FIRST OF ALL: some of the studies I found when researching are Blue Pill / Red Pill. I kept them anyways: better to acknowledge as much information as possible.

I don't even know how many studies are there here. The last few dozens I didn't know how to classify, so I just placed them at the tail.

THIS IS NOT ALL. But I couldn't fit or organize any more info so this is it for now.

Alpha fucks, beta bucks

http://pillse.bol.ucla.edu/Publications/Pillsworth&Haselton_ARSR.pdf

- There is abundant evidence that women, as well as men, desire long-term committed relationships; but there is also an emerging literature revealing a hidden side of women's desires suggesting that women have also evolved to pursue short-term or illicit affairs. The purpose of this article is to review these lines of evidence and other recent findings pertaining to the evolution of women's sexual strategies.

http://content.csbs.utah.edu/~cashdan/publications/ec_evolanth.pdf

- Women value the ability to provide economically in a long-term mate. Females in a wide variety of species (insects, birds, mammals) prefer males with resources, and the same is true for humans. Buss's cross-cultural questionnaire study of 37 societies showed that women in all of them placed a higher value on the financial prospects of a prospective mate than men did. Closer questioning of an American sample showed that women prefer immediate access to resources when seeking short-term matings but place greater value on cues to future resource acquisition when evaluating long-term mates. If women act on these stated preferences we would expect wealthy men to have more mates, and there is ample cross cultural evidence that they do. The importance of resources to women is apparent even in egalitarian societies such as the Ache and the Sharanahua, where the best hunters are able to attract the most sexual partners.

<http://www.dailymail.co.uk/femail/article-2769593/HALF-women-fall-partner-standby-fancied-case-curent-relationship-turns-sour.html>

- Half of women have "back-ups", men they keep close just in case they fail to establish a romantic relationship.

Alphas get all - Sexually successful/sexually experienced men are perceived as sexier

<http://digital.library.okstate.edu/etd/umi-okstate-2649.pdf>

- Mate poaching is a robust phenomenon, and it is here to stay. When single women see a moderately attractive male, they are more interested in him if they believe he is already in a relationship! In fact, one sizable study found 90 percent of single women were interested in a man who they believed was taken, while a mere 59 percent wanted him when told he was single.

Women lose interest in their partners even if they're attractive https://www.researchgate.net/publication/11324580_Sexual_motivation_and_duration_of_partnership

- Study shows that once a women 'bonds' or knows she has fully secured her mates commitment she will lose interest in sex. But women, he said, have evolved to have a high sex drive when they are initially in a relationship in order to form a "pair bond" with their partner. But, once this bond is sealed a woman's sexual appetite declines, he added.

http://www.slate.com/blogs/xx_factor/2013/05/23/nytimes_on_lybrido_women_get_bored_with_monogamy_faster_than_men.html

- Women get tired of monogamy faster than men do.

How ovulation affects what women find attractive: she wants Alphas when she's ovulating, betas when she's not

<http://www.livescience.com/8779-fertile-women-manly-men.html>

- Ovulating women prefer alpha fucks, non-ovulating women prefer beta bucks. A new study reveals that heterosexual women whose partners have less-masculine faces report more attraction to other men during ovulation. Women with masculine-looking partners said their eyes wander less, perhaps because the traits women tend to find sexy when they're fertile are already present in their partners.

<http://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC1617143/>

- Here, we show that women in the fertile phase of their cycle prefer body odor of males who score high on a questionnaire-based dominance scale (international personality items pool). In accordance with the theory of mixed mating strategies, this preference varies with relationship status, being much stronger in fertile women in stable relationships than in fertile single women.

- Fertile women want manly men.

<http://www.psy.unipd.it/~pbressan/papers/BressanStranieri2008.pdf>

- In this study, 208 women rated the attractiveness of men described as single or attached. As predicted, partnered women favored attached men at the low-fertility phases of the menstrual cycle, but preferred single men (if masculine, i.e., advertising good genetic quality) when conception risk was high. Because men of higher genetic quality tend to be poorer partners and parents than men of lower genetic quality, women may profit from securing a stable investment from the latter, while obtaining good genes via extrapair mating with the former.

<https://www.psychologytoday.com/us/blog/dating-and-mating/201709/reasons-not-date-attractive-masculine-man> Good-looking men are assumed to have better personalities, more rewarding careers, and more fulfilling life experiences (Dion et al., 1972; Griffin and Langlois, 2006) Women partnered with attractive, masculine men report more frequent orgasms (Puts et al., 2012) Women perceive attractive men as both more likely to cheat and more likely to leave long-term relationships (Waynforth, 2001). Men with more masculine facial features are more likely to report having been unfaithful in the past (Rhodes et al., 2012) More masculine, taller men are also more likely to divorce and remarry than their shorter counterparts (Mueller and Mazur, 2001). Researchers suggest that some women may pursue a mixed mating strategy, choosing a man with more feminine features as a long-term mate, while pursuing more masculine men for short-term sexual relationships (Cousins, 2015).

Lookism in society <http://abcnews.go.com/2020/story?id=123853&page=1> The success of politicians and athletes is heavily determined by their physical appearance. Short men are considered sadder, more scaredy and weaker. Good looking people get treated better in economic aid and physical aid for the fact of being good looking. When ugly people and good looking people apply for a job with the exact same resumes, good looking people get the job much more often.

How past sexual experience affects people's marriages

<http://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/10.1111/j.1741-3737.2003.00444.x/abstract> • Using nationally representative data from the 1995 National Survey of Family Growth, I estimate the association between intimate premarital relationships (premarital sex and premarital cohabitation) and subsequent marital dissolution. I extend previous research by considering relationship histories pertaining to both premarital sex and premarital cohabitation. I find that premarital sex or premarital cohabitation that is limited to a woman's husband is not associated with an elevated risk of marital disruption. However, women who have more than one intimate premarital relationship have an increased risk of marital dissolution.

<https://interpersona.psychopen.eu/article/view/121/html> • Women and men give different responses to sexual offers depending on the particular way the offer is formulated even if the tone and message is the same.

<http://www.nytimes.com/2009/01/25/magazine/25desire-t.html>

- When shown pornographic pictures and videos, people's self-reported sexual arousal and their actual sexual arousal (measured by genital blood stimulation) do NOT always correspond.

Heterosexual men reported being turned on by female-male and female-female pornography but not male-male or animal sex images. Their physical measurements matched their self-reports.

Homosexual men reported arousal at male-male and female-male but not female-female or animal. Their physical measurements also matched their words.

Women, of both sexual orientations, displayed physical arousal at the sight of ALL images and videos regardless of their self-reports. It seems that what women's unconscious sexual instinct wants and what their conscious side wants are very different things.

<https://www.psychologytoday.com/blog/pop-psych/201507/examining-arousal-and-homophobia>

Homophobic men are more likely than non-homophobic to experience arousal when shown gay porn.

<https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pubmed/11149306>

- The majority of perpetrators of domestic violence are men. Perpetrators are often young, troubled, unemployed, and of low self-esteem; they have often experienced abuse (of various types) themselves.

<http://www.reachofclaycounty.org/domestic-violence>

- Many abusers suffer from low self-esteem, and their sense of self and identity is tied to their partner. Therefore, if abusers feel they are somehow losing the victim, either through separation, divorce, emotional detachment, or pregnancy (fearing victims will replace love for them with love for a child), they will lash out. If victims "leave" through any of these methods, abusers feel they are losing power, control, and their self-identity. Many victims describe domestic violence perpetrators as having a "Jekyll and Hyde" personality. Abusers often experience dramatic mood swings of highs and lows. They may be loving one minute, and spiteful and cruel the next. Abusers are frequently characterized by those outside the home as generous, caring, and good, and behave drastically differently in their home environment. Perpetrators of domestic violence are rarely violent to those outside of their domicile.

- The #1 factor determining male sexual success is outperformance of other males, not female selection.

- The prevalence, age of onset, and symptomatology of many neuropsychiatric conditions differ between males and females. Gaussian-process regression coordinate-based meta-analysis was used to examine sex differences in voxel-based regional volume and density. On average, males have larger total brain volumes than females. Examination of the breakdown of studies providing total volumes by age categories indicated a bias towards the 18–59 year-old category. Regional sex differences in volume and tissue density include the amygdala, hippocampus and insula, areas known to be implicated in sex-biased neuropsychiatric conditions. Together, these results suggest candidate regions for investigating the asymmetric effect that sex has on the developing brain, and for understanding sex-biased neurological and psychiatric conditions.

- Following recall of a conflict involving direct aggression and role-playing a reaction to it, compared with men, women reported their anger would dissipate less quickly and they would take longer to reconcile. Women also exhibited increased heart rate, but little change in cortisol, whereas men exhibited little change in heart rate but increased cortisol production. We interpret the results as indicating that women are less prepared than men to resolve a conflict with a same-sex peer.

- Here, we develop and explore the hypothesis that the norms and institutions that compose the modern package of monogamous marriage have been favored by cultural evolution because of their group-beneficial effects—promoting success in inter-group competition. In suppressing intrasexual competition and reducing the size of the pool of unmarried men, normative monogamy reduces crime rates, including rape, murder, assault, robbery and fraud, as well as decreasing personal abuses.

- Women engage in indirect aggression and slut-shaming, even in clinical research studies. In his book, The Evolution of Desire: Strategies of Human Mating, Buss argues that women do this because, evolutionarily, women who are willing to have casual sex undermine the goals of women who want long-term relationships. "Slutty" women hint to men that it's okay not to commit because there will always be someone available to give away the milk for free, as it were. Their peers' "derogation" is thus intended to damage the reputation of these free-wheeling females.
