✓ Only 40% of males reproduce compared to 80% of females. This is in the current climate of oppression, domination and the removal of female mate choice. Its clear to me that males have turned the natural order on it's head. Clearly about 25% of the males should be fathering 100% of the children. Perhaps we should hold their numbers to 25% of the population too. I wonder if female mate choice were returned and female control over reproduction, full female control, if this would happen naturally. I wonder if men's seemingly existential panic about controlling females is in fact existential, that in the natural way of things there would be far fewer of them.

✓ Gaia forbid...fewer men. Imagine being able to go outside and be able to worry a lot less.

✓ I used to make this argument back on r/gendercritical and they used to treat me like I was crazy.

But even just cutting down the male population by half would help massively. There are too fucking many of them.

✓ If they could fight their stupid wars without ever harming us or children I'd say let them at it. Shame.

✓ I've suspected this before, too, about them. Maybe it used to be the case that a certain amount of men went the way of the lone lion who failed to mate: doomed to wander the wilderness by himself because he was a burden to the tribe as an excess male, or something? I have read before that the % of men who passed on their genes (got to mate) in prehistory was more 1 in 17, which is less than 40% for sure, so...

✓ Wild horses have a similar kind of social hierarchy. Males are usually run off by the dominant stallion once they reach maturity. Until those males are able to take over another herd or successfully fight for a female, they bond with other lone stallions. Elephants are similar, except that the core of the herd is purely matriarchal.

Obviously, people aren't horses or elephants. But it does seem to be pretty common among mammals that most females get to mate at some point, while males don't necessarily. This is why I don't shed Jordan Peterson-esque tears for men who never get their own personal Mommy McBangmaid.

No one can find the equivalent of this rhetoric against women on a platform such as Reddit.

Huh

LIGMAMALEINC • 12 points • 12 March, 2023 02:34 PM

Is this from /r/WitchesVsPatriarchy or something? The bullied fat chick vibes are very palatable.

IT won't touch this theunamerican • 6 points • 12 March, 2023 10:59 PM

Lool I'm willing to bet my house none of these women have ever had a loving father figure or even a positive male role model. They're bitter cat ladies.

Ngl this is some wild shit to say.

I honestly think that both men and women like this are a net negative on society. Like weird dudes who are sexually frustrated who are ticking time-bombs and chicks who actually want the radical cutting down of the human population for selfish paranoia.

It's a shame that people in this world exist to drag down the progress of humanity. I think all "pills" have SOME truth but a lot of the radical believers (both men and women) are unhinged af.

It's understandable for women to be scared of "creepy" guys and for guys to be disappointed about a shitty dating life but when you step into the level of entitlement and action, that's when you become a threat to the humans around you. Sickening.

So what should these intimacy starved guys do? Paying for it doesn't count nor cut it in the long run.

Nihi1986 • 4 points • 13 March, 2023 03:22 AM

Regardless if there's some truth in what they say, it's just said out of pure hate and frustration. Don't listen to that kind of women.

jackedsoon • 1 point • 12 March, 2023 06:03 PM

Vast majority are married and reproducing over 40. This is extreme and utter cope

Educational_Ad4410 • 1 point • 13 March, 2023 07:06 PM

Who cares about what some random radical feminist says on Reddit? Would you want to have anything to do with these women never mind date them? I wouldn't.

Eyesofmalice • 0 points • 14 March, 2023 03:50 AM

People throw feminism around way too liberally for my taste.

Last-Post2085 • 1 point • 13 March, 2023 12:58 PM

These people need to touch grass

Eyesofmalice • 1 point • 14 March, 2023 03:50 AM

I'm an incel, I'd be all for this. Give me a way out so that you normies can work for decades, then grow old and die depressingly.
