

What generation has more white knights, the current or the previous?

My grampa was no white knight and was revered as a man and head of household. My father on the other hand is a white knight and suffers from his bad choices daily. I'm just wondering how other lineages are faring. Are things getting better or worse?

The 15-35 group is the worst for SJW bullshit, but overall the boomers are the worst generation. Hippies, aids, crack, they shot MLK, etc. The baby boomers gutted this country and left the next generations to pick up the pieces.

Worse, because we now live in a society that outwardly praises that behavior while at the same time shuns masculinity.

That doesn't necessarily mean there's more. Feminism is mainstream, but there are less women who actually support feminism. The effects of what started last generation are still being felt.

Over the past 5 years I've seen a major shift in attitudes. Men who were willing to white knight 5 years ago wouldn't today, and that trend is continuing.

is that because they're 5 years older and have 5 more years of maturity under their belt?..

Nope. It's regardless of age. I know men in their 60s who have done an about turn on that (or at least 90 degrees), in the same time span.

The prior generation. The boomers were the worst. They had all this completely unrealistic idealism that was only possible because their parents created a land of plenty for them. The current generation is the product of divorced parents and sees sluts around them all the time so they know a little better. I hope the internet will further spread redpill knowledge so it becomes commonplace.

before it was society that started turning men into white knights. Now society is pushing it down our throats worse then ever and a good chunk of the male population is being raised by either white knights or single mothers (another major cause). So its much worse now in my opinion. Not that it can't get better, it just won't be easy, or quick.

the 50s probably was the zenith of wight knightism but at least back then you knew your marriage would last id say the 40-60 y/o generation is most white knightish of all. the 60+ year generation is just completely delusional about everything and lived in a completely different world than today, so i leave them out.

the generation 20-30 still has many blue-pillers compared to previous ones, but i feel that there are more people within this generation that understands the nature of women, than the 40-50 y/o generation.

Our current generation has more white knights but I think that they're less intense. Let me explain. I mean in the past, it was like, "oh you deflowered my daughter" let me go kill/beat up that guy. It was intense.

In the modern day it's more like keyboard warriors trying to defend women's honor online. They must do it online because it goes well with their sedentary lifestyle of never getting out of the house.

I think older gens were more white knight but they were rewarded for it because I think the obligatory AF/BB behaviour you get these days started with gen x.

Suck it whippersnappers. There have always been white knights, and there have always been men. With the internet and information, and communication more prevalent, you see more WK attitudes, but it really isn't that isolated to the current or previous.

The internet has completely changed the game, I would like to think that with technology and an understanding of the plethora of options most men are less likely to submit to a single female
