

SJWs claim a scalp - Alpha Game Plan

January 10, 2018 | 36 upvotes | by redpillschool

---

---

Archived from theredarchive.com

---

Comments

---

dr_warlock • 14 points • 11 January, 2018 03:13 AM

Who gives a shit about the NFL and any other football program when you have exclusive concession stand and TV advertising contracts with the majority of their stadiums? Shut up and collect money.

Thotwrecker • 24 points • 11 January, 2018 02:36 AM

If you are going to do something as stupid and pointless as try to voice your opinion on twitter about SJ issues when you have an occupation you'd like to keep, the absolute worst thing you can do is back down to SJWs.

Getting involved and chiming in on the NFL debate was stupid, but what sealed the deal is that he didn't stand his ground. As much as I hate bringing things back to Trump, this is what Trump understands - he immediately seeks vindication by clapping back harder than he was clapped, in front of the same audience.

vast_rightwing • 1 points • 12 January, 2018 01:16 AM [recovered]

he said it as an off the cuff comment on an IR call. Wasnt something he put on twitter.

LambdaMale • 2 points • 12 January, 2018 12:19 PM

AND he didn't even take a stance on the actual topic of the protest. He only said that the fight between managers and some players should be resolved and that a lack of solution is a sign of weak leadership. SJWs heard what they wanted to hear: "The bosses should have put the boot on their uppity players necks, harr harr! mustache twirl!" bigcitytruth • 1 point • 19 January, 2018 07:52 AM

It's a dumb move by a CEO of a publicly-traded company to say ANYTHING political on the record. Conservative or Liberal, nobody wants to be labeled the "preferred pizza of neo-Nazis." The move left Papa John's wide open, so Domino's took the opportunity to swoop in and say their pizza sales didn't dip at all during football games, making Papa John's look even more foolish. The CEO was ousted because his decisions were damaging to the Papa John's long term business outlook. It was not some conspiracy by SJW's. It was purely business. The guy's reckless.

[deleted] • 2 points • 11 January, 2018 04:22 AM

Yep. I don't like Trump. Did vote for (or against) him in 2016. I might be forced to vote for him in 2020 though just seeing how much more insane things are getting.

isodomize • 1 points • 11 January, 2018 06:59 AM [recovered]

Def no reason what so ever to vote for Trump in 2020 but he does have a point about him snapping back. Its a main reason as to why he got elected. The only problem is that he takes it to international levels and looks like a child. Let's be honest here. Donald Trump is a child with a fifth grade reading level.

mungamungachoo • 28 points • 11 January, 2018 08:57 AM

WRONG.

In all seriousness, he gives so few fucks about what the globalist (feminist, cuck) leaders think that they are forced to operate in his reality. He is giving the world a master class in frame control, and people who watch CNN are too blinded by Russia-nothingness to realize it.

[deleted] • 5 points • 12 January, 2018 07:00 AM

As crazy as people say he is, the fact remains that he is making these "sane" folks respond on his level is interesting.

2 to 3 years ago you wouldn't believe the media and world leaders would say and do the shit they do in response to Trump. We had a shit fest on live news cause of him.

And this is in a society that forgets shit and moved on. Like the credit report leak. No one even talks about the fact that half the country has their shit put there to be used and the agency profited from it. But here we are 2 years into Trump and he's still the main focus.

juliusstreicher • 3 points • 13 January, 2018 11:45 AM*

You're buying into nonsensical thinking. Trump is a college graduate from when colleges made real scholars.

isodomize • 1 points • 13 January, 2018 04:35 PM [recovered]

All I had to do was listen to the 5 letter words he uses over and over. "Great, very big, nice, y" He doesn't even understand how the ozone and hairspray works. I'll provide a link if of him talking about the ozone if you want me to. The guy is a moron and a pos that has scammed thousands of people out of an education .

juliusstreicher • 1 point • 14 January, 2018 08:37 AM

You are one sad fuk.

I've researched it all, and, you're one sad fuk.