 Ofek il y a 2 ans

@Colttaine Greeting from Israel, I am an ex-soldier who by law- had to serve 3 years as a fighter doing live-risking missions when the girls need to serve only 2 years working in the office.

I remember when I was 2 years and 3 months in the army, and the girls who join the army with me had been long gone to start their lives, I was 3 weeks in the field (only men) training, no shower and almost no food (basically only tuna). When we ran-out of food, we had to go back to our base to eat, when we arrived, there was a huge line to the dining room, we, with all the mud on our faces, hungry, weak and dirty, had to wait as well.

When the girls came from there room clean, they only stayed in the base for 4 days a week in oppose to boys who have to be there weeks (if not its jail), passed all the boys soldiers and entered first to the dining room (because girls enter first). And they eat, finish to eat and go outside before we could enter (half an hour waiting). When they came out, while I stood there, one of the girls complained that she already had been year and 9 months in the army (the easy army for girls) and that she wanted to finish her 2 years and start her life. She will go home tomorrow, because it's been 3 days.

I was more then 2 years in the army, I did very hard 3 weeks in the field sleeping outside on the ground, I am going back to the field to continue the training, while she, in her comfortable office did basically nothing. Although she joined the army after me she is going to start her life before me because I am a man.

When I finished my duty, I was in college and one girl said loudly that "men have too many rights". and all the men there, most of them did there army, looked down like dogs when you shout at them.

The feminism in Israel is like in the USA.

Pretty common complaint from guys who live in countries with mandatory military service, except outside of Israel women don't have to serve at all so it's arguably worse.

A lot of guys from those countries feel like it causes a development delay in their education/career, and that women essentially get a head start on life.

nationalism is like a huge family dinner where all the inlaw cunts show up demanding prime rare steak and then the youngest male fights with the dog for scraps only to pick up the tab

Do you have the link to the video?

This is from Youtube, isn't it?
