

No One Has "The Right To Be Believed" — Any Sane Judicial System Recognizes The Null Hypothesis Of The Suspect Being Innocent Until Proven Guilty. This Hypothesis Fails To Be Rejected In The Absence Of Sufficient Evidence.

September 29, 2018 | 10 upvotes | by banned_by_cucks

 You allow a Stanford student who was caught raping an unconscious women, to only get six month in jail (to which he served 3).

You allow an air traffic controller, who choked a woman until she blacked out then masturbated on her face, to walk free.

You allow a Houston doctor who raped heavily sedated patients to avoid jail time.

You want a man who has been accused of sexual assault to sit on the Supreme Court.

You vote a man into office who has been accused of sexual assault to live in the White House.

And you ask why women don't report sexual assault?

If Christine Ford was a republican who voted for Trump, would you have believed her then?

If I got raped after posting this picture, did I deserve it because of what I'm insinuating?

If my skirt was too short or if I had too many drinks, is that an invitation to be raped?

You congratulate Jeff Flake for insisting upon an FBI investigation. But how about Maria Gallagher and Ana Maria Archila? The two women who confronted Flake in an elevator demanding that he look them in their eyes as they recounted their own sexual assault.

Don't think for one second that Flake would've demanded an investigation if those woman didn't force him to listen to their stories. Why is it more shameful to be a victim of sexual assault than it is to be the accused? And I am not saying this as a liberal, I am saying this as a WOMAN. I am saying this as someone who not only believes in a woman's right to choose but also a woman's (or victim's) right to be BELIEVED.

Comments

Stumping-up • 3 points • 29 September, 2018 07:20 AM

The women in the elevator could have been lying.

3% of rapes are proven to be true and result in conviction. 7% of rapes are proven to be false.

This means females lie about rape more than twice as often as it happens.

As a woman, you should be demanded to provide physical evidence because statistics say you're lying.

As for the men who got away free? I'd rather see a couple of sexual perverts get away with it than to see even one female get away with lying about a man.

GarbageAccount115 • 3 points • 29 September, 2018 01:19 PM

Prove that you're worth believing. Less crocodile tears, more evidence.

SuperSaiyanBroly737 • 2 points • 29 September, 2018 09:13 AM

How are Gallagher's and Archila's sob stories relevant to Kavanaugh's confirmation? It's an appeal to emotion.

There's such thing as the right to be believed. The closest thing is the right to due process, which, based on the evidence I've seen so far, is looking good for Kavanuagh.

wathon2 • 1 point • 29 September, 2018 08:16 AM

Women have no one to blame but themselves.

Every time a thot makes a false accusation, it destroys the credibility of real victims.

If women want to be taken seriously, they should go after all those false accusers first.

sir_monkfish • 1 point • 29 September, 2018 09:56 AM

I believe Brock Turner.

DangZagnut • 1 point • 29 September, 2018 12:03 PM

Anyone that does nonsense about looking at someone in the eye while they spout emotionally charges nonsense can 100% of the time be safely ignored because they need theatrics to do anything.

You have no right to be believed. You lie about everything for personal gain.

I'll believe you're being raped if I'm the one raping you.

banned_by_cucks[S] • 1 point • 29 September, 2018 04:45 PM

There's a reason why women are stated to have a 'care-based' morality instead of a justice-based one such as men.

PorkBomber • 1 point • 29 September, 2018 04:32 PM

"Why is it more shameful to be a victim of sexual assault than it is to be accused?"

Because it isn't. God damn, why are women so retarded and ignorant? A sexual assault victim is almost considered a heroine today. Being accused of sexual assault was always worse than being sexual assaulted but nowadays the difference is staggering. Also, most women who get sexually assaulted behave like whores anyway.

