

Thank You

November 21, 2015 | 10 upvotes | by Vampiresquidina

---

Just wanted to say thanks to all you guys who talked to me and my husband about our respective shit. I think things are going to get better.

~ Vamp

P.s. - I haven't read his post or the comments (I promised I wouldn't)

---

Archived from theredarchive.com

---

Comments

---

sexyshoulderdevil • 6 points • 21 November, 2015 10:15 PM

Just know /u/whinomoreplease served up some equal opportunity lovin. You can do some bonding and lick each other's....wounds. Good luck.

[deleted] • 3 points • 22 November, 2015 01:54 AM well, there was enough for a lot of us

[deleted] • 3 points • 21 November, 2015 08:59 PM

I hope you both come back in a few months with an update. You might need your flair changed at that point.

Trekneck • 1 point • 21 November, 2015 10:15 PM

Assuming he follows through that is

MRPguy • 2 points • 23 November, 2015 05:32 PM

No doubt.

My husband is a leader, provides an excellent income, has 12% body fat, dresses well, is confident, other women love being around him, has many male friends, engages in masculine hobbies that he is passionate about, loves having sex with me.

Yeah, RP done properly sounds terrible.

Vampiresquidina • 2 points • 23 November, 2015 06:28 PM [recovered]

Yeah, great except for the being treated like a child and not making decisions part. I guess I'll learn to love that, eventually.

other women love being around him

I'm not a subscriber to the "Female Social Matrix," so those other bitches better keep their eyes and mitts off my man.

[deleted] • 3 points • 23 November, 2015 09:18 PM*

Yeah, great except for the being treated like a child and not making decisions part. I guess I'll learn to love that, eventually.

I don't treat my wife like a child. In fact, I expect her to behave like an adult with adult decision making capabilities. At the end of the day though, I follow my vision and hope she has enough faith in me to follow my vision too. She is always free to make the choice to leave and be on her own if she's not happy with me and pursue her own goals/vision if she's not satisfied.

The way decisions get made between my wife and I is that whoever cares more gets to make the decision. There is almost nothing that is so important that we'll both care enough about it. This may be different for you (see: act like an adult).

If she wants my help, I expect her to ask for it. If I want her help, I ask for it explicitly. Neither of us are mindreaders. We both understand (and it's a point I try to re-emphasize occasionally) that being married and being happy requires us to put in effort to continue driving our marriage forward.

I expect to be respected. My wife expects to be respected. The consequence of one of us not respecting the other for an extended amount of time is divorce. Short term disrespect is not acceptable either. Again, the thing to keep in mind is that both of us are free to leave at any time - the reason we don't is 1) we choose not to and 2) we make each other's lives better.

The difference between myself and most of the men posting here (imo), is that most other men are still trying to get to a point where they're respected in the relationship and asserting the fact that "adding value" is a requirement for them -- hence, some of the issues you're running into. I was never blue pill or a pansy in my relationship so I knew what I wanted and what I expected in my relationship life.

BluepillProfessor • 1 point • 24 November, 2015 10:03 PM

Yeah, great except for the being treated like a child and not making decisions part.

My wife is a top flight lawyer and she LOOOOVES being treated like a bratty little girl. She doesn't want to be treated in a disrespectful way, but literally like a bratty, pouty 10 year old- patting her on the head, telling her she is a good girl, scratching her behind the ears like a puppy, you name it. While it is true under the Married Red Pill paradigm the woman will not be making most of the major decisions, it is also true you make ALL the decisions on your paper- and you have a LOT more input and influence on the decisions on his paper than he has over the decisions on your paper. You have a whole lot more influence if you choose to use your power as a woman with a loving husband than you would as an exasperated harridan with a honeydo list.

Sapphire_Jizz • 1 point • 22 November, 2015 12:38 AM

I second this -- please give us updates down the road!

Thanks to both of you for posting.

FearDearg2015 • 2 points • 22 November, 2015 09:09 AM

I think things are going to get better.

When each of you is owning their own shit instead of throwing it at one another, things can ONLY get better. Then, with a dose of red pill on top of that, your sex lives will improve beyond what you thought. Just know that nowhere is there any guarantee that the amazing sex you'll be having will be with each other. "true love" is an active, conscious and continuous CHOICE, not a compulsion. Own your shit, stay true to yourself, and learn how to stop letting yourself be manipulated and stop manipulating others with your emotions.

Vampiresquidina • 2 points • 23 November, 2015 06:34 PM [recovered]

"true love" is an active, conscious and continuous CHOICE, not a compulsion.

I know you're right, but part of me feels really sad about that - girls get sold the Disney lie, too, and some fall for it hard. I want my Prince Charming soul mate. Women aren't really as opportunistic as RP likes to make it seem.

FearDearg2015 • 1 point • 23 November, 2015 07:44 PM

Nobody forces you to accept the red pill anymore than you were forced to believe the Disney version.

Given the choice, I'd prefer the red pill any day and would never go back to being a blue pill Disney fan boy. There is just something more primal and intimate knowing that there is no safety net, and that life holds you accountable at every turn.

Vampiresquidina • 1 points • 23 November, 2015 07:49 PM [recovered]

For some reason, that brought tears.

This shit is hard.

FearDearg2015 • 1 point • 23 November, 2015 08:23 PM

On that we can agree. But nothing worth doing is ever easy. "embrace the suck" someone on here once said. Take comfort in the discomfort. It will make you a stronger human being, a better you. If two people in the relationship are facing their own reality, and staying together by choice, and enjoying it, and not forcing each other to deal with unnecessary shit, then that's as close to soul mates as I think you can get. The Disney version only works on TV, and is designed to keep the human spirit contained in a nice little "consumer" box.