God/Truth --> Man --> Woman --> Children.

This "hierarchy" exists on many levels and does not indicate any particular superiority, although those who believe in the religion of equality are instantly incensed by it. It also works backwards in much the same way that it works forward. For example, children are considered more valuable than adults, and women are considered more valuable than men. Further, children are at war with their parents, but parents are not at war with their children. Women are at war with men, but men are not at war with women. Men are at war with God/Truth, but God/Truth is not at war with men. And it descends from here as well. Only when man is in proper relation to the Truth, can he expect woman to be in proper relation to him. This is something hard-wired into our biology and it has been with us from the beginning.

Very succinctly states what I have found to be extremely true in my unplugging.

I shall also stand proudly by the Truth. If not for myself, then for my son who has to make it in this world when I am gone.

Truth, beauty, and goodness are strongly intertwined. Moral ugliness is a literal term, because things that are ugly really are bad, on a much deeper level than rotten apples being dangerous to our health.

This is really core redpill right here...learning the truth to properly orient oneself in reality hieroglyphgold • 3 points • 22 February, 2019 04:15 AM

Beautifully put, especially relevant in my journey right now.

It is said that when Alexander the Great was handing King Darius III of Persia his ass, Darius lamented, "My men have become women and my women have become men." In other words, they embraced androgyny - and this is true, if you examine how their customs changed over time.

Wow so much historical revisionism. Let's see; it wasn't Darius III who said this it was Xerxes I, and it wasn't said in reference to Alexander the Great but against the naval might of Athens, and it wasn't a comment on culture it was a comment on a rather disastrous naval battle where Athens wiped the floor with the Persians (the only naval commander on the Persian side that managed to accomplish anything happened to be a woman).

Can you give me a reference for this? Sounds like something I want to read. Thanks.

I love this quote from her advising Xerxes: "Spare your ships, and do not risk a battle; for these people are as much superior to your people in seamanship, as men to women". She was quite red pilled.

If you have the time you should read up on the whole story. There is an invasion by a huge empire of smaller cities who put aside their difference to fight a common enemy. There are heroes, traitors, prophecies, defiant last stands and huge battles fought against all odds. And it ends with the empire being defeated and driven out. The whole thing is so awesome its hard to believe its history and not myth.

You have some very interesting content on your blog dude but the formatting sucks (for mobile anyways).

Could you write some of these as TRP posts so we can read them? Good stuff

redpillschool[S] • 4 points • 22 February, 2019 08:37 PM

Alas, I am not the author. It's some older stuff that I thought would do well getting on our front page again. I'm not sure there's much I can do- short of rehosting it but that would be a copyright problem.

IvyExcess • 25 points • 21 February, 2019 05:59 PM

Fix the background or text color, it's unreadable

redpillschool[S] • 15 points • 21 February, 2019 06:00 PM

White background/ black text?

This isn't my site, I have no control over it.

Reads just fine from here. Request desktop site if it's not working for you.

or did you get paid to promote it?

Who the fuck are you?

Imperator_Red • 17 points • 21 February, 2019 10:07 PM

I love when someone posts something retarded and you click on their profile, and 90% of the time every single thing in their post history is incomprehensible drivel.

iloveturks • 6 points • 22 February, 2019 03:55 AM

A “survivor” if the username is anything to go by poopidydoopscoop • 4 points • 21 February, 2019 06:44 PM

The link you posted goes to a dark purple background with black letters on mobile. Near impossible to read. That's what he's referencing.

Blackhawk2479 • 3 points • 21 February, 2019 10:22 PM

Overzealous ad blocker? It’s black text on white for me on my iPad.

zyk0s • 7 points • 22 February, 2019 01:50 AM

No, it’s bad CSS (layout and formatting) that wasn’t tested on mobile size screens. Thankfully, a lot of mobile browsers have a text reader mode for cases like this.

SteezDied • 1 point • 25 February, 2019 01:39 AM

On iPhone tap the reader view icon in the url bar or use simplified view in chrome.

jizzledfreq • 1 point • 22 February, 2019 11:32 PM

Yeah. On mobile phones it's dark blue background w/ black text. Impossible to read. Requesting a desktop site works.

largepaycheckaddict • 5 points • 25 February, 2019 06:47 AM

That’s one of the worst website designs I’ve ever seen. Wow.

[deleted] • 1 point • 25 February, 2019 07:52 PM

In my day if a website didn’t work on your device you copied the text into a word document and read it. I guess now you kids just bitch about things

largepaycheckaddict • 2 points • 26 February, 2019 02:21 AM

What’s so hard about choosing a readable text and background combination? White background and black text to play it safe.

[deleted] • 1 point • 26 February, 2019 06:33 PM

So hard to read. It's all dark krunchtimer • 1 point • 27 February, 2019 02:13 PM

Marriage hides the nature of women while bachelorhood exposes it as life goes on.

That section of the article where it explains how bachelors eventually get to see a different side of women is very enlightening.
