

The Ironies Of Female Empowerment - Like a child, the anti-male feminist sees the end result of this male effort and ignores all that came before it... Her mind is too limited to see what goes into providing all of that, and so she instead attacks those responsible for providing it.

This comment was so golden, reposting it here

"These ironies are supported by four primary phenomena:

- 1) Apex Fallacy – thanks to hypergamy, feminists see only highly visible apex alphas
- 2) The Glass Cellar – feminists don't see the beta males beneath their feet; the ones who take outsize risks, labor ceaselessly, and receive scraps for their efforts
- 3) Unbridled Credentialism – women get unsustainable resource extraction from beta males by simply following the herd long enough to get otherwise worthless pieces of paper (a degree or a marriage certificate)
- 4) Feminine Imperative – Cost-free, beta-supported, and state-enforced female delusion means they can spin that hamster without consequences"

yes, i already said it here before: women are always crying because there is not enough girls in CEO, stem fields, politics etc... They always see the top alpha men in alpha jobs. they forget the garbage man, street cleaner, plumber, those in the mines... Its funny because they never talk about bringing more men in fields like nursery, education, goverment jobs...

They actually discourage it- claiming a man who wants to work in a nursery is a pedo

They want the rewards of male achievement without having or trying to apply any of the inputs. They also don't want to do any of the shitty things we have to do. They're largely successful at this, but mostly because men enable it.

I like this snipet from the comments:

"Women ride through life on training wheels some guys made for them Guys walk, barefoot." [sic]
