PAWG genes are a virtue and the insta likes prove it.

From being served spear-hunted mammoth meat to getting validated on an app, in a smartphone, on the internet, women have always been running their own show -- Get Provisioning. That is what they do, always and forever. Men control resources, from the meat to the pressing of the like button, do not forget that. This show is over when we say it is.

LuckyLuke23 • 16 points • 28 November, 2018 02:34 AM this whole shit show with cam model and premium snap chat is mens fault to begin with.

if NONE of these bitches was getting the likes they wouldn't be doing it.

HumanSockPuppet • 5 points • 28 November, 2018 05:01 PM

It's not men's fault anymore than it is women's fault. Women's flaunting instincts evolved at the same time that men's protective and competitive instincts evolved. They were intertwined. Before the like buttons and IG accounts, it was mammoth meat and low-cut mammoth skins.

You're angry. That's fine. But realize that no one is to blame and move past this phase so you can get to the BEST part of your life.

LuckyLuke23 • 8 points • 29 November, 2018 12:59 AM

i'm not angry I was just waking a point. if the hordes of guys weren't there to look at them, the attention would be taken away and it wouldn't be a thing anyway

If you ask that, you need to think deeper. If men were just attracted to an orgasm, wouldn't they have died off from masturbating themselves to death? Men that kept reproducing didn't, so that the trait that keeps existing. Artificial wombs won't replace women any time soon. But they might lead to other selections if "high quality uterus" stops become meaningfully relevant someday.

[deleted] • 4 points • 27 November, 2018 01:31 PM

Maybe masturbation wasn't as addicting as it is today with porn, but hell who fucking knows

You sound like the feminists who can't wait till sperm can be made in labs. There's more to interacting with women than fucking. That 'more' is just not what we were brought up to believe.

coldredpill • 7 points • 28 November, 2018 04:15 AM

There's more to interacting with feminine low N-count women, but those are becoming increasingly rare.

superyute • 2 points • 29 November, 2018 08:07 PM while I agree with there being more, would you be willing to share your personal "more", for perspectives' sake.

what additional value do you get from women

lala_xyz • 1 point • 29 November, 2018 10:39 AM

Artificial wombs and clones will come, and that will be the end of female sex. The only question is will it come sooner or later than breeding whores out of gene pool, which is what going on today.

SpiritStatic • 35 points • 26 November, 2018 10:12 PM

Even outside the fundamental RP principles here, it's a platinum-tier reminder of why you shouldn't be comparing your life to anybody else's inside of a social network.

zyqkvx • 1 point • 27 November, 2018 08:42 PM

Thanks pastor Bob but you make it sound too simple. Close ups of vagina are practically in the drinking water.

Casanova-Quinn • 31 points • 27 November, 2018 01:04 AM

It's always the same story with these insta-hoes. They hate being hoes, but they love the money and attention, so they keep doing it. Typical. Don't give them any attention and just live your life.

mallardcove • 66 points • 27 November, 2018 12:40 AM

My last fling in the previous city I lived in was an example of a girl who is striving to become an instagram whore.

As I type this she only has about 3900 followers. Women these days are in an arms race to be validated constantly. It's never enough. It's a drug.

The girl I had a fling with was a cute blonde who on the surface would have looked like an innocent 21 year old college student. There was no need to alter herself. But then she gets fake tits and starts working at Hooters. Begins to post more and more suggestive instagram photos. Followers and likes start to go up. More and more male attention. Caught the attention of myself which led to the fling.

Yet she was miserable. Reminds me of that Britney Spears song "Lucky". She was starting to get all the attention she craved, but why was she so miserable? It's because no matter what you do, someone will always have more followers than you, more likes than you, more attention than you. It's discouraging. So the solution is to keep selling yourself out and chasing after the attention that will never be enough, or quit. Most women are too far into it to quit. Deep down, most women just want to be loved for who they are, but falsely believe that the only way to get a quality man is to put on a facade.

Social media is a cancer.

Throwaway_Old_Guy • 25 points • 27 November, 2018 06:15 AM

Unlike cancer though, the cure is simple and cheap.

The problem is, not many are willing to take it.

bsutansalt • 7 points • 28 November, 2018 03:49 AM

This is why I like #thotaudit. It's a small modern equivalent to the restrictions of old that clamped down on women's sexuality and hypergamy to make sure they stayed in their lane regarding the building of civilization. Women part was largely to have kids as an incentive to get men's to step up and do their part (hint: build civilization as we know it).

Cracking down on attention whoring for money is a tiny example of the pendulum creeping back to the middle.

[deleted] • 1 point • 1 December, 2018 12:09 AM

Don't these girls have anyone in their lives with a brain to talk to?

"Sweety, I'd like to talk to you about your decision to become an Instagram whore. It's probably not in your long term interest to go down this route, for reasons A,B,C, and D."

"Thanks Dad. You're right. It's not a good idea to take your clothes off on the internet for attention."

mrssmithhh • 3 points • 6 December, 2018 07:24 PM

I think a lot of girls like this have either a terrible relationship with their father or no relationship at all. Girls don't do that to themselves when they are well-adjusted and feel secure in a loving male relationship. Single motherhood us really destroyed everybody.

destraht • 42 points • 26 November, 2018 10:50 PM*

I live in an East Bay city that is fairly safe and where tiny rooms cost $800-1000+/month. There aren't any universities here worth living for and so it doesn't attract and can't keep good looking people. I can go an entire week here without seeing a single 9. If I go days with only shopping at the grocery store, DMV, post office, a few minutes at the Starbucks, etc then its common for me to not see a single 8. Hot MILFs with babies and young children are virtually unheard of. There is one 8 chick at my Starbucks and I look at her face more than I ought to because basically that is it. She is talking with a grotesquely obese coworker who is at best a 3. I've played games counting people driving by to see how many "hideous", "ugly" and "normal" people I can count before I see someone remotely attractive (man or woman). Ok, you get it right? So a chick like this Amanda Lee and porn chicks get elevated to god tier. There are a lot of places where people are ugly as fuck and I don't believe that the general population wants to date itself and if they were simply better looking then they would spend more time having sex with each other instead of engaging in this kind of behaviour.

[edit] Victoria Secret: Sex Isn't Selling

destraht • 5 points • 28 November, 2018 04:27 AM

Yes absolutely guys. My mom has 4 more months on her bankruptcy and I have two very old people to help out with. My mom made some poor life decisions but she has been supportive of my unusual lifestyle. The future isn't here. For me the point is not both trying to have a water festival in the desert, not calling a desert a rain forest and then most importantly leaving the desert.

EumenesOfEfa • 5 points • 28 November, 2018 07:41 PM

I wish you all the best in trying to resolve your situation. It is just that I have seen too many people complaining about their current location, yet not taking any steps to get out of there. At least you have the better Californian weather. It could always be worse.

P.S.

Victoria Secret has been not putting out quality in the last few years, and trying to sell it's products for a high price. The company became greedy. That, combined with an ever decreasing amount of females with a healthy BMI, will definitely bring it to bankruptcy.

Chaddeus_Rex • 1 point • 29 November, 2018 03:45 PM

Their mistake was also not doing a full media/propaganda/marketing campaign for a healthy BMI

destraht • 1 point • 29 November, 2018 10:09 PM

That seems like an impossible sell. Its one thing to push women to lose 12 pounds to fit into sexy clothes but another entirely to lose 30-40. The low hanging fruit is normalize how they already are.

Chaddeus_Rex • 1 point • 30 November, 2018 02:33 AM

Its too late for the adults. If there was a propaganda campaign they needed to target teenage girls and younger.

destraht • 1 point • 29 November, 2018 10:11 PM

I'm not sure that high price isn't much of a discouragement for women when it comes to status. Perhaps more so the quality.

TheWhiskeyTickler • 2 points • 27 November, 2018 05:52 PM

To be fair I moved to the bay from the south and I have to say that Californians keep themselves in better shape. You may have a ton of Uggos but at least they aren't 300 lbs.

However, you may be onto something that people in general see each other as less attractive in the wake of social media because the beautiful people raise the bar so much.

people in general see each other as less attractive in the wake of social media

I think that has an immeasurable impact (difficult to determine). What I do know for sure is that people aren't interested in fucking beneath a certain level regardless of how attractive they are themselves. A 6 is good enough to get people's mammal juices flowing but if you are a 2.5 then fucking another 2.5 is never going to be an exiting prospect. So through poor nutrition, obesity they become unfuckable. People just don't like ugly and there are far too many who are perilously close to slipping into unfuckable territory.

There is now a growing industry around marketing a "body positive" product line to keep them there and worse to use Bernaysian tactics to turn that into "freedom", "femininity", "individuality", "empowerment", "rebellion" and to then inextricably attach that to their personal identity and then finally to comprehensive political agendas. It goes like "I'm a fat black woman and so I vote this way", "How dare you say/think that I'm fat, you only did that because you're a white man". It wasn't my intention to make this a racial comment, its just simply the easiest example because certain minority groups have spent more generations in the care of daddy government and so are further along in their degeneration. Welcome to the reservation/ghetto.

Pretty much lol. I think this goes a long way to explaining why women are so mentally off the rails nowadays in general rather than as the exception. Maybe that was always the case, but social media has cranked it up to 11.

atticusfinch1973 • 14 points • 27 November, 2018 09:52 AM

The simple fact that with 12.2 million followers her photos only receive about 3% of that as likes (about 350k), which is typical across the platform, is very telling. I'd suggest at least half of those (or more) people are horny guys who jerk off to her photos and comment thinking she might pay attention to them.

So 11.8 million people "follow" her but pay no attention. The follower number is completely blown out of proportion but it's what most people focus on.

You also need to know that IG has 1 BILLION active monthly users. So even though she has what looks like a ton of followers it represents 1.2% of their user base.

When you realize that 97% of people still don't care about you even on social media you realize how useless it truly is to care.

red_philosopher • 7 points • 27 November, 2018 07:40 PM

Frankly, it is an impressive feat to draw 1.2% of a user base as large as Instagram. That's about what, 1:90 people who use IG? That's about 1:700 people world-wide who could be bothered enough to follow her. If we apply pareto and say it's 80% men, then about 1 in 540 men, World-Fucking-Wide, fantasize about her on the routine. So about 1 in 16,000 men push the like, and how many of those give her free cash? 10% for a raw deal? (probably higher...)

So 1:160k, about 22k men then? Say they "donate" 1$/month on average (probably waaaaay fucking more), she's raking in 250k annually minimum, probably at least 7 figures.

Not bad for an instathot.

It really upholds the RP tenet that female sexuality is one of their most valuable and prized assets that are naturally bestowed upon them by virtue of being female. Men, guard your commitment the way a woman sells her sexuality, and you'll be gold.

[deleted] • 3 points • 28 November, 2018 10:28 PM

I think there far far less people donating than people giving likes. It is not 10% by far. Maybe 0.1%... And out of the people donating, many will not given often or every month.

But she can leverage sexy chat, porn videos, and much more interesting to me, advertisement. Ideally; she can include products in her shots and be paid for that.

red_philosopher • 2 points • 28 November, 2018 11:12 PM

Either way you get the idea.

[deleted] • 3 points • 1 December, 2018 12:13 AM

I truly don't get the instagram whore thing. How can still photos compete with all the free porn on the internet? I try to stay away from it all in general, but the few times I do feel like getting my rocks off on the internet, I'm going to pornhub, not Instagram. Shit just makes zero sense to me.

antariusz • 2 points • 2 December, 2018 01:48 PM

Because they aren't just getting photos, they are getting interaction, things that feel like personalized messages. For men that don't interact on the daily with women at all, it's a positive thing for the desperate. Essentially it's just an extreme version of BB

Most high end fashion models, Hollywood actors and pop stars are yacht girls and hos for the elite of society. The Victoria's Secret catalogue and fashion show and art books containing erotic "high fashion" photography are actually advertisements for the high end model-hookers to elite johns who can afford them.

[deleted] • 2 points • 28 November, 2018 07:00 PM*

What you said makes perfect sense. Especially with how much more people know about the "casting couch" culture going on in Hollywood, due to the #MeToo movement. Jennifer Lawrence's success was due to being a 'Harvey Girl'. Same with many others.

It's been going on for a long time in Hollywood. Probably why so many child stars end up messed up. Especially since Hollywood is known to have a lot of pedophiles

EdmondDantes777 • 2 points • 28 November, 2018 07:39 PM

TheFappening leaks that happened a few years ago were all the blackmail casting couch nudes the producers and directors of Hollyweird had on their actors.

Remember how quickly reddit censored thefappening sub and how Harvey Girl JLaw said looking at her leaked nudes was akin to raping her?

It all makes sense in retrospect.

[deleted] • 1 point • 29 November, 2018 02:08 PM*

I actually heard that about the Fappening. I mean it makes perfect sense. Not hard to leak 10 or so phones, but there is no way that literally all those actresses had their phones leaked.

I do remember that comment from JLaw. It makes perfect sense that she did the "casting couch" because she blew up and became famous out of nowhere. Definitely had power 'behind' her.

EdmondDantes777 • 2 points • 29 November, 2018 06:17 PM

Yes she is not that good of an actor and not particularly hot but the media spent years telling us she was the best actor ever and the hottest girl in America. Many believed it. Now the media's spell is wearing off and people are waking up.

[deleted] • 1 point • 29 November, 2018 06:47 PM

I just checked and Jennifer Lawrence is worth over $100 million. I'm not sure if it would be worth it due to how you might end up mentally, but maybe she believes doing all that was worth it.

EdmondDantes777 • 3 points • 29 November, 2018 07:11 PM

I just checked and Jennifer Lawrence is worth over $100 million. I'm not sure if it would be worth it due to how you might end up mentally, but maybe she believes doing all that was worth it.

Yeh, none of the women in these casting couch situations were forced in to it. They were given a choice and took it. They aren't victims and knew exactly what they were getting in to. #MeToo is about 1) further weaponizing sexual assault accusations and 2) helping all the exposed casting couch whore Hollywood actors save face with the public.

"You see, I'm not a high priced whore and escort who sold my body and dignity for fame and fortune! I'm a rape victim! Harvey made me do it!"

Roosh comes off as a broken man tasting sour grapes. His picture at the top of the article resembles a broken man. He's the one that took and put up the picture. He makes a lot of great points, yet they're wrapped in the resentment of an outsider. He's like the grandpa that is tired of the whole thing. I haven't been following Roosh. My theory is that after he was on TV looking out in to a audience of obese, opinionated, entitled shit women he gave up postive hope for the sexes and began his crusade to damn shit women. He threw out the baby with the bath water. Now flirting and playful interactions are gone, and all he sees is the women apocalypse. I bet he feels every woman's rejection and criticism as a resigned reminder that he will never be a master pick up artist, never a Rob Lowe, Hugh Hefner, or magnitude an early PUA aspired to be.

That said, he does have a deep understanding of the shit side of women. His negative resentful vibe cancels out a lot of his credibility.

This is funny the girl look completely fake. Her breats are fake, her ass look fake or is photoshoped. Her whole face is fake and result of likely a mix of photoshop and make-up.

She has pro-looking photo meaning the position, the lighting, all is optimized for her to look her best. You'd be surprised how at least 50% of women the say age would look counting they make the same effort on their body.

She is bound to know all of that, that this is fake, so for sure she isn't that happy about it. Ultimately she see pictures and style. The pictures could be the one of somebody else that it would be completely as effective. On day we may achieve that will 3D computer generated models.

And her, each year she grow older, need to put more make-up, get more photoshop done and yet look worse...

Of course she is insecure !

Thunderbird93 • 1 point • 6 December, 2018 05:03 PM
