Lots of "gold" in this thread.

https://www.reddit.com/r/sex/comments/87iaib/this\_forum\_has\_a\_double\_standard\_that\_favours/

"I would not be motivated to give my SO a BJ if he gained 100lbs, played video games all day, and made no effort to be part of our partnership."

"Want money?...be smart and useful. Want sex?...be attractive."

"You know all hell breaks loose if a guy simply says his SO needs to lose weight? That obese women don't get to have absurdly high standards for her SO?"

If you were a man, you'd get impaled & crucified.

"Look at this guy! Does he think he's Channing Tatum?!?" "How selfish! She doesn't need to conform to your standard!" "Body-shaming! You don't deserve her!"

That somehow she's entitled to the SAME love and caring no matter what happens to her body, no matter how little effort she puts into herself."

Funny how RP is so disdained by society and yet that thread exists.

I've got a buddy in a DB relationship. I try to help him, but it is useless.

This is interesting too.

It's funny how so often when a woman is the perceived victim feminists and egalitarians turn into trad-cons.

Who is this authority that "they" refer to?

donedreadpirate • 5 points • 31 March, 2018 08:11 PM

George Soros

Yeah, when in doubt, always archive.is these posts

They disappear fast, and sometimes someone has already

Stay off those sub reddit, they have a skewed view on sex. They are all extremely sex positive, which means they will recommend a good public pegging for you to get on the same page.

Why do I care about any of this? I can't figure why you think is useful?
