

Adding friends on facebook

December 5, 2018 | 0 upvotes | by empatheticapathetic

Short stupid question that i keep thinking about. When i meet some girl from my social circle and there is some sexual tension, she won't add me on facebook but will appear at the top of my suggested friends (she's looking at my profile). I never usually add anyone on facebook (and it's usually only dudes).

If i fail to do anything during the window of opportunity and she loses interest or finds a new interest, she then adds me on facebook. But if there is still opportunity, she doesn't add me. (Platonic women with enough mutual interest always add me).

This has been a pattern i've noticed for over 6-7 years now.

My question is why. Is it a test to see if i cave and add her? Is it also a way for her to maintain her own level of mystery about me (and vice versa)? Anyone else have this experience? My facebook is pretty dead so i always imagine it's quite a drop when they finally add me to find there's nothing there.

If i fail to do anything during the window of opportunity what opportunity?

Is it a test to see if i cave and add her? Is it also a way for her to maintain her own level of mystery about me (and vice versa)?

That's a girly question. Leave this shit to them.

All the girls I've had success with added me on social media. They love the drama and thrill that comes with it. Let them have it. My rule is I never add girls unless I'm not interested in them.

I acknowledged it's a trivial question. Just interested in the mechanics.

But you're wrong about your assumption. You really want to believe that the girl likes you so you're making up shit theories that reinforces this idea. If a girl doesn't add you, it's not because she's testing you to see if you'll cave. She doesn't add you because she doesn't give a crap.

There are scenarios where the girl doesn't give a shit and doesn't add me. I'm not talking about those scenarios. Im talking about the ones detailed in my post, where there is clear interest and sexual tension, and when I fail to act on those opportunities and the real life interactions become platonic, a Facebook add always follows. You have to accept my theory in order to comment on it. If you're unwilling to accept this could happen, then no worries but you have no input.

I understand your theory. It just is bullshit. If a girl was interested and there was sexual tension, she would add you immediately without even waiting for you to "act on it". That's her green light for you to "act on it". Not the other way around.

This hasn't been my experience.
