

First rule of dealing with rape accusations and the police, keep your mouth shut.

438 upvotes | 15 May, 2018 | by redpillschool

Archived from theredarchive.com

Comments

max_peenor • 157 points • 15 May, 2018 04:41 PM

This should be required viewing for all Americans on their 18th birthday.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=d-7o9xYp7eE>

The best part is when the cop gets his turn and pretty much says "yeah what he said."

[deleted] • 97 points • 15 May, 2018 05:12 PM

Shutting the hell up and not correcting your adversary when they request that you assist them in their quest to destroy you is one of the few central pillars of redpill. As children we are taught compliance above all, at any cost, even if it harms the self and harms the alliance, in the pursuit of some ideological sense of justice.

This concept goes back at least 3500 years and found written about in the bible on the many parables of the fool. <http://biblehub.com/nasb/proverbs/10-19.htm>

Hear it from the mouth of old Steve Jobs. <https://youtu.be/E9AMzypodls?t=27s>

When something is wrong, resist the urge to just run in and fix it and shut the hell up. When your enemy is making a mistake, accidentally failing to correct them is wisdom.

AmatureProgrammer • 29 points • 15 May, 2018 05:56 PM

18th birthday

I think its should be best as soon as you hit puberty

Entropy-7 • 1 point • 16 May, 2018 10:24 AM

Criminal liability attaches at 13 or something.

richi0003 • 9 points • 15 May, 2018 05:11 PM

Does this shit work in Europe too?

Desthr0 • 22 points • 15 May, 2018 05:55 PM

In the USA, constitutional law protects you from self-incrimination. Here, it has been taken to mean that if you keep your food-hole closed, they can't MAKE you incriminate yourself.

So, in Europe, it may depend on where you are at. Nobody here is compelled to talk to anyone, let alone the police. It may be different there where people may be required to talk to the police.

BleuSceptre • 14 points • 15 May, 2018 05:45 PM

Depends where you live probably. In France, you should never under any circumstances talk to the police if you are in "garde à vue", I have a short book about that (in french)

[deleted] • 1 points • 16 May, 2018 12:06 AM

[permanently deleted]

BleuSceptre • 1 point • 16 May, 2018 04:39 PM

Don't know, as it is apparently more a pdf than a real book. It's called "Manuel de survie en garde à vue", roughly translated in "Survival kit for custody". You can probably find it online, in french and maybe in other languages.

GoRedBad • 1 points • 16 May, 2018 09:59 AM [recovered]

In the UK they say this when you get arrested: "You do not have to say anything, but it may harm your defence if you fail to mention, when questioned, something that you later rely on in court."

Commentor544 • 1 point • 16 May, 2018 05:14 PM

Does that mean saying nothing to the police will harm you in the court?

vandaalen • 3 points • 15 May, 2018 08:47 PM

That cop really really likes himself.

grewapair • 58 points • 15 May, 2018 08:29 PM

The mistake most people make is they try to talk the cops out of arresting them, usually by stating the sex they had was consensual. Right there, you are 90 percent of the way to conviction, because all the girl has to do is say the sex you just admitted to wasn't consensual, and they prosecutor knows the jury will immediately take her side.

So by talking you are sinking your own case. As soon as a cop asks you a question, shut the hell up and ask for your lawyer.

Don't try to avoid the arrest by talking. Accept the arrest. As long as you say nothing and there is no other evidence, the charges will likely be dropped. As for other evidence, it's usually non existent.

ThePlague • 17 points • 15 May, 2018 08:44 PM

You are NEVER going to win roadside court and, most probably, you are going to say something that will hurt you down the road in the gynocentric legal system. The cop is not your friend in that case, no matter how he tries to frame the questioning. Keep your mouth shut, don't be trolled or goaded.

[deleted] • 12 points • 16 May, 2018 01:34 AM

Question...

Let's say a girl claims that I had non-consensual sex with her. I don't talk to the police but we still end up going to court.

In court, they ask me whether we had sex or not. Again, if I say, "yes we had sex but it was consensual" I have admitted to the sex which she can claim was non-consensual and convict me.

If I deny and say, "no we did not have sex" but they find evidence to prove that we did have sex, I may get convicted due to dishonesty.

If I remain silent however, it will seem suspicious as to why I refuse to deny or comment on whether sex happened or not and I might be convicted.

Is this accurate? What is the best approach?

Huffnagle • 17 points • 16 May, 2018 02:09 AM

If you're in the USA, they can't ask you anything in court unless your lawyer is stupid enough to let you testify.

There may be times when that's the best strategy, but get a good lawyer and listen to him.

Entropy-7 • 1 point • 16 May, 2018 10:31 AM

In a he-said/she-said situation, if she gets up on the stand and "says" then the evidentiary burden of proof will shift to you. Unless you are very lucky, she won't get demolished on cross examination leaving you no choice but to testify.

steve70638 • 6 points • 16 May, 2018 07:15 PM

She is going to have to get every detail correct. Let's say you were at a club and she says you left at midnight (when you left at 1AM). Maybe you have a credit card receipt from the bar at 12:30 proving you couldn't have gone home with her. Maybe the Uber driver doesn't remember you. Maybe the Uber drivers says the guy she was with was blonde guy, not brown hair that you have. The point is not to confirm any point of her statement. Any error in her memory weakens her story. Don't help her.

Entropy-7 • 1 point • 16 May, 2018 10:40 PM

I agree generally but the "drunk card" works against you. If the chick was loaded and can't remember this or that, it seems that people will fill in the blanks with facts that work against the guy, unless you have the documented evidence to back up your own story.

The_Noble_Lie • 0 points • 16 May, 2018 10:59 AM

What if you represent yourself (no lawyer) and decide to say nothing or very little (take the fifth in a sort of "protest".)

So in response to did you have sex: say something like "I did nothing wrong" (a cryptic neither no or yes - assertion that morality should prevail)

Is any part of the above perhaps useful/applicable (I know very little about criminal law) or do jurors end up despising non answers? (The unfortunate, no answer/transparency == guilt)

Huffnagle • 10 points • 16 May, 2018 11:04 AM

Jurors are people, rape is despicable. If you come into court acting all weird and shifty, you're going down. And representing yourself is foolish.

PMnewb • 0 points • 16 May, 2018 07:27 PM

If you represent yourself and don't even bother arguing a case, you will lose. The burden of proof is on the prosecution, but our trial system is adversarial, meaning its one side (you) convincing the jury against the other side. If the prosecution is free to take their time and lay down a case against you, and you don't bother poking holes at that case, the jury is inclined to convict you.

You cannot be compelled to be a witness against yourself, so you cannot be asked "Did you have sex" during a trial if you choose not to take the stand. You cannot be asked anything if you choose to not take the stand.

grewapair • 6 points • 16 May, 2018 02:34 AM

What's the best approach? It depends on the evidence, all of which you get to see before you need to testify.

If there's no evidence, your lawyer will tell the jury that they haven't proven their case, there's no evidence you even had sex, so they don't need to decide consent. If there's evidence you had sex, your lawyer will argue there was consent.

But when the cop comes to arrest you? You don't know enough then. Keep your mouth completely shut.

steve70638 • 0 points • 16 May, 2018 07:11 PM

Not exactly. The prosecutor has to show your lawyer their evidence. Let's say she gets the date wrong in her statement and you were in another state at the time or had witnesses. You don't say anything. Your lawyer shows the judge evidence you were elsewhere and case is dismissed. A dismissed case is better than being found not guilty.

varlogmessages • 75 points • 15 May, 2018 06:34 PM*

UHVyZ2luZyBteSBjb21tZW50cw==

Sisu6972 • 1 points • 15 May, 2018 07:06 PM [recovered]

No, we don't hate that advice. That shit is so fucking vital. Never ever ever have drunk sex with a rando. Get their number and ask to meet up when sober. Only time you should be having drunk sex is when you are with a confirmed not crazy woman who gave sober consent to drunk sex. I'm a college guy in a frat at a liberal arts college filled with sjws. Shit is like living in the book "1984" over here. Everything you do is watched. My friend almost caught a case that way. He and a girl that he had been fucking for a while, and was ok with drunk sex, AND had consensual drunk sex with in the past no problem, almost fucked him over. Her roommate saw her leave the bar with my friend. They had both only had about four drinks and it was a 30 minute walk back to campus, allowing them to pretty much sober up by the time they got back, or at least enough to be fully capable of decision making. Girl was totally cool with having sex with him, but the roommate reported it. My friend got investigated and luckily he got off fine. Before the investigation started he was ready to drop school and go to another college on the other side of the country because he thought his life was about to get ruined. He later remembered that a year before that incident, the same roommate that reported him was begging to fuck him while she was way too drunk to fuck. She was actually drunk to point where it would have actually not been consent. He told her no for obvious reasons. She probably couldn't handle the rejection and reported him to get back at the fact that he wouldn't fuck her. Something similar happened to me when a girl I turned down framed me for something I didn't do, tarnished my reputation, and almost reported me to the police. Be careful with these crazy bitches. And DONT FUCK DRUNK RANDOS

UFO_mechanic_AMA • 8 points • 16 May, 2018 04:05 AM

And of course, nothing happened to the woman reporting it, right? So fucking glad I finished college before this shit took over.

hirayama_ronin • 2 points • 17 May, 2018 03:41 AM but the roommate reported it

America is a society of informers.

The_Noble_Lie • 3 points • 16 May, 2018 10:56 AM

Projection by the reporter of the consensual sex. Typical immature child like, womanish behavior (men can project hard too)

But also, it was reported and the guy overreacted, nothing coming of it, ofand course in retrospect. The truth tends to come out when theres not a larger more powerful conspirator to hide it from the light.

[deleted] • 34 points • 15 May, 2018 06:57 PM

Nah dude, if shes super fucked up and can't consent I'm not down.

Besides if she's that fucked, is it really going to be enjoyable anyhow?

I don't need a girl to be blackout drunk to have sex.

reecewagnercomment score below threshold • -34 points • 15 May, 2018 09:17 PM*

I don't need a girl to be blackout drunk to have sex.

Uh... good? Baseline brag lol

Bring on the downvotes I guess, heaven forbid I should clarify that its not cool to rape people

HumanSockPuppet • 13 points • 15 May, 2018 08:04 PM

You can have one-night stands, just don't make the girls regret it. Keep your mouth shut about your romantic exploits.

A woman generally only reverses herself when the negative feelings about possibly being labeled as a slut outweigh her positive feelings about sleeping with you.

suxxos • 3 points • 16 May, 2018 04:17 AM

I've posted the same advice so many times here and always get downvoted. If you sleep with a random girl, you are just asking for trouble. It's not worth it. Especially if you take the "she wants it, you just have to break her LMR" rule too seriously.

TankVet • 27 points • 15 May, 2018 08:39 PM

First and only rule of dealing with police: Do not talk to police.

ThePlague • 19 points • 15 May, 2018 08:41 PM

There is a service called "Texas Law Shield" which provides 24 hour access to a lawyer in the event you are involved in a lawful shooting. Perhaps it is time that a similar service be started for these out of control false allegations.

[deleted] • 49 points • 15 May, 2018 06:24 PM

Another thing everyone should do, try your best to ever prevent being in that situation.

After sex, send some messages to her like "I really enjoyed having sex with you. When are we going to do it again?", or something like that. Send a message that basically has her admit she consented to sex so if she does accuse you, you can show the police/your attorney that asap.

bornonasunday • 95 points • 15 May, 2018 07:23 PM

"I really enjoyed that consensual sex."

lampshade2818comment score below threshold • -16 points • 15 May, 2018 08:50 PM

Yes. A message like that is a huge turn on for women. How much trouble are red pill men getting in that these threads keep popping up? I get everyone wants to get laid, but settle it down a bit. I made it through high school, college, and a few years out in the wild before getting married, and this stuff never came up.

thoughtlow • 21 points • 15 May, 2018 09:53 PM

I understand your view but times have changed. Not all men will face these problems but for the very few that will, this could be crucial information.

grewapair • 63 points • 15 May, 2018 08:32 PM

DO NOT ADMIT YOU HAD SEX WITH ANYONE. PERIOD. "I had a nice time, hope to see you again" achieves the same result. DO NOT ADMIT ANY ELEMENT OF A CRIME. Sex is an element of rape. NEVER admit to it.

OfficerWade • 9 points • 15 May, 2018 11:25 PM

Innocent until proven guilty, USA USA USA....

moltenw • 2 points • 16 May, 2018 10:26 AM

These days it's more like "Guilty until proven innocent"...

d4ng3rz0n3 • 1 point • 16 May, 2018 04:38 PM

Innocent until proven guilty is actually not a law. Its a principle that is often quoted but the only thing we are guaranteed is due process.

PID1_ • 1 points • 16 May, 2018 12:08 AM [recovered]

Maybe in court, but your mugshot across the 9 o'clock news can really put a damper on your social life.

OfficerWade • 0 points • 16 May, 2018 12:19 AM

Don't put that evil on me!

TeenagerFanatic • 1 points • 16 May, 2018 01:38 AM [recovered]

If a girl says you had sex, the cops will believe her. Its better to keep a text like that in case.

grewapair • 2 points • 16 May, 2018 02:35 AM

No. Keep your mouth shut. Make them prove everything beyond a reasonable doubt. Even that you had sex at all. Shut the fuck up.

Huffnagle • 28 points • 15 May, 2018 07:12 PM

I prefer a text that says something like "I had a really nice time with you last night".

Leaves plausible deniability, also it is less likely to set off her inner slut defenses so you're more likely to get a positive answer. When she answers "me too", that's a pretty strong statement if you were to end up in the legal system.

thoughtlow • 11 points • 15 May, 2018 09:56 PM

I'm always wondering what happens when she says: I just said "me too" because i was scared.

Huffnagle • 3 points • 16 May, 2018 02:05 AM

She can say whatever crazy shit she wants, you can't prevent that. But... Your lawyer can get some reasonable doubt out of that text, and that could make the difference.

Seven_Veils • 11 points • 15 May, 2018 10:33 PM

You guys are scaring me with all these posts about rape accusations..

possessedmokey • 12 points • 16 May, 2018 06:23 AM

I was accused before. Its very upsetting to say the least. We had been Fuck buddies for a few months. Not sure why she decided to go psycho. I never will know because I changed my phone number, email, and blocked her on every social media I had at the time. She even tried to send me a sorry message on psn. Negative.

Theo_Stormchaser • 5 points • 16 May, 2018 12:24 AM

Now you know why I have anxiety attacks at university.

comcain • 2 points • 16 May, 2018 12:36 AM

You should be scared.

Khaka-Laca • 6 points • 15 May, 2018 07:03 PM

Thanks for sharing, this video is gold. Definitely required reading.

IClogToilets • 3 points • 18 May, 2018 05:38 PM

A few years ago I took my 18 year old son to a lecture by a lawyer on how to protect himself. The lawyer recommended recording the audio of the encounter. That way, if you are accused you can prove consent. The way things worked during the Obama administration (not sure these days), a college was expected to throw you out on just an accusation. The male had to "prove" it was consensual. The only way to prove it was to record the encounter.

Lkeacentipede • 6 points • 16 May, 2018 01:14 AM

For the bros that are after casual sex, the post called "Comfort game in the me too Era" is worth reminding as well. Even if charges are dismissed or you are found innocent, a post of hers in social media and your reputation is screwed. Make sure she doesn't feel used until you get that all so valuable "prevention false rape accusation text"

metallicdrama • 2 points • 28 May, 2018 03:40 PM

NEVER TALK TO POLICE. NEVER. THEY ARE NOT GOING TO COLLECT EVIDENCE OF YOUR INNOCENCE. NEVER TALK TO POLICE. THE ONLY WORD YOU EVER SAY TO POLICE IS LAWYER. NEVER ANSWER A SINGLE QUESTION EVER. UNLESS IT IS WITH THE WORD LAWYER.

Grimsterr • 3 points • 16 May, 2018 04:46 AM

First rule of dealing with ~~rape accusations~~ and the police, keep your mouth shut.

Honestly, too many words in the title, if the police are talking to you, and it's not the band, shut the hell up.

Gman777 • 1 point • 15 May, 2018 09:36 PM

Thats the first rule of dealing with police in any situation.

CloudFoxy • 1 point • 16 May, 2018 01:05 AM

Or do what Dennis does and make sure it's always recorded lastdumra • 1 point • 16 May, 2018 12:57 PM

You are misreading why feminists are pushing this line. They fully expect to be called crazy for this line of "reasoning". But what they are doing is widening the Overton Window to their side. For the ones that don't understand how the Overton Window works, what they accomplish with this crazy and stupid article is make it look like what previously looked like an extremist position, suddenly look a lot more centered and even reasonable, thus harder to fight against.

This is the game that is being played on people who try to remain reasonable. By publishing crazy they push the discussion towards their side and make it look like the reasonable opponents are now extremists.

Goolan69 • 1 points • 15 May, 2018 06:05 PM [recovered]

Seriously....our whole society is against men, and alpha men in particular. I've been accused of this more than one time and it makes me sick. I've actually had to keep an attorney on retainer because it happens so much. Women are so entitled to their bodies, you can't even admire anyone anymore. Besides that, I don't need to rape women, I bench 425, I have a job that pays 7 figures, I have 3 homes, I'm shredded, and I have a bunch of friends who all have really incredible connections. No woman would refuse me. Period. They are sure after my money though.

DragonBornX45 • 15 points • 15 May, 2018 06:33 PM

Yeah sure bud, you think people can't see your post history? Lmao otter6461a • 9 points • 15 May, 2018 06:54 PM

Hmm, looks like no one has told him that saying the word "libtard" makes him look like a fucking idiot. And this is from a guy who probably agrees with his politics.

[deleted] • 0 points • 15 May, 2018 06:58 PM

6/10 you got me till half way through

Goolan69comment score below threshold • -5 points • 15 May, 2018 06:59 PM

Was it that I said I bench 425?

[deleted] • 1 point • 15 May, 2018 07:18 PM

All this is ridiculous, but if you turn it down by 30%. You're pretty good.

Andgelyo • -3 points • 15 May, 2018 06:18 PM

Gonna keep fighting so I can be like you one day

Goolan69 • -4 points • 15 May, 2018 06:20 PM

I appreciate it man! Keep grinding, keep your focus on what's important.

Lkeacentipede • 0 points • 16 May, 2018 01:11 AM

For the bros that are after casual sex, this is worth reminding as well. Even if charges are dismissed or you are found innocent, a post of hers in social media and your reputation is screwed. Make sure she doesn't feel used until you get that all so valuable "prevention false rape accusation text" https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/7w778m/comfort_game_in_the_metoo_era/

Dmva100 • 1 points • 15 May, 2018 08:04 PM [recovered]

Charges cannot be brought against you that result in a conviction if the follow steps are taken in most States in the US.

Regardless of whatever crimes you may have committed, there cannot be any witnesses for this to work, and you must use an alias.

If and when you are questioned by any form of law enforcement, you MUST say the following when addressed, regardless of what they say to your first (statement, question, command, etc.)

Raise your hand and plead your 5th, 6th, and 4th amendment rights in that exact order. You must be able to cite each amendment word for word. After this you must STFU no matter what. Obey an commands made by the officer, get his name and badge number, and say that 'I am not being detained and am free to go.' If they say that you are, know that the max time in most States is 30 mins. Make this known.

The reason you must say these amendments is because the officer will not be able to question you, or take you into custody for whatever reason. Even if they have a warrant, if you have stated these rights you dont have to identify yourself if they ask you who you are. If they demand ID say you don't have it on you, and since you have pleaded the 4th, they cannot search you or your property for ID.

You cannot be arrested or charged with this method. If they do charge and arrest you, the judge WILL throw out the case once your attorney makes it known that you stated your rights and the police violated them. Warrant or not.

explorer1357 • 13 points • 15 May, 2018 08:14 PM

Wouldnt this make a scene, like those sovereign citizen groups, and make everything worse?

BirdLaw51 • 9 points • 15 May, 2018 08:56 PM

Or they search you anyway with the multiple exceptions to the 4th amendment, then find you lied when you said you had no ID, and then charge you for lying to a police officer.

jazerac • 5 points • 15 May, 2018 08:37 PM

Do you have anything to back up these claims?

cptspiffy • 2 points • 15 May, 2018 11:55 PM

What a load of nonsense. You have no idea what you're talking about, nutbar.

Theo_Stormchasercomment score below threshold • -10 points • 15 May, 2018 08:07 PM*

No. Get allies and friends on your side and fight it from step one. This is a fight that picks you and you need to have a warrior mentality from day one. Get your family, friends, co-workers, and managers involved if possible. Be as transparent and truthful as possible. EDIT: this strategy only works if you are perceived as a man that has good moral character and does not chase women. Also, OBVIOUSLY don't tell white knights and women, as they won't believe you.

jazerac • 15 points • 15 May, 2018 09:01 PM

This is bad advice. Keep your mouth fucking shut when police are interrogating you. Anything you say "CAN AND WILL" be used against you.

Theo_Stormchaser • -2 points • 15 May, 2018 11:46 PM

In the U.S. You are not required to tell the police anything, and I agree with this. That's why I never said to run your mouth to them. Ultimately, you can pick one of two routes: shut up, bend over, and take it is the first. What I'm saying is go to the people she will use against you (not the cops) before she gets there and tell them the whole truth of the situation.

I've met so many cops who know about the men's rights movement and have our back, but I've also met foaming-at-the-mouth sexists. Ultimately, as human as they want to be, they're part of a system that incarcerates men disproportionately.

Pariah_Leviathan • 1 points • 18 May, 2018 03:50 PM [recovered]

Youre fucking stupid, hush your mouth

Theo_Stormchaser • 1 point • 18 May, 2018 04:34 PM

Spoken like someone with no intelligent counter-argument.

CommanderBlurf • 6 points • 15 May, 2018 08:40 PM

With your lawyer, sure. Openness to such a degree with anyone else is a liability, and you're deluding yourself if you think otherwise.

Theo_Stormchaser • -3 points • 15 May, 2018 08:43 PM

Well I guess I dodged a false allegation by deluding myself then.