

Apparently, men are opting out to the point where women are starting to notice.

I know you're worried, but don't be. It's still all men's fault for not "manning up". It's certainly nothing to do with the women. So relax; the status quo will stay the same.

SoftHarem • 4 points • 19 June, 2013 09:22 AM

Men should man the fuck up, for themselves.

and no, manning up doesn't mean getting married with a 30 year old slut

SoftHarem • 3 points • 19 June, 2013 11:20 AM

No it does not, it means you raise your SMV and internalize game until you meet your desired mating goals.

I figured I'll make it completely clear for ladies visiting us...

"BECAUSE THE PLANE EXPLODED!"

they will be and soon

In my experience being a poor place is a good protection against it. Maybe I am wrong, but don't all these feminist American women have a financially secure, easy life, and they are bored? I am Hungarian, and the general poverty and financial insecurity is in the favor of provider men here, I don't think feminist ideology can change that, ideology does not pay the bills. The worst thing feminist can do is to teach women to cheat on their provider men.

Yes, this is a good list and indeed they are related. This is actually something I forgotten to add. First world nations have law enforcement so efficient that a Bill Gates type clever beta nerd can become a billionaire. Outside them we would have been trampled into the concrete - as making money means having to do illegal things, having to deal with mafia threats and so on. I mean those "We know where your wife shops and where your kids go to school so you better not participate in this tender if you don't want something to happen to them." type of phone calls in the night that are not unheard of in non first world business take quite some nuts to deal with...

I honestly have thought about moving to an arab country, Saudi Arabia etc, where men are men, but I'm new to the redpill, so I've yet to see if there's any hope in using it to get what I want from relationships.

That is really the other extreme. The sane middle is places like Ukraine.

Nah, just be more picky and make your intentions clear.

This is an article about men opting out of dating. It's important to distinguish between this kind of opt-out and the marriage opt-out, as they're two very different phenomenon.

Men who opt-out of dating are, almost by definition, undesirable anyway. You can argue that they should improve themselves and/or try harder (or you could give them the blue pill advice: be patient, there's someone out there for you <3 <3 <3) but it's a long row to hoe and their success will always be limited.

The men who women want to date are not opting out of dating, because those men are having a great time. The men who are opting out are virtually invisible to women below 30. Don't expect any sort of societal change from this.

Men opting out of marriage, on the other hand, might be more noticeable. It's more of a men's rights issue though because as people talk about it, they'll be talking about the inequalities that men face.

The real bomb will be effective, reversible, non-barrier birth control for men, and the apocalypse would be a so-called "paper abortion" (in which men who are informed they've gotten a girl pregnant have a week or so to opt-out of parenthood, giving up all parental rights, but also getting out of child support). Those things would bring about major societal change.

[deleted] • 6 points • 19 June, 2013 10:54 AM

Don't overestimate it. Hypergamy means women will give no fucks about the bottom 80% of men opting out, they wouldn't want anything to do with them anyway.

[deleted] • 3 points • 19 June, 2013 12:08 PM

I don't necessarily agree. Certainly for women in their 20s you are right, but your average 30+ woman looking to start a family has no choice but to fish for the best they can find in that 80%.

Damn. I hate to do this, but I have to remove this thread since you didn't use the no participation link per the rules.
