

A little something for those of you who have the feeling that women are no good and can't be trusted.

May 13, 2013 | 90 upvotes | by Whisper

---

http://np.reddit.com/r/fPUA/comments/1e9fz1/attracting\_alphas\_why\_do\_men\_hate\_us/

---

Archived from theredarchive.com

---

Comments

---

ekjohnson9 • 28 points • 13 May, 2013 08:51 PM

She demonstrates the use of action rather than words to convince people. Pretty level headed, empathetic, and logical.

redpillschool • 16 points • 13 May, 2013 08:59 PM

Because what have we been preaching? Ignore words, pay attention to actions!

ekjohnson9 • 2 points • 13 May, 2013 09:19 PM

Duh

Jrstoneart • 46 points • 13 May, 2013 08:19 PM

That was beautiful. I wish all women were like that.

pirateundies • 31 points • 13 May, 2013 08:53 PM

Honestly, I think deep down the majority of women want to be. The more I meet girls who aren't man-hating or generally complete assholes the more I notice that a lot of girls believe the same stuff that fooled us for the same reasons: it's what they've been told their whole life.

And under it all they have this little tick in the back of their mind that something is off and they can't quite place what it is...

HumanSockPuppet • 33 points • 13 May, 2013 09:14 PM

I think deep down the majority of women want to be.

Definitely. The one thing feminism ISN'T doing is producing hordes of happy, fulfilled, satisfied women.

Hormander • 16 points • 13 May, 2013 10:01 PM

Imagine you're a kangaroo. You're genetically wired to jump. But imagine you've been told your whole life that you should not jump but rather walk. So you walk until you get used to walking everyday.

But deep inside yourself, you feel like jumping. Because that's your true nature.

And whatever feminists kangaroos can tell you, you are made to jump. Thus, sooner or later, you will jump.

thecajunone • 3 points • 14 May, 2013 06:18 AM

Ha ha, this was just bad. But you get it Hormander. Props.

pirateundies • 4 points • 13 May, 2013 09:22 PM

Yep. And then these girls enter adulthood lacking an important skill set to make them good partners just like men do.

Well... men learn about being good partners as far as provider, but not overall.

[deleted] • 3 points • 13 May, 2013 11:05 PM

Imagine: HORDES of happy fulfilled satisfied women.

HumanSockPuppet • 17 points • 13 May, 2013 11:27 PM

Terrifying notion, isn't it?

Soon after people around them might become happy too, and everyone could start leading lives free of insecurity or unattainable goals, and full of mutual support, joy, and playfulness.

SuperNinKenDo • 4 points • 14 May, 2013 12:04 AM

The Horror!

[deleted] • 2 points • 14 May, 2013 01:57 AM

THE HORROR! THE HORROR! dies

Lord_Perseus • 1 point • 14 May, 2013 02:58 AM

Please PLEASE no more you're scaring me!!!! People aren't meant to be happy we're supposed to be miserable souls who spend our days jumping thru the hoops our feminazi overlords set up for us.

nicethingyoucanthave • 23 points • 13 May, 2013 10:51 PM

It's ironic that feminism says, "these behaviors are a cultural construct" when the truth is, the behaviors are instinctive - feminism is a cultural construct.

It's like there's this dial labeled "femininity" and the natural set-point for it is around 7. Maybe culture pushed it up to 8. For some people, a minority of the population, their natural set point was 5 or lower. And that's cool. And I'll even accept that in the past, society would have treated such people poorly. It's good that we changed that.

But what feminism did was to say, "5 is the natural set point, and all you other women only think you're at 8" and they point to real things in the culture that have boosted the 7 to an 8.

So then feminism, which is arguably a stronger cultural influence than even religion has been in the US, applies cultural pressure that pushes everyone down to a 5. Everybody is unhappy, and feminism says "well, that's just because you're misogynistic, because the fact that it's a 5 proves 8 was a cultural construct"

People spend their lives hating men and imagining patriarchy because the narrative makes sense. They feel unhappy, and the narrative is that it's all patriarchy's fault.

[deleted] • 0 points • 14 May, 2013 03:50 AM

The same tick that is in the back of all our minds.

That something is wrong with how people act and I can't quite pinpoint what it is.

[deleted] 13 May, 2013 09:15 PM

[permanently deleted]

Hypnot0ad • 8 points • 13 May, 2013 11:33 PM

I was thinking the same. I entered the text into an analyzer on a website, <http://www.hackerfactor.com/GenderGuesser.php#Analyze> .

Results:

Genre: Informal

Female = 2493

Male = 2308

Difference = -185; 48.07%

Verdict: Weak FEMALE

Weak emphasis could indicate European.

venereveritas • 4 points • 14 May, 2013 12:57 AM

How accurate is this? I just pasted some of my works and got this:

Genre: Informal

Female = 557

Male = 1470

Difference = 913; 72.52%

Verdict: MALE

Genre: Formal

Female = 771

Male = 1196

Difference = 425; 60.8%

Verdict: MALE

My sex and gender are both female.

Sergnb • 8 points • 14 May, 2013 01:10 AM it is very possible to sound male while typing, these algorithms should never be taken 100% seriously.

As for the poster... well I don't know about you, but I think someone that posts in /r/bigboobproblems might be female.

ss_camaro • 1 point • 14 May, 2013 08:54 AM*

Verdict: Weak FEMALE

Lulz. 'Fleetingwish' a fPUA writes:

Ideally you want to hit an male who is the upper 50% of the scale, the higher in the scale that you reach depends on your value, how much "niceness" you're willing to give up for "attractiveness", how much work you're willing to put in, etc. My argument simply is that the higher you reach, the more happy you'll be. Though being all the way on the red end is definetly not for everybody (even though those are the men who we are the most attracted to).

And there you have it boyz. MRA-away.

HumanSockPuppet • 5 points • 14 May, 2013 06:31 AM

I know her IRL. She's female.

...or a Cylon. Not certain about that one yet.

Ricky_Spanish • 2 points • 14 May, 2013 12:13 PM

Jeez. Not to break le circlejerk, but did you see the title of her post? Alphas. They are already like that. To alphas. As far as the pill, it doesn't really change a thing.

[deleted] • 17 points • 13 May, 2013 11:10 PM

See? This is exactly what we have been saying on this sub all along! Rollo has been saying, Roosh has been saying it, M3 has been saying it, Dalrock has been saying it, Deti has been saying it. All that we men want from women is that they act like women. Be pleasant and try to look nice, is that so goddamn hard? Why is it met with hostility? I agree that it could possibly be a man who posted it, so that women would approach it with an open mind, but I think it's awesome that a woman actually gets it.

iamme221 points 13 May, 2013 11:50 PM [recovered]

It's great this woman has decided to give a shit and write a piece about it.

The overnight white knighting here is overwhelming though.

I'm not upset with women contrary to her beliefs. I get frustrated sometimes but I'm not upset.

Let me make this as clear as possible. Some bitch patting me on the back saying "It's Okay" isn't going to all of sudden release all the hurt and little men syndrome some you say we have who can't entertain the idea of a different point of view without resulting to ad hominem and make me say "women are god's gift to the earth".

This sub isn't to fucking rebuild your trust and respect for the opposite sex.

This sub isn't discuss male inequalities on very respectful terms. There's MRA boards for that.

This sub is for the reality outside your front door and putting yourself as a man first.

That's all I have to say, I know all the white knights got custom styles turned off to make sure this is another r/seduction. Downvote away.

[deleted] • 7 points • 14 May, 2013 01:30 AM

Agreed. It should also be taken with a grain of salt, we all know how little a woman's words mean when we can not observe her actions.

[deleted] • 12 points • 13 May, 2013 09:50 PM

Man, the day of my divorce, a girl friend of mine called me and asked me how I was doing. I said that I was fine and that I very much appreciated her call. It was literally the first time in my 10 or so years of adulthood that anyone asked me how I was doing in a genuine, empathetic and completely unexpected way. It was such a nice feeling and I wish I could say I knew more women like her.

MarkyBhoy10116 points 13 May, 2013 08:56 PM [recovered]

Sometimes it's easy to forget there are good women out there.

redpillschool • 36 points • 13 May, 2013 08:59 PM

This is a nice piece, don't get me wrong. But chasing unicorns remains foolish.

[deleted] • 8 points • 13 May, 2013 09:45 PM

Also my reaction

dropit_sphere • -2 points • 13 May, 2013 10:19 PM

Particularly because what would you do if you found one? You have now identified some alpha's new girlfriend.

cooledcannon • 3 points • 14 May, 2013 02:16 AM what if you are an alpha though?

dropit_sphere • -1 points • 14 May, 2013 02:36 AM

Then good, hang on to her. That said, if you are that alpha, you can probably get most girls to behave like this. Your 1st and 20th girlfriend could be the same person, but #20 will seem better because she is better, because you're better.

cooledcannon • 0 points • 14 May, 2013 02:37 AM is it more effort to try and get girls to behave like that, or try and wait until you find one who does that naturally?

dropit_sphere • 0 points • 14 May, 2013 02:39 AM

Depends on your location. I suspect if you're in a rural area it would be easier to find, in an urban area it would be easier to train.

cooledcannon • 0 points • 14 May, 2013 02:44 AM yeah, i live in a suburban place and it seems more similar to urban than rural. as much as it may be easier to train, there seems to be a ceiling to how much you can train someone whos close minded. otoh, if shes great naturally, all you have to do is "train" all the flaws out and you have a near perfect chick. or am i wrong, and is there no ceiling?

30303030303030 • 6 points • 13 May, 2013 11:16 PM

even a good woman will get bored with loving-cuddly beta provider, it's inevitable

racontemmoi • 6 points • 13 May, 2013 09:08 PM

Good women yes, but incentives matter. Don't think that one of these good women won't divorce-rape you one day.

HumanSockPuppet • 9 points • 13 May, 2013 09:24 PM

This is an excellent piece, and here's why:

People often neglect to examine their own wants or needs before subscribing to a particular idea or movement - or, they neglect to consider that each person is responsible for their own life, and that it is not their duty (or their right) to decide what other people should want for themselves.

So people will make themselves puppets to an ideology, without stopping to imagine how its fulfillment might affect their own happiness.

Each action you take in life must be preceded by an assessment of your own goals, and how this particular action will bring you closer to those goals.

If most women stopped for a moment and thought about what it is they want in life (emotional connection, a sense of belonging, children, and a strong, dutiful, and protective partner), they would realize that being masculine, competitive, and independent (in the best cases) and confrontational, self-entitled, and openly hostile (in the worst cases) are not the most efficient routes to getting what they're after.

I think /r/fPUA is going to be a significant step in the process of helping women get the happiness they want out of their lives, and in helping men rediscover a their trust, empathy, and passion for the women from whom they have become so removed.

socal83 • 9 points • 13 May, 2013 08:45 PM further proof that all shit testing, coquetry, hypergamy, etc, etc is largely unconscious. they're just programmed to act that way.

it's like men staring at tits. it just happens.

[deleted] • 3 points • 16 May, 2013 03:16 PM

What is the likelihood that that post was self-delusion and snowflakism? I mean the same principle as when a man says he prefers small breasts and cares about humour more than looks, to attempt to set himself out from other men to get the girl he wants.

Whisper • 1 point • 16 May, 2013 03:26 PM

What's important is not why someone is doing something, but what they are actually doing.

If a woman is showing compassion for men because it makes her feel special, then she is showing compassion for men. If she is claiming to show compassion for men in order to be treated as special, but not actually doing so, then that is what she is doing.

What FleetingWish is doing is urging other women to try showing compassion and consideration for men, and telling them men will love them for it. We know this to be true.

Men are not vending machines where you push the sex button and commitment comes out, but we are sensible human beings who will stick around with those who behave in the way someone who cares about our feelings would be expected to behave.

Ultimately, what FleetingWish does in her own life is a little beside the point. She is telling other women a strategy that is beneficial for both women and for men.

favours_of_the_moon • 8 points • 13 May, 2013 09:20 PM

Here was my response:

WOW. A woman who is actually interested in how a man feels?

There is a reason your room mate responded "like nobody had ever stopped and asked him how he was." I would be astonished in this situation as well. This is due to what we call the "Female Ego Quantum Singularity."

We believe that women are phenomenally self absorbed. In fact, until the age of 30, when the shoe begins to be on the other foot and men begin to gain advantage, no woman will EVER, EVER, EVER pay attention to you unless it inflates her ego to do so. In fact, if you look at, speak to, notice, or walk past a woman, she will generally automatically assume that it is because she is so godlike and awesome that you are willing to grovel and scrape for her attention.

Even if you aren't. Of course if you try explaining that to her, it will just make her believe that you are vying for even more for her attention. Hence, the feelings of disgust for the situation.

So yeah, actually paying attention to something other than the inflation of your ego is astonishing. Especially if it occurs before you "hit the wall" around the age of 30 and society no longer falls at your feet telling you how awesome you are. I guess it "takes guts" to get over yourself in that situation. So... PROPS TO YOU GIRL!

lol

I know what you're thinking now. Or FEELING now. You're feeling defensive. But no, I'm not saying this, because women never paid or pay attention to me. I'm saying this, because they only do so when it inflates their ego to do so. Until they start getting older and hence, desperate. But then that becomes more of an ego defense. Still, it's something else entirely.

Either way, it's because of her complete absorption in herself.

MarkyBhoy1016 points 13 May, 2013 09:28 PM [recovered]

Only one woman isn't like that. My dear old Mum.

favours_of_the_moon • 5 points • 13 May, 2013 09:47 PM

You're one up on me. LOL.

[deleted] • 0 points • 14 May, 2013 03:01 AM

I read ur comments and u sound like a dick.

favours_of_the_moon • 1 point • 14 May, 2013 04:59 AM

I prefer the term MOTHERFUCKER.

chiefroaringpeacock • 2 points • 14 May, 2013 04:17 AM

This is the beginnings of a female redpill isn't it? We can work together to spread the message of the sexes cooperating to displace the war between them that has been initiated by feminists. This is the first post I've seen that has given me hope that things can be fixed.

[deleted] • 1 point • 15 May, 2013 01:39 AM

tis beautiful isnt it

[deleted] • 1 point • 14 May, 2013 11:36 AM

Who thinks that? The folks who go for the Gabi from Desperate Housewives type because they look good, then get surprised that they are dishonest? If a woman has nothing but looks to offer, she must be dishonest. Go for the ones who have other things to offer.

redpillschool • 2 points • 14 May, 2013 01:07 PM

I'll totally have sex with that college degree.

[deleted] • 1 point • 14 May, 2013 02:11 PM

Haha. No, I meant largely being the kind person who is good to be with during the 95% of awake time that is not spent having sex. For example an interesting conversationalist.

Whisper • 1 point • 14 May, 2013 08:05 PM

Who thinks that?

Look through the responses to this post. I think you'll see a few.

Really, there are two schools of thought in TRP. One is that women are genetically destined to be selfish, bubbleheaded perpetual teenagers who do not and cannot understand their real motivations, will do whatever they want and rationalize it away, and must be constantly managed lest they destroy society.

The other is that the women around us in the first world have been infected by a toxic ideology that makes them ashamed to be feminine, encourages them to treat men like things without rights or feelings, and prevents them from growing into mental adulthood by refusing to let anyone draw boundaries for them or impose responsibilities on them.

[deleted] • 2 points • 15 May, 2013 07:40 AM

Interesting... I am clearly of the second opinion. Hypergamy etc. are genetic, but to think the perpetual teenagerhood is anything but cultural and political is really shortsighted - outside the English speaking countries it is generally not true, not even in other first world nations. And it was not true even in English-speaking countries a few generations ago.

It is just that somehow feminism had this effect in the Angloworld. In Germany for example feminism generally made women a bit like men, careerist, clear thinking, motivated, hard working. The kind of get blind drunk, fuck random guys drunk and then regret it and call it rape, think life is one big party, be fat and be in utter denial about it, so entirely immature behavior I saw in the UK and I assume America is kinda similar would be seen as entirely horrifying for German women.

I don't really know how it happened, but my general impression is that while e.g. German feminism focused on the workplace, career, professional advancement and with that made women into clearly thinking, disciplined professionals, Angloworld feminism somehow focused more on sexual liberation, sexual autonomy, that sort of thing. Somehow it got the idea that bratty behavior without self-control equals liberation and autonomy. Perhaps if we would study feminist literature it would be easier to pin it down.

BTW same with gays. Gay movements in the German speaking countries generally do not try to be very queer and very camp, do not "celebrate" it as an expression of autonomy and contempt for bourgeois values.

I remember how surprised I was when I found out that a large number of British left-wing intellectuals hate Tolkien. Because, you know, all that orcs being evil stuff is covered racism and crap like that. So extreme views would not really fly in Continental Europe. I think the old continent is economically to the left of, but culturally to the right of the Angloworld.

Lord_Perseus • 1 point • 14 May, 2013 03:11 AM

Nice to see there still are some good women out there, spend too much time around here & you lose sight of this. Only problem is "some" isn't very much.

The SMP can be described as a sort of reverse Russian Roulette where every chamber of the gun but 1 has a bullet in it & you win when you find the 1 that doesn't have a slug in it. With odds like that no man, other than the most delusional blue pill betas are willing to take the risk.

It does seem there is a red pill awakening of sorts amongst women but they are much farther behind us in their journey, their numbers far fewer than ours. We need to keep this in mind.

We can maybe allow ourselves to hope that the day will come when women will purge themselves of the feminazi poison & embrace their femininity once again, which BTW is an incredibly powerful force itself contrary to feminazi propoganda. However that day will not come soon, but rather it will be a long hard slog. We must steel ourselves gentlemen.

StuffBetweenThings • 1 point • 14 May, 2013 12:33 AM

Yep, that sums up SOME of what men want when searching for the worlds best and most unattainable mate.

It doesn't matter if the woman shows caring qualities like their mother used to, if a man's feminine or non alpha qualities do surface for longer than a few moments that man will be seen as unattractive.

Having just watched the worlds sexiest actor play Tony Stark in the latest Iron Man film (spoiler alert)... he handles a couple of bouts of 'heavy anxiety issues' for a total onscreen time of something like 60 seconds.

Dreidhen • 1 point • 14 May, 2013 03:23 AM

The question to ask yourself is whether you believe mass media entertainment likes that shapes your reality or mirrors it. Either way, the reality it affects may only be your own.

StuffBetweenThings • 0 points • 14 May, 2013 03:56 AM

By design, pop-culture reinforces mostly existing values onto people in a relatable way. So in reality it has the power to shape peoples beliefs. As someone who wants to control how I appear to others, it affects how I might act but not necessarily what I believe.

Jimbodini • -1 points • 13 May, 2013 09:37 PM

this is an interesting subreddit that will get destroyed.

cron_nin • 1 point • 14 May, 2013 12:20 AM

By whom?

Bhorzo • 1 point • 13 May, 2013 11:32 PM destroyed by what?

MdPhdVictor • 0 points • 14 May, 2013 03:58 AM

I think there should be a Red Pill Dating Site that requires a Red Pill test in order to get in and register, you know like the ones you get in job interviews an advanced psychological test.