

Our Appeal of the Quarantine to the Reddit Admin

1305 upvotes | 4 October, 2018 | by redpillschool

As I mentioned, we are making the appeal process completely open because we believe there wouldn't be fair play if it was behind closed doors. Below is our appeal to the admin:

First, I would like to tell you that we've posted this entire appeal publicly and plan to post your replies as well. We strongly believe this system you have set up to be a kangaroo court and have evidence to support this notion. If you want to prove to us that you are going to treat this appeals process fairly then we welcome your responses to the contrary.

In your message to us regarding our quarantine, you offer an appeals process:

In this case the quarantine was applied for the high degree of misogyny present in this subreddit. To be removed from quarantine, you may present an appeal here. The appeal should include a detailed accounting of changes to community moderation practices. (Appropriate changes may vary from community to community and could include techniques such as adding more moderators, replacing certain moderators, creating new rules, employing more aggressive auto-moderation tools, adjusting community styling, etc.) The appeal should also offer evidence of sustained, consistent enforcement of these changes over a period of at least one month, demonstrating meaningful community transformation.

You've presented us with no evidence for your accusation, simply an assertion of misogyny. And yet your prescription is to change and modify this undocumented problem, a very thinly veiled setup for failure. You know full well we cannot address concerns that have not been raised - Which makes this a kangaroo court by definition.

Your appeals process does not offer an opportunity to claim innocence, instead placing guilt into the default terms of appeal.

But we reject your charges.

Our moderation team has gone to great length to ensure our members follow reddit's terms of service. We see no terms in the content policy that we have violated. And yet you allege we have broken this unwritten policy. How is it that you expect moderators and community to follow such rules is beyond me. Perhaps it is because you prefer to keep all communities in the dark about the unwritten rules. Keep everybody guilty of some crime, and selectively enforce it upon those you disagree with.

“Show me the man, I'll show you the crime.” — Lavrenti Beria, secret police chief under Stalin

To me, this seems like an immeasurably bad way to run a social media site which depends on its users for long-term survival. Perhaps it's not in your interest to ensure Reddit stays around. Maybe you're using censorship and quarantines as a means to redirect discussion into the direction you prefer. Maybe you're trying to sway an election? I don't know, that's above my pay grade.

Misogyny is a very nebulous term, one that I disagree with heartily. Many use it in places where somebody has been critical of women, but does that meet the criteria of hate? I think that's a very high bar to meet. One way we can test your definition of misogyny is simply to see how you've applied these standards site-wide.

Let's say I started a subreddit with a mission statement:

R/UpsetFemales is a subreddit for mocking reddit's large, vocal, and hypocritical female population.

Women have a right to dignity and to exist, but they don't have a right to be upset and uncomfortable whenever they're confronted with sexism issues.

Would this meet your definition of misogyny?

Well, substitute the words “female” and “women” with white people and you’ve got yourself the sub /r/fragilewhiteredditor. And for some reason they’re not quarantined.

Now I’m sure you guys understand the implications of picking and choosing what completely legal ideas and topics are okay to discuss on reddit. When you choose to block off /r/theredpill and post an endorsement to your point of view (Michel Kimmel), you’re tacitly endorsing the points of view you’ve chosen not to censor – especially the ones that align with Michael Kimmel.

Hatred (by your definition) is okay as long as the target is against white people.

What about towards men? Here are some lovely sentiments floating around reddit that the reddit admin tacitly endorses by not censoring or quarantining:

“Sorry you're going through this. It's the patriarchy: men think they own women. That is a flat out fact.”

“sorry boys but its true and yall need to be taught not to rape. You are a cancer on society.”

“I still see so many people say that "All men are rapists" This is a factually accurate statement expressing that men are socialized as both heterosexual and weapons against women and so typically have sex relationships that are not consensual in a fully self-actualized sense.”

“I’m a misandrist, but I don’t want to be”

So it is clear, you tacitly endorse these positions if they are not quarantined as well.

To make matters worse, when you quarantined us, you put up a message directing our users to Stony Brook University Center for the Study of Men and Masculinities whose executive director is Michael Kimmel. The same Michael Kimmel who denies male abuse victims. I see since then you’ve had the presence of mind to remove it- but without so much as an apology to our community of men who had to witness this. I would absolutely hate to know that the well being of abuse victims on /r/theredpill have been affected, or worse- hurt, by this event.

What would happen if the admin posted a message at the top of TWOX claiming that women’s abuse isn’t nearly as high as reported and that men’s abuse was much worse? Well, I’m pretty sure you’d call that misogyny.

So what’s it called when you do it to men? (It’s called misandry.)

We know the quarantine process isn’t simply about keeping the front page clear of controversial topics. There’s literal shit porn, women getting pissed on, and detailed rape fantasies which have gotten the pass from your administration. Looks like you guys just love shit, piss, and rape.

Meanwhile the content on TRP has helped thousands (if not more) of men find an identity and the strength needed to get back on the horse after terrible events like breakups, divorces, or false rape accusations. For some, they believe TRP literally saved their lives. Some of whom could easily have ended up dead.

Look, you could have asked us to remove ourselves from /r/all, and we would have complied. But the quarantine makes things much worse. Mobile users see a message that we’ve gone private, causing our modmail to get literally hundreds of messages asking for access, completely halting actual mod functions. Members who have already subscribed are having a hard time finding us. It is clear that your goal with quarantine was to put as much into place as possible to make us fail, all while not actually pulling the trigger on an outright ban, because you know full well we keep the user base in check and do not allow rule breaking.

But I'm willing to give you guys the benefit of the doubt. Let's say all of my well documented and evidenced accusations are simply wrong. Let's say you really are just trying to make reddit a nice beige happy-land for new users and advertisers, and your goal was not to tacitly endorse all the hatred on the internet that you have chosen not to censor. I am willing to propose a compromise.

Remove the quarantine, and we will select the option to prevent being seen from /r/all. This has a lot of benefits. First of all, you won't be tacitly endorsing every bit of hate on reddit because you're no longer picking sides. But most importantly, your users will see the admin team actually applies rules in a balanced and fair manner, gaining you a level of respect that, let's face it, Ellen Pao did a good job eroding.

We would be happy to comply with reasonable requests that help you with your advertisers and future IPO. We aren't your enemy. The way you've gone about this was a big mistake and I think we can both agree on that. Let's work together to move past this event and get the admin and users back on the same side for the benefit of reddit.

Archived from theredarchive.com

Comments

CrazyHorseInvincible[M] [score hidden] 4 October, 2018 06:08 PM stickied comment

It bears pointing out that:

At no point in this entire process did Reddit administrators reach out the mod team, either in public or in private, and attempt to open a dialogue.

Reddit has never publicly made clear what precise decision making process goes into bans or quarantines, who makes such decisions, or whether there is a formal process at all.

Reddit as an entity has never troubled to explicitly define many of the terms such as "misogyny" or "racism" which it bans entire communities for. Without such a formal definition, communities cannot anticipate what standards they will be held to.

This lack of transparency leads to the strong appearance that Reddit's gradual process of creeping censorship is not the result of any sort of articulate plan or formal, objective standards, but instead the result of a series of subjective decisions by Reddit staff, made based upon their own personal values and opinions.

"Don't do anything that upsets /u/spez" is not a set of guidelines... it is the lack thereof.

max_peenor • 342 points • 4 October, 2018 03:58 PM

| We aren't your enemy.

That's the strangest thing about this whole saga. This is one of the tightest run ships on the internet. The site wide rules are ruthlessly enforced. Racism, advocating violence against women (and men) and blatant politicking is immediately crushed. Sure, we say things that are uncomfortable, but brigading is explicitly disallowed by the mods and we are entirely tolerant of a huge swath of reddit that does not agree with us. This place is an example of how an orderly, safe sub should be run.

And that gets put in a box...

SlyGradient[M] • 59 points • 5 October, 2018 02:44 PM*

| This is one of the tightest run ships on the internet.

Because we actually have a traditional male hierarchy here with none of that feel-good BS ... of course they would sneeringly dismiss that as a "patriarchy".

Coolstoryjoe1 • 9 points • 8 October, 2018 09:22 PM

This ban is outrageous... when I found this subreddit I was pretty shocked at first by some of the content but like many other ppl here it has absolutely helped me not only in my sexual life but in terms of real human development. Disappointing that reddit is preventing other ppl from finding their way. If there's a new subreddit with similar content pls link below.

666Evo • 24 points • 5 October, 2018 02:12 AM

| Sure, we say things that are uncomfortable

Which are true, but against the narrative.

The admin can't have the truth getting out to too many people.

rawrlolrofl • 2 points • 8 October, 2018 06:00 AM why do we want the truth to get out? Let the people who find their way out of the matrix get their reward. We've got to keep stability and let the 80% of society keep to their fantasy.

daffy_duck233 • 1 point • 8 October, 2018 04:40 PM well that's why mods are proposing to remove trp from r.all instead of quarantining

• points • 1 January, 1970 12:00 AM

[permanently deleted]

rawrlolrofl • 1 point • 19 October, 2018 05:13 AM

Right? who would want a bunch of other RP dudes cockblocking you with their high value?

DancesWithPugs • 50 points • 4 October, 2018 08:28 PM

Some of the admins run a brigade and harassment sub called TopMindsOfReddit

[deleted] • 3 points • 10 October, 2018 03:59 PM

Don't forget Political Humor. It's a breeding ground for republican hatred. The memes they post are literal hate. Yet they aren't banned.

[deleted] • 3 points • 6 October, 2018 12:59 PM

blatant politicking is immediately crushed

This seems to be the point of the quarantine. Through #metoo and the Kavanaugh situation specifically, sexuality has been politicized.

This is what changed, and why this sub has gone from begrudgingly accepted to quarantined.

[deleted] • 242 points • 4 October, 2018 03:55 PM

This is very well written, thank you u/redpillschool for mounting such a vigorous defense of this subreddit. You do us and the movement proud.

Fulp_Piction • 8 points • 5 October, 2018 03:27 PM

The notion that we have to refer to ourselves as 'the movement' is absurd, we're just vilified by the rest of the platform and the lazy media that pander to the "minorities can't be racist" demographic to make $$$.

This is genuinely the right conversation to have for the sake of society in general.

q2p3 • 4 points • 5 October, 2018 05:04 PM

I would be genuinely interested what the dollar value of this industry would be. The more outlandish the story and the more hate they generate the more profit the media makes

• points • 1 January, 1970 12:00 AM

[permanently deleted]

eyewant • 44 points • 4 October, 2018 11:49 PM

Anger is indisputably part of the Kübler-Ross model of grief (aka denial, anger, bargaining, depression and acceptance). To deny someone their anger is to deny them their healing.

This needs to go on the sidebar, ASAP

sqerl • 73 points • 4 October, 2018 04:32 PM

Good job calling out the hypocrisy.

Something tells me we're not dealing with due process, but rather appealing to an emotional rationalization which someone said, "I'll be the one to take them down" for some internet points.

jrpta • 28 points • 4 October, 2018 09:23 PM

That was pretty obvious when an accusation was made with no evidence, and the tone was very much "we expect your appeal to explain how you're going to avoid sinning again" (as opposed to "Here's the evidence you've been sinning. What do you have to say to that?").

sqerl • 15 points • 4 October, 2018 10:06 PM

You'd think it would be obvious but so many people don't see it that way. They get caught up in their emotions and reason goes out the window. Schools teach the kids shit, parents are absent, so how are they to know they're being screwed?

jrpta • 5 points • 6 October, 2018 09:16 PM

I think society has reached the point where a lot of interactions are pre-cooked to manipulate a specific outcome. And the people doing the pre-cooking don't even realise that their behaviour is manipulative.

This is one of the reasons it's dangerous to talk about RP. Few people appreciate being told that they're displaying classic manipulative traits.

DancesWithPugs • 57 points • 4 October, 2018 07:31 PM*

1. I am an abuse victim and felt attacked and invalidated by the admin's actions
2. TRP and related subs helped me turn my life around and understand some of the abuse and hostility I have suffered
3. I am a free speech advocate and believe thought control and censorship are the tools of totalitarians
4. I generally follow egalitarian principles and give just as much respect to my female colleagues and friends as males
5. I believe people can learn from each other and work out their differences, but only when there is a safe place for honest communication
6. The mod team is reasonable and I can see why I got a few warnings for breaking the subreddit's rules
7. I have been studying and discussing gender issues for over two decades and do not need help filtering out wrongthink

GayLubeOil • 100 points • 4 October, 2018 04:21 PM

When passive aggressive betas get called on their bullshit they're don't engage in dialogue. They repress the confrontation up the Xanax dose and hide in their Never Never Land Adult toy collection.

That's my prediction

redpillschool[S] • 34 points • 4 October, 2018 04:22 PM

It wouldn't look good for their new appeals process they just announced to end up being ignored....

GayLubeOil • 58 points • 4 October, 2018 05:01 PM

Their appeals process most likely functions like the appeals process of any university department of diversity and equity. It exists symbolically so that they can feel good about it existing. However functionally it's a kangaroo court.

CrazyHorseInvincible[M] • 33 points • 4 October, 2018 06:14 PM

We expect this.

Reversal of the quarantine, or even the opening a dialogue, may be a goal here, but it's not the anticipated result.

The most likely outcome is, as you have described, a failure to respond or acknowledge that any communication has taken place. The goal with respect to that outcome is that Reddit is publicly seen to have done so.

666Evo • 9 points • 5 October, 2018 02:13 AM

We expect this.

As do most of us. Good luck with the fight, gents.

Chaddeus_Rex • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 03:48 PM

Perhaps give it some time for reddit to respond, then bombard as many subs as possible with screens of them not responding. Just for publicity sake to embarrass them a little and generate discussion?

Its also suitable Machiavellian.

Please don't tell me that TRP mods are going to go full cuck mode and say 'we won't stoop to their level'.

CrazyHorseInvincible[M] • 8 points • 5 October, 2018 04:12 PM

We're not beholden to the outcome of this process.

The thing to understand is that TRP is not fighting a war with Reddit. They don't have the power to impede our goal, because our goal is, and always has been, to provide certain types resources and discussion for those men who want them and seek them out.

We don't need Reddit to do that, and while a move off Reddit would result in some dip in subscriber numbers, we kinda don't give a shit. We'd still be there for those men who made the effort to keep watching and listening. /u/redpillschool, /u/whisper, /u/humansockpuppet, and the rest of the active Vanguarders have always been in agreement that it would be preferable to go back to being a 1k member group, like in the old days, rather than compromise what we do here.

The red pill is not a crusade or movement. It isn't here to effect change in society, it's here to effect change in your life, and we don't need X number of subscribers, or X amount of publicity, to do that.

Because we have no "loss condition" in the possible outcomes of this, Reddit, if it chooses to go to war with us, has no "win condition".

The only question which remains is how badly they will embarrass themselves, and whether they attempt to do damage control, or just ignore the whole thing and hope that relatively few people notice.

Chaddeus_Rex • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 04:23 PM

The only question which remains is how badly they will embarrass themselves, and whether they attempt to do damage control, or just ignore the whole thing and hope that relatively few people notice.

I hear you.

Although there is no war with reddit, why not 'twist the shiv' and give them a bad time? Inconvenience them a little.

A man should not go down without a fight and TRP mods/vanguards as role models should not go down without a fight either. Perhaps it would be suitable to show the young boys how to fight dirty if need be just for its own sake? After all being de-platformed is a 'loss' in a way.

CrazyHorseInvincible[M] • 15 points • 5 October, 2018 05:50 PM

Nah. We're going to be kicked off reddit eventually. We have known this and planned for it since year one. Our very premise personally bothers people from the Silicon Valley beta male culture... it's simply a question of when their feels manage to work through the rationalization process and reach their actions.

They will of course sincerely believe they are making a business decision, but that's how rationalization works.

Our goal is to maximize the embarrassment for them, not in order to reach a wider audience, but for the sake of our own readership... so you can understand just how intellectually, morally, and ideologically bankrupt our opposition is, and why TRP needs to exist.

We're not going to bet anything substantial on winning a debate where our opponent and the moderator are the same person. It's a kangaroo court, and when you're before a kangaroo court, you don't try to win the case, you try to expose for the public that the court is a sham. This is how we are proceeding.

Personally, I'm totally cool with moving to our own platform, now or later.

truecrisis • 10 points • 5 October, 2018 12:14 AM

I think you shouldn't have wrote "you like piss and shit". It's just a cheap shot that doesn't further the discussion.

redpillschool[S] • 27 points • 5 October, 2018 02:14 AM

Kind of disgusting right? Puts you off because it's over the top and obscene? That's actually the point I'm making.

Self-honest • 3 points • 5 October, 2018 03:07 PM

Exactly. Well done.

DannyDemotta • 5 points • 5 October, 2018 06:11 AM

And rape. Don't forget about rape. Unless you're denying rape victims exist?

truecrisis • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 07:46 AM

Nah, just didn't remember the full quote while typing on my mobile.

iiOgetsu • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 02:52 AM

It's actually tactically correct to make such an argument in that fashion; it elicits an emotional response from the reader. No matter how it's perceived, you still technically plus off of it because the underlying objective for this letter is to point out the extreme hypocrisy at play here - something best done with striking language on the internet.

• points • 1 January, 1970 12:00 AM

[permanently deleted]

omega_dawg93 • 17 points • 5 October, 2018 01:05 AM that place is comical to me. pure comedy.

empatheticapathetic • 15 points • 4 October, 2018 07:54 PM

He did

[deleted] • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 11:18 AM

How did you mention another sub without having a bot remove the post? Last time I typed slash r slash something the post was automatically removed.

[deleted] • 69 points • 4 October, 2018 03:58 PM

It's sad that this sub was "quarantined" (or rather, had a thinly veiled attack against it) in the first place, but this appeal is beautifully worded and seems effective enough to either reverse the quarantine or prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that Reddit censors and removes dissenting opinions against their own liberal agenda if they choose not to appeal.

I hope that TheRedPill can continue to grow and spread valuable information to men who need it now more than ever, but I am also prepared to move to TRP.red if the admins decide to silence us again for simply disagreeing with them.

Overall, I think we all need to come together as a community to support its growth no matter the response given to the appeal.

Chaddeus_Rex • 8 points • 5 October, 2018 03:53 PM

it doesn't matter what they write, reddit admin will ignore it.

SpectacularFox • 30 points • 4 October, 2018 08:04 PM

Misandry is fine on reddit, anything but 24/7 fawning over women is considered misogyny and will get you banned. I don't think you're going to have much luck appealing to the admins rationality, they are agenda driven. SJW agenda that is.

Taxus_Calyx • 3 points • 7 October, 2018 07:35 PM

https://en.m.wikipedia.org/wiki/Women_are_wonderful_effect

pseudonym42 • 20 points • 4 October, 2018 07:06 PM

If the admins read this post, good. I was the biggest beta cuck loser you can imagine. Without getting into it, TRP didn't make me hate women. It helped me understand what happened (virtue signalling, trying to negotiate attraction, etc) and suddenly I stopped being angry at women, or the woman in this case, and move on from it. TRP isn't misogynist. It's just reality.

iiOgetsu • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 03:06 AM

What we're seeing is the 80:20 rule being used against us though. People like Sandman and other people more vitriolic than him speaking out on the subreddit and essentially destroying everyone who disagrees, and especially putting their vitriol towards other women. Plus, don't get me started on the false alphas, the ones acting like they slay, but the moment something doesn't go their way, they blame it on "muh hypergamy, AWALT". That's not the point of what Rollo was trying to get across, and the attitude that is perverting the Red Pill into what the Reddit admins are seeing us for is caused by 20% of the users here. It's not the majority of us that are doing this, but there ARE bad apples, and denying that there are will do us no good.

pseudonym42 • 4 points • 5 October, 2018 03:19 AM

It's called the anger phase for a reason. This sub isn't here to support it, it's to help dudes move past it. It's probably more than 20%, but that isn't the point. The point is reddit policies are followed, and yet somehow that didn't matter.

iiOgetsu • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 03:35 AM

Anger phase my foot, that still directly leads to what the outside sees. They don't understand the shit like you and I do, they don't talk to these guys, they don't think like us, they haven't gone through the crap we've gone through. They aren't in the community. So when they come in and see guys going through the anger phase in here, they aren't thinking "Man....he's definitely in the anger phase....lemme at least throw in my two cents to help this kid out", they're thinking "(GASP) THIS IS DEFINITELY MISOGYNY." And then they press the "quarantine button", and everybody dies.

Ok that's exaggerating, I wrote it cuz I thought it was funny, but still, you get my point right? They were out for us from the getgo, but the vitriol was too much regardless. It's something that could've been contained. A simple "Avoid making misogynistic posts at all costs" rule probably would've done the trick. It's not censoring, it's not saying don't make said posts, it's simply putting a warning out there that excessive vitriol that isn't conducive to any sort of discussion, will be removed. But we never had that, we gave it free reign under the fear that someone would poison us with Purple Pilled bullshit. But here we are, in a situation where such a rule could've staved off this quarantine for another year maybe. Does the 20% matter anymore? I think not. Because the ones that have to dig us out of this shithole now are not ourselves, but the mods. All we can do is hope, just like we were doing when we had the ability to make a meaningful call to action in the first place. Now we don't have said ability and we're crying about it. What gives?

pseudonym42 • 3 points • 5 October, 2018 03:50 AM

No one is crying. Don't lose your frame. What you're explaining is society, not just reddit. It's a shit test. TRP will be fine. We hope on reddit, but if not, TRP goes on.

iiOgetsu • 3 points • 5 October, 2018 10:02 AM

Point is, if we buckle now, it's the same as losing frame.

pseudonym42 • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 03:21 PM

Who is buckling?

iiOgetsu • 1 point • 7 October, 2018 03:57 AM

Hehe funny story, I sent the wrong thing to you, I thought I was in a different convo entirely. Here's my point though. I agree, what you say makes sense to an extent, don't get me wrong. However, whether or not we had ppl in the anger phase, we still had avenues to stave this attack off for a lot longer than it actually happened. Letting people sperg in their comments doesn't help, and the ongoing sparging doesn't help. What I sent you was from a different convo, based on the appeal to the Reddit admins. That's what I was concerned with, and that was my bad. Switched convos.

dogkindrepresent • 1 point • 6 October, 2018 08:36 AM

People have a right to anger and hate. I don't really think it's actually appropriate to ban emotion.

I hate pop music for example. It makes me very angry. Those are just emotions. Perfectly acceptable to have.

There are sometimes inappropriate ways to act out emotion and that's entirely different.

iiOgetsu • 1 point • 6 October, 2018 07:43 PM

True, but what may be outrageous to you may not be outrageous to someone else and vice versa. Either way we should've tried our best to keep our shit together, and we failed (understandably, and inevitably). Dealing with it now comes down to how we see ourselves as a community rather than trying to preserve our presence on a platform. You can kill a man but not his ideas.

flat_tree • 18 points • 4 October, 2018 04:44 PM they want us to beg, plain and simple jerpta • 18 points • 4 October, 2018 09:26 PM

They do, but the first rule of RP is you don't beg for anyone.

OhNoBearIsDriving • 4 points • 4 October, 2018 07:55 PM

So a shit test

TheImpossible1 • 17 points • 4 October, 2018 04:27 PM

Pointing out shit from r/GenderCritical would make a better point. It's a pure hate sub and was even on the banout list.

RUALUM15 • 34 points • 4 October, 2018 03:53 PM

Eloquently said. And yet somehow the reddit admins will lose this battle either way. They either fashion together a straw man argument and get publicly exposed or relent with their tails between their legs and admit defeat.

ThePantsThief • 16 points • 4 October, 2018 05:52 PM

Which is why they will not so much as utter a response, since it has not been a month and we have not held up our end of the bargain as they see it.

That or they'll cite that new "positive masculinity" subreddit which is basically rTXC for men. The top post last time I checked was something about the importance of consent.

Chaddeus_Rex • 4 points • 5 October, 2018 03:54 PM

a third option is they ignore it entirely, as if it never happened. that is why I propose that screenshots of this post be made and as many subs get bombarded with them and their lack of response, so that admin is forced to respond or lose face.

redandnarrow • 12 points • 4 October, 2018 06:39 PM

I've been around since the sub was 50k as a lurking reader for years consuming it daily at first and tapering off over time. If there is a ban coming, I just want to thank all the commenters who have posted their testimonies/stories over the years in response to posts. Testimony is really powerful and I've saved many of them.

After reading the side bar and the rare major postings, that was really the main reason to return to the forum and read; the experiences that leaked out here and there from people in the comments. I know that the internet has LARPer, but I know they can't all be false and they match and give light to my own relationships, my parents, and watching my friends relationships and their parents. It all adds new nuances to seeing what is really going on underneath in situations and I've been able to help myself and some friends avoid folly despite not really being able to give them the full pill.

This community has been a great resource in moving my worldview to a better place despite the bitter pill at first. My lifestyle has been much healthier because of it. If the community continues here or trp.red finds its footing with a better format; please keep posting your stories.

swishandswallow • 12 points • 5 October, 2018 12:32 AM

I think one of the major things that led to the quarantine is people trying to politicize the red pill, while in reality, red pill has nothing to do with politics. Red pill existed before politics, it existed while man was still in caves. Red pill theory by itself is a biology lesson but pairing it with shitty commentary from T_D, it takes on a whole new meaning. Ban politics and keep this sub pure.

iiOgetsu • 4 points • 5 October, 2018 03:16 AM

That's the problem, we're getting sucked into the political vacuum. The left politicizes and polarizes everything it touches, it's like a cancer. Your political ideology should be a bi-product of your Red Pilled thinking, not the other way around. You aren't Red Pilled because you are conservative or liberal, you're liberal or conservative based on your Red Pill understanding. People attempting to politicize the philosophy are what's poisoning the community, and that's why I'm a little concerned about Rollo allowing himself to speak on slightly more political things. I'm hoping he can keep away from the slippery slope.

womans_algorithm • 26 points • 4 October, 2018 04:35 PM

RPS used logic!

It wasn't very effective!

moroi • 1 point • 6 October, 2018 01:08 AM

One of the very first lessons I learnt from TRP is that you argue (use logic) for the audience.

womans_algorithm • 2 points • 6 October, 2018 12:37 PM

If you're looking to get majority of the audience, you must evoke emotions.

AnonymousTSCM • 11 points • 4 October, 2018 07:51 PM

It's funny how you mention misandry because it's not like anyone even knows what that means especially feminist subreddits who post about misogyny all day.

cuteshooter • 33 points • 4 October, 2018 04:36 PM

It's not about credibility or cash. It's a last desperate system-wide attempt to control the narrative at all costs. Fuck their IPO, their advertisers, and their hypocritical cuck bullshit.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Aaron_Swartz

[deleted] • 15 points • 4 October, 2018 09:00 PM

Aaron never would have allowed this shit to happen.

cuteshooter • 3 points • 5 October, 2018 09:41 AM

Shit never allowed Aaron to continue happening.

[deleted] • 3 points • 6 October, 2018 06:01 PM

If you ever get the chance, watch The Internet's Own Boy: The Story of Aaron Swartz.

Specifically, watch his girlfriend until 2011, Quinn Norton, hamster the shit out of talking to the feds and basically betraying him. She had a kid from a previous marriage while she was dating him, and her rationalizing is a master class.

MaunaLoona • 5 points • 5 October, 2018 06:52 AM

Once you see who owns reddit all will be clear.

liquorbaron • 7 points • 4 October, 2018 07:53 PM

Geez. Hate to put on a tinfoil hat as it clashes with my neckbeard but this is starting to make that Qanon stuff look legit. There's certainly a lot of censorship going on nowadays by these tech companies.

[deleted] • 26 points • 4 October, 2018 03:47 PM

Is it possible for a quarantine to be overturned? I have no idea how this works theexpertjoel • 36 points • 4 October, 2018 03:54 PM

I have yet to see one overturned. Censorship is at an all time everywhere. Most unfortunately it has reached this community and with us out of the way the precedent is set and everything else on Reddit will be policed heavily

redpillschool[S] • 31 points • 4 October, 2018 04:09 PM

They recently changed their rules to include an appeals process for quarantined subs.

This indicates that they have made a promise to the community to hear and respond to said appeals.

• points • 1 January, 1970 12:00 AM

[permanently deleted]

ThePantsThief • 1 point • 4 October, 2018 05:50 PM

Yeah, it's for appealing allegedly valid quarantines, not for disputing invalid ones.

• points • 1 January, 1970 12:00 AM

[permanently deleted]

blazze • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 10:33 AM inceltears has had a concerted effort since day one of its founding to search for reasons to destroy the manosphere. braincels was an easy target to take down TRP was probably caught in crossfire.

sackofwisdom • 26 points • 4 October, 2018 04:37 PM

You got me with the /r/fragilewhiteredditor bit.

What would happen if the admin posted a message at the top of TWOX claiming that women's abuse isn't nearly as high as reported and that men's abuse was much worse? Well, I'm pretty sure you'd call that misogyny.

So what's it called when you do it to men? (It's called misandry.)

Another great point. Your arguments were well laid out, but the passive aggressive jabs Looks like you guys just love shit, piss, and rape.

aren't going to persuade anyone.

I am willing to propose a compromise.

They hold all the cards. And this community actually prefers to stay out of the limelight. If T_D is shut down, they will have hell to pay. RP, not so much.

I say let them burn it down. We know it is an injustice. It won't go unnoticed by the large number of redditors who have been keeping tally of Reddit admin bullshit and censorship across the internet.

iiOgetsu • 3 points • 5 October, 2018 03:01 AM

Well, technically, doing this is also tactically correct. The point of the subreddit is to not bow. While I agree that normally the passive-aggression wouldn't persuade everyone, in this case we still technically don't lose - we aren't fighting for a physical platform. You can shut down our access, sure, but you can't shut down ideas, which is what the Internet inherently incubates. This fight isn't necessarily a zero-sum game, it's more of a negative sum game, and it kind of has been for a very long time now. As a matter of fact, the Red Pill lifestyle is generally more of a negative-sum game than anything else, because whenever there is a competition over resources, there are only 2 major kinds of games that can be played: zero-sum, and negative-sum. Positive-sum games are alliances, so they are only evident within a zero or negative sum game.

Point is, the fight against the quarantine, and any appeals process for that matter, is more of a negative-sum game in the context of TRP, due to the fact that most people attempting to shut us down in the first place hate us. That hate makes them disregard reason, and it's via this hatred we encounter most of our opposition.

Backing down would implicitly turn this fight into a zero-sum game, which we would lose by default. Bad for us, to say the least.

liquorbaron • 6 points • 4 October, 2018 08:02 PM

As usual the truth needs a warning label.

NiceTryDisaster • 5 points • 4 October, 2018 04:49 PM

CEO is conducting an AMA currently

redpillschool[S] • 5 points • 4 October, 2018 04:50 PM

Indeed they are! ;)

• points • 1 January, 1970 12:00 AM

[permanently deleted]

Field_Of_View • 3 points • 5 October, 2018 01:50 AM typical AMA then.

frankreyes • 1 point • 7 October, 2018 11:32 PM

He was asked about when will T_D be banned. His answer:

<http://archive.is/FIVCO>

Generally the mods of the _donald have been cooperative when we approach them with systematic abuses. Typically we ban entire communities only when the mods are uncooperative or the entire premise of the community is in violation of our policies. In the past we have removed mods of the _donald that refuse to work with us.

Other answer:

As long as the mods of that community continue to cooperate with us in enforcing our site-wide rules, they're not going to see a ban.

segsfault • 6 points • 4 October, 2018 05:46 PM

This is written very well and I want to see the response given by Reddit.

StrongAttitude • 7 points • 5 October, 2018 12:00 AM

This is pointless. They will never un-quarantine this sub.

You still don't know how leftist people do things? The Red Pill is a great danger to the enslavement of men, so they will try their best to get rid of it.

iiOgetsu • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 03:08 AM

Either way, this post is tactically correct. Doing anything else would essentially show a sign of weakness, which would inherently undermine what this subreddit stood for. It would turn our war of attrition (because we knew that we'd be censored at some point) into a zero-sum game, a game which we would inherently lose. We can't afford to lose if we want to preserve any semblance of the community.

DancesWithPugs • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 03:52 PM

Obey your boss at work, obey wifey at home. Ick.

[deleted] • 6 points • 5 October, 2018 12:13 AM*

Reddit has become more cucked each passing year

grewapair • 4 points • 5 October, 2018 12:57 AM

You're attempting to apply logic and reason to a group of people who have none.

Here's the issue in a nutshell. The left believes that men are all powerful, and that they use that power to subjugate women. TRP sees the reality that women have most of the power in the sexual marketplace and do what they can to attempt to increase male power in the sexual marketplace so as to adjust the imbalance. But the left finds any increase in male power to be objectionable: they want it reduced, preferably to zero, not increased.

They don't want equality, any more than they are now objecting about the reality in South Africa, where whites are being murdered and financially castrated. They pushed to eliminate apartheid on the basis of its lack of equality, but the reality is they never cared about equality. They want whites and males to lose their power -- all of it, so they have totally ignored the current total lack of equality in South Africa where it was cause #1 in the 1980s and 1990s. TRP is fundamentally at odds with that, and so they see TRP as misogynist, because of their belief that anyone who doesn't believe in the annihilation of all male power everywhere must be a misogynist.

You are arguing their stated point, which they don't care about at all. What they care about is the elimination of male power and anything that doesn't further than cause is horrible. Instead, you are arguing that you don't hate or degrade women, but that isn't enough for the left, and so you have failed to understand their definition of misogyny, and therefore you are arguing apples while they are arguing oranges, and never shall the trains meet.

So your appeals will fall on deaf ears. Either you build a site of your own or die. Sure go ahead and appeal, but as long as the issues here are fundamentally at odds, I see very little chance of success. In the meantime, we all need to make a point to vote in the elections.

iiOgetsu • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 03:17 AM

Either way, as I said like 3 times in other comments here, this post is still technically tactically correct.

Fulp_Piction • 6 points • 5 October, 2018 03:07 PM

Michael Kimmel currently under investigation for sexual harassment. Obviously there's due process and burden of proof to be considered, but if he's convicted..

Jesus christ Reddit, what a train wreck that would be. Endorsing a rapist as an example of positive masculinity to a sub that you claim is full of misogynists, it would be funny if it wasn't so fucked up.

DancesWithPugs • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 06:32 PM

Oh it's funny, finding amusement in absurdity helps keep me balanced.

[deleted] • 5 points • 5 October, 2018 03:58 PM

The claim of misogyny is the one that baffles me the most. Just go on askTRP and see what happens to men who try to victim puke about their situation and blame women for their troubles. They're always told that THEY are the problem and that THEY need to step up their game.

Maybe it's concepts like AWALT that rub them off the wrong way but AWALT isn't a commentary on women, it's a defense mechanism for vulnerable men who just started their journey and need black and white rules to follow. No one would claim that a woman who just got raped and refuses to be alone with a man is a man hater. So why are they saying that men who just got divorce-raped, got cheated on, maybe multiple times by multiple women or maybe even got literally abused are called misogynists when they follow AWALT??? Sure, it doesn't shine a good light on women as a group but they need to face the reality that women are human: some of them are pieces of shit, some of them will lie, cheat and rob you. Some will show a complete lack of decency. In other words, AWALT means destroying the pedestal SO many men put women on and finally treating them like equals on a moral level. This isn't misogyny, it's common fucking sense.

On a personal note, when I found out the mansphere, I started hating women a little bit. I saw them as evil and deliberately bad. When I found the Red Pill, my burgeoning hatred died off in a matter of days when I understood that women weren't bad, they were just different. I understood that I had been playing a game years while following the wrong rules. I became at peace with women and my relationship improved exponentially, so did their relationship with me. I stopped being pissed off like a bitch at my girlfriend because she didn't follow the covert contracts I made up in my head. I stopped resenting the fact that she didn't fuck me the way I wanted when I understood that choreplay doesn't work and that the only way is to be attractive and not be unattractive. This is all thanks to The Red Pill.

This witch hunt against TRP is purely ideological and if Reddit wants more unhinged beta males like Elliott Rogers, then go ahead, ban us. The blood will be on YOUR hands.

swipedstripes • 3 points • 5 October, 2018 02:06 PM

Whatever, it's not like we haven't seen this coming. All these chicks care about is some rich guy molesting another chick 20 years ago. Other women come and say "Yeah that happened to me too!! Men are pigs." and try to all feel the same about the problem. Not even knowing what happened before. We're both different females won't understand our viewpoints the same way a lot of us still don't understand theirs.

The fact of the matter is that females spend 70-80% of all the money in the world and the world runs on greed. Females hold all the controls. Just start a website far away from Reddit, lead a small group to it and rebuild. Ignore the weakling Males that scream "misogyny".

Fact of the matter is: Women like successful men. They always admit that, they want someone with a good job, a nice house, social skills, bed skills, social group and whatever the fuck else some girlfriend has found in a man. This takes time. Work on yourself and ignore the rest. It's basically a Reddit shittest. No little forum beta's discussing and self-help isn't allowed, how dare you say that about our little angels. Problem is: Reddit is the owner of the platform we post at. It's like being hated by your boss. It's like fucking a prostitute with HIV raw. It might work for a while but you'll die in the end, there is nothing to gain.

Ignore move on. They don't understand society will self-destruct if we continue the hyper feminized way living. Either when a big war comes or all the weakling males simply won't be attractive to females anymore and the birthrates plummet (peculiar that Japan, Germany and other first world countries experience this right? Fuck it, let's import loads of immigrant men!).

Red pill is purely selfish at its core. You work on "yourself" to better "yourself" out of it comes money "you" spend. A body for you to enjoy the benefits of. We'll continue to grow in silence, just stay on your mission, enjoy yourself and also enjoy a female's company if she offers you the ability to experience it. Your close friends will detest you if you try to help them. They'll poke fun at you for trying to get better at something they also do not understand (yet). Just stay on your mission do not discuss the red pill make your accomplishments seem effortless.

All of this political bullshit is unwinnable. Arguing like girls about semantics. I'm white and people hate me on a daily basis in this political climate, I don't give a fuck. My best friend was Black growing up, I've been basically adopted by a Turkish family while being a kid, I practically lived in their home. Am I going to say that when I get accused? I laugh and roll my eyes and just continue with whatever I'm doing. Frame is everything. Muslima girls like me, they'll chat me up, they'll try to reason why they like me. Try to guess which country I'm from, ask if I had other Muslima girls. Don't play their game be smart. Is there a sub about hating white people? I don't give a fuck. These people are weak anyway. I'm working on my own mission. Crabs will get you down.

Growing too much will make something implode. And staying on this cancer infested website will make this self help forum die a slow and painful death.

tldr;

Women and men are different, conflict of interest. Money talks, females spend the bulk of it.

Women like successful men they'll admit it. However they don't want to know about the struggle. It has to be effortless. Otherwise you are a faker to them. Lesser men will hate you, they don't understand the struggle. They're too tired to self help or self improve. They see bad boys grab their Women all day long over and over. Discussing and debating with these people won't help. It's negotiating a relationship on a free platform. Ignore the shittest. Redpill is selfish, helping other people will attract reckless people, hate and ridicule from all parties. And last but not least, fuck politics, we're the 20% we won't ever win in numbers and competing in a game that's rigged against you is dumb. Hate will always exist, just hold frame, ignore, laugh it away and continue your mission.

DancesWithPugs • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 06:31 PM

A crab is the astrological symbol of Cancer. How appropriate. Icky tangent: Supposedly cancer was named as such because of the gross red boils filled with white cancer cells, resembling a cooked crab.

The bucket crabs will drag you down only if you let them.

SirKolbath[] • 9 points • 4 October, 2018 04:09 PM

Out of curiosity, have any outside legal avenues been discussed? I am continually amazed at the number of conservatives such as Laura Loomis, Milo, and the numerous Red Pill authors who have had their livelihoods impacted by Twitter bans and other social media censorship who have not filed lawsuits. There is a huge following of "everymen" like myself who have been silenced on social media who would gladly sign on to a class action lawsuit against Twitter and Facebook. And with this nonsense I'd happily sign in blood on any lawsuit against Reddit.

Is that an option?

WarViper1337 • 11 points • 4 October, 2018 04:39 PM

Without an internet bill of rights there is little anyone can do right now. Since these are all considered private companies they have pretty much free reign in who they ban and when they do it and for whatever reason.

SirKolbath[] • 8 points • 4 October, 2018 05:01 PM*

On a personal level, I don't give a shit who gets banned or for what provided the terms of service are enforced evenly across both sides and not used to silence opposition.

My account was banned seven times on Facebook before I finally closed it. Not one of those bans was the result of any actual violation of their terms of service. I had some liberal cuntstain literally threaten to bash in my teeth. Facebook blithely responded to my report that there was no "credible threat of violence." I called him a cuntstain because, as mentioned, he was, and my account was suspended for thirty days.

If a business has published rules and chooses to operate in a manner that violates those rules, that is fraud and the consumers have the right to file charges. (Time Warner Cable got eviscerated in court for violating their charges and rates structure for precisely that reason.)

The only gray area here is that we are not the consumers on social media; we are the product they sell to advertisers. That is why we need the charge to be led by those who can prove a loss of personal revenue--how many book sales did Illimitablemen.com lose because of his Twitter ban? How much ad revenue did Laura Loomer lose as a result of losing her blue check for posting a video of DNC vice chair Keith Ellison running like a bitch and refusing to answer questions about his physical assault on a woman seven weeks ago?

In any business one who suffers a loss can file a legal charge against the person responsible for that loss if it was due to fraud, negligence, open harassment or defamation. These people have lost thousands of dollars. I can't lead the charge. I'm a peasant. I need someone else to light the torches. I'll bring the pitchforks, and we'll meet at Zuckerberg's summer home.

velinxs • 8 points • 4 October, 2018 03:50 PM

Hear hear.

RedPillHanSolo • 3 points • 4 October, 2018 06:43 PM

I understand that "fuck dem lol" autistic approach is a tad bit childish, but why not just pack our things and go to trp.red? Those who want to learn will find a way, regardless if TRP is a subreddit or another website.

iiOgetsu • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 03:13 AM

Bc TRP.red has Red Pilled Women.....

Not that I hate women and don't wanna have that meta-conversation with them (because I do have that convo....on a near daily basis with a hot chick I'm gaming), but I don't feel that it preserves the integrity of the sub.

TRP is supposed to be a place for MEN. Anything outside of that ventures into Blue Pilled thinking. It's not that women shouldn't have a voice, but it's that it's a place EXPLICITLY FOR THE LEARNING/GROWTH OF MEN. Women aren't the target audience, so the inclusion of TRP.red is asinine. Rule #10 puts it best: "Your comments and posts should be able to stand on the merit of your ideas alone." I don't know how else to explain what's wrong with TRP.red. But until they fix it, I'm not going over there, I'm sticking to the RMG.

redpillschool[S] • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 07:58 PM

What are you talking about?

We have a separate forum dedicated to redpillwomen. It's segregated from <https://www.forums.red/i/theredpill>

Just like on Reddit, we have /r/redpillwomen

iiOgetsu • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 09:29 PM

I know.....I just don't see the need for it in the first place, it's why I lurk. I only really post as OP on /r/asktrp for a reason.

iiOgetsu • 1 point • 7 October, 2018 04:05 AM

Apparently my comment got removed by the autobot so I'll repost it,

I disagree with the existence of said forum, I don't think it needs to exist so I only participate in asktrp. TRP was (in my mind) for men, still is for men, and should stay FOR MEN. It's not that I hate women, but they have their own cliques and shit that they get to have on their own. They have their little safe havens, and they have their areas where they bounce ideas off one another amid the drama that they stir up. Guys don't have that. We don't have the same social tools that women have, and we were deprived of said tools by the Feminist movement as it were. I don't want to participate in anything affiliated with women when it comes to TRP if she or someone else feels the need to announce her sex. Rule #10 says it best. If a woman wants to show up in TRP, there's no need to know at all, let alone have a whole forum for it. Fuck no. Their shit isn't even quarantined; fuck that, the men get to suffer while they turn a blind eye to the women? That's definitely something I want to be a part of. I definitely wanna get dickslapped by a whiteknighting cuck thinking he's "saving the women from our maniacal clutches" with this quarantine. Get fucking real dude.

Oh also props on that appeal. I may disagree with redpillwomen, but I think you made the right decision writing the way you did. Lets hope that you turn some heads at the very least.

1201Seattle • 3 points • 4 October, 2018 07:16 PM

Well said. Very reasonable with sufficient evidence of the “picking sides”.

Can't wait to hear the response...I am not hopeful of change though.

victor_knight[] • 3 points • 5 October, 2018 03:02 AM

MGTOw suffers from analogous BS charges because of all the TFL-ers and INCELS in it pretending to be MGTOw (and frankly acting like children).

TheWaterTemple • 3 points • 5 October, 2018 03:10 AM

Let me just say, I love women.

DarkSyde3000 • 3 points • 5 October, 2018 05:32 AM

Glad I missed that front page shit porn. Don't be surprised if your response to this idiocy is severely lacking. Deplatforming people and groups for wrong think is the new safe space moderation. There's a reason why 4chan/pol/ is one of they last places online that allows free speech despite it's content. Reddit is just part of the technocracy that polices non-existent aggressions that go against their own dogma. If you're in the supposed aggression group, you will not receive a trial, you will be pronounced guilty with extreme prejudice (no pun intended). These sites are nothing more than an approved exchange of ideas.

thubtop • 3 points • 5 October, 2018 08:42 AM the hypocrites can see that they are loosing ground for just being plain wrong with everything, thus they go stalinism in order to keep their power. these "moral" people are not moral, they are deeply unethical; they think reason, logic, an argument are only used to get power. they do not care about human civilization and humanist values and achievements.

the regressive left has lost all moral position, the people of the regressive left have to be redpilled or politically defeated, for they are totalitarian people.

a humanist would be happy to find a "wrong" position and show that it is wrong with facts and logic. a humanist would not "quarantine" text and try to make it harder for counter-arguments to reach an audience. shamelessly immoral people.

SimplyKaz • 3 points • 5 October, 2018 10:37 AM

I'm more of a MGTOw kinda guy but I think this whole quarantine is complete bullshit.

Rest assured that there's people from all of the 'manosphere' subs that have your guys back. MGTOw, MGTOW2.0, MRA, PUA, MSN, PPD and many more. I thought MGTOW would be targeted wayyyy before you guys tbh. I come here on occasion and I don't think I've ever seen any rules broken. This place is like church when compared to the woman hating, anger, mod abuse and incels we have invading the main MGTOW sub.

We may have our slight differences but at the end of the day we're trying to do a similar thing so we stand with you. It would be a real shame to see this quarantine stay. Really speaks volumes about Reddit as a whole with its frontier justice, mob mentality and bias. It's wrong for Reddit to just decide what ideas and information is okay and what isn't.

Best of luck to you.

EDIT: Shows how good the filtering is on this sub that my post got removed for linking to an unapproved sub. You guys run a tight ship. The admins shouldn't have anything to complain about.

redpillschool[S] • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 01:14 PM

Thanks!

Shows how good the filtering is on this sub that my post got removed for linking to an unapproved sub. You guys run a tight ship. The admins shouldn't have anything to complain about.

I really hope they take this into account. We do everything we can to prevent brigading.

iLLprincipLeS • 3 points • 6 October, 2018 07:48 AM

There's something truly pathetic about a social order that depends upon absolute monopoly control over public opinion formation merely to survive.

sqerl • 3 points • 10 October, 2018 12:03 PM

Happening today:

"The Good Censor"

Google bans free speech because Trump won.

<https://www.breitbart.com/tech/2018/10/09/the-good-censor-leaked-google-briefing-admits-abandonment-of-free-speech-for-safety-and-civility/>

This is why it's all political. In an effort to demonize an anti-establishment president, Google (and probably all main stream social media), want to curb "free speech" for safety and civility. Which we all know is a crock of shit when politicians and media incite violence with their own rhetoric.

I won't go on about this, but if google censoring is true, as the leak reveals, it's the excuse social media is using to justify banning/quarantining/censoring any voice identified as wrong think.

If I was an Orwellian overlord, I'd censor all your asses so I would remain in power. Also, if social media was regulated like the financial industry, they would be under massive regulations to ensure each country had their own flavor of regulations. This would have a devastating impact on profitability (compared to now). What's their solution? Censor everything.

B3ER • 5 points • 4 October, 2018 04:58 PM

Like a fucking boss. Stand firm for the good that is done here. Don't back down against the morons that run Reddit.

[deleted] • 2 points • 4 October, 2018 04:31 PM

thank you.

Distortedmadness • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 01:28 AM

Is there another site this will migrate to in case it gets deleted?

redpillschool[S] • 3 points • 5 October, 2018 02:11 AM

<https://www.trp.red> and <https://www.forums.red>

• points • 1 January, 1970 12:00 AM

[permanently deleted]

TheKrullonline • 1 point • 9 October, 2018 09:15 AM

<https://www.trp.red> was created a long time ago anticipating this would happen some day. I remember the day r/fatpeoplehate got banned as the first example. The mods explained to the community directly that they would be next at some point.

Chelsie10 • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 06:19 AM

I love you mods. However as we all know the admins most likely aware of the aforementioned hypocrisy. They most likely are going to enable the inheritantly marxist SJW cause. In fact, they may double down and ban us. If this is the last comment I make on this sub, may it be this, long live free speech and God Bless America.

cafeitalia • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 01:17 PM

The appeal is too long and that takes away the focal point.

Quaternionz • 1 point • 7 October, 2018 05:43 AM

Yeah, I agree. It could have been better written.

One of the things that almost turned me off from TRP when I first got here was the borderline illiterate vibe of the writing. Even GayLubeOil (praise be his name) has pretty shitty command of punctuation and grammar sometimes. I almost left just due to the writing quality when I first arrived. "How can people who write this poorly possibly be getting anything right?". Then the sidebar lead me to therationalmale.com, where Rollo is very eloquent. After Rollo opened my eyes I learned to just look past the writing quality here and distill posts for their underlying values.

I suspect that if the writing style on TRP were more intellectual the quarantine might not even have happened. Aside from being misandrist the left is also very biased against non-intellectuals. I'd know, I was pretty far left and that was definitely a bias I had.

TRP would benefit from having editors review posts for writing quality. At least important posts from thought leaders and major contributors. Not for content, but just for grammar and general writing quality.

sexy_mofol • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 04:10 PM

Not for nothing, but if this kind of thing continues at the steady pace it's been happening, expect a complete information lockout 3 to 6 months (probably won't be earlier, as they won't want to allow for a significant regrouping period) before Election Night 2020. All these bans, de-platforms, service denials, etc. across the entire "Not-Left-Country" landscape are related, and are a long game being played by the people who got BTFO in 2016 and haven't forgotten it. Don't fool yourselves into thinking this move isn't a smaller part of that whole. TRP may seem further removed from political subs like T_D, but in the minds of the people waving these banhammers and attenuation tactics, It's not.

ChooseTheGreenPill • 7 points • 4 October, 2018 04:40 PM

I really disagree with your tone and overall argumentation style here. This isn't a debate, this is an appeal. Please keep that in mind. This doesn't represent the issue well, and has literally zero possibility of accomplishing anything useful. Your writing is full of ad hominem and whataboutism, when it should be about TRP, and the compromises we are willing to make.

I really hope that you didn't send this yet, because this is ridiculous. I completely misses the point of appeal, and leaves nobody unaware of the fact that you don't understand the issue here. Just accusing the Reddit admins of being unjust isn't going to help. Doing so is important, but if you want results you still have to "prove" that no misogyny is allowed in this subreddit.

Our moderation team has gone to great length to ensure our members follow reddit's terms of service. We see no terms in the content policy that we have violated. And yet you allege we have broken this unwritten policy. How is it that you expect moderators and community to follow such rules is beyond me. Perhaps it is because you prefer to keep all communities in the dark about the unwritten rules.

This is the good part.

To me, this seems like an immeasurably bad way to run a social media site which depends on its users for long-term survival. Perhaps it's not in your interest to ensure Reddit stays around. Maybe you're using censorship and quarantines as a means to redirect discussion into the direction you prefer. Maybe you're trying to sway an election? I don't know, that's above my pay grade.

Not useful. Not constructive. Just a useless and largely irrelevant insult.

Hatred (by your definition) is okay as long as the target is against white people.

Wording this in a bit more polite tone might actually make it a good point. Now it's just an angry man shouting about the world not being fair.

What about towards men? Here are some lovely sentiments floating around reddit that the reddit admin tacitly endorses by not censoring or quarantining:

Whataboutism? Not useful. Not really even constructive. As sad it is, hatred against men isn't shocking or highly offensive, and therefore not subject to quarantine. Moreover, the referenced posts are not very popular, and usually the problematic content wasn't even in the post, but in comments.

To make matters worse, when you quarantined us, you put up a message directing our users to Stony Brook University Center for the Study of Men and Masculinities whose executive director is Michael Kimmel. The same Michael Kimmel who denies male abuse victims. I see since then you've had the presence of mind to remove it- but without so much as an apology to our community of men who had to witness this. I would absolutely hate to know that the well being of abuse victims on / r / thepill have been affected, or worse-hurt, by this event.

A good point. However, whining about male abuse victims isn't really that relevant. I know that it is a real issue. I know that somebody might have been hurt. But still, maybe this could be worded to sound like a legitimate worry, and not just pretentious victimization.

We know the quarantine process isn't simply about keeping the front page clear of controversial topics. There's literal shit porn, women getting pissed on, and detailed rape fantasies which have gotten the pass from your administration. Looks like you guys just love shit, piss, and rape.

Once again, ad hominem isn't really the way to convince somebody they are wrong. Those subreddits are marked as NSFW and aren't even nearly as popular as TRP. They are not beign linked. They do not have a political side. They do not discuss ideas. They aren't even a bit shocking, since everybody knows what to expect when entering such a subreddit. And I think they do not negatively affect the ad revenue of Reddit. Or even the public image of it.

If you want to present an example case of hypocrisy, I suggest that you compare TRP to T_D, since T_D has not been banned or quarantined, even when they break multiple rules of Reddit. But then again, they generate money. We don't.

But I'm willing to give you guys the benefit of the doubt. Let's say all of my well documented and evidenced accusations are simply wrong. Let's say you really are just trying to make reddit a nice beige happy-land for new users and advertisers, and your goal was not to tacitly endorse all the hatred on the internet that you have chosen not to censor.

Please. Do not go and insult them when you are trying to appeal to them.

We would be happy to comply with reasonable requests that help you with your advertisers and future IPO. We aren't your enemy. The way you've gone about this was a big mistake and I think we can both agree on that. Let's work together to move past this event and get the admin and users back on the same side for the benefit of reddit.

Now, this is what you needed to say.

redpillschool[S] • 10 points • 4 October, 2018 04:43 PM

Maybe you don't understand what we're doing here.

NotTuringBot • 1 point • 4 October, 2018 05:20 PM

This comes from a position of respect to you and the appeal you have taken time to write, but shouldn't we be applying TRP principles to this, what is essentially a shit test?

For example: applying STFU (not literally say nothing, but say a lot less) would result in your appeal looking like this:

In your message to us regarding our quarantine, you offer an appeals process:

In this case the quarantine was applied for the high degree of misogyny present in this subreddit. To be removed from quarantine, you may present an appeal here. The appeal should include a detailed accounting of changes to community moderation practices. (Appropriate changes may vary from community to community and could include techniques such as adding more moderators, replacing certain moderators, creating new rules, employing more aggressive auto-moderation tools, adjusting community styling, etc.) The appeal should also offer evidence of sustained, consistent enforcement of these changes over a period of at least one month, demonstrating meaningful community transformation.

We've been presented with no evidence for the accusation, simply a (currently) unfounded assertion of misogyny. We always work to comply with Reddit rules, but we cannot address concerns that have not been evidenced, rules we do not know about, nor rules that we have not broken - we are hopeful that this appeals process will be fair and equitable, so look forward to concrete evidence of rulebreaking that we can tackle or behavior we should change.

As things stand, we plead "not guilty" to the charges.

Our moderation team has gone to great length to ensure our members follow reddit's terms of service. We see no terms in the content policy that we have violated.

We want to work with you and are willing to propose a compromise.

Remove the quarantine, and we will select the option to prevent being seen from r_all. This has a lot of benefits. First of all, you won't be tacitly endorsing every bit of hate on reddit because you're no longer picking sides. But most importantly, your users will see the admin team actually applies rules in a balanced and fair manner, gaining you a level of respect that, let's face it, Ellen Pao did a good job eroding.

We would be happy to comply with reasonable requests that help you with your advertisers and future IPO. We aren't your enemy. The way you've gone about this was a big mistake and I think we can both agree on that. Let's work together to move past this event and get the admin and users back on the same side for the benefit of reddit.

ChooseTheGreenPill • 1 point • 4 October, 2018 04:45 PM

That's completely possible. Would you mind to explain?

JamesSkepp • 7 points • 4 October, 2018 05:10 PM

Talking to eachother, which is the point of Reddit in the first place.

RVA-FAN • 2 points • 8 October, 2018 04:43 AM

This is an appeals process, not "talking to each other."

It should be treated differently. Now they're just going to brush aside all the legitimate claims he made and focus that he thinks banning TRP is their attempt to sway the elections...

If you give them stuff to reply to that has nothing to do with the topic at hand, they will. It's making deflection easier.

Imperator_Red • -2 points • 4 October, 2018 04:52 PM

Whataboutism? Not useful

Why not? I feel that whataboutism is actually completely legitimate. It shows the opposition's hypocrisy. This isn't a college logic course. There is nothing logical about the people we are dealing with.

Bill Clinton is a rapist.

ChooseTheGreenPill • 1 point • 4 October, 2018 06:43 PM

But there is a logical side to this. Reddit wants to make money, and they think TRP is scaring advertisers away. TRP wants to have the quarantine lifted. There might be possible compromises, and discussing about them would be the only way to make this a win-win situation. I don't think we can shame them to not do this, since the public opinion is that TRP is evil. Nor I suppose we should. If TRP wants to exist in Reddit, there must be a compromise-agreement.

Dafuq_Gusthapened • 2 points • 4 October, 2018 07:16 PM

"and they think TRP is scaring advertisers away."

OR

they don't like the content and are opting to subvert it a bit.

Compromising is how we got here. At what point does that spirit of compromise end? Someone HAS to throw the rock through the window, metaphorically speaking.

Aren't you tired of compromising your life??? 'Green Pill' indeed. smh

C-grij • 3 points • 4 October, 2018 05:09 PM*

This was well written, as many others have mentioned, thank you.

If this subs gets removed (which I hope it does not), Is there an archive where we can view the sub and it's posts?

redpillschool[S] • 3 points • 4 October, 2018 05:13 PM

<https://www.forums.red/i/theredpill>

Shadowthrice • 1 point • 4 October, 2018 05:57 PM

Well presented, with a minor exception.

You may call it tone policing, but since you have clearly taken pains to establish a tone...the stuff about shit and piss and porn was unnecessary and inflammatory.

Regardless, I predict the admins give either no response or an arrogant bite such as, "The quarantine stands per our previous communication."

redpillschool[S] • 4 points • 4 October, 2018 05:58 PM

You may call it tone policing, but since you have clearly taken pains to establish a tone...the stuff about shit and piss and porn was unnecessary and inflammatory.

If you think that was offensive and didn't belong then I think my point was well presented.

Shadowthrice • 5 points • 4 October, 2018 06:55 PM*

Fair enough. I appreciate your taking the time to present our case to the Reddit admins.

I know being a mod of this sub is hard work with little reward, but the discussions have helped many men, and they have helped me.

Again, thank you for your effort and dedication.

RuleZeroDAD • 1 point • 4 October, 2018 09:23 PM

Anything for you Serena.....

[deleted] • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 02:51 AM

Why would you write that massive paragraph when it can just be boiled down to:

"You've presented us with no evidence for your accusation, simply an assertion of misogyny. And yet your prescription is to change and modify this undocumented problem, What is the problem?"

Why write anything beyond that?

Hell I think the official TRP response should just be:

"k"

Why do we even want to get unquarantined?

Instead of a trickle of new members, it'll come in waves which make things easier as there'll be value for money in posting information.

LuckyLuke23 • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 06:27 AM oh... so they are trying to IPO. NOW I understand why they are getting rid of us. I expect the subreddit counts to go from a few 1million to a few thousand.

jrr6415sun • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 06:29 AM they are not going to read all that, just be concise and to the point.

immibis • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 08:22 AM

Did you actually tell the admins they are racist and sexist? LOL good luck with that. I expect that part to backfire.

redpillschool[S] • 3 points • 5 October, 2018 01:17 PM

I calls it like I sees it.

newjacktown • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 08:37 AM

If this subreddit gets shutdown, do we have an alternative location to head to?

redpillschool[S] • 2 points • 5 October, 2018 01:16 PM

<https://www.trp.red> and <https://www.forums.red>

[deleted] • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 11:13 AM

You know what "implicit bias" is? It's when you don't know you're being biased.

Given we cannot prove "implicit bias" then you must be guilty of it!

Fix your "implicit bias" which you cannot, by definition, know about!

CainPrice • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 03:57 PM

Obviously, the goal of this "appeal" is not actually getting Reddit to withdraw the quarantine. The appeal begins with a threat - "We're making this process public!", casts shade - "Maybe you want to deliberately keep people in the dark with unclear policies!", stamps its feet with self importance - "This is a bad way to run things and without users you'll fail!", and instead of focusing on the non-offensive nature of content in The Red Pill just lists a bunch of other subreddits with bad content and accuses the Reddit administration of bias and favoritism. Then, this "appeal" throws up its hands declaring that it expects the whole process to be a kangaroo court anyway.

The real hope of this "appeal" is to try to draw attention to the fact that the Reddit administration is biased, partisan, emotional, reactionary, arbitrary, etc., and to discredit their policies and appeal process.

I don't think that's going to get anybody anywhere, because hardly anybody on the internet outside of The Red Pill's readership is actually following this story with interest and casting judgments on Reddit over the outcome. Nobody cares if Reddit is a kangaroo court that arbitrarily enforces vague policies except the people who are already reading The Red Pill, and maybe the people who are against The Red Pill and happy to see it go.

friendandadvisor • 1 point • 6 October, 2018 12:38 AM

LOL! You thought that an appeal would get considered!

I have, after only two bans from other subs, maybe 3, realized that when one is banned, especially for tenuous reasons, one may as well go masturbate into a potted plant. It will get better results.

tam8a_tomato • 1 point • 6 October, 2018 04:34 PM*

I know this is late, and I'm not sure if I should add this to the pile of modmail that is already present because of quarantine. But I also want to note that the sidebar, probably the most important asset of this sub, is GONE when viewing the sub as a logged-out user on the new reddit's desktop site. This is not the case for those subscribed to r/trp, which may be why I haven't seen discussion about it. I don't know what it looks like for those unsubscribed who have reddit accounts.

It goes without saying what this means. But it's not just those new users and lurkers who are curious about us after the red pill is somehow come into their life... it's those who are now checking us out BECAUSE of the quarantine.

I hope the mods know about this already.

Edit: Comments are also invisible viewing the same way.

BrianSingerPoolparty • 1 point • 7 October, 2018 03:15 AM

Tragic and all of a sudden, where do we go from here bothers? Damn it

TomeVessel • 1 point • 7 October, 2018 07:16 AM

Very well-written response that touches on every issue with this quarantine. Thank you.

friendlynaboureano • 1 point • 7 October, 2018 07:18 PM

I didn't understand why I couldn't access this page on my mobile until reading this post. It's quite odd that this happened and a friend of mine is going through the exact same episode with his job. Where he made a comment to a female coworker, she complained and he got a 2-week suspension and he's stressing cuz he may lose his job. All the while the "boss" never asked my friend for his side of the story, and just suspended him and is causing him grief.

I'm not understanding or liking this "PC", libtard agenda that is happening within our society. Why is everyone so damn SENSITIVE!? Kids need discipline, the fact that children these days and millennials never got spanked or yelled at for doing something wrong or some other form of discipline has created this age where everyone feels entitled just because they are alive. Get off your high horse, come back to reality and realize that life is tough, it's honest, it's brutal, it's hard and it never quits.

Being overall sensitive and not disciplined is ruining society and people are becoming well useless really. Being a single straight white male these days is the hardest thing, everyone shits on you just for that reason.

I want to go build a log cabin in the woods and throw away my mobile device, then I don't have to pay attention to these idiots

xaz479 • 1 point • 8 October, 2018 04:24 PM

You know the saying "Fall Seven Times, Stand Eight". I really appreciate that you wrote this, let's not give up on this sub!!!

jseph1234 • 1 point • 10 October, 2018 08:52 AM

I have belonged to the Subreddit for two years and this "Quarantine" is just ridiculous!! I have GREATLY benefited from the material from this subreddit and I am going to look into how I can expose the ridiculous origins of this quarantine.

[deleted] • 1 point • 11 October, 2018 10:27 AM

I actually don't care about much of the pickup, and women psychology posts in here,
BUT THIS IS STILL, BY FAR, THE MOST RATIONAL SUBREDDIT ON REDDIT AND I DON'T WANT IT BANNED!

Flipnash • 1 point • 11 October, 2018 05:19 PM

I don't think this appeal will work. You come across as adversarial rather than cooperative. Which prevents any kind of discussion from actually happening.

Aggressive_Beta • 1 point • 11 October, 2018 08:03 PM

Reddit is a private business that is going to do whatever it feels will yield it more profit. If they feel it will be more profitable in the long run to quarantine TRP then they will do it. They don't care how hypocritical they are about it or whose precious snowflake feelings they hurt by doing it. Why should they?

redpillschool[S] • 1 point • 11 October, 2018 08:22 PM

Managing the userbase is part of profiting. Won't have a website without users.

Now, will losing TRP make a big wave? Very unlikely.

But not sticking to the very public appeals process they just 2 weeks ago announced.. well that starts spreading ill will with even non-trp users.

They should take a hint from the diggs before them. Users will only take so much abuse.

darkstar1031 • 1 point • 12 October, 2018 04:32 PM

I guarantee this whole mess is about Reddit's upcoming IPO, but in order to do that, they have to make themselves more appealing to advertisers and the "public sphere" than they already are. Also one should not discount the influence of certain celebrity voices that are directly connected to the highest levels of Reddit's leadership, such as a certain well known tennis player who happens to be married to one of those top level administrators. Never mind the good that this sub has done since its creation, never mind the overall positive message presented here, the mean man over at TheRedPill said something that I didn't like, make him go away.
AWALT.

But don't worry. By the time 2020 comes around, reddit will be the PG-13 disney fantasy-land where nothing bad can ever happen, and the mean ole white men are shooed away. RIP reddit. It was fun while it lasted.

bambam1911 • 1 point • 13 October, 2018 04:46 AM

I am here to show support for the red pill and to take a stand against internet censorship facebook also cracked down on pages the same goes for twitter. Time to take the red pill and man up to take back our rights or risk living in a beta society

orielew • 1 point • 14 October, 2018 04:23 PM

Thanks for taking your time to make such a detailed response like this one. Hopefully Reddit admins re-think their actions.

bitterconsultant • 1 point • 13 December, 2018 09:56 PM

Is there anything we can do to help with this appeal?

I want to add that free speech is dying and we are entering an age of a fascist left... shame on Reddit.

rawrlolrofl • 1 point • 8 October, 2018 05:58 AM

I personally feel this sub should be kept private, why do we want others to know this knowledge? And quite clearly these are blue pill cucks who do not even know the definitions of misogyny and rape, they just follow suit when women push them to. Who gives a shit? Let's focus on a small community with secret knowledge. The less competition the better.

M_Justice • 1 point • 6 October, 2018 06:19 PM

I think this practice of banning The Red Pill selectively is unconstitutional and further in violation of the Unruh Act which prevents from discriminating on the basis of sex, gender and gender based points of view. This is a lawsuit against Reddit and those who participated in the ban waiting to happen. I have lawyers looking into this already as would happily serve as a plaintiff in this case.

ThePlague • -1 points • 8 October, 2018 01:05 PM

Reddit is shit-testing TRP and the response hasn't been textbook, at least not in a good way.

redpillschool[S] • 3 points • 8 October, 2018 01:34 PM

Try looking past the 2 dimensional plane.

ThePlague • 0 points • 8 October, 2018 01:50 PM

Every plane is 2 dimensional, but they can be at angles to each other. The current "situation" is attributing complexity and meaning where there is none or very little. SJWs don't like Red Pill, do what they can to annoy and shit test the subreddits. Hilarity ensues.

There is no bargaining or reasoning with these people, and any attempt is at best pointless and can give the appearance of looking weak and supplicating. It's straight-up RP outcome as a result of the belief in scarcity.

redpillschool[S] • 2 points • 8 October, 2018 01:54 PM

You're so close.

• points • 1 January, 1970 12:00 AM

[permanently deleted]

redpillschool[S] • 6 points • 4 October, 2018 04:53 PM

This isn't a courtroom. And the game being played isn't what you think.

Red-Curious • 2 points • 4 October, 2018 05:04 PM

I'm fully aware. But if you want results, there is a certain amount of tact that must be applied. That's all I'm saying. Here's a good example:

We see no terms in the content policy that we have violated. And yet you allege we have broken this unwritten policy.

You link to the written policy, then call it unwritten. You're probably referring to the unwritten standards that cause them to discriminate against one sub, but not another, but that's not made clear, so it just looks like you're incompetent.

Here's another one:

To me, this seems like an immeasurably bad way to run a social media site which depends on its users for long-term survival.

They have all the data about how this works. They know that even if the outright banned TRP a certain % would still stay on reddit and they wouldn't actually lose that % of users. As for those that do leave permanently (which would be very few), they're inclined to suppose they're the types of users they wouldn't want around anyway. So, you're not proving a point about the financial harm TRP can cause to reddit if the userbase leaves - you're only proving ignorance about how insignificant a ban on TRP would be to reddit's overall profit margins. There are good arguments to make (and you made some), but this isn't one of them.

Here's another one:

Misogyny is a very nebulous term, one that I disagree with heartily.

Your point about it being a nebulous term is a good one. It could range from anything like, "Women are evil and deserve to die" to "Every woman I've ever known has abandoned me, so now I have difficulty trusting women in my life." But when you say you "disagree heartily" with that term - what definition are you going by? You're undermining your own point about it being nebulous by doing this.

To be clear, I'm not saying your post is bad - just that there are lots of pot holes that could be shored up. I wouldn't want to see them miss your major points (which are good) because they get hung up on stupid stuff like this. But in argumentative writing, people will always focus on the small errors to discredit what you have to say rather than addressing the main thrust or admitting you're right.

redpillschool[S] • 4 points • 4 October, 2018 05:08 PM

Did you read the content policy? Not one mention of the rule we broke. Therefore: Unwritten rule Listen, I know you're trying to help but you're really barking up the wrong tree here...

ThePlague • 0 points • 5 October, 2018 09:22 PM*

I don't get what the big deal is: any man deterred by some slack-jaw site admins saying "this sub is eeeeevil" isn't ready to swallow the red pill anyway. It's pretty bitchy to whine about it, much more effective if it just had been ignored and seen as an example of an ineffective hindrance to men. The only differences that I see are:

1. Little exclamation mark upper left. It's adorable.
2. "Quarantine" notice where the number of subscribers use to be. I think I read somewhere that mods can still see the number of subscribers, but ordinary users can't. Some people care about that sort of stuff, so the mods might consider updating the top link/text in the sidebar with the subscriber number. Or not. Shrug.

Operationally, it's not all that different than something being marked NSFW.

DeadliftRx • -2 points • 4 October, 2018 04:28 PM

You would offer to give up access to the ladder on all for release from quarantine?

Since when do we negotiate with terrorists? They will just come back for another slice of the pie, later. Would you negotiate with a woman who quarantined you from sex?

We are morally and objectively substantiated.

Do not bend knee.

DeadliftRx • -1 points • 4 October, 2018 04:32 PM

Wow. Censored by the automoderator for linking r-all?

We do not negotiate with terrorists. Your spine has rounded. Your knee has bent, preemptively.

Why?

redpillschool[S] • 13 points • 4 October, 2018 04:45 PM

Inter-reddit linking has been disabled since the beginning, in order to pre-emptively address admin concerns.

It's actions like these that show good faith and put us into such a good bargaining position we're in today.

I fear for this generation.

DeadliftRx • 3 points • 4 October, 2018 05:12 PM

Thank you for the linking explanation.

JamesSkepp • 7 points • 4 October, 2018 05:08 PM

We do not negotiate with terrorists.

You've watched too many Holywood movies with that phrase and not enough movies about how real-politik is done.

DeadliftRx • -1 points • 4 October, 2018 05:11 PM

I'm not interested in politics. TRP isn't political. They will end TRP simply because they want to and are able to do so.

Why enter their frame? My mind is blown.

redpillschool[S] • 7 points • 4 October, 2018 05:15 PM

I'm not interested in politics. TRP isn't political.

You haven't been paying attention in class.

valvadi • 6 points • 4 October, 2018 05:41 PM

TRP as a praxeology and a community steers away from politicking, but that doesn't mean we are free from politics. When our mission statement is the embodiment of everything certain political groups hate, politics tend to come our way.

JamesSkepp • 3 points • 4 October, 2018 09:15 PM

They will end TRP simply because they want to and are able to do so.

That's real-politik.

You have an opportunity to learn something new, something you do not agree with, nevertheless - something new.

DancesWithPugs • 1 point • 5 October, 2018 06:18 PM

Politics is interested in you