Ok so the scandal was that an indie game developer tried to make a choose-your-own adventure html game, but wasn't getting much attention. She wanted it on steam, so she fucked five industry guys to get favorable reviews, and to get it green-lit on steam. Her boyfriend finally went online and told the story because he didn't like her cheating on him.

The rumors include: she doxxed herself (with fake information) to get media attention, faked her website getting hacked.

Every major news outlet/discussion board then proceeded to censor any discussion about it, showing the reaches of feminism on the gaming industry.

We felt particularly moved to produce a game that helped simulate her struggles, so that the home-viewer could understand just what she went through.

I hope it's okay that I quoted redpillschool from the TRP thread in the comments. I know some of the women here will click this and be as confused as I was before reading that comment and also watching some of SoftHarem's link, which both together really tell the entire story. This isn't just happening in the gaming world, though. It's more apparent every single day in just our regular lives.

The gaming industry is extremely poisoned by feminism, but this definitely has societal wide implications.

My addition wasn't meant to downplay the poison within the gaming industry, if that's what you took from it. The industry I am in has a ton of issues exactly like this and I see people turning a blind eye with females on a day to day basis, obviously a bit different context in the day to days. I'm not as involved in the gaming industry as much as others here are so my thoughts come from another industry and what I view.

That is not what I took from it. We are in agreement Ms. Crush.

I can never understand Internet tone. :)

Lol I think I went in the loop where she has sex with him like 5 times! Putting his privilege inside her oppression... Made me giggle.

But for real, probably has never been to Texas? Booo. Everyone knows Texas girls are the best ;)

Do people seriously say "I'm feeling so triggered right now"? Asking out of ignorance

[deleted] • 3 points • 25 August, 2014 09:04 PM

Tumblrinas making real PTSD and other anxiety issues seem trivial because of their overuse of the word "trigger" to mean "I'm mildly uncomfortable right now."

gabilromariz • 3 points • 26 August, 2014 08:35 AM

It makes me feel really uncomfortable when they say those things like a plight for attention. It's like they're making fun of people with an actual serious mental illness. It makes me want to shake them "If you really have x disease, get yourself to a therapist, not some website!"

[deleted] • 3 points • 26 August, 2014 02:34 PM

They're mostly dumb teenagers. The one thing they demand is attention, so they'll use anything to get it, including mental illnesses (see: self-diagnosed autistics).

How very unpleasant. No wonder they're single [deleted] • 1 point • 25 August, 2014 07:15 PM

I've never heard someone say it in real life. On tumblr-esque outlets, yes, I've seen it.

Joelasaur • 2 points • 25 August, 2014 09:03 PM

I've been called a "cis white boy" in real life. This shit actually happens.

The ladies in the RPW channel on IRC had asked that I share the announcement this week on RPW too.

bicepsblastingstud • 1 point • 25 August, 2014 03:33 PM

I stand corrected.
