

Girl declines invitation to come along. Immediately next her?

General situation:

Cold Approach -> Get Number -> Text shortly back and forth -> You ask her to come along for coffee/party / drinks whatever

She says she's busy at the suggested time but does not offer any alternatives, like going for drinks on another day.

Delete number and immediately next? Any response? Should one expand any further effort here?

Probably going to get a mixed bag of answers here. It really depends, in my opinion. If she is just an average thot, I'd next her. If she's fine as hell, I might throw her another invite a week or two later. If she doesn't respond to that then obviously she's out Sounds good. Do you respond in any way to her declining the invitation? Something like " alright "?

One obviously wants to convey indifference, I'm just not sure if not responding is the best way to do that

No definitely don't respond. If you decide to try again in a week or two, that is your response

Thanks for the advice

Not offering an alternative means she isn't too keen on seeing you. If she's hot enough you can always change her feelings towards you and try again. You could also just next and move on to the next one.

Do you want to next her?

If yes, then next

If no, then one more chance

No alternative plan? Next!

Next.

Cold approaches are always flakey, not worth the effort.

cold approach -> you busy but you take her number, and try to set up a date there and then. Don't ask her for anything. Tell her you are going to XYZ and if she is sweet she can tag along. But in this case next the shit out of this woouman and try again with another one
