

Must Read: "There's no such thing as "equal". Women automatically have leverage in society by default. So if you seem equal on paper, it means she has superior social standing. People will believe her word over yours. This alone is incentive enough to make shit up."

People aren't equal.

Equal means identical, interchangeable. Two people will never be equal, let alone men and women.

Men and women have different sex chromosomes, which means they are genetically different and thus, are not equal by definition.

Any two men are not equal - they may not be equal in height, eye colour, the amount of hair they have, etc...

Further to this, if we assume for the moment, the nonsensical idea that men and women are equal, then why does it matter if 50% of the workplace is female? If we truly are equal, then the percentage of sex represented doesn't matter.

Equality is a dumb idea at best and an Orwellian new-speak nightmare at worst.

This is absolutely brilliant!

Have you not noticed that equality is only brought up when it disadvantages woman? They don't want equality at all, that would suck for woman, they want all the social advantages without having to sacrifice for them.

This guy has a solid grasp.

Note that that post is gilded. Remember that we need to demonstrate market value of this subreddit to the Reddit staff...

Fuck the reddit staff. If they do not want TRP anymore there are other options. They can sink together with their crappy politically correct whiny beta site. No tears will be shed.

Agree, but I like the format of reddit and I like the content on this sub. Still I don't see us coming close to jerking subreddits on the list of revenue gained from gold.

They suck off SRS as if they have dicks to suck.

The rate at which we're growing should demonstrate our value.

The new default subreddits are due to their high reddit gold %.

See also why r/atheism was removed from the defaults, it wasn't making any money.
