room. There are a lot of bars where cameras don't see every little corner and in the moment you never know if someone's recording. By restraining that Girl you're signing up for a weekend in jail.

We live in this fucked up dystopia where we know what's right, what's right isn't illegal, but we know we will face consequences for standing up for justice.

Even with the video evidence, one single retaliatory push or punch would have landed him in prison and she could simply say she was provoked and walk away scott free

Senior_Chokolad • 2 points • 25 February, 2023 12:38 AM

He could've beaten the shit out of her but he didnt
