

What to make of/how to respond to text, "For real if you want me, you are doing a bad job of showing it"

Not sure if I should flip back around and say "Don't say things like that about yourself" or something of the like. Possibly even repeating it right back to her

So, do you want her? And why is she saying this? What's your status/history with her?

If you want her I'd just be like "so what's up then, you want to hang out?" (i.e. fuck). Unless there's some reason you don't want to.

history is one date k close last saturday. She is saying it because I don't respond fast enough to her texts. I just ended up not responding

Sounds like you're doing good to me. But don't wait too long to go out with her again if that was as far as you got. So... do you want to see her again? Clearly she's interested if she's texting you

That's good. When a woman says that, it just means she wants your attention. When you're taking a long time to reply(or if you ignore her) you're depriving her of your attention which makes her want it, and you, more.

Keep it up man, sounds like you're doing well.

Text her something completely random and unrelated. Like a picture of puppies or something. I usually send a link to this video. (Don't necessarily send that link, it has to be something congruent with your personality and the frame you set early in the interaction.)

"I know. Now make me a sandwich."

Truthfully or are you just pulling my leg?

Honestly, what you are suggesting sounds childish and entering her frame. However the easiest answer is always agree and amplify. The "I know." is solid (agree), the following is up to personal taste. "I was thinking of checking out Tinder." (Amplify) Obviously, your perceived SMV is important. Also, people here will remind you to keep texting only for logistics. So you could just straight out ignore her. Period.
