

[Mod] Feminist Victims Fund

Feminism has caused some serious changes to our culture, to our society, and to our lives. We focus on some that are affected more than others, and we give back.

Our goal is to encourage men to speak out, to be men, to not fear oppression and enjoy their freedom of speech. Unfortunately in today's climate, being a man has become a financial liability. Say the wrong thing in the wrong place and you can find your entire life ruined. Destroyed.

Feminists have fought for equality, but now they're out for our rights.

They're destroying us financially. They're trying to tear apart our families.

We're saying that enough is enough. No longer should men fear masculinity. No longer should speaking up risk a man his job, career, or family.

It's time to rise up against the tyranny. It's time to tell men it's ok to speak up. We're here for you. This is the Feminist Victims Fund.

To protect anybody interested, our fund is entirely anonymous

We use bitcoin to protect the identity of anybody who wants to get involved. Feminists have been so successful at stifling dissent that it is now a dangerous proposition to speak against them. With the risk of losing your employment, or family, it's time we found a solution that can preserve anonymity.

Enter Bitcoin.

Bitcoin allows us to run our entire movement without any way of tracking who is involved. It's our middle finger to feminists. More about anonymity and bit coin.

You also do realize that the woman who made the complaint and subsequently got that guy fired was also fired from her job...

We can all chip in to mail her a dongle.

Doesn't feed his kids.

I applaud you on this interesting idea.

Several times I've brought up social change as a goal/lifestyle and the response I generally receive follows "Life sucks, society sucks, change is hard, I'm going to focus on getting laid and watch the world burn".

I think this method of inspiring small doses of action when the iron is hot on a case-by-case basis will prove much more effective.

I am worried about the BitCoin prospect, I don't know if they've stabilized themselves beyond a prospective community that will dry up when mining is complete; they do have some work to do.

Have you look into the bookkeeping aspect? For instance if you were to sign up with PayPal, you would know the donors. But would you be required to disclose that to anyone else?

But all in all, this is a good step forward that I think will be one of the most effective things you can do with the ears of this subreddit.

Uber- Thanks for the encouragement.

We don't plan on leaving the funds in bitcoin for long. The value is mildly steady for our purposes at the moment, I'll be exchanging it to USD as quickly as possible.

There are a few private exchanges in my area that have assured me they will buy bit coin without personal information- but rest assured, even if the exchanges hold on to your information, I'm exchanging it to USD and cashier's check, it will be untraceable back to you!

We decided this was the only way to maintain anonymity, though the correct way to do this would be making a non-profit and paying the proper taxes, we don't think we'll be dealing with much cash in the first place, and secondly, that would compromise our ability to do this anonymously.

The feminists' biggest weapon is public shame. The victims of which we aim to help. We don't want to become victims ourselves!

This donate thing is obstructing my Search Bar, and it's not playing nice with Reddit Enhancement Suit either. Now why are we even doing this? This seems very much like an MRA thing, so let's leave it to them and focus on TRP.

Personally I don't enjoy this tilt towards MRA focus of the past weeks. I am not here to fight for Male Rights. For that one has the MRA subreddits.

We have been kicking this idea around for a few days after the Pycon debacle, and with the support of Roosh we feel it can make quite an impact. This is not a scam, and if you have any concerns feel free to PM RedPillSchool or myself.

Hell yeah. Bitcoins for victory.

[deleted] • -2 points • 22 March, 2013 06:07 PM

Err, why not just allow us to donate dollars? I don't have the energy to go through all the other stuff. I'd give a few bucks.

redpillschool[S] • -1 points • 22 March, 2013 06:19 PM

If you can think of a way to do with preserving everybody's anonymity, I'm all ears.

wilsonh915 • 10 points • 23 March, 2013 04:47 AM

Yea, I can see why you would want to preserve anonymity. I would be embarrassed to be involved with this "project", too.

[deleted] • -1 points • 22 March, 2013 06:21 PM

Don't things like kickstarter allow you to make donations anonymous?

redpillschool[S] • 0 points • 22 March, 2013 06:29 PM

Kick starter has to approve the project. The approval process takes a week, and they decline many similar ideas.

[deleted] • -2 points • 22 March, 2013 06:34 PM

Ok. I'd say if you want this to actually work, let people pull out their CCs. Every barrier is a barrier after all redpillschool[S] • 1 point • 22 March, 2013 06:44 PM

Simply put there's literally no way to do this and maintain anonymity (including my own).

Remember, this is a fund to help men who have been abused by feminists.. Anonymity is our greatest asset.

I'm with the guy who says to allow both. If I had BitCoins, trust me I would have donated already.

redpillschool[S] • -1 points • 22 March, 2013 08:07 PM

I literally don't have a way to do it. Edit: It's very simple to buy bit coins...

This fund is a great idea.

Do you have banners in size 728x90 or 468x60?

I would put one up at MGTOW.COM website.

Saying the wrong thing in the wrong place and being punished shouldn't be a revelation.... You said the wrong thing in the wrong place.... Now saying the right thing in the right place and being punished for it, that's a travesty.

Question: How does one go about procuring these cryptocurrencies?
