

Is "red pill parenting" fair to children?

June 3, 2014 | 0 upvotes | by tricksyandfalse

Archived from theredarchive.com

Comments

tenpointsix • 0 points • 3 June, 2014 07:47 AM

"I can't imagine why anyone would intentionally raise a child to believe that (a) as a male he is socially disadvantaged, or (b) as a female she should stick to her traditionally limited gender role."

You can't imagine why parents would raise boys to be men and girls to be women?

gabilromariz • 0 points • 3 June, 2014 09:20 AM

Knowing our real advantages and disadvantages in this world is crucial to fight with all we have instead of just going with the flow. I don't see who wouldn't want their children to be in the best fighting shape in this increasingly odd twisted world

a) males are socially disadvantaged in today's world for a multitude of reasons. Only in knowing this can we go around it and be the best possible people

b) the female role is anything but limited, even in a traditional sense. If anything, they were more powerful than the women today. Again, only in knowledge can we go around this and teach girls talents they can use instead of the "you can do anything" bull that will ultimately make her miserable circlhat • -4 points • 3 June, 2014 06:19 AM

The redpill doesn't seek to change human nature, its not a "10 step plan". Your girl is going to naturally want a gender role, We don't tell women what they want, we give women what they want.

If women wanted a blue pill guy, I would be blue pill.

As for men, feminism is very dangerous, it will demonized his sexuality until the point where he is ashamed to even have sex with a female

Ludovico • 1 point • 3 June, 2014 08:13 AM

If women wanted a blue pill guy, I would be blue pill.

you should have more confidence in yourself. Find the woman that wants you for yourself, don't change yourself just to get a woman or you will just find yourself very unhappy. being yourself is confident, confidence is alpha.

circlhat • 2 points • 3 June, 2014 12:16 PM

True, but my point still stand we aren't trying to change or control women.

binglebongledingle • -3 points • 3 June, 2014 06:08 AM

I believe the purpose of this sub is to help parents raise boys to be alpha males, and raise girls to be ladies, not carousel riding hoes.... but yes I agree, all of these redpill spawn subreddits are killing TRP

• points • 1 January, 1970 12:00 AM

[permanently deleted]

FootFuck • 3 points • 3 June, 2014 01:33 PM

..wut.

[deleted] • 3 points • 3 June, 2014 01:44 PM

There's a world of a difference between "town bicycle" and "you can't be CEO of a Fortune 500 company, just sit wear this pretty dress and raise your children and give regular blowjobs to your alpha husband, you hypergamous slut"

BlakeThePUA • -2 points • 3 June, 2014 06:20 AM

TBH, I couldn't apply anything I would learn here toward women. Women raise women. Men raise men.