

Reddit's new 'Trust and Safety Team' just quarantined the r / european subreddit

May 12, 2016 | 757 upvotes | by CHAD_J_THUNDERCOCK

It was a free speech subreddit that discussed immigration freely.

Reddit admins hired somebody yesterday to increase our safety for us. <https://archive.is/SCJyy>

r / european played a semi-major role in signal boosting the Cologne Sex Attacks back in January; as did TRP. Mainstream subs were forced to stop removing/deleting threads as there was so much attention on them. Then it was frontpage. Then the news on reddit helped signal boost the message on twitter; which eventually lead to (some) news organisations finally reporting on the story 4 days after it happened. Then that got the ball rolling on opening up the Overton window.

Daily mail reporters and Breitbart reporters used the european sub to crowdsource local news on attacks that national publications (of Germany, Sweden, etc) refused to print. I know this as I know people working there. They did not have systems to crowdsource the local news stories in many languages. It was a small sub but it helped changed the narrative at a global scale for a few months.

Be very careful about sharing your email with reddit if you plan to view this or any quarantined sub. They removed their disclaimer about sharing data with governments in the ToS a few months back.

For a long time FatPeopleHate, european and theredpill were considered by many as the holy triad of reddit 'hatespeech'. Now only one is left.

There might be a high risk of this sub also getting quarantined shortly.

I love how admins like the ones you mentioned feel like they have some type of power in the world. It's pathetic to see people like that and others (like SJW's) try to censor the truth. I can't even imagine how much stimulus they indulge in a day to feed their escapism, and the constant bullshit they tell themselves.

cry-bully:

Someone who uses the perceived righteousness of a social justice cause as a pretext to abuse others, and then plays the victim when confronted about that abuse.

This morning I got the same conclusion, and I have been strigling to make a good definition about that behaviour.

Thank you.

Brian_Donnerhuhn • 21 points • 13 May, 2016 12:32 AM

That's really what it comes down to. People who's moms and dads didn't love them and made them feel powerless and out of control of their own lives, so they have to project that onto others in the world.

[deleted] • 3 points • 13 May, 2016 12:48 PM

Do you think their parents didn't love them enough, or loved them too much and sheltered them from every potential danger in life, making them feel powerless and out of control in their own lives and engendering a belief that anything different, even an idea, is dangerous?

Brian_Donnerhuhn • 10 points • 13 May, 2016 01:13 PM

Well I personally don't think that loving your child and helicopter parenting/over-sheltering them go hand in hand. But, ultimately I don't really care about the causes that led these sorts of people to their beliefs, just what the ends of their ideas would entail for me, day-to-day. It's soft-fascism.

I hope we can collectively agree to just skip over most of the millennial generation for public office elections lol. Because I can't imagine a worse group to put in charge of the government.

grubek • 3 points • 13 May, 2016 02:04 PM

100% agree. Helicopter parenting comes from selfishness not love. Loving your kid means trying to do what is best for him even when it is not the best for you. Helicopter parents use the excuse of protecting their kids to maintain the control over their kids that they enjoy, even when deep down they know it would be better for the kid to experiment and try stuff in their life.

ThrowyMcGruder • 12 points • 13 May, 2016 05:22 PM

It's especially fun to show these kinds of people just how little power they have.

I was once sitting in a beer garden (outdoor drinking area) drinking with a few friends. I was telling a story and said, while pointing to a friend, "That's when this son of a bitch came along and...."

A girl I sort of know, who was sitting with us, interrupted me, waving her hand, shaking her head, and saying, "No. No. No. I don't like the B word. Don't say that."

I said, "What word? Bitch?"

She winced and said, "Yes. Don't use that word. I don't like it.", as if everything was settled now.

I said, "Well that must be a bitch."

At that point she took a deep and impatient breath and tried to explain to me, as if I was an idiot, that she didn't want me to use that word.

I just smiled and said that I'll use the word 'bitch' as much as I want and if she had a problem with it she could call the police and bitch to them about it.

She looked flabbergasted. She honestly just didn't understand the situation and just said, "But...you can't do that."

I continued to grin and said, "I'm pretty sure I can.", turned back to the group and continued on with, "So anyway. That's when this son of a bitch came along..."

She made a few attempts to turn the group against me but everyone shrugged her off so, of course, she flirts with me now and loves how I'm "so blunt and do my own thing".

But I've seen it all over. It comes out more with drink though.

The censoring and limiting of (right wing) thought isn't new and it's not unique to Reddit. Twitter actively blocks trending hashtags and users as well as limiting tweets from certain users from making out of their immediate sphere of followers. Twitter also has the "safe speech council" (lol wtf) to ban any user they deem offensive. Facebook whitewashes and cleanses trending news topics at the top of their site and temporarily bans people with 'unsavory' viewpoints like Lauren Southern.

One of the final units of the semester involved teaching young journalists how to scrub conservative points of view out of various media sources, since those points of view shouldn't qualify for protection.

That's not an okay thing to teach people.

What I find bizarre is that they are not even threatening a real person. They are literally threatening an anonymous username--in other words, a line of text! Like I give a shit about my anonymous reddit username. Go ahead and 'ban' me. I'll obviously sign up with a new username in the time it takes me to type one up.

RedditAdminsSuck_88 • 41 points • 12 May, 2016 09:00 PM

My username is the result of having to always make new accounts because reddit always shadowbans/suspends my accounts for no given reason at all. I had a post I made on The_Donald get linked to by SRS, which led to me getting numerous hate mail in my inbox by triggered SRS SJWs, and then shortly after I got my account suspended. More proof that SRS = Reddit Admins.

GayLubeOil • 65 points • 12 May, 2016 10:43 PM

Reddit SRS Admins forced the_Donald to remove me from the mid team

crowidtrance • 27 points • 12 May, 2016 10:52 PM*

Really? Can you give any more details? Did they force CWM out aswell? Apparently the_donald is now removing a lot more non-trump related content so its red pilling potential in non-trump related areas will be massively diminished. Do you know if that's true? One of the smart things you guys did was give front page exposure to a range of important topics.

GayLubeOil • 64 points • 12 May, 2016 11:04 PM

CWM was doxed. I tried to continue the hard-line policy but was removed by TrumpGirl who is cucking for the leftist Admins. In fact if a post gets too many upvotes the admins will remove it if the mods don't axe it first. Soros is a major stakeholder of Reddit and won't let the front page lean right.

zoidbergisourking • 16 points • 12 May, 2016 11:43 PM

Dude, you're right. I have no inside knowledge of any mod drama, but it's abundantly clear that the sub has changed over the last month.

Just look at the activity level. When I first subscribed in early March, they had about 60k subs, but always had at least 7k active at anytime. Now, they have almost 130k subs, more than double, yet the activity on the sub is only about 7-9k on average. /u/TrumpGal and the admins are sucking the soul out of the sub. Under CWMS, the sub was beginning to transcend Trump and become anti-SJW/anti-PC culture/Pro-Nationalism sub. When you combine that with the fun energy and hilarious memes, you get a viral, powerful cultural movement. Seriously, try explaining your RedPill arguments to a Cuck or a feminist, feels like banging your against a wall. But you get people to laugh at feminists and cucks, spread viral memes pointing out their insanity, that's using soft power to win hearts and minds. Not everyone is capable of rationally discerning an argument, but no one wants to be a laughing stock, and everyone wants to feel like they're on the winning team.

I think this was the real threat that The_Donald presented. It was making anti-SJWism cool and thus the sub had to be bridled. The censorship is obvious. The memes aren't as spicy, the sub just overall isn't as funny and exciting as it was a month ago. There's obvious censorship and it's neutered the HIGH ENERGY

As for proof srs = admins, just ask why the admins dont quarantine or outright get rid of SRS since they are the biggest brigade/harrassment sub on all of reddit and check ever box on the regulations that were used to get rid of fatpeoplehate. Its ok though, the declining user number only means that in a few years this site will be the next digg.

I think that's the only feasible strategy on their end - make it die a slow death by injecting their own mods into it behind the scenes. Make it a 100% serious political sub and everyone will go back to TIFU and funny.

afkb39sdfb • 15 points • 13 May, 2016 03:22 AM

People have been "doom and gloom" about TRP getting banned since I joined this sub with only 7,000 subs with my original account nearly three years ago. TRP is still here. This isn't some witches covenant during the inquisition guys. Men have been getting together and talking about the realities of women since humans developed language. Our fathers/grandfathers did the same thing in fraternities like that Masons/Shriners/Elks/Knights of Columbus/etc. This is just the 21st century meeting place for those same old discussions. Men will always create a place for those discussions, if not here, then somewhere else.

jdgal • 32 points • 13 May, 2016 04:10 AM

I disagree. Non-PC discussion has already been effectively outlawed in workplaces; now they're after schools. Meanwhile the left is trying to put the Internet under UN control. Gee, I wonder why?

truthyego • 9 points • 13 May, 2016 01:56 PM

Internet kill switch. I actually think the net needs to be redesigned entirely, into a system of ad hoc and mobile connection hubs with a new transfer protocol. More decentralized and user controlled.

The existing system is heavily centralized, monitored, controlled, and designed to make it easy for govt spying.

Decentralization is the answer to a lot of the problems caused by corporate governance

jdgal • 3 points • 14 May, 2016 03:26 AM

I believe the IP protocol (at least v4) is good enough for the time being, but we need an alternative set of name servers that ICANN doesn't control. And preferably, good guys need to start capturing full images of the DNS system on at least a monthly, preferably daily basis, so that domains seized by government can be kept alive for whoever still wants to go there. That much can be done fairly easily, perhaps by somebody like archive.org (whose local DNS cache is probably a pretty complete snapshot of the whole namespace already, since that site regularly retrieves pages from everywhere).

Second would be to create alternative network pathways and keep them ready to use if and when authorities actually try to use an "Internet kill switch". Peer-to-peer wi-fi will be useful in this regard, as will packet radio, but both can be jammed, and even if they aren't they can't reach everybody. So I'm thinking of either bringing back FidoNet or an updated equivalent. (FidoNet was a 1980s-era automated "phone tree" arrangement that allowed local BBSes to exchange messages and files, mostly without running up any long distance charges, but of course if used today its purpose would be different.)

[deleted] • 9 points • 13 May, 2016 07:13 AM

I hear what your argument but honestly at this point anything but a vote against Clinton is a vote for the SWJ non sense which is over taking America. If you think it's going to stop at European shores at this point your completely wrong.

Europe is filled with nuclear weapons and massive tools of warfare within their armouries. The majority of the EU will fall to an internal conflict within the next generation. Likely we are going to see the rise of an extremist government in one manner or another.

If one of these extremist governments to rise up is Anti white or Anti capitalism which seems to be the prevailing voice North America will find itself with no allies and at best friend-emies in Russia and China.

This all came on the base of the Marxist socialism expansion. Any president or senate which doesn't attempt to divert the course in the US at this point is going to echo the situation in NA within another 2 generations after this one. Staying the course isn't even enough anymore.

lucifersaveus • 1 point • 14 May, 2016 10:33 PM

You just perfectly touched on how we're in a new age of warfare now. The Cold War is like throwing rocks compared to the subterfuge we're seeing today. I think the human mind has been "solved" by some very powerful people so they don't even need to kill our physical bodies anymore, just kill our ideas and values.

The scary thing, to me, is that we're an actual threat to their power. If they decide to take us out they would in essence be killing off the agents of this world and leaving behind a mindless sheep-like version of humanity for them to harvest money from.

truthyego • 1 point • 13 May, 2016 02:13 PM

Ironically, Hillary may be Amerika's best chance. Donald IS the establishment elite in outsider's clothing. Just look at the names he gives for people he wants to advise him. Like Obama, he's pretending to be a political outsider who will change and remove the corruption and elitism. The mainstream is going along with this narrative. The best way to control the opposition is to lead it.

Hillary on the other hand, it is well known among much of the armed departments of govt that she is an abject criminal and elitist crony by all measures. The only people who love her are weak, unarmed, blind, and ignorant, and could not mount any serious opposition in the face of a violent challenge.

We will not make another 4 years without a serious financial collapse of some kind, and likely massive restructuring of society on a global scale. With Hillary, you will see massive resistance to what will assuredly be illegal and unlawful orders. She's so horrible that it will motivate those with the power to stop the tyranny, to actually do so.

With Trump, well he just might be able to get some pretty heavy police/militarization and highly repressive policiess enacted, due to larger support from those same people that would resist Hillary. They think Trump is an agent of anti corruption and change. They don't have any real philosophy to guide their actions, they're more likely to follow a personality than a philosophy. Any violence will be "justifiable" because Trump is trying to use his authority for "good" whereas Hillary is "bad." Fucking sheep.

There's also 1 other possibility. We get the next 911 and financial collapse before the elections, and Obama "temporarily" suspends elections.

RedditAdminsSuck_88 • 113 points • 12 May, 2016 08:58 PM

Posted about this in the TRP IRC.

I still think this sub will eventually be quarantined, along with The_Donald, TumblrInAction, KotakuInAction, and others. Reddit went with the low hanging fruit at first, and are now slowly lurching to ban less controversial subs. European was nothing more than a sub to talk about Europe without the Orwellian style censorship found in the Europe sub. Nothing more, nothing less.

Basically when subs get too big(i.e. CoonTown, FatPeopleHate, European) their posts get upvoted enough to reach all and the front page. Advertisers don't like this. This also causes the media to write articles about how reddit is a hotbed for hate and bigotry. Hence reddit coming down with the censorship, quarantining/banning those subreddits for PR purposes.

Also, globalist interests own reddit and they want to make sure narratives that run counter to the globalist agenda(i.e. stories about refugees raping people in western europe) get scrubbed. Combine that with the fact all the reddit admins are San Francisco residents, that means they are likely SJW leftist faggots as well, so they are more than willing to comply.

FunAndFreedom • 59 points • 12 May, 2016 11:53 PM*

Red Pill: Advertisers are meaningless to reddit's bottom line.

Reddit would be bankrupt if they relied on advertising. They rely on multimillion dollar infusions of cash from "angel investors" The way Reddit gets these "angel investors" to open their wallets is by helping them to distort public opinion.

Europeans get a little out of control and expose immigration problems? Say the subreddit is shocking and "Bad for advertisers" and quarantine it. The reality is that they mean it's "bad for Soros".

The_Donald gets out of control? Have the admins access the servers IP logs to help dox the mods. It will absolutely happen to TRP. If the mods here were smarter they would force a migration to the offsite TRP right now and at least have a profitable website.

karpathan • 9 points • 13 May, 2016 02:38 AM

I agree, I think it's just a matter of time now. TRP already has over 150.000 subscribers, and that number keeps growing every day. European had a bit over 20.000 subscribers and got quarantined. And this subreddit is generally far more hated than European.

PrinceofSpades • 2 points • 13 May, 2016 05:21 PM

The people need something to hate. If they scrub us, they'll end up being the hated ones before too much more time passes. People dislike others taking away free speech, they're just too stupid to know what free speech is until it's being taken away from them.

[deleted] • 8 points • 13 May, 2016 05:22 AM

Advertisers don't like this

Nothing to do with that. All advertisers care about is getting their ads in front of a big audience. This censorship is about an agenda. Ask CNN, Fox, MSNBC, Sean Hannity and anyone else on talk radio if Trump content has scared away their advertisers. The guy is ratings gold and ad companies just want their material to be seen. If reddit allowed users to speak freely, traffic would rise and subs would be way more active and ad revenue would rush in.

Also, globalist interests own reddit and they want to make sure narratives that run counter to the globalist agenda

I agree with this statement

(i.e. stories about refugees raping people in western europe) get scrubbed.

Disagree with this one. I've seen enough threads on worldnews on this subject get upvoted to the front page. Maybe you should realize that this is part of the globalist agenda. I'll keep saying it time and time again-- drop your nationalist goggles, the rich/powerful don't give two shits if you fight/die in their wars for oil, nor if your women are raped. Protect your own assets, period.

[deleted] • 13 points • 12 May, 2016 11:43 PM*

I've seen enough threads on worldnews on this subject get upvoted to the front page.

No, you haven't. You've seen a very, very small minority of them; those that got through the quick censorship of the mods because the case was too big and too famous to bury. There are hundreds and hundreds of stories of violence, assault and rape by immigrants that would get upvoted by outraged people, if only the mods didn't cull them with excuses like "local news".

edit: for people who want to keep getting all the news, <http://voat.co/v/european> vagbutters • -4 points • 12 May, 2016 11:52 PM

Yes, I have-- the mods of worldnews are retarded nationalists pushing the same agendas that the other major media industries push. The occasional rape thread to stir up nationalism is only one facet of the multi-pronged approach to do so.

Uhhh...what? r /European was pretty openly filled with white nationalists and people who believed in the supremacy of European heritage. I don't think reddit should be in the business of banning subs it finds unpleasing, but let's call a spade a spade here: r /european is the equivalent of sticking a racist in a nice suit. Don't know where you're getting mere "sub to talk about Europe without [the] Orwellian style censorship found in the Europe sub"...unless "nothing more, nothing less" refers to the value-add of racist ideology and xenophobia. Again, don't really give a shit what they believe, but if you're going to hold some beliefs, you better goddamn stick to them and not pretend you're just having a nice tea party about Europe.

PM_me_your_fistbump • 21 points • 13 May, 2016 04:51 AM

Are there any other ethnicities who are evil for liking their race best?

get_real_quick • -2 points • 13 May, 2016 12:49 PM

Lemme know where in my post I made a value judgment about racism.

PM_me_your_fistbump • 3 points • 13 May, 2016 05:01 PM

Nobody talks about openly loving carrots, putting a belief in honesty in a nice suit, or tells a debate club to stop pretending to be having a nice tea party.

You didn't explicitly state a value judgment, but your tone and word choice make it pretty obvious what your value system is.

_Deadpill • 6 points • 13 May, 2016 06:50 AM*

The Europe subreddit blatantly censored any link or post that was even remotely anti-immigration, or linked to articles about rape or violence committed by immigrants. There's tons of threads on this, where the Europe mods removes links to stuff like government-issued documents and articles because "the source isn't serious". European had little censorship, in any way, outside of enforcing global reddit rules. Europe is a fucking joke sub, an extreme leftist sub, where you can't have your own opinion. European was not a white supremacy sub. It simply was what Europe should have been. Freedom of speech. Naturally it did get saturated more by those who weren't allowed to have an opinion on Europe.

Consider that you were allowed to have any opinion on European. You aren't on Europe. It's not a sub dedicated to european news when a lot of those news gets censored and removed because of their mod team's political agenda.

RedditAdminsSuck_88 • 3 points • 13 May, 2016 03:32 PM

Who cares if White Nationalists and Racists were participants in the subreddit? It wasn't the official mission of the sub to be a white nationalist hangout, it was a free speech haven where there was no censorship.

Do you think the Black Lives Matter subreddit should be shut down because they are pro-black?

Reddit is a fucked company. If is not if, but when.

You see two things here. One, the business side of reddit is trying to find a away to monetize our speech. Being dyed in the wool San Francisco hipster SJW, they honestly think that proper words and group-think are more valuable than the mob of ideas. They are trying to curate reddit so they can sell its produce. It will never happen. Two, and this is particularly applicable to the founders, they think the investors gave them their money to do good, instead of build a good company. The assweasels at Facebook got away with this because they had viable business model. Reddit? When they run out of money, that's it; no one else will help them.

It will get much worse as they run out of runway. Ultimately, they will be forced to sell the user-base to a bigger company, who won't give a single fuck about content, speech or anything. They will do it just to get your eyes for 30 seconds and dispose of the whole pile of shit.

theultimatewarriors • 13 points • 13 May, 2016 12:40 AM*

I'd agree with you until you realize a few things that paint a really scary picture of change that long ago happened.

The fact that long ago Alexis O'Hanion not only got a book deal when all the craziness went down with Aaron Schwartz and then the massive control shift in reddit years ago, but he also actually met up with STRATFOR before that (could be coincidence... but it's worth asking why).

The fact that back in 2012 the bill that prevented domestic propaganda was lifted Scroll down on this article from the reddit blog about usage stats to the Most Addicted Cities, and notice the fact that Eglin Air Force Base is number one.

Reddit didn't just survive up to this point and are now trying to cash in, they are clearly at this point a state sponsored site or at the very least a prime state tool. I wouldn't be on someone outright finding money connected unless you do some digging, but all the puzzle pieces are there that a shift took place in 2012-2013, plus all the Pao stuff just helps illustrate it even further. You will never find it outright unless someone digs, but just look at the evidence and it's pretty hard not to see this place got some serious interests and players to coordinate changes in that time period and the shift in mod control and censorship that took place immediately after.

sharp7 • 3 points • 13 May, 2016 05:42 PM

I mean its the best propaganda machine out right now. Who would want this most? Politicians. Put money into reddit and now you control which posts get upvoted the most. Which ever candidate gets slandered the most. Etc.

A decentralized reddit would be best. They already decentralized things with tech like bittorrent. Hell they even decentralized money with bitcoins. A decentralized reddit shouldn't be hard to make.

theultimatewarriors • 2 points • 13 May, 2016 08:29 PM

But that's it.... look at how hard they fought to eliminate those. A decentralized reddit does exist but when I used it, the conent wasn't there, it isn't as fast, and requires logins and... I don't even remember. I stopped using it and just tried to get better at blocking out content I hated by staying away from the main subs.

sharp7 • 2 points • 13 May, 2016 11:48 PM

Ya I stay away from main subs too.

But just the existence of decentralized reddit is good. Reddit knows it can't go full retard because there ARE other options.

I have been wondering this for a while. How does Reddit make money? I doubt Reddit gold provides enough cash to pay for servers, bandwidth, staff, etc.. And Conde Nast or whoever sure as fuck isn't spending millions keeping this site up just for the cat pics.

Putting on my tinfoil hat but I'm really thinking its a just a tool to be bought by some libs to keep control and make the users think it's grassroots when it's AstroTurfed. Anything right leaning, conservative, etc is suppressed and all liberal/feminist/bs is always at the top.

/tinfoil removed

[deleted] • 8 points • 13 May, 2016 05:44 PM

How does Reddit make money?

They don't. With my other account I've been trying to give them money for years. It took literally years until they got their ass up to support credit cards from other countries than the US for their self serve advertising.

Well, years after my first attempt I finally got to do advertising on reddit. So I threw together a campaign and targeted some appropriate subs ... only to find out - a few hundred dollars in - that the admins of those subs just edited the CSS to hide the ads behind the header graphics, etc. My ads counted as displayed and reddit billed me - but the users didn't get to see the ads even if they had no adblockers installed.

So I wrote a mail to the support team for ads and they replied something in the spirit of: "LOL TOO BAD FOR YOU".

That's not how you run a company.

lucifersaveus • 1 point • 14 May, 2016 10:45 PM

R4ndom_Hero • 15 points • 13 May, 2016 05:37 AM

They make some cash on non-disruptive ads and Reddit gold. It's not a lot, but keeps it afloat. At least that was the situation under previous CEO.

With it's userbase and content it has a lot of potential to make loads of cash. All it takes is to add more banners and they can start making millions within a day. The only way that is stopping them is that they don't want to end up like digg, so they look for other ways to monetize the content.

max_peenor • 3 points • 13 May, 2016 05:46 PM

They took a $50m placement about a year and a half ago. They are burning through it. I will agree with some of the other commenters that money is being funneled to them through political interests, but that is a dangerous game to play. The first and second seat investors could go after these sources if they can prove they did not work in the best interest of the shareholders. The most common way to somewhat skirt this is to open a line of credit for reddit to draw on with no intention of ever paying it back. I don't know if they are doing this, but I've seen it happen many times (though usually just to stuff executives pockets and not some fools errand like this).

It's all sort of academic though. The cucks think they are doing political good for their cause. The very opposite is happening. Outside of the echo chamber, people are starting to openly mock the SJW bullshit. It will eventually turn into open hostility. Need proof? I present you Nominee Donald Trump.

San Francisco, a city I spend maybe three or four days a week in, is a morass of delusional progressives. They think they get the attention they have because they are right. No, children. You get attention because of a tech bubble and the money surrounding it. Once the money runs out, no one will give a fuck about your feel good, unicorn happy bullshit. Enjoy it while it lasts...

I think the upcoming vote on Brexit will answer this question one way or the other. If Britain leaves the EU, whatever effects it may or may not have on trade or the economy, at least part of the purpose will be to allow the UK to restrict immigration, especially of "Syrian" "refugees". And at least part will be to enable the UK to refuse any more bailout payments to Greece and the other irresponsible spendthrift countries. Britain will be only the first of a stampede that breaks up the entire bloc.

But if Britain stays in, then most likely all the members will stay to be destroyed by both problems.

A lot of guys (including me on my main account) were banned by mods on Europe sub for posting comments or submissions criticizing mass illegal immigration into Europe. European sub was the only place you could discuss this subject without any censorship.

Reddit prefers subreddits where there's no free speech, and where mods are banning users and removing their comments if they are not politically correct.

BMRGould • 3 points • 13 May, 2016 03:10 PM

"politically correct"

Yes, obviously the best way to describe comments like shown here, <https://archive.is/h4Yen> on a picture of a white women kissing a black man...

Hang her for treason. Disgusting whore, will laugh when he beats her and leaves.

Just send them to the monkeyman's homeland where they belong. Fuck the coalburners.

Get raped by a nigger you fucking worthless cuck.

Just because people used european to discuss immigration does not change the fact that it was full of full on racist and violent comments. You can discuss immigration without also bringing up literally committing genocide on all of them, which happened frequently on european.

[deleted] • 2 points • 14 May, 2016 09:42 AM

Man only weak people get emotionally scarred by what was on fph, it was just a bunch of people laughing at delusional fatties. I'm not saying that you should go find a fat girl/dude and tell them "oh shit you need to go to the fucking gym you disgusting piece of shit", that's just mean. But fat people need to know that it's not acceptable to be so fat that you are affecting the rest of society by for example taking up your seat on an airplane with their left asscheek. I think that your body is your body and nobody else's business. Unfortunately this doesn't apply when you're morbidly obese and affect other people by your poor decisions.

how morals are something that have to be taken care of, something fragile, that have to be tended with care.

I dont have an issue with people who do that but it's not me

ToSeeAndToHear • 12 points • 13 May, 2016 04:16 AM

The "enjoy the decline" attitude is mostly created by recognizing that public political discourse is still way too focused on pro-feminism ideals for us to start some kind of movement for change.

The only thing one can actually affect is one's own life, so the advice is to stop trying to go all men's rights activist and focus on enjoying your life. If you feel like you need to do something, as many in this sub do (or the experienced guys who have made it wouldn't be here contributing for noobs like me) just keep some awareness percolating so that more men wake up and improve themselves.

Reddit is a bunch of humming boxes in a room somewhere. What's valuable is not the boxes, but the audience. The audience can easily go elsewhere.

Elsewhere is already set up.

Be very careful about sharing your email with reddit if you plan to view this or any quarantined sub. They removed their disclaimer about sharing data with governments in the ToS a few months back.

This should be reiterated time and again.

Reddit is not your friend. Reddit is the centralization of web forums. 10 years ago, what someone's posting life was on many different servers on far flung domains... maybe possible for the government to pin down, but not any one company. No it's now possibly mostly here. A sub for everyone, the ultimate convenience. With that centralization comes power (to reddit). Power ALWAYS gets abused in the end.

Reddit is going to go on for many years but it will get increasingly shittier. The censorship will slip in like slowly boiling a frog. Most users won't care and actually defend it to be part of the crowd.

Don't bother fighting it, this is corpocracy. Extract what you can and give them as little as possible.

dr_warlock • 4 points • 14 May, 2016 02:55 AM

Most users don't care because most people aren't thought criminals.

NightwingTRP • 14 points • 12 May, 2016 09:04 PM

I unsubbed from there a while ago. Last time I went back people were posting videos like "Hitler's warning" and associated fascist stuff. It had a time when it was good, but then seemed to get overrun with fascists. Not my scene.

I've had a quick look down it now and it doesn't look too bad. (Though of course Hitler is mentioned on page 2... ffs guys!) They appear to be planning to move off reddit.

You can ignore those threads. I did, since I'm not interested in Nazism nor a nostalgic. It was still a valuable subreddit, as it was the only place where you could get unfiltered news on Europe (both /worldnews and /europe are heavily censored).

Alanranks7 • 2 points • 13 May, 2016 04:06 AM

Sad that many turn to nazism but alot of people are drifting into that mindset, mostly the blue pilld drift into the far right or left because they are followers except the leaders maybe. Bottom line many nazis and the leftist numales that fight each other are in many cases worker drones that drink the kool aid. Having pride in your country or ideology is one thing, it is quite another if it becomes your life.

Bad response to what is a play to censor RP ideology in case it gets big. This is one more way for the leftist Big Brother to stop BP men from waking up to the shitfest of hypergamy and feminist abuses that regularly go on. With all the political bullshit involved with powerful interests in oil with the Middle East, I can't blame Muslims for going so barbaric-- they're protecting their own interests from foreigners raping their country. jdgal • 2 points • 13 May, 2016 04:21 AM

The Streisand Effect is a completely different thing. When Reddit quarantines a sub, they do not file a lawsuit which becomes a public record for the media to find, as Streisand did. (Though we might want to find or create a channel to use to publicize such events once there's no place we can do it on Reddit.)

SobStoryBob • 1 point • 13 May, 2016 03:55 AM*

Okay, can we pause for a second?

I know that there is a general ring of sub-reddits that TRP seems to be within, and thus we, as a total, feel we should support those other reddits, but the european sub-reddit wasn't just "exposing the things that the liberal media would not".

I implore the users of this sub-reddit to check the comments in any thread there. They have many subscribers that genuinely argue that the Nazi party was doing good in gassing jewish people. Many of the posts are outright racist. And no, not in the militant liberal version of racism, nor even in the moderate version of racism. Many, as in, more than half, of the comments are racist in the narrowest definition of the term. Here are some comments I just copied and pasted here in 5 minutes there.

It's a Jewish cock, my friend. Shitskins are only a Zionist tool, just like cultural Marxism is. Do you think negros and shitskins would be able to do anything if it wasn't for the treacherous politicians?

Love my uncucked mates - bunch of cane farmers and tradies and we all talk shit about coons, Chinks, Muslims, recently T*rks, it's great stuff. (15 upvotes on this)

And then this exchange:

I'm also not attracted to black women. But for me, it's not only the skin color that does it. It's also the shape of the head, the lips, the nose, the eyes, the big forehead, the hair. Literally everything that is usual for black people, I am not attracted to.

Yeah, black women with more white-like features (biracial, I guess?) sometimes look alright.

lol no that's even worse

Haha, fair enough. I don't particularly find them attractive, just slightly less unattractive than giga-nigga women.

This alignment with other subreddits with focuses far removed from the original intent of this subreddit is one thing, but when that subreddit has been clearly misrepresented by the OP, I feel I must speak.

Whisper • 7 points • 13 May, 2016 07:32 PM

I implore the users of this sub-reddit to check the comments in any thread there. They have many subscribers that genuinely argue that the Nazi party was doing good in gassing jewish people. Many of the posts are outright racist.

Yes. So what?

It's a measure of just how political orthodoxy has poisoned modern thinking, that you believe "These guys are straight-up racist" is an argument for shutting down a forum.

Yeah, they're straight-up racist. There was one asshole who got banned from here, subsequently found out that one of our mods is black, and posted a rant there about how the eeeevil "nigger" banned him.

Repugnant as both you and I find this... so what?

When you use your personal distaste for someone's words as an excuse to silence him, you cross a line. And on one side of that line is the freedom of thought and expression that made Western culture great. On the other side of that line is the tribal monoculture of third-world shitholes everywhere.

If you want to grow and prosper and learn, subreddits are okay, segregation of topics is okay, but quarantining and utter silencing is not. It doesn't work. No one is smart enough to know what topics "should not" ever be discussed, or what things "should not" ever be said.

cashmoney_x • 1 point • 14 May, 2016 04:47 PM

EXACTLY. Plus, there's value in "letting" people who think that way vent. It's better for everyone. This fear of words is so fucking frustrating. Parents everywhere fucking up when they overreact to a kid saying a particular word. Starts them on the path to thinking words are magic.

What's wrong with this? It's just people talking about their subjective (and possibly genetic) criteria for attraction. It may be distasteful to you, but it's not racist to be unattracted to black people.

Or is it just the off-hand use of the term "giga-nigga" (whatever that means) that has your panties in a wad? If so, then why didn't you just quote that line?

You think this was about laughing at jews and calling muslims names, about traitor politicians or media lies? It's bigger than that. The sub got banned because it was named : European.

According to Orwell, "the purpose of Newspeak was not only to provide a medium of expression for the world-view and mental habits proper to the devotees of IngSoc, but to make all other modes of thought impossible. Its vocabulary was so constructed as to give exact and often very subtle expression to every meaning that a Party member could properly wish to express, while excluding all other meaning and also the possibility of arriving at them by indirect methods. This was done partly by the invention of new words, but chiefly by eliminating undesirable words and stripping such words as remained of unorthodox meanings, and so far as possible of all secondary meaning whatever."

It's absolutely disgusting.

I haven't been to 4chan in a very long time but I've heard they're going the same route. I was thinking of going back there just to find a place that still allowed free speech but it's under new ownership now by a guy who is known to sell people's info.

After seeing european disappear I thought of this place and wanted to see if it was even still here. I post on the_donald and I imagine that place as risk too, simply because people hate Donald Trump.

All this liberal bullshit makes me sick.

are there any benefits or reasons why someone should give reddit their email?

I do use fake emails to sign up for stuff online but yeah NSA or whatever can track thru that easily.
