this is exactly why females don't care about your struggles, they are waiting at the finish line to fuck the winner. Tells you all you need to know about the female nature.

Even then I'm not too sure. There's plenty of women who are willing to ride the train of a man they believe will grind til he makes it.

As soon as you hit a rough patch though or decide you want to go in a direction that doesn't give them the quality of life they were hoping for and they jump ship for the next billy whose busting his ass.

Not all of em are waiting at the finish, a lot are standing at the halfway point trying to run along whoever looks like they'll make it. Be careful out there boys and invest in yourselves not playing roulette with dates.

I helped my ex-fiancé to enter med school after 4 years of pre-med trying unsuccessfully, and what did she do immediately after getting in? yeah you bet she got herself a brand new boyfriend outta nowhere, that fucking destroyed me, after years of patience and dedication, supporting her in her struggles and cheering her up, teaching her how to be an effective student, dealing with stress and what not, that was the prize I got ...

HitTheWall88 • 45 points • 26 September, 2020 12:05 AM

Supported my ex-wife while she went to school for nursing. All 4 years, she worked part time on the weekends and lived in another city over. She would come home often at first, then it slowly diminished, then it stopped altogether. She then abandoned me and our 2 year old son, cheated on me with a co-worker at her fast food job, then we got a divorce and I got full custody of our son at 2 years old. He's now 17.

natec96 • 17 points • 26 September, 2020 04:21 AM

Congrats on the favourable outcome of a shitty situation!

HitTheWall88 • 23 points • 26 September, 2020 04:39 AM

Oh yeah, I won the big contest there. She's an idiot. She only sees him once a year. Her choice. And she pays me child support every month, and has since he was 5.

natec96 • 13 points • 26 September, 2020 04:53 AM

Damn dude, I'm not sure I would even be able to be very upset after that. Especially in a system that's rigged against you (if in US). Honestly happy to hear it all.

HitTheWall88 • 10 points • 26 September, 2020 05:46 AM

Nitrothacat • 35 points • 25 September, 2020 08:58 PM

I feel it. I supported my ex while she worked her pos call center jobs (multiple because she would get borderline fired) and while she was doing the beginning of nursing school, helped her study and allowed her to have a nice life because of my income. She had the gall to tell me she thinks Im unambitious at the end. Yet I make 20k more a year than she will as a nurse lmao.

Dont settle for that shit lol. Im with someone now who already has a good job that makes similar momey to me and isnt a child mentally. So much happier and less stressed.

SiaSara • 11 points • 25 September, 2020 11:48 PM

Lol I supported my ex bf who had depression for five years while he didn't have a job and I did. He had the audacity to ask why I wasn't taking on overtime instead of wanting to relax at home on weekend as he wanted "fancier" holidays. If you give someone an inch they'll take a mile. I'm never financially supporting a partner again. I got burned badly.

moorekom[M] • 14 points • 26 September, 2020 08:06 PM

Guys,

Stop reporting this comment for Rule 1 violation. Although we do not allow man shaming here, that does not mean you should not hold men responsible here. You absolutely should (without using man shaming language) and Rule 1 is there to point out that people often don't hold women responsible for their choices and instead shift the blame to men. If the story by OP is true, the guy is a selfish piece of shit and a leach. Good on OP to be rid of him.

OP, remember that relationships are all about give and take. That said, that does not mean one party always gives and the other always takes. Vet carefully from the beginning.

natec96 • 8 points • 26 September, 2020 04:24 AM

My dad leaned on my mom completely and neglectfully, my brother is being fucked over by some euro trash, never support someone. If they love you they'll work for equality and fairness amongst you

SiaSara • 4 points • 25 September, 2020 11:51 PM

I had an ex BF do the same. I supported him financially for five years as he had depression. I was ok with it at the time until I ended up getting into a bad car crash and got PTSD. I told him I wanted to get a lower paid job closer to home because I was having severe anxiety driving and he left me. People suck.

natec96 • 6 points • 26 September, 2020 12:12 AM

I'm sorry that happened to you, people do suck. Atleast the majority, not everyone though. I wish you the best

SiaSara • 5 points • 26 September, 2020 01:29 AM

Thank you - wish you the best too. My friend explained it best. She said in life there's givers and there's takers and you just need to find your tribe. After the breakup I became very cynical and kind of self loathing because I blamed myself for being too giving. But I realised it's just who I am as a person and it's fine as long as I meet people who are the same way.

DaftZack • 5 points • 26 September, 2020 09:40 PM

Hearing a woman say this gives me a small glimmer of hope. Like, Planck length size, but it's a glimmer none the less.

fishstraws • 3 points • 26 September, 2020 02:33 AM

I've always hated driving because of the dangers, I totally understand the fear specially after a crash. Agreed a lot of people suck, sometimes it's better to look out for yourself only. Glad you're okay.

SiaSara • 2 points • 26 September, 2020 03:14 AM

Yep honestly I was having panic attacks daily after it happened and I had to drive on the same route the accident happened and kept reimagining my car spinning out of control. I'm glad I'm okay too - thanks

You're NAWALting and breaking the rules. There are not 3% good girls, there are 3% girls who are not doing bad. What makes those 3% not bad is that they are being put in check either by their community, husbands, fathers, or social awareness. At any moment they could turn and become part of the 97%. No sense in saying, "find one that isn't like the others", there are no "others", just those that are capitalizing more in their current situation than they would if they hopped back on the CC.

I'm feeling that. There's def going to be miscommunication when the colors mean different things to different people. With myself I know my RP definition today would have felt like a straight black pill if I had been directly exposed to it a few years ago. At this moment I'm seeing the black pill as an intense RP with explicitly dark connotations. It's known as a pill so red that it would seem black to a layman.

Damn. Never heard it put so elegantly and succinctly. Waiting at the finish line sums up why they don't care about one's struggles, why one is made to feel good by them when one is winning, and why one is dismissed when another man has a perceived advantage to hit the finish line first.

Preselection

Roissy: "No woman wants a man who no other woman wants."

The advent of text messaging and social media has been a boon to men and Red Pill. Women can't hide it anymore, and they're not even trying.

Even better, the entities that used to run interference for women and act as their covers, alibis, and moral shields can't do it anymore. Mass media, schools, churches, scout groups - all the usual coconspirators keeping boys and men in the dark - they can't do it anymore. Oh, we still have "conservative" protestant "family ministries" like Dr. James Dobson's groups, Family Life Today, NewLife radio run by two time divorced three times married Steve Arterburn - they are still trying to hold the line and are doing their "REMAIN CALM!! ALL IS WELL!!" shtick. Oh, we still have Vox and Medium and other e-magazines still talking about how men ain't shit and men are the cause of all women's problems and all the problems in today's SMP and MMP are solely and only the fault of men. But more and more men are getting it. Truth is out and it can't be stopped....

hopscotchking • 109 points • 25 September, 2020 03:45 PM

That's exactly why women think virgins are gross while with men it's the exact opposite.

[deleted] • 68 points • 25 September, 2020 04:39 PM

Women want a winner, not someone who claims they can win. Men want a mascot, not an allstar VIP they have to compete with.

X-Man51 • 11 points • 26 September, 2020 10:03 AM

Aldabruzzo • 82 points • 25 September, 2020 04:58 PM*

but more important, dude, is women vomiting out their inner thoughts onto social media, leaving breadcrumb trails to the Red Pill.....

What else can you say about a woman who says, ON SOCIAL MEDIA: "I like this guy, and I want to fuck him... but how come no one else is fucking him??"

Simple as "I want him to fuck me and only me, but i want him to be ABLE to fuck other women. I just don't want him to actually go out and fuck other women."

"I don't want him to cheat, but I want him to be ABLE to cheat."

"I want a guy that all my girlfriends want to fuck, but he will never fuck them even if they throw themselves at him and he wants to, but doesn't."

This girl says it better than I ever could. Hey, gents: Don't believe me. Believe what this woman says, RIGHT THERE ON HER SOCIAL MEDIA for all the world to read.

Typo-MAGAshiv • 49 points • 25 September, 2020 05:15 PM

Aldabruzzo • 52 points • 25 September, 2020 05:16 PM

Women: I want a hawt guy that can fuck lots of women.

Also women: AAARRRGHHHH how come Chad cheated on meeeee!

[deleted] 26 September, 2020 04:37 AM

[removed]

Aldabruzzo • 4 points • 26 September, 2020 12:40 PM*

Not exactly the same.

For women, part of a man's core appeal and attractiveness is not only that other women want to fuck him, but more importantly, that he has fucked other women. It shows he knows how to do this. He knows how to attract women , conduct himself with them, get what he wants from them, and handle them. That is no small achievement.

Almost all women are attractive enough. More importantly, it is definitely NOT part of a woman's appeal that other men fucked her. In fact that detracts from a woman's appeal. Plus, it is the easiest thing in the world for a woman to get sex. Any woman can do that. Not every man can. Men like virgin women. Women absolutely hate Men who have never had sex or who can't get sex. I have never seen such hatred and vitriol as that which women direct at unattractive men and sexually unsuccessful men. You women absolutely detest them.

Honest_Solution • 108 points • 25 September, 2020 03:30 PM

A lot of men won't let you know how many women they have. A lot of girls that friendzone guys make the mistake that just because they don't want them then no one must want them. Then they get all bent out of shape when the guy gets a girlfriend that's a major upgrade from the girl that friendzoned him.

[deleted] • 6 points • 26 September, 2020 03:29 AM

Well, as the liberal boomer generation exits, and the cautious millennial generation takes over, there seems to be less reckless action taken just because that's the thing you do. Millennials are not signing up for 30 year mortgages, they're not getting married out of high school/college, they're not holding the same jobs for their entire lives, they're not expecting the government to be supporting them in their old age. That was the benefit sold to the boomers, to put in the work and then relax. The world doesn't work that way anymore. I don't think most of them really realize that money has been long gone, but millennials, the ones getting divorced now, the ones losing their jobs, the ones with college debt still, the ones that found out early there is not going to be that security blanket like their parents haphazardly allowed the state to take control of, they do realize their jobs aren't secure, their marriages can be broken for any reason and whenever, their kids taken at the whims of a woman by the courts and police, their investments taken, and the police to oppress them into submission with all of those things. Those people, that man sitting at the bar making a new plan, he isn't just willy nilly chasing blind dreams of his parents anymore. He's protecting his own.

But, I digress. There are many many men that will keep repeating the same mistakes that enslave them. Women are the last frontier of purpose for men without God, and society has allowed a godless people to rule over them. Without God, there are no morals, no objective morals that we can all agree on. Without cohesion and an understood, logical conclusion we can reasonably assume the next man has come to, then there can never be peace, law and order. Only chaos and tyrannical government will ever come out of it.

I think that is the greatest rationalization we have for the existence of God, that without a purpose beyond this life, there is only despair. Why would a man willingly choose despair if he has the free will to choose salvation? Not believing in God creates a burden, like a lie to himself for comfort would, because clearly a man exists and only a causal creator would have created him. He cannot deny his existence and so cannot deny he was created. But he lies to himself, that it is possible there was no creator because then he feels a sense of control and manifested destiny, even if it he spites him so.

There are no absolutes in this world. A man is made up of tiny massless particles bound up in inexplicable fields. A man does not understand why the earth pulls him into it, only that it does so consistent with everything else. The man does not need a device to tell him such is so. He chooses to believe that it does because believing it doesn't is more complicated. Same is true for God, to believe there is absolutely no evidence says that we are the ultimate truth when clearly we are not.

We are more significant than we realize because we can't possibly know what the limit of the universe to create environments that foster consciousness and sentience. Why would a man say he is insignificant if held no other relatable evidence that showed him he was? Why would an intelligent man willingly conclude he is far outmatched by the cosmological greatness of the universe if did not possess any evidence of something greater than his own creator? The love and mercy of his creator must be true or he wouldn't exist in the capacity to contemplate and cherish that love. Can't we agree that the love a man can have is unique in all the observable universe? Can't we agree that a man has the granted or provided with the power to base his freely made decisions upon that love? If so, then why would any man choose to base his decisions on the opposite of love? What possible gain can come from vengeance, affliction, disgust, deception, ignorance, arrogance, and self-appropriation of the void? I know of none, but I know of only a few of the possibilities an omnipotent creator could benefit me with and it is so much greater than anything else I could ever imagine.

If you believe this, that you are here by a miracle, grace and mercy based in love, then you believe in a purpose greater than yourself or anyone and anything; you believe in an objective moral foundation and most importantly you have hope, which drives faith, which drives happiness. It's simple for man to believe he was chosen, and very hard for a man to believe he will be nothing from which he came.

Even more so if you are married. Wearing a wedding ring at the bar and secretly taking it off when a girl approaches you is a thing.

Loser white sexpats think that going to the Philippines to get a mail order bride is the solution to their problem. They don't realize that they're only being used for a green card and to send money to their relatives in the Philippines. Hoes come in all colors.

In my club days, had a friend that would often bring his lil sister & her friend(s) (solid 7/8) to the clubs. He'd buy them drinks, danced with him & he busted their balls the entire evening.

One day I asked him what was up with this routine. He drops a revelation that was eye-opening. He knew that walking in with 2 hot girls in your arms & carrying on with them that he was being watched...by other women. He was always getting a TON of attention from females that wondered who he was/what was up with him.

Females will ALWAYS take other females word for it. Seen it, tried it, it just works.

PlaceboKoyote • 8 points • 27 September, 2020 05:51 PM

So next time, after this whole corona thing..., when my best friend wants me to go to a club with her, i should do so instead of going somewhere else alone looking for a girl? Never thought that way, i expected the opposite like seeing me with another girl would turn them away. That's why i went alone if at all.

taoofmojo • 49 points • 25 September, 2020 05:37 PM

Women need to know that he has been preselected. Ever notice that women come out of the wood work once you have a GF? This is the reason why. Fuck even if women are looking at you, other women start looking at you as well.

Women date like they shop. If they have a product that nobody wants it's a useless product. If she has a product that many women want it's very valuable.

dasanman69 • 38 points • 25 September, 2020 05:51 PM

It's called social validation. I remember being at a bar waiting for my girl to arrive and there were these 2 lovely ladies sitting next to me and ignoring me, which I didn't care about. My girl ended up sitting in between me and them and as I'm talking with her I can see the girls suddenly interested in who I am because now I have a female companion.

goodmansaysfuckyou • 31 points • 25 September, 2020 03:12 PM

PlainTundra • 32 points • 25 September, 2020 04:52 PM

Or age difference as long as you look good and younger. The oldest one who hit on me this summer vacations was 20. I'm 32 and they didn't care at all. Dang, men, even high school girls nowadays don't hesitate to come and talk to you out of the blue :\

Edit: Also wanted to ad that luxury brand designers are very aware of this phenomenon.

Oh yeah! Dude, Michael Kors has to be the worst offender, hands down. The bags with the patterned, repeated logo look like a promo for South Park's Mr. Mackey, going MK MK MK MK MK MK MK. It's mind blowing but always good for a nice laugh.

They don't fully formulate their final opinion of you without input from several other people because they lack a sound theory of mind able to make independent decisions.

Brings to mind politics and the vote.

nnnnawalt • 3 points • 28 September, 2020 05:54 PM

MK is definitely one of those brands living on its old hype. The handbags look so boring. If I wanted one like that I can just go to my local mall's shoe shop and check out their cheapo handbags. They might not be as "high quality" but they look the same.

nnnnawalt • 2 points • 28 September, 2020 06:01 PM

There's a chick who's handbag collection I saw on youtube. (she seemed quite loaded) She held up the ugliest thing of a handbag shaped into a mickey mouse head that cost like 5k and offhandedly mentioned that she bought it on a whim.

She didn't like it in the end cuz hello really dumb handbag idea. She sent her husband on an errand to return it but apparently the staff and other customers were so shocked that they'd try to return this "limited edition collector's item" that the husband awkwardly came back with it. Basically humble bragging about why it would instead be gathering dust in her closet.

This is basically the female dating strategy. If a man is not desirable by many women then he is not worth it, although he might be attractive to them. This is exactly how women "logic" works.

tosernameschescksout • 12 points • 26 September, 2020 05:24 AM

Where are all the good men (with hoes) at?

The clownfish do this. Female clownfish will ignore a male until he has other females courting him. Then suddenly, they all want to get with him.

You see new videos for boy bands like Nsynchron. They always shoot a LOT of scenes where a HOARD of women are chasing them. Suddenly, all the teenyboppers think these boys are hot and should be chased.

Ever notice how when a woman buds into sexual maturity, the first thing she does is find a guy like that and then absolutely idolize him, building a little shrine with posters, pictures, trinkets, and shit? - They fixate on ONE guy who's rich, powerful, and most of all.... who has STATUS (according to her tweenage concept of status).

Ever seen grown ass women lose their shit when they see a celebrity? They'll tear their hands away from their husbands, shriek, and RUN. They'll drop their panties on command to bear children with that celebrity. Their husband wouldn't stand a chance.

In other words, that tweenage shit never dies. You're actually seeing the true nature of women right there. They get older, burn their posters of Justin Bieber. But that doesn't mean they've actually changed or grown up. That same level of stupidity and bonkers attraction just goes to older men who fit a more mature definition of status.

They will always leave you if a man with higher status shows interest. And there's all these guys wondering what do women want, what the fuck do they want? They want a trophy man with high status. They want to play dress up and surround themselves with shit that will make all the other girls jealous. They want their wedding day to be every day of the year.

What they don't want is the one thing you wanted to give and value more than anything else, romance and love, a real relationship. Women feel entitled and lucky, a loving relationship is cheap, every man wants them and wants to give them that. So it no longer has any value, at all. What does have value is the shit that not every man can give, the shit that only a few men can give.

Women can get attention from almost anybody, and they have, because they're women. What they don't know is that the wall is coming for them and all that's going to change. Eventually, even the beta cucks with their beta bucks won't really go for them anymore because they waited too long and totally overplayed their hands because they thought they were hot shit. They were, but they aren't now. They're done after hitting that wall. Where are all the good men?

Dude, cheers! Good analysis and solid, relatable, readily applicable insight. Reminds me of how glamour is in part produced and maintained by distance from the object.

There have been obvious examples of preselection in my life, but your insights have helped me define why one game of mine kind of worked on some co-workers a while back. My face is nice, but my personality is nice-guy-supreme so I would clam up around chicks in other departments I really liked. At the same time, I would be boisterous, friendly, and otherwise humor all kinds of folks across the company. Low and behold, the more I demonstrated signs of being well liked while otherwise cookie-crumbing the cuties, the better things got with them. I remember it was quite bizaare how the ones repulsed by my initial nice-guy introduction seemed to be more open and warm the more I cookie-crumbed them. I was aloof because I didn't want to be heart broken, but low and behold they seemed to really want what they couldn't have.

lethargic_apathy • 7 points • 26 September, 2020 03:21 AM

I actually saw there was a study where women were asked to rate a man's looks. One group was told nothing about him. The other group was told beforehand that he was taken. The second group, on average, had higher ratings for the man than the first group

God I've dated a girl like this. This is what you get with pretty girls who are high in the insecurity department. Girls wanna show off what they got. BUT THE SECOND they feel like they actually have to put in work that's when they start changing the guy. They want to parade their dude around to other girls, but they don't want the guy to have more options than she does.

distraff • 1 point • 25 September, 2020 06:22 PM

That is an example of social proof which is a well established part of human behavior. If I see a new movie coming out but nobody else likes it, then I'm a lot less likely to watch it. That is literally what Rotten Tomatoes is.

Blogginginvicacity • 2 points • 26 September, 2020 08:45 AM*

That is true. Men in particular, we are really down to pine for the chick that doesn't know she's beautiful and doesn't have all the attention on her. One Direction made sure I remembered that lesson! "You don't know you're beautiful... ..that's what makes you beautiful!" Like I don't need a chick to have experience to be seen as a potential partner.

It's nice knowing if something is tolerable, that's for sure. But if she really liked an obscure film, and then decided to not like it because no one else had heard of it, that sort of thinking would definitely get her called out by filmmakers if she was part of a group known for asking "whereareallthegoodfilms!?"

distraff • 2 points • 26 September, 2020 04:59 PM

Most of people's favorite films are popular films. They probably heard of these films from other people and gave it a watch. In fact even an obscure film might have gotten a recommendation which is why she watched it. Now if she watched it and loved it, then social proof will be less effective since she already knows its good.

Men pine for women who don't know they are beautiful. But this is because many men don't have a lot of luck with women and women who undervalue themselves are more available than they otherwise would have been. Men have lower standards and are picky so are less affected by things like social proof. Also men tend to like nice women who are humble, friendly, and likeable which explains it too.

The reality is that the vast majority of women know how attractive they are and even if they don't the people around them know. Social proof isn't an absolute law, but it has an effect. Of a girl has a reputation for being the hottest girl in school, she is going to get a lot of attention for that reputation alone. If a girl has a reputation for being considered ugly by everyone, then she is going to have a harder time.

Stop letting women use 'love' to manipulate you. Get what you want and let them fight over the convicts. They'll get tired eventually, and when they wise up?

You'll have accomplished your dreams and goals, and she'll still hate men and herself.

Win win, really.

We really don't give a shit about your past as long as it isn't a bad one. If you have a history of cussing someone out because they rejected you once, then that tells us basically all we need to know.
