

Dalrock: Grill envy | "No matter how hard they try, they can't do something simple, something effortless for men. They can't grill with the aim of caring for others. If they can't have what men have, then they have to tear it all down."

Apparently eating steaks is toxic masculinity now

I wish you were kidding.

Yeah, I'm not there were some guys in PPD making the case for it yesterday.

I want to do some research on if there's any studies on negative health impacts for men of eating a vegan diet so I Can call it toxic femininity

For some reason, this makes me enjoy meat even more.

Dash_of_islam • 1 point • 29 January, 2019 05:26 PM

Make 2 steaks, post it online with the caption, "I'm allergic to vegan and vegetarian foods"

Sonny_Luna • 9 points • 30 January, 2019 12:07 AM

I know. What a fucking loser that guy is.

What irritates me is that the term 'toxic masculinity' isn't intended to delineate masculinity from toxic masculinity, it's meant to broadly paint masculinity as toxic.

Fuck feminism.

the UN is just beginning to seriously double down on moving away from red meat and on to veganism and soy. you will see it come under serious attack this next decade. there will be a climate change tax on real meat and lab grown soy meat will be heavily pushed.

My university recently chose to only supply red meat once per week, and supply no meat at all on Mondays

There's one thing that women do better than men now, and that's unintentional hilarity. This made my fucking morning.

whatsthisgarg • 6 points • 29 January, 2019 06:04 PM unintentional hilarity.

Two of the faggy whiners in the story: Jacob Brogan and Mike Power.

lol

SpiritStatic • 9 points • 30 January, 2019 06:08 AM

What the hell is wrong with these guys? I mean, how are you that resentful of your own nature and intuition? I want to be mad at him, but it's just pitiable how deeply nested the thought contagion of feminism is in his head. Probably will do a follow-up post about his "penis guilt" at the rate he's going. How do you even cure something like that? Is he going to pop one day like a firecracker?

CockPrevails • 6 points • 30 January, 2019 06:41 AM

I just can't tolerate reading this faggoty nonsense. Can someone TL;DR this for me please?

redpill77 • 3 points • 1 February, 2019 04:48 AM grilling is a shameful "masculine indulgence"

Imperator_Red • 6 points • 29 January, 2019 08:22 PM

Leftists and feminists are mentally ill. All of them. Act accordingly.

TheRealBrotherLouie • 2 points • 31 January, 2019 06:38 PM

They're trying communism once again but this time not against money but against being ~~same~~ an oppressive toxic cisgender nazi

DwightWolftail • 3 points • 1 February, 2019 09:00 AM

What the fuck did I just read. I don't live in USA so maybe I just don't experience barbecue culture and madness that much. Do feminists have problems with meat cooking now? I mean, is this serious, or just 2% of feminists that are crazier?

This guy has serious mental issues. But is he a representative part of men in USA? Or are we just finding feminism porn to rage at?

MentORPHEUS • 2 points • 30 January, 2019 01:48 AM

I think the writer pitched this article to Slate after The Onion turned it down. Who the fuck overthinks barbecuing to that extent?

The Question says:

@ Dalrock

I think there's even more to this. It's not just envy of what masculine men do. It's that the relationship is entirely one-sided regarding who envies who. Masculine men have no desire to be like effeminate men or feminists or to be around them. They don't envy them or even think about them. They don't want to be part of their groups, institutions or organizations. They gain nothing by their presence and would prefer they not be around, and in fact actively avoid them whenever possible.

Yet these same people claim that masculine men are oppressing them even as they fight to gain access to every last unofficial activity or hobby of interest to masculine men.

How much of that realization – that those they envy do not envy them at all – is actually driving their angst?

A feminist male also resents masculine men because, unlike them, he has to constantly struggle to reconcile his ideology with his natural instincts. A masculine man doesn't have to explain why he wants to grab his rifle and go shooting and then later have a BBQ while smoking stogies with his friends. He doesn't feel the need to apologize for slapping perfectly-cooked burgers on the family table.

The feminist man does. He is burdened in a way they are not, and he knows it. So he seeks the only thing he can for his troubles; pity from those who are "supposed" to appreciate his effort to be a "good man."

I think this is the answer here. A man so conditioned he questions his biological nature discovers that what acts his body rewards him for is incongruent with his conditioning.
