Objectification is a bogus concept anyway.

I always love how it's "objectifying" women when a man sleeps around with them but for some reason, women are supposed to be empowered and become "sex goddesses" by sleeping around with men.

yeah, female owned news agencies are like that when a woman sleeps with like 200 dudes in a year, she's a (secretly std ridden) woke empowered goddess, but when a dude sleeps with like 2 in a year? man's a objectifying womanizer also according to their "logic" how does a woman become a woke empowered goddess if the dude's are hella chastised when they sleep with her? the double standards here are wack as fuck as it's easy for an average girl to sleep with as many dude's as she wants but pretty darn hard for a dude to sleep with even like 3, because a woman can pretty much just be like "yo dude you look hung (or any other thing the woman's interested in) come bang me" at least 80% of the time (because married men who don't cheat, and of course dude's who don't like women, and also dude's who find the woman repellant instead of attractive) the dude will say "yeah alright" and do it however if a dude says to a girl with big breasts or whatever he's interested in to bang him, the chance for her to accept is somewhere between 0% and 0.01%. so yeah

Myths: the wage gap and any kind of privilege aside from work privilege

Truth: feminism is sexism and double standards are everywhere
