often mean that women have to compromise somewhat when it comes to the sexy traits they also desire, choosing long-term partners who are willing and able to invest has historically been the way to best promote the survival success of their children.

When choosing short-term sex partners, on the other hand, women are able to make different trade-offs. Because short-term mating, by definition, won't involve a ton of investment, women can take all the chips that they would have invested in acquiring a partner who is an amazing person, a good earner, and loves children, and cash them all in for more sexiness than they would have been able to get if they were also looking for someone to stick around and care for children. This means that when women are choosing short-term sex partners, they can prioritize qualities like masculinity, social dominance, symmetry, and other qualities that suggest that this guy has the kinds of genes that will promote the success of their children (indirect fitness benefits).

The good news(!) is that—even in the face of the trade-offs that each of us must make when choosing partners—a woman can still get the best of both worlds for her offspring . . . she just might have to get each of these qualities from a different man. This means getting investment from one man (usually a primary partner who is loving, caring, and reliable) while getting sexy genes from someone else (typically unbeknownst to the primary partner). And if a woman were inclined to do such a thing in the totally unconscious pursuit of good genes for her offspring, what better time to do so than near ovulation?

Now, I know there's a good chance that some of you will find this whole idea appalling. Totally understandable. However, it's worth mentioning that the evolution of this type of conditional strategy is inevitable any time you have females who get both direct (resource investment) and indirect (genes) fitness benefits from their mates. For females of species that get only indirect benefits from mating—which is the case for the majority of sexually reproducing organisms out there, by the way—this isn't an issue, because they don't have to worry about investment. They don't need it. The only thing these females are choosing when they pick a mate is his genes. But for females of species that get both direct and indirect benefits from their partners, there will always be females who game the system by formally pairing with a good dad for his resource access and then getting sexy genes for their offspring from their hot neighbor.

Cheating, indeed.

Such a dual-mating strategy will generally get a female a better deal than what she would be able to get if she received both her direct and in this scenario the only loser is the beta bucks

the women wins because she gets to keep the cake and eat it too

the chad wins because he gets sex without investing any of his time or resources the beta bucks has spent his entire life studying, working, and investing time and energy into the relationship so that he can finally have sex, but unbeknownst to him he is getting fucked over and cucked. DO NOT accept the role the society has cast on you. in order for this dual mating strategy to work they need the beta bucks to fall in line and accept their role they have prepared for him. beta bucks was already screwed by not being born with a chiseled jaw line a 10 inch dick and broad shoulders, and being 6'3 extrovert, so now he has to get fucked over AGAIN by being shamed/baited into a role where he gets the short end of the stick. say FUCK YOU society and break free from this role. you don't have to accept it. you get 1 fucking life with limited time on this earth, do not be baited and shamed into doing something that will benefit them but not you. they succeed when you play by the rules while they don't. imagine you playing football and your team has to play by the rules and the other team does whatever the fuck they want, they will only have an upper hand as long as you play by the rules and they don't, if both teams don't play by the rules, that's when the game becomes even again.

Well said. It always amazes me that so many men are incapable of realizing that "society" itself is their greatest enemy.

Crazy, my mom did this to my dad with my sister.

Prior to divorce, she ran off with my dad's youngest employee (he had a large trucking company).

Mom divorce raped my dad from a Chad with money to a loser, then put young boy toy to work for fifteen years then kicked him out with a "if you try to contact my daughter than you've raised, I'll kill you."

My dad blackmailed my mom to maintain custody of me, so I avoided my mom and her boyfriend aside from visitation rights. Didn't help that much. Still monstrous child abuse from all sides.

Still, it's crazy to see the printed word and understand it in your own mind.

And remember, whenever women whine about men trying to 'control female sexuality' what they are actually objecting to is men's attempts to make executing this strategy difficult.
