This is certainly one of those "equality feels like oppression" moments.

Also, here's an idea... maybe just don't split up in the first place? Crazy, I know.

I know, right?

Must've been a shock to some of those women to discover a part of the system that didn't incentivise divorce for them.

Not splitting up is not always an option and it should be clarified that, of course, there should be equitable ways to leave a marriage for all parties involved - and do so before potential conflicts escalate.

Men enjoying equitable opportunities to split whilst remaining as involved with their children as the other parent is one way of ensuring that.

I'm at a loss for words. I don't even know what to say about this drive!
