My first and only LTR of 4,5 years. As soon as you're not on top of your shit temporarily and open up your emotions she's gonna cheat on you and lose attraction. Even if she said "I love you" two weeks before. Sad but true.

The biggest mistake I ever make was going back with her after our first breakup (2 years since I met her) and slowly giving her my trust again, just to be stabbed in the back again after one year with her cheating again.

I was a masochist.

Not anymore.

I'm grateful for it because I then discovered TRP and now i know that AWALT.

OfficerWade • 7 points • 27 October, 2018 09:51 AM

This seems to me the common bond we share here. I too was in a similar situation. Twice. Long term relationships, covert contracts and cheating. AWALT

Lambdal7 • 8 points • 27 October, 2018 08:45 AM*

That's because you didn't show vulnerability beforehand.

You need to show vulnerability at the beginning of a relationship. Insecure women are scared of a vulnerable man, because they are very scared of life themselves and they have no clue how to navigate it successfully.

They need a man who pretends to be infallible, only then they feel secure.

Confident women don't need that. In fact, they feel jnsafe with a man who isn't vulnerable, because they can take care of themselves and they feel as if he is hiding something and is insecure deep inside.

That's why you need to show vulnerability early on to weed out the insecure women who'll leave you the first time you slip up.

Stereotypical "good girl" who had her shit together, took care of herself, educated, and everyone liked.

I was surprised she even talked to me and she lead me on for a long time. I reinforced it and didn't see through the bs. She said, "if you're just looking for sex that's not me, I don't even like sex that much." I believed her until I was working the front desk (dorm RA) and had to check her out of our resident light skinned Chads room at 7am for her early morning walk of shame. She wouldn't even look me in the eye, the smile on that guys face. That was the day I swallowed the pill.

Elfclan30 • 9 points • 26 October, 2018 08:09 PM

How did she start behaving around you after the event?

DadOnDabs • 28 points • 26 October, 2018 08:21 PM

Never spoke to her again but she would talk to other people around me as she worked in my building and was often there. She would say some slutty shit about what she would let celebs do to her and stuff like that.

What would you rate her as and what did she say the celebs did to her?

In the sake of fairness, it's possible that she didn't want to go after your money until a lawyer got involved. I've heard of divorces that start out amicable until both lawyers push their clients to fight over things. Some are scummy fucks, but it makes them money.

Divorce rape.

Nothing like the woman you love taking you to court, alleging you assaulted her, so she can get sole custody and you get supervised visits for your son.

Oh wait. Never mind. No, there's the feeling of paying her an incremental percentage of your monthly income, seeing her waste it on frivolous crap, seeing her (poorly) attempt to hide going on the cock carousel, and then hearing her excuses why you can't have more time with you own child.

This is coming from a born again 'Christian'.

She went from virgin sweetheart to woman that was out to destroy me in every way possible.

EntropyForeverx • 14 points • 26 October, 2018 11:14 PM sick shit dude.

Popeman79 • 12 points • 27 October, 2018 03:30 AM

This is fairly common, and terrifying. The woman who loved you and was honest and caring turns into machiavelic psycho the minute she doesn't need you anymore. Ready to lie and stab you in the back for her own interests. Even if you didn't do anything wrong.

I have seen it happen so many times (to me and many friends), it's a real eye-opener on the nature of women

319Skew • 8 points • 27 October, 2018 03:56 AM

That's the part that set me back the most.

The "did nothing wrong". Took me awhile to realize that I fucked up.

She got with me because I was perceived as a high value rebel in high school and had a strong frame.

Over time I started to give more and more.

I funded her career change, I helped her try to run a business, bought her anything she wanted - christ I bought her a sauna.

I bought the we are the same lie and the pc women can do it culture.

I lost myself in almost every way except for dread and sex. I'm an attractive man that's really good in bed. In bed I forced her to submit and feel like a woman. Made her jealous of any woman that talked to me.

When I lost my job after the birth of our son, the only time I had no work, was weak, and couldn't have sex (recovery from difficult birth), that's when I lost the last real thing holding frame and she grew away from me.

Hindsight is a bitch and I can't change the past or how hard this will be for my boy.

I'll have to be the best me and teach my boy how to be a better man than I ever was despite all the challenges. That is all I can do. Enjoy my life and bury the past.

Some days I miss the lie but just like when you are sore from a work out or a hard day of breaking your back getting a job done, you achieve the most in life when you are sacrificing and struggling to grow.

That's what makes a man, the ability to shoulder the hardship and not break.

I wish my ex luck as a single mother. When she's done with her "freedom" and "empowerment" and she finds a chump to replace me, she'll continue oblivious to her actions.

I'll just have to contend with enjoying my life.

[deleted] • 48 points • 27 October, 2018 12:35 AM

Back in the 00's I orbited a friend of mine, a down-to-earth country girl. Tomboyish, brilliant green eyes, always ready for a road trip or hike. I thought she was perfect. She had this abusive on-and-off college boyfriend she was always whining about but never left.

She'd landed a life-changing internship that was the holy grail for people in her major. A week in she just ghosted them because Chad wanted her to move out to his home state.

After a few months she called us all crying that he'd turned abusive, had become addicted to drugs, yadda yadda. He'd been jailed for some crime or another giving her a window to escape. So me, a couple other orbiters, and a mother hen hopped in a van and drove a thousand miles to rescue her(sounds like the setup for a movie).

We got her back and the next six weeks were perfect. We helped find her a job, went camping, and things seemed normal again. Then she vanished. Ghosted work, left her studio apartment empty, and so on. A few days after that her MySpace is full of pictures of her back with Chad.

So many lessons learned. They all want Chad, don't white knight, etc. Our ancestors chose husbands for their daughters because they don't have the maturity to make good decisions for themselves. It's like letting a toddler eat nothing but ice cream because it's their favorite food. Give them free reign and a quarter of them will run out and get impregnated by an unemployed alcoholic.

Sexual liberation is destructive to societies because women miss the days of Cave Chad fathering most of the kids. Men on the other hand crave the hierarchy and order that only punishing adultery and providing a wife for every man who works and obeys the law can bring. Enjoy the collapse, but remember that the goal is the restoration of patriarchy.

First time I went through a girl's phone I was dating who had acted suspiciously. Every guy she said was a "friend" she had slept with. She had done things with other guys that she lied about, including incredibly slutty things she claimed she hadn't done. And she had been active on Tinder while we were dating even though she denied it.

When your instincts tell you she's lying, she is.

jackandjill22 • 8 points • 27 October, 2018 02:30 AM

This one's actually funny. But not surprising. & once a guy gets a taste even if it's an impermanent relationship he's going to keep pushing for it repeatedly. So, she always has a circle of options to choose from.

allcryptal • 7 points • 27 October, 2018 03:46 AM

The "you're insecure" defense is so easy to dismiss once you realize that she has slept/sleeps with 75% of the army of dudes she talks to or who posts she likes.

Long live TRP!

empatheticapathetic • 42 points • 26 October, 2018 11:42 PM

Only actual experience I've had which led me here. Was 25 year old virgin. Met some 18 year old girl who was basically my dream girl. Didn't know such a girl could exist (same race, interests, upbringing, sense of humour. She looks like my mom and I look like her dad or something).

Had a great first and second meeting. We were really into each other. She told me she wanted to lose her virginity to me (she thought I was a player). She lost it 2 days before we were supposed to meet to some random bar guy and then shoved it in my face and shat on me to alleviate her guilt. She still was up to bang I believe but I wasn't interested any more. Cut contact.

Told my sister and my mom about it and they both defended her AWALT actions and shamed me. Lost my job. Felt pretty suicidal for a few months after that while I read TRP 24/7.

Morphs_ • 46 points • 27 October, 2018 02:11 AM

I guess your mom and sister defending her may be the biggest part of the AWALT here.. damn

Jampak_5000 • 11 points • 27 October, 2018 09:40 AM

This.

I was going to write anything here it would be about the behavior of my seemingly normal mother. And for the record she is as normal as it gets. BUT - I have seen amazing snippets of AWALT from her its unreal. Her husband has been abusive, but was alpha - she never even got close to leaving him.

She also acts like money isn't important and that kind natured people are the best etc etc <- and genuinely think she believes this - Yet shes married to a narcissist with loads of money.

Always says "I love my children equally" and other bullshit like this, when clearly has favourites, again I actually believe she thinks she loves her children equally.

Its all about watching their actions and completely ignoring what they say.

dani098 • 7 points • 27 October, 2018 02:18 AM

How the fuck can you defend that ? Wtf?

empatheticapathetic • 14 points • 27 October, 2018 02:31 AM

Maybe defend is the wrong word but that's what they were doing in reality.

My sister presented to me 3 scenarios where it was always my fault. I disproved each one then she said I misread the signals and the girl was never seriously interested and that she has the right to change her mind whenever she wants, which was never the point.

My mom said the girl was just young and finding herself and people make mistakes. And I shouldn't get so upset over one girl. I can't have an opinion until I've met more girls.

It was all just side stepping bullshit. Not the last time they put me last for other women. Fuck all of them.
AWALT

dani098 • 12 points • 27 October, 2018 02:36 AM*

You mom might be right in some ways basically she is young and dumb, basically saying “that’s how they(we) are”

but you can definitely have and opinion Don’t get me wrong I am not justifying it. It sucks when family does not have your back.

empatheticapathetic • 4 points • 27 October, 2018 10:31 AM

My mom knew this was the first girl I’d ever met and was acting like it was nothing and I should just move on. I wasn’t in any realistic position to meet new girls or move on from such a big experience with zero knowledge of what went wrong.

It doesn’t matter how young the girl is, she knew what she did and what was up. Girls don’t change their behaviour, they just learn how to hide it better. She was basically telling me to wait for a wall hitting girl to have her epiphany phase it seems to me. I was seeking advice and support and she provided neither. She would be the first to complain that I am acting like a doormat to my wife if I took the BB role yet she isn’t giving me any helpful or supportive advice on what to do or how to deal with what I just experienced. It was shitty.

dani098 • 1 point • 27 October, 2018 02:22 PM

“It does not matter how young the girl is...”. Yes, but what I am saying is, don’t expect these woman to have humanity. In one hand you have the right to be upset because a righteous human being would not do that. You are wrong for assuming the woman are righteous. You were wronged so you are up set.but you should not be upset because AWALT. That’s how they fucking are.

empatheticapathetic • 2 points • 27 October, 2018 02:48 PM

At the time I knew nothing and was disappointed to be left in the dark by them. I didn’t know AWALT. They didn’t care that I’d never met a girl before 25 and didn’t care to help me figure out how to move on.

The point of the thread was your big AWALT moment. This was mine.

empatheticapathetic • 0 points • 27 October, 2018 03:00 PM

Had something similar once: was going on a second date with a girl. She calls up her boyfriend and shows us together (didn't know she had a bf). She tells him that we are just friends hanging out. Straight up taught me that girls enjoy inflicting pain on men, emotional pain that is.

Memeandmesomemore • 7 points • 27 October, 2018 11:05 AM

I suppose my first one was the first real girlfriend when I was like 16. She went ice skating with her friend and met me later but was really "off". Turns out some boy had "kissed her" at the ice skating and she "felt guilty".

It was my first taste of the kind of insane drama they like to pull, but of course I didn't learn from it.

A few years later I got involved with a married woman at work - started banging her about 3 weeks after she got back from her honeymoon. Same with her, lots of drama. She eventually cheated on her hubby with one of his work colleagues, then cheated on him with someone else, then cheated on him with someone else - etc.

Another married colleague used to jerk me off etc in the storeroom at work.

Another convinced her hubby to let her go out with me "because we were friends and she was bored" and we used to go straight round to her friends house and bang each other stupid.

Another who'd had umpteen affairs (and her hubby knew and still let her go out - with other men - including me). He eventually threw her out.

Plus various other hook ups and fumbles in nightclubs etc with married women who'd "never done anything like this before - because they was in lubs with the husband" etc.

Then my unicorn wife of 20 years who started exhibiting all of the devious nature and actions of the married women I'd been involved with above.

So 6 months ago I swallowed the RP and kicked her the fuck out, started divorce proceedings and am now most definitely never going to be involved in any kind of LTR ever again.

You know why? Because AWALT.

That's why.

vullnet123 • 4 points • 27 October, 2018 01:56 PM*

When I opened up to my ex. She was my only LTR, she left me a week ago. Since I've read TRP, I've come to realize why it failed. When I first started talking to her, I knew I was better than her. I treated her like I was a player, and that she wasn't on my level. And she chased after me before we became official, we went on one date, then I stopped communicating and she constantly tried planning stuff or texting me.

Fast forward to when we got into a relationship, I started making her my priority. started becoming vulnerable and emotional with her. At first she understood and supported me, but after it became just her being cold. She hadn't left me yet but she was a completely different person like I became. I'm glad I found TRP because I wouldn't have realized my mistakes and I'd keep making the same ones.

She probably branch-swung to one of the guys I would get worried about, but at this point its whatever. I'm still not over her and am BP in some ways, but I'm better. I realize I can't cry and be depressed all the time and hope for the best. I'm in charge of my life. I make it what I want. I can't just lay in bed all day and become better (She also told me this).

I fell for her hard, thought she was perfect and put that pussy on the grandest pedestal you've ever seen. I left the country after sleeping with her for a few weeks and realised that I had genuine feelings. Some part of me swore to myself that I would not return home for this girl and I'm so happy I didn't, but it was the hardest mental battle I've fought yet. This bitch was BPD material and she played me for months. Most manipulative and cunning women I've ever known. Lesson learned, I will never let it happen again.

They WILL use your kids against you.

Got divorced and was constantly getting threats that if the divorce didn't go her way she'd fight for full custody and, because she's a woman, win. Later I started dating a single mom (I was pre-red pill) who's ex left her with a kid. She always talked about the need and value of fathers because of this, so I figured she was sympathetic to my position regarding my son with my ex. She ended up pregnant by me, I told her I'd step up and take care of my kid, but I wasn't going to commit to a relationship. When she realized I was serious, she punished me by taking my son and moving far away. So much for the value of a father to a child.

Eventually she realized our son did need me and she could use the help, so she moved back, and we made an arrangement for joint custody. But I'm one of the lucky ones. Some fathers lose their kids forever.

Never trust that a woman will put the kids first. Her emotions and spite come first.

Two moments of clarity:

The first after my relationship that I acted incredibly beta and withheld sex from me. Cheated on me after I bought her a ring for Valentine's and proceeded to hook-up with other people while "on a break to find herself."

Second was today, a plate of mine is contemplating getting back with her ex. She proceeds to cut ties with me, I ignore and she comes back. Asks for sex, goes on to say how she loves to chase me, I don't do anything for her and "make her feel like a woman." I have a way of "bringing her into my life" while at the same time "not giving a shit to what happens." She also likes that fact that I can plate other women, as she frequently sees me flirting/talking to other girls.

It's both heartbreaking and exciting that this is how it works. TRP is the most bittersweet pill I will ever experience in my life.

Got married to a girl (not diagnosed, but strong BPD tendencies) who turned on me, cheated repeatedly, and tried to destroy me. I did what I thought was right in that relationship, I gave her everything she ever wanted and treated her very well. And she turned on me like a switch, she didn't have the courtesy to stab me in the back, she just did it right in front of my face.

For the record, after discovering all this, and after truly following my own path and taking full responsibility and control of my life, I believe I am the happiest divorced man on the planet.
