

My Captain told me that I will forever have a place in his heart.

I don't really know if this belongs here. I'm not asking for advice or anything I just felt like sharing.

My Captain is a very emotionally distant and cautious man. He opens up very rarely. I don't mind but that fact, I feel, makes this moment the more special.

We were talking in bed the other night and he just, seemingly out of the blue, told me that no one could ever replace me in his heart. Even if things didn't work out in the long run he can't imagine loving anyone as much as he loves me right now. He is the happiest he has ever been. (I'm paraphrasing.)

I was kind of overwhelmed with a feeling of joy I don't really think I've ever felt. I couldn't stop crying. We tell each other we love each other on the regular and have for years but this felt...different. I felt like...more.

I just wanted to share. Feel free to take this down if it's not appropriate~

Totally belongs here, that's so lovely! It's nice how respecting you are of his communication style. These moments are incredibly rewarding, my partner is the same way, a man of very few intense emotional moments.

It's something I'll never forget. The feeling is beyond words.

I had a this recently. We never know truly, how much we matter to our men. They are resilient and will survive without us. But we make their lives so much better.

Exactly. My man is so self reliant. He is a rock. I'm glad he has been my rock all these years. It humbles me.

I know he doesn't need me but it feels good to know that I bring so much value to his life.

That is so stinking sweet!!!

I had something similar happen a few weeks ago, but from a different person. We went to visit his family for a few days. His father and I are both early birds and enjoyed our coffee together before everyone else was up. He said "Mr. littlepearlisland is the happiest and most balanced that I have ever seen since he met you. I am so thankful that you've come into our family's life." Made my heart melt.
