

Will trans acceptance push women to look more feminine? - "For a woman to be seen as "crossdressing" she has to not only put on the apparel and hairstyle, but make an effort to pass herself off as a man. This isn't true for men. If we see a dude [..] wearing a dress, we recognize crossdressing. "

I don't have the source, but I remember reading on this as a way the left is cannibalizing itself.

The feminists want men and women to essentially be genderless, but the trans want to be ultra-feminine.

I'm just sitting back with my popcorn watching the show.

but the trans want to be ultra-feminine.

The trans-women, being man, will be better women than the women. It's very normal.

Don't forget the TERF wars. That's where some of the real crazy happens.

This is another consequence of the increasing vacuum left by masculinity in society. Biological males are either becoming effeminate to outright desiring to live like women, while women are becoming more unhappy having to take on both gender roles.

Hey redpillschool, thanks for posting these articles... Not all of them are going to be interesting for everyone, but I found some unexpected gems (this being the shiniest one) that I would have missed otherwise!

No problem. Trying to keep it fresh during the winter lull.
