

How much Dan Bilzerian understands.

Came across a Larry King interview with Dan Bilzerian, everything you'd expect out of the guy. Pure RP gold. Link to the interview

"It's like, if a hot girl goes to the bar and she gets hit on 10 times she can go home and sleep like a baby and not hookup with anybody. But if she goes to the bar and no body pays attention to her and nobody talks to her then she almost like has to hookup with somebody to feel validated a little bit."

"I was at a club and had one girl that I flew down that I used to date but decided that we should just be friends because she wanted a relationship. I had another girl that I had been sleeping with for a couple years that was living with her boyfriend so she was kinda like my actual date but I couldn't be seen with her so I had the other girl that I could take to events."

Decided to just be friends when she wanted a relationship. Girls always trying to secure a high SMV man, but why settle when you're on top? Sleeping with another girl that was living with a boyfriend. Beta bucks and Alpha fucks.

What's something that people get wrong about you?

"I think a lot of people think that I'm just fucked up all the time, that I'm drinking all the time"

Do you drink a lot?

"No, no I really don't. No I actually don't drink to much at all. For me I always went out to get laid you know? So like a lot of guys when they go out they need to drink so that they're more relaxed so they can pickup chicks, but I just got to a point where I just didn't really have to work at all."

There's no need to waste money and calories on alcohol when you don't need it. Sure it's nice to have a drink at the bar but no need to get hammered thinking that's going to help you walk out with anything above a 5.

What are you embarrassed to admit you watch or enjoy?

"I'm not really too embarrassed by much, I always just kinda put my cards on the table and accept me for who I am kinda deal."

What TRP is at it's core. Being a high value man confident in himself, not afraid to put his cards on the table.

Do you feel like you use women?

"I feel like a lot of times girls are using me. A lot of times girls use me to get back at their boyfriends or piss off an ex or, you know I get used all the time. It's kind of crazy but I can't | really get to upset about that”

AWALT

How often do you let yourself be vulnerable?

| “Definitely not that often”

Do you ever want to just settle down?

| “Um sometimes, at the end of a long weekend maybe”

35 and top of his game why stop now?

I've always been fascinated by the snowball effect of social status.

You inherit a fuckton of money from your father so you'll never need to worry about going broke or needing to work a day in your life. You then make a "career" playing cards (something people do for recreation) so you get yourself in the public eye. Then you start living flashy. Girl A sees the yacht, private plane, luxurious resort and decides she wants a piece. So she's in the photo with him. Girl B sees Girl A just got another 10,000 followers on instagram, so she wants in too. Before you know it you're taking photos with 50 models in the background.

But this made me laugh yesterday.

themidnightfox • 87 points • 9 March, 2017 08:36 PM

You should listen to the podcast he did with Joe Rogan. Pretty eye opening and shows somewhat of a different side of him and gives color to his backstory.

0x8d1355 • 45 points • 10 March, 2017 10:04 AM

Since you mentioned the podcast but did not provide a link:
[Youtube] Joe Rogan Experience #857 - Dan Bilzerian.

dCLIFFb • 33 points • 9 March, 2017 11:34 PM

This should be higher, he outlines his entire life story. There's way too much speculation in this thread. IMO he's earned his status, but listen to the podcast and decide for yourselves.

[deleted] • 3 points • 10 March, 2017 01:32 PM

Yeah, I listened to all or a good portion of that status and I was impressed. He's smarter than people think and knows how to market himself.

prodigy2throw • 7 points • 9 March, 2017 09:38 PM

It's really a case study on social status engineering. Amazing really

[deleted] • 133 points • 9 March, 2017 07:48 PM

Dan Bilzerian is awesome. Haters are gonna hate, but he's smarter than people think he is. He literally set his life up in a way so that he's doing a bunch of cool shit and gets laid constantly. He also has a badass beard.

Oh yeah, I'm am reading some of the backlash from that photo and it's hilarious. I mean do people realize that was just a photo shoot, to have a little fun?

GroundhogLiberator • 217 points • 9 March, 2017 07:49 PM*

He literally set his life up in a way so that he's doing a bunch of cool shit and gets laid constantly.

If you had $100M+ you could piece this together just as easily.

Hammerhead9 • 204 points • 9 March, 2017 08:00 PM exactly why this guy has no valuable lessons

Galbert123 • 201 points • 9 March, 2017 08:45 PM

Agreed. Entertaining, yes. Relatable, no. This guy has all the money and free time in the world. You could work your balls off your whole life and not have a fraction of that kind of wealth.

metalhead4 • 71 points • 9 March, 2017 09:13 PM

Dan what do you want to be when you grow up?

Hugh Hefnar on steroids.

Okay....

trulytrulyisay • -24 points • 10 March, 2017 01:10 AM

I have to disagree with you a little. The man spent years of his life working his ass off to become a SEAL and he never gave up until forced to. I believe he has learned some lessons about work and sacrifice.

fakenate1 • 6 points • 10 March, 2017 06:24 AM

How did he earn his wealth?

czech_man • 3 points • 10 March, 2017 09:13 AM

He went through basic training, didn't finish due to disciplinary issues.

Alpacash • -1 points • 10 March, 2017 08:29 PM

I disagree, if you work your balls off you can definitely have that kind of money or more.

UsernameIWontRegret • -32 points • 9 March, 2017 09:41 PM

I mean the man did go through navy seal training. You have to give him props for that.

GroundhogLiberator • 53 points • 9 March, 2017 10:07 PM

He didn't even make it halfway through.

SadBoy_phil • 6 points • 10 March, 2017 12:34 AM

He was on an episode of the joe Rogan podcast and if I remember correctly, he went into hell week with a broken leg/foot or some shit like that and that's why he wasn't able to finish

Stormtech5 • 4 points • 10 March, 2017 05:16 AM

No excuse! I've ran miles on a broken foot and that was just for track. I wouldn't think any differently if he made it though.

My step dad was a navy seal and while I respect him he was a real asshole.

UsernameIWontRegret • 1 point • 9 March, 2017 10:39 PM

Me made it to the 500th day or something. Just before finishing he got booted out.

And even if he did only make it halfway, that's still more impressive than what 99% of men can do.

GIGANTIC_NIGGER_DICK • 58 points • 9 March, 2017 09:44 PM

DBs dad was charged with insider trading. That's where the 100 M came from in the first place

32643264 • 36 points • 10 March, 2017 05:30 AM

He's laundering his father's money through high stakes poker games. However, I'm sure he has made a shit ton of money through his IG fame etc.

In terms of his lifestyle, I'm a big fan. Dude is top of the food chain.

FLFTW16 • 23 points • 9 March, 2017 08:56 PM

If you had $100M+ you could manage this just as easily.

DB is ripped. He put a ton of time and effort into training. Money has nothing to do with that.

There are plenty of billionaires who are overweight and in ill health, who don't do fun stuff. Bill Gates and Warren Buffet come to mind. Those are two beta chumps that didn't use their wealth for fun at all. Warren Buffet actually brags about eating a mcdonalds egg mcmuffin for breakfast, costing him only $3.50 or so.

It's important for guys not to fall into the trap of "hand waving excuses." Well, if I had that money, I could do XYZ so easily! A better question is what are you doing with the assets you have right now? A guy could spend $100 on a used guitar and learn to play to be more social/cool. Or he could day dream about what he would do with the millions he will never have. You could say how easy it is to have personal trainers and your own gym when you have millions, while some guy with NOTHING in his bank account gets on the floor and does crunches to get ripped, costing him nothing.

People criticize DB. I don't get it. What does that get you? It's so pointless to be bitter or resentful of people who had a leg up on you. His success does not impact you or me negatively at all. Learn from his example in any way you can and use that knowledge to improve your own situation.

BestSC86 • 167 points • 9 March, 2017 11:12 PM

YOU do realize one of the major differences be between your trust fund baby and Gates and Buffet, right?

They BOTH FREAKING BUILT THEIR EMPIRES by working insane hours, investing, researching and doing what the TRP claims should be the mission of a real man.

This dude basically has done shit but use his families' money and bought a boat full of pussy with it.

I am not a huge Buffet or Gates fan myself but I am smart enough to know that at the end of the day...they will be remembered as titans of their eras and fields while his dude will die unremembered likely from either a drug overdose or a drinking episode or from a STD.

I have met a bunch of these trusters and they all are entitled pricks who girls love because of the name\money. They also are usually insufferable jacksasses to most people around them.

LuckyLuke23 • 15 points • 10 March, 2017 01:37 AM

aanarchist • 1 point • 11 March, 2017 04:43 AM

can you explain? i've been hearing more and more about the power of social media and have been wanting to learn a few things.

FLFTW16 • 19 points • 10 March, 2017 12:08 AM

You make a valid point about the self-built empire vs the inherited empire. Here is my rebuttal: Bilzerian won the birth lottery. You can't fault (or praise) a man for something totally out of his control.

That being said, do you approve of how DB has used his wealth and privilege? Would you use it the same way if you were in his shoes? There are many trust fund babies. I have heard a few stories myself from these types in New York City. Neurotic, self-loathing. Some of them are so mal-adjusted they launch themselves off their penthouses and splatter the pavement below. Inheritance is not destiny.

The point I'm driving at is that every man has his inheritance, something some other man will be envious of. Inheritance can be spent and it can be squandered. Most of the users here were born/live in the USA/Europe, some of the richest places on earth and in the richest time period in all of human history. Some of you are tall. Some of you have money or the means to earn it. And all of us live in a time when feminism has made pussy incredibly cheap and easy to come by. We all have an inheritance, and it does no good to look at DB with eyes of envy. Take what you can learn from and forget about the rest.

they will be remembered as titans of their eras and fields while his dude will die unremembered likely from either a drug overdose or a drinking episode or from a STD.

That's great for them, and they are probably quite happy with their lives. I wouldn't trade places with them. In terms of sexual success would you rather be Dan Bilzerian at his prime or Bill Gates in his prime? Marriage 2.0 is a legal-bureaucratic tool of the matriarchy.

Whatever DB's faults are, he is having fun with his life; that is an admirable goal for every man.

BestSC86 • 47 points • 10 March, 2017 04:21 AM

You missed the point.

This dude is exactly like a thousands of these dudes in America.....they inherited family money and spent their lives living the Newport News, Palm Springs, and Florida society circuit. Sure they slay pussy because of their money, family name and breeding, but only a thirsty sexless beta would believe that being a pussy slayer is the epitome of a life well lived. Look I know that when you are on the outside desperate to stick you dick in pussy, it becomes an obsession to idolize those for whom it comes easy and are sticking it in more than a few a year...but it isn't memorable or indicative of a life well lived.

Hell, dudes in West LA running drugs and living in squalor are fucking as much pussy as Dan in a year...that is till they get gunned down in a driveby.....but nobody is aching for those dude's life.

I was simply making the POINT...that you don't compare these soft trust funds babies with people like Gates and Buffet who spent freaking years building a freaking trillion dollar empire and reputation. Don't know about Gates but Buffet was a man's man back in his heyday....shouldn't think that he was always 70 as you see him today.

ProNotPro • points • 10 March, 2017 06:58 AM [recovered]

If this isn't a socially conditioned belief in your brain, you will be able to logically, explain WHY one lifestyle is worthier than the other. Please, proceed...

marlybarrow • 21 points • 10 March, 2017 09:09 AM

One takes effort and adds value to society and the other is degenerate hedonism.

analyticaltoafault • 23 points • 10 March, 2017 01:44 AM

You can certainly fault a man for becoming an adult and not taking his life's gift and becoming a man of character as well.

Marcus Aurelius is a perfect example.

FLFTW16 • 17 points • 10 March, 2017 02:01 AM

You can certainly fault a man for becoming an adult and not taking his life's gift and becoming a man of character as well. Marcus Aurelius is a perfect example.

That requires too much judgment. There are too many competing systems of belief and values. What is a 'man of character' anyway? A man who owns himself and is enjoying his life? A man who builds an empire? A family man? Can a wandering bum with nothing to his name be looked up to for his wisdom and character?

The stoics, as far as I understand them, regard criticizing others to be, in general, a waste of your time, attention, and energy. Those things are better spent improving yourself and reflecting on one's own achievements and shortcomings, because you are the only one capable of knowing what you truly want, and whether you are on the right path to achieving it or not.

DannyDemotta • 0 points • 11 March, 2017 04:35 PM

Some men just want to be crybaby bitches, my dude. It's all they know. I go to the gym and see them going through the motions with idiot exercises - probably 95% certain I'm on steroids because I look that much better than them (I don't take any hormones/prohormones, just typical supps). They see me drive by them in a vehicle that costs 3x what theirs did, probably thinking it's where "all my money" goes (it doesn't, there's plenty more). They see me flossing and probably think I was born into this....Nope, food stamps, welfare, section 8 is my background. And the list goes on and on....

Haters don't just hate - they play The Hater Game 24-7, always looking for ways to tear others down and to excuse their own failures.

[deleted] • 2 points • 10 March, 2017 04:46 PM

I'd imagine that making Dan's entire net worth every week would get you a pretty big high. And they obviously enjoy what they're doing, because you don't become the best ever at something if you don't enjoy it. Gates probably got tired of pussy after seeing how much was thrown at him when he was a literal billionaire bachelor in his 20s. Seriously. You seem to think that Dan would suddenly stop getting girls if he were to stop lifting.

[deleted] • 8 points • 10 March, 2017 02:09 PM

The red pill doesn't tell you how to live your life. NOWHERE!

It explains how the sexual market works so you can navigate through it based on what you like.

Even if Bilzerian was given 100% of his money, what difference does it make? That's like hating on handsome dudes because they can pull with less game than you.

BestSC86 • 12 points • 10 March, 2017 03:54 PM*

So the lesson you take from the red pill is be born with loads of money.....

Oh well, perhaps you should start a adjunct reddit with a new sidebar..it would be much simpler to read.

1. Be born with boatloads of money.
2. Lift
3. Spend loads of money buying the attention of chicks with yachts, parties and trips.
4. Post on social media.
5. Slay pussy.
6. Die.

Of course, most followers will give up at #1 because without #1 the rest of the Dan's philosophy is unworkable.

Nobody is hating on freaking Dan....the post waas about the STUPIDITY of castigating Gates\Buffet as compared to this freaking loser. But it certainly highlights the number of people who will never make it because they would be unwilling to put in the hard work to get resources to live a similar life to this Dan dude unless they were lucky to be born with it.

Oh no, working hours and building a business or company is so beta, but I want loads of money so how do I alpha my way to money.....

[deleted] • 7 points • 10 March, 2017 02:16 PM

What people here are doing is being stupid.

You don't have to be inspired be someone, you don't have to like his character or look up to him ect, ect, to say if he is alpha or beta.

He is all the negative shit people say he is, his behavior is still alpha. People haven't read the fucking sidebar, that's why they get triggered when you tell them that Bilzerian is alpha and Musk, Gates, Buffet ect are beta.

Tongue37 • 1 point • 11 March, 2017 01:57 AM

Exactly, he pays women to hang out with them..what is so cool about that? If I had his money I'd be sort of ashamed to have to pay women big money to come on my boat lol..since he has social status, good looks and money, shouldn't these be enough to get all the women he wants without paying them?!?this makes me think his natural game is not so good

[deleted] • 1 point • 10 March, 2017 11:26 PM

I read something about what you are saying about people like Buffet and Gates. When they earn so much that money is taken out of the equation of happiness, they become something else. With not a specified goal in sight they just work and becoming richer and richer just to see the number on bank account growing. When Buffet brags about buying 3.50 dollar egg muffin it's not because he is cheapskate, it is because he has disconnected himself from the perceived truth that money is a way to happiness, for him being the best/richest etc is the happiness. They will either die as the world's happiest men or as the most miserable as they realise that it was not worth it.

yomo86 • -1 points • 10 March, 2017 01:12 PM

Bill and Warren are the other end of the spectrum. Nothing remotely alpha about them. They do what they do because nothing else comes to mind. Gates never traveled as Gates the Bill and not Microsoft Bill. Buffet has his Egg McMuffin while he could enjoy his life once every while. Providers to the core.

DB is ripped. He put a ton of time and effort into training. Money has nothing to do with that.

How can you say that? His money gives him 40-60 hours per week that the rest of us have to spend working. He has access to elite trainers and can eat professionally-prepared high quality meals. If he juices he can do it under a top-notch doctor's supervision. He can get as much sleep as he needs. He has nothing to stress over.

He has no excuse not to be in peak condition.

Every week I'm in the gym about 15 hours across 6 days. I'd be there 5 hours per day if I didn't have to worry about money.

No, you wouldn't. You would be a lazy fuck because you wouldn't need to work or train a day in your life. You would have bitches to fuck until your dying breath and money to spend, no point in working on building muscles to improve your SMV and social status. You would have that by default.

PS- I'm not talking about you personally, but generalize how almost all people would act in that situation.

aDrunkenWhaler • 5 points • 10 March, 2017 02:55 AM

Most people are fat and lazy. Those that work out do it almost entirely to be more attractive to find a mate. Those that do it mainly for themselves are a tiny fraction.

Give money and power to the first 2 categories and they will become fatter and lazier in an instant, since they will have no incentive to better themselves.

I mean really, who would want to spend any more time at the gym than what's needed for basic maintenance if money wasn't an issue? 15 hours already sounds pretty excessive imo.

[deleted] • 5 points • 9 March, 2017 09:28 PM

You don't have to spend much time in the gym to get ripped. I lift weights three times a week and keep my workouts under 40 minutes. I am about 177 lbs and I recently was able to bench 345 lbs. No excuses.

[deleted] • 8 points • 10 March, 2017 02:55 PM

Ahahahaha ok dude Yea I'm gonna go ahead and call bullshit on that. 345 even at 181 puts you in the highest bracket in strength standards (elite). And if you were aware people at the elite level spend hours every day at the gym while on the juice too

But you did it under 40 minutes because no excuses! Who knew willpower was all you needed

Damn what's up with insecure dudes making lifts up online so much...

[deleted] • 1 point • 10 March, 2017 03:11 PM*

I actually don't make my lifts up buddy. The key is focusing on the 1-5 rep range for strength. Yes, I did put up 345 lbs. It comes down to how you push yourself and I make my workouts intense, so I don't need to spend 1-2 hours lollygagging in the gym.

Each week, I push myself to lift just a little bit more or squeeze out more reps. Also, diet is crucial and making sure you are treating your body right. I take creatine, which probably helps as well. It didn't happen overnight of course, but I stayed focus on making progress

A number of years ago, I was able to deadlift and squat over 430 lbs. My bench press is elite. There are plenty of videos out there of people being able to bench way more than there bodyweight. I also don't take steroids. You don't have to take steroids to be really strong. That's a myth. Stop hating.

[deleted] • 1 point • 10 March, 2017 03:29 PM

Look go bullshit someone else ive been doing this shit for way too long and know too much for your "just high intensity bro and creatine !!!!!!" bullshit to work on me. Face the music when your bullshit gets called out, trust me it'll happen more often. Just ask yourself why do I have to make shit up on the internet, once you find the answer solve that issue in your head.

[deleted] • 1 point • 10 March, 2017 03:32 PM*

Honestly, I don't have to qualify myself. I am telling the truth. It is better to have a workout in 35-40 minutes, allow your body to recover and hit the gym harder each time, then to work out for 1-2 hours and not see progress.

It's pretty simple, but I love how people like you complicate things. In action, it's easier said than done, but once you figure out your goals and focus each time on increasing reps and weight, it's definitely possible. Weightlifting workouts more than 1 hour are actually worse, than 35 minute workouts, unless you are on steroids. There comes a time when it's counterproductive.

[deleted] • -1 points • 9 March, 2017 10:12 PM

If you're bulky naturally though and you're just cutting and getting definition it doesn't take as much time or effort as a skinny fucker like me gaining muscle mass.

Different workouts for different genetically-predisposed and physically-endowed individuals isn't it

RedDeadCred • 4 points • 9 March, 2017 11:03 PM

Really?

I see plenty of progress doing about the same hours per week following good rest/stretch times and total reps per muscle at specified % of 1RM depending on current goals.

2 hours a day of lifting and exercise even 5x a week (basic PPL with legs once even alternating leg muscles weekly) is more than enough for people to see good progress.

I just think your statement of, "hindering his progress," is erroneous as he's doing well above nothing and (based on what can be achieved in the time given) going through a good volume to support rest and growth. Hardly hindering. Sitting on the couch everyday eating cheetos would be a hindrance.

Otherwise you might as well just say anyone that is natty at all is just wasting their time, which is still quite a bad assessment.

RedDeadCred • 1 point • 10 March, 2017 02:00 PM

I guess if you take long rests between your sets you might be okay but if you're doing 18+ sets a workout youre not doing yourself any favors.

[deleted] • 0 points • 10 March, 2017 07:37 AM

Probably taking too long to rest between sets, that will kill your gains unless you are absolutely on-point with diet, rest, workout frequency and the type of exercises you're doing.

FLFTW16 • 5 points • 9 March, 2017 09:14 PM

How can you say that? His money gives him 40-60 hours per week that the rest of us have to spend working.

I'm not arguing that you are factually/logically wrong. Of course you are correct. I'm arguing that this is a woe is me attitude and that this is not constructive for a man to have. I used to suffer from a woe is me attitude and it wasn't until I abandoned that perspective that I started really making progressive on myself.

You're not wrong, but there's no reason to make excuses for yourself. Having time to work out gets you ripped faster, but that doesn't mean you can't reach a high SMV slower and work out enough to maintain a good physique. Also, professionally prepared meals are the same thing; eat at a calorie deficit to lose fat, plan your own diet and get the same quality food for your health as he does but pay less for it.

He's admitted to using steroids and growth hormone

A valid criticism.

He took shortcuts. There is still a worthwhile lesson in that. Those shortcuts are available to almost any man, if he wants to take them. One of the most lauded users on here, GayLubeOil, has posted extensively on the topic.

The real point of my comment was to call out what I read as a 'woe is me' reaction about DB having a lot of money. Thanks for your comment.

[deleted] • 4 points • 10 March, 2017 01:41 AM

Steroids aren't only used as a shortcut, once you get to a certain level you literally cannot progress without the use of gear. For some people that level is lower than others, it all depends on genetics and natural test levels.

Regardless, what's wrong with using a shortcut? What lesson is there on that?

FLFTW16 • 9 points • 10 March, 2017 01:47 AM

Regardless, what's wrong with using a shortcut? What lesson is there on that?

Oh, I didn't mean to imply there is one. Merely pointing at that shortcuts exist.

A fat guy can get his stomach stapled. A short guy can wear lifts to appear taller. Some guys use prostitutes/call girls to gain abundance mentality.

One man's shortcut is another man's "trick" or "strategy." As long as a guy isn't deluding himself I am amoral about such things.

[deleted] • 3 points • 10 March, 2017 02:04 AM

Ah okay, that's fair enough.

[deleted] • 3 points • 10 March, 2017 02:07 AM

There is nothing wrong with using shortcuts. As long as your objective about it. At the base of deciding to do anything for a reward is the lessons you learn along the way. If something comes easy, the lessons that some argue are the point of the progress, get missed.

"Never used their money for fun" because you can objectively know what they do day in day out,

I've been reading about Gates and Buffett for more than 10 years. It's easy to make money by following Buffett's comments on the market. If you think he had even a fraction of the fun DB has had, please show the evidence. Buffett's main hobby is online bridge, as in the card game. He is all about money and business, and might be slightly autistic, having graduated from college at 19. He is smart, but not someone to model your life after if you want to have a fun, memorable life. Like I said, he bragged about eating mcdonald's for breakfast because it's cheap.

i don't know how you're respected in this community

First of all, it sounds like you want to bang the guy. Second of all, you're probably in your teens or early twenties and missing the big picture. That's fine.

I have nothing against Bilzerian and I'm happy that he can have a cool life. Shit, I wish I had that kind of money. I would have the same kind of fun with it for a while. I don't resent him for having a great time, but let's all be real here.

Comparing Gates and Buffett to him is silly and ignorant. Even one percent of their successes completely eclipse what he has achieved, which really isn't that much in the grand scheme of things. There's a lot more to life than partying and fucking random bitches.

This is especially true when you compare him to Bill Gates. Never mind creating the system pretty much every computer on the planet runs on. The things he's done for humanity after leaving Microsoft have secured him a place in the history books forever.

Do your research before posting things that make you look like a dumb-ass. It's pretty much impossible to talk shit about Bill Gates, even if you're an Apple phaggot.

Yeah he's a quiet guy who's a little weird. Most super-geniuses are. When you have that kind of brain-power, you have a hard time relating to the average person, and vice versa.

His achievements make him pretty much a real-life version of super-man.

FLFTW16 • 1 point • 10 March, 2017 04:26 PM

I have nothing against Bilzerian and I'm happy that he can have a cool life.

This was, really, my main point. It's annoying to log on to THE RED PILL and see butt hurt blue pill posts whining about how unfair it is that DB has $100 million from his parents and waa-waa his life is so easy. I hate to see a "poor me" attitude especially on this sub.

Comparing Gates and Buffett to him however, is silly and hilarious. Even one percent of their successes completely eclipse what he has achieved, which really isn't that much in the grand scheme of things. There's more to life than partying.

This is especially true when you compare him to Bill Gates. Never mind creating the system pretty much every computer on the planet runs on. The things he's done for humanity after leaving Microsoft have secured him a place in the history books forever.

Are Gates and Buffett more accomplished/successful than DB? YES. Does DB lead a more fun/exciting life than both of those guys combined? YES.

I have done my research and I know that Gates/Buffett are slightly autistic nerdy blue pill betas. If you stripped away ALL the money from ALL three of these men, DB would still be a popular guy who can pull. Gates/Buffett not a chance even in their prime--they were always socially awkward losers who had to submit to the matriarchal institution of marriage to get pussy.

I can't criticize Bill Gates? There is plenty of room to criticize Bill Gates. He is essentially white knighting the entire continent of Africa. If you think it's bad to support a single mother with three kids by two baby-daddies, it's about a billion times worse to support an entire continent that has never been capable of feeding/watering, clothing, healing, or securing itself. Bill Gates will be responsible for the demographic catastrophe of 2100. Already we are seeing a never ending stream of migration into Europe. Today will look like a trickle compared to tomorrow's torrent. There will be global unrest thanks to Bill Gates. If you think Africa is a violent place (it is), wait til the whole world is populated by Africans with EBT cards. The future looks very African for planet earth thanks to Gates's "charity."

Ozymandias is the example of who NOT to be: a few thousand years from now all of your works will be dust and forgotten. Empire building is NOT self-actualization, it is an unhealthy obsession that takes away from enjoying your life. Sexual gratification is part of life's enjoyment, and this sub is definitely about sexual strategy. Of the three of those men I see DB enjoying life and gettin' some. The other two are Ozymandiases who will do long lasting damage through their hubris.

That said, its about being realistic. Dan is not a self-made man from the looks of things, and I'd warrant that he makes more money of instagram than he has off poker at this point tbh.

He is absolutely the play-boy ideal, but he is not a good role model because there's no path to follow. Dan is something of a problem because he represents a near unattainable end-goal that people lust after. askmrcia • 9 points • 10 March, 2017 01:35 PM

He was a trust fund baby. I'm guessing now he makes his money through investments (Im sure he has top notch advisers) and cameo movie roles.

He probably makes money here and there for showing up a clubs and bars to help bring in traffic. All of these are speculation because he really doesn't have an actual job or run any businesses.

Tongue37 • 2 points • 11 March, 2017 01:52 AM

But he paid for all of that attention! That's the part about him that makes me cringe a little..I would not like the feeling of having to pay women to be with me and then taking pics of us together and acting like its some badge of coolness..

Props to him if it makes him happy

yaboimoneymitch • 3 points • 9 March, 2017 11:32 PM

To be fair, it wasn't really his dad. It was government gibs. He went through seal training twice and served on a few ships but got injured from BUDS and collected disability. He talked about it on JRE

Don't shoot the messenger, but I heard that he doesn't actually get laid that much, that it's all an act. Girls do use him for the things he said, but I thought the secret was that all of the fronting didn't actually lead to him getting laid as much as you would think.

Women are FULLY controlled by social status. I would say their actions are more influenced by other women than men. If women see other attractive women interacting with you, it will automatically draw more of them to you. Found this out after not having a girlfriend for quite a long time. Then, once I got into a stable relationship, girls who had frequently paid little attention to me started blowing up my phone, snapchat, liking all my tweets & instagram posts. Also way back in middle school, I had a girl tell me she liked me just to get me to break up with the girl I was currently "dating." Jealousy is one hell of a drug!

blackoutedfast • -3 points • 9 March, 2017 09:34 PM

Just wanted to throw it out there that its hard to take this guy serious when he is supposedly a "professional poker player" but seeing him play uncovers the truth. His poker "career" is a money laundering cover for his daddy's stolen money; the guy is a fraud, a low life.

If anyone's interested on his pro poker abilities watch this vid.

SrPildoraRoja • 5 points • 9 March, 2017 11:42 PM

Yes and no. He has the money and the extravagant lifestyle, but he's also in control since he's unplugged in the way he sees women and understands the power dynamics between men and women. This is not always the case with wealthy people, since many tend to think that because you can buy anything, you must be respected/loved/fuckable. That's a turn off for women since it's a display of beta traits.

DesignerTom • 7 points • 9 March, 2017 07:55 PM

slay_it_forward • 60 points • 9 March, 2017 08:20 PM

Status halo's everything else. Ed Sheeran is an ugly fuck but women will tell you he's cute because he sings love songs. Couldn't get laid to save his life pre-fame.

Now take that status effect and put it on a big muscular masculine man and women won't be too worried about his Armenian features.

Slut_Slayer9000 • 23 points • 9 March, 2017 10:40 PM

This 100% look at celebrity actors, you think girls would be choking down Brad Pitt's dick if he wasn't famous at all, just a regular dude walking down the street? No, yeah he is generally considered attractive but he isn't exactly Casanova with his looks alone, hardly any man out there is. But his value is astronomically high, so he's a sex symbol.

saibot83 • 3 points • 9 March, 2017 10:50 PM

Andrew the freaking giant (ONE.UGLY.MOTHERFUCKER) got laid. Women don't give a shit about looks if you're famous.

billponderoas • -9 points • 9 March, 2017 08:27 PM

He's not particularly muscular. I maintain that women only go after him because of his lifestyle. Girls in their early to mid twenties that go after him view him as a god of the social life, and being seen with him elevates their status.

Instagram is a huge reason for his success with women, and it is also a reason why women flock towards him.

slay_it_forward • 18 points • 9 March, 2017 08:31 PM

Yes, exactly what I just said - his status.

And in what world is he not muscular?

billponderoas • -21 points • 9 March, 2017 08:36 PM

The lesson to draw from this guy is his ability to be confident in who he is and what he says. Regardless of his status and how he achieved it, we know him because of his unapologetic arrogance and bravado through which he lives his life. That's what makes him a role model.

You know, these guys who read life advice from people who were living in completely other time and civilization?

Like, reading wise advice from Buddhist monks. You know what, those fuckers were MONKS living in another time and civilization mediating half of their lives.

Or Dale Carnegie, who is also mentioned here. Of course, being nice works for him. He is Dale Carnegie. His very important technique in handling people is remembering their names. I dare you, remember names of all people you meet and look how precisely nobody gives a fuck. You are not Dale.

Or...Dan Bilzerian? I think guy is cool. Got absolutely nothing on him. But he is famous millionaire. How far you guys think you will go, listening his advice?

If you need to listen to anyone, that should be someone who had problems similar to yours and solved them, in my opinion.

What the fuck is gold about Bilzerian, I am wondering.

[deleted] • 5 points • 10 March, 2017 05:40 AM

On a side note, I bought Dale's book a while back. It does seem dated AS FUCK.

You think it's a pointless read bra? Give your input.

smilingbanana • points • 10 March, 2017 10:41 PM [recovered]

I wouldn't say pointless or outdated. Rather, most of things in the book will have desired effect if you are powerful as Dale was.

I don't see anything ground breaking in the book. It could eventually be useful to people who have ZERO social skills due to poor upbringing or coming from another culture.

On the other hand some techniques mentioned in the book will make you look very vulnerable and naive.

From a man of his knowledge and experience, I would like to see the book about how to negotiate and fight / break competition. But he didn't write that one.

[deleted] • 1 point • 10 March, 2017 11:44 PM*

smilingbanana • points • 11 March, 2017 09:42 AM [recovered]

Well after short "research" seems you are right, he isn't so powerful as I got impression from his book. But still, for that time, to write bestsellers and hold trainings for people in power surely got him much points and important connections.

I recommend to read his short biography on Wikipedia, quite interesting. Seems he was pretty persistent and bold.

If there is one thing you can learn from guys like him is how utterly disposable something becomes once you have it in abundance. This guy is redpilled about women because he sees them as purely an object. If something is being given freely it becomes disposable.

Now think that women have this. What this millionaire, high status guy has. The average woman has this type of attention from the opposite sex. Not the models, the celebrities, the very good-looking ones. But the boring plain janes...

This is why I say that men will only be truly redpill once they have experienced this sort of abundance. Once you see what women do behind the good guy's back the redpill will be pushed down your throat.

If you still want to get married in this day and age you need to go look for some professional help, the way I see it, its insanity.

SeemedGood • 24 points • 9 March, 2017 11:20 PM

This guy is redpilled about women because he sees them as purely an object.

Seeing women as objects isn't the point of RP. It can be a result of one's increased awareness about the nature of women, but it's certainly not the end goal, nor should it be as it's a deleterious attitude towards life and others. Just because women are so unconscious that they view everyone else as objects (with the occasional exception of their children), doesn't mean that we should do the same. By taking the approach that we should objectify others (and women in particular) as objects as a response to their objectification of us we simply lower ourselves to their level - which is a lack of consciousness and self-mastery. Why would we want to do that?

Perhaps the better option would be to retain our ability to see/respect others as human beings with souls and just be more selective about the women with whom we choose to share anything other than a purely sexual relationship. If a given woman is not at least desiring of increasing her level of consciousness, learning how to see others as human beings with souls, and thus developing the ability to appreciate others for who they are then you don't extend your soul and your love to that woman. That doesn't mean that you see her as an object, it just means that you recognize and appreciate her as she is and limit your interaction with her to a level that she is prepared to understand. You may certainly appreciate the beauty of her soul even - just from a distance, and with the understanding that she is unaligned with it and therefore likely has little consciousness, no self-mastery, and none of the true self-confidence that flows from both and will therefore act out of the innate, the sub-conscious, the ego, and the overwhelming insecurity that flows from those parts of us.

[deleted] • 14 points • 10 March, 2017 07:25 AM

The average woman does NOT get this attention. If you were born an ugly chick you're done. If you're born pretty but don't take care of yourself you're done. If you're born pretty and take care of yourself... Awesome, but you too would be done as old age hits you in your late 30s and that's being pretty conservative. And in any case if you don't go out at all, if you don't have a social circle, if you don't have a life that exposes you to attractive guys, the best you can hope for is to settle with an average guy in an average job.

Confirmation bias makes us think that the average girl is a twenty thirty year old blonde who's a little puffy but still an HB6 and most guys would hit her up. Statically speaking the average woman is in her mid forties from an Asian country (China) with a low income, single, and working a day job to make ends meet.

I think it's fair to say that girls are playing a different game than us guys, but it's not fair to say that their game is necessarily easier than us. There are more things within our control than within theirs.

NabroleonBonaparte • 34 points • 9 March, 2017 07:51 PM

When did inviting the law into your relationship equate to no family and an unstable household?

Get a girl, live together and have kids too. Hell, even have a big celebration for your relationship with each other's families and have a big cake! But don't sign the papers because all it equates to is making a man vulnerable to divorce-rape.

Also, where is the arbitrary line between how selfish and how selfless one should be? What is life about and what gives you the authority to determine what another's life should or shouldn't be?

askmrcia • 7 points • 9 March, 2017 10:15 PM

Going to disagree with you. Be a you can actually in fact marry a good woman. Your marriage can still go wrong because her friends might talk shit about you to her, her parents may not like you or your choice, she may not like the fact that you are always aware for your job, she may become a completely different person once you have kids, ect...

There's just so many factors that can end a marriage, costing you, the man a fortune. And none of it has to do with you marrying a bitch of a woman. What if you lose your job? How you can't support your family. Even if your wife sticks by you (not likely) all her friends and family is going to be throwing shade your way. Did we mention that marriage cost alot of money?

Docbear64 • 2 points • 9 March, 2017 11:58 PM

Your mistake is that you think they're attacking the idea of marriage when it's not the Idea but the laws governing it and how they apply to men .

Most people would agree committing to another person in life as a partner and trusting , investing , and loving each other through the decades is a beautiful sentiment . However the reality of marriage is that legally you go from enjoying and being engaged with someone you love to being legally bound to someone who can benefit financially, Is socially considered the " more responsible" adult for no reason than because she was born without a dick , and therefore The burden on you if the marriage fails and / or if you have kids is that the woman gets to spend the majority of her time with children you helped create, you now pay both alimony and child support to support your children but may not get a chance to see them . On top of that hopefully she is a decent woman because if not the children you helped bring into the world can be turned against you .

all of this for a stupid contract that " proves" you love someone ? Stupid investment at this point .

Like one of the posters above said if you want to fall in love with someone and celebrate your love and devotion to each other please do . Ceremonies like that that truly mean something and aren't just extravagant parties for a bride are in short supply . However how any man can reason that legally obligating himself to someone he has already emotionally and most likely socially invested in is beyond me . The last construct I need to validate any relationship I have is Uncle Sam or whoever Papa or Mother Government is for you .

beautyqueen1790 • 2 points • 10 March, 2017 12:18 AM

Wow someone said it! It's not marriage that's bad per se as much as the laws around it. Lifelong commitment is a choice and no one should be forced into it. But if someone wants that all the power to them. It can be beautiful or ugly. It should not lead to financial ruin because it didn't work out. But just because the law makes it bad doesn't mean no one should get married, just don't allow the law to be the guide. There are such things as amicable divorces and amicable splits.

NabroleonBonaparte • 2 points • 10 March, 2017 01:45 AM

beautyqueen1790 • -4 points • 9 March, 2017 10:45 PM

Yes because all women do that right?! And there is no exception. I guess I'm not a real woman because when I got divorced I did it so he'd be happy and I got nothing and asked for nothing. We split costs 50/50 for our kid and I didn't even ask him to pay me back for money I borrowed for him to go to school. So I guess I'm just a man in a woman's body then or maybe the red pill narrative isn't always true.

Scymnus • 8 points • 9 March, 2017 11:12 PM

AWALT. All women are like that. Not all women do exactly that.

You're a real woman because you were born with tits (or gtfo) and a vagina. Doing those things just makes you a decent person, but I'm not giving you a fucking medal for that.

Men and women are fundamentally different in that men think in general terms, women think in exceptional terms. Just look at you being so predictable, having a tantrum because you don't have the mental capacity to see a world outside your own exception to the rule (solipsism). I wish I could pat you on the head.

Men however, think in general terms. If more than 50 % of marriages end in divorce and men get fucked over in more than 50 % of divorces we're just not going to do that. We don't think of ourselves as exceptions, we assume that we will also follow the rule. Maybe we just lack the arrogance (though we often fake it) or maybe we're just better at math. Look into that last one.

The problem is that you will never admit to men and women having these fundamental biological differences because (ironically) one of your instincts is to hide these so that you can appear to be the exception to the rule (standing out gives you attention, more attention=more male suitors=better options). I could go into why this is really positive for our species but I don't think you deserve or would be able to understand it.

But then again I'm not really writing this for you.

beautyqueen1790 • 3 points • 9 March, 2017 11:18 PM

See you assumed what I think and I actually pretty much agree with you on the fact that men and women are biologically programmed differently and therefore behave differently. Knowing all this we can still choose to act against our biology. I really prefer less attention, not more. And I don't need a medal, I just did the right thing. I wish more people did the right thing. And there are many reasons for marriages ending where not only women are at fault. I think it's easy to blame one side but in reality it's a bit more complicated. Men and women both make their own choices and some choose badly some don't.

Scymnus • 5 points • 10 March, 2017 03:45 AM

I didn't assume anything, you still haven't admitted to shit other than agreeing with me on some level because of how special you are. You're doubling down on the same issue, softening the blow by pulling out contradicting exceptions.

Don't pretend like you agree when we fundamentally disagree on the fact that in most cases people act on their biology. You prefer the same as any woman, a good fucking from a dominant man in a penthouse.

And don't even try to congratulate yourself on doing "the right thing". Maybe you don't understand the gravity of the situation, this is our children we're talking about. The state is taking children from men and giving you the choice to keep them or not. It shouldn't even be your choice to begin with, so you can fuck off with the notion that this was in any way a virtuous action. It's just even more fucked because this goes to show that the norm for women is to condemn men to years of emotional and mental hell.

The facts of the matter are still the same. In most cases a marriage ends with divorce. In 8/10 cases it's the woman filing for divorce. In most divorces the woman ends up with monetary gain and child custody. Let me clarify in case you still don't understand, in most cases men are losing their children against their will.

This is not a blow you should soften because it's so fucked up and so evident that you will only reveal your complete lack of empathy for men.

beautyqueen1790 • 2 points • 10 March, 2017 04:00 AM

Because again you are assuming. I'm against the court assigning custody how they see fit (which in most cases is with the woman) I think child rearing should be done by two parents, even if they are separated. My ex and I share custody and always will because that's for our kids best interest. We took that out of the hands of the court because it should not be up to them to decide except in very rare cases, but again majority of cases are clear cut like you said.

As far as being special, I think if I'm special so is every other human, male and female.

Actually I'm only speaking of myself but I don't prefer "a good fucking from a dominant man in a penthouse." I prefer a relationship and a man who challenges me and that I can grow with and help make successful ( which I did with my ex and I'm happy he is a lawyer and making more money than when we were together while he was in school).

And I'm not congratulating myself, I'm saying I wish more people did the right thing. I'm not sure what is the appropriate reaction in your opinion for me to have exactly.

Actually I do lack empathy you are right about that. But I generally lack empathy for all crybabies regardless of gender.

-You divorced him -You claim it made him happy

Not trying to attack, I'm just wondering how you could make a decision for someone and then claim to know how it affected them.

If it would 100% make him happy, why didn't he get up and divorce YOU on his own immediately, assuming he wouldn't lose anything in the process?

beautyqueen1790 • 3 points • 10 March, 2017 01:57 AM

Fair question and point. But, I didn't divorce him, he divorced me but he was a loyal guy and we had a kid so I had to initiate the separation. We were separated 4 years before he filed for divorce. I never wanted the divorce but he was very clearly unhappy and stayed out of obligation. Because let's face it society says a man should suck it up and be unhappy if it's best for his kids. I don't assume or claim to know how he feels, he's told me since how he feels.

Talk about glass half empty, what's happened to you? I know many people in happy relationships. Sounds like honestly you need God in your life.

Pursuing women, making money, accumulating material items, none of that matters in the end. You need to think about your future and what really matters in life.

jamesso33 • 27 points • 9 March, 2017 08:00 PM

The Jesus freak sub is over ->. No one is saying you can't settle down and have a LTR. Marriage is a fools game. 53% divorce rate. Might as well go to Vegas and put it all on black.

americanmook • 3 points • 9 March, 2017 08:55 PM

I don't think that's what he means. I just tried to move to Denver and came back when I had an existential crisis. Suddenly I realized were all gonna die and this is meaningless. My family though is real and I want to spend all my time with them. It's important.

slay_it_forward • 3 points • 9 March, 2017 08:14 PM

It's not ideal but either is the alternative. Might as well roll the dice. Having children is one of the most fulfilling things in life (so I hear) even if you do get divorced.

metalhead4 • 1 point • 9 March, 2017 08:59 PM

My parents split when I was like 12. They're both in relationships with other people now and I'm 26 and I love having extended family on both sides.

Scymnus • 6 points • 9 March, 2017 09:39 PM

I was abused as a child and lost half my shit in seven divorces. We're all broken losers here so you might as well get the fuck out.

BiggestSur • points • 10 March, 2017 12:24 AM [recovered]

I'm sorry for the trouble you've had all though your experiences don't necessarily transcribe to all people. I like some aspects of TRP but it seems to involve a lot of repressed anger.

Scymnus • 2 points • 10 March, 2017 01:07 AM

I was fucking with you but this is a prime example of why you're unable to see the true nature of women. I'm being a dick to you but the second I serve you some sob story you suck it up and start leveling with me because I'm a victim. Being a victim does not excuse treating other people badly, and for my example I should note that talking shit about other people and ruining their social life is treating them badly. Now:

Imagine a girl is telling you how she broke up with/divorced her ex because she was mistreated or he was emotionally distant or whatever. You don't know for sure if she's telling the truth or not, but because somehow he caused her some kind of pain she's now a victim so you're not really allowed to question it. If you do people will call you a victim blamer and what kind of sensible person would question a victim? You will never get closer to the actual truth, so instead you wholeheartedly or half-assedly take her side and give her emotional support. The fact that she might be lying and just talking shit about a guy because she's pissed he dumped her when she fucked another guy might not even occur to you. Her victim status forces you to at least somewhat take her side, even if you necessarily shouldn't.

You might catch it if you start looking for it, victims are bulletproof and will serve you the fattest lies if they can further their agenda and get away with it. And especially if they can get the kids and half your shit.

beautyqueen1790 • 1 point • 10 March, 2017 04:07 AM

True, you can't question victims. You almost got me with the seven divorce thing. But a victim mentality doesn't get you anywhere. You can't be a victim forever no matter what happens to you. Sure it sucks to get hurt and abused and go through a bad divorce but it doesn't have to freaking stop you. We shouldn't be encouraging victim hood. This is why I like the red pill, it challenged my belief and ideas and that's a good thing. You're only a victim if you let yourself be one. It's not what happens to you that matter but how you deal with it. Maybe that's also another reason why women like alpha males because alphas aren't victims!

BiggestSur • points • 10 March, 2017 03:40 AM [recovered]

You sound like have some weird repressed issues with women as well. What diabolical women are you meeting? Having your mindset will continue to leave you with unhealthy relations. Not all women are bad or such manipulators. Have you ever considered that maybe you were the problem not the them?

Scymnus • 1 point • 10 March, 2017 04:00 AM

You need to look into ad hominem right now and then think really hard about what you really know about me.

I treated women badly when I didn't accept them for who they were and acted like a bitch when they didn't live up to my expectations. Now I'm having pillow talks with women about behaviour you wouldn't believe if I told you. There's an honesty in a cheating woman that only the guy she cheats with will experience. A truth she feels like she can share because he's the only one who knows. If you've never been that man, you probably don't have a clue.

[deleted] • 2 points • 9 March, 2017 10:38 PM

newflame97 • 8 points • 10 March, 2017 08:12 AM

Important to note he was on large amounts of steroids for many years. He maintained that large amount of muscle mass while also consuming incredible amounts of cocaine, MDMA, and alcohol. Those drugs eat away at muscle. You could argue that his heart attacks at a fairly young age (early 30's?) are in large part to that. These days I hear he has to stick with TRT for life because his receptors and natural hormones are fucked.

Undersleep • 5 points • 10 March, 2017 03:18 PM

His heart attack, based on the account he gave on JRE, was simply cocaine-induced. He sounded sooooo proud of himself, too... except that we get at least a handful of retards just like him in the ER, every single week.

logicalthinker1 • -7 points • 10 March, 2017 03:51 AM lots of rich people in the US. Many of them are old dumpy men with beer bellies or are skinny fat.

NakedAndBehindYou • 11 points • 10 March, 2017 04:07 AM

Most rich people worked all their life for their money. Only a handful inherit $100m from daddy to start life off with.

logicalthinker1 • -1 points • 10 March, 2017 04:14 AM

There's a lot in both categories.

But rich people are rarely attractive. They'll either be nerdy betas who have a great tech job or disgusting fake plastic douchebags.

Corruptdead • 10 points • 9 March, 2017 09:05 PM

blackoutedfast • 22 points • 9 March, 2017 09:31 PM

i know plenty of people from families with way more money than DB and they have just as many issues with low-confidence, depression, anxiety and all that stuff.

No doubt about that.

My point though is that the take away of this thread isn't even how he got his wealth, but his attitude towards women. Yet you people feel the need to make a remark of his, according to you and u/ TimmyTurnersNuts, presumably not deserved fortune.

This begs the question of the motivation behind all this, maybe jealousy? Hell I am freaking jealous that I have to work for my shit while he lives his obviously awesome life. Still, I don't go and make a point about it and put someone down to justify my own insecurity.

Anyhow, think as you want.. I think I've spent enough time on this shit now lol but his attitude towards women. Yet you people feel the need to make a remark of his, according to you and u/ TimmyTurnersNuts, presumably not deserved fortune.

One could argue that the only reason he has those attitudes towards women because of the amazing opportunity he was granted by being born rich. You don't even see top 5% guys in the world with that amount of access to women. The main problem with this post is it's not really relatable to hardly any person in this sub because nobody with that amount of money is shit posting on reddit.

"Life is about set up." I've seen this interview and that one line spoke to Me. He hated the whole courting process so he set it up so that him and his boys had tons of girls around him all the time. He doesn't need to build rapport and the girls come and go as they please. If you want to hear how he did it, watch the interview. He may be a trust fund baby, but he'd smart. I can't say I don't admire him in that regard.

slay_it_forward • 22 points • 9 March, 2017 08:21 PM

Only with huge wealth can you set yourself up in that way.

[deleted] • 3 points • 9 March, 2017 07:49 PM

That line really stuck out to me as well. How you set up your life is important, even when you don't have millions.

Do you set it up in a way where you are living somewhere that is convenient to get to work, go to the gym, or run errands?

Things like maid service, which I want when living on my own can make keeping your place clean, a lot easier.

[deleted] • 24 points • 10 March, 2017 02:36 AM

Am I still on the redpill here? Very telling lads, very telling.

The butthurt and passive aggressive statements in the comments confirms my suspicions that lot of you dudes are sheep in wolves clothing.

Where's the objectivity? You're speculating on his character like a bunch of betas leaning up against the bar judging a guy on the dancefloor. Since when does having money(whether it was handed to you or not) make you an alpha male?

Whether you're rich or not, there are guys who know what to do with five girls in a hot tub, and guys who don't. Dan is the former and you should look up to him for that.

RedAsBlood • 9 points • 10 March, 2017 01:58 PM

If any of them actually listened to dan's conversation with joe rogan they'd realize hes a stand up guy who would be super fun to party with and goes way out of his way to help out his buddies.

Sure you can. My neighbor is broke, has no real job, but is somewhat good-looking and plays in a popular local reggae band so gets tons of girls. Woujo • 12 points • 10 March, 2017 12:45 AM

Came across a Larry King interview with Dan Bilzerian, everything you'd expect out of the guy. Pure RP gold.

Dude when did feminine, narcissistic, superficial, materialistic attention whores become RP idols?

You guys are being cuckolded by the mainstream media and corporate machine to worship dumbass, mentally ill, weak men like Trump and Bilzerian. These guys are NOT "red pill," whatever that even means anymore. The fact that the dude needs constant validation from strangers about how awesome his life is proves that he is a weak faggot.

As somebody else in this thread said, the only reason he gets to live the "red pill" life is because his daddy is rich. And he is too much of a fucking faggot to admit it, so he tells this obviously transparent lie that he made all the money playing poker.

I run in a pretty rich crowd in the city I am from and I know lots of wannabe Bilzerian rich guys. I can tell you for a fucking fact that these guys are dumb, emotional cucks. The girls around them are prostitutes and they are constantly getting hustled.

This guy's whole life is a fucking image so he's obviously not going to advertise the times when he gets hustled and played. And if he knows how to game bitches now, it's because he got hustled out of millions of dollars by prostitutes and learned some lessons.

Anybody who 1) believes anything Bilzerian or Trump says and 2) idolizes them is a fucking retard.

logicalthinker1 • 0 points • 10 March, 2017 03:59 AM

Woujo • 1 point • 10 March, 2017 01:44 PM

First of all, the idea that a man should spend his life buying fancy toys, fucking stupid soulless girls, and impressing other people on social media is exactly what pop culture/the media is pushing. If they hate Bilzerian, it's precisely because he is such an obvious example of the life they are pushing that people see how unhappy and sad it really is.

All that said, you missed the whole point of my post, which is that guys like Bilzerian should not be looked up to.

BigGigantic13 • 8 points • 10 March, 2017 04:03 AM

Lmao, Bilzerian is like the ultimate fucking douche in my opinion. He is nothing and would be even less of something without all of his daddy's money. There is nothing cool about this guy at all. He has people, guys and girls, hang around him because they use him for his money and entertainment. He's a loser piggybacking off of his daddy. There is nothing to learn here except that having tons of money brings out the mooches. Surprise surprise.

AWALT? Not really, you're only taking into account the girls that are choosing to sleep with him. And they usually chose to sleep with him because of those qualities.

This reasoning is quite cyclical.

There are always women like that, but not AWALT, at least by any logical reasoning I'm aware of.

RedPillWintergreen • 2 points • 10 March, 2017 08:32 AM

I really don't know much about the man. I see his name pop up on social media from time to time. I think he is some sort of instagram star. Who cares? From reading comments on this thread I understand he inherited all his money. So to me that makes him like an HB10 born with the genetics of a symmetrical face and big tits.

Someone to be aware of take advantage of but not someone to respect or learn anything from. Jamie Dimon, Hunter Harrison, Ray Dalio, James Mattis, etc. Those are what you call real killers.

Neverd0wn • 7 points • 9 March, 2017 08:11 PM

prodigy2throw • 13 points • 9 March, 2017 09:54 PM

FWIW I know a few girls who've been on his snaps. He really doesn't pay how you think. These girls meet him or they actually fly down to where he is and fuck him as long as he tags them on his Instagram. Yes he pays for food, they live with him and drink all his liquor and do all his drugs. But he has enough money so it's all trivial.

As far as I know, it's not an overt system where they charge him hourly or some arrangement. Millions of girls will fuck famous guys for free.

Hmm I don't think Bilzerian is all that to me..he used to be a dork growing up but since he came into money and has some social status due his wealth and poker, now he is a stud..

He pays most of these women to hang out with him correct? That is pretty sad to me tbh..I assume he always gets laid after these paid weekends together?he seems to love the attention he gets from paying a group of porn stars to be on his boat with him..that to me is beta as he is trying too hard to impress someone out there..

Seems like a nice guy but I don't see him as some true alpha stud..I see him as some guy trying way too hard to live up to some kind of reputation..

aanarchist • 1 point • 11 March, 2017 04:41 AM i don't think he's that alpha he just seems like the kind of dude who just doesn't really care about much and had a stroke of good luck, that's why the video after that was about him having a series of heart attacks and how his party lifestyle has affected his health. he inherited money from someone elses hard work, and it just happened to snowball because he got good at poker. he doesn't have much personality or anything that really stands out about him, not much presence. it would be like saying that mark zuckerberg is an alpha because he owns facebook. 2c

Did he not have a heart attack at like in early of his 30s from doing all the blow? No wonder he says 'I do not drink much'.

On a more serious note though, I would not consider a public interview from a person with such history and reputation to be of any value.
