Thanks for the submission OP. This one is a fringe post since the woman is looking for a LTR (Love) from a man while she is divorced with kids and is lamenting her single life and lack of options now that she has hit the wall. However, the theme of this sub is based on showing the consequences of a woman's bad decisions. While some could argue that her choosing to divorce her husband was a bad decision, it was based off of actions of the husband. Unless there is other information available, I am left with the assumption that this woman did nothing wrong and her current situation is not a result of her capricious actions.

We cannot encourage infidelity from men and simultaneously ridicule it in women. I will copy another mod to see if he views this profile differently than I.

Good analysis and decision. We don't know why the husband cheated, but most likely because she was a nagging bitch. But we can't use that as evidence here, so we shouldn't glorify the man's behavior by endorsing the woman's troubles now.
