

I'm on a deletion rampage. Got something stupid to post? Don't waste your time.

July 3, 2016 | 504 upvotes | by redpillschool

Every once in a while we have a holiday weekend which marks the end of school for the kids and time away from the computer for the mods. What ensues is total chaos.

So, I've been popping on every few hours and deleting about a dozen or so posts at a time.

If you think you have something to say, make sure you've got a coherent point, that it's fleshed out properly, and that it's well-written and well-formatted. Make sure it's longer than a paragraph and says more than "Hey mannnn do it for you, ya know??? LOVE YOURSELF LOL111!!111"

I don't know if people just drank too much this weekend, or if we put a sign up on our door saying "retards now, please." But we're not interested in zen-ish platitudes like "learn to love yourself" and "you don't need no woman."

The fact is, we're here because we want to strive to be better. Inner game and monk mode are two over-used terms I hear too often on TRP that mostly translate to "how to procrastinate instead of meet women."

Fuck that noise. Inner peace is for complacent idiots. If you want inner peace (which I don't recommend), then fine, find it once you've fucked a hundred hotties on spring break. But if you haven't... you should feel inner turmoil. That's what drives you if you haven't yet achieved your goals. Want to fuck lots of hot women? The answer isn't ass-hat advice like "learn to be okay home alone eating chocolate chip ice cream on saturday."

I, personally, think the drive to success requires you to NEVER find total inner peace. Instead, embrace the desire and need to more and better. This is what the alphas at the top feel. They feel the sweet sweet high of success, which wears off quickly pushing them to reach even higher.

(Before the spergs jump in and start arguing, YES, success certainly gives you a happier and more fulfilling life, but there should always be that drive to do more, better, faster and stronger.)

You have some actionable advice? Post away. Want to post examples of TRP in the world? Post away. Want to post "do it for yourself, you deserve it!!!" Head on over to /r/TwoXChromosomes where results don't matter.

I'm not giving out warnings, it's too much work. You'll know you posted total shit when your post goes missing and you got a one-day ban.

Earlier, I removed a post called "Practicing Good Consent" which basically took the stance that we're all rapists unless we ask over and over "can I touch the left quadrant of your nipple?" and "cant I now move my second finger into position during my finger thrust?"

So how do you practice good consent? Are there areas you need to work on? How do you communicate or seek out boundaries?

It's like we're at sensitivity training and need to be brain washed.

Fucking hell, obviously get consent before fucking a woman, but none of this mamby-pamby shit. Clearly a SJW thinking they can evangelize to us like a god damned missionary.

eviledy • 95 points • 3 July, 2016 06:35 PM

"May I kiss you?" Is best thing you can do to turn a woman completely off.

They want you to grab them by the root of their hair, slam them up against a wall and kiss them hard.

Battle-Scars • 89 points • 3 July, 2016 06:52 PM

Nothing gets them wetter than exercising my "white male privilege on their bodies"

eviledy • 51 points • 3 July, 2016 06:55 PM

It must suck for most women these days.. going on three dates and the guy isn't making any moves so she has to kiss him and he pulls back saying "I'm not ready to get physical until I know you better"

Battle-Scars • 61 points • 3 July, 2016 07:03 PM

I've actually used that sentence but only after massive escalation to the point of her knowing she's about to get fucked. The look on their face is hilarious for about 3 seconds, then a wry smile from you as you throw them over your shoulder and off to the bedroom.

rp_newdawn • 8 points • 3 July, 2016 07:16 PM

lmfao I'm stealing that gjs628 • 14 points • 3 July, 2016 09:00 PM

Now they know what it's like being a guy trying to get lucky with a woman playing hard-to-get. Not so much fun when you start losing at your own game, is it now ladies?

Boovs4life • 1 point • 8 July, 2016 06:35 AM

I cringed because there are guys that actually do this

Cookiest • 12 points • 3 July, 2016 10:41 PM

I did this to my first girlfriend right when things were heating up.

She laughed mercilessly at me. "Like, seriously?"

I never made that mistake again

TRP117 • 6 points • 4 July, 2016 08:52 PM

Even looking at the dumb romance movies I let my ex goad me into watching show this. If you're ever watching a movie that's a "chick flick" you'll notice that it contains spontaneous passionate sex, some of it rough and with no words only lust and desire.

Bottom line, actions not words.

Theotropho • -2 points • 4 July, 2016 02:51 PM

That depends on their personal history.

If asking to kiss her ruins your game then you need more game.

WastedPotential • 6 points • 4 July, 2016 03:28 PM

If you ask that, you probably don't have much to begin with.

Theotropho • -5 points • 4 July, 2016 03:38 PM

ha

I've been asking since I was a teen and I've likely fucked more and hotter women than 90% of the people here.

Lean in and hesitate... ask with your faces close. It's not hard.

Works a lot better than getting grabby and pushy and thinking you have to do that to get laid.

[deleted] • 4 points • 4 July, 2016 08:42 PM

Yes kinda, but when you already have your faces close, there's no real difference in asking or not. Either you ask or you don't, it really doesn't matter at that point. All you do is delay a little, which in itself is good.

Theotropho • 1 point • 4 July, 2016 09:04 PM

yup. You see how even something like this can be worked in.

EDIT: and the difference is you'll stand out as the guy that asked instead of desperately trying to seal the deal

Prostitute "game"

Arcturus_ • 16 points • 3 July, 2016 10:07 PM

it doesn't matter what they say because I'm going in regardless

And this is why TRP gets a rape vibe reputation.

Lsegundo • 1 point • 4 July, 2016 03:19 AM

They were possibly trying to do you a favor since they had 4 other dicks in their mouth that morning. How long will it be before one of your angels decides to press rape charges since she said no kissing and you "forced yourself on her"?

antariusz • 2 points • 4 July, 2016 08:23 PM*

Heh, they ain't angels, they are just women that charge upfront for sex instead of trying to sneak it out afterward.

My mouth is still dirtier than theirs.

And if you honestly worry about having charges pressed against you, a) you wouldn't ever partake in prostitutes or other illegal activities ever anyway, and b) you'd avoid all other women also. Because I have used that same line on non-paying women too, it works just as well.

The important part is that if you're maintaining eye contact (she'd been giving you fuck me eyes) and going in when you're saying it, so that she understands her response doesn't really matter anyway. It's just funny because even when asked a rhetorical question, a woman's first instinct is to shit test, even if they actually want the opposite.

666Evo • 28 points • 4 July, 2016 02:43 AM

"can I touch the left quadrant of your nipple?"

"Oh dear. You see, my finger is quite large and your nipple is quite small. I seem to have touched a full 1 half of your nipple. I must apologise for my boorish behaviour and will report myself to the police for rape immediately."

HumanSockPuppet • 18 points • 3 July, 2016 11:38 PM

CHAD_J_THUNDERCOCK • 8 points • 5 July, 2016 02:54 PM

This stuff is taught to college students now. If 10% of them are believing it then we should expect to see these beliefs start creeping in and getting worse each year.

TryDoingSomethingNew • 5 points • 7 July, 2016 08:06 PM

Unfortunately, and depressingly, you are so correct.

It's disgusting and should make any masculine (normal) male a bit sick to know.

Rynolz • 0 points • 10 July, 2016 08:35 PM

Can confirm. Had a chick telling me her female friend was crying the other day about her "white priveledge" after the Dallas cop shooting. They're both recent grads. Universities are fucking these kids heads real hard right now. Don't worry I've got ammo to fix their shit ideas though. I live for that kind of thing.

Entropy-7 • 5 points • 4 July, 2016 07:53 PM

The closest I have come to this nonsense was after a good meal we cuddled on the couch and I asked "do you want to make love, fuck, or be completely dominated?"

She went for option 3 and we had a merry time, and this supports my theory that BDSM is your best defense in a "yes-means-yes" climate.

TryDoingSomethingNew • 1 point • 7 July, 2016 08:08 PM

I like how you smartly phrased-and framed-the question.

All the options you gave were still positive answers; just different "yes"s .

aanarchist • 12 points • 3 July, 2016 07:54 PM

I have never gotten explicit consent other than moaning or cheering when I put my dick in. I don't even know how that's supposed to work.

"May I furiously penetrate m'lady with my dick now?", or what? Maybe followed by tipping my condom? Or wearing something like this(NSFW)?

TryDoingSomethingNew • 1 point • 7 July, 2016 08:05 PM

I'm curious, when you removed it, did you also send a message to the poster? To let them know how ridiculous their post was.

It seems that perhaps a post like theirs would be worth something to at least laugh at and ridicule. But I respect you for cleaning out the trash and sparing us that "consent" bullshit (male-shaming/control).

G_Petronius • 74 points • 3 July, 2016 08:20 PM [recovered]

I stopped reading this subreddit a month ago because every 99 threads out 100 are feel good bullshit. It used to be a place for tough love and actionable advice, now it's losers telling each other they're all going to make it and/or it doesn't matter if they do.

The trend's been this for a while but lately all the posts have become like this, not just most. I'd come to the subreddit and go through the first two pages, nothing but people patting themselves and each other on the back.

I hope you can bring it back, but I think the chemo's going to have to be much harsher than this.

grewapair • 21 points • 3 July, 2016 09:27 PM

You mean the post from the guy saying he had so many Tinder dates he just invited them home on the first date wasn't helpful? Or the guy saying he had two girls at his house fighting over him wasn't typical?

mariurize_legiuana • 2 points • 11 July, 2016 11:20 AM

It's almost as if The Red Pill was just feel good bullshit for desperate men.

calibrateThought • 1 point • 6 July, 2016 09:19 AM

So post something.

I've noticed there are some strange threads occasionally working their way up too...but guess what, still infinitely less bullshit to filter through here to get good content than literally anywhere else on the web I obtain information from.

I'm guessing deleting posts isn't a paid position (if it is, sign me up) so the best way to ensure the sub has good content is creating it yourself and posting it.

Zombocom1911 • -3 points • 3 July, 2016 10:57 PM

Toughest love of all: get off the hamster wheel of self improvement and just fuck prostitutes.

G_Petronius • 30 points • 3 July, 2016 11:01 PM [recovered]

Keep telling yourself that shelling cash on chicks that pretend poorly as if they wanted to fuck you is a superior way of life compared to actually fucking women who want to fuck you. Keep believing that your ingrained evolutionary instincts can be switched off because you decided to. I'm serious here: it puts money in the economy and removes competition for me, so that's two plusses.

Zombocom1911 • -2 points • 3 July, 2016 11:02 PM

If pussy is the goal, and not ego gratification, then the end result is the same. I've been with 10 whores in one day in a club in Germany, and I have been with just as many non whores at swingers parties. Both are tons of fun.

G_Petronius • 14 points • 3 July, 2016 11:09 PM [recovered]

k buddy, no problem. Do your thing. Just notice this: you're the guy who needs to tell others that their lifestyle is inferior because they're on the "hamster wheel" seeking "ego gratification". I honestly don't give a fuck about you. I don't need to reinforce that my way of life is better or try to shame others into following it, because I don't have the lingering feeling that I'm doing something pathetic that needs to be justified by a superiority complex.

Have a great life and keep fucking dozens of whores per day, or whatever it is that you think you do.

Zombocom1911 • -6 points • 3 July, 2016 11:18 PM

. It used to be a place for tough love and actionable advice,

You asked for tough love and actionable advice, but don't want to hear it. If the end goal is pussy, self improvement is pointless, futile, and extraneous. Just fuck whores. Simple equation.

G_Petronius • 7 points • 3 July, 2016 11:25 PM [recovered]

There's nothing tough about telling yourself "you don't need to change, just drop money on used-up whores there's no difference". But like I said, keep telling yourself that.

Zombocom1911 • -2 points • 3 July, 2016 11:29 PM

What you don't get is, they are ALL used up whores. You won't find a virgin to marry and make the mother of your children in the western world anywhere, and who even wants that anyway. Why would I change anything, I'm having a great time.

[deleted] • 12 points • 3 July, 2016 11:33 PM

What you don't get is, they are ALL used up whores.

Yes, I get it, nihilism is easier than facing reality. "They're ALL used up whores" helps mask the difference between a women who's fucked 10 dudes and one who has fucked 1000 (literally, in your case). Paying to fuck the latter is just as good as not paying to fuck the former right? keep telling yourself that dude, you're having a great time, no problem.

Why would I change anything, I'm having a great time.

Of course you are. You're a baller with the money to fuck 10 whores a day in a German brothel; German, not Kenyan, prices are commesurate. You're living the life, having sexual experiences most men in history haven't even dreamed of. That's why you're here on reddit spreading the good news to us. Oh lord merciful how grateful I am for that.

Emes91 • 3 points • 5 July, 2016 10:22 AM

Paying to fuck the latter is just as good as not paying to fuck the former right?

Lel, but you ARE paying to fuck the former. You're paying a lot more in fact. You're paying with real money (to dress nicely etc.) and you're paying with shitload of time and effort - to get and keep fit, to learn and play this pathetic "game" etc. All that just for that thing with no brain but with cunt and boobs to fuck you and fulfill your desperate desire of approval of others.

And BTW - in this discussion you are obviously this guy who is all red telling someone else how wrong he is and you are not. You're arrogant and passive-aggressive while this other dude is calmly explaining his points.

Zombocom1911 • 3 points • 3 July, 2016 11:59 PM

Personally, in my experience, the girl who has fucked 1000 would be a much better lay, than one who has fucked 10 or 1, because she has that much more practice, that is again, if the simple enjoyment of pussy is your true goal, and not ego boosting. The entry fee was 150 euros flat rate. Hardly baller money. The sexual experience was priceless though.

TryDoingSomethingNew • 2 points • 7 July, 2016 08:12 PM

"get off the hamster wheel of self improvement"

I don't want to hear poor, incorrect advice. There's a big difference.

Self-improvement is nowhere near a "hamster wheel" type of scenario.

That comment was so amazingly off the mark I honestly think you should be embarrassed and re-evaluate some things in your life.

Zombocom1911 • 1 point • 7 July, 2016 08:18 PM

It is a hamster wheel if you don't end up getting the type of women you want, even after decades of self-improvement. Whether or not type of results you are after are not achieved, after all is said and done., is a personal matter of opinion, each person must know what they are willing to settle for in life, but for example, if your goal is to have sex with HB10's and you can only pull HB7's , no matter what you did in life, no matter how hard you tried, then the hamster wheel did NOT lead you to the destination you wanted to reach. It is idiotic to think every man who embarks on a voyage of self-improvement will be able to have sex with the top 5% of women.

TryDoingSomethingNew • 1 point • 7 July, 2016 08:24 PM

Ok, it wasn't clear to me what you meant originally, so my previous response is not relevant.

On that note I tend to agree with what you wrote here, but it sounded like you meant something quite different originally.

Inline with your comment, I see the perspective (well one, anyway) that many men..say the average Joe... dream of having a 7 or 8 when in fact most aren't willing to improve themselves to come close to getting one, and so easily settle for 4s and 5-6s at best. I have noticed that a lot.

[deleted] • 3 points • 4 July, 2016 08:38 AM

Says "If pussy is the goal and not who gratification, then the end result is the same". Proceeds to stroke his ego telling us how many whores he's been with in one day.

Zombocom1911 • 4 points • 4 July, 2016 08:09 PM

I wasn't really trying to brag man, they are whores, after all.

[deleted] • 0 points • 4 July, 2016 04:55 AM

That's not tough love at all. That's just a temporary solution and it's patently obvious to everyone.

Zombocom1911 • 6 points • 4 July, 2016 05:03 AM

Why is it just a temporary solution? You're not looking for love and companionship are you? There are plenty of countries where prostitution is 100% legal and relatively cheap. Plenty of western men have permanently moved to Thailand, for example.

[deleted] • 2 points • 4 July, 2016 05:07 AM

It depends on what your problem is.

If your problem is "I want to experience sex every once in a while" or "I don't want to die without having experienced sex" then it's a solution.

That's not the problem that TRP is solving.

Zombocom1911 • 2 points • 4 July, 2016 05:09 AM

You're completely wrong about that, there are many countries with legal prostitution where due to the rate of exchange , western world men can easily afford live in girlfriend type of situations, Thailand being one of them.

calibrateThought • 1 point • 6 July, 2016 09:23 AM

Outside of raising children I wouldn't want to live with even a good quality woman...why would I invite a whore to live in my home?

As someone who makes quite a bit of money your points about prostitution resonate with me somewhat - my personal time is more valuable than the hourly rate charged by whores...so sometimes I would much rather optimize it such that I am engaged in some activity and then can just quickly go to a scheduled meeting for some unhindered sex.

But come on dude, flirting with women is fun; I don't want to waste my personal time gaming women but there are tons of situations where you meet them incidentally and to simply ignore those opportunities in favor of prostitution is very strange and seems like a cop-out.

vorverk • 22 points • 3 July, 2016 10:26 PM

I figured out that the pill is not for everyone. I showed it to a friend after a bad breakup and he swallowed it like a candy. Fast forward 1 year, and he is back buying dinners and driving girls around and being a nice guy. He is literally proud of not fucking them and being just a friend. My main plate is laughing how stupid he is.

This subreddit (or movement) is doomed to be averaged to a lowest common denominator, because that is the nature of things that go mainstream. More people that swallow the pill, more people will rationalize (ie hamster) out of it, around it, feel-good it etc. People know sugar is bad, but they still eat it.

Barsukas_Tukas • 7 points • 4 July, 2016 08:13 AM

I think that guys who have been in this for a long time and can easily differentiate from blue pill painted red and real red pill should add something like "Useful past TRP posts" where most of valuable posts are added.

This sub may eventually be averaged, but such sidebar topic would be something that would help new guys find loads of information that isn't bullshit.

[deleted] • 1 point • 9 July, 2016 10:46 PM

Pretty much anything you would possibly need is in the sidebar already, even a collection of past useful posts, I think it's under redpill101. It's a PDF compilation of every post you'd need as a beginner, think it was 200 pages at least.

What's on the front page is just mostly shitposting by beginners who haven't even read the literature suggested, let alone internalized anything the red pill has to teach, and of course the anger phase woman hating going on by those same beginners.

But I understand it, there's just not much more to add to it, and with so many new subscribers it just becomes a circlejerk.

ChrisBenRoy • 2 points • 11 July, 2016 03:21 PM

There's a very real effect of using all this knowledge after a BP break up to get one to their next BP relationship and start the process all over. I can see that easily happening.

Battle-Scars • 81 points • 3 July, 2016 06:04 PM

You're like MacArthur retaking the Philippines. It's been a shitpost jungle in here, if I have to read one more post about game of thrones, or "how I got a handjob Saturday night" I think I'll swallow a bullet.

redpillschool[S] • 67 points • 3 July, 2016 06:05 PM

I gotta tell you, it really helps when people click report on shitposts. The reports go straight to us. I sometimes don't catch a shitpost until 12 hours later. If people clicked report instead of commented "this is a shitpost" I'd have it deleted in minutes, not hours.

Battle-Scars • 17 points • 3 July, 2016 06:07 PM

Never found a reason to do it, in the last week I think I've done it 5 times.

The field reports on here drive me nuts. I almost never read them, which is a shame, because every now and then a field report actually makes a good point/observation or two and I learn from it.

But pretty much every field report goes like this: "Hey TRP, I am so grateful for you. I was a beta 18 hours ago, but came onto TRP, read a couple posts on the sidebar, and applied it to my oneitis, and it worked, she <kissed me/talked to me/gave me a BJ/fucked me> and now everything is happy ever after, thanks TRP, i got what I needed out of TRP and wont be coming back or doing anymore reading, my oneitis fucked me thats all that matters"

Great. My question is, so what? What lessons did you learn? What observations can you make? What is the analysis of it all?

In other words, it's too much summarization and not any analyzation.

Field Reports should be about analysis, not a summary of what happened. If you have been coming to TRP for 2.5 years like I have you've read the same field report summary 500 times.

I think there should be some kind of minimum standard to meet for field reports. If its all summary and little-to-no analysis or no meaningful analysis it should be axed.

Sad, but there seems to be a need for a required click through on the sidebar before you are allowed to post. Every newb should be locked out from commenting for 2 months until they have read and digested the sidebar and 2 of the 5 suggested books, rational male, etc.

I understand the concept, but 2 months is extreme, especially someone like me who gets his accounts banned by Reddit Admins all the time for no reason and has to make new accounts frequently.

RobertCarraway • 10 points • 4 July, 2016 05:13 AM

I've been at this shit for 10 years and I'm barely to the point where I feel like I can offer men serious advice regarding women. Becoming a man is a lifetime affair. 2 months is bare bones minimum. Bleached white bare bones.

RPmatrix • 1 point • 4 July, 2016 07:12 AM

It really depends on what they say.

Maybe if they get reported more than once they should get a warning to up the standard of their posts or they'll be shadowbanned for a week/month

TRP can be quite confrontational at first, especially for the guys who need it the most, so we should give them a chance ... once.

PowerVitamin • 3 points • 4 July, 2016 02:35 AM

It's supposed to be extreme and harsh. That's how we survived as a species and why you keep coming back.

i2amahandmodel • 5 points • 4 July, 2016 12:08 AM

And you can tell they are written by 16 year olds. Or the ones that aren't usually go something like "I met this 10 at the club who was giving me dirty looks so I called her a whore and ignored her, then within 2 minutes she was sucking my dick in a bathroom stall while her father, mother and fiance cried as they watched. hue hue hue"

RedditAdminsSuck_88 • 4 points • 4 July, 2016 12:14 AM

It's so common. It's why I don't even click on Field Reports anymore. Which is a disservice to people who actually have field reports that aren't garbage.

I remember seeing a lot of this on the old PUA forums. They'd read a couple chapters of Magic Bullets and think they have I figured out. 6 months later they're back wondering why it's not working or they have given up.

RedditAdminsSuck_88 • 10 points • 3 July, 2016 07:39 PM

That's why I hate those posts so much.

They think The Red Pill is literally something they can read up on in 15 minutes because its a Friday and they want to make a move on their oneitis before the weekend begins, and they want to find a quick way to woo their oneitis before the bell rings. That they read a couple items on the sidebar and think they have it all figured out.

Yeah, reading the sidebar material can help, and it may actually help you in an isolated, single occasion, but if it does that's just luck. Improving yourself to where you consistently have a good success rate takes a long, long time.

I've been coming here for 2.5 years now and still consider myself a relative newbie to it all just because TRP is an ongoing process that never ends. It's like a swordsmith, takes the sword out of the fire, hammers it, puts it back in the fire, hammers it, always making it better.

There is no peak Red Pill. You always have room to improve or get better.

Hm, just wondering about this inner peace thing... :

Wikipedia says: "... to keep oneself strong in the face of discord or stress"

Which is IMHO a good thing that can help anyone. Might as well help you reduce your chance of fucking up a shit test, can make you happier (there are studies about that) and it can help you hold frame due to you knowing about your feelings when they appear.

deepthrill • 15 points • 3 July, 2016 11:35 PM

Strength in the face of turmoil is necessary. Most people delude themselves into thinking there is no turmoil, that they're "above" petty struggles like mating, and to just "be happy just to be alive, man!".

Those people have used inner peace as an excuse to avoid hardships.

Those people have used inner peace as an excuse for complacency.

The truth is, if you want to succeed in this world, you have to constantly be outside your comfort zone. If you've ever faced... or rather purposefully placed yourself in... a truly challenging situation in life outside of your comfort zone I promise there is a huge amount of turmoil you will face.

Outside your comfort zone is inherently uncomfortable.

I'm talking about things like pursuing an advanced degree, starting a business, attempting to master a physical skill like martial arts.

You won't find much inner peace if you are, as you should be, constantly at the edge of your comfort zone.

Recommended reading: The Art of Learning by Josh Waitzkin, Mastery by Robert Greene, Peak by Anders Ericsson.

Hope that clears up the inner peace questions.

thefreedude • 1 point • 5 July, 2016 06:12 PM

You won't find much inner peace if you are, as you should be, constantly at the edge of your comfort zone.

Bullshit! I have been practicing tai chi for over 7 years now. Nothing tests and teaches you the ability to be at peace and in now of the movement than outer and inner turmoil. If you fail, next time you go for it you will be more experienced in how to let go and get back to it. For me now, it is that turmoil that centers me and gives me peace even more. Same goes for the game in relation to inner peace and your school/job and pretty much everything else I think.

It seems to me that most of the people have connected inner peace with the buddha meditating under the tree. Seemingly doing nothing productive. That is in my opinion rather outdated point of view and I think that anyone that has been practicing any kind of meditation and applying it for any kind of gains accordingly in this wonderful capitalism of ours would think the same. Otherwise it did not sink in that well yet.

[deleted] • 2 points • 3 July, 2016 07:57 PM

Thats along the lines of what I was thinking. The posts on meditation that I saw here weren't on becoming an inner peace door mat, more on - as I've seen some TRP endorsed posters say - meditation being an exercise on taking control of your mind.

Mission, lift, meditate, bitches.

[deleted] • 2 points • 5 July, 2016 06:25 AM

The best way to get this is to be putting yourself in stressful situations. There are many ways about it that are educational. Theres a quote about storms and sailors which basically says this.

The other is over time. Either way when you've been through alot you find that inner peace during good times.

logicalthinker1 • 2 points • 12 July, 2016 01:36 AM yeah, but pussy!!!

redpill is very reactionary. If posts focus too much on simply slamming chicks, then you get posts calling it simple-minded, juvenile behavior. If posts focus on improving your mental status, increasing your happiness, and bettering yourself, suddenly you're a big vagina and should just plow some girls.

redpill is above all a self-improvement guide. A large part of self-improvement and happiness is embracing your masculinity (lifting, and generally doing manly shit), and fucking women. But it's not the only thing

UFND • 3 points • 4 July, 2016 12:36 PM [recovered]

The word people are looking for is self-compassion.

Self-compassion is a prerequisite to self-improvement. You must be at peace with yourself, in spite of yourself (thanks /u/IllimitableMan). Otherwise you end up directing your attention and focus to the ongoing battles of cognitive dissonance and internal conflict. This includes tuning too much into negative emotions when you're doing something that does make you better in the long-term.

As an aside, /u/redpillschool:

I, personally, think the drive to success requires you to NEVER find total inner peace. Instead, embrace the desire and need to more and better. This is what the alphas at the top feel. They feel the sweet sweet high of success, which wears off quickly pushing them to reach even higher.

Wouldn't the realisation of such a belief of success be a potential invitation for a nihilistic outlook on life? Is this not what Western civilisation has tried to beat into the heads of modern man for ages on end? That in order to be successful, you need more, more and more?

I don't believe this is a sustainable ideology. If anything, it's a breeding ground for depression as a person slowly begins to realise that the pursuit of happiness can't be found within extrinsic lands.

Ronin11A • 2 points • 12 July, 2016 06:47 PM

The distinction is a lot of people mistake being at "peace with yourself" with complacency. "I'm at peace with myself, therefore I don't need more or need to get better. I've accepted myself."

What RPS is calling for is kaizen or the Japanese business philosophy of continuous improvement of working practices, personal efficiency, and so forth.

If you reach a point where you're so comfortable with yourself that you feel you can no longer improve, do better, or achieve more, you've lost. You can accept who you are without giving up the grind to be a little bit better each day.

DreamBrandt • -7 points • 3 July, 2016 06:22 PM

That is not how it is usually described as. Inner peace is usually talked about as being A-OK with the way things are, and just letting them be. Which in itself is usually NOT OK. You can go on living lying to yourself about how you feel and trying to be strong or whatever by not rocking the boat, but sometimes you have to get pissed off.

ComradeGoby • 7 points • 3 July, 2016 08:20 PM

That's not inner peace.

Inner peace isn't becoming a passive pussy

Zombocom1911 • 3 points • 3 July, 2016 11:00 PM

inner peace is being at peace with yourself. That means saying and doing what comes naturally to you, in any given situation, because to restrain yourself is falsifying your natural way of being. Being true to yourself can actually cause a ton of conflict with others, don't misinterpret it as being passive.

FairlyNaive • 4 points • 3 July, 2016 08:59 PM

I totally agree with the idea that you should change your results according to your expectations, but on the same note i read a number of studies that showed negative effects of stress on the willpower. Sure, the raging dissatisfaction with your life will bring you further then indoctrinating yourself to be ok with it, but stone cold determination to improve, that is cleared from guilt, doubt or any other emotional noise will blow them both out of the water.

RedSweetBeans • 3 points • 3 July, 2016 11:36 PM

"Inner Peace" is all in what you make it out to be. Even though I disagree with the OP's premise in inner peace is for complacent idiots, I understand the perspective. You need to allow your testosterone to be used as fuel to become a better man.

However, when you've been in the dating game for a while, it's highly advantageous to have achieved some sort of "inner peace" when dealing with women. Their high level of emotional manipulation is enough to break a weak man into irrational actions because of the fact he didn't respect himself first. The one thing you don't want to do after swallowing the pill is staying in the anger phase forever and letting it consume you. It's okay to smile.

ShallITinder • 4 points • 4 July, 2016 09:25 PM

I completely understand the frustration that you are going through here. Being able to get laid does a lot to a man's psyche yet you have these neckbeards telling you how Nikolai Tesla never got laid and he ended up being a genius or whatever. The entire sub is a collection of advice on how men can do better with women, mainly being able to get laid and not be sexually frustrated is a good start. Unfortunately, these neckbeards come in saying how this sub is not seddit. Of course it is not seddit you stupid fucks, seddit says looks don't matter, we say they fucking do! The sub is an accurate advice guide for turning your sex life around and getting laid.

I want to write about how have an active sex life and how to not be a miserable loner. All the while, these neckbeards praise monk mode and other nonsense talking about how guys are putting too much value into sex.

I have a proposal and believe we need a better vetting process. Perhaps make it so a person has to have a certain amount of karma on this sub before they can even comment on a thread. If you cannot even get 25 karma points on TRP, you probably aren't a good fit for the sub and would be better off elsewhere. By doing it this way, you would have affected vetted a lot of low quality posters and managed to cut down on the garbage. I don't know if it is possible but also make it hard for new posters to upvote or downvote content, tired of quality threads with good material on how to get laid being downvoted because neckbeard thinks you're better off going into monk mode.

So many guys that need help are being robbed of it by these whiny spineless neckbeards that have decided to make this sub their home.

im a strong independent man and you cant keep me down #drunk

melxer • 2 points • 3 July, 2016 07:31 PM

What's your view on the whole meditation trend ?

BluestBlackBalls • 3 points • 7 July, 2016 11:49 AM

Meditation, in this instance, is an exercise used in seclusion to train yourself in these simple skills: focus and self-awareness. Your ability to apply said skill in the field should dictate the value of the practice — meditation— and the practitioner — are you meditating or simply jerking yourself?

Focus is simply cutting off divergent thoughts and sticking to your guns. Self awareness is being able to identify the point at which your thoughts, feels and focus diverge.

A passive way to realign thoughts/feels with your goals is found in the notion of "accepting and acknowledging how you feel..." where as the active — and I dare say more useful means — can be found in an altered form of Raja Yoga, wherein you actively tell the deviation to fuck off.

Three both, YMMV

[deleted] • 2 points • 6 July, 2016 10:14 PM*

OP seems to think mediation is an excuse to not confront your problems, which, in some instances, can be true, if that is all you do. But I also think OP is beating up a straw man. I don't think most people use mediation as an end in itself. I use it to regain focus and reduce unwanted stress so I can redirect myself towards things that matter to me, not sing myself a beta-kumbaya and to give myself positive feelz.

[deleted] • 1 point • 6 July, 2016 10:20 PM*

I've been reading/lurking TRP for a while, and it was usually about self-direction, purpose, and getting a control on your life, and women. It doesn't have to be hell. Sometimes it is hell, but it isn't necessarily so. If some people find that meditation illuminates their purpose and drive in life by bringing them peace and clarity in a sea of chaos, so be it. Some people may not have an objective way out of hell - think joint custody of a child with an ex wife. You aren't going to go beat up the judge like fucking Jason Stathom to get what you want. Sometimes you need a different strategy to change your perspective on things, or at least to be at peace with them. You could fight the law tooth and nail for a decade, and be completely defeated and exhausted at the end, or you could be at peace with what you can't change, so you can focus on what you can change.

Can confirm. I haven't been "happy" for longer than a couple of hours in a while now. Everything I succeed feels so good for a couple of hours and then it's a huge crash and I'm back at "unhappy" which is actually just a default state of mine where nothing but a new goal achieved makes me "happy" for a few hours again.

Fucked up but you learn to redefine happiness and the one definition of it, when people think that happiness is something you somehow magically achieve and then you're in a permanent state of happy, when it's actually the struggle, the eagerness, the fire inside you, this is "happiness" for us who strive to achieve, we don't play for the "happy state" after the goal is done, we play for more fire and more drive for new goals, I fear the day I lose this drive.

This fucked up my relationships with women tho, the famous "chase is better than the catch" and that's the part I'm not happy about, but well, maybe I just need to find a higher quality, relatable to woman.

BluestBlackBalls • 2 points • 7 July, 2016 01:22 PM

I think you drive to the point being made in these Eastern Schools. Point being to BE. The 'goal' beings o realise that regardless of emotional, physical and mental state, you still exist and thus attempt to teach you to focus on being aware of the process of existing.

To use psychological terms, the point is to be process driven, not goal driven.

The Goal Driven

Often given away by questions like how do I get oneitis to <give HJ/BJ/Sex>, this group has a goal in mind and are not interested in the toils that bring about said goals. This when their first dabble with the Pill does not work, they seek simpler, flashier ways to find a solution. These are the 7-Minute Abs people of RP.

The Process Driven

These are the people that find joy in the act of applying the principles laid out in the RP rhetoric. In the same manner that a sprinter takes pleasure in countless hours on the track partaking in drills, is brought to near braking point in the weight room and is contented by a hard won 8th place in a regional meet, these are the people that stick the course when applying the rhetoric.

DreamBrandt • 0 points • 3 July, 2016 05:59 PM

I've been thinking the same thing. People always talk of inner peace as if it's the end all be all. That ultimately that's what really matters. I've been striving towards that for most of my life and let me tell you, it hasn't gotten me anywhere. Fuck inner peace, life is rough and sometimes you have to feel like shit. Agreed. It's a Blue Pill fantasy. "Peace" actually comes from being strong and getting all your needs met. Then it's effortless to "live in the moment" since the moment is fucking awesome.

Inner peace can legitimize many escapist tendencies. You need to compete in the real world if you want to be happy.

Very, very distorted view of spirituality/inner peace.

I don't blame you.

I won't argue. Words, knowledge, they don't really change attitude.

But just try for yourself, do a 30 minute Dynamic Meditation before you go out.

This is part of why I don't want to start yoga or meditating. I agree with you that inner peace is a facade. Meditation is not about reaching inner peace, at least not the kind of meditation that's normally endorsed here. It's about becoming aware of your mental processes so you're not overwhelmed by them. Artificially calming your emotions is the opposite of its aim.

you shouldn't assume, you should try it and see. It's not like some switch is going to be flipped and you'll turn into some passive piece of meat! lol People spend a lifetime trying to obtain 'inner peace', like TRP's ideology, success comes through practice and you're not going to become a 'self realized Master' overnight!

check out "mindfulness meditation" ... you can do Vipassna ten day silent retreats at various buddhist monasteries, which are unique for a westerner. (the monks give instructional talks once or twice a day, but you're not supposed to talk at all except to a monk) you get a private room to sleep/meditate in.

How often do you sit alone and just focus on how your body is feeling? It's basically just that ... however the things you end up thinking are equally unique and many people find the experience somewhat life changing, but I've never met a person who's found it anything but motivating!

IME 'meditating' leads to awareness which just makes you better at whatever you do.

If you look in my submission history I did a post on this a couple of weeks ago. Might be helpful.

Sounds good, until your anger turns you into a George Soudini or Eliot Rodgers.

Reminds of how Kayne keeps none of his trophies and awards.

He says his real trophy is what he's going to do next.

Personally? I'm okay with all these beta chumps staying home and getting fat while they hamster wheel about their monk game. Most of the people here shouldn't be alone with women, to be perfectly honest.

jgaddis4 • 1 point • 12 July, 2016 06:42 AM

You shouldn't be alone with a woman.

Theotropho • 1 point • 12 July, 2016 01:15 PM

I'm alone with women all the time. lol been there, done that , for decades, bro. Realize, that you are talking about investing a huge amount of effort into things that SOME other guys get with no effort. We all know very well, that girls throw the pussy at some men, hypergamy.

Push myself to become/remain one of those men? Yachts and Private jets and Supermodel Harems? Hot bitches throwing the pussy at me with absolute zero effort involved? That is exactly the same as saying : "I am going to be a billionaire, and if it ain't working, I just need to adjust what I'm doing."

8 days old account

"I can invalidate the entirety of TRP"

You're the cancer we need to get rid of. Downvoted and reported.

Zombocom1911 • -2 points • 3 July, 2016 08:30 PM

8 days old account is not a legit reason, try refuting my argument.

G_Petronius • 5 points • 3 July, 2016 08:35 PM [recovered]

You're under the mistaken impression that we're all equal here. We're not. You're number 42315 of the same type of dipshit: the new guy with no understanding of TRP making a shitpost about how he's seen the light and we're all wrong. I won't waste my time on you. Fuck off, and lurk more.

Zombocom1911 • -5 points • 3 July, 2016 08:39 PM

??? we're all equal on planet earth son.

Barsukas_Tukas • 6 points • 3 July, 2016 09:14 PM

I'm pretty sure that your statement is a good blue pill example.

All animals are equal, but some animals are more equal than others.

Zombocom1911 • -4 points • 3 July, 2016 09:21 PM

All men are created equal is blue pill? HAH

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.

The quotation "All men are created equal" has been called an "immortal declaration," and "perhaps single phrase" of the American Revolutionary period with the greatest "continuing importance."

[deleted] • 4 points • 3 July, 2016 11:49 PM

All men are created equal is blue pill?

Of course it is, if you believe it literally. The Founding Fathers didn't. They made that statement to assert their rights as commoners against the presumed divine right of the kings and nobles against whom they were rebelling. They didn't believe in the literal equality of mankind: that everyone was equally as intelligent, talented, capable. Shit, most of them didn't even give equal rights to negroes purely on account of race and you still think they believe in the literally equality of everyone?

We're not all equal, neither by birth nor by station in life. There are those who are more naturally endowed in certain respects and those who, by luck or by will, have developed skills, attitudes and resources that give them competitive advantages.

We're not all equal, and it matters a great deal to sexual strategy. RTFS.

Zombocom1911 • 2 points • 3 July, 2016 11:56 PM

They held it be "self evident", that all men are created equal. Self evident means it doesn't really need to be discussed. I never personally believed I'm superior to a say, a beggar or a cripple, nor did I believe I'm inferior to a billionaire tycoon. If you want to believe that about yourself, that is your option. We are all here for about 100 years, and then we are gone, you can't take any of the shit you are talking about with you.

[deleted] • 3 points • 4 July, 2016 08:29 PM

I don't think "they said it so it's true" passes the logic sniffing test.

Zombocom1911 • 0 points • 4 July, 2016 08:41 PM

Not even on the 4th of July? Really? You think you are better than anyone else, in the eyes of God?

[deleted] • 2 points • 4 July, 2016 08:44 PM

False dichotomy. Doesn't even address my point.

Kalwyf • 0 points • 3 July, 2016 07:06 PM

You take his point, and then twist it into unrealistic proportions. Of course, it's not very likely you will have a ten million dollar yacht with a harem of world class models. But if you decide that staying at home eating whatever snack and watching tv, every night of the week, is good enough, well, then I don't have anything to say. A big part of TRP is self-improvement. Whether that's to start lifting, improving the way you dress, getting a better job, it's all to make you more valuable for both other men and women. To always improve yourself is to always stay ahead of the competition. And of course there is an unhealthy amount of competitiveness, but that's what people say when they don't want to put in the work to improve themselves. Never be satisfied with what you are, but be realistic about what you can be.

Zombocom1911 • 4 points • 3 July, 2016 07:13 PM

First of all I want to say, you are talking to someone who was on a very serious the self improvement hamster wheel for many, many years, with very little to show for it, except ever increasing rage and indignation. You admit that some men are born with million dollar yachts with a harem of world class models. I was not born one of them. Does that mean I should give those guys the double victory of me never finding inner peace? Why should I let what God saw fit to give them on a silver platter, put hate in my heart?

Kalwyf • 3 points • 3 July, 2016 07:26 PM

You sound hopeless for trying to achieve too much, for being a perfectionist. You need to find a proper balance between contentedness and the will to improve. Stop crying about fantasies. You don't compete with sons of sheiks. You compete with other average guys, and should strive to be in a higher percentile than your actual competitors. If you don't want to, that's fine. Feeling content with your life feels good. Aside from that, it doesn't do anything.

Zombocom1911 • 2 points • 3 July, 2016 07:51 PM*

So you get to tell me who I am supposed to compare myself to in life? Who the fuck are you to tell me that. They are just ordinary men on this earth, just like I am. I'm not crying about anything, I'm telling you the entire game is bullshit to begin with. I am not bitter, I probably actually have had way more than my share of fun in life, because I stopped caring about what other people think a long time ago and just followed my balls.

Which is what this part

("If you can't get yourself a "10", then the least you can do, is fuck five "2"s " - Ol' Dirty Bastard Fuck a lot of women, fuck fat, fuck ugly, fuck whores, or do whatever you have to do, until the "inner turmoil" coming the LACK of whatever (the poison of jealousy and envy), the world created in you, is out of your system.)

, actually meant.

[deleted] • -1 points • 3 July, 2016 08:47 PM

You're a baller, I hope you know that

SOWED • -1 points • 3 July, 2016 09:30 PM

Great points about inner peace. I have seen a lot of posts here that seem to be borderline promoting Buddhism as a red pill method. While there's nothing wrong with Buddhism inherently, it's basically a sure fire way to not want to get women or be alpha or anything that TRP is really about.

You're totally right that inner peace leads to no drive. If you're fine with everything as it is, why would you ever change a thing?

Zombocom1911 • 1 point • 3 July, 2016 10:45 PM

Buddhism is MGTOW , basically. not TRP.

SOwED • 1 point • 4 July, 2016 06:50 AM

Well, that's basically my point. The stuff redpillschool has been deleting is what I'm comparing to Buddhism. I never said it was TRP.
