He literally saves her life, being severely injured in the process. She says he'll be "her best friend for the rest of her life." Note her closed-off body language, and his goofy smile.

He has no chance. He's consigned to permanent orbiter status, and given any attempt to gain cred - flirting with other girls, exhibiting proper jerkboy charisma - she'll have free reign to turn on the waterworks, drop the don't you care about me any more?

His only hope is that they go to separate colleges.

Damn none the less, homeboy was brave as fuck for saving that girl. Bravo.

[deleted] • 38 points • 22 May, 2014 03:05 AM

He saved someone life. This is something he will never forget,
I just hope he heals up well and moves on.

exit_sandman • 13 points • 22 May, 2014 08:00 AM

This is something he will never forget,

Odds are she won't either, and will probably resent him for the nagging feeling that on some level she owes something to a person she doesn't want to owe a dime.

[deleted] • 35 points • 22 May, 2014 08:11 AM*

and will probably resent him for the nagging feeling that on some level she owes something to a person she doesn't want to owe a dime.

This is not how a woman thinks. You are projecting male virtues onto people that don't really have them. She'll forget about him sooner than you would think.

The_Psychopath • -11 points • 22 May, 2014 07:23 AM

Honestly, saving her ungrateful ass and living with permanent complications and pain from the fact HE GOT HIT BY A CAR or letting her get hit and neither gain nor lose anything in the process? Yeah it's nice to save her life, but he's wrecked himself for puppylove and she couldn't give less of a shit about him for it. He should have just let her die.

needathrowawayplease • 43 points • 22 May, 2014 03:14 PM

What the fuck are you going on about?

If an obese woman who didn't shower saved your life would you fall in love with her? What are you retards expecting?

[deleted] • 13 points • 22 May, 2014 06:28 PM

just a bunch of bitter losers, this subs gaining more and more of them and their posts keep getting upvoted.

uh... he's at -3. i notice the bitter losers quite often but i do not see them getting upvoted. gotta disagree with that.

he was at +25 or something in the 20's earlier, it changed so now my comment doesnt make much sense happens. no problem.

The_Psychopath • 0 points • 23 May, 2014 03:51 PM

Nah, not fall in love. The boy is a fat ginger, but he's not totally terribly gross and he pretty much did wreck his body for the rest of his life just to impress her so she should give a little something as thanks because she knows why he did it.

[deleted] • 1 point • 23 May, 2014 01:20 AM

Your username is oddly fitting

[deleted] • -3 points • 22 May, 2014 08:14 AM

He should have just let her die.

I agree, but what's done is done, at least he can say he did something noble. It may even make him more confident.

The_Psychopath • 12 points • 22 May, 2014 08:20 AM

"I'm noble!" is what he can say to himself as he shits in a bedpan and be told he can never lift anything over 20 lbs while he steadily descends into being more of a fat ginger fuck than he is now as his months of immobile recuperation add pound after pound of lard to his body, ending with him being an obese bespectacled ginger that will never be able to properly fuck even a prostitute because his pelvis was shattered.

This kid has fucked himself up for life, the cold comfort of "nobility" isn't going to make the decades of pain he is due for any more bearable.

guntis_regards • 2 points • 22 May, 2014 11:19 PM you're hilarious man. you should be one of those dudes who rants about stuff.

[deleted] • 1 point • 23 May, 2014 01:20 AM

If it was a man who's life he saved, would the situation be different?

Teeklin • 19 points • 22 May, 2014 02:34 PM

I didn't read anything in the article about them being a couple, or him having any romantic interests. Sounds to me like the kid was just a hero who saved his friend.

Why all the wild speculation?

beauPinsson • 12 points • 22 May, 2014 03:11 PM true story, its not like this guy saved his life to get a good fuck lol, some people have other motivations like saving someones life...

[deleted] • 8 points • 22 May, 2014 06:14 PM

Aye, "I would have saved her but nah, I had no chance with her".

It's sometimes too easy to get too RP when thinking about life.

[deleted] • 9 points • 22 May, 2014 06:29 PM

because the bitter neckbeard population in here is growing. He saved a girls life and they are just filling in the pieces so it will fit their worldview.

runswithelves • 21 points • 22 May, 2014 03:25 PM*

He hasn't even recovered yet but she's supposed have paid him back with sex? They seem to be ignoring the fact that he seems content being her friend and that they were friends long before this even happened. If a firefighter pulls me out of a burning building do I now owe him sex? There's a guy in there saying he should have just let her die, like he really should have just let her get hit by a car because sex hasn't resulted from his actions. These guys really put their dick before a human life.

newguy75 • 11 points • 22 May, 2014 01:41 AM

At least he wasn't permanently crippled. God willing he will hit the gym and improve himself.

2comment • 6 points • 22 May, 2014 03:43 PM

I was interested in this story and this kid is in bad shape, and if you follow this link and click on the mother's posts in the comment section, you can get more details. Looks like one of his knees might be fucked for life:

<https://fundly.com/kameron-s-medical-needs>

And of course donate if you worthy. Beyond red pill and blue pill examples, we're still talking about a young kid.

Blake55 • 15 points • 22 May, 2014 12:50 AM

I am interested to know what series of events led to just the two of them walking along the road together.

I feel bad for him. He is loving the attention he's getting and probably thinks he is in with a real chance. I bet if he had the choice of it not having happened, or happening again, he would choose for a repeat of it. She will feel obliged to hang with him while everyone else is around giving them attention, that won't last.

Like OP says, body language tells the real story. See him looking eagerly at her face when she sticks her tongue out near him. Closed body language. In the photos with him, despite proximity, she is never in actual physical contact. In the hospital pick, she is leaning over him, with her arm around the back of the hospital bed.

RaiseOnce • 13 points • 22 May, 2014 04:19 AM

Once again, focus on actions, not words. Perfect example here.

87GNX[S] • 1 point • 22 May, 2014 05:37 PM

I'm gonna go way out on a limb here and say that (i) she was ostracized from the main girls clique(s) for being skanky and/or new to the area, and (ii) picked up this guy as an orbiter in lieu of any peer validation.

He was already friendzoned before the car hit him.

guntis_regards • 1 point • 22 May, 2014 11:20 PM you were already friendzoned before life hit you. literally while you were in the womb you were friendzoned by all women, past, present and yet to exist.

Aalewis__ • 22 points • 22 May, 2014 08:21 AM

Good lord this guy got friendzoned so hard it made the news

[deleted] • 1 point • 23 May, 2014 12:45 AM

Lol at 1:42 and 1:47 where the voiceover pretty much calls him out for it.

How much you want to bet she eventually bangs that drunk driver?

LibertarianLibertine • 3 points • 22 May, 2014 07:41 PM

Saving a life is good, and this man did an honorable deed. Who cares if she fucks him? It's a damn great story to tell to other chicks.

nopetrol • 7 points • 22 May, 2014 02:31 PM

I wonder if it's possible for someone to save someone else's life for some reason that doesn't involve wanting to have sex with them.

Nah.

Omnipresent_flatulen • 16 points • 22 May, 2014 02:37 PM

Nope. No man in all of history has ever saved a woman for reasons other than trying to get into her pants (or whatever period accurate clothing she wears).

Honor is a male abstract my ass. Someone actually acts like a man and all TRP can do is hamster away someone who actually got off their ass and did something noble.

[deleted] • 2 points • 22 May, 2014 09:43 PM

I don't think I should be called a hero. I just helped a friend in need.

That pisses me off to no end. You sacrificed your body integrity for the rest of your life. How more heroic can you get IRL?

[deleted] • 3 points • 22 May, 2014 06:08 AM*

Would he have done the same thing if he was with another guy who was on the small/short side? To me, that's really the question to ponder.

Many of us, even post-TRP, still have deep programming within us to protect women in times of danger - even at great risk to ourselves.

I'm not to sure how I feel about this, considering the amount of totally callous and socially-sanctioned behavior I have seen from women, and the amount of mental and physical destruction that it has led to.

Regardless, I hope his injuries (knees especially) heal quickly and fully.

Relevant Rollo:

<http://therationalmale.com/2011/08/25/the-desire-dynamic/>

Yet, no matter what terms are offered, no matter how great an external effort he makes so deserving of reward, the genuine desire is not there for her. In fact, she feels worse for not having the desire after such efforts were made for her compliance.

Negotiated desire only ever leads to obligated compliance. This is why her post-negotiation sexual response is often so lackluster and the source of even further frustration on his part. She may be more sexually available to him, but the half-hearted experience is never the same as when they first met when there was no negotiation, just spontaneous desire for each other.

You can force a woman by threat to comply with behaving in a desired manner, but you cannot make her want to behave that way.

Threat applies here. The threat of social shaming for lack of reciprocation to his White Knighting.

itsmsbetty • 0 points • 22 May, 2014 01:02 AM

So you're saying that because he saved her life, he deserves sex from her?

This has nothing to do with self-sacrifice. If her alpha cock lover did the same thing, she'd be fucking the shit out of him. But since he was already a beta orbiter, why would his 'self sacrifice' change that?

isthatyourdaughter • 10 points • 22 May, 2014 01:25 AM [recovered]

No, you're correct. The problem is all the plugged in guys out there who think True Love™ conquers all, and that crap like this will ever win the girl. Kid could be out dancing or working out right now if he knew how shit really worked. That's what TRP is here for- to kill the lies and wishful thinking.

Edit: sand in peoples' vaginas

The_Psychopath • -1 points • 22 May, 2014 07:28 AM

Nobody is saying that she must fuck him, it'd prove that she wasn't a total cunt if she gave him something for his trouble, but she isn't going to. We're just stating a fact about human nature, how there won't be any reciprocation of any kind just because you're a "good guy", and also criticizing his stupidity for wrecking his body just so he could maybe have a chance at a shot of getting into some bitch's pussy.

greycloud24 • -12 points • 22 May, 2014 05:55 AM i choose to believe that she owes him sex if that is what he wants from her. there has to be a line drawn in the sand, otherwise i will stop giving a shit about women and think nothing of them suffering and dying.

exit_sandman • 0 points • 22 May, 2014 07:59 AM i choose to believe that she owes him sex if that is what he wants from her.

Last time I've looked, there wasn't a price tag "sex: 1.00" attached on lifesaving, and though what he did was pretty ballsy, I wouldn't expect someone to have sex out of sheer gratitude.

What she does owe him, however, is honesty. So, instead of telling him that he's such a nice guy, she should give him some feedback why she won't take his virginity. Realizing at that age that even saving someone's life won't get you what you want if you can't back it up with other desirable qualities (beside a surprising amount of ballsyness, I have to give him that) is like getting the red pill shoved down your throat.

greycloud24 • -2 points • 22 May, 2014 03:14 PM

veteran here, and a medic. i saved quite a few lives. one i put my life on the line for to save. he was ungrateful, and to this day i think he owes me a beer. nothing will change that. there is no excuse i will accept, he owes me a beer, flat out, he never paid up, he got very angry with his life (his leg was real messed up, his wife left him, his life turned into shit), but none of that matters. he owes me a fucking beer.

on the other hand one of my combat life savers didn't quite save me, but he did dress up my neck when i got shot. i owed him, and when he said get me a bottle of tequila i got him a bottle of tequila. no questions asked. he wasn't even in any danger because we were all ducked behind a wall (i was standing up when i got shot).

when someone saves their life, you owe them your life. most people are willing to settle for a whole lot less, especially if you went in knowing that your life was in their hands. but the thing is that this kid took a car for her, he offered his life for hers. she owes him her life.

now this kid may only want a beer. i know that feeling. but if he wanted sex, than that should be the price. if he wanted a car, than that should be the price. but whatever price she is not willing to pay shows the value that she places on her life. the going rate of a whore is around 500 bucks. so when she says no to that, to me it says clearly that her life isn't worth 500 bucks. it isn't worth doing something that she doesn't want to do. it isn't worth having sex with someone she isn't attracted too. and in that case, i just feel bad for the kid who got hit saving her, because she wasn't worth saving.

it could be my personal beef with sgt. johnson. he owes me a fucking beer. he could have settled that debt with a buck and some change. but he never paid up. and although i would do it over again, it would be for me and not for him. it would be because i wouldn't want to be the medic that didn't save the guy who's leg just got shredded by a mortar. mortars were still raining on us when i stayed in a berm to put a tourniquet on him, i was in a vulnerable position to make sure he lived. and no excuse anyone ever makes will change my mind, he owes me a beer. and nobody can pay that debt for him, it has to come from him. by not buying me a beer, he is proving that his life isn't worth a single beer. i think he believes that. i think he might wanted to have died that night.

but not a single man from that platoon would disagree with me. when someone risks their life to save yours, you owe them. people should learn to have honor and respect the person who did that. this kid wasn't me, he didn't volunteer to be put in a bad situation, he didn't commit to putting his life on the line if needed. but when the time came up he stepped up to the plate and took a car.

i'm not saying she owes him lifelong service. but if he asks for something she should heavily consider it. the value of her personhood and her life can be extrapolated from what she is willing to pay. someone who is willing to pay nothing, has a worthless life, and probably should have just died.

the idea that all women don't understand or abide by this simple rule of honor, gratitude, or respect for human decency hits me on a personal level. i hope not all women are like that. the ones who are, disgust me, and in my mind they are less than human.

[deleted] • 2 points • 22 May, 2014 04:40 PM

So I agree that she should maybe get him a beer, but sex is going a little to far, that's personal, it's not supposed to be for sale at all. And lets say for the sake of argument that the guy that dressed up your neck had wanted to fuck you in the bunghole instead of getting a bottle of tequila. Would you have given your mangina to him just because he asked?

greycloud24 • 0 points • 22 May, 2014 04:48 PM

he didn't save my life. but since this is a hypothetical lets say he did. lets say it was an inch deeper in and got some bad things, and his actions were the difference between me living and dying. and lets say he was gay and would want that.

then yes. because at the end of the day, you are still breathing, you can still go about getting your life put back together. is it really that bad to have something inserted into you? i'm getting old and soon i will be old enough to have to go get prostate exams. i won't feel any better for having some stranger's fingers in my butt than i would have for having a penis in my butt from the person who saved my life. and if i can't get over that, it says something about me, and how much i value my life.

[deleted] • 1 points • 23 May, 2014 03:58 AM

[permanently deleted]

greycloud24 • -1 points • 23 May, 2014 05:23 AM

nope i would. like i said, how much do you value your life. do older men go to proctologists? do women go to gynecologists? do these doctors insert things into people's vaginas and anuses? yes they do, and do you know why? because people value their life. if i can't get over a penis in the butt from some ugly guy in order to save my life, than how much do i really value my life, and how much should a person risk to save a life worth so little?

JP_Whoregan • -2 points • 22 May, 2014 03:03 PM

When it comes to the average American/western woman, I wouldn't piss on her if she was laying on the side of the road on fire. And for this very reason.

In my old BP days, I saw a somewhat cute girl in a Civic next to me get rear-ended at a red light at 1am in the morning. Pretty hard hit, and the driver took off. I chased the guy long enough to get his plate number, returned to the scene, and by this time the cops were already there taking reports from the girl. I tell the cops I witnessed the whole thing, gave them the plate number and vehicle description, and after everything was said and done, I didn't get home until around 5am. The cops eventually found the guy, and she now had the proper person to sue for her damages. The girl wasn't seriously injured, but I didn't even get so much as a "thank you" from her for my troubles; as a matter of fact, during the 3 hours we were at the scene giving police reports, she barely acknowledged my presence. In retrospect, I should have just ignored the whole thing, waited for the light to turn green, and gone home. I'd have gotten more sleep.

[deleted] • 4 points • 22 May, 2014 04:32 PM

Seems like you wanted some validation, for doing something that no one told you to do. That's right, you chose to do that. You didn't need to chase the guy. Just stay on scene and wait for the cops, that's what you were supposed to do, you witnessed a crime, you had a civic duty to give a statement as to what you saw. You also had no reason to expect a "thank you" from someone who was injured and probably too busy giving their own statement to even notice you. Get real.

JP_Whoregan • 0 points • 22 May, 2014 04:38 PM

That's why I said "my old BP days"; this was 5 years ago. And I won't stay on scene to give witness testimony to crimes anymore unless they directly involve me. I no longer make shit my business unless it is actually my business. The "good Samaritan" JP is dead.

[deleted] • 2 points • 23 May, 2014 01:26 AM

Tl;dr: I will never save a woman's life because of one shitty experience where I wasn't recognized for doing a good deed.

^ that sounds like something a woman would say ;)

jobs33ker • -1 points • 22 May, 2014 08:54 PM

In her mind you did what she expected you to do; you went well out of your way for her. She's used to that and expects it across the board. In her mind, it's like you clocked in and did your job all day, and you don't need any special recognition for just doing your job.

Fucking dumb ass entitled cunts, i hate em.

cascacombo • -1 points • 22 May, 2014 07:12 AM

For one the guy is two years younger than her, his value is probably extremely low, and he's yet to really develop / start to work on himself (if he ever plans to).

So I'm not sure what you are trying to point out here, she chick obviously is aware she is attractive and the guy jumping in front of a car to save her proves that to her. Now, he may not ever really get into that girl's pants, but he does have an older girl who can vouch for him/raise his status towards other girls at their school should that sort of situation ever arise.

other than that, it's two kids on the news, what did you actually expect to hear from them?

[deleted] • -1 points • 22 May, 2014 08:03 PM

Well look - what are you communicating when you jump in front of a car to save someone? "I value YOUR life more than MINE."

A guy like that is a hard sell to a modern woman. In this day and age, that self-sacrificial mentality gets you wrecked in the work world and the women world - I wouldn't expect her to have tingles for him, and I don't even judge her for this.

willtopower2014 • 0 points • 23 May, 2014 01:32 AM

At least he has a good DHV story for years to come. I can see him in the club in the future...Hotties not believing him then he tells them to confirm and look it up on their phones. Like butter in his hands.

Looking back - probably the only reason to do it. The girl doesn't appreciate it at all and she certainly wasn't worth it.

Otherwise it's pretty sad. The girl is even attention whoring, making it all about her, doing all of these "YOLO" funny faces in his hospital room. Sick stuff.

cooltrip • -3 points • 22 May, 2014 08:07 PM*

Poor girl, having to owe a beta her life.

I think it is the worst curse a woman can go through: having to deal with a beta who knows she owes himself her life, and who will constantly phone her on the assumption he has the right to be her husband, given his lack of options and his scarcity mentality.

joe_bruised_ego • -2 points • 22 May, 2014 10:04 PM

This kid just reacted on instinct. You feel close to someone after you save them from serious injury or death.
