Sex is a byproduct of being a high value man remember?

Now tell me how many high value men you know with inaccurate foresight and shitty instincts.

So true. I missed so many opportunities with girls when I was younger because I was insecure and couldn't read the signs. Or if I did read the signs I wouldn't act right away and blow it.

Impulsiveness? Your non sequitur points are confusing, so I refer you to the last paragraph where I explain how my method can be applied to any readers personal life.

Anyone who wants the full redpill should read books on Persuasion. It may be the most important skill you learn in your life

'Influence' and 'How to fail at everything and still win big' come to mind.

With regards to your intermediate example, isn't that really just fairly obvious that a celebrity type 'marriage' of that nature is doomed from the start. I'm not sure how that could be construed as 'developing your intuition'. I would be more interested to see how you apply these techniques to say, figuring out if your girlfriend is cheating on you, if that makes sense? Useful piece nonetheless, thanks for sharing.

If you didn't like the 2nd example look at the 1st or the 3rd. The formula and the points of all 3 examples remain the same and are explained in the final paragraph.

By no means your instincts are "killer". Maybe you are autistic and seeing such things are huge deal for you. Good for you, but your post have almost no value.
