

Question on wife cheating

January 10, 2016 | 6 upvotes | by ShuffleUp

Simple question I just want to know that I had a chance to consider all perspectives. Is there any situation in which a wife who cheated twice should not be dumped? Two kids involved else this would already have been done. I don't believe I can tolerate what has happened but I'm trying to make sure I've had a chance to think everything thru. Please understand I'm in a bad place emotionally this may be very straightforward but my mind has been racing for 10 days over this and I'm exhausted. Thanks.

Archived from theredarchive.com

Comments

Gogo4u • 10 points • 10 January, 2016 02:33 AM

By not leaving her after the first one, you've only enabled her to continue doing it.

What do you think you're subconsciously telling her by staying with her after the second?

You can't reward (the epitome of) bad behavior with your commitment. It only tells them that what they did has no consequences.

Good luck.

Archwinger • 9 points • 10 January, 2016 04:28 AM

Find your balls. You can do better.

[deleted] • 6 points • 10 January, 2016 03:35 AM

I've had a chance to think everything thru.

the first time would have been a good time to have this self reflection. what does your lawyer say?

SorcererKing • 4 points • 10 January, 2016 09:08 AM

In her mind you're a paycheck and a babysitter. You stay home with the kids while she's out getting cock. Grow a spine.

A_Rex • 4 points • 10 January, 2016 01:20 PM

Get everything lined up before you nuke it.

RealEstateRockstar • 3 points • 10 January, 2016 06:09 AM

No

arnieschwarz • 3 points • 10 January, 2016 06:25 AM

Divorce her.

[deleted] • 5 points • 10 January, 2016 07:06 PM

Wife cheated twice...

Two children...

Interesting....

fakefalse • 1 point • 11 January, 2016 07:52 PM

Terrible

Corollalover • 7 points • 10 January, 2016 12:48 AM

No.

[deleted] • 3 points • 10 January, 2016 01:21 PM

You have to give more information. Did she cheat when you were 400 pounds and unemployed and passive-aggressively arguing with her because she wasn't "there for you"?

My extreme example illustrates that women will be as awful as you allow them to be and ultimately it's your fault.

pullypants • 1 point • 10 January, 2016 03:32 PM

Agree, what's the deal? Her seeing someone for months while you neglect her is different from a drunk mistake. There's also different kinds of staying.

Glenbert • 2 points • 10 January, 2016 05:42 PM

No, no, no. You cannot make this distinction. They are both equally bad. If you say one is worse than the other, in hamster world that's as good as saying one is acceptable. Then the hamster will work just as hard as it can to show how the unacceptable situation is actually more like the "acceptable" situation.

"Well my husband DID ignore me last Thursday. So it's okay that I got so drunk that I let my boss face fuck me last night."

[deleted] • 1 point • 10 January, 2016 04:00 PM

We dont have enough information. OP, pls send me a private message if you eant to talk. Sometimes it helps to speak one on one about this shit.

BluepillProfessor • 1 point • 12 January, 2016 04:26 PM

Here we have Cad going against the grain and suggesting that "dump her for cheating" is contextual and depends on who YOU are when the cheating happened and who YOU are right now.

I agree if you have not been the leader of the relationship and have not been bringing the tingles then she WILL cheat. AWALT (almost).

So an alternative move, if you want to "save" what is left of this, is to Alpha up, be the MAN, bring the tingles, set the boundaries going forward- and start from where you are right now, year Zero.

[deleted] • 1 point • 13 January, 2016 02:43 AM*

Of course its easier to start over with a new woman. BUT sometimes there could be collateral damage with NEXT and the instadump when a mans behavior was subpar really isnt fair or truthful.

Why should a woman be held responsible for being faithful to a loser?

Quarter_Century_Club • 3 points • 10 January, 2016 02:00 PM

You deserve better. Next her immediately and put all your time, energy and resources in bettering yourself and your kids' lives.

IASGame • 3 points • 10 January, 2016 02:37 PM

Even being as "tolerant" on the wife as UCad is being, I think staying with a wife that cheated twice is such a demonstration of lower value that I don't see room for a realistic recovery.

The OP could put in the effort to become as hot and dominant as a mythical Chad and the wife would still remember he stayed with her after she cheated on him twice. She could then think "I don't deserve him", but she could also think (more likely) "If he stayed he had no options".

With the relationship in such dire straits, I'm not even sure it is still better for the kids to stay. Are the kids even genetically the OP's (needs to be considered given the circumstances)?

Whatever amount of effort he puts in, the same amount of effort would get him better with one or more other women.

[deleted] • 1 point • 10 January, 2016 05:58 PM*

Except, almost every married man was cheated on, the guy doesn't know it or hammers it away.

Go ahead and keylog computer and phone, you will see, almost every guy who checks will come away and see the whole sidebar proven to him

To be clearer, I did not suggest OP be tolerant, I said there is scant information to go on here.

Glenbert • 3 points • 10 January, 2016 07:22 PM

almost every guy who checks will come away and see the whole sidebar proven to him

This is like going into a cancer ward and concluding that most people have cancer. I don't know of too many men who would keylog their wife's phone just because it's a fun thing to do. They do so because they realized that their wives are sketchy and are higher cheat risks.

[deleted] • 2 points • 10 January, 2016 07:33 PM

Trust but verify. It's not "beta" to protect your family and finances and most every man who did this learned the god honest truth that women are not so wonderful.

They are people like you and me

Glenbert • 1 point • 10 January, 2016 07:42 PM

I do agree with TBV, wholeheartedly. I do check my wife's communications from time-to-time. I've never seen any indicator of infidelity, which is nice. But I have come across a few wince-inducing things that just serve as little redpill reminders.

But that's definitely not the norm. Prior to my ex laying down some seriously sketchy nonsense (e.g. mentioning polyamory for no reason) I would have never even thought to TBV. So glad I did so I could quickly rinse the scales from my eyes, dump her ass and move on.

It's a better way to be IMO, but it's simply not the norm.

BluepillProfessor • 1 point • 12 January, 2016 04:27 PM

They are people like you and me

OOOOHH you are such a shitlord....

IASGame • 1 point • 10 January, 2016 07:22 PM

What is your definition of cheating (emotional counts?). From the context I take it you mean "almost every married man was cheated on" by his current wife?

I think things are bad with respect to marriages and LTRs, but I don't think they are at the "almost every" level. Majority? I can sort of see that now that I'm Red Pill aware (given that Majority do end up in divorce).

The Almost Every level is that women are hypergamous (hence indeed keylogging would reveal the sidebar), but I don't think almost every one of the married ones is acting out on their hypergamy (hence keylogging wouldn't necessarily reveal actual cheating). And many of the ones that do may "branch swing" without cheating on their husband, no?

[deleted] • 1 point • 10 January, 2016 07:31 PM

Might be your girlfriend, fiancé, or wife after the ceremony. You and every other man has been cheated on at least emotionally, probably physically.

Most of the bitches should be nexted for it but my point is her cheating takes no value from you as a man. It may indicate issues where you slipped or need work.

midlifedick • 4 points • 10 January, 2016 12:53 AM

No.

innominating • 5 points • 10 January, 2016 01:07 AM

No.

WillWorkForLTC • 4 points • 10 January, 2016 01:34 AM

No.

Nebulose11 • 2 points • 10 January, 2016 04:24 PM

Demote her to plate and get some on the side yourself.

Let her be the one to nuke the relationship. The childhood of your children is at stake. Get all your ducks on a row for your exist but let her initiate. Remember, once demoted never promote her again.

Redpilllife79 • 2 points • 10 January, 2016 05:19 PM

No. This is a world of abundance and there are plenty of other quality women out there who do not cheat. Get a lawyer and get the hell out man. Good luck.

Griever114 • 2 points • 10 January, 2016 05:23 PM

Dump the cheating whore and move on. Make SURE you have documentation of her cheating (letters/emails etc) and lawyer up BEFORE telling her that you are dumping this shit tier quality woman.

It WILL get better.

Do you really want to show your kids that its ok to cheat on a spouse?

Redneck001 • 2 points • 11 January, 2016 01:33 AM wife who cheated twice

Absolutely fucking no.

[deleted] • 1 point • 10 January, 2016 05:13 AM

If you like the nickname ShuffleUp Cuck then keep her .. if not then Next her.

wakethfkupneo • 1 point • 10 January, 2016 09:55 AM

Is there any situation in which a wife who cheated once should not be dumped?

No.

Is there any situation in which a wife who cheated twice should not be dumped?

HELL NO!

pullypants • 1 point • 10 January, 2016 03:34 PM

Come on. Zero tolerance? Really?

Glenbert • 4 points • 10 January, 2016 05:24 PM

Here's the only situation I can come up with: she's the last woman on earth.

wakethfkupneo • 1 point • 11 January, 2016 03:21 AM

If you get over it (the first time), what message do you send? And does it really matter if it's only 1 extra cock or 2, 3 ... ? There's absolutely no way to get out of that paradox: if you forgive her, you're beta bitch with no other options <---> hypergamy is hardwired to resent beta bitches.

Think of it as her getting exposed to radiation from nuclear power plant. From that point on, she's permanently contaminated. Or think of it as getting cancer on certain part of your body: the only way to save your life is to remove the part, no matter how hard it is or how attached you are to that part.

The moment she does it, it's game over. You can be smart and remove small part or let the cancer spread and eventually remove bigger part, once you realize it won't magically heal itself.

Not to even mention the time you're wasting (typically years) waiting for miracle (NAWALT) to happen, that should be better spent looking for better woman - a.k.a. "sunk cost fallacy".

pullypants • 1 point • 11 January, 2016 11:43 AM

This sub is all about self improvement. We accept that our nature isn't set in stone and that we can change it. Why is that true of men and not women?

I accept you need to have standards, and I accept that in many circumstances cheating is zero tolerance. But it's never truly that straightforward is it?

chief_slap_ahoe • 1 point • 10 January, 2016 11:39 AM

I would have nuked the world the first time. She wouldn't have had a chance for the second.

the_Zambony • 1 point • 10 January, 2016 02:26 PM

One time, maybe, with true remorse an indicator for possible reconciliation

Two times, no fucking way.

[deleted] • 1 point • 10 January, 2016 05:03 PM

Leave her

mrpCamper • 1 point • 11 January, 2016 06:01 PM

Short answer no. More useful information, depending on your state's divorce laws, if you forgive her, then you can not use her cheating as leverage in the divorce suit. For example, you will pay alimony if you forgive her and then decide later to divorce but may be able to get out of it if you divorce her based on a non forgiven affair. Proof can be just that something sketchy happened like a hotel receipt. The first time is a wash. it already happened. If the second time is more recent, you could be giving up leeway, money and parental control by not proceeding forward with a divorce. Please go see an attorney if nothing else.