CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Harvard University's student newspaper says the school has revoked admission offers to at least 10 prospective freshmen over offensive online messages.

Do not expose anything on Facebook.

Best to avoid it entirely or basically make one that is completely shallow in order to play the game well enough to pass.

Facebook is at the core of censorship... they are the "bad guys" and nothing good will come to you by participating.

redpillschool[S] • 16 points • 5 June, 2017 08:09 PM

Including private chats. Nothing is secure on this front. Expect that nosy devs can see your chats, much like nosy admin on reddit can read your pms. Even if the platforms themselves aren't compromised, expect a party privy to your content to be a weak link.

Think about this- these guys weren't posting publicly, it was a private group. How did it get out?

BroseppeVerdi • 9 points • 6 June, 2017 12:21 AM

There were 100+ people in the group. The logical conclusion would be that 1 of the other 90+ ratted them out.

redpillschool[S] • 3 points • 6 June, 2017 01:29 PM

That was a rhetorical question.

BroseppeVerdi • 3 points • 6 June, 2017 06:06 PM

Since the conclusion everyone seems to be drawing is "Facebook admins spying on people", I think it's worth pointing out that there is another scenario that's FAR more likely.

LOST_TALE • 1 point • 6 June, 2017 07:21 PM

thx for it. Wait, why would someone who would rat someone out be in such a group?

NeoreactionSafe • 3 points • 5 June, 2017 11:22 PM

What this means is "private" isn't really "secure" if it's on Facebook.

Assume all things related to Facebook are bad... compromised.

Just don't use their system.

Luckyluke23 • 1 point • 6 June, 2017 03:01 AM the only thing you should be using Facebook for is: family and club promo. (getting in the club for free) OR setting up a group chat with friends to hang out.

anything else is a waste of time.

BroseppeVerdi • 33 points • 5 June, 2017 07:47 PM

Gone are the days when you can joke about becoming sexually aroused by dead children on a social media page dedicated to your prospective alma mater without said institution getting upset.

The real question is: How did these idiots get into Harvard?

[deleted] • 2 points • 6 June, 2017 08:22 AM

Spot on man, fuck I miss Myspace, there was horrible dark funny shit on there constantly.

[deleted] • 3 points • 6 June, 2017 11:37 AM you're just not 17/18 anymore like these kids are.

OneRedYear • 1 point • 8 June, 2017 01:15 PM

I ducked so many chicks off MySpace back in the day. You could search for single girls and just message the sluttiest looking ones and bam, straight to fucking.

bunny_throwaway • -5 points • 5 June, 2017 08:32 PM sexually aroused by dead children

That's fucked up. What kind of twisted person makes a joke about being sexually aroused by dead children?

bunny_throwaway • 1 point • 6 June, 2017 01:57 AM ? woosh?

why am i being downvoted?

[deleted] • 12 points • 6 June, 2017 08:23 AM

Because you're acting similar to the SJW's on Facebook. It's a joke, not a dick. Don't take it so hard.

ShotgunTRP • 1 point • 6 June, 2017 05:18 AM

It's called irony.

irony1 'Aɪrəni/Submit noun the expression of one's meaning by using language that normally signifies the opposite, typically for humorous or emphatic effect.

[deleted] • 13 points • 5 June, 2017 09:15 PM

I don't use social media. I put nothing in writing that isn't 100 percent work related. I act like a normie in the office (although very well dressed and fit)

I even blow up my reddit username every 6 months.

Fuck you SJWs. You wont find me.

paulewardherbig • points • 6 June, 2017 04:39 PM [recovered]

You guys are so dramatic. I post hilarious comments with my real name all over the internet, and nothing ever happens.

OneRedYear • 3 points • 8 June, 2017 01:19 PM

Yet. I work in the media, I've had little snowflakes try to get me fired for a joke or opinion they didn't like. I'm not even a reporter or writer. I'm behind the scenes. I keep my social media sanitized. I do run some private Facebook groups but those are support for my products. I keep my opinions and jokes in meatspace with trusted friends.

mojo_juju • 2 points • 8 June, 2017 03:48 AM

How much do you have to lose?

"The bigger they are, the harder they fall."

SJWs find guys like us to be doxxing trophies. The more a redpilled guy owns/earns... the bigger the target for the hambeastfucks.

Archwinger • 8 points • 6 June, 2017 03:02 PM

Follow the money.

If anybody finds out that Harvard turned a blind eye toward the presence of bigots among its student body, that would be bad press, less dollars from alums and organizations, fewer applicants, stupid-ass protests. That shit costs Harvard money.

So when some dipshit sends Harvard a letter saying, "I discovered some of these incoming freshmen are bigots", or some right-thinking liberal-minded employee brings this to a higher-up's attention, Harvard can't ignore this information and let the freshmen attend school. Otherwise, they'll get turned in to the media, who will run with the story that Harvard knowingly accepts bigots, which costs the school money.

Bigotry is the biggest bogeyman in the world in 2017. You're better off being a murderer than a bigot. If Harvard makes 0.1% less money from its alums this year over some crazy accusation of supporting bigotry, that's more money than most of you guys will see in ten years.

So to make jillions of dollars, Harvard is willing to screw over 10 incoming freshmen over anonymous online comments, and let a story be published about it so the world sees how great Harvard is.

If somebody would give me a jillion dollars, I'd screw over all of you.

OneRedYear • 1 point • 8 June, 2017 01:22 PM

Lol. As would I. Harvard is behaving rationally. TRP snowflakes don't get it.

slothsnpai • 12 points • 5 June, 2017 10:22 PM

So someone can get into Stanford by writing #BlackLivesMatter 100 times on an application sheet but someone of actual accademic merit and credentials gets denied over a few unsavoury jokes. Really makes you question the authenticity of universities?

geothizer • 16 points • 5 June, 2017 11:57 PM

Umm... you don't think the kid who wrote BLM didn't have academic merit? He had a near perfect GPA and interned on Hillary Clinton's campaign, among other things.

Them getting rescinded had nothing to do with academics. People who make these kind of jokes are people who could cause trouble for Harvard down the road.

[deleted] • 2 points • 6 June, 2017 11:42 AM

I've never seen anything backing your claim on GPA but he was tied in with communists and other dangerous activists with camp hillary and obama.

For those who dont know, passing in these schools is easy, the challenge is getting in. When the gatekeepers are SJWs, it fucks up the ecosystem.

geothizer • 2 points • 6 June, 2017 08:23 PM

Tied in with "communists and other dangerous activists?" Do you have a source on this?

And your second statement is horseshit. Passing in no school is "easy," and many Ivy Leagues and other top-caliber schools even actively participate in grade deflation.

[deleted] • 4 points • 6 June, 2017 03:15 AM*

Jordan Peterson says sending kids to University does more harm than good. I am not sending my kids, they can learn to run their own business and do an online qualification if they want. They are not going to one of those SJW brainwashing camps

[deleted] • 3 points • 6 June, 2017 09:27 AM

Political Correctness is still the dominant religion of the Western world. Of course it's seminaries are not going to tolerate heretics.

JcHgvr • 14 points • 5 June, 2017 09:20 PM*

Nothing to do with SJWs. If you're stupid enough to say any comments that can be considered racists, sexist hell it doesn't even have to be that, it's enough if it's controversial that's signed with your name you deserve what comes your way after. It's not just schools, do you think employers won't google you ? If you have anything controversial to say, be anonymous about it. Don't even use the same username. Big institutions don't want to be seen near people who stir shit up online. It's not worth it for them.

Freedom of speech doesn't mean what you say won't come back to bite you in the ass one way or another.

Funny part is I don't exists on social media at all. Never did. When I was job hunting after graduating I had few interviews where they would ask or comment on the fact that they couldn't find anything on me online.

My answer always was that it's not my thing, which is partially true, but it sure gives me an advantage when looking for a job. No need to worry about them finding things that I want to keep private.

BullshittingNonsense • 6 points • 6 June, 2017 02:25 AM

I don't think this is a matter of free speech. It's a matter of the internet's extreme public nature and ridiculously long memory. You can't make mistakes anymore. Maybe they shouldn't have made the jokes. But they're 18 and they're jokes. WORDS. If the internet was around years ago, our parents and grandparents would be getting into just the same sort of trouble. Thing was, they were actually allowed to mess around and start over.

Willem_Dafuq • 5 points • 6 June, 2017 10:21 AM

It's not a matter of free speech. Nobody's speech is being infringed upon. Anybody is free to say the most vile things they want and not go to jail. That's what freedom of speech is. And just as anybody is free to say whatever vile things they want, so too are schools allowed to accept and permit whichever students they want (not counting discrimination against protected groups). It's like you think freedom only applies to you and the people you agree with

BullshittingNonsense • 1 point • 6 June, 2017 01:48 PM

I realize that. Nor is there a question of free speech on twitter or Facebook or reddit because they're private. HOWEVER, we all agree that it's the best way to run things. An really, punishing people over stupid jokes? It's like the Marines thing with the nude photos. Shitty? Yes. But I'm sure if we could hear the conversations between soldiers at literally any time in history, there would be some shock.

Willem_Dafuq • 7 points • 6 June, 2017 02:02 PM

It depends on what the comments were, frankly. Harvard, Yale, etc have images to uphold; images that don't include racism, sexism, etc. The way they uphold those images is by not accepting people who have those viewpoints. If you don't like that, its fine. You don't have to go to Harvard. A bunch of racist and sexist people can form their own college. And I never much cared for the whole "anonymous over the internet" argument. Anything that you say anonymously, you should have the courage to attribute your name to. And if you don't want something that you say over the internet to go public, then I think that really means on some level you know what you said is wrong. And of course I mean that in the general sense. Harvard surely doesn't care that you think David down the street is an awful drunk and a bad friend.

BullshittingNonsense • 1 point • 6 June, 2017 02:57 PM

I think the issue that people mainly have with this is that they're only punishing certain viewpoints. You could write about how evil men and the patriarchy are and they wouldn't care. You could get a professorship. You can even write Black Lives Matter a bunch of times for an essay and get into Stanford. Yeah he was qualified obviously, but if you wrote "The Red Pill" a bunch of times for an essay, I guarantee you that a bunch of think pieces would be written about the evils of misogyny in young men and how colleges have a duty to make a difference to combat it.

Willem_Dafuq • 3 points • 6 June, 2017 03:44 PM

I think you're creating a false equivalence. Without knowing exactly what was said, its hard to conclude either way. That being said, if an applicant wrote "Kill all white men, Kill all white men" over and over, they would be candidates to get their applications rejected as well.

OneRedYear • 1 point • 8 June, 2017 01:25 PM

TRP has some straight up snowflakes who don't want to hear that shit. Truth hurts.

JcHgvr • 1 point • 6 June, 2017 11:35 AM

Yes, the internet never forgets and your stupidity gets broadcast world wide. And considering we live in the age of special snowflakes they should know better.

And we still don't know what they said. Which makes it hard to judge if the school over reacted or not.

BullshittingNonsense • 1 point • 6 June, 2017 01:47 PM

Yeah I just think it's really unfortunate that we're not allowed to make mistakes anymore. That's the best part about America. The ability to completely start over. Some of the most daring adventurers and pioneers were people with questionable pasts that took a risk to start over. Now you can't do that. It just drives people into more anonymous extreme forms online because it's so taboo to be a certain way in public. I can't talk in a moderately offensive way in public so obviously when I get online I'm gonna go buck wild.

OneRedYear • 2 points • 8 June, 2017 01:27 PM

Or you could be an adult and control yourself. Or have meatspace friends you can drink and talk shit with.

F_Dingo • 4 points • 5 June, 2017 11:27 PM

Disgusting. Universities are now becoming the thought police like something straight out of Orwell's 1984.

I can't say it's a loss for these kids though. There are many schools out there that offer better bang for your buck than these Ivy League schools that increasingly are only able to offer their name and nothing else except for producing leftist nut jobs.

Troll_Name • 6 points • 6 June, 2017 12:21 AM

1984 was nothing more than a warning, and universities are the breeding grounds of this system's soldiers.

East or west, rich or poor, big schools are going to teach blind loyalty. Self reliance comes from two places, a father figure or the sink/swim method.

bunny_throwaway • 1 point • 5 June, 2017 08:34 PM

Not everything is rar rar rar trp sucks. I am all for shitting on women but this is a real issue. Sexual assault/holocaust/minorities - These are real issues people deal with. The article doesn't say what they said, but this has nothing to do with SJW or trp. This just feels like scrapping the barrel to get an argument out

redpillschool[S] • 12 points • 5 June, 2017 08:49 PM

Don't mistake for a second that even the mildest of red pill teachings wouldn't be labeled with "ism" words to discredit you and hurt your future. This isn't about 10 students. This is a message to the masses that social justice still reigns supreme, don't be like these kids.

bunny_throwaway • 3 points • 5 June, 2017 09:48 PM

Don't mistake for a second that even the mildest of red pill teachings wouldn't be labeled with "ism" words to discredit you and hurt your future.

Yes of course. Don't want to be like pk_athiest

This is a message to the masses that social justice still reigns supreme

Yes it does

But THAT link doesn't prove anything. This link is like screaming SJW rah rah - that a rapist was sentenced to jail. Well he committed a crime. He did something wrong. And there are consequences for that

redpillschool[S] • 2 points • 5 June, 2017 11:40 PM

Just your participation here has put a target on your back. You don't have to say anything for them to use what they can against you.

JcHgvr • 3 points • 6 June, 2017 01:57 PM*

They can target you all they want, but unless you give them the ammo yourself they are just shooting blanks. And yes it sucks that you have to watch every word you say or type. But the truth is we let that happen. We as in men collectively.

redpillschool[S] • 2 points • 6 June, 2017 02:01 PM

Of course there's a difference between using your full name in a "private" facebook chat, and staying anonymous on a web forum.

The problem that many here are missing is the behavior itself is equal in the eyes of SJWs, if they manage to catch you. And there's a subreddit dedicated to trying to doxx a number of members on a regular basis. We've seen quite a few over the years.

A lot here are saying "well they were being idiots, they deserve their punishment."

But in reality, many here would be in a heap of trouble if they were exposed. There is no great divide other than how good your OPSEC is.

JcHgvr • 1 point • 6 June, 2017 02:16 PM*

Yes it's a problem, but the society became what it is now and unfortunately voicing unpopular opinions carries risk.

And while we can't the society overnight we can accept that there are people there who actively will try to fuck our lives up and we need to go the extra mile to prevent that from happening.

Make your username random, unrelated to your life, use a burner email. Avoid mentioning where you live. Simply put don't give them dots to connect.

Complaining about it won't change anything all you can do is cover your ass and do your part to change that, one example of how you could at least try to fight it would be voting.

As weird as it may sound TRP is basically a resistance, and just like any resistance we need to maintain some level of covertness.

UnKnownSurviving • 1 point • 5 June, 2017 09:17 PM

Yeah, agreed. I often consider deleting my facebook account for good, and go back to Pre-2000s, before facebook ever existed, and things were normal. Things are NOT normal, right now. Perhaps never will. I'll resurface on the media, from time to time, for jobs and news, or whatever else, just not Facebook. I won't go off grid, though. Not yet.

cherryCanSuckMyDick • 2 points • 5 June, 2017 09:59 PM

Yeah, agreed. I often consider deleting my facebook account for good, and go back to Pre-2000s, before facebook ever existed, and things were normal. Things are NOT normal, right now. Perhaps never will.

It feels amazing when you finally go 100% off the (internet) grid, ie no internet access whatsoever for a few weeks. Very liberating experience

UnKnownSurviving • 1 point • 6 June, 2017 12:14 AM

It is powerful. I haven't felt this good in years. I've tried it for few days, deactivated (not permanently deleted) my Facebook account, and I actually got shit done. My Facebook account is still deactivated, right now, and I plan to not use it for for several month. When things in my life are getting better (earning more money and saving it, and living in a better place, driving a newer car, etc), and I haven't use it for years, there's no use in keeping it at all. I will go off grid permanently.

[deleted] • -1 points • 5 June, 2017 08:37 PM

Meanwhile, Antifa is getting arrested in the streets.

The Portland DA will probably ignore their cases entirely (just like the corporate media ignores them,) letting them walk worry-free and having only the arrest on their record (if even that.) But their confiscated weapons are on the internet for all to see now - bricks, empty glass bottles, motherfucking dynamite; they did not come in peace and their weapons are not of any use for self-defense.

The entire university system in the west is a giant scam. In most countries the government pays for it with taxes and debt; in US you borrow money from pseudo-government elite bankers instead. All while the country is still massively in debt.
