

My advice for men going into their 20s as someone who's going to turn 25 in March

January 23, 2023 | 3 upvotes | by inkvellien432

---

Surgeries, cosmetic surgeries. Oh and fitness as well, get fit. Also, get on finasteride or dutasteride, AND STAY ON IT NO MATTER WHAT HAPPENS, so you don't lose your hair. Skincare, make sure to get on a regiment as soon as possible.

-Bimax: 20,000- 40,000 without medical insurance

-nosejob: $4,500 to $7,500 around where I live

-Infraorbital implants: $4,000 – $8,000

-skin bleaching: $350

-hair transplant: $3,000-$15,000

These are all the things I want to get done

As you can see the cost for these range all the way up to around $75,000. But since your average khhv man my around my age is usually white, you'll be able to knock off skin bleaching atleast. □ But as you can see, saving up this much is gonna cost you a pretty penny, and even more, time. Hopefully your parents will allow you the bum off of them and live with them for a couple of years while you go to college and save up money to get these. When I was 20, I made the mistake of thinking that I was just a locationcel and that if I just lived somewhere else I'd be able to eventually find someone to love me, so i joined the military. After 3 1/2 years of living in 3 different states and having 0 success, I am back now at square 1 and living at home again □□□□□□□□□□. In hindsight I realize that it would've been better if I had just stayed at home working my 12.75 an hour cashier job saving up for all these surgeries. In the amount of time that it took me to get out of the military, i definitely would've been able to save up all the money i needed.

Learn from my mistake if you are below average or ugly, and are just entering your 20s or atleast in your early 20s. Money is precious, but what's even more, is TIME.

---

Archived from theredarchive.com

---

Comments

---

zastale • 4 points • 23 January, 2023 02:59 AM

Fuck, the last part about time definitely stings. I'm certainly not maximizing mine.

Glad-Discount-4761 • 1 point • 23 January, 2023 03:04 AM

As someone who regret not starting fitness, skincare and cosmetics early,I feel you.

But hey man can age gracefully more than woman.

You can check this Channel,it will be useful for you in any age.It is skincare for men

<https://youtube.com/@CHRISGIBSONLIVE>

For plastic surgery, you have to talk to experts

Wide-Illustrator2906 • -1 points • 23 January, 2023 03:17 AM*

I don't think it's that serious but staying fit and keeping your hair should be your top priority. Plastic surgery isn't necessary unless your are way below average. Dont overlook getting veneers and teeth whitening as a bright smile can help alot and don't forget to work on your social skills. Also, look into traveling overseas and learning a new language if you're in the west but if you want to stay in the west you should pursue older women ( 35+).

NotARussianBot1984 • -1 points • 23 January, 2023 03:31 AM

SEAmix is cheaper! $4k/yr is what many professions pay there.

jumbolarge2 • 1 point • 28 January, 2023 09:17 PM

get on finasteride or dutasteride and stay on it no matter what happens

This is fucking stupid. What “can happen” is your dick stops working. Why bother dating if you can’t fuck?