

How to respond to "who says you'll even get a date"?

June 12, 2019 | 5 upvotes | by Casanova-Quinn

So I'm texting this girl (I'd rate a solid 7) on a dating app, and I asked her how her weekend went. She replies that she stayed home because she "threw out her back". I see an opportunity to tease:

Me: Are you going to show up to our date in a wheelchair? I'm not pushing you around lol

Her: Lol not at all and who says you'll even get a date lol

Now "who says you'll even get a date" is clearly a shit test, but I haven't encountered it before.

I haven't responded back yet. Any ideas?

It's banter. Say fucking anything. Change the subject if you want.

"I'll pick some place wheelchair accessible..." Move on

Yep. The problem OP has is talking her too seriously.

These type of questions...I mean, if you just ask what to say and regurgitate it, whats going to be left of your own personality bro?

This is my first question in this sub, I'm not constantly asking what to say. Chill dude, I was just drawing a blank on this one.

You know, the basic theory behind why women shit test is to weed out men who can't handle minor obstacles, and you're kind of showing how that could work here.

"Okay so you can walk. I'll still bring the wheelchair. You'll need it after I destroy that pussy."

Very rarely does anything on TRP make me laugh. This is perfect.

It's hard to gauge over text but that doesn't sound like a hard shit test to pass. There's a number of ways to pass it. What I would do is ignore that message, change the subject to something more interesting for a few messages, then say "I have to go to bed, how about we continue this talk tomorrow at (Location)."
